habet. Bene autem subditur: Et auro locus est in quo conflatur. Ac si aperte dicat: Vera fidelium sapientia, cui universalis Ecclesia locus est, tribulationem vobis persequentibus patitur, sed a cunctis peccatorum sordibus persecutionis vestrae igne purgatur. Unde scriptum est: In igne probatur aurum et argentum, homines vero receptibiles in camino humiliationis (Eccli. II, 5). Quo in loco potest hoc quoque convenienter intelligi, ut de sua haeretici increpari stulta passione videantur. Nam saepe pro Jesu Christi Domini ac redemptoris nostri nomine multa patiuntur, seseque eisdem passionibus ejus fieri martyres sperant. Quibus sancti viri voce nunc dicitur: Auro locus est in quo conflatur. Nam juxta hoc quod jam et ante nos dictum est (A Cypr., de unitate Eccl., et alibi), quisquis extra unitatem Ecclesiae patitur, poenas pati potest, martyr fieri non potest, quia auro locus est in quo conflatur. Quid itaque ad haec, haeretici, dicitis? Conflari per afflictionem carnis, vel etiam per martyrium vultis, sed locum in quo debeatis conflari nescitis. Audite quid sancti praedicatoris voce dicitur: Auro locus est in quo conflatur. Hunc ergo conflationis locum quaerite, hanc fornacem, qua aurum apte purgari valeat invenite. 41. Quidquid extra Ecclesiam toleratur, curciat, non purgat. Una est Ecclesia in qua qui conflari valuerit ab omni etiam poterit peccatorum sorde purgari. Si quid pro Deo amaritudinis, si quid tribulationis extra hanc positi sustinetis, incendi potestis tantummodo, non purgari. Dicat Jeremias, dicat quomodo conflationis vestrae ignis omni virtute sit vacuus: Frustra conflavit conflator, malitiae enim eorum non sunt consumptae (Jerem. VI, 29). Ecce ignis exterius conflans, et durae passionis admovet poenam, 574 et tamen erroris non excoquit culpam, et tormenta crudelium dat poenarum, et bonorum non facit incrementa meritorum. Hujus etiam conflationis ignis qui extra catholicam toleratur Ecclesiam, quam nullius omnino virtutis sit, Paulus Apostolus insinuat, dicens: Si tradidero corpus meum ut ardeat, charitatem autem non habeam, nihil mihi prodest (I Cor. XII, 3) [Vet. XV.]

Alii quippe prava de Deo sentiunt; alii recta de auctore tenent; sed unitatem cum fratribus non tenent. Illi errore fidei, isti vero schismatis perpetratione divisi sunt. Unde et in ipsa prima parte decalogi utrarumque partium culpae reprimuntur, cum divina voce dicitur: Diliges Dominum Deum tuum ex toto corde tuo, et ex tota anima tua, et ex tota virtute tua (Deut. VI, 5). Atque mox subditur: Diliges proximum tuum sicut teipsum. Qui enim de Deo perversa sentit, liquet profecto quia Deum non diligit. Qui vero de Deo recta sentiens a sanctae Ecclesiae unitate divisus est, constat quia proximum non amat, quem habere socium recusat. 43. Quia deest charitas tam schismaticis quam haereticis. Quisquis ergo ab hac unitate matris Ecclesiae, sive per haeresim de Deo perversa sentiendo, seu errore schismatis proximum non diligendo dividitur, charitatis hujus gratia privatur, de qua hoc quod praemisimus Paulus ait: Si tradidero corpus meum ut ardeam, charitatem autem non habeam, nihil mihi prodest (I Cor. XIII, 3). Ac si aperta voce diceret: Extra locum suum conflationis mihi ignis adhibitus tormento me cruciat, mundatione non purgat. Hunc omnes sanctae pacis amatores summo studio locum quaerunt, hunc quaerentes inveniunt, hunc invenientes tenent, scientes peccatorum remissio vel ubi, vel quando, vel qualibus detur. Ubi quippe, nisi in catholicae matris sinu? Quando, nisi ante venturi exitus diem? Quia, ecce nunc tempus acceptabile, ecce nunc dies salutis (II Cor. VI, 2). Et: Quaerite Dominum dum inveniri potest, invocate eum dum prope est (Isai. LV, 6). Qualibus, nisi conversis, qui ad parvulorum imitationem, magistra humilitate formantur? Quibus dicitur: Sinite parvulos venire ad me; talium enim est regnum coelorum (Matth. XIX, 14). Et: Nisi conversi fueritis, et efficiamini sicut parvuli, non intrabitis in regnum coelorum (Matth. XVIII, 3). [Rec. XV.] Quia ergo non nisi in catholica Ecclesia veri martyres fiunt, dicitur recte: Auro locus est in quo conflatur, quia non clarescet anima in fulgore aeternae pulchritudinis, nisi, ut ita dicam, prius hic arserit in officina charitatis. 43. Deus alios salvat per innocentiam, alios per poenitentiam. Pensandum praeterea est quod occulto consilio omnipotens Deus quosdam ab ipsis exordiis suis innocentes custodiens, usque ad virtutum provehit summa, ut aetate crescente, simul in eis proficiat et annorum numerositas, et celsitudo meritorum. Alios vero in exordiis suis deserens, scaturientibus vitiis ire per abrupta permittit. Plerumque tamen etiam eos respicit, et ad sequendum se sancti amoris igne succendit, atque inolitas in eorum cordibus prurigines vitiorum vertit in fervorem virtutum, et eo magnis ignescunt ad desiderium requirendae pietatis Dei, quo magis erubescunt memoriam iniquitatis suae, sicut saepe contigit ut in pugnae certamine miles ante ducis sui 575 oculos constitutus, hostili virtuti turpiter cedat, et enerviter praebens terga feriatur: qui tamen hoc ipsum quod turpiter gessit erubescens, ante ducis sui oculos majores ex ipsa verecundia vires sumit, tantoque post fortia exercet, quantum et praesentem gloriam virtutis peragat, et praeteritam ignominiam debilitatis tegat. Sic ergo nonnunquam quidam in Dei servitio ex anteacta acrius debilitate robarantur, eosque ad custodienda mandata et futurorum trahit desiderium, et impellit memoria praeteritorum, ut hinc ad ventura amor provocet, illinc de praeteritis verecundia instiget. [Vet. XVI.] Quos tamen adversarii Ecclesiae dum summis praeditos virtutibus viderint, eisque in praesenti vita unde derogent quia invenire nequaquam possunt, accusare illos de praeteritis moliuntur, sicut Moysen nostrum Manichaeus impetit, in quo sequentium virtutum gratiam, transacti homicidii conatur culpa foedare. In quo non attendit postmodum quam patiens ad sustinendum, sed prius quam praeceps ad feriendum fuerit. Talibus ergo adversariis beatus Job subtilissima consideratione obvians, postquam dixit: Habet argentum venarum suarum principia, et auro locus est in quo conflatur, apte subdidit:

CAPUT XXVII [Rec. XVI].

VERS. 2. Ferrum de terra tollitur. 44. Non est intuendum quid per se sint Ecclesiae doctores, sed quid per gratiam evaserint. Solent haeretici de justitiae suae contra nos elatione gloriari, atque opera sua ostentationis inflatione jactare, nosque iniquos, ut diximus, aut esse, aut fuisse criminantur. Per humillimam ergo confessionem, et veracem defensionem contra eos vir sanctus loquitur, dicens: Ferrum de terra tollitur. Ac si aperte dicat: Fortes viri, qui acutissimis linguarum gladiis in hac acie defendendae fidei ferrum fiunt, aliquando terra in infimis actionibus fuerunt. Peccanti quippe homini dictum est: Terra es, et in terram ibis (Genes. III, 19). Sed de terra ferrum tollitur (Dist. L, c. 18), cum fortis propugnator Ecclesiae a terrena quam prius tenuit actione separatur. Non ergo in eo debet despici quidquid fuit, qui jam coepit esse quod non fuit. An non Matthaeus in terra inventus est, qui terrenis negotiis implicatus telonii usibus serviebat (Matth. IX, 9)? Sed de terra sublatus, in fortitudinem ferri convaluit, cujus videlicet lingua quasi acutissimo gladio Evangelii administratione Dominus infidelium corda transfixit; et qui infirmus prius despectusque fuerat per terrena negotia, fortis postmodum factus est ad coelestia praedicamenta. Unde adhuc subjungitur:

CAPUT XXVIII [Rec. XVII].

IBID. Et lapis solutus calore, in aes vertitur. 45. Gratiae infusione cor emollitur ad amorem, et roboratur ad operationem. Tunc lapis calore solvitur, cum cor durum atque a divini amoris igne frigidum eodem divini amoris igne tangitur, et in fervore spiritus liquatur, ut ad sequentem vitam desideriorum aestu ardeat, quam prius audiens insensibilis manebat. [Vet. XVII.] Ex quo ardore scilicet, et emollitur ad amorem, et roboratur ad operationem, ut sicut prius durus fuerat in amore saeculi, ita se postmodum fortem exerat in amorem Dei; et quod ante audire renuebat, jam et credere et praedicare incipiat. Lapis ergo solutus calore, 576 in aes vertitur, quia dura mens superni amoris igne liquefacta ad veram fortitudinem commutatur, ut peccator, qui prius insensibilis exstiterat, postmodum et per auctoritatem fortis et per praedicationem sonorus fiat. Quod bene per Isaiam dicitur: Qui confidunt in Domino, mutabunt fortitudinem (Isai. XL, 31). Fortitudinem mutamus, cum conversi tanta virtute praesens saeculum fugimus quanta hoc ante quaerebamus. Quia autem male ab adversariis catholicorum moribus ante acta vita reputatur, recte subditur:

CAPUT XXIX.

VERS. 3. Tempus posuit tenebris et universorum finem ipse considerat. 46. Deus electorum et reproborum finem intuetur. Bona facit et ordinat; mala non facit, sed ordinat.Ipse posuit tempus tenebris, iniquis videlicet modum quo iniqui esse desistant. Unde eis per Apostolum dicitur: Eratis aliquando tenebrae, nunc autem lux in Domino. Sicut aliis quoque discipulis isdem doctor egregius dicit: Nox praecessit, dies autem appropinquavit. Abjiciamus ergo opera tenebrarum, et induamus nos arma lucis; sicut in die honeste ambulemus. (Ephes. V, 8; Rom. XIII, 12). Unde et in Canticis canticorum Ecclesia veniente dicitur: Quae est ista quae progreditur quasi aurora consurgens (Cant. VI, 9)? Apte enim Ecclesia aurorae comparata describitur, quae per cognitionem fidei a peccatorum suorum tenebris in clara luce justitiae commutatur. Tempus ergo posuit tenebris, et universorum finem ipse considerat. Universorum nomine, et electos voluit et reprobos comprehendi. Nam bona faciens et ordinans Deus, mala vero non faciens, sed ab iniquis facta ne inordinate eveniant ipse disponens, considerat universorum finem, et patienter tolerat omnia, atque intuetur electorum terminum, quod ex malo mutentur ad bonum. Intuetur etiam reproborum finem, quod do malo opere dignum se trahantur ad supplicium. Vidit finem persequentis Sauli, quo prostratus diceret: Domine, quid me vis facere (Act. IX, 6)? Vidit finem quasi obsequentis discipuli, quod pro commisso scelere guttur laqueo stringeret, seque et peccantem puniret, et deterius puniendo deciperet. Vidit Ninivitas delinquentes, sed consideravit finem delinquentium poenitentiam correctorum. Vidit quoque Sodomam delinquentem, sed consideravit finem ardoris luxuriae, ignem gehennae. Vidit gentilitatis finem, quod possessa iniquitatum tenebris, quandoque fidei luce claresceret. Vidit etiam Judaeae terminum, quod ab ea luce fidei quam tenebat obduratae perfidiae se tenebris caecaret. Unde adhuc congrue subditur:

CAPUT XXX [Rec. XVIII].

IBID. VERS. 4. Lapidem quoque caliginis et umbram mortis dividit torrens a populo peregrinante. 47. Probos et malos ignis in extremo judicio dividet.Quid durus ille perfidia Judaeorum populus, qui auctorem vitae per fidem videre noluit, quem per prophetiam praedixit, nisi lapis caliginis fuit? quia et crudelitate durus exstitit, et infidelitate nebulosus. Qui alio quoque vocabulo umbra mortis dicitur. Umbra quippe talis exprimitur, qualia ejus rei, de qua trahitur, fuerint lineamenta. Quis autem mortis nomine, nisi diabolus vocatur? De quo per quamdam ministri sui significationem 577 dicitur: Et nomen illi mors (Apoc. VI, 8). Cujus ille populus umbra exstitit, quia iniquitatem illius sequens, ejus in se imaginem expressit. Quid vero torrentis nomine, nisi ille a conspectu tremendi judicis per ultimum examen egrediens, atque electos et reprobos dividens ignis vocatur? Unde et per prophetam dicitur: Fluvius igneus rapidusque egrediebatur a facie ejus (Dan. VII, 10). [Vet. XVIII, Rec. XIX.] 48. Peregrini sunt in mundo electi omnes. Quis autem in hoc mundo peregrinatur populus, nisi qui ad sortem electorum currens, habere se patriam novit in coelestibus; et tanto magis se illic sperat invenire propria, quanto hic cuncta quae praetereunt esse a se deputat aliena? Peregrinus itaque est populus, omnium numerus electorum, qui hanc vitam quoddam sibi exsilium deputantes, ad supernam patriam tota cordis intentione suspirant, de quibus Paulus dicit: Confitentes quia peregrini et hospites sunt super terram (Hebr. XI, 13). Qui enim haec dicunt, significant se patriam inquirere. Hanc peregrinationem idem quoque Apostolus tolerabat, cum diceret: Dum sumus in corpore, peregrinamur a Domino. Per fidem enim ambulamus, et non per speciem (II Cor. V, 6). Hujus peregrinationis aerumnas satagebat evadere, cum dicebat: Desiderium habens dissolvi, et cum Christo esse (Philip. I, 23). Et rursum: Mihi vivere Christus est, et mori lucrum (Ibid. I, 21). Hujus peregrinationis pondus grave sentiebat Psalmista, cum diceret: Heu me! quia incolatus meus prolongatus est: habitavi cum habitantibus Cedar, multum incola fuit anima mea (Psal. CXIX, 5). Ab hac eripi quantocius anhelabat, cum supernis desideriis flagrans diceret; Sitivit anima mea ad Deum vivum; quando veniam et apparebo ante faciem Dei (Psal. XLI, 3)? Sed hoc desiderium nesciunt qui cor in terrenis voluptatibus defigunt. Dum enim sola quae sunt visibilia diligunt, profecto invisibilia, vel si credunt esse, non diligunt, quia dum nimis se exterius sequuntur, etiam mente carnales fiunt. Simul enim in hac vita uterque populus currit, sed non simul ad perpetuam pervenit, quia Lapidem caliginis et umbram mortis dividit torrens a populo peregrinante. Ac si aperte dicat: Eos quos modo vel infidelitas excaecat, vel crudelitas obdurat, flammarum fluvius a conspectu aeterni judicis exiens, ab electorum tunc populo separat, ut tunc a bonis ignis districti examinis dividat quos nunc in suis concupiscentiis tenebrae vitiorum excaecant. 49. Irrigatio praedicationis tanquam torrens dividit bonos a malis. Potest fortasse in torrentis nomine ipsa irrigatio sanctae praedicationis intelligi, juxta id quod per Salomonem dicitur: Oculum qui subsannat patrem, et qui despicit partum matris suae, effodiant illum corvi de torrentibus (Prov. XXX, 17). Perversi quippe dum divina judicia reprehendunt, subsannant patrem. Et quilibet haeretici dum praedicationem sanctae Ecclesiae fecunditatemque illius deridendo contemnunt, quid aliud quam partum matris despiciunt? Quam non immerito eorum quoque matrem dicimus, quia de ipsa exeunt, qui contra ipsam loquuntur; Joanne attestante, qui ait: A nobis exierunt, sed non erant ex nobis; nam si fuissent ex nobis, mansissent utique nobiscum (I Joan. II, 19). Corvi vero de torrentibus veniunt, cum praedicatores veri ad defensionem sanctae Ecclesiae a sacrorum librorum fluentis procedunt. Qui etiam recte corvi vocati sunt, quia nequaquam de justitiae suae luce superbiunt, 578 sed per humilitatis gratiam peccatorum in se nigredinem confitentur. Unde etiam ab electorum Ecclesia dicitur: Nigra sum, sed formosa (Cant. I, 4). Et Joannes ait: Si dixerimus quia peccatum non habemus, nos ipsos seducimus (I Joan. I, 8). Qui videlicet corvi subsannantis oculum effodiunt, quia pravorum ac pervicacium hominum intentionem vincunt. Ex hoc itaque testimonio, si hic quoque torrens praedicatio debet intelligi, Lapidem caliginis et umbram mortis dividit torrens a populo peregrinante, qui sanctorum praedicatio obduratas mentes reproborum deserit, et ad pia humilium se corda convertit. Unde adhuc subditur:

CAPUT XXXI [Vet. XIX].

VERS. 4. Eos quos oblitus est pes egentis hominis, et invios. 50. Judaeis relictis, ad gentiles defiuxit. Quis hoc loco alius accipitur egens homo, nisi ille de quo per Paulum dicitur: Qui propter nos egenus factus est, cum dives esset (II Cor. VIII, 9)? Cujus videlicet egentis hominis pedes sancti praedicatores fuerunt, per quorum profecto praesentiam gentilitatem circumiens, mundum perambulavit universum. De quibus per prophetam dicitur: Et inambulabo in eis (Levit. XXVI, 12; II Cor. VI, 16). An pes ejus non erat, qui tentus in compedibus dicebat: Pro quo legatione fungor in catena (Ephes. VI, 20)? Sed eorum qui umbra mortis et lapis caliginis exstiterunt, pes hominis egentis oblitus est, quia in ipso initio nascentis Ecclesiae, dum sancti apostoli coelorum regnum Judaeae praedicare voluissent, videntes quod ei nihil omnino proficerent, ad praedicandum gentibus defluxerunt, sicut ipsi in suis Actibus dicunt: Vobis oportebat primum loqui verbum Dei; sed quoniam repellitis illud, et indignos vos judicatis aeternae vitae, ecce convertimur ad gentes (Act. XIII, 46). De quibus et per Psalmistam dicitur: Transferentur montes in cor maris (Psal. XLV, 3), quia repulsi a Judaea apostoli in hoc gentilitatis saeculum translati sunt. Qui sunt ergo qui immensa duritia pro obscuritate cordis, quasi quidam lapis caliginis et umbra mortis, a peregrinante sanctorum populo dividuntur, nisi hi quos pes egentis hominis est oblitus, id est quos praedicatores Domini, videlicet per humanitatem pauperis, pro superbiae suae tumore reliquerunt, eorumque omnino obliti sunt, dum praedicationis suae semina ad solam fructificationem gentium transtulerunt? Quos recte quoque et invios vocat, quia dum in infidelitate sua obdurati sunt, verbis vitae ad cor viam praebere noluerunt. Sed Judaea haec, quae sic obduruit, vel qualis dudum fuerit, vel quid post pertulerit, audiamus. Sequitur:

CAPUT XXXII.

VERS. 5. Terra de qua oriebatur panis, in loco suo igne subversa est. 51. Synagoga quae legis scripturarumque panem ministrabat, invidia conflagrans, destructa est. Panem Judaea dare consueverat, quae legis verba proferebat. Quam videlicet legem, quia intelligere jam reprobi atque explanare non poterant, propheta Jeremias in lamentis deplorat, dicens: Parvuli petierunt panem, et non erat qui frangeret eis (Thren. IV, 4). Sed haec terra in loco suo igne subversa est, quia fidelium signa conspiciens, invidiae se face concremavit. Quia enim semper invidia de superbia nasci solet, in loco suo igne periit, quae idcirco arsit invidia, quia superbiam non reliquit. Terra ergo quae prius panem habuit, post igne subversa est, quoniam synagoga, quae 579 mandata Dei per legem protulit, nascentem Ecclesiam persequens, invidiae se igne consumpsit. An non aemulationis suae facibus ardebat, cum Redemptoris nostri signa conspiciens, per quosdam suos diceret: Quid facimus, quia hic homo multa signa facit? vel certe: Videtis quia nihil proficimus, ecce totus mundus post eum vadit (Joan. XI, 47). Videbant unde converti debuerant, atque exinde perversiores fiebant. Quaerebant exstinguere quem cernebant mortuos vivificare. In ore tenebant legem, sed legis persequebantur auctorem. Terra ergo de qua oriebatur panis, in loco suo igne subversa est, quia Judaea in semetipsa et prius habuit legem quae reficeret, et post invidiam quae concremaret. De cujus adhuc descriptione subjungitur:

CAPUT XXXIII.

VERS. 6. Locus sapphiri lapides ejus, et glebae illius aurum. 52. Auget Judaeorum casum, donorum et gratiarum quibus prius ornati sunt, copia. Auget reatum culpae sequentis praeconium gloriae praecedentis. Nam uniuscujusque casus tanto majoris est criminis, quanto priusquam caderet majoris potuit esse virtutis. Dicatur ergo Judaea, dicatur quid fuerit, et praecedentium magnitudo virtutum crescat ad cumulum sequentium delictorum. Locus sapphiri lapides ejus, et glebae illius aurum. Quid enim hoc loco per lapides, nisi sanctorum ac fortium mentes accipimus? (Vet. XX). In Scriptura etenim sacra aliquando lapides in malo, aliquando vero in bono accipi solent. Nam cum lapis pro insensibilitate ponitur, dura per lapides corda signantur. Unde et per Joannem dicitur: Potens est Deus de lapidibus istis suscitare filios Abrahae (Matth. III, 9). Qui videlicet nomine lapidum corda gentilium designat, dura tunc atque insensibilia per infidelitatem. Et per prophetam Dominus pollicetur, dicens: Auferam cor lapideum de carne vestra, et dabo vobis cor carneum (Ezech. XI, 19). Rursum per lapides mentes fortium designari solent. Unde et per Petrum sanctis dicitur: Et vos tanquam lapides vivi superaedificamini domus spiritales (I Petr. II, 5). Et per prophetam Dominus venienti Ecclesiae pollicetur, dicens: Ecce ego sternam per ordinem lapides tuos, et fundabo te in sapphiris, et ponam jaspidem propugnacula tua, et portas tuas in lapides sculptos; et omnes terminos tuos in lapides desiderabiles, universos filios tuos doctos a Domino (Isai. LIV, 11). Stravit namque in illa per ordinem lapides, quia in ea sanctas animas meritorum diversitate distinxit. Fundavit eam in sapphiris, qui scilicet lapides coloris aerei in se similitudinem tenent, quia robur Ecclesiae in animabus coelestia appetentibus solidatur. Et quoniam jaspis viridis est coloris, jaspidem propugnacula ejus posuit, quia illi contra adversarios pro sanctae Ecclesiae defensione objecti sunt, qui, internis desideriis virentes, nulla teporis reprobi ariditate marcescunt. Portas vero ejus posuit in lapides sculptos. Hi quippe portae sunt Ecclesiae, per quorum vitam atque doctrinam intrat in eam multitudo credentium. Qui pro eo etiam quod magnis operibus pollent, et id quod loquentes asserunt, viventes ostendunt, non puri, sed sculpti lapides esse memorantur. In quorum enim vita recta operatio cernitur, quasi in eisdem ipsis exprimitur quod egerunt. Ubi omnem quoque sanctorum numerum generali collectione concludens, subdidit: Omnes terminos tuos in lapides 580 desiderabiles (Ibid. LIV, 12). Et, tanquam si audientes ista peteremus ut hos lapides quos diceret indicaret, adjunxit: Universos filios tuos doctos a Domino. Quia igitur de Judaea nunquam sanctae animae, quae coelestem vitam ducerent defuerunt, dicitur: Locus sapphiri lapides ejus. Et quia magna vitae ac sapientiae claritate per fidem fulsit, adjungitur: Et glebae illius aurum. Quid per glebas, nisi collectiones singulorum ordinum ac multitudines designantur? Glebae autem ex humore et pulvere constringuntur. Omnes ergo qui, rore gratiae infusi, ex mortis debito se pulverem esse veraci cognitione confessi sunt, dum vitae virtute clarescerent, quasi aureae in illa glebae jacuerunt. Glebas haec terra habuit in prophetis, glebas in doctoribus, glebas in Patribus antiquis, qui magna se infusione gratiae in professionis et operis unanimitate tenuerunt. Dicat ergo: Et glebae illius aurum, quia in ea multitudo spiritalium tanto majori virtute claruit, quanto se in Deum ac proximum majori unanimitate constrinxit. 53. Aurum quo fulgebant, perfidiae tenebris obscuratum. Sed hoc aurum perfidiae est postmodum tenebris obscuratum. Cujus profecto nigredinem Jeremias propheta intuens deplorat, dicens: Quomodo obscuratum est aurum, mutatus est color optimus (Thren. IV, 1)? Aurum namque obscuratum est, quia in eis antiquus ille fidei atque innocentiae splendor, irruente perfidia, malitiae se nocte fuscavit. Quia igitur quid fuit audivimus: Locus scilicet sapphiri lapides ejus, et glebae illius aurum, nunc jam dilectus ille Deo populus cur tanta haec bona perdiderit audiamus. Sequitur.

CAPUT XXXIV [Vet. XXI].

VERS. 7. Semitam ignoravit avis, nec intuitus est oculos vulturis. 54. Humilitatis Christi vias ignorantes, ejus mortis fructum amiserunt. Quis hoc loco avis nomine, nisi ille signatur, qui corpus carneum quod assumpsit, ascendendo ad aethera libravit? Qui apte quoque etiam vulturis appellatione exprimitur. Vultur quippe dum volat, si jacens cadaver conspicit, ad esum se cadaveris deponit; et plerumque sic in morte capitur, dum ad mortuum animal de summis venit. Recte ergo mediator Dei et hominum redemptor noster vulturis appellatione signatur, qui manens in altitudine divinitatis suae, quasi a quodam volatu sublimi cadaver mortalitatis nostrae conspexit in infimis, et sese de coelestibus ad ima submisit. Fieri quippe propter nos homo dignatus est, et dum mortuum animal petiit, mortem apud nos qui apud se erat immortalis invenit. Sed hujus vulturis oculus fuit ipsa intentio nostrae resurrectionis, quia ipse ad triduum mortuus, ab aeterna nos morte liberavit. Ille ergo perfidus Judaeae populus mortalem vidit; sed quomodo morte sua nostram mortem destrueret, minime attendit. Conspexit quidem vulturem, sed oculos vulturis non aspexit. Qui dum humilitatis ejus vias quibus nos ad alta sublevavit considerare noluit, semitam avis ignoravit.

Neque enim pensare studuit quod ejus nos humilitas levaret ad coelestia et mortis ejus intentio reformaret ad vitam. Semitam igitur ignoravit avis, nec intuitus est oculos vulturis, quia etsi vidit eum quem in morte tenuit, videre noluit quanta vitam nostram gloria de ejus morte sequeretur. Unde et ad crudelitatem quoque persecutionis exarsit, verba vitae 581 recipere renuit, praedicatores regni coelorum prohibendo, saeviendo, feriendo repulit. Qui scilicet repulsi Judaeam ad quam missi fuerant deserentes, in gentilitatis collectionem dispersi sunt. Unde adhuc subditur:

CAPUT XXXV [Rec. XX].

VERS. 8. Non calcaverunt eam filii institorum, nec pertransivit per eam leaena. 55. Apostoli eorumque successores Judaeam deseruerunt et gentilium conversioni insudarunt.In cunctis Latinis Codicibus institutores positos reperimus, in Graecis vero negotiatores invenimus. Ex qua re colligi valet quod in hoc loco pro institoribus institutores scriptores quique ignorando posuerunt. Institores enim negotiatores dicimus, pro eo quod exercendo operi insistunt. Sed uterque sermo licet in voce dissonet, in intellectu non discrepat, quia omnes qui fidelium mores instituunt, spiritale negotium gerunt, ut cum praedicationem suis auditoribus praebent, ab eis fidem et opera recta percipiant, sicut de sancta Ecclesia scriptum est; Sindonem fecit et vendidit (Prov. XXXI, 24); de qua et paulo post illic dicitur: Vidit quod bona est negotiatio ejus (Ibid. XXXI, 18). Qui hoc loco institutores nisi prophetae sancti vocati sunt, qui synagogae mores ad fidem instituere curaverunt prophetando? Quorum nimirum filii sancti apostoli nuncupantur, qui ut Deum hominem crederent, ad eamdem fidem ex eorum sunt praedicatione generati. De quibus Ecclesiae per Psalmistam dicitur: Pro patribus tuis nati sunt tibi filii, constitues eos principes super omnem terram (Psal. XLIV, 17). Sed quia repulsi apostoli a synagogae finibus sunt egressi, recte nunc dicitur: Non calcaverunt eam filii institorum. Calcarent quippe eam institorum filii, si praedicatores sancti ejusdem synagogae vitia calce virtutis premerent. Si autem institores eosdem sanctae Ecclesiae praedicatores accipimus, institorum filios pastores et doctores, qui apostolorum viam secuti sunt, nil obstat intelligi. Qui Synagogam minime calcaverunt, quia dum eorum patres, id est apostoli, ab illa repulsi sunt, ipsi quoque ab ejus vocatione cessaverunt. [Vet. XXII.] 56. Synagoga relicta, gentibus colligendis Ecclesia studuit. Per quam videlicet Synagogam leaena non pertransiit, quia sancta Ecclesia collectioni gentium dedita nequaquam sese ad illum Judaeae populum diutius occupavit. Recte autem Ecclesia leaena nuncupatur, quia male viventes in vitiis, ore sanctae praedicationis interficit. Unde et ipsi primo pastori quasi hujus leaenae ori dicitur: Macta et manduca (Act. X, 13). Quod mactatur quippe a vita occiditur, id vero quod comeditur, in comedentis corpore commutatur. Macta ergo et manduca dicitur, id est a peccato eos in quo vivunt interfice, et a seipsis illos in tua membra converte. Et quia haec Ecclesia corpus est Domini, ipse etiam Dominus Jacob voce leo vocatur ex se, leaena vocatur ex corpore, dum ei sub Judae specie dicitur: Ad praedam, fili mi, ascendisti, requiescens accubuisti ut leo, et quasi leaena; 582 quis suscitabit eum (Genes. XLIX, 9)? Haec igitur leaena nequaquam dicitur, quia per Judaeam non transiit, sed non pertransiit. Apostolis namque praedicantibus prius ex illa tria millia, postmodum quinque millia crediderunt. Ecclesia itaque per Synagogam transiit, sed non pertransiit, quia ex illa ad fidem paucos rapuit, sed tamen illum infidelem populum a perfidia funditus non exstinxit. Sed, quod saepe jam diximus, repulsa ab infidelitate Judaeorum, deflexit ad vocationem gentium. Unde adhuc de eadem leaena dicitur:

CAPUT XXXVI.

VERS. 9. Ad silicem extendit manum suam, subvertit a radicibus montes. 57. Quarum duritiam emollivit, et superbiam stravit. Manum quippe ad

silicem extendit, quia ad duritiam gentium suae brachium praedicationis misit. Unde et idem beatus Job passionis suae historiam praesciens gentibus innotescendam, dicit: Scribantur haec stylo ferreo in plumbi lamina, vel certe sculpantur in silice (Job. XIX, 24). Qui vero hoc in loco montes, nisi hujus saeculi potentes accipimus, qui pro terrena substantia altum tument? De quibus Psalmista ait: Tange montes, et fumigabunt (Psal. CXLIII, 5). Sed montes a radicibus sunt eversi, quia, praedicante sancta Ecclesia, summae hujus saeculi potestates in adoratum omnipotentis Dei ab intima cogitatione ceciderunt. Radices enim montium cogitationes sunt intimae superborum. Et a radicibus montes cadunt, quia ad colendum Deum potestates saeculi ab imis cogitationibus prosternuntur. Recte etenim per radicem cogitatio occulta signatur, quia per hoc quod intus non cernitur, erumpit quod videatur foris. Unde et in bonam partem per prophetam dicitur: Emittet id quod salvatum fuerit de domo Juda, et quod reliquum est, mittet radicem deorsum, et faciet fructum sursum (Isai. XXXVII, 31). Ac si aperte diceretur: In imis cogitatio nascitur, ut in summis retributio reddatur. Dicat ergo: Ad silicem extendit manum suam, subvertit a radicibus montes, quia dum duritiam gentium sancta praedicatio petiit, superborum altitudinem funditus stravit. Quia vero eos quos a cogitationibus terrenis evacuat donis coelestibus replet, et quos infimis curis exhaurit supernis rigat fluentis, mox subditur:

CAPUT XXXVII.

VERS. 10. In petris rivos excidit. 58. In saxeis gentilium cordibus Deus fluvios praedicationis aperuit. Id est, in duris gentilium cordibus fluvios praedicationis aperuit, sicut per prophetam quoque de irriganda dicitur ariditate gentilium: Posuit desertum in stagnum aquarum, et terram sine aqua in exitus aquarum (Psal. CVI, 35). Atque in Evangelio promittit Dominus, dicens: Qui credit in me, sicut dicit Scriptura, flumina aquae vivae de ventre ejus fluent (Joan. VII, 88). Quod promissum tunc audivimus, etiam nunc completum videmus. Ecce enim in sanctis praedicatoribus, et non ex Judaea progenitis, per cunctam Ecclesiam toto orbe diffusam, fluenta caelestium mandatorum ubertim manant ore gentilium. Quia enim in petris rivos aperuit, ex duris quoque 583 cordibus fluvius sanctae praedicationis emanavit. Sequitur:

CAPUT XXXVIII.

IBID. Et omne pretiosum vidit oculus ejus. 59. Vilis Deo est mundus, et pretiosae animae quas elegit. Sciendum magnopere est quia tanto unaquaeque anima fit pretiosior ante oculos Dei, quanto prae amore veritatis despectior fuerit ante oculos suos. Hinc ad Saul dicitur: Nonne cum parvulus esses in oculis tuis, caput te constitui in tribubus Israel (I Reg. XV, 17)? Ac si aperte diceret: Magnus mihi fuisti, quia despectus tibi; sed nunc quia magnus tibi es, factus es despectus mihi. Unde et per prophetam dicitur: Vae qui sapientes estis in oculis vestris, et coram vobismetipsis prudentes (Isai. V, 21). Tanto ergo fit quisque vilior Deo, quanto pretiosior sibi; tanto pretiosior Deo, quanto propter eum vilior sibi: Quia humilia respicit, et alta a longe cognoscit (Psal. CXXXVII, 6). [Vet. XXIII.] Omne itaque pretiosum vidit oculus ejus. In Scriptura sacra videre Dei, aliquando pro eligere ponitur, sicut in Evangelio scriptum est: Cum esses sub ficu, vidi te (Joan. I, 48); id est, positum te sub umbra legis elegi. Vidit ergo pretiosum quia humilia elegit: Infirma enim mundi elegit Deus, ut confunderet fortia (I Cor. I, 27). Vidit pretiosum, cum humanam animam de se abjecta sapientem gratiae suae illustratione respexit. De qua videlicet anima per prophetam dicitur: Si separaveris pretiosum a vili, quasi os meum eris (Jerem. XV, 19). Vilis quippe Deo est mundus praesens, pretiosa vero ei est anima humana. Qui ergo pretiosum a vili separat, quasi os Domini vocatur, quia per eum Deus verba sua exerit, qui ab amore praesentis saeculi loquendo quae potest, humanam animam evellit. Et quia novi Testamenti doctores ad hoc usque perducti sunt, ut occultas quoque allegoriarum caligines in veteri Testamento rimentur, recte subditur:

CAPUT XXXIX [Rec. XXI].

VERS. 11. Profunda quoque fluviorum scrutatus est, et abscondita produxit in lucem. 60. Deus doctoribus sacris profunda et abscondita legis ac prophetarum revelavit. Quid namque hic aliud flumina nisi antiquorum Patrum dicta nuncupantur? Quis enim pensare sufficiat quam vehemens fluvius, dum legem conderet, ex pectore Moysi erupit quam vehemens fluvius ex David corde defluxit; quanta a Salomonis ore atque omnium prophetarum fluminum fluenta manarunt? Sed horum fluminum Judaea speciem tenuit, dum litterae superficiem servans, eorum profunda nescivit. Nos vero qui veniente Domino in eis interna spiritalia quaerimus, eorum profunda rimamur. Quod ipse Dominus facere dicitur, quia id nos agere ipso donante praevalemus. Per nos ergo qui non litteram quae occidit, sed spiritum qui vivificat sequimur, profunda fluviorum Dominus scrutatur, et abscondita in lucem producit, quia dicta legis, quae caliginosa nimis historia obscurat, nunc expositio spiritalis illuminat. Unde et loquens in parabolis per Evangelium Veritas discipulis praecepit, dicens: Quod dico vobis in tenebris, dicite in lumine; et quod in aure auditis, praedicate super tecta (Matth. X, 27). Aperte namque dicta exponentium fecerunt nobis esse jam conspicuas sententias antiquorum Patrum. Unde Isaias propheta plana sanctae Ecclesiae expositionis verba conspiciens, et non allegoriarum tenebris obscura, exclamavit dicens: Locus fluviorum rivi latissimi et patentes. (Isai. XXXIII. 21). Testamenti enim veteris dicta quasi angusti et clausi rivi fuerant, qui immensas 584 scientiae suae sententias collectione obscurissima constringebant. At contra doctrina sanctae Ecclesiae rivi et lati et patentes sunt, quia ejus dicta et invenientibus multa sunt et quaerentibus plana. Ait ergo: Profunda fluviorum scrutatus est, et abscondita produxit in lucem. Quia dum suis expositoribus intelligentiae spiritum infudit, antiquas prophetantium obscuritates aperuit. Et hoc jam sancta Ecclesia per spiritum agnoscit, quod Synagoga prius per litteram intelligere omnino non valuit. Unde et Moyses cum populo loqueretur (Exod. XXXIV, 33), faciem velabat, ut videlicet designaret quod ille Judaeorum populus legis verba cognosceret, sed ejusdem claritatem legis omnimodo non videret. Unde recte et per Paulum dicitur: Usque in hodiernum enim diem cum legitur Moyses, velamen est positum super eor eorum (II Cor. III, 15). Sed quia dicta Dei nullatenus sine ejus sapientia penetrantur (nisi enim qui spiritum ejus acceperit, ejus nullo modo verba cognoscit), sanctus vir de investiganda eadem Dei sapientia verba subjungit, dicens:

CAPUT XL [Vet.

XXIV, Rec. XXII]. VERS. 12-15. Sapientia vero ubi invenitur, et quis est locus intelligentiae? Nescit homo pretium ejus, nec invenitur in terra suaviter viventium. Abyssus dicit, Non est in me, et mare loquitur: Non est mecum. Non dabitur aurum obryzum pro ea, nec appendetur argentum in commutatione ejus. 61. Sapientiae Dei locus et pretium assignari non possunt. Notandum prius est quod duo sibi proposuit, et duo subdit respondendo. Ad id namque quod superius dixit: Sapientia vero ubi invenitur, et quis est locus intelligentiae? Isto versu respondit: Abyssus dicit: Non est in me, et mare loquitur: Non est mecum. Ad id vero quod dixerat: Nescit homo pretium ejus, nec invenitur in terra suaviter viventium, inferiorem versum reddidit, dicens: Non dabitur aurum obryzum pro ea, nec appendetur argentum in commutatione ejus. Ad utraque ergo respondit, sed augendo quod objecerat, non solvendo. Cum sapientiae namque locum quaereret, ac deinde inferius responderet: Abyssus dicit: Non est in me, non ubi esset, sed ubi non esset indicavit. Rursus cum ab homine ejus pretium diceret ignorari, atque ad hoc inferius redderet: Non dabitur aurum obrysum pro ea, non quid esset ejus pretium, sed quid non esset ostendit. Cunctis autem liquet quod neque haec humana sapientia vel teneri loco, vel emi divitiis potest. Sed vir sanctus, mysticis sensibus plenus, ad alia nos intelligenda transmittit, ut non creatam sed creantem sapientiam requiramus. Nam nisi in verbis istis allegoriarum secreta rimemur, ea utique quae sequuntur omnino sunt digna despectu, si ex sola historica narratione pensentur. Paulo post namque dicit: Non adaequabitur ei aurum vel vitrum. Et cum, sicut novimus, vitrum longe atque dissimiliter auro sit vilius, cur post auri nomen, metalli utique pretiosi, pro immensa laude vitrum quoque dixit sapientiae non aequari? Ipsa ergo litterae difficultate compellimur, ut ad sententias horum verborum mysticas vigilemus. Vir itaque sanctus quam sapientiam contemplatur, nisi eam de qua Paulus apostolus dicit: Christum Dei virtutem, et Dei sapientiam (I Cor. I, 24)? De qua per Salomonem scriptum est: Sapientia aedificavit sibi domum (Prov. IX, 1); et de qua Psalmista ait: Omnia in sapientia fecisti (Psal. CIII, 24). Hujus nimirum 585 sapientiae homo pretium nescit, quia nihil dignum aestimatione illius invenit. Non autem hoc sapientiae pretium et esse dicitur et nesciri, sed idcirco nesciri, quia deest: eo scilicet loquendi genere, quo in angustiis quisque deprehensus, cum remedium subventionis non invenit, fateri solet quia quid faciat nescit. 62. Nullius boni operis merito debetur. Hujus ergo sapientiae pretium nescire, est digni operis meritum quo illam percipiat non invenire. Ad hoc namque pretium damus, ut ejus vice rem quam appetimus possidere debeamus. Quid autem nos dedimus ut hanc sapientiam, quae Christus est (Rom. XI, 6), percipere mereremur? Gratia quippe redempti sumus. Illa namque sola opera male vivendo dedimus, quibus si justa retributio servaretur, non Christus, sed supplicia redderentur. Sed aliud homo per justitiam meruit, aliud per gratiam accepit. Testetur Paulus, priusquam mens illius semen gratuitae veritatis acciperet, quibus sentibus premeretur erroris: Qui prius, inquit, fui blasphemus, et persecutor, et contumeliosus; sed misericordiam consecutus sum, quia ignorans feci in incredulitate (I Tim. I, 13). Testetur pro qualibus Christus mori dignatus est: Cum adhuc, inquit, peccatores essemus, secundum tempus Christus pro impiis mortuus est (Rom. V, 8). Qui ergo veniente sapientia impii inventi sumus, quid boni operis dedimus, quo accipere eamdem sapientiam mereremur? Hujus itaque sapientiae homo pretium nescit, quia quisquis a brutis animalibus rationis intellectu discretus est, quoniam quod suis meritis non sit salvatus intelligit, nihil se dedisse boni operis ut ad fidem veniret agnoscit. Quasi enim ad percipiendam sapientiam pretium dare est cognoscendum Deum actionis suae mercede praevenire. 63. Gratia gratis datur, non ex meritis. Non esse hujus sapientiae pretium cognoverat, qui dicebat: Quis prior dedit illi, et retribuetur ei? (Rom. XI, 35). Hinc iterum scriptum est: Gratia salvi facti estis per fidem, et hoc non ex vobis, sed Dei donum est; non ex operibus, ut ne quis glorietur (Ephes. II, 8). Hinc de semetipso iterum loquitur, dicens: Gratia Dei sum id quod sum (I Cor. XV, 10). Ex cujus nimirum aspiratione gratiae, quia virtutum opera protinus in corde generantur, ut ex libero quoque arbitrio subsequatur actio, cui post hanc vitam retributio aeterna respondeat, illico adjecit: Et gratia ejus in me vacua non fuit (Ibid. XV, 10). [Vet. XXV.] Sed sunt nonnulli qui sanos se suis viribus exsultant, suisque praecedentibus meritis redemptos se esse gloriantur. Quorum profecto assertio invenitur sibimetipsis contraria, quia dum et innocentes se asserunt, et redemptos, hoc ipsum in se redemptionis nomen evacuant. Omnis namque qui redimitur, ex aliqua procul dubio captivitate liberatur. Unde ergo quilibet iste redemptus est, si prius non fuit sub culpa captivus? Liquet itaque quia multum desipit quisquis haec sapit. Hominis quippe meritum superna gratia non ut veniat invenit, sed postquam venerit, facit; atque et ad indignam mentem veniens Deus, dignam 586 sibi exhibet veniendo; et facit in ea meritum quod remuneret, qui hoc solum invenerat quod puniret. [Ret. XXIII.] 64. Praedestinationis gratuitae exemplum in latrone salutem consecuto. Libet inter haec mentis oculos ad illum latronem reducere, qui de fauce diaboli ascendit crucem, de cruce paradisum. Intueamur qualis ad patibulum venerit, et a patibulo qualis abscessit. Venit reus fraterno sanguine, venit cruentus, sed interna gratia est mutatus in cruce; et ille qui mortem fratri intulit, morientis Domini vitam praedicavit, dicens: Memento mei, Domine, dum veneris in regnum tuum (Luc. XXIII, 42). In cruce clavi manus ejus pedesque ligaverant, nihilque in eo a poenis liberum nisi cor et lingua remanserant. Inspirante Deo totum illi obtulit, quod in se liberum invenit, ut juxta hoc quod scriptum est: Corde crederet ad justitiam, ore confiteretur ad salutem (Rom. X, 10). In corde autem fidelium tres summopere manere virtutes testatur Apostolus, dicens: Nunc autem manent fides, spes, charitas (I Cor. XIII, 13). Quas cunctas subita repletus gratia et accepit latro, et servavit in cruce. Fidem namque habuit, qui regnaturum Dominum credidit, quem secum pariter morientem vidit: spem habuit qui regni ejus aditum postulavit, dicens: Memento mei, Domine, dum veneris in regnum tuum (Luc. XXIII, 42). Charitatem quoque in morte sua vivaciter tenuit, qui fratrem et collatronem pro simili scelere morientem, et de iniquitate sua arguit, et ei vitam quam cognoverat praedicavit dicens: Neque tu times Deum, qui in eadem es damnatione. Et nos quidem juste; nam digna factis recipimus; hic vero nihil mali gessit (Ibid., 40). Ille qui talis ad crucem venit ex culpa, ecce qualis a cruce recedit ex gratia. Confitebatur Dominum, quem videbat secum humana infirmitate morientem, quando negabant apostoli eum quem miracula viderant divina virtute facientem. [Vet. XXVI.] 65. Error eorum qui salvari hominem propriis viribus astruunt. Sed hi qui salvari hominem propriis viribus astruunt, eamdem confessionem hominis ab ipsius esse hominis virtute suspicantur. Quod si ita esset, in Dei laude Psalmista non diceret: Confessio et magnificentia opus ejus (Psal. CX, 3). Ab eo itaque accipimus recta confiteri, a quo nobis et magna datur operari. Quia ergo nil boni operis dedimus quo hanc sapientiam percipere mereremur, dicatur recte: Nescit homo pretium ejus, quoniam quisquis jam ratione utitur, tanto altius sub hujus sapientiae intellectu se despicit, quanto ejusdem sapientiae verius interna cognoscit, ut indignum se ad hanc pervenisse videat, per quam gratuito agitur ut dignus fiat. De qua bene mox subditur.

CAPUT XLI [Rec. XXIV].

VERS. 13. Nec in terra suaviter viventium. 66. Quisquis hujus vitae voluptatibus pascitur, ab aeternae sapientiae intellectu separatur. Quid hoc in loco terrae signatur nomine, nisi anima humana? De qua Psalmista dicit: Anima mea sicut terra sine aqua tibi (Psal. CXLII, 6). Haec autem sapientia inveniri in terra suaviter viventium non valet, quia quisquis adhuc hujus vitae voluptatibus pascitur, ab aeternae sapientiae intellectu separatur. Nam si vere saperet, expulsus ab internis gaudiis, de ea in quam 587 cecidit, exsilii sui caecitate lugeret. Hinc namque per Salomonem dicitur: Qui apponit scientiam, apponit et dolorem (Eccle. I, 18), quia quanto plus homo coeperit scire quid perdidit, tanto plus lugere incipit corruptionis suae sententiam quam invenit. Considerat namque unde quo lapsus est; quod a paradisi gaudiis ad aerumnas vitae praesentis, ab angelorum societatibus venit ad curas necessitatum; pensat in quot jam periculis jacet, qui prius sine periculo stare contempsit; luget exsilium quod damnatus patitur, et suspirat ad coelestis gloriae statum, quo perfrui securus posset si peccare noluisset. Quod bene Psalmista considerans, ait: Ego dixi in pavore meo: Projectus sum a vultu oculorum tuorum (Psal, XXX, 23). Contemplatus quippe interna gaudia visionis Dei, et socialem frequentiam angelorum persistentium, reduxit oculos ad ima, vidit quo jaceret, qui ad hoc conditus fuerat, ut in coelestibus stare potuisset; pensavit ubi esset, et quo deesset ingemuit; projectumque se a vultu oculorum Dei doluit, quia in comparatione lucis intimae graviores senserat exsilii sui tenebras quas tolerabat [Vet. XXVII]. Hinc est quod ad animum suum ex praesenti vita nullius gratiae consolationem admittit, dicens: Negavi consolari animam meam (Psal. LXXVI, 3). Nam plerumque hujus saeculi divites solent mentis taedio affecti, bona temporaliter accepta conspicere, et tristitiam delinire. Cum enim moerore quodam se tangi sentiunt, equos aspiciunt, auri argentique sui vascula contemplantur, praedia circumeunt. Cumque per haec temporalia oculos libenter trahunt, obortum animae moerorem vincunt. Unde eis et in Evangelio Veritas dicit: Vae vobis divitibus, qui hic habetis consolationem vestram (Luc. VI, 24). Sed sanctus vir qui hoc luget, quia ab aeternis gaudiis cecidit, consolationem de temporalibus non admittit, dicens: Negavi consolari animam meam. Ac si aperte dicat: Qui de temporalium amissione non lugeo, de temporalium abundantia consolari nequaquam possum. Cui tanquam si nos audientes ista diceremus: Quid igitur quaeris, qui consolari in his quae mundi sunt renuis? illico adjecit: Memor fui Dei, et delectatus sum (Psal. LXXVI, 4). Ac si aperte dicat: Terrenarum rerum me nec abundantia refovet, auctoris autem mei quem adhuc videre non valeo. vel sola memoria delectat. Haec est igitur amaritudo sapientiam, quia dum spe in alta erecti sunt, nullis hic gaudiis animum sternunt. Hinc enim scriptum est: Cor sapientium ubi tristitia est, et cor stultorum ubi laetitia (Eccle. VII, 5). Hinc Jacobus dicit: Miseri estote, et lugete, et plorate, et risus vester in luctum convertatur, et gaudium in moerorem (Jac. IV, 9). Hinc per semetipsam Veritas attestatur, dicens: Beati qui lugent, quoniam ipsi consolabuntur (Matth, V, 5). Inveniri ergo sapientia in eorum terra non potest, qui suaviter vivunt, quia tanto verius stulti sunt, quanto majora perdentes, in minimis laetantur. Hinc Petrus eamdem pravorum stultitiam reprehendit, dicens: Voluptatem existimantes diei delicias, coinquinationis et maculae (II Pet. II, 13). Hinc Salomon ait: Risum deputavi errorem, et gaudio dixi: Quid frustra deciperis (Eccle. II, 2).

Dicat itaque vir sanctus de sapientia: Nec invenitur in terra suaviter viventium, quia nimirum qui in 588 hoc mundo suaviter vivunt ita adhuc stulti sunt, ut hoc ipsum quoque nesciant, unde ceeiderunt. Sequitur:

CAPUT XLII [Rec. XXV].

VERS. 14. Abyssus dicit, Non est in me. 67. A Dei sapientia sunt alieni, qui secundum carnem mundumque sapiunt. Quid hoc loco abyssum nisi corda hominum vocat? quae et per lapsum fluida et per duplicitatis sunt caliginem tenebrosa. Quae nimirum abyssus non esse in se hanc sapientiam profitetur, quia iniqua mens dum esse sapiens carnaliter appetit, stultam se ad spiritalia ostendit. Nam quia, teste Paulo, Sapientia hujus mundi stultitia est apud Deum (I Cor. III, 19), tanto quisque amplius intus stultus fit, quanto conatur exterius sapiens videri. De hac abysso per Joannem dicitur: Vidi angelum descendentem de coelo, habentem clavem abyssi, et catenam magnam in manu sua; et apprehendit draconem serpentem antiquum, qui est diabolus, et satanas, et ligavit eum per annos mille, et misit in abyssum, et clausit, et signavit super illum, ut non seducat amplius gentes, donec consumentur mille anni (Apoc. XX, 1). Millenario etenim numero non quantitatem temporis, sed universitatem, qua regnat Ecclesia, designavit. Antiquus autem serpens ligatus catena in abyssum mittitur, quia religatus a bonorum cordibus, apud reproborum mentes reclusus, eis atrocius dominatur. Qui paulo post quoque de puteo abyssi educi describitur, quia de iniquorum cordibus nunc occulte saevientibus, tunc accepta contra Ecclesiam potestate, in vim aperte persecutionis erumpet. Haec itaque abyssus, in qua nunc diabolus servatur occultus, non esse in se sapientiam dicit, quia alienam se a vera sapientia iniquis operibus ostendit. Dum enim malitiam quisque tegit in corde, ore autem blandimenta exhibet, dum cogitationes suas duplicitate obnubilat, dum puritatis verba quasi fatuitatem devitat, dum vias simplicis innocentiae declinat, quasi habere se abyssus Dei sapientiam recusat. Et quia huic mundo mentes deditae praesentis vitae curis et sollicitudinibus perturbantur, et idcirco ejusdem sapientiae tranquillitate perfrui nequaquam possunt, recte subjungitur:

CAPUT XLIII.

IBID. Et mare loquitur: Non est mecum. 68. Ea non fruuntur, qui terrenis distrahuntur curis. Quid enim maris nomine nisi saecularium mentium amara inquietudo signatur? Quae dum se vicissim inimicitiis impetunt, quasi adversantes se undae collidunt. Recte etenim mare vita saecularium dicitur, quia dum procellosis actionum motibus concitatur, ab internae sapientiae quiete atque stabilitate disjungitur. Quo contra bene per prophetam dicitur: Super quem requiescet spiritus meus, nisi super humilem et quietum, et trementem sermones meos (Isai. LXVI, 2)? A terrenis autem mentibus tanto longius spiritus fugit, quanto apud has quietem non invenit. Hinc est enim quod de quibusdam per Psalmistam dicitur: Contritio et infelicitas in viis eorum, et viam pacis non cognoverunt (Psal. XIII, 3). A qua nimirum contritione perturbationis nos Dominus revocat, dicens: Venite ad me omnes, qui laboratis et onerati estis, et ego vos reficiam; tollite jugum meum super vos, et discite a me, quia mitis sum et humilis corde, et invenietis requiem animabus vestris (Matth. XI, 28). Quid enim in hac vita laboriosius quam terrenis desideriis aestuare? 589 aut quid hic quietius quam hujus saeculi nihil appetere? [Vet. XXVIII.] Hinc est quod Israeliticus populus custodiam Sabbati accepit in munere (Exod. XVI, 29); hinc e contra est Aegyptus muscarum multitudine percussa (Exod. VIII, 21). Populus namque qui Deum sequitur accipit sabbatum, id est requiem mentis, ut nullo in hac vita desideriorum carnalium appetitu fatigetur. Aegyptus vero quae hujus mundi speciem tenet muscis percutitur. Musca enim nimis insolens et inquietum animal est. In qua quid aliud quam insolentes curae desideriorum carnalium designantur? Unde alias dicitur:

Muscae morientes perdunt suavitatem unguenti (Eccle. X, 1), quia cogitationes superfluae, quae assidue in animo carnalia cogitante et nascuntur et deficiunt, eam suavitatem qua unusquisque intrinsecus per spiritum unctus est perdunt, quoniam integritate ejus perfrui non permittunt. Aegyptus ergo muscis percutitur, quia eorum corda qui terrenam vitam diligunt, dum desideriorum suorum inquietudinibus feriuntur, turbis cogitationum carnalium ad ima depressa sunt, ut ad quietis intimae desiderium non leventur. Unde cum mira ope pietatis ad cor veritas venit, prius ab eo cogitationum carnalium aestus ejicit, et post in eo virtutum dona disponit. Quod bene nobis sacra Evangelii historia innuit, in qua dum ad resuscitandam filiam principis invitatus Dominus duceretur, protinus additur: Et cum ejecta esset turba, intravit, et tenuit manum ejus, et surrexit puella (Matth. IX, 25). Foras ergo turba ejicitur, ut puella suscitetur, quia si non prius a secretioribus cordis expellitur importuna saecularium multitudo curarum, anima quae intrinsecus jacet mortua non resurgit. Nam dum se per innumeras terrenorum desideriorum cogitationes spargit, ad considerationem sui sese nullatenus colligit. In his itaque inquietudinum fluctibus habitare sapientiam non posse cognoscens, ait: Et mare loquitur: Non est mecum. Nullus quippe eam plene recipit, nisi qui ab omni se abstrahere actionum carnalium fluctuatione contendit. Unde et alias dicitur: Sapientiam scribe in tempore otii, et qui minoratur actu, ipse percipiet eam (Eccli. XXXVIII, 25). Et rursum: Vacate et videte, quoniam ego sum Deus (Psal. LV, 11). [Vet. XXIX.] 69. Nisi eis non terreno studio serviatur. Sed quid est quod plerosque antiquorum patrum novimus hanc sapientiam et intrinsecus vivaciter tenuisse, et curas mundi extrinsecus solemniter ministrasse (Genes. XLII, 43, etc.)? An perceptione hujus sapientiae Joseph privatum dicimus, qui famis tempore totius Aegypti curas suscipiens, non solum Aegyptiis alimenta praebuit, sed vitam quoque exterorum advenientium ministerii sui arte servavit? An ab hac sapientia Daniel alienus exstitit, qui a Chaldaeorum rege in Babylonia princeps magistratuum effectus, tanto majoribus curis occupatus est, quanto et sublimiori dignitate omnibus praelatus (Dan. II, 48)? Cum igitur constet plerumque etiam bonos non terreno studio terrenis curis implicari, patenter agnoscimus quia sic nonnunquam cives Jerusalem angarias solvunt Babyloniae, sicut saepe cives Babyloniae impendunt angarias Jerusalem. Nam sunt nonnulli qui verbum vitae pro sola sapientiae ostentatione praedicant, eleemosynarum opem pro appetitu vanae gloriae subministrant. Et quidem Jerusalem videntur esse quae agunt, sed 590 tamen Babyloniae cives sunt. 70. Deo soli vacare cupiendum est, et curis externis ex Dei voluntate serviendum. Sic itaque aliquando contingit ut qui solam coelestem patriam diligunt, terrenae patriae curis subjacere videantur. Quorum tamen ministerium a pravorum operibus plerumque in actu, nonnunquam vero ante supernum judicem in sola cogitatione discernitur. Pleni quippe superna sapientia discernunt qualiter debeant et ad aliud vacare intrinsecus, et ad aliud extrinsecus occupari ut si forte occulta Dei ordinatione aliquid eis non appetentibus de hujus saeculi curis imponitur, cedant Deo quem diligunt, et prae amore ejus intrinsecus solam illius desiderent visionem; prae timore vero ejus impositam sibi extrinsecus humiliter expleant actionem, ut et vacare Deo appetant ex gratia dilectionis, et rursum curas superimpositas ex conditione expleant servitutis. Cumque occupationes extrinsecus perstrepunt, intrinsecus in amore pacatissima quies tenetur; atque occupationum tumultus exterius perstrepentes dispensat interius praesidens judex ratio, et tranquillo moderamine ea quae circa se minus sunt tranquilla disponit. Sicut enim vigor mentis frenandis praeest motibus carnis, sic saepe superimpositos tumultus occupationis bene regit amor quietis, quia exteriores curae si perverso amore non appetuntur, non confuso, sed ordinato animo ministrari queunt. Sancti etenim viri nequaquam eas appetunt, sed occulto ordine sibi superimpositas gemunt; et quamvis illas per meliorem intentionem fugiant, tamen per subditam mentem portant. Quas quidem summopere, si liceat, vitare festinant; sed timentes occultas dispensationes Dei, tenent quod fugiunt, et exercent quod vitant. Intrant enim ad cor suum, et ibi consulunt quid velit occulta voluntas Dei; seseque subditos debere esse summis ordinationibus cognoscentes, humiliant cervicem cordis jugo divinae dispensationis. Quisquis vero talis est, quilibet tumultus versentur extrinsecus, nunquam ad ejus interiora perveniunt. Itaque agitur ut aliud intrinsecus voto, aliud extrinsecus teneatur officio; et hac sapientia non jam turbulenta atqua confusa, sed tranquilla corda repleantur. Bene ergo de ea dicitur quia Abyssus dicit: Non est in me, et mare loquitur: Non est mecum. Ac si aperte diceretur: Perturbatae mentes saecularium eo ipso clamant, quoniam a vera sapientia longe divisae sunt, quo quietae non sunt. Quia vero haec Dei sapientia manens cum Patre ante saecula incarnanda erat in fine saeculorum, ut ad redimendum genus humanum non sanctos angelos, non justos homines mitteret, sed in manifestatione visionis per semetipsam veniret, recte subjungitur:

CAPUT XLIV [Rec. XXVI].

VERS. 15. Non dabitur aurum obryzum pro ea. 71. Angeli ab omni labe mundi, non homines. Quid namque per aurum obryzum nisi sancti angeli designantur? Qui recte et aurum vocantur, et obryzum: aurum, quia fulgent claritate justitiae; obryzum, quia nullum habuerunt unquam contagium culpae. Homines vero justi quandiu in hac carne corruptibili mortaliter vivunt, aurum quidem esse possunt, obryzum omnino non possunt, quia corpus quod corrumpitur aggravat animam, et deprimit terrena inhabitatio sensum multa cogitantem (Sap. IX, 15). 591 Nam quamvis in hac vita ex magna justitiae claritate resplendeant, nequaquam tamen ad purum peccatorum sordibus carent; Joanne Apostolo attestante, qui dicit: Si dixerimus quia peccatum non habemus, nosmetipsos seducimus, et veritas in nobis non est (I Joan. I, 8); et affirmante Jacobo, qui astruit, dicens: In multis enim offendimus omnes (Jac. III, 2). Propheta etiam deprecante, qui ait: Ne intres in judicium cum servo tuo, quia non justificabitur in conspectu tuo omnis vivens (Psal. CXLII, 2). Aurum ego obryzum illi nuncupantur, qui in ea qua conditi sunt innocentia perdurantes, et fulgent claritate justitiae, et nullis vel minimis maculantur sordibus culpae. [Vet. XXX.] 72. Nullus tamen angelorum ad redimendum hominem missus est, aut sufficit. Sed quia pro hac sapientia nullus angelorum redemptor humani generis mittendus fuit, ne quis spem in his, quos in adjutorium hominum saepe apparuisse didicimus, angelis poneret, dictum est: Non dabitur aurum obryzum pro ea. Ac si aperte diceretur: Per semetipsam sapientia manifestabitur, ut humanum genus a culpa redimatur. Nullus vice ejus angelus mittitur, quia per creatorem necesse est ut creatura liberetur. Unde et in Evangelio Dominus dicit: Si vos filius liberaverit, vere liberi eritis (Joan. VIII, 36). Sed vir sanctus, spiritu ejusdem sapientiae repletus, quosdam in Judaea praevidit non esse defuturos qui spem in legislatore ponerent, et suae salutis auctorem Moysen putarent, sicut et cuidam sanato maledicentes dicunt: Tu discipulus sis ejus, nos enim Moysi discipuli sumus (Joan. IX, 28). Unde adhuc congrue subinfertur:

CAPUT XLV.

IBID. Nec appendetur argentum in commutatione ejus. 73. Eorum qui Moysen aut quempiam sanctorum, suae salutis auctorem putant, insania. Quia enim argento saepe eloquia divina designantur possunt argenti vocabulo etiam ejusdem eloquii scriptores intelligi, quorum vita inter turbas hominum resplenduit luce virtutum. Sed quia lex peccata indicare potuit, non auferre, non quisquam veterum patrum, non legislator Moyses humani generis redemptor exstitit. Argentum ergo in commutatione hujus sapientiae non appenditur, quia quilibet sancti esse potuerunt, in comparatione unigeniti Filii Dei nullius meriti fuisse pensantur, qui nisi hujus sapientiae servos se esse cognoscerent, sancti nullatenus fuissent. Ad hoc quippe illi missi sunt, ut in cordibus hominum viam huic sapientiae praedicando praepararent, neque ut pro ea, sed per eam subjectos populos regerent. Quia enim certum erat quod per accessum temporum deficientis saeculi languores excrescerent, actum est ut aeterna Dei sapientia in fine saeculorum per semetipsam veniret ad grandem hunc et nimiae infirmitatis aegrotum, id est per totum mundum jacens languidum genus humanum, ut transmissis prius praedicatoribus, quasi quibusdam visitatoribus, tanto postmodum major veniret potentia medici, quanto magis morbus crevisset aegroti. Quia vero nullus vice ejus ad salvandos nos mittitur, dicatur recte: Nec appendetur argentum in commutatione ejus, quoniam vita justorum praedicantium quantalibet sanctitatis luce poileat, adventum nobis supernae 592 sapientiae per suam praesentiam non commutat. Sed fuere multi gentilium qui, mundi hujus sapientum disciplinis dediti, ea quae sunt inter homines honesta servarent, et salvandos servata honestate se crederent, nec jam mediatorem Dei et hominum quaererent, cum quasi sufficientem sibi philosophorum doctrinam tenerent. In quorum despectu mox subditur:

CAPUT XLVI [Rec. XXVII].

VERS. 16. Non conferetur tinctis Indiae coloribus. 74. Quantum praestet Dei sapientia, fucatae nitore sermonis philosophioe. Quid enim per Indiam quae nigrum populum mittit, nisi hic mundus accipitur, in quo vita hominum per culpam obscura generatur. Tincti autem colores indiae, sunt hujus mundi sapientes; qui quamvis per infidelitatem et plerumque per actionem foedi sint, ante humanos tamen oculos superductae honestatis colore fucantur. Sed coaeterna Dei sapientia tinctis Indiae coloribus non confertur, quia quisquis hanc veraciter intelligit, ab his hominibus quos mundus sapientes coluit quam longe distet agnoscit. Ipsaque ejus mandatorum verba ab hujus mundi sapientibus differunt, qui dum intendunt eloquentiae, eorum dicta quasi pulchra apparent specie, et fucatione tincturae; et cum virtute rerum careant, aliud se esse quam sunt verborum compositionibus, quasi superductis coloribus, mentiuntur. At contra, doctrina sapientiae et praedicatione pulchra est, et pura veritate conspicua; nec aliud se per fallaciam praetendit exterius, et aliud reservat interius; neque in dictis suis pulchra videri appetit nitore sermonis, sed integritate veritatis. In mandatis igitur suis Dei sapientia non confertur tinctis Indiae coloribus, quia dum fucata eloquentiae ornamenta non habet, quasi vestis sine tinctura placet. Quam fucationem tincturae bene Paulus despexerat, cum dicebat: Quae et loquimur non in doctis humanae saplentiae verbis, sed in doctrina spiritus (I Cor. II, 13). Malebat quippe hanc sapientiam sola puritate veritatis ostendere, non autem eloquii tinctione fucare. Sequitur:

CAPUT XLVII.

IBID. Nec lapidi sardonycho pretiosissimo, vel sapphiro. 75. Christo nullus aut hominum aut angelorum comparandus. Sardonychum, vel sapphirum, lapides pretiosos non esse quis nesciat? Et dum multi alii pretiosi sint lapides, qui longe istos aestimatione magnitudinis antecellant, cur sapphirus vel sardonychus potissimum pretiosus nominatus est, cum uterque lapis iste aliorum lapidum comparatione vilissimus sit? nisi ut eos lapides qui pretiosi describuntur, dum pretiosos non esse cognoscimus, in eorum intelligentia aliud exquiramus. Sardonychus quippe terrae rubrae similitudinem tenet, sapphirus vero aeream habet speciem. Possunt ergo in sardonycho per terram rubram homines, in sapphiro autem per aeream visionem angeli designari. Nam cum rubrae terrae speciem lapis sardonychus habeat, non immerito hominem designat, quia et Adam, qui primus est conditus, Latino sermone terra rubra nominatur. Quid est ergo quod dicitur, quia haec sapientia lapidi sardonycho, 593 vel sapphiro non confertur, nisi quod is qui est Dei virtus, et Dei sapientia, mediator scilicet Dei et hominum, homo Christus Jesus, tanta magnitudine excellat omnia, ut ei nec in terra primi homines, nec in coelo angeli comparentur? Unde et per Psalmistam, dicitur: Quis in nubibus aequabitur Domino, aut quis similis erit Deo inter filios Dei (Psal. LXXXVIII, 7)? [Vet. XXXI.] 76. Quantum apostoli caelibes antecellant veteris testamenti patres conjugatos. Possunt autem per sardonychum lapidem patres testamenti veteris, per sapphirum vero praedicatores exprimi testamenti novi. Illi quippe quamvis magnam justitiae vitam tenerent, carnali tamen propagationi serviebant. Quia igitur constat quod quaedam terrena agerent, non immerito per sardonychum lapidem, qui, ut praediximus, terrae rubrae tenet speciem, designantur. Per sapphirum vero, qui aetherei est coloris, testamenti novi congrue praedicatores accepimus, qui carnalis propaginis desideria postponentes, coelestia sola sectati sunt. Unde et propheta, conspiciens cuncta carnis desideria sanctos apostolos spiritali ardore transcendere, admiratus ait: Qui sunt hi qui ut nubes volant (Isai. LX, 8)? Ac si aperte dicat: Nos per terram gradimur, qui adhuc conjugiis implicamur, et propagandae soboli opera carnis impendimus; isti vero in terra non ambulant, sed ut nubes volant, qui dum coelestia appetunt, de terrenis desideriis nihil tangunt. Ait ergo quia Dei sapientia sardonycho, vel sapphiro lapidi non confertur, ac si patenter insinuet, dicens: Ei qui homo inter homines cernitur, nec in antiquis quisquam, nec in novis patribus aequatur, quia ex Deitate habet quod in humanitate quemquam similem non habet. Unde adhuc subditur:

CAPUT XLVIII.

Vers. 17. Non adaequabitur ei aurum vel vitrum. 77. Beati fulgebunt in coelo tanquam aurum, translucebunt ut vitrum. Quis hoc sanum sapiens juxta litteram sentire dignetur? Vitrum quippe, ut superius diximus, auro longe est vilius; et postquam dictum est quod aurum huic sapientiae non adaequatur, adhuc quasi crescendo subjungitur quod ei quoque nec vitrum possit aequari. Sed ipsa nos littera ab historico intellectu deficiens, ad indagandum allegoriae mysterium mittit. Auri namque metallum novimus potiori metullis omnibus claritate fulgere. Vitri vero naturae est ut extrinsecus visum, pura intrinsecus perspicuitate luceat. In alio metallo quidquid intrinsecus continetur absconditur; in vitro vero quilibet liquor qualis continetur interius, talis exterius demonstratur, atque, ut ita dixerim, omnis liquor in vitreo vasculo clausus patet. Quid ergo aliud in auro vel vitro accipimus, nisi illam supernam patriam, illam beatorum civium societatem, quorum corda sibi invicem et claritate fulgent, et puritate translucent? Quam Joannes in Apocalypsi conspexerat, cum dicebat: Et erat structura muri ejus ex lapide jaspide; ipsa vero civilas aurum mundum similis, vitro mundo (Apoc. XXI, 18). Quia enim sancti omnes summa in ea beatitudinis claritate fulgebunt, instructa auro dicitur. 78. In eorum vultu intimi animi sensus conspiciuntur. Et quoniam ipsa eorum claritas vicissim sibi in alternis cordibus patet, et cum uniuscujusque vuitus attenditur, simul et conscientia penetratur, 594 hoc ipsum aurum vitro mundo simile esse memoratur. Ibi quippe uniuscujusque mentem ab alterius oculis, membrorum corpulentia non abscondet, sed patebit animus, patebit corporalibus oculis ipsa etiam corporis harmonia, sicque unusquisque tunc erit conspicabilis alteri, sicut nunc esse non potest conspicabilis sibi. [Vet. XXXII.] Nunc autem corda nostra quandiu in hac vita sumus, quia ab altero in alterum videri non possunt, non intra vitrea, sed intra lutea vascula concluduntur, cui scilicet luto per passionem mentis inhaerere Propheta formidabat, cum diceret: Eripe me de luto, ut non inhaeream (Psal. LXVIII, 15). Quod nimirum habitaculum corporum Paulus domum terrestrem nominat, dicens: (Scimus quoniam si terrestris domus nostra hujus habitationis dissolvatur, quod aedificationem ex Deo habemus, domum non manufactam aeternam in coelis (II Cor. V, 1). In hac itaque terrestri domo quousque vivimus, ipsum, ut ita dicam, corruptionis nostrae parietem mentis oculis nullatenus penetramus, et vicissim in aliis videre occulta non possumus. Unde sancta Ecclesia sponsi sui speciem videre in divinitate desiderans, nec tamen valens, quia aeternitatis illius formam quam intueri concupiverat ab ejus oculis assumpta humanitas abscondebat, in Canticis canticorum moerens dicit: En ipse stat post parietem nostrum (Cant. II, 9). Ac si aperte dicat: Ego hunc in divinitatis suae jam specie videre desidero, sed adhuc a visione illius per assumptae carnis parietem excludor. Quousque itaque in hac corruptibili carne vivimus, cogitationes nostras in alterutrum non videmus. Unde rursum per eumdem Paulum dicitur: Quis scit hominum quae sunt hominis, nisi spiritus hominis qui in ipso est [I Cor. II, 11]? Et rursum: Nolite judicare ante tempus, donec veniat Dominus, qui et illuminabit abscondita tenebrarum, et manifestabit consilia cordium (I Cor. IV, 5). Illa itaque civitas quae sua vicissim singulis corda manifestat, ex auro dicitur similis vitro mundo, ut designetur auro clara, vitro perspicua.

79. Quomodo sancti Deo similes sint et dissimiles. Sed quamvis in ea sancti omnes tanta claritate fulgeant, tanta perspicuitate transluceant, ei tamen sapientiae de cujus imagine habent omne quod sunt, aequari non possunt. Bene ergo dicitur: Non adaequabitur ei aurum vel vitrum. Ad hoc enim sancti omnes ad illa gaudia aeterna perveniunt, ut esse Deo similes possint, sicut scriptum est: Cum apparuerit, similes ei erimus, quoniam videbimus eum sicuti est (I. Joan. III, 2)? Et tamen scriptum est: Domine Deus virtutum, quis similis tibi (Psal. LXXXVIII, 9)? Et iterum: Aut quis erit similis Deo inter filios Dei? Unde ergo similes, et unde non similes, nisi quia huic sapientiae et similes erunt ad imaginem et tamen non erunt ad aequalitatem? Aspiciendo quippe aeternitatem Dei, fit eis ut aeterni sint; et dum visionis ejus donum percipiunt, ex perceptione beatitudinis imitantur quod vident. Et similes ergo sunt, quia beati fiunt; et tamen creatori similes non sunt, quia creatura sunt. Et habent itaque quamdam Dei similitudinem, quia non habent finem; et tamen incircumscripti aequalitatem non habent, qui habent circumscriptionem. Dicatur igitur recte: Non adaequabitur ei aurum vel vitrum, 595 quia quantalibet sancti claritate et perspicuitate fulgeant, aliud est homines esse sapientes in Deo, atque aliud esse hominem sapientiam Dei. Quam profecto sapientiam ille veraciter agnovit, qui mediatori Dei et hominum aliquem comparare sanctorum minime praesumpsit. Unde et subditur:

CAPUT XLIX [Vet. XXXIII].

IBID Nec commutabuntur pro ea vasa auri excelsa et eminentia. 80. Sanctiomnes pertranseundi, ut ad Christum Deum et hominem perveniatur. Excelsum quippe vas auri Elias exstitit, excelsum vas auri Jeremias, excelsa atque eminentia auri vasa priores patres fuere. Sed haec Dei sapientia, ut a carnali nos conversatione redimeret, apparuit in carne, et qui illam veraciter non agnovit, mediatorem Dei et hominum, hominem Jesum Christum unum esse ex prophetis putavit quem electorum oculi fide tenuerunt Deum, cum viderunt hominem. Unde ab eo sanctis discipulis dicitur: Quem dicunt homines esse Filium hominis (Matth. XVI, 13)? Cui cum protinus responderent: Alii Joannem Baptistam, alii Eliam, alii vero Jeremiam, aut unum ex prophetis (Ibid., 14), de suo mox sensu requiruntur: Vos quem me esse dicitis (Ibid., 15)? Cui protinus Petrus totius Ecclesiae voce respondens, ait: Tu es Christus Filius Dei vivi (Ibid., 16). Quia igitur juxta Pauli vocem Christum novimus Dei virtutem, et Dei sapientiam (I Cor. I, 18, 30), Petrus pro hac sapientia vasa auri excelsa et eminentia commutare noluit, quia de illa non aliud quam erat intellexit. Magnum quippe, ut dictum est, vas auri Joannes, magnum vas auri Elias vel Jeremias fuit. Sed quisquis eumdem Deum quemlibet eorum esse credidit, vas auri excelsum et eminens pro sapientia commutavit. Ecclesia vero pro hae sapientia, vasa auri excelsa et eminentia non commutat, quia Christum Filium Dei non unum esse prophetarum, sed unum prophetarum Dominum credit. Ipsam quippe ad se venisse sapientiam videns, noluit se in illis aureis vasis figere, sed in cam studuit fide certissima pertransire. Unde in Canticis canticorum dicit: Invenerunt me vigiles qui custodiunt civitatem. Num quem diligit anima mea vidistis? Paululum cum pertransissem eos, inveni quem diligit anima mea (Cant. III, 3). Quos enim vigiles qui custodiunt civitatem, nisi priores Patres vel prophetas accipimus, qui studuerunt ad custodiam nostram sanctae praedicationis voce vigilare? Sed cum Redemptorem suum Ecclesia quaereret, in ipsis antiquis praedicatoribus spem figere noluit, quae dicit: Paululum cum pertransissem eos, inveni quem diligit anima mea (Ibid., III, 4). Illum quippe invenire non posset si istos pertransire noluisset. In istis se custodibus infideles fixerant, qui Christum Dei Filium unum quemlibet esse illorum credebant. Voce igitur ac fide Petri inventos vigiles sancta Ecclesia transiit, quae prophetarum Dominum unum quemlibet ex prophetis credere contempsit. Dicatur ergo: Nec commutabuntur pro ea vasa auri excelsa et eminentia, quia electi quique sanctorum vitam et venerantur ex sublimitate, et tamen non suscipiunt ad errorem. Quos enim puros homines esse sciunt, Deo homini omnino non conferunt. Unde adhuc subditur:

CAPUT L.

Vers. 18. Nec commemorabuntur in comparatione ejus. 596 81. Omnes coelestes cives sancti et justi, sed participatione divinae sapientiae, non comparatione. Omnes enim supernae patriae electi, sancti quidem et justi sunt; sed participatione sapientiae, non comparatione. Quid enim sunt homines Deo comparati? Lumen autem sapientia, lumen et servi sapientiae vocari solent. Sed illa lumen illuminans, isti lumen illuminatum, sicut scriptum est: Erat lux vera quae illuminat omnem hominem venientem in hunc mundum (Joan. I, 9). Istis autem tantummodo dicitur: Vos estis lux mundi (Matth. V, 14). Justitia quidem sapientia, justitia et servi sapientiae nuncupantur; sed illa justitia justificans, isti autem justitia justificata. De Deo quippe, qui sapientia est, dicitur: Ut sit ipse justus et justificans (Rom. III, 26); isti vero dicunt: Ut nos efficeremur justitia Dei in ipso (II Cor. V, 21). Aliter ergo venerandum est lumen illuminans, aliter lumen illuminatum; aliter justitia justificans, aliter justitia justificata. [Vet. XXXIV.] Sapientia vero est, et sapit; nec habet aliud esse, aliud sapere; servi autem sapientiae esse quidem sapientes possunt, nec tamen hoc habent esse quod sapere; nam esse possunt, et sapientes non esse. Habet vitam sapientia, sed non aliud habet, et aliud est, quippe cui hoc est esse quod vivere. Servi autem sapientiae cum habent vitam, aliud sunt, et aliud habent, quippe quibus non est hoc ipsum esse quod vivere; nam possunt juxta aliquid esse, nec vivere. Aliud quippe illis est esse, aliud vivere, quia in ipso parente primo essentiam habuere per initium, vitam per accessum; quoniam prius de terra factus est homo, et postmodum, sicut scriptum est: Inspiravit in faciem ejus spiraculum vitae, et factus est homo in animam viventem (Genes. II, 7). Sapientia vero habet essentiam, habet vitam; sed hoc quod habet, ipsa est. Proinde incommutabiliter vivit, quia non ex accidenti, sed essentialiter vivit. Sola ergo cum Patre et sancto Spiritu veraciter est, cujus essentiae comparatum esse nostrum, non esse est. Huic si conjungimur, sumus, vivimus, sapimus; huic si comparamur, nec sapimus, nec vivimus omnino, nec sumus. 82. Sancti quanto magis Deum cognoscunt, tanto sibi vilescunt. Hinc est quod sancti omnes, quando in Dei visione proficiunt, quanto magis divinitatis interna conspiciunt, tanto magis se nihil esse cognoscunt. Nusquam quippe legitur quod Abraham cinerem et pulverem se esse professus est, nisi cum habere Dei meruit collocutionem. Ait enim: Loquar ad Dominum meum, cum sim pulvis et cinis (Genes. XVIII, 27). Esse enim se aliquid fortasse crederet, si veracem essentiam quae super ipsum est minime sensisset. At vero ubi ad incommutabilem contemplandum super se raptus est, impletus tanta contemplationis potentia, dum videret illum, nil se esse nisi pulverem vidit. Hinc est etiam quod Propheta repletus eadem sapientia, exclamat: Memento, Domine, quod pulvis sumus (Psal. CII, 15). Qui rursus ejusdem incommutabilitatem essentiae contemplatus, ait: Omnia sicut vestimentum veterascent, et sicut opertorium mutabis ea, et mutabuntur; tu autem idem ipse es, et anni tui non deficient (Psal. CI, 27, 28). Hinc ad Moysen dicitur: Ego sum qui sum; et dices filiis Israel: Qui est misit me ad vos (Exod. III, 14, 15). Solus quippe veraciter est, qui solus incommutabiliter permanet. Nam omne quod modo sic, et modo aliter est, juxta non esse est. Permanere enim in statu suo non potest. Atque 597 aliquo modo ad non esse itur, dum ab eo quod fuerat semper ad aliud per momenta temporum ducitur. Ut ergo in participatione illius essentiae aliquid simus, cognoscamus nosmetipsos, quia prope nihil sumus. Bene itaque dicitur: Nec commemorabuntur in comparatione ejus, quia vasa auri excelsa et eminentia, quae ex participatione sapientiae nobis veneranda sunt, in comparatione sapientiae etiam memoranda non sunt. Quia vero haec sapientia humanis cordibus latenter infunditur, sicut de sancto Spiritu quoque dictum est: Spiritus ubi vult spirat, et vocem ejus audis, et nescis unde veniat, aut quo vadat (Joan. III, 8), idcirco subjungitur:

CAPUT LI.

IBID. Trahitur enim sapientia de occultis. 83. Dei sapientia ex occultis revelata. Ecelesia cum deessent aperti hostes, tentari coepit a suis. De occultis sapientia trahitur, quia cum sit invisibilis, non nisi invisibiliter invenitur. Quae recte quoque trahi dicitur, quia sicut flatum trahimus, ut corpus vivat, sic ab intimis sapientiae spiritus ducitur, ut ad vitam anima subsistat. Unde Psalmista ait: Os meum aperui, et attraxi spiritum (Psal. CXVIII, 131). Quae nimirum sapientia, humana carne cum anima rationali suscepta, dum ab intimis apparuisset in promptu, mundus hic quia auctorem suum invisibilem videre non potuit, quem visibilem conspexit hominem, eum quoque et invisibilem agnovit Deum. Conversa est ab infidelitatis suae tenebris superba prius sua aversione gentilitas, ostensis signis atque prodigiis crevit fides; propagata autem fide, in veneratione omnium sanctae Ecclesiae culmen emicuit. Cui cum deessent aperti adversarii, tentari coepit a suis. Nam multae quoque in ea haereses exortae contra eam duri certaminis bella paraverunt. Exercenda quippe est hoc tempore per laborem, quae sequenti tendit ad remunerationem. Qua ex re factum est ut in ea nonnulli prodirent, qui mediatorem Dei et hominum, hominem Christum Jesum purum hominem creatum dicerent, sed ex gratia deificatum; tantumque ei sanctitatis tribuerent, quantum de sanctis caeteris, ejus videlicet famulis, agnovissent. Quos beatus Job, prophetiae spiritu afflatus, sententiae suae definitione redarguit, dicens:

CAPUT LII [Vet. XXXV].

VERS. 19. Non adaeguabitur ei topazium de Aethiopia. 84. Refelluntur qui Christum tanquam purum hominem caeteris sanctis similem docent. Quid Aethiopiam, nisi praesentem mundum accipimus? quae coloris nigredine designat peccatorem populum, foeditate meritorum. Aliquando vero Aethiopiae nomine specialiter gentilitas designari solet, infidelitatis prius nigra peccatis. Quam veniente Domino Habacuc propheta vidit timore perterritam, et ait: Tanacula Aethiopium expavescunt, tabernacula terrae Madian (Habac. III, 7). David quoque propheta videns quod ad Judaeam redimendam veniret Dominus, sed ante gentilitas crederet, et postmodum Judaea sequeretur, sicut scriptum est: Donec plenitudo gentium introiret, et sic omnis Israel salvus fieret (Rom. XI, 25); dicit: Aethiopia praeveniet manus ejus Deo (Psal. LVII, 32); id est, priusquam Judaea credat, salvandam se offert omnipotenti Deo peccatis nigra gentilitas. Topazium vero pretiosus lapis est; et quia Graeca lingua παν omne dicitur, pro eo quod omni colore resplendet, topazium quasi topantium vocatur. Dum vero 598 in Deum conversa gentilitas credidit, ex ea multi ita sunt dono sui Spiritus locupletati, ut quasi multis coloribus, sic multis virtutibus luceant. Sed ne acceptis quisquam virtutibus extollatur, a sancto viro nunc dicitur: Non adaequabitur ei topazium de Aethiopia. Ac si aperte dicat: Nullus sanctorum quibuslibet virtutibus plenus, ex ista tamen nigredine mundi collectus, aequari ei potest, de quo scriptum est: Quod nascetur ex te sanctum, vocabitur Filius Dei (Luc. I, 35). Nos quippe etsi sancti efficimur, non tamen sancti nascimur, quia ipsa naturae corruptibilis conditione constringimur, ut cum Propheta dicamus: Ecce enim in iniquitatibus conceptus sum, et in delictis peperit me mater mea (Psal. L, 7). Ille autem solus veraciter sanctus natus est, qui ut ipsam conditionem naturae corruptibilis vinceret, ex commistione carnalis copulae conceptus non est. 85. Nestorii insania contra Christum. Quem etsi purum hominem, meritis assecutum esse ut Deus fieret, docuit. Refellitur. Modus Incarnationis Verbi. Christus aliud ex Patre, aliud ex matre, non alius. Huic se sapientiae quasi quoddam topazium de Aethiopia aequari voluit, cum quidam haeresiarches dixit: Non invideo Christo Deo facto, quoniam si volo, et ipse possum fieri. Qui Jesum Christum Dominum nostrum, non per mysterium conceptionis, sed per profectum gratiae Deum putavit, perversa allegatione astruens cum purum hominem natum, sed, ut Deus esset, per meritum profecisse, atque ob hoc aestimans et se et quoslibet alios posse ei coaequari, qui filii Dei per gratiam fiunt, non intelligens, non attendens, quia non adaequabitur ei topazium de Aethiopia. Aliud est enim natos homines gratiam adoptionis accipere, aliud unum singulariter per divinitatis potentiam Deum ex ipso conceptu prodiisse. Nec aequari potest gloriae Unigeniti habitae per naturam alia accepta per gratiam; Mediator quippe Dei atque hominum, homo Christus Jesus (I Tim. II, 5), non sicut iste haereticus desipit, alter in humanitate, alter in Deitate est. [Vet. XXXVI.] Non purus homo conceptus atque editus, post per meritum ut Deus esset accepit, sed nuntiante angelo, et adveniente Spiritu, mox Verbum in utero, mox intra uterum Verbum caro, et manente incommutabili essentia, quae ei est cum Patre et cum sancto Spritu coaeterna, assumpsit intra virginea viscera unde et impassibilis pati, et immortalis mori, et aeternus ante saecula temporalis posset esse in fine saeculorum, ut per ineffabile sacramentum, conceptu sancto, et partu inviolabili, secundum veritatem utriusque naturae, eadem virgo et ancilla Domini esset et mater. Sic quippe ei ab Elisabeth dicitur: Unde hoc mihi, ut veniat mater Domini mei ad me (Luc. I, 43)? Et ipsa Virgo concipiens dixit: Ecce ancilla Domini; fiat mihi secundum verbum tuum (Ibid., I, 38). Et quamvis ipse aliud ex Patre, aliud ex Virgine, non tamen alius ex Patre, alius ex Virgine, sed ipse est aeternus ex Patre, ipse temporalis ex matre; ipse qui fecit, ipse qui factus est; ipse speciosus forma prae filiis hominum per divinitatem, et ipse de quo dictum est: Vidimus eum, et non erat aspectus, et non est species ei neque decor (Isai. LIII, 2), per humanitatem. Ipse ante saecula de Patre sine matre, ipse in fine saeculorum de matre sine patre. Ipse templum, ipse conditor templi; ipse auctor operis, ipse opus auctoris; manens unus ex utraque et in utraque natura, nec naturarum copulatione confusus, nec naturarum 599 distinctione geminatus. Sed quia non haec tractanda suscepimus, ad exponendi ordinem redeamus. 86. Superius dictorum recapitulatio. Notandum nobis est quod sanctus vir, ut longe distare ab hac sapientia angelos demonstraret, dicit: Non dabitur aurum obryzum pro ea. Qui ut antiquos etiam Patres sacri eloquii tractatores inferiores ostenderet, adjunxit: Nec appendetur argentum in commutatione ejus. Ut philosophorum quoque sapientiam huic monstraret longe subesse, intulit: Non conferetur tinctis Indiae coloribus. Atque subjunxit: Nec lapidi sardonycho pretiosissimo, vel sapphiro. Ut in illa quoque superna civitate nullum pervenire ad aequalitatem Unigeniti demonstraret, addidit: Non adaequabitur ei aurum vel vitrum. Ut prophetas quoque ei subesse ostenderet, adjunxit: Nec commutabuntur pro ea vasa auri excelsa et eminentia, nec commemorabuntur in comparatione ejus. Trahitur enim sapientia de occultis. Ad extremum vero ut ipsos quoque in Ecclesia haereticos increparet, qui a gentilitatis errore venientes, fidem quam percipiunt, per superbiam scindunt. addidit: Non adaequabitur ei topazium de Aethiopia. Ac si patenter insinuet, dicens: Hi qui ex peccati nigredine ad conversionem veniunt, aequari Deo homini non possunt, quamvis multis colorum virtutibus resplendere videantur. Quorum ut superbia refutetur, apte subjungitur:

CAPUT LIII.

IBID. Nec tincturae mundissimae componentur. 87. Vere humiles et sancti sunt qui suis meritis nihil tribuunt. Tincturae enim mundissimae vocantur hi qui veraciter sunt humiles et veraciter sancti, qui sciunt quidem quia ex semetipsis virtutum speciem non habent, sed hanc ex dono gratiae supervenientis tenent. Tincti enim non essent si sanctitatem naturaliter habuissent. Sed mundissimae tincturae sunt, quia humiliter custodiunt supervenientem in se virtutum gratiam quam acceperunt. Hinc est enim quod sponsi voce de sancta Ecclesia dicitur: Quae est ista quae ascendit dealbata (Cant. VI, 9; III, 6)? Quia enim sancta Ecclesia coelestem vitam naturaliter non habet, sed superveniente Spiritu, pulchritudine donorum componitur, non alba, sed dealbata memoratur. Et notandum quod superius cum dixisset: Non conferetur tinctis Indiae coloribus, eosdem colores non intulit mundos. Hoc vero in loco ut tincturam veracium virtutum ab illa philosophorum fucatione distingueret, tincturas dicens, addidit mundissimas. Tincturae enim mundissimae recte nominantur hi qui prius per prava opera foedi fuerant, superveniente tamen spiritu, nitore gratiae vestiuntur, ut longe aliud appareant esse quam erant. Unde etiam baptisma, id est tinctio, dicitur ipsa nostra in aquam descensio. Tingimur quippe, et qui prius indecori eramus deformitate vitiorum, accepta fide reddimur pulchri gratia et ornamento virtutum. Sequitur:

CAPUT LIV [Rec. XXVIII].

VERS. 20, 21. Unde ergo sapientia venit, et quis est locus intelligentiae? Abscondita est ab oculis omnium viventium. 88. Quandiu mortaliter vivimus, Deum non in propria natura, sed per quasdam imagines videmus, nisi prius carnali vitae, funditus exstincto ejus amore, moriamur. Pensandum magnopere est quod a sancto viro requiritur unde sapientia veniat. Ab eo etenim venit a quo orta est. Sed quia ab invisibili et coaeterno Patre nascitur, ejus via occulta est. 600 Unde et per prophetam dicitur: Generationem illius quis enarrabit (Isai. LIII, 8)? Locus vero intelligentiae ejus, est mens humana, quam haec Dei sapientia dum repleverit, sanctam facit. Quia ergo et invisibilis est de quo prodiit, et incertum nobis est in cujus mente intellecta requiescat, recte nunc dicitur: Unde ergo sapientia venit, et quis est locus intelligentiae [Vet. XXXVII]? Sed hoc valde mirum est quod protinus subinfertur: Abscondita est ab oculis omnium viventium. Sapientia quippe quae Deus est, si omnium viventium oculis occulta esset, hanc procul dubio sanctorum nemo vidisset. Sed ecce huic sententiae Joannem audio concordantem, qui ait: Deum nemo vidit unquam (I Joan. IV, 12). Rursumque cum testamenti veteris patres intucor, multos horum, teste ipsa sacrae lectionis historia, Deum vidisse cognosco. Vidit quippe Jacob Dominum, qui ait: Vidi Dominum facie ad faciem, et salva facta est anima mea (Genes. XXXII, 30). Vidit Moyses Deum, de quo scriptum est: Loquebatur Dominus ad Moysen facie ad faciem, sicut loqui solet homo ad amicum suum (Exod. XXXIII, 11). Vidit isdem Job Dominum, qui dicit: Auditu auris audivi te, nunc autem oculus meus videt te (Job. XLII, 5). Vidit Isaias Dominum, qui ait: Anno quo mortuus est rex Ozias, vidi Dominum sedentem super solium excelsum et elevatum (Isai. VI, 1). Vidit

Michaeas Dominum, qui ait: Vidi Dominum sedentem super solium suum, et omnem exercitum coeli assistentem ei a dextris et a sinistris (III Reg. XXII, 19). Quid est ergo quod tot testamenti veteris patres Deum se vidisse testati sunt, et tamen de hac sapientia quae Deus est, dicitur: Abscondita est ab oculis omnium viventium; et Joannes ait: Deum nemo vidit unquam (I Joan. IV, 12), nisi hoc quod patenter datur intelligi, quia quandiu hic mortaliter vivitur, videri per quasdam imagines Deus potest, sed per ipsam naturae suae speciem non potest, ut anima, gratia spiritus afflata, per figuras quasdam Deum videat, sed ad ipsam vim ejus essentiae non pertingat? Hinc est enim quod Jacob, qui Deum se vidisse testatur, hunc non nisi in angelo vidit (Exod. XXXIII, 11). Hinc est quod Moyses, qui cum Deo facie ad faciem loquebatur, sicut loqui solet homo cum amico suo, ei inter ipsa verba suae locutionis dicit: Si inveni gratiam in conspectu tuo, ostende mihi temetipsum manifeste, ut videam te (Exod. XXXIII, 13). Certe enim si Deus non erat cum quo loquebatur, ostende mihi Deum diceret, et non ostende temetipsum. Si autem Deus erat cum quo facie ad faciem loquebatur, cur se petebat videre quem videbat? Sed ex hac ejus petitione colligitur quia eum sitiebat per incircumscriptae naturae suae claritatem cernere, quem jam coeperat per quasdam imagines videre, ut sic superna essentia mentis ejus oculis adesset, quatenus ei ad aeternitatis visionem nulla imago creata temporaliter interesset. Et viderunt ergo patres testamenti veteris Dominum, et tamen, juxta Joannis vocem: Deum nemo vidit unquam (Joan. IV, 12); et juxta beati Job sententiam, sapientia quae Deus est, abscondita est ab oculis omnium viventium, quia in hac mortali carne consistentibus, et videri potuit per quasdam circumscriptas imagines, et videri non potuit per incircumscriptum lumen aeternitatis. [Vet. XXXVIII.] 89. Sin vero a quibusdam potest in hac adhuc 601 corruptibili carne viventibus, sed tamen inaestimabili virtute crescentibus, quodam contemplationis acumine aeterna Dei claritas videri; hoc quoque a beati Job sententia non abhorret, qui ait: Abscondita est ab oculis omnium viventium; quoniam quisquis sapientiam, quae Deus est, videt, huic vitae funditus moritur, ne jam ejus amore teneatur. Nullus quippe eam vidit, qui adhuc carnaliter vivit, quia nemo potest Deum simul amplecti et saeculum. Qui enim Deum videt, eo ipso moritur, quo vel intentione cordis, vel effectu operis ab hujus vitae delectationibus tota mente separatur. Unde adhuc ad eumdem quoque Moysen dicitur: Non enim videbit me homo, et vivet (Exod. XXXIII, 21). Ac si aperte diceretur: Nullus unquam Deum spiritaliter videt, et mundo carnaliter vivit. Unde Paulus quoque apostolus, qui adhuc Dei invisibilia, sicut ipse testatur, ex parte cognoverat (I Cor. XIII, 12), jam huic mundo totum se mortuum esse perhibebat, dicens: Mihi mundus crucifixus est, et ego mundo (Galat. VI, 14). Sicut enim jam longe superius diximus, non sufficit ut diceret, Mundo crucifixus sum, nisi etiam praemitteret, Mihi mundus crucifixus est, ut non solum se mundo mortuum, sed etiam mundum sibi mortuum esse testaretur, quatenus nec ipse mundum, nec ipsum jam mundus appeteret. Si enim duo fortasse in uno loco sint, quorum unus vivus, alter vero sit mortuus, etsi mortuus viventem non videt, vivus tamen mortuum videt. Praedicator autem Dei ut ostenderet quia per abjectionem qua se humiliando dejecerat, talis jam factus esset, ut nec ipse mundum, nec mundus ipsum concupisceret, non solum ait se mundo crucifixum, ut ipse mundi gloriam quam appeteret tanquam mortuus non videret, sed etiam mundum sibi asseruit crucifixum, in quo tanta se humilitate dejecerat, ut et ipse mundus tanquam ad eum mortuus Paulum humilem atque despectum jam videre nequaquam posset. 90. Refelluntur qui Deum a beatis videri tantum in claritate, non in sua natura asserunt. Sciendum vero est quod fuere nonnulli qui Deum dicerent etiam in illa regione beatitudinis in claritate quidem sua conspici, sed in natura minime videri. Quos nimirum minor inquisitionis subtilitas fefellit. Neque enim illi simplici et incommutabili essentiae aliud est claritas et aliud natura, sed ipsa ei natura sua claritas, ipsa claritas natura est. Quia enim suis dilectoribus haec Dei sapientia se quandoque ostenderet, ipse pollicetur, dicens: Qui diligit me, diligetur a Patre meo; et ego diligam eum, et manifestabo me ipsum illi (Joan. XIV, 21). Ac si patenter dicat: Qui in vestra me cernitis, restat, ut in mea me natura videatis. Hinc rursus ait: Beati mundo corde, quoniam ipsi Deum videbunt (Matth. V, 8). Hinc Paulus dicit: Nunc videmus per speculum in aenigmate, tunc autem facie ad faciem. Nunc cognosco ex parte, tunc autem cognoscam sicut et cognitus sum (I Cor. XIII, 12). [Vet. XXXIX.] 91. Refelluntur et qui angelos divinae visionis expertes somniant. Sed quia de Deo per primum Ecclesiae praedicatorem dicitur: In quem desiderant angeli prospicere (I Pet. I, 12), sunt nonnulli qui nequaquam Deum videre vel angelos suspicantur, et tamen dictum per Veritatis sententiam scimus: Angeli eorum in coelis semper vident faciam Patris mei qui in coelis est (Matth. XVIII, 10). Nunquid ergo aliud veritas, aliud praedicator insonat veritatis? Sed si sententia utraque confertur, quia sibi nequaquam discordet agnoscitur. Deum 602 quippe angeli et vident, et videre desiderant; et sitiunt intueri et intuentur. Si enim sic videre desiderant ut effectu sui desiderii minime perfruantur, desiderium sine fructu anxietatem habet, et anxietas poenam. Beati vero angeli ab omni poena anxietatis longe sunt, quia nunquam simul poena et beatitudo conveniunt. Rursum cum eos dicimus Dei visione satiari, quia et Psalmista ait: Satiabor dum manifestabitur gloria tua (Psal. XVI, 15), considerandum nobis est quoniam satietatem solet fastidium subsequi. Ut ergo recte sibi utraque conveniant, dicat veritas: Quia semper vident; dicat praedicator egregius: Quia semper videre desiderant. Ne enim sit in desiderio anxietas, desiderantes satiantur; ne autem sit in satietate fastidium, satiati desiderant. Et desiderant igitur sine labore, quia desiderium satietas comitatur; et satiantur sine fastidio, quia ipsa satietas ex desiderio semper accenditur. Sic quoque et nos erimus quando ad ipsum fontem vitae venerimus. Erit nobis delectabiliter impressa sitis simul atque satietas. Sed longe abest ab ista siti necessitas, longe a satietate fastidium, quia et sitientes satiabimur, et satiati sitiemus. Videbimus igitur Deum, ipsumque erit praemium laboris nostri, ut post mortalitatis hujus tenebras, accessa ejus luce gaudeamus. 92. Quo sensu Deus lucem habitet inaccessibilem. Sed cum ejus lucem dicimus accessam, obsistit animo quod Paulus dicit: Qui lucem habitat inaccessibilem, quem vidit nullus hominum, sed nec videre potest (I Tim. VI, 16). Et rursum audio quod Psalmista ait: Accedite ad eum, et illuminamini (Psal. XXXIII, 6). Quomodo ergo accedendo illuminamur, si ipsam lucem qua illuminari possumus non videmus? Si vero accedendo ad eum ipsam qua illuminamur lucem vimus, quomodo inaccessibilis esse perhibetur? Qua in re pensandum est quod inaccessibilem dixit ised omni homini humana sapienti. Scriptura quippe sacra omnes carnalium sectatores, humanitatis nomine notare solet. Unde isdem apostolus quibusdam discordantibus dicit: Cum enim sit inter vos zelus et contentio, nonne carnales estis, et secundum hominem ambulatis (I Cor. III, 3, 4)? Quibus paulo post subjicit: Nonne homines estis? Et unde alias testimonium protulit, Quod oculus non vidit, nec auris audivit, nec in cor hominis ascendit quae praeparavit Deus diligentibus se (I Cor. II, 2). Et cum hoc hominibus dixisset absconditum, mox subdidit: Nobis autem revelavit Deus per spiritum suum (Ibidem); ipsum se ab hominis vocatione discernens, qui raptus supra hominem divina jam saperet. Ita etiam hoc loco cum lucem Dei inaccessibilem perhiberet, ut ostenderet quibus, subdidit: Quem vidit nullus hominum, sed nec videre potest. More suo homines vocans omnes humana sapientes, quia qui divina sapiunt, videlicet supra homines sunt. Videbimus igitur Deum, si per coelestem conversationem supra homines esse mereamur. Nec tamen ita videbimus sicut videt ipse seipsum. Longe quippe dispariliter videt creator se, quam videt creatura creatorem. Nam quantum ad immensitatem Dei, quidam nobis modus figitur contemplationis, quia eo ipso pondere circumscribimur, quo creatura sumus. [Vet. XL.] 93. Non videmus Deum sicut ipse se conspicit. Sed profecto non ita conspicimus Deum sicut ipse conspicit se, sicut non ita requiescimus 603 in Deo quemadmodum ipse requiescit in se. Nam visio nostra vel requies erit utcunque similis visioni vel requiei illius, sed aequalis non erit. Ne enim jaceamus in nobis, ut ita dicam, contemplationis penna nos sublevat, atque a nobis ad illum erigimur intuendum, raptique intentione cordis, et dulcedine contemplationis, aliquo modo a nobis imus in ipsum, et jam hoc ipsum ire nostrum minus est requiescere, et tamen sic ire perfecte requiescere est. Et perfecta ergo requies est, quia Deus cernitur; et tamen adaequanda non est requiei illius, qui non a se in alium transit 604 ut quiescat. Est itaque requies, ut ita dicam, similis atque dissimilis, quia quod illius requies est, hoc nostra imitatur. Nam ut beati atque aeterni simus in aeternum, imitamur aeternum. Et magna nobis est aeternitas, imitatio aeternitatis. Nec exsortes sumus ejus quem imitari possumus, quia et videntes participamur, et participantes imitamur. Quae nimirum visio nunc fide inchoatur, sed tunc in specie perficitur, quando coaeternam Deo sapientiam, quam modo per ora praedicantium quasi per decurrentia flumina sumimus, in ipso suo fonte biberimus.

LIBER DECIMUS NONUS.

Ab extrema parte vers. 21 cap. XXVIII usque ad vers. 21 sequentis cap. exclusive perducta expositione, varii sensus non minus docte quam pie aperiuntur, maxime de Christo et Ecclesiae. [Vet. et Rec. I] 1. Quid mirum si aeterna Dei sapientia conspici non valet, quando ipsa quoque invisibilia quae per eam condita sunt humanis oculis comprehendi non possunt? In rebus ergo creatis discimus creatorem omnium quanta humilitate veneremur, ut in hac vita usurpare sibi de omnipotentis Dei specie mens humana nil audeat, quod solum electis suis praemium in subsequenti remuneratione servat. Unde bene postquam dictum est: Abscondita est ab oculis omnium viventium, illico subinfertur:

CAPUT PRIMUM.

CAP. XXVIII, VERS. 21. Volucres quoque coeli latet. 2. Volucres coeli aliquando in malam partem accipiuntur, aliquando in bonam. In Scriptura enim sacra volucres aliquando in malo, aliquando in bono dantur intelligi. Per volucres quippe nonnunquam potestates aereae designantur, bonorum studiis adversae. Unde Veritatis ore dicitur: Quoniam senem quod secus viam cecidit, venerunt volucres, et comederunt illud (Matth. XIII, 4; Luc. VIII, 5); quia nimirum maligni spiritus humanas mentes obsidentes, dum cogitationes noxias ingerunt, verbum vitae a memoria evellunt. Hinc rursum cuidam diviti superba sapienti dicitur: Vulpes foveas habent, et volucres coeli nidos; Filius autem hominis non habet ubi caput suum reclinet (Matth. VIII, 20; Luc. IX, 58). Vulpes valde fraudulenta sunt animalia, quae in fossis vel specubus se abscondunt; cumque apparuerint, nunquam rectis itineribus, sed tortuosis anfractibus currunt. Volucres vero, ut novimus, alto volatu se in aera sublevant. Nomine ergo vulpium dolosa atque fraudulenta, nomine autem volucrum, haec eadem superba daemonia designantur. Ac si dicat: Fraudulenta et elata daemonia in corde vestro, id est in cogitatione superbiae inveniunt habitationem suam; Filius autem hominis ubi caput suum reclinet non habet, id est, humilitas mea requiem in superba mente vestra non invenit. Quasi enim quodam volatu volucris illa prima se extulit, quae per elatam cogitationem dixit: In coelum conscendam, super astra coeli exaltabo solium meum, sedebo in monte testamenti, in lateribus Aquilonis, ascendam super altitudinem nubium, et ero similis Altissimo (Isai. XIV, 13). Ecce quam alta superbe volando petiit. Quem etiam volatum et primis hominibus persuasit. Ipsi quippe volando quasi super se ire conati sunt, quando eis dictum est, ut gustarent, et essent sicut dii (Genes. III, 5, 19). Cumque similitudinem divinitatis appetunt, immortalitatis munera perdiderunt (Ibid., 19). Qui in terram moriendo non issent, si super terram humiliter stare voluissent. 3. At contra in bono volucres poni solent, sicut in Evangelio Dominus cum similitudinem regni coelestis ex grano sinapis denuntiaret, dixit: Cui simile est regnum Dei, et cui simile aestimabo illud? Simile est grano sinapis, quod acceptum homo misit in, hortum suum, et crevit, et factum est in arborem magnam, et volucres coeli requieverunt in ramis ejus (Matth. XIII, 31). Ipse quippe est granum sinapis qui in horti sepultura plantatus, arbor magna surrexit. Granum namque fuit cum moreretur, arbor cum resurgeret. Granum per humilitatem carnis, arbor per potentiam majestatis. Granum, quia vidimus eum, et non erat aspectus (Isai. LIII, 2); arbor autem, quia speciosus forma prae filiis hominum (Psal. XLIV, 3). [Vet. II.] Hujus arboris rami sancti praedicatores sunt. Et videamus quam late tendantur. Quid enim de eis dicitur? In omnem terram exivit sonus eorum, et in fines orbis terrae verba eorum (Psal. XVIII, 5). In istis ramis volucres requiescunt, quia sanctae animae, quae quibusdam virtutum pennis a terrena cogitatione se sublevant, in eorum dictis atque consolationibus ab hujus vitae fatigatione respirant. Hoc igitur in loco postquam de sapientia dictum est: Abscondita est ab oculis omnium viventium, recte subjungitur: Volucres quoque coeli latet, quia in hac corruptibili carne constituti, naturae ejus potentiam ipsi quoque videndo non penetrant, qui jam per meritum sanctae contemplationis volant. Ubi apte subjungitur:

CAPUT II [Rec. II].

VERS. 22. Perditio et mors dixerunt: Auribus nostris audivimus famam ejus. 4. Superbi angeli divinam sapientiam, quia ea non fruuntur, minime vident.Qui perditionis et mortis nomine nisi maligni spiritus designantur? qui inventores mortis et perditionis exstiterunt, sicut de ipso eorum principe sub ministri ejus specie per Joannem dicitur: Et nomen illi mors (Apoc. VI, 8). Cui subjecti omnes superbiae spiritus de hac sapientia quae Deus est 605 dicunt: Auribus nostris audivimus famam ejus; quia nimirum visionem illius plena beatitudine habere nequiverunt. Videre quippe perfecte coaeternam Deo sapientiam, hoc est quod habere. Unde ad Joannem de munere vincentis dicitur: Dabo illi calculum candidum, et in calculo nomen novum scriptum, quod nemo scit, nisi qui accipit (Apoc. II, 17). In hac enim vita scire aliquid vel videre possumus, etiam quod non accepimus; habere vero nomen novum in calculo scriptum, est in aeterno praemio notitiam Dei humanis sensibus inusitatam, quam scire non potest nisi qui accipit, habere. Quia itaque, ut diximus, videre Deum, hoc est quod habere, ideo iniqui spiritus hanc sapientiam non vident, quia repulsi per superbiam nequaquam eam habere potuerunt. Ad lucem quippe ejus clauserunt oculos cordis, superfusis ejus radiis repugnantes, sicut intelligi etiam de eisdem malignis spiritibus potest, quod scriptum est: Ipsi rebelles fuerunt lumini (Job. XXIV, 13). Famam ergo sapientiae malignis spiritibus audisse, sed eamdem sapientiam non vidisse, est et ejus potentiam ex virtute illius cognovisse, et tamen sub ea humiliter stare noluisse. Unde et Veritatis voce de ipso malignorum spirituum capite dicitur: Ille homicida erat ab initio, et in veritate non stetit (Joan. VIII, 44). Sequitur:

CAPUT III [Rec. III].

VERS. 23. Deus intelligit viam ejus, et ipse novit locum illius. 5. Homines latuit quando per carnem Sapientia ventura esset ad homines; vel quomodo foris apparens invisibilis apud Patrem permaneret. Haec coaeterna Deo sapientia aliter viam habet, atque aliter locum. Locum vero si quis intelligat, non localem. Nam teneri corporaliter non potest Deus; sed, ut dictum est, locus intelligitur non localis, Locus sapientiae Pater est, locus Patris sapientia. sicut ipsa Sapientia attestante dicitur: Ego in Patre, et Pater in me. Aliter ergo ipsa sapientia habet viam, atque aliter locum. Viam per humanitatis transitum, locum vero per flatum divinitatis. [Vet. III.] Inde enim non transit. unde aeterna est; sed inde transit, unde propter nos apparuit temporalis. Sic namque in Evangelio scriptum est: Quia egrediens ab Jericho Dominus transibat; duo autem caeci sedentes juxta viam clamaverunt, dicentes: Domine, miserere nostri fili David (Joan. XIV, 10, 11; Matth. XX, 29, 30). Ad quorum vocem, sicut illic scriptum est, stetit Jesus, et lumen reddidit. Quid est autem transeundo audire, stando lumen restituere, nisi quod per humanitatem suam nobis misertus est, qui per divinitatis suae potentiam a nobis mentis nostrae tenebras exclusit? Quod enim propter nos natus et passus est, quod resurrexit, ascendit in coelum, quasi transit Jesus, quia haec nimirum actio temporalis est. Sed stans eos tetigit et illuminavit, quia non sicut illa dispensatio temporalis, ita verbi aeternitas transit, quae in se manens innovat omnia. Stare enim Dei, est incommutabili cogitatione mutabilia cuncta disponere. Qui ergo voces petentium transiens audivit, stans lumen reddidit, quia etsi propter nos temporalia pertulit, inde tamen nobis lucem tribuit, unde habere mutabilitatis transitum nescit. Quia igitur quando per carnem appareret hominibus incertum fuit, 606 recte nunc dicitur: Deus intelligit viam ejus, et ipse novit locum illius. Ac si aperte diceretur: Humanae cogitationi occulta sunt, vel quando per carnem ad homines sapientia veniat, vel quomodo apud Patrem invisibilis, etiam cum foris apparuerit, persistat. 6. Ejusdem adventus et mansio in cordibus hominum ignorantur. Quamvis hoc intelligi et aliter potest. Nam via ejus non inconvenienter accipitur hoc ipsum quod venit ad cor, seseque nobis intrinsecus infundit. Locus vero ejus fit cor, ad quod veniens permanet. De hac quippe via illius dicitur: Vox clamantis in deserto, parate viam Domino (Matth. III, 3); id est, in corde vestro venienti Sapientiae aditum reserate, sicut alias dicitur: Iter facite ei qui ascendit super occasum (Psal. LXVII, 5). Super occasum fuit ascendere, ipsam mortem quam pertulerat resurgendo superasse. Ait ergo: Ei qui ascendit super occasum, iter facite; id est, resurgenti Domino in vestris cordibus per fidem viam praebete. Hinc Joanni per spiritum dicitur: Praeibis ante faciem Domini parare vias ejus (Luc. I, 76). Quisquis etenim praedicando a sordibus vitiorum corda audientium mundat, venienti sapientiae viam praeparat. Habet ergo viam ista sapientia, habet et locum: Viam qua venit, locum quo manet, sicut ipsa ait: Si quis diligit me, sermonem meum servabit; et Pater meus diliget eum, et ad eum veniemus, et mansionem apud eum faciemus (Joan. XIV, 23). Via est igitur qua venit, locus quo manet. Sed quo venit, quae ubique est? An venire est sapientiae per illuminationem mentis nostrae indicare praesentiam majestatis suae? Et quia hominibus incertum est vel in cujus cor veniat, vel in quo postquam venerit permanendo requiescat, recte nunc dicitur: Deus intelligit viam ejus, et ipse novit locum illius, quia solius divinae visionis est cernere, vel quibus modis intellectus sapientiae ad cor hominis veniat, vel cujus mens intellectum vitae, quem perceperit, mortiferis cogitationibus non amittat. Et quia haec eadem sapientia per humanitatis gratiam manifestata in cunctis mundi partibus electorum fuerat corda repletura, recte subditur.

CAPUT IV [Vet. IV].

VERS. 24. Ipse enim fines mundi intuetur, et omnia quae sub coelo sunt respicit. Deus nos respiciendo per gratiam reformat. 7. Respicere quippe Dei est ea quae amissa ac perdita fuerant ad suam gratiam reformare. Unde scriptum est: Rex qui sedet in solio judicii, dissipat omne malum intuitu suo (Prov. XX, 8). Respiciendo namque levitatis nostrae mala coercuit, et magna merita maturitatis dedit. Unde adhuc subditur:

CAPUT V [Rec. IV].

VERS. 25. Qui fecit ventis pondus, 8. Animas vagas figit et gravitate donat. Velocitate enim ac subtilitate ventorum in Scriptura sacra solent animae designari, sicut per Psalmistam de Deo dicitur: Qui ambulat super pennas ventorum Psal. CIII, 3); id est, qui transgreditur virtutes animarum Fecit ergo ventis pondus, quia dum superna sapientia replet animas, eas maturitate indita graves reddit; non illa gravitate qua dicitur: Filii hominum usquequo gravi corde (Psal. IV, 3)? Aliud namque est gravem esse per consilium, aliud per 607 peccatum; aliud est gravem esse per constantiam, aliud per culpam. Ista enim gravitas pondus habet oneris, illa virtutis. Pondus ergo accipiunt animae, ut ab intentione Dei non jam levi motu desiliant, sed in eum fixa constantiae gravitate consistant. Adhuc ille populus leviter movebatur, de quo per prophetam dicitur: Abiit vagus in viam cordis fui; viam ejus vidi, et dimisi eum (Isai. LVII, 17). Grave autem consilium cordis omnem inconstantiam vagationis expellit. Et quoniam sunt animae quae levi motu nunc ista, nunc illa desiderant, omnipotens Deus, quia ipsas leves fluctuationes mentium non leviter pensat, vagationem cordis relinquendo dijudicat. Sed cum per gratiam respicit vagam mentem, in consilii stabilitatem figit. Recte ergo nunc dicitur: Qui fecit ventis pondus, quia cum leves motus animi misericorditer dignatur aspicere, hunc protinus ad constantiae maturitatem format. Vel certe ventis pondus facere est concessam hic electis de virtutibus gloriam, permista infirmitate temperare. Unde et subditur:

CAPUT VI.

IBID. Et aquas appendit mensura. 9. Virtutes electorum permista, ne extollantur, infirmitate temperat. Aquae in Scriptura sacra aliquando Spiritum sanctum, aliquando scientiam sacram, aliquando scientiam pravam, aliquando tribulationem, aliquando defluentes populos, aliquando mentes fidem sequentium, designare solent. Per aquam quippe sancti Spiritus infusio designatur, sicut in Evangelio dicitur: Qui credit in me, sicut dicit Scriptura, flumina de ventre ejus fluent aquae vivae (Joan. VII, 38). Ubi evangelista secutus adjunxit: Hoc autem dixit de Spiritu, quem accepturi erant credentes in eum. Rursum per aquam sacra scientia designatur, sicut dicitur: Aqua sapientiae salutaris potabit eos (Eccli. XV, 3). Per aquam quoque prava scientia appellari solet, sicut apud Salomonem mulier, quae typum haereseos tenet, callidis suasionibus blanditur dicens: Aquae furtivae dulciores sunt (Prov. IX, 17). Aquarum etiam nomine nonnunquam solent tribulationes intelligi, sicut per Psalmistam dicitur: Salvum ne fac, Deus, quoniam intraverunt aquae usque ad animam meam (Psal. XLVIII, 2). Per aquam populi designantur, sicut per Joannem dicitur: Aquae vero sunt populi (Apoc. XVII, 15). Per aquam quoque non solum fluxus decurrentium populorum, sed etiam bonorum mentes, fidei praedicamenta sequentium, designantur, sicut propheta ait: Beati qui seminatis super omnes aquas (Isai. XXXII, 20) Et per Psalmistam dicitur: Vox Domini super aquas (Psal. XXVIII, 3) Hoc ergo in loco quid aquarum nomine nisi electorum corda signantur, quae per intellectum sapientiae auditum jam supernae vocis acceperunt? De quibus recte dicitur: Et aquas appendit mensura. [Vet. et. Rec. V]. Quia sancti ipsi qui sancto sublevante

Spiritu ad summa rapiuntur, quandiu in hac vita sunt, ne aliqua elatione superbiant, quibusdam tentationibus reprimuntur, ut nequaquam tantum proficere valeant quantum volunt, sed ne extollantur superbia, sit in eis ipsarum quaedam mensura virtutum. 10. Quod confirmatur exemplo Eliae Jezabelem fugientis. Hinc est enim quod Elias dum tot virtutibus 608 in alta profecisset, quadam mensura suspensus est, dum Jezabel postmodum quamvis reginam, tamen mulierculam fugit (III Reg. XIX, 3). Perpendo quippe hunc mirae virtutis virum, ignem de coelo trahere, et secundo quinquagenarios cum suis omnibus petitione subita concremare, verbo coelos a pluviis claudere, verbo coelos ad pluvias aperire, suscitantem mortuos, ventura quaeque praevidentem; et ecce rursus animo occurrit, quo pavore ante unam mulierculam fugerit. Considero virum timore perculsum de manu Dei mortem petere, nec accipere; de manu mulieris mortem fugiendo vitare. Quaerebat enim mortem dum fugeret, dicens: Sufficit mihi, tolle animam meam; neque enim melior sum quam patres mei (Ibid. XIX, 4). Unde ergo sic potens, ut tot illas virtutes faciat? unde sic infirmus, ut ita feminam pertimescat, nisi quia aquae appenduntur mensura, ut ipsi sancti Dei homines et multum valeant per potentiam Dei, et rursum quadam mensura moderati sint per infirmitatem suam? In illis virtutibus Elias quid de Deo acceperat, in istis infirmitatibus quid de se esse poterat, agnoscebat. Illa potentia virtus fuit, ista infirmitas custos virtutis. In illis virtutibus ostendebat quid acceperat, in istis infirmitatibus hoc quod acceperat custodiebat. In miraculis monstrabatur Elias, in infirmitatibus servabatur. 11. Et Pauli mortem declinantis, aut Satanae tentationes patientis. Sic Paulum video fluminum et latronum, civitatis et solitudinis, maris ac terrae pericula sustinentem (II Cor. XI, 26), frenantem jejuniis ac vigiliis corpus, sustinentem frigoris et nuditatis aerumnam, ad ecclesiarum custodiam vigilanter se ac pastoraliter exercentem, ad tertium coelum raptum, rursumque eum in paradisum raptum (Ibid., XII, 4), et audisse arcana verba quae non licet homini loqui; et tamen Satanae angelo ad tentandum conceditur (Ibid. XII, 7), orat ut eximi debeat, et non exauditur. Cujus cum ipsa initia conversionis aspicio, perpendo quod ei superna pietas coelos aperit, seseque illi Jesus de sublimibus ostendit. Qui lumen corporis ad tempus perdidit, lumen cordis in perpetuum accepit. Ad Ananiam mittitur (Act. IX, 7), vas electionis vocatur; et tamen de civitate eadem quam post visionem Jesu ingressus fuerat fugiens recedit, sicut ipse testatur dicens: Damasci praepositus gentis Arethae regis custodiebat civitatem Damascenorum, ut me comprehenderet; et per fenestram in sporta dimissus sum per murum, et sic effugi manus ejus (II Cor. XI, 32). Cui licenter dicam: O Paule, in coelo jam Jesum conspicis, et in terra adhuc hominem fugis? In paradisum duceris, secreta Dei verba cognoscis, et adhuc a Satanae angelo tentaris? Unde sic fortis, ut ad coelestia rapiaris? Unde sic infirmus, ut in terra hominem fugias, et adhuc a Satanae angelo adversa toleres, nisi quia ipse qui te sublevat rursum subtilissima te mensura moderatur, ut et in miraculis tuis nobis praedices virtutem Dei, et rursum in timore tuo reminisci nos faciat infirmitatis nostrae? Quae tamen infirmitas ne in desperationem nos pertrahat cum pulsat, dum de infirmitate tua Dominum rogares, 609 quia auditus non es, nobis quoque locutus es quid audisti: Sufficit tibi gratia mea, nam virtus in infirmitate perficitur (II Cor. XII, 9). [Vet. VI.] 12 Custos virtutis est infirmitas. Aperta ergo voce Dei ostenditur quia custos est virtutis infirmitas. Tunc quippe bene interius custodimur, cum per dispensationem Dei tolerabiliter tentamur exterius, aliquando vitiis, aliquando pressuris. Nam eis quoque quos viros novimus fuisse virtutum, tentationes atque certamina non defuere vitiorum. Hinc est enim quod ad consolationem nostram isdem praedicator egregius de se quaedam talia prodere dignatur, dicens: Video aliam legem in membris meis, repugnantem legi mentis meae, et captivum me ducentem in lege peccati, quae est in membris meis (Rom. VII, 23). Ad ima quippe pertrahit caro, ne extollat spiritus: et ad summa trahit spiritus, ne prosternat caro. Spiritus levat, ne jaceamus in infimis; caro aggravat, ne extollamur ex summis. Si non sublevante spiritu nos caro tentaret, perfectione procul dubio tentationis suae in ima dejiceret. Rursum vero si non tentante carne ad summa nos spiritus sublevaret, in superbiae casu ipsa nos pejus sublevatione prosterneret. Sed fit certo moderamine ut dum unusquisque sanctorum jam quidem interius ad summa rapitur, sed adhuc tentatur exterius, nec desperationis lapsum, nec elationis incurrat, quoniam nec tentatio exterior culpam perficit, quia interior intentio sursum trahit; nec rursum intentio interior in superbiam elevat, quia tentatio exterior humiliat dum gravat. Sicque magno ordine cognoscimus in interiori profectu quid accipimus, in exteriori defectu quid sumus. Et miro modo agitur, ut nec de virtute quisquam extolli debeat, nec de tentatione desperare, quia dum spiritus trahit, et caro retrahit, subtilissimo judicii interni moderamine, infra summa, et supra infima in quodam medio anima libratur. Bene ergo dicitur: Et aquas appendit mensura. Sequitur:

CAPUT VII.

VERS. 26, 27. Quando ponebat pluviis legem, et viam procellis sonantibus, tunc vidit illam, et enarravit, et praeparavit, et investigavit. 13. Verbi Dei praeconibus lex posita, ut opere impleant quod praedicant. Hanc legem servantibus ad hominum corda aditus patet. Solent per pluvias praedicantium dicta signari. Unde per Moysen dicitur: Exspectetur sicut pluvia eloquium meum (Deut XXXII, 2). Quorum videlicet verba cum blande persuadent, pluviae sunt; cum vero terribilia de venturo judicio intonant, sonantes procellae. Et notandum quod pluviis lex ponitur, ut via procellis sonantibus aperiatur. Lex quippe est ipsis praedicatoribus posita, ut vivendo impleant quod loquendo suadere festinant. Nam loquendi auctoritas perditur, quando vox opere non adjuvatur. Hinc enim per Psalmistam dicitur: Peccatori autem dixit Deus: Quare tu enarras justitias meas, et assumis testamentum meum per os tuum? Tu vero odisti disciplinam, et projecisti sermones meos post te (Psal. XLIX, 16). Sermones etenim Dei post se praedicator projicit, cum hoc quod dicit facere contemnit. Quando autem dictis ejus alter obediat, dum ipse respuit opere quod praedicat voce, et dissimulat audire quod narrat? De ista praedicationis lege scriptum est: Qui solverit unum de mandatis istis minimis, 610 et docuerit sic homines, minimus vocabitur in regno coelorum. Qui autem fecerit, et docuerit sic, magnus vocabitur in regno coelorum (Matth. V, 19). Regnum coelorum videlicet Ecclesiam praesentem appellat, de qua scriptum est: Et colligent de regno ejus omnia scandala (Matth. XIII, 41). In superno etenim regno scandala quae ex eo colligi debeant non habentur. Qui ergo solvit opere, et sic docet voce, in isto regno coelorum erit minimus, in illo nec minimus. Viam autem procellis sonantibus posuit, cum praedicatoribus suis ad corda hominum terrore venturi judicii perculsa aditum fecit. Prius itaque lex ponitur, ut post modum via pandatur, quia illa vox cor audientis penetrat, quae hoc quod ore sonuerit, opere conservat. [VET. VII.] Tunc autem cum legem pluviis et viam procellis sonantibus poneret, hanc sapientiam Deus vidit, enarravit, praeparavit, et investigavit. Usitata sacri eloquii locutione videre Deus dicitur, videre nos facere, sicut justo viro Dominus dicit: Nunc cognovi quod timeas Deum (Genes. XXII, 12). Et Israelitae praemonentur: Tentat vos Dominus Deus vester, ut sciat si diligitis eum (Deut. XIII, 3); id est, ut scire vos faciat. Tunc ergo cum legem pluviis poneret, hoc est mandatum custodiae praedicatoribus daret, hanc incarnatam sapientiam videri et enarrari a praedicatoribus, praeparari et investigari ab auditoribus fecit. Sibi quippe illam praeparat, quisquis illam bene vivendo in diem judicii propitiam parat. Et notandum quod de ea quatuor dicta sunt, Ait enim: Vidit, enarravit, praeparavit, investigavit. Vidit namque, quia species est; enarravit, quia verbum; praeparavit, quia remedium; investigavit quia occultum. Sed hoc quod aeterna Dei sapientia species Patris et Verbum dicitur, quando ad humana mente penetratur? Quis namque intelligat, vel verbum sine tempore, vel speciem sine circumscriptione? Dicendum ergo erat aliquid quod de illa homo cognosceret in se. Unde apte subditur:

CAPUT VIII [Rec. VI].

VERS. 28. Et dixit homini: Ecce timor Domini ipsa est sapientia, et recedere a malo intelligentia. 14. Deum timens ejus sapientiam possidere incipit, et in se cognoscit, quem in ipsius natura cognoscere non potest. Ac si aperte diceretur: Ad temetipsum homo revertere, cordis tui secreta perscrutare. Si Deum te timere deprehendis, profecto constat quia hac sapientia plenus es. Quam si adhuc cognoscere non potes quid sit in se, jam cognoscis interim quid sit in te. Quae enim apud se ab angelis metuitur, apud te timor Domini vocatur, quia hanc habere te certum est, si timere te Deum incertum non est. Hinc etiam per Psalmistam dicitur: Initium sapientiae, timor Domini (Psal. CX, 10); quia tunc penetrare cor inchoat, cum hoc extremi judicii pavore perturbat. Ad parvitatem igitur nostram divinus sermo se attrahit: sicut pater cum parvulo filio loquitur, ut ab eo possit intelligi, sponte balbutit. Quia enim naturam sapientiae penetrare non possumus quid sit in se, ex condescensione Dei audivimus quid sit in nobis, cum dicitur: Ecce timor Domini, ipsa est sapientia. Sed quia ille veraciter vim divini timoris intelligit, qui se a cunctis pravis operibus custodit, recte subditur: Et recedere a malo, intelligentia. Ea igitur quae sequuntur, quia prophetiae spiritu plena sunt, ipsa sacrae historiae verba testantur, cum dicitur:

CAPUT IX [Vet.

VIII, Rec. VII]. Cap. XXIX, VERS. 1. Addidit quoque Job, assumens parabolam suam, et dixit. 15. Job ultima Ecclesiae tempora praenuntiat, quibus carnales et haereticos passura est. Quia enim parabola similitudo nominatur, aperte constat quod per exteriorum verborum formam mysteria loquitur, qui ad loquendum parabolam assumpsisse memoratur. Cum etenim sua narrat, quaecunque sunt sanctae Ecclesiae ventura denuntiat; et per hoc quod ipse patitur, indicat quid illa patiatur. Nonnunquam vero sic suae historiae verba permiscet, ut nil allegoricum insonet; nonnunquam vero sic suos dolores loquitur, ac si ex voce dolentis Ecclesiae loquatur. In hac vero ultima sui parte sermonis ultimum tempus designat Ecclesiae, quando adversarios suos, id est carnales quosque, vel haereticos atque gentiles, quos nunc studet sapientiae auctoritate comprimere, effrenata jactantia elatos cogitur irrisa tolerare. Unde in hoc quoque sermone dicitur: Nunc autem derident me juniores tempore, quorum non dignabar patres ponere cum canibus gregis mei (Job XXX, 1). Et ipsa ordinis ratio exposcit ut per verba beati Job ultima extremi sanctae Ecclesiae designentur dies, quando, persecutione crescente, apertas haereticorum voces tolerare compellitur, cum motus cordis sui, quos nunc intra cogitationum sinus contegunt, tunc in voce manifestati erroris aperiunt. Nunc enim, sicut per Joannem dicitur (Apoc. XX, 3), draco in abysso clausus tenetur, quia diabolica malitia in eorum subdolis cordibus occultatur. Sed sicut illic dictum est, educetur draco de puteo abyssi, quia quod modo prae timore tegitur, tunc contra Ecclesiam publice de iniquorum cordibus omne serpentinum virus aperitur. Nunc enim abscondit se sub blandiente lingua, saeviens conscientia, et malitia calliditatis, quasi quadam se tegit abysso simulationis; nunc Dominus, sicut Psalmistae voce dicitur, Congregat sicut in utre aquas maris (Psal. XXXII, 7). Uter quippe carnalis est cogitatio. Aquae ergo maris in utre congregatae sunt, cum amaritudo perversae mentis non erumpit exterius in vocem pravae libertatis. Veniet profecto tempus, quando contra hanc perversi atque carnales aperta voce praedicent quod nunc occulta cogitatione moliuntur. Veniet tempus, quando catholicam Ecclesiam non solum injustis vocibus, sed etiam crudelibus plagis premant. 16. Duobus modis Ecclesia persecutionem patitur, verbis et gladiis. Ab adversariis namque suis duobus modis Ecclesia persecutionem patitur, scilicet aut verbis, aut gladiis. Sed cum verbis persecutionem sustinet, exercetur ejus sapientia; cum vero gladiis, exercetur ejus patientia. Sed verborum persecutiones ab haereticis nunc etiam quotidie toleramus, cum ipsi haeretici linguis nobis subdolis, et falsa humilitate blandiuntur. Persecutiones vero gladiorum juxta finem mundi secuturae sunt, ut grana coelestibus horreis recondenda tanto verius a peccatorum paleis exuantur, quanto arctius affliguntur. Tunc electi omnes qui in illa fuerint tribulatione comprehensi reminiscuntur horum temporum in quibus nunc Ecclesia fidei pacem tenet, et superba haereticorum colla comprimit, non potentatu culminis, sed jugo rationis. Reminiscuntur nostri, qui quieta fidei tempora ducimus; 612 qui etsi in bellis coarctamur gentium, non tamen in dictis expugnamur patrum. Beatus ergo Job sanctae Ecclesiae typum tenens, quae tunc in illis angustiis invenitur; et tamen nostrae, ut dixi, quietis reminiscitur, sua transacta narrat, et aliis ventura denuntiat, dicens:

CAPUT X [Rec. VIII].

VERS. 2. Quis mihi tribuat, ut sim juxta menses pristinos? 17. Etsi gravia jam passa sit Ecclesia, longe graviora passura est. Multa enim talia sancta Ecclesia doloribus pressa dictura est. Tantis quippe illam futurum est tribulationibus angustari, ut haec tempora cum magno suspirio desideret quae nos cum magno dolore toleramus. Dicat ergo, dicat per vocem beati Job: Quis mihi tribuat ut sim juxta menses pristinos? Quia enim statutus dierum numerus menses vocantur, quid aliud nomine signat mensium, nisi collectiones animarum? Dies quippe dum colliguntur in mensibus, subtrahuntur, quia et in hoc tempore sancta Ecclesia, dum veritatis luce splendentes animas colligit, in intimis abscondit. Aliquando etiam mensis pro perfectione ponitur, sicut propheta ait: Erit mensis ex mense (Isai. LXVI, 23); perfectio videlicet eis in requie, quibus nunc perfectio fuerit in operatione. [Vet. IX.] Reminiscatur ergo perfectionis pristinae, reducat ad memoriam quanta praedicatione sua collectis animabus reportabat lucra, et angustata tribulationibus dicat: Quis mihi tribuat, ut sim juxta menses pristinos? In quibus profecto mensibus qualis fuerit, enumerando subjungit, dicens:

CAPUT XI.

VERS. 2, 3. Secundum dies, quibus Deus custodiebat me, quando splendebat lucerna ejus super caput meum, et ad lumen ejus ambulabam in tenebris. 18. Tunc multi infirmi cadent, fortibus ob eorum casum dolentibus. Tunc quippe videt ex se, persecutione cogente, infirmorum multos cadere, quos nunc ut mater intra pacis sinum parvulos fovet, et intra tranquillas fidei cunas continet, quia admisti fortibus, ipsa fidei tranquillitate nutriuntur. Tunc vero tales multi casuri sunt, et per viscera charitatis, quidquid in damno parvulorum sustinet, se perpeti animus perfectorum dolet. Infirmorum etenim damna ad corda fortium per compassionem transeunt. Unde per Paulum dicitur: Quis infirmatur et ego non infirmor? quis scandalizatur, et ego non uror (II Cor. XI, 29)? Tanto enim quisque perfectus est, quanto perfecte sentit dolores alienos. Unde sancta Ecclesia infirmis tunc cadentibus angustiata, cum horum reminiscitur temporum, jure dictura est: Secundum dies quibus Deus custodiebat me, quia se tunc in illis aestimat cadere, quae se nunc in istis respicit custodiri. Bene autem dicitur: Quando splendebat lucerna ejus super caput meum, et ad lumen ejus ambulabam in tenebris. Lucernae enim nomine, lumen signatur sacrae Scripturae, de qua ipse Ecclesiae pastor dicit: Habemus firmiorem propheticum sermonem, cui bene facitis attendentes, quasi lucernae lucenti in caliginoso loco, donec dies illucescat, et lucifer oriatur in cordibus vestris (II Pet. I, 19). Et Psalmista ait: Lucerna pedibus meis verbum tuum, Domine (Psal. CXVIII, 105). Quia autem principale nostrum mens est, appellatione capitis mens vocatur. Unde per Psalmistam dicitur: Impinguasti in oleo caput meum (Psal. XXII, 5). Ac 613 si aperte dicat: Charitatis pinguedine replesti mentem meam. Nunc ergo lucerna super caput Ecclesiae splendet, quia sacra eloquia tenebras nostrae mentis irradiant, ut in hoc caliginoso vitae praesentis loco, dum verborum Dei lucem percipimus, quae sunt agenda videamus. Nunc ad lumen ejus in tenebris ambulat, quoniam sancta universalis Ecclesia, etsi alienae occulta cogitationis non penetrat, quia quasi faciem non cognoscit in nocte, tamen ponit gressus boni operis, directa lumine supernae locutionis. Sequitur:

CAPUT XII [Rec. IX].

VERS. 4. Sicut fui in diebus adolescentiae meae, quando secreto Deus erat in tabernaculo meo. 19. Variae Ecclesiae aetates. Infantia, adolescentia, senium. In fine tamen multos susceptura est filios. Sicut uniuscujusque hominis, sic sanctae Ecclesiae aetas describitur. Parvula quippe tunc erat, cum a nativitate recens verbum vitae praedicare non poterat. Hinc enim de illa dicitur: Soror nostra parvula est, et ubera non habet (Cant. VIII, 8), quia nimirum sancta Ecclesia priusquam proficeret per incrementa virtutis, infirmis quibusque auditoribus praebere non potuit ubera praedicationis. Adulta vero Ecclesia dicitur, quando Dei verbo copulata, sancto repleta Spiritu, per praedicationis ministerium in filiorum conceptione fetatur, quos exhortando parturit, convertendo parit. De hac ejus aetate Domino dicitur: Adolescentulae dilexerunt te (Cant. I, 3). Universae quippe Ecclesiae, quae unam catholicam faciunt, adolescentulae vocantur, non jam vetustae per culpam, sed novellae per gratiam; non senio steriles, sed aetate mentis ad spiritalem congruae fecunditatem. Tunc ergo, cum in diebus illis Ecclesia, quasi quodam senio debilitata, per praedicationem filios parere non valet, reminiscitur foecunditatis antiquae dicens: Sicut fui in diebus adolescentiae meae. Quamvis post eosdem dies quibus deprimitur, jam tamen circa ipsum finem temporum grandi praedicationis virtute roboretur. Nam susceptis ad plenum gentibus, omnem Israeliticum populum, qui tunc inventus fuerit, in fidei sinum trahit. Scriptum quippe est: Donec plenitudo gentium introiret, et sic omnis Israel salvus fieret (Rom. XI, 25). Sed ante illa tempora erunt dies in quibus ab adversariis paululum videbitur oppressa, cum et horum dierum reminiscitur, dicens: Sicut fui in diebus adolescentiae meae, quando secreto Deus erat in tabernaculo meo. 20. [Vet. X]. Qui mandata Dei meditatur, habet Deum inhabitantem. Sancti se foris intusque circumspiciunt. Quid hoc loco tabernaculum, nisi habitationem mentis accipimus? Quia per omne quod cogitando agimus, in consilio nostri cordis habitamus. Quisquis autem mandata Dei tacitus cogitat, secreto illi Deus in tabernaculo est. Habitationem etenim cordis sui ante Dei esse oculos viderat, qui dicebat: Et meditatio cordis mei in conspectu tuo semper (Psal. XVIII, 15). Exteriora namque opera patent oculis hominum, longe vero incomparabiliter interiores ac subtilissimae cogitationes nostrae patent oculis Dei. Omnia enim, sicut scriptum est, nuda et aperta sunt oculis ejus (Hebr. IV, 13). Et saepe in exteriori opere ante oculos hominum inordinati apparere metuimus, et in interiori cogitatione illius respectum non metuimus, quem videntem omnia non videmus. Multo enim magis intrinsecus Deo quam extrinsecus hominibus conspicabiles sumus. Unde et sancti omnes foris 614 se intusque circumspiciunt, et vel reprehendendo se exterius, vel iniquos se interius videri invisibiliter timent. Hinc est quod animalia quae per prophetam videntur, in circuitu et intus plena oculis esse memorantur (Ezech. I, 18; X, 12). Quisquis enim exteriora sua honeste disponit, sed interiora negligit, in circuitu oculos habet, sed intus non habet. Sancti vero omnes, quia et exteriora sua circumspiciunt, ut bona de se exempla fratribus praebeant, et interiora sua vigilanter attendunt, quia sese irreprobabiles interni judicis obtutibus parant, et oculos in circuitu et intus habere perhibentur; magisque se, quo Deo placeant, in sua interna componunt, sicut per Psalmistam quoque de sancta Ecclesia dicitur: Omnis gloria ejus filiae regis ab intus (Psal. XLIV, 14). Sed qua exteriora sua etiam irreprehensibilia custodit, jure de ea subdidit: In fimbriis aureis circumamicta varietate, ut et pulchra sibi intus sit, et aliis foras; et se provehens per internam gloriam, et alios erudiens per exteriora operum exempla. Beatus igitur Job dicat ex se, dicat ex persona universalis Ecclesiae: Quando secreto Deus erat in tabernaculo meo. Ut enim demonstret quantum intus profecerit, secreto Deum fuisse in suo tabernaculo perhibet. Ut etiam ostendat rectitudinis opera quantum extrinsecus custodivit, adjungit.

CAPUT XIII.

VERS. 5. Quando erat Omnipotens mecum, et in circuitu meo pueri mei. 21. Sanctis intus Deo vacantibus, mali sola exteriora quaerunt. Religionem non habent, sed simulant. Omnes autem qui divina praecepta metuunt, Dei tabernaculum fiunt. Unde, ut supra jam diximus (Num. 6), per semetipsam Veritas dicit de eo qui illius mandata custodit: Ego et Pater veniemus, et mansionem apud eum faciemus (Joan. XIV, 23). Quod contra perversi quique dum interna non appetunt, in suis se cogitationibus foras fundunt. Unde eis per prophetam dicitur: Redite praevaricatores ad cor (Isai. XLVI, 8). Et rursum: Vae qui cogitatis inutile (Michae. II, 1). In actionibus quippe suis verentur homines, quos corporaliter vident, et Deum sibi praesentem non aestimant esse, quem non vident. Quod contra in laude justi dicitur, dum Aegypti regem contemneret, et Dei mandatis obediret: Quia invisibilem tanquam videns sustinuit (Hebr. XI, 27). Perversum quippe terrae principem quasi non vidit, quem ab oculis sui cordis abjecit. Regem vero invisibilem tanquam videns sustinuit, quia ab ejus timoris intuitu mentis oculum non deflexit. Sancta itaque Ecclesia in magnis tunc tribulationibus deprehensa, cum multos a Deo conspicit prava cogitatione discedere, videt profecto mentis eorum habitaculum discendente Deo vacuum remanere, et jure deplorans dicit: Quando secreto Deus erat in tabernaculo meo. [Vet. XI.] Quibus verbis non immerito etiam simulatio religionis plangitur, quia nonnulli etiam nunc Christiani esse non appetunt, sed videri. His videlicet Deus in publico est, non in secreto. Sed sancta Ecclesia Deum in secreto habere desiderat, quia illos vere fideles respicit, quos ad fidei vitam corde pleno permanere cognoscit. Quae juxta exteriorem quoque vigoris sui rectitudinem dicit: Quando erat Omnipotens mecum, et in circuitu meo pueri mei. Pueri scilicet vocantur, qui coelestibus mandatis inserviunt. Unde per prophetam Dominus dicit: Ecce ego et pueri mei quos mihi dedit 615 Deus (Isa. VIII, 18). Et rursus in Evangelio: Pueri, nunquid pulmentarium habetis (Joan. XXI, 5)? Nunc ergo in circuitu ejus sunt pueri, quia in cunctis fere gentibus reperiuntur qui coelestia mandata custodiunt, et spiritalis disciplinae regulis obsequuntur. Qui profecto tunc ad obsequium pueri deerunt, quando pravi qui reperti fuerint spiritalia ejus mandata contemnunt. Sequitur:

CAPUT XIV [Rec. X].

VERS. 6. Quando lavabam pedes meos butyro. 22. Pedes Domini praedicatores, quos ungit et mundit. Quia Christum et Ecclesiam unam esse personam crebro jam diximus, illum videlicet hujus corporis caput, hanc autem illius capitis corpus, aliter haec verba juxta vocem capitis accipi, atque aliter juxta vocem corporis debent. Quos ergo pedes Domini, nisi sanctos praedicatores accipimus? De quibus dicit: Et inambulabo in eis (Levit. XXVI, 12). Butyro ergo pedes lavantur, quia praedicatores sancti bonorum operum pinguedine replentur. Etenim, ut supra jam diximus (Lib. I, n. 30), vix ipsa praedicatio sine aliquo transitur admisso. Nam quilibet praedicans, aut ad quantulamcunque indignationem trahitur, si contemnitur; aut ad aliquantulamcunque gloriam, si ab audientibus veneratur. Unde et apostolis pedes loti sunt, ut a quamlibet parvo contagio in ipsa praedicatione contracto, quasi a quodam itinere collecto pulvere mundarentur. Et beatus Jacobus dicit: Nolite plures magistri fieri, fratres mei (Jac. III, 1). Et paulo post: In multis enim offendimus omnes (Ibid., 2). Pedes ergo lavantur butyro, quia pinguedine boni operis infunditur atque mundatur collectus pulvis de gloria praedicationis. Vel certe butyro pedes lavantur, dum sanctis praedicatoribus debita ab audientibus stipendia conferuntur, et quos fatigat injunctus praedicationis labor exhibita a discipulis pinguedo boni operis fovet, non quod ideo praedicent ut alantur, sed ideo alantur ut praedicent; id est, ut praedicare subsistant, non ut in intentionem sumendi victus transeat actio praedicatoris, sed ad utilitatem praedicationis deserviant ministeria sustentationis. Unde a bonis praedicatoribus non causa victus praedicatio impenditur, sed causa praedicationis accipitur victus. Et quoties praedicantibus necessaria ab audientibus conferuntur, non solent de rerum munere, sed de conferentium gaudere mercede. Unde per Paulum dicitur: Non quaero datum, sed requiro fructum (Phil. IV, 17). Datum quippe est res ipsa quae impenditur; fructus vero dati est, si benigna mente futurae mercedis studio aliquid impendatur. Ergo datum in re accipimus, fructum in corde. Et quia discipulorum suorum Apostolus mercede potius quam munere pascebatur, nequaquam datum, sed fructum se quaerere fatetur. Unde et subdidit protinus, dicens: Habeo autem omnia, et abundo (Ibid., 18). Butyro ergo lavantur pedes, cum praedicatores sancti, ut diximus, ipsa praedicatione fatigati, auditorum suorum bonis operibus foventur. Fessos namque pedes butyro unxerat ille qui audiebat: Viscera sanctorum requieverunt per te, frater (Philem. 7). Hoc butyro unctus fuerat pes qui in catena tenebatur, dicens: Det misericordiam Dominus Onesiphori domui; quia saepe me refrigeravit, et catenam meam non erubuit (I Tim. II, 16). Si ergo ex voce capitis haec verba pensamus, 616 recte pedes, sicut dictum est, praedicatores accipimus. [Vet. XII.] 23. Pedes Ecclesiae sunt inferiores ministri, qui terrena curant. Si autem sentire ista ex voce solius corporis debemus, nimirum pedes Ecclesiae sunt inferiorum operum ministri, qui dum ad usus necessarios ea quae sunt exterius exercent, per extremum ministerium velut pedes terrae inhaerent. Sed debent hi qui praesunt, qui doctrinae studio invigilant, solerti cura occupatorum corda requirere, eisque eam quam ipsi vacando percipiunt, crebrae admonitionis voce, infusionem pinguedinis ministrare. Nam quia in uno corpore invicem pro se membra sollicita sunt, sicut illorum ministeriis nostra extrema fulciuntur, ita necesse est ut nostris studiis illorum interiora repleantur. Quando igitur sancti doctores quibusdam ad extrema ministeria deditis, unctionem dominicae incarnationis praedicant, butyro eloquii pedes lavant. Solent etiam pedes ipsa itineris asperitate lacerari. Unde et omnino difficile est in terrenis actionibus hujus vitae iter agere, et nulla ex labore itineris vulnera sustinere. Cum ergo vigilantes praepositi, auditores suos curis exterioribus intentos ad cor revocant, ut quae inter ipsa licita opera admiserint mala cognoscant, et quae cognoverint defleant, pedes butyro lavant, quia eorum vulneribus poenitentiae unguenta subministrant. Reminiscatur igitur tunc Ecclesia vehementer afflicta, quomodo pacis suae tempore per exhortationis verbum, membra in se etiam extrema mundabat, et dicat: Quando lavabam pedes meos butyro. Quod de beato Job admirabiliter libet intueri, qui inter tot curas rerum, inter tot affectus pignerum, inter tot studia sacrificiorum, subjectis suis quamlibet extremis, bona sequentis vitae praedicabat, ut eos de coelestibus imbueret, qui sibi ad terrena opera deservirent. Quid ad haec nos episcopi dicimus, qui commissis nobis verbum vitae impendere non curamus, quando conjugatum virum prohibere non valuit ab officio praedicationis vel saecularis habitus, vel magnae occupatio facultatis? [Rec. XI]. Sed servata veritate historiae, ad sanctae Ecclesiae jam verba redeamus, quae per beatum Job, id est per os membri sui loquitur, quanta sint quae tempore extremo patietur, cum transactorum suorum reminiscitur, cum per eam videlicet verbi pinguedinem operantium vita lavaretur. Quae ipsam quoque praedicatorum suorum vigilantiam plenius exsequens, subdit:

CAPUT XV.

IBID. Et petra fundebat mihi rivos olei. 24. In Ecclesia rivi olei sunt vel sacra dogmata, vel sancti Spiritus gratia. Quia petrae nomine Christus accipitur, praedicator egregius fatetur, dicens: Petra autem erat Christus (I Cor. X, 4). Quae videlicet petra nunc ad usum sanctae Ecclesiae olei rivos fundit, quia in ea loquens Dominus, praedicamenta unctionis intimae emanat. De hac petra olei rivus exiit, liber Matthaei, liber Marci, liber Lucae, et liber Joannis. In diversis hujus mundi partibus quod praedicamenta edidit, tot petra haec per ora apostolorum omnium olei rivos fudit. Toties adhuc de petra hac olei rivus funditur, quoties a sancto Spiritu ungendis mentibus auditorum ea quae in libris veteribus de Christo dicta sunt explanantur. Et rivi vocantur olei, 617 quia decurrunt et ungunt. In quibus quisquis tingitur ungitur, quisquis ungitur interius impinguatur [Vet. XIII]. De qua nimirum pinguedine Psalmista ait: Sicut adipe et pinguedine repleatur anima mea (Psal. LXII, 6). Potest nomine olei ipsa sancti Spiritus unctio designari, de qua per prophetam dicitur: Computrescit jugum a facie olei (Isai. X, 27). Jugum quippe a facie olei computrescit, quia dum sancti Spiritus gratia ungimur, a captivitatis nostrae servitute liberamur: dumque maligni spiritus dominatio superba repellitur, jugum conteritur, quo libertatis nostrae colla premebantur. De hoc rursus oleo scriptum est: Vinea facta est dilecto meo in cornu filio olei (Isai. V, 1). Filius quippe olei, fidelis populus dicitur, qui ad fidem Dei interna sancti Spiritus unctione generatur. Multis ergo tunc sancta Ecclesia tribulationibus depressa, dona Spiritus, et mira quae nunc habet praedicamenta, ad memoriam revocet, et suum silentium deploret, dicens: Petra fundebat mihi rivos olei. Quibus verbis congrue subjicit:

CAPUT XVI.

VERS. 7-10. Quando procedebam ad portam civitatis, et in platea parabant mihi cathedram. Videbant me juvenes, et abscondebantur, et senes assurgentes stabant. Principes cessabant loqui, et digitum superponebant ori suo. Vocem suam cohibebant duces, et lingua eorum gutturi suo adhaerebat. 25. Bona opera et doctrinae cathedra, Ecclesiae insignia sunt. Mos veterum fuit ut seniores in porta consisterent, et causas introeuntium judicarent, quatenus tanto esset pacificus urbis populus, quanto ad hanc discordes ingredi non liceret. Sed nos sacram historiam venerantes, haec egisse beatum Job pro cultu justitiae certum tenemus, atque ad indaganda allegoriae mysteria ducimur. Quid ergo per civitatis portam, nisi bona quaeque actio designatur, per quam anima ad conventum regni coelestis ingreditur? Unde et Propheta ait: Qui exaltas me de portis mortis, ut annuntiem omnes laudationes tuas in portis filiae Sion (Psal. IX, 15). Portae quippe mortis sunt actiones pravae, quae ad interitum trahunt. Quia autem Sion speculatio dicitur, portas Sion, actiones bonas accipimus, per quas supernam patriam ingredimur, ut Regis nostri gloriam contemplemur. Quid vero per cathedram, nisi magisterii auctoritas designatur? Graeca autem voce platea pro latitudine ponitur. Nunc ergo sancta Ecclesia ad civitatis portam procedit, quia ut aditum coelestis regni percipiat, in sanctis se actionibus exerit. Cui in platea paratur cathedra, quia in magnae auctoritatis latitudine sui magisterii exhibet libertatem. Quae enim recta quae sentit publica voce praedicat, quasi in platea cathedram sedet, cum nullum de sua praedicatione metuit, nullius pressa terroribus, se sub silentio abscondit. An non in publico ad docendum praesidet, quam simul et sentiendi veritas, et docendi potestas fulcit? Sed cum ad portam procederet, et in platea cathedram sederet, quid a levibus, quidve a gravibus ageretur, adjungit dicens:

CAPUT XVII.

VERS. 8. Videbant me juvenes, et abscondebantur, et senes assurgentes stabant. 618 26. Ecclesiae vigorem, et rectitudinem imperfecti formidant; diligunt perfecti. Si historiae intendimus, quae dixit credimus; si allegoriae, quae praedixit videmus. Juvenes namque dici solent qui nulla consilii gravitate deprimuntur. Senes vero non eos Scriptura sacra vocare consuevit, qui sola quantitate temporum, sed morum grandaevitate maturi sunt. Unde per quemdam sapientem dicitur: Senectus enim venerabilis est, non diuturna, neque numero annorum computata. Cani autem sunt sensus hominis, et aetas senectutis vita immaculata (Sap. IV, 8). Unde recte quoque Dominus ad Moysen dicit: Congrega mihi septuaginta viros de senioribus Israel, quos tu nosti quod senes populi sunt (Num. XI, 16). In quibus quid aliud quam senectus cordis requiritur, cum tales jubentur eligi qui senes esse sciuntur? Si enim senectus in eis corporis quaereretur, a tantis sciri poterant, a quantis videri. Dum vero dicitur: Quos tu nosti quod senes populi sunt, profecto liquet quia senectus mentis, non corporis, eligenda nuntiatur. [Vet. XIV.] Sanctam ergo Ecclesiam vident nunc juvenes, et absconduntur, senes vero ei assurgentes assistunt, quia vigorem ejus atque rectitudinem immaturi formidant, grandaevi glorificant. Leves quique sunt, fugiunt; graves vero atque perfecti hanc vitae suae meritis assurgendo venerantur. Disciplinam quippe illius perfecti diligunt, imperfecti reprehendunt. Vident ergo hanc juvenes et absconduntur, quia deprehendi in suis occultis actionibus metuunt. Senes vero assurgentes stant, quia perfecti quique ex humilitate indicant, quantum in bona operatione profecerunt. Sed quia haec de suis loquitur, narret quoque qualiter ab exteris timeatur:

CAPUT XVIII.

VERS. 9, 10. Principes cessabant loqui, et digitum superponebant ori suo. Vocem suam cohibebant duces, et lingua eorum gutturi suo adhaerebat. 27. Haeretici silere coacti S. Gregorii temporibus. Haeretici in culpa concordant, in sententiis discrepant. In Ecclesiae adversis, haeretici libere praedicant. Qui hoc loco alii duces intelligi vel principes possunt nisi haereticae pravitatis auctores? De quibus per Psalmistam dicitur: Effusa est contentio super principes eorum, et seduxerunt eos in invio, et non in via (Psal. CVI, 40). Ipsi etenim dum dispensationem Dei perverse interpretari non metuunt, profecto plebes subditas non in eam viam quae Christus est, sed in invium trahunt. Super quos recte quoque effusa contentio dicitur, quia suis sibi vicissim allegationibus contradicunt. Arius quippe tres personas in divinitate suscipiens, tres etiam deos credidit. Quem contra Sabellius unum Deum suscipiens, unam credidit esse personam. Inter quos sancta Ecclesia rectum praedicationis suae tramitem indeclinabiliter tenens, et unum Deum praedicans, tres personas contra Sabellium asserit, et tres personas asserens, unum Deum contra Arium confitetur. Quia autem in sacro eloquio Manichaeus virginitatem laudari comperit, conjugia damnavit. At contra Jovinianus quia concedi conjugia cognovit, virginitatis munditiam despexit. Unde fit ut semper haereticis perversa intelligentia confusis, vicissim sibi eorum nequitia et in culpa concordet, et in sententia discrepet. At contra sancta Ecclesia per medias utrarumque partium lites 619 ordinata pace graditur, et sic scit superiora bona suscipere, ut noverit etiam inferiora venerari, quatenus nec summa aequet infimis, nec rursum ima despiciat, cum summa veneratur. Nunc ergo haereticarum plebium principes, auctoritatem sanctae Ecclesiae perpendentes, cessant loqui, et quasi ori suo digitum superponunt, dum falsis querelis non ratione vocis se reprimi, sed virtutis manu significant. Vocem suam duces cohibent, quia nimirum hi qui post se errantes populos trahere conantur, ne loqui perversa nunc audeant, et auctoritatis frenantur pondere, et virtute rationis. Quorum lingua suo gutturi adhaeret, quia etsi perversa loqui libera voce non audeant, intus tamen apud se contegunt cuncta quae contra veram fidem proponere falsa moliuntur. Horum ergo temporum, sequenti tribulatione deprehensa, reminiscens Ecclesia deplorat, dicens: Quando procedebam ad portam civitatis, et in platea parabant cathedram mihi. Videbant me juvenes, et abscondebantur, et senes assurgentes stabant. Principes cessabant loqui, et digitum superponebant ori suo. Vocem suam duces cohibebant, et lingua eorum gutturi suo adhaerebat. Ac si aperte dicat: Cum praedicare mihi voce publica licuit, omnis me qui veritati non fuit subjectus expavit. Illo namque tempore cum sancta Ecclesia adversitate premitur, pravis quibusque praedicatoribus licentia locutionis datur. [Vet. XV.] Quod longe ante Jeremias intuens, ait: Sed et lamiae nudaverunt mammam, lactaverunt catulos suos (Thren. IV, 3). Quid namque lamias, nisi haereticos appellat, humanam quidem faciem, sed belluina per impietatem corda gestantes? Qui tunc mammam nudant, cum errorem suum libere praedicant. Tunc catulos lactant, quia male sequaces parvulorum animas dum perversa insinuant, ad impietatem nutriendo confirmant. Sequitur:

CAPUT XIX [Rec. XII].

VERS. 11. Auris audiens beatificabat me, et oculus videns testimonium reddebat mihi. 28. Ecclesiae testimonium reddere debemus bene vivendo. Dum beatificari se ab audientibus, sibique testimonium reddi a videntibus fatetur beatus Job, qualis in sermone, qualis in opere fuerit, ostenditur. Neque enim aut in opere jam perfectus est, cui adhuc linguae pravitas contradicit; aut in sermone laudabilis, qui hoc quod loquitur opere non ostendit. Ut igitur beatus Job amicorum suorum increpationibus exactus utraque se habuisse perhibeat, sese et audientibus et videntibus venerationi fuisse manifestat. Quod si ad vocem sanctae Ecclesiae referamus, ille ejus verba beatificat, quia ea quae audierit opere consummat. Ille ei testimonium reddit, qui exemplis vitae illi bene vivendo respondet. Sanctam etenim Ecclesiam ille veraciter videt, cujus testatur vita quia videt. Ad hoc namque bonorum intra eam rectitudo cernitur, ut quique hanc viderint, a suis pravitatibus corrigantur. Necdum ergo intra sanctam Ecclesiam videt bonos, qui non est emendatus a malis. Sed unde ei testimonium reddatur, ostenditur cum subjungit:

CAPUT XX.

VERS. 12, 13. Eo quod liberassem pauperem vociferantem, et pupillum cui non erat adjutor. Benedictio perituri super me veniebat, et cor viduae consolatus sum. 29. Ecclesia filios suos et pascit et protegit. Magnae misericordiae ista sunt opera, liberare 620 vociferantem pauperem, pupillo adjutorium ministrare, periturum eripere, cor viduae consolari. Superius enim dictum est quid exhibuit per doctrinam. Ait namque: Auris audiens beatificabat me. Nunc autem narrat quae per misericordiam impendit, dicens: Eo quod liberassem pauperem vociferantem, et pupillum cui non erat adjutor. Vox quippe cum opere sibi necessario concordat. Haec beatus Job et exhibuit subditis, et tamen per sanctam Ecclesiam exhibenda signavit. Quae utrumque nunc incessabiliter exercet, ut videlicet filios suos et loquendo pascat, et defendendo protegat, quatenus et per verba bonos satiet, et per patrocinia tueatur a malis. Bene autem scriptum est: Germinet terra herbam virentem, et facientem semen, et lignum fructiferum faciens fructum juxta genus suum (Genes. I, 11). Quod sic est veraciter factum, ut significaret aliquid veraciter faciendum. Per terram quippe figuratur Ecclesia, quae et verbi nos pabulo reficit, et patrocinii umbraculo custodit; quae et loquendo pascit, et opitulando protegit, ut non solum herbam refectionis proferat, sed et cum fructu operis arborem protectionis. [Vet. XVI.] 30. In Ecclesiae rectoribus nec vigor sit rigidus, nec mansuetudo dissoluta. Perpendendum quoque video his qui plebium gubernationibus praesunt, quod superius dicens: Videbant me juvenes, et abscondebantur; nunc astruit: Cor viduae consolatus sum. Quanta disciplina regminis, ut ante eum juvenes abscondantur; quanta mansuetudo pietatis, ut per eum viduarum corda consolentur! Sunt namque (Dist. 45, can. sunt namque) nonnulli ita districti, ut omnem etiam mansuetudinem benignitatis amittant, et sunt nonnulli ita mansueti, ut perdant districti jura regiminis. Unde cunctis rectoribus utraque summopere sunt tenenda, ut nec in disciplinae vigore benignitatem mansuetudinis, nec rursum in mansuetudine districtionem deserant disciplinae, quatenus nec a compassione pietatis obdurescant, cum contumaces corrigunt; nec disciplinae vigorem molliant, cum infirmorum animos consolantur. Regat ergo disciplinae vigor mansuetudinem, et mansuetudo ornet vigorem, et sic alterum commendetur ex altero ut nec vigor sit rigidus, nec mansuetudo dissoluta. 31. Pietatis opera corporaliter et spiritaliter exhibentur ab Ecclesia. Haec autem quae supra diximus pietatis opera sancta Ecclesia et corporaliter exhibet, et spiritaliter exhibere non cessat. Nam pauperem vociferantem liberat, cum peccatori veniam deprecanti eas quas commiserat culpas relaxat. De talibus quippe pauperibus dicitur: Beati pauperes spiritu, quoniam ipsorum est regnum coelorum (Matth. V, 3). Et talium pauperum clamor est Psalmistae voce dicentium: Cito nos anticipet misericordia tua, quia pauperes facti sumus nimis (Psal. LXXVIII, 8). Pupillum vero cui non est adjutor liberat, dum unusquisque, mortuo antiquo patre diabolo, ad sanctae Ecclesiae sinum currens, in ea exhortationis adjutorium invenit, qui jam desideria mundi persequentis fugit. Potest pupilli nomine fidelis quisque etiam propter mortem boni patris intelligi, cujus ad tempus visione destitutus est, quamvis solatio destitutus non est. Benedictio etiam perituri super eam venit, cum peccatoris interitum praevenit, et cum sanctis exhortationibus a culpae fovea reducit. Unde scriptum est: Qui converti fecerit peccatorem ab errore viae 621 suae, et operiet multitudinem peccatorum (Jac. V, 20). Si enim magnae mercedis est a morte eripere carnem quandoque morituram, quanti est meriti a morte animam liberare, in coelesti patria sine fine victuram? Cor autem viduae consolatur, dum fideli cuique animae qui aeternas Domini retributiones narrat, quasi viri sui bona ad memoriam revocat. Cui quia spiritaliter anima juncta est, eo mortuo vidua dicitur, sed sanctae Ecclesiae vocibus ex ejus resurrectione refovetur. Magnam ergo consolationem cor viduae suscipit, quando fidelis anima in verbis Ecclesiae de adventu illius aliquid, cui spiritaliter est conjuncta, cognoscit. Sequitur:

CAPUT XXI.

VERS. 14. Justitia indutus sum, et vestivi me sicut vestimento. 32. Nulla bona opera sunt, si pravis quibusdam maculentur. Vestimento utique cum vestimur, ex omni parte circumdamur. Ille ergo justitia sicut vestimento vestitur, qui se undique bono opere protegit, et nullam partem actionis suae peccato nudam relinquit. Nam qui in aliis actionibus justus est, in aliis injustus; quasi hoc latus cooperuit, illud nudavit, nec jam bona sunt opera, quae subortis aliis pravis operibus inquinantur. Hinc enim per Salomonem dicitur: Qui in uno offenderit, multa bona perdet (Eccle. IX, 18). Hinc Jacobus dicit: Quicunque totam legem servaverit, offendat autem in uno, factus est omnium reus (Jac. II, 10). Quam videlicet sententiam suam ipse diligenter exposuit, cum subjunxit: Qui enim dixit, Non moechaberis, dixit et, Non occides. Quod si non moechaberis, occidas autem, factus es transgressor legis (Ibid., 11). [Vet. XVII.] 33. Hinc adhibenda undique custodia et vigilantia. Frustra munita sunt caetera, cum vel unus hosti panditur aditus. Cordis ergo oculis circumquaque porrectis, undique nobis adhibenda custodia est. Unde recte quoque per Salomonem dicitur: Omni custodia serva cor tuum, quia ex ipso vita procedit (Prov. IV, 23). Dicturus enim custodia, praemisit omni, ut videlicet unusquisque hinc inde se diligenter inspiciat, et quandiu in hac vita est, contra spiritales inimicos in acie se positum sciat, ne mercedem quam per has actiones colligit, per alias amittat, ne hinc hosti fores obstruat, et aliunde aditum pandat. Si qua etenim civitas contra insidiantes inimicos magno valletur aggere, fortibus cingatur muris, ex omni parte insomni muniatur custodia, unum vero in ea foramen tantummodo immunitum per negligentiam relinquatur; inde procul dubio hostis ingreditur, qui undique exclusus videbatur. Pharisaeus namque ille, qui in templum oraturus ascendit, civitatem mentis suae quanta munitione vallaverit, audiamus: Jejuno, inquit, bis in sabbato, decimas do omnium quae possideo (Luc. XVIII, 12). Qui praemisit: Gratias ago tibi, magna certe munimina adhibuit. Sed videamus ubi insidianti hosti immunitum foramen reliquit: Quia non sum sicut publicanus iste (Ibid., 11). Ecce civitatem cordis sui insidiantibus hostibus per elationem aperuit, quam frustra per jejunium et eleemosynas clausit. Incassum munita sunt caetera, cum locus unus, de quo hosti patet aditus, munitus non est. Gratias recte egit, sed perverse se super publicanum extulit. Civitatem cordis sui extollendo prodidit, quam abstinendo et largiendo servavit. Victa est per abstinentiam gula, destructa ventris ingluvies, superata est 622 largitate tenacia, avaritia depressa. Quibus hoc laboribus actum credimus? Sed o quot labores uno vitio percussi ceciderunt, quanta bona unius culpae gladio sunt perempta! Unde magnopere oportet et bona semper agere, et ab ipsis nos bonis operibus caute in cogitatione custodire, ne si mentem elevant, bona non sint, quae non auctori militant, sed elationi. [Rec. XIII]. 34. Maxime cavendum a superbia. De qua re non inordinate agimus, si ex libris, licet non canonicis, sed tamen ad aedificationem Ecclesiae editis, testimonium proferamus. Eleazar namque in praelio elephantem feriens stravit, sed sub ipso quem exstinxit occubuit (I Mach. VI, 46). Quos ergo iste significat quem sua victoria oppressit, nisi eos qui vitia superant, sed sub ipsa quae subigunt, superbiendo succumbunt? Quasi enim sub hoste quem prosternit moritur, qui de culpa quam superat elevatur. Pensandum ergo magnopere est quia bona prodesse nequeunt, si mala quae subrepunt non caventur. Perit omne quod agitur, si non sollicite in humilitate custoditur. Unde bene quoque de ipso primo parente dicitur: Posuit eum Dominus in paradiso voluptatis, ut operaretur et custodiret (Genes. II, 15). Operatur quippe qui agit bonum quod praecipitur, sed quod operatus fuerit non custodit, cui hoc subrepit quod prohibetur. Beatus igitur Job, quia ex omni parte bono se opere texerat, dicat: Justitia indutus sum, et vestivi me sicut vestimento. Ubi protinus subditur:

CAPUT XXII [Vet. XVIII].

IBID. Et diademate, judicio meo. 35. Justi sollicite attendunt, quid Deo, quid proximo debeant. Justorum judicia recte diademati comparantur, quia per magni operis gloriam ad retributionis ducunt coronam. Quae nimirum judicia secum quotidie introrsus agunt, quid Deo, quid proximo debeant, solerter aspiciunt, atque ad agenda bona se vehementer accendunt, et de perpetratis malis districte redarguunt. Unde bene quoque per Salomonem dicitur: Cogitationes justorum judicia (Prov. XII, 5). Intus quippe ab omni strepitu saeculari ad corda sua redeunt, ibique ascendunt tribunal mentis, atque ante oculos se et proximum statuunt, deducunt ad medium regulam testamenti, qua dicitur: Quae vultis ut faciant vobis homines, et vos eadem facite illis (Matth. VII, 12). Transferunt in se personam proximi, et sollicite attendunt quid sibi si ita essent fieri vel non fieri juste voluissent, sicque districto jure atque judicio causam suam et proximi juxta tabulas divinae legis in foro cordis examinant. Bene ergo dicitur: Cogitationes justorum judicia, quia ipse eorum intimus motus cordis, quasi quaedam libra est judiciariae potestatis. Quibus peractis, quia retributionem inferius non requirunt, recte eorum judicia diademati comparantur. Diadema quippe in superiori parte corporis ponitur. Justorum ergo judicium diadema dicitur, quia per hoc non in terrenis et infimis, sed sursum remunerari concupiscunt. Sequitur

CAPUT XXIII [Rec. XIV].

VERS. 15, 16. Oculus fui caeco, et pes claudo. Pater eram pauperum, et causam quam nesciebam, diligentissime investigabam. 36. Bona opera etsi humilitate occultanda, necessitate tamen aliquando publicanda. Inter haec lectoris animus forsitan quaerat cur beatus Job suas tam subtiliter virtutes enumeret. 623 Sanctorum quippe virorum est bona quae fecerint occultare, ne contingat eos lapsum elationis incurrere. Unde per semetipsam Veritas dicit: Attendite ne justitiam vestram faciatis coram hominibus, ut videamini ab eis (Matth. VI, 1). Hinc est etiam quod duos caecos juxta viam sedentes illuminans, praecepit dicens: Videte ne quis sciat (Matth. IX, 30). De quibus illico scriptum est quia illi abeuntes diffamaverunt eum per totam terram illam. Sed quaerendum nobis est quid sit hoc quod ipse Omnipotens, cui hoc est velle quod posse, et taceri virtutes suas voluit, et tamen ab his qui illuminati sunt quasi invitus indicatur, nisi quod servis suis se sequentibus exemplum dedit, ut ipsi quidem virtutes suas occultari desiderent, et tamen, ut alii eorum exemplo proficiant, prodantur inviti, et facta quidem sua occultando seipsos custodiant, sed dum produntur inviti, bona ad proximos suos exempla transmittant. Occultentur ergo studio, necessitate publicentur; et eorum occultatio sit custodia propria, eorumque publicatio sit utilitas aliena. Rursum quia scriptum est: Neque accendunt lucernam, et ponunt eam sub modio, sed super candelabrum, ut luceat omnibus qui in domo sunt. Sic luceat lux vestra coram hominibus, ut videant opera vestra bona, et glorificent Patrem vestrum qui in coelis est (Matth. V, 15). Aliquando sancti viri et coram hominibus compelluntur bona facere, aut eadem hominibus sua facta narrare; sed ad eum finem omnia referentes, ut non ipsi eisdem operibus, sed Pater eorum qui in coelis est debeat glorificari. Dum enim sancta praedicant, ipsi praedicatio eorum fortasse despicitur, quorum vita nescitur. Compelluntur ergo vitam suam dicere, ut auditorum suorum valeant vitam mutare. Et facta sua referunt, ut venerationi sint; venerari appetunt, ut reverenter audiantur. Scriptum quippe est: Cum elevarentur animalia de terra, elevabantur pariter et rotae (Ezech. I, 19), quia videlicet cum auditorum mentes praedicantium vitam suspiciunt, necessario utique etiam vim praedicationis admirantur. [Vet. XIX]. 37. Quod sanctus Paulus exempto suo comprobavit. Qui eum imitantur non elationi serviunt, sed humilitati. Hinc est ergo quod praedicatores boni et honorem propter elationem fugiunt, et honorari tamen propter imitationem volunt. Sic nimirum Paulus apostolus discipulis loquens, et honorem fugit, et tamen quantum esset honorandus ostendit. Nam cum Thessalonicensibus diceret: Neque enim aliquando fuimus in sermone adulationis, sicut scitis, neque in occasione avaritiae, Deus testis est (I Thess. II, 5), secutus adjunxit: Neque quaerentes ab hominibus gloriam, neque a vobis, neque ab aliis, cum possimus oneri vobis esse, ut Christi apostoli, sed facti sumus parvuli in medio vestrum (Ibid., 6, 7). Rursus Corinthiis, honorem fugiens, dicit: Non enim nosmetipsos praedicamus, sed Jesum Christum Dominum nostrum, nos autem servos vestros per Jesum Christum (II Cor. IV, 5). Quos tamen videns falsorum apostolorum persuasionibus a verae fidei tramite deviare, eis se summopere quantum esset venerandus ostendit, dicens: In quo quis audet, in insipientia dico, audeo et ego. Hebraei sunt, et ego. Israelitae sunt, 624 et ego. Semen Abrahae sunt, et ego. Ministri Christi sunt, et ego. Ut minus sapiens dico, plus ego (II Cor. XI, 21-23). Quibus etiam subjungit quod ei quoque tertii coeli secreta patuerint, quod raptus etiam paradisi arcana penetrarit. Ecce honorem fugiens servum se discipulorum praedicat. Ecce honorem pro utilitate audientium quaerens falsis apostolis vitae suae merita superponit. Egit quippe doctor egregius ut dum ipse qualis esset agnoscitur, et vita et lingua male praedicantium, ejus comparatione vilesceret. Illos videlicet commendaret, si se absconderet; cumque se non ostenderet, errori locum dedisset. Miro igitur modo et humilitatis exhibet gratiam, et utilitatis quaerit incrementa, ut et servum se discipulorum praedicet, et adversariis potiorem demonstret. Ostendit discipulis quid humilitatis acceperit, ostendit adversariis quid sublimitatis. Innotescit contra adversarios quid habent ex munere, innotescit discipulis qualis apud se maneat in cogitatione, innotescit adversariis qualis foris appareat in operatione. Sancti ergo viri cum coguntur bona narrare quae faciunt, non elationi serviunt, sed utilitati. Unde beatus Job amicis suis se injuste increpantibus, atque idcirco nescientibus bona sua, loquendo aperit, ut nimirum discerent non contra ejus vitam increpantes erigi, sed hanc tacentes imitari, quamvis, ut supra jam diximus, hunc ad memoriam facta sua reducere, invecta ab increpantibus desperatio compellebat. Nam inter tot dolores vulneris et verba desperationis, cum bona quae fecit narrat, quasi collapsum verbis et verberibus ad spem animum reformat. Dicat ergo bona quae fecit, ut non cogatur inter tot mala de se desperare quae audit. Oculus fui caeco, et pes claudo. 38. Justitiae opera praemitti debent operibus misericordiae. Qui eleemosynas largitur, nec abstinet a peccato, rem suam Deo tribuit, et seipsum peccato. Cum sancti operis exempla pensamus, intuendum nobis prius est, quam rectus narrandi ordo servetur, ut ante justitiae, et post misericordiae opera describantur. Ille quippe bene agit quae pia sunt, qui scit prius servare quae justa, ut collatus in proximos rivus misericordiae de justitiae fonte ducatur. [Vet. XX.] Nam multi proximis quasi opera misericordiae impendunt, sed injustitiae facta non deserunt. Qui si veraciter proximis misericordiam facere student, sibi ipsis prius debuerant juste vivendo misereri. Unde scriptum est: Miserere animae tuae placens Deo (Eccli. XXX, 24). Qui ergo misereri vult proximo, a se trahat necesse est originem miserendi. Scriptum namque est: Diliges proximum tuum sicut teipsum (Matth. XIX, 19). Quomodo ergo alteri miserendo pius est, qui adhuc injuste vivendo fit impius sibimetipsi? Unde per quemdam sapientem dicitur: Qui sibi nequam est, cui bonus erit (Eccli. XIV, 5)? Ad exhibendam quippe misericordiam ut indigentibus plene exterius valeat impendi, duo sibi necessaria congruunt, id est homo qui praebeat, et res quae praebeatur. Sed longe incomparabiliter melior est homo quam res. Qui itaque indigenti proximo exteriorem substantiam praebet, sed vitam suam a nequitia non custodit, rem suam Deo tribuit, et se peccato. Hoc quod minus est obtulit auctori, et hoc quod majus est servavit iniquitati. 625 Bene itaque per beatum Job prius dicitur: Justitia indutus sum, et vestivi me sicut vestimento; et sicut diademate, judicio meo. Ac deinde subjungitur: Oculus fui caeco, et pes claudo. Quia tunc est apud Deum oblatio verae rectitudinis, cum de radice justitiae prodeunt rami pietatis. Sed quia in ipso misericordiae opere plus solet apud internum judicem animus pensari quam factum, notandum quod caeco oculum fuisse se asserit, pedem claudo. Haec etenim dicens, profecto indicat quia et illi per semetipsum manum praebuerat, et hunc portando sustinebat. Ex qua re colligitur, super egenos ac debiles quantum misericordiae illius viscera fundebantur. Unde et subditur: Pater eram pauperum. 39. Ecclesia caecos illuminat, claudos sustentat. Quae videlicet verba si ad vocem sanctae Ecclesiae typica interpretatione referamus, ipsa est oculus caeco, quia per verbum lucet, ipsa pes claudo, quia per adjutorium continet. Caecos enim praedicando illuminat, claudos vero opitulando sustentat. Caecus quippe est qui adhuc quo pergat non videt; claudus autem est, qui non potest ire quo videt. Crebro namque peccatum aut ignorantia aut infirmitate perpetratur, ut vel nesciat homo quid velle debeat, vel non omne quod voluerit possit. Quo contra recte per Psalmistam dicitur: Dominus illuminatio mea et salus mea (Psal. XXVI, 1). Quia enim Dominus et scientiam et virtutem praebet, et contra ignorantiam illuminatio, et contra infirmitatem salus vocatur. Hinc etiam de iniquis dicitur: Fiant viae illorum tenebrae, et lubricum (Psal.

XXXIV, 6), ut scilicet per tenebras quo ire debent non videant, qui etsi recta viderent, in eis tamen per lubricum stare non possent. Isti itaque per lubricum inter bona claudicant, illi per tenebras quae bona sequantur ignorant. Sancta itaque Ecclesia extremis tribulationibus deprehensa, antiquorum reminiscitur temporum, quando et docendo illuminare consueverat, et adjuvando firmare, et praecedentis membri sui ore loquitur, dicens: Oculus fui caeco, et pes claudo. [Vet. XXI.] 40. Caeci sunt gentiles, claudi vero Judaei. Quae quia duos in se populos collegit, Judaicum scilicet atque gentilem, recte etiam potest caeco gentilis, claudo autem Judaicus populus designari. Gentilis quippe quasi oculos non habuit, quia non accepta lege non vidit quo ire debuisset. At contra Judaicus habens oculos, claudus fuit, quia legem quidem sciendo tenuit, sed in ea gressum recti operis non tetendit. Si enim gentilis populus caecus minime fuisset, propheta non diceret: Populus qui sedebat in tenebris, vidit lucem magnam (Isai. IX, 2). Rursum si Israeliticus populus a bono opere minime claudicasset, nequaquam voce Domini Psalmista dixisset: Filii alieni mentiti sunt mihi, filii alieni inveterati sunt, et claudicaverunt a semitis suis (Psal. XVII, 46). Qui nimirum populus claudus idcirco nominatur, qui sanum gressum in operatione non habuit, quippe qui utroque pede uti noluit, dum unum Testamentum recepit, aliud sprevit. Quem cum ad se venientem sancta Ecclesia suscipit, quia ei jam Vetus tenenti, etiam Novum Testamentum inserit, ad dirigendos gressus illius, quasi alterum pedem jungit. Qui fidelis sanctae Ecclesiae populus adhuc recte subjungit: Pater eram pauperum, 626 quia videlicet humiles, qui pauperes spiritu dicti sunt, ex ejus praedicatione generantur. Sed oportet ut in his omnibus ipsa historiae subtiliter verba pensemus. Ait enim:

CAPUT XXIV.

VERS. 16. Pater eram pauperum, et causam quam nesciebam diligentissime investigabam. 41. Praestat bonum opus ex affectu facere, quam ex praecepto. Plerumque enim multa homines pauperibus largiuntur, non quia eosdem pauperes diligunt, sed quia si minime tribuant, iram judicis superni formidant; qui si Deum non metuerent, quae habent dare noluissent. Et quidem in bono opere primus incipientium gradus est ut qui adhuc proximum sicut se nescit diligere, jam tamen incipiat judicia superna formidare. Quia igitur aliud est bonum opus ex praecepto, aliud vero etiam ex affectu facere, sanctus vir ut mentem nobis suae operationis insinuel, dicat: Pater eram pauperum. Non enim patronum se, vel proximum, vel adjutorem pauperum, sed patrem fuisse testatur, quia nimirum magno charitatis officio studium misericordiae vertit in affectum naturae, ut eos quasi filios cerneret per amorem, quibus quasi pater praeerat per protectionem. Quia igitur vis misericordiae illius naturam fuerat imitata, patrem se pauperum fuisse commemorat. Ubi etiam subdit.

CAPUT XXV.

IBID. Et causam quam nesciebam diligentissime investigabam. 42. Etsi nulla bona opera negligenda, minora tamen potioribus postponi debent. In quibus videlicet verbis pensanda sunt omnia quam distincte narrentur, quod nulla ab eo merces praetermittitur. Justus quippe est in actionibus suis, pius in infirmitatibus proximorum, strenuus in negotiis pauperum. Qui enim aeternae retributionis bona cogitat, necesse est ut ad omnem se causam secuturae mercedis extendat. Hinc enim per Salomonem dicitur: Qui Deum timet, nihil negligit (Eccle. VII, 19). Hinc etiam Paulus ait: Ad omne opus bonum parati (II Tim. II, 21). Sed inter haec sciendum est quia aliquando in actionibus nostris minora bona praetermittenda sunt pro utilitate majorum. Nam quis ignoret esse boni operis meritum, mortuum sepelire? et tamen cuidam qui ad sepeliendum patrem se dimitti poposcerat dictum est: Sine ut mortui sepeliant mortuos suos, tu autem vade et annuntia regnum Dei (Luc. IX, 60). Postponendum namque erat obsequium hujus ministerii officio praedicationis, quia illo carne mortuos in terram conderet, isto autem anima mortuos ad vitam resuscitaret. Per prophetam quoque primatibus synagogae dicitur: Quaerite judicium, subvenite oppresso (Isai. I, 17). Et tamen Paulus apostolus dicit: Contemptibiles qui sunt in Ecclesia, illos constituite ad judicandum (I Cor. VI, 4). Auditores etenim suos ad virtutem sapientiae, ad linguarum genera, ad prophetiae quoque indaganda mysteria succendebat, dicens: Aemulamini spiritalia, magis autem ut prophetetis (I Cor. XIV, 1). Sed quia spiritalia dona non caperent, si terrena eos negotia depressissent, longe ante praemisit, dicens: Contemptibiles qui sunt in Ecclesia, illos constituite ad judicandum (I Cor. VI, 4). Ac si aperte dicat, qui minoris meriti sunt in Ecclesia, et nullis magnorum donorum virtutibus pollent, ipsi de terrenis negotiis judicent, quatenus per quos magna nequeunt, bona minora suppleantur. Quos et contemptibiles nominat, et tamen sapientes vocat, cum dicit: Sic non est sapiens inter vos quisquam, qui possit judicare 627 inter fratrem suum (Ibid., 5)? Qua ex re quid colligitur, nisi ut hi terrenas causas examinent, qui exteriorum rerum sapientiam perceperunt? Qui autem spiritalibus donis ditati sunt, profecto terrenis non debent negotiis implicari, ut dum non coguntur inferiora bona disponere, exercitati valeant bonis superioribus deservire. [Vet. XXII.] 43. Qui per se non possunt, per alios officia charitatis exercere tenentur. Sed curandum magnopere est ut hi qui donis spiritalibus emicant nequaquam proximorum infirmantium negotia funditus deserant, sed haec aliis quibus dignum est tractanda committant. Unde Moyses quoque ac populum viros pro se septuaginta constituit, ut quanto se ab exterioribus causis absconderet, tanto ardentius interna penetraret. Sicque fit ut summi viri magis ad spiritalia dona proficiant, dum eorum mentes res infimae non conculcant; et rursum viri in Ecclesia ultimi sine bono opere non vivant, dum in rebus exterioribus inveniunt recta quae agant. Sancta quippe Ecclesia sic consistit unitate fidelium, sicut corpus nostrum unitum est compage membrorum. Alia namque sunt membra in corpore quae intuendae luci deserviunt, alia quae a terrae tactu minime disjunguntur. Oculus quippe luci intenditur, et ne caecari valeat, a pulvere custoditur. Pes vero tunc suum officium recte peragit, cum suscipiendum terrae pulverem non refugit. Quae tamen corporis membra vicissim sibi sua officia impartiendo copulantur, ut pes oculis currat, et oculus pedi prospiciat. 44. Membra Ecclesiae, etsi officio distincta, sunt charitate conjuncta. Sic itaque sic sanctae Ecclesiae membra debent et officio esse distincta, et charitate conjuncta, ut summi viri eorum viam provideant, qui in terrenis negotiis vacant, quatenus velut ad lumen oculorum pes ambulet, et rursum quidquid terrenis negotiis implicati agunt, hoc ad majorum utilitatem referant, ut pes cujus via prospicitur, non sibi tantummodo, sed etiam oculis gradiatur. Dum itaque sibi invicem alterna administratione conveniunt, miro modo agitur, ut quia electi quique vicissim sibimet impendendo quod valent faciunt, eorum fiant opera etiam quae facere ipsi non possunt. 45. Necessitate suadente, contemplatio intermittenda, ut proximi utilitati serviatur. Sed inter haec sciendum est quia cum proximorum causis exterioribus qui apte deserviant desunt, debent hi quoque qui spiritalibus donis pleni sunt eorum infirmitati condescendere terrenisque illorum necessitatibus, in quantum decenter valeant, charitatis condescensione servire. Nec taedere animum debet, si sensus ejus contemplationi spiritalium semper intentus aliquando dispensandis rebus minimis quasi minoratus inflectitur, quando illud Verbum per quod constant omnia creata, ut prodesset hominibus, assumpta humanitate, voluit paulominus ab angelis minorari. Quid ergo mirum si homo se propter hominem attrahit, dum creator hominum et angelorum formam hominis propter hominem suscepit? Nec tamen minoratur sensus cum sic attrahitur, quia tanto subtilius superiora penetrat, quanto humilius pro amore conditoris nec inferiora contemnit. Quid indignum nobis vel difficile est, si supra infraque animum ducimus, qui eadem manu corporis lavamus faciem, qua etiam calceamus pedem? Beatus igitur Job 628 quia cum magna ageret minima non despexit, dicat: [Vet. XXIII.] Et causam quam nesciebam diligentissime investigabam. 46. In judiciis non simus praecipites. Majora crimina tardius credenda; sed cum agnoscuntur, citius punienda. Qua in re notandum video ne ad proferendam sententiam unquam praecipites esse debeamus, ne temere indiscussa judicemus, ne quaelibet mala audita nos moveant, ne passim dicta sine probatione credamus. Quod profecto perpetrare pertimescimus, si auctoris nostri subtilius facta pensamus. Ipse quippe ut nos a praecipitata sententiae prolatione compesceret, cum omnia nuda et aperta sint oculis ejus, mala tamen Sodomae noluit audita judicare, qui ait: Clamor Sodomorum et Gomorrhaeorum multiplicatus est, et peccatum eorum aggravatum est nimis; descendam et videbo utrum clamorem qui venit ad me opere compleverint, an non est ita, ut sciam (Genes. XVIII, 20). Omnipotens itaque Dominus (2, q. 1, c. Deus omnipotens) et omnia sciens, cur ante probationem quasi dubitat, nisi ut gravitatis nobis exemplum proponat, ne mala hominum ante praesumamus credere quam probare? Ecce per angelos ad cognoscenda mala descendit, moxque facinorosos percutit; atque ille patiens, ille mitis, ille de quo scriptum est: Tu autem Domine, cum tranquillitate judicas (Sap. XII, 18), ille de quo scriptum est rursum: Dominus patiens est redditor (Eccli. V, 4); tanto crimine involutos inveniens, quasi patientiam praetermisit, et diem extremi judicii exspectare ad vindictam noluit, sed eos igne judicii, ante judicii diem praevenit. Ecce malum quasi cum difficultate credidit cum audivit, et tamen sine tarditate percussit, cum verum cognoscendo reperit, ut nobis videlicet daret exemplum, quod majora crimina et tarde credenda sunt cum audiuntur, et citius punienda sunt cum veraciter agnoscuntur. Hujus ergo diligentiae beatus Job sollicitudinem gerens, ait: Et causam quam nesciebam, diligentissime investigabam. Quae scilicet verba etiam per vocem Ecclesiae ad interpretationem typicam possumus non inconvenienter referre. Ipsa quippe per electos suos cum mala carnalium judicat, hoc quod nescit investigat, quia mala quae nescit operando investigat per judicium corrigendo. Sancta itaque Ecclesia cum injustorum fuerit ad tempus improbitate compressa, reminiscitur dicens: Causam quam nesciebam diligentissime investigabam. Ac si aperte dicat: Mala quae in electis meis agendo non noveram, in iniquis hominibus districte judicando plectebam. Et quia nunc virtute praedicationis suae diabolum conterit, atque ex ejus ore uniuscujusque quem suscipit animam rapit, sequitur dicens:

CAPUT XXVI [Rec. XV].

VERS. 17. Conterebam molas iniqui, et de dentibus illius auferebam praedam. 47. Ecclesia diabolo praedam eripit, cum aliquem ab errore aut peccato revocat. O qualem de ore diaboli praedam tulit, quando ipsum raptorem Saulum convertendo rapuit quando adhuc spirans minarum, acceptis epistolis, pergebat Damascum, et dum persequendo fideles congregaret praedam diabolo, cognoscendo fidem ipse aggregatus est Christo (Act. IX, 2)! Toties ex iniqui dentibus Ecclesia praedam tulit, quoties ex erroris morsu animam praedicando diripuit. Quis namque iniquus verius dici potest, quam diabolus? Cujus molas conterimus, quoties disserendo contra ejus insidias occulta illius machinamenta 629 monstramus; ac si de ejus dentibus praedam tollimus, quia mentem quam jam ad peccatum frangendo momorderat, ad salutem vitae convertendo revocamus. [Vet. XXIV.] Per molas quippe occultae ejus insidiae, per dentes vero aperta jam culpae perpetratio demonstratur. De quibus nimirum molis ac dentibus per Psalmistam scriptum est: Deus vero conteret dentes eorum in ore ipsorum, molas leonum confringet Dominus (Psal. LVII, 7). Sed sanctus vir ante se asserit molas conterere, ut post de dentibus illius praedam potuisset auferre, quia tunc veraciter praedam de ejus dentibus tollimus, cum prius molas illius conterere scimus. Prius enim necesse est occulta consiliorum illius machinamenta prodere, ut auditoris nostri animam valeamus postmodum ab aperto lapsu revocare. Hujus iniqui molas ipse summus pastor Ecclesiae praedicando conterebat, cum diceret: Sobrii estote et vigilate, quia adversarius vester diabolus tanquam leo rugiens circuit, quaerens quem devoret; cui resistite fortes in fide (I Petr. V, 8). Contra hunc leonem sancta Ecclesia, quia ejus insidias conspicit, fidei caulas munit. Cujus toties molas frangit, quoties haereticorum argumenta destruit; totiesque ab ejus dentibus praedam diripit, quoties ab errore quempiam praedicando convertit. Et quia plerique justorum tunc erunt qui se ecclesiasticae pacis tempore ab hoc mundo exituros esse crediderunt, beatus Job dum sua narrat, voces quoque justorum sequentium indicat, dicens:

CAPUT XXVII [Rec. XVI].

VERS. 18. Dicebamque: In nidulo meo moriar, et sicut palma multiplicabo dies. 48. Ejus filii, si pace frui desiderant, in ejus nido et sinu remaneant. Quid hoc loco per nidi nomen exprimitur, nisi tranquilla quies fidei, qua unusquisque infirmus nutritur? Multitudo quippe illa bonorum, quae persecutionum temporibus fuerit deprehensa, nutrimentorum suorum dies quasi in nido, sic in loco quietis, explere se credidit. Nam nisi sancta Ecclesia infirmos quosque filios nunc in nido pacis enutriret, Psalmista non diceret: Etenim passer invenit sibi domum, et turtur nidum, ubi reponat pullos suos (Psal. LXXXIII, 4). Jam quippe domum invenit sibi passer, quia aeternum coeli habitaculum noster Redemptor intravit. Et turtur invenit nidum, quia sancta Ecclesia amore conditoris affecta, crebris gemitibus utitur, et velut nidum sibi, id est pacatissimam fidei quietem construit, in qua crescentes filios quasi plumescentes pullos, quousque ad superiora evolent, charitatis gremio calefactos fovet. Igitur quia tunc erunt qui pacis tempore se ad superna migrare, id est a nido evolare crediderunt, eorum vox beati Job voce praevenitur, cum ait: Dicebamque: In nidulo meo moriar. Quia vero hoc ipsum sibi pacis otium ex multorum dierum longitudine promittebant, recto subjungit, dicens: Et sicut palma multiplicabo dies. Palma enim tarde proficit, sed diu in viriditate subsistit. Cum multis autem difficultatibus sancta Ecclesia ad fidei statum venit, et pro collectione plurimorum in ejusdem fidei gloria diutius stare concupiscit. 630 Sicut palma ergo multiplicare se dies credidit, quae, emergente subitae tentationis articulo, pacis suae gratiam et tarde a fidelibus adeptam, et citius ab infidelibus interceptam dolet. [Vet. XXV.] 49. Cur justi palmae comparantur. Nec immerito justorum vita palmae comparatur, quia scilicet palma inferius tactu aspera est, et quasi aridis corticibus obvoluta; superius vero et visu fructibus pulchra; inferius corticum suarum involutionibus angustatur, sed superius amplitudine pulchrae viriditatis expanditur. Sic quippe est electorum vita, despecta inferius, superius pulchra; in imo ista quasi multis corticibus obvolvitur, dum innumeris tribulationibus angustatur, in summo vero illa quasi pulchrae viriditatis foliis amplitudine retributionis expanditur. Habet quidem aliud palma quo a cunctis arborum generibus differt. Omnis namque arbor in suo robore juxta terram vasta subsistit, sed crescendo superius angustatur, et quando paulisper sublimior, tanto in altum subtilior redditur. Palma vero minoris amplitudinis ab imis inchoat, et juxta ramos ac fructus ampliori robore exsurgit; et quae tenuis ab imis proficit, vastior ad summa succrescit. Quibus itaque alia arbusta nisi terrenis mentibus inveniuntur esse similia, inferius vasta, superius angusta? quia nimirum omnes hujus saeculi dilectores in terrenis rebus fortes sunt (Dist. 47, c. 3), in coelestibus debiles. Nam pro temporali gloria usque ad mortem desudare appetunt, et pro spe perpetua ne parum quidem in labore subsistunt. Pro terrenis lucris quaslibet injurias tolerant, et pro coelesti mercede vel tenuissimi verbi ferre contumelias recusant; terreno judici toto etiam die assistere fortes sunt, in oratione vero coram Domino vel unius horae momento lassantur. Saepe nuditatem, dejectionem, famem, pro acquirendis divitiis atque honoribus tolerant, et earum rerum se abstinentia cruciant ad quas adipiscendas festinant; superna autem laboriose quaerere tanto magis dissimulant, quanto ea retribui tardius putant. Hi itaque quasi aliarum arborum more deorsum vasti sunt, sursum angusti, quia fortes in inferiora subsistunt, sed ad superiora deficiunt. At contra ex qualitate palmarum designatur proficiens vita justorum, qui nequaquam sunt in terrenis studiis fortes, et in coelestibus debiles; sed longius atque distantius studiosos se Deo exhibent quam saeculo fuisse meminerunt. Nam cum quibusdam per praedicatorem nostrum dicitur: Humanum dico, propter infirmitatem carnis vestrae; sicut enim exhibuistis membra vestra servire immunditiae et iniquitati ad iniquitatem, ita nunc exhibete membra vestra servire justitiae in sanctificationem (Rom. VI, 19); eorum procul dubio infirmitati condescenditur, ac si eis apertius diceretur: Si nequaquam amplius potestis, saltem tales estote in fructu bonorum operum, quales fuistis dudum in actione vitiorum, ne debiliores vos habeat sancta libertas charitatis, quos in carne validos habuit usus terrenae voluptatis. [Vet. XXVI.] 50. Non vero palmae comparantur qui cum bene coeperint, minime perseverant. Sunt vero nonnulli qui cum coelestia appetunt, 631 atque hujus mundi noxia facta derelinquunt, ab inchoatione sua quotidie inconstantiae pusillanimitate deficiunt. Quibus hos nisi arbustis reliquis similes dixerim qui nequaquam tales superius surgunt quales inferius oriuntur? Hi quippe ad conversionem venientes non tales quales coeperunt perseverant, et quasi more arborum inchoatione vasti sunt, sed tenues crescunt, quia paulisper per augmenta temporum patiuntur detrimenta virtutum. Sensim quippe in eis desideria superna languescunt; et qui robusta ac fortia proposuerant, debilia atque infirma consummant; dumque aetatis augmento proficiunt, quasi flexibiles crescunt. Palma vero, sicut dictum est, vastioris in summitate est quam esse coeperit quantitatis ex radice, quia saepe electorum conversio plus finiendo peragit quam proponit inchoando; et si tepidius prima inchoat, ferventius extrema consummat, videlicet semper inchoare se aestimat, et idcirco infatigabilis in novitate perdurat. Hanc scilicet justorum constantiam propheta intuens, ait: Qui confidunt in Domino, mutabunt fortitudinem suam, assument pennas ut aquilae, current et non laborabunt, ambulabunt et non deficient (Isai. XL, 31). Mutant quippe fortitudinem, quia fortes student esse in spiritali opere, qui dudum fuerant fortes in carne. Assumunt autem pennas ut aquilae, quia contemplando volant. Currunt et non laborant, quia velocibus magna celeritate praedicant. Ambulant et non deficiunt, quia intellectus sui velocitatem retinent, ut tardioribus condescendant. In cunctis vero bona quae accipiunt quanto aliis libenter accommodant, tanto ipsi incommutabiles in novitate perdurant; et qui tenues a radice inchoationis exeunt, fortes in culminis perfectione convalescunt. Dicat itaque beatus Job ex persona sua, dicat ex voce sanctae Ecclesiae pro his quos pacis tempore ad se conversos habuerat, atque in bonis moribus perseveraturos credebat: Dicebamque: In nidulo meo moriar, et sicut palma multiplicabo dies. Quasi enim palma multiplicare se dies credidit, quae mentes fidelium ad extremum usque robustiores exsurgere putabat. Cum enim multorum corda persecutionibus coeperint lassata mollescere, dolet jam in se quasi ad debilitatem tendere, quos mirabatur fortia proposuisse. Et quia mente semper spiritali scientiae intendit, recte subjungitur

CAPUT XXVIII.

VERS. 19. Radix mea aperta est secus aquas. 51. Spiritali scientiae semper intendit Ecclesia. Juxta aquas enim radix aperitur, quando ad percipienda veritatis fluenta latenter cogitatio mentis expanditur. Ut enim in superiori libro jam diximus (Lib. VIII, n. 81), solet in sacro eloquio radicis nomine occulta cogitatio designari. Radicem igitur nostram secus aquas aperimus, cum infusioni intimae cogitationem taciti cordis intendimus. [Vet. XXVII.] Quae scilicet verba si ad vocem sanctae Ecclesiae ducimus, radix illius ipsa debet incarnatio Redemptoris intelligi. Quae juxta aquas aperta est, dum Deus invisibilis per assumptionem humanitatis suae patuit aspectibus visionis nostrae. Creator quippe qui in divinitate videri 632 non poterat, assumpsit a nobis unde videretur a nobis. Radix ergo secus aquas aperitur, quia auctor humani generis per humanitatem suam hominibus demonstratur. Unde recte quoque per Psalmistam dicitur: Et erit tanquam lignum quod plantatum est secus decursus aquarum (Psal. I, 3). Decursus quippe aquarum sunt quotidiani transitus deficientium populorum. Et de semetipsa Veritas dicit: Si in ligno viridi haec faciunt, in arido quid fiet (Luc. XXIII, 51)? Lignum ergo secus decursus aquarum est, quia fructum et protectionem sui nobis umbraculi proferens, apparuit creator in carne, ut humanum genus per resurrectionem figeret, quod per defectum quotidie ibat in mortem. Sequitur:

CAPUT XXIX.

IBID. Et vos morabitur in messione mea. 52. Ejus messio rori gratiae tribuenda. Subaudis, dicebam. Messio enim sanctae Ecclesiae non inconvenienter accipitur, cum perfectae animae a corporibus abstractae, velut maturae segetes a terra decisae, ad coelestia horrea demigrant; quod quia non nostra virtute, sed coelesti gratia largiente agitur, bene ait: Et ros morabitur in messione mea. Ros namque desuper cadit, messis deorsum colligitur. Ergo ros moratur in messione, quia gratia desuper veniens agit ut digni simus qui de inferioribus colligamur. Ipsa quippe nos desuper infundente, fructum bonorum operum ferimus. Unde recte quoque per Paulum dicitur: Gratia Dei sum id quod sum, et gratia ejus in me vacua non fuit (I Cor. XV, 10). Si enim quaeratur quid sit ros desuper veniens, ait:

Gratia Dei sum id quod sum. Si intueamur messem sub rore crescentem, ait: Et gratia ejus in me vacua non fuit, sed abundantius illis omnibus laboravi. Sequitur:

CAPUT XXX.

VERS. 20. Gloria mea semper innovabitur, et arcus meus in manu mea instaurabitur. 53. Ecclesia deflet filios quos ad veterem vitam redire cognoscit. Subaudis dicebam. Superiori quippe sententiae conjungitur quod locutione continua subinfertur, cum ait: Dicebamque: In nidulo meo moriar, et sicut palma multiplicabo dies. Ac deinde subjungitur: Radix mea aperta est secus aquas, et ros morabitur in messione mea. Gloria mea semper innovabitur, et arcus meus in manu mea instaurabitur. Cunctis vera scientibus liquet quod ad vetustam vitam vitia pertinent, virtutes ad novam. Hinc enim Paulus dicit: Exuentes vos veterem hominem cum actibus suis, et induentes novum (Coloss. III, 9). Hinc rursus ait: Vetus homo noster simul crucifixus est (Rom. VI, 6). Hinc Psalmista ex typo humani generis loquens, inter malignos spiritus deprehensus dicit: Inveteravi inter omnes inimicos meos (Psal. VI, 8). A fervore etenim mentis vel inter spiritales inimicos, vel inter carnales quosque proximos, ipso aliquo modo vivendi usu veterascimus, et assumptae novitatis speciem fuscamus. A qua tamen vetustate quotidie si studia circumspectionis invigilent, orando, legendo, bene vivendo renovamur, quia vita nostra dum lacrymis lavatur, bonis operibus exercetur, sanctis meditationibus tenditur, ad novitatem suam sine cessatione reparatur. Beatus igitur Job sic sua narrat, ut nostra significet, quia sancta Ecclesia cum fideles suos conspicit ad vitae veteris 633 culpas redire, eos quos novitatem mentis intuetur perdere, cogitur plorare. Praedicator quippe egregius discipulis suis dicit: Quae est enim nostra spes, aut gaudium, aut corona gloriae? nonne vos ante Dominum (I Thess. II, 19)? Sancta ergo Ecclesia quasi amissam gloriam deplorat, cum fideles suos ad vitam veterem redire considerat. Ait enim: Dicebam: Gloria mea semper innovabitur, quia eos quos in se novae vitae militare credidit, vetustis desideriis servire cognoscit. [Vers. XXVIII.] 54. Quot significentur in sacris Scripturis, arcus nomine. Arcus autem nomine in sacro eloquio aliquando malorum insidiae, aliquando dies judicii, aliquando vero ipsa eadem sacra eloquia designantur. Per arcum quippe insidiae figurantur, sicut per Psalmistam dicitur: Intenderunt arcum suum, rem amaram (Psal. LXIII, 4). Per arcum quoque dies extremi judicii designatur, sicut per eumdem rursum Psalmistam dicitur: Ostendisti populo tuo dura, potasti nos vino compunctionis; dedisti metuentibus te significationem, ut fugiant a facie arcus (Psal. LIX, 5). In arcu enim quanto longe trahitur chorda, tanto de eo districtior exit sagitta. Sic nimirum sic extremi judicii dies quanto longe differtur ut veniat, tanto cum venerit de illo districtior sententia procedit. Idcirco autem diversis nunc cladibus percutimur, ut his correcti paratiores tunc inveniri valeamus. Unde illic praemissum est: Ostendisti populo tuo dura, flagella videlicet saeculi, quae secuturum gravius judicii diem praecurrunt. Potasti nos vino compunctionis, ut terrena gaudia in lacrymas verterentur. Dedisti metuentibus te significationem, ut fugiant a facie arcus. Ac si aperte diceret: Hoc tempus misericordiae est, illud tempus judicii erit. Per ista ergo hujus temporis flagella significas quomodo tunc percussurus es quando non parcens judicas, qui sic districte modo percutis quando parcis. 55. Ipsa Script. sacra arcus est Ecclesiae. Aliquando autem per arcum etiam sacra Scriptura signatur. Ipsa quippe arcus est Ecclesiae, ipsa arcus est Domini, de qua ad corda hominum sicut ferientes sagittae, sic terrentes sententiae veniunt. Unde recte quoque per Psalmistam dicitur: Arcum suum tetendit et paravit illum, et in ipso paravit vasa mortis, sagittas suas ardentibus effecit (Psal. VII, 13). Arcum namque suum Dominus tetendit; quia cunctis peccatoribus per Scripturam sacram minas exhibuit. In quo arcu scilicet vasa mortis praeparat, quia secundum eloquii sui sententiam eos qui nunc corrigi negligunt reprobos damnat. In quo etiam sagittas suas ardentibus effecit, quia in eos quos per terrorem corrigit, accensas verborum sententias emittit. De hoc praedicatorum arcu per Isaiam dicitur: Cum sagittis et arcu ingrediuntur illuc (Isai. VII, 24), quia nimirum sancti apostoli ad feriendam gentilis vitae duritiam cum districtis verborum spiculis venerunt. Quid igitur hoc in loco arcus nomine nisi sacrum eloquium debet intelligi? In chorda etenim Testamentum Novum, in cornu vero Testamentum Vetus accipitur. In arcu autem dum chorda trahitur, cornu curvatur; sic in hoc eodem sacro eloquio dum Testamentum Novum legitur, duritia Testamenti Veteris emollitur. Ad ejus namque spiritalia et blanda praecepta illius 634 litterae se rigor inclinat, quia Testamentum Novum, dum quasi quodam bonae operationis brachio trahitur, in Testamento Veteri severitatis jura flectuntur. Nec indecenter dicimus chordam Testamento Novo congruere, quod de incarnatione dominica certum est exstitisse. Quasi ergo chorda trahitur, et cornua curvantur, quia dum in Testamento Novo incarnatio mediatoris agnoscitur, ad spiritalem intelligentiam rigor Testamenti Veteris inclinatur. Ait igitur sanctus vir: Dicebam: Gloria mea semper innovabitur, et arcus meus in manu mea instaurabitur. 56. Hoc arcu recte utitur, qui divina eloquia intelligens, opere perficit. Arcus in manu est Scriptura sacra in operatione. In manu etenim arcum tenet qui divina eloquia quae intellectu cognoscit operatione perficit. Instauratur ergo arcus in manu, dum quidquid de sacro eloquio studendo cognoscitur, vivendo completur. Hinc etiam Salomon dum fortes spiritalis pugnae describeret bellatores, ait: Omnes tenentes gladios, et ad bella doctissimi (Cant. III, 8). Quid namque in divina Scriptura per gladium figuretur, Paulus aperuit, dicens: Et gladium spiritus, quod est verbum Dei (Ephes. VI, 17). [Vet. XXIX.] Salomon autem non ait: Omnes habentes gladios, sed tenentes, quia videlicet verbum Dei non est mirabile solummodo scire, sed facere. Habet quippe, sed non tenet gladium, qui divinum quidem eloquium novit, sed secundum illud vivere negligit. Et doctus esse ad bella jam non valet, qui spiritalem quem habet gladium minime exercet. Nam resistere tentationibus omnino non sufficit, qui hunc verbi Dei tenere gladium male vivendo postponit. Sancta itaque Ecclesia, quae subsequenti persecutione deprimitur, malorum abundantiam et bonorum inopiam pensans, beati Job vocibus damna sua praenuntiet, dicens: Dicebamque: In nidulo meo moriar, et sicut palma multiplicabo dies. Radix mea aperta est secus aquas, et ros morabitur in messione mea. Gloria mea semper innovabitur, et arcus meus in manu mea instaurabitur. Quae videlicet cuncta considerans, nequaquam spe cassa fallebatur. Nam perfecti quique multos nunc ejus conspiciunt adjutores, sed pensant procul dubio quod emergente persecutionis articulo, ex his plerique hostes illius fiunt, qui esse pacis tempore ejus cives videntur. Non autem de omnibus ita desperant, sed tamen plerumque contingit ut hi de quibus majorem fidei fiduciam habuerant, ipsi ejusdem fidei hostes atrociores fiant, ut eos tunc videant contra sacra eloquia agere, ex quorum se operatione crediderant haec eadem sacra eloquia ad praedicationis gratiam restaurare. Quae tamen tempora jam nunc inchoasse ingemiscimus, cum multos intra Ecclesiam positos cernimus, qui aut nolunt operari quod intelligunt, aut hoc ipsum quoque sacrum eloquium intelligere ac nosse contemnunt. A veritate etenim avertentes auditum, ad fabulas convertuntur, dum omnes quae sua sunt quaerunt, non quae sunt Jesu Christi (Philip. II, 21). Scripta Dei ubique reperta opponuntur oculis, sed haec cognoscere homines dedignantur. Pene nullus quaerit scire quod credidit. Multitudo ergo bonorum praecedentium arcum suum destrui doleat, quae sacrum eloquium restaurari semper per studium subsequentium credebat.

LIBER VIGESIMUS.

CAPUT PRIMUM.

635 1. Scriptura sacra caeteris libris anteponenda. Quamvis omnem scientiam atque doctrinam Scriptura sacra sine aliqua comparatione transcendat, ut taceam quod vera praedicat, quod ad coelestem patriam vocat; quod a terrenis desideriis ad superna amplectenda cor legentis immutat; quod dictis obscurioribus exercet fortes, et parvulis humili sermone blanditur, quod nec sic clausa est ut pavesci debeat, nec sic patet ut vilescat, quod usu fastidium tollit, et tanto amplius diligitur quanto amplius meditatur; quod legentis animum humilibus verbis adjuvat, sublimibus sensibus levat, quod aliquo modo cum legentibus crescit, quod a rudibus lectoribus quasi recognoscitur, et tamen doctis semper nova reperitur; ut ergo de rerum pondere taceam, scientias tamen omnes atque doctrinas ipso etiam locutionis suae more transcendit, quia uno eodemque sermone dum narrat textum, prodit mysterium, et sic scit praeterita dicere, ut eo ipso noverit futura praedicare, et non immutato dicendi ordine, eisdem ipsis sermonibus novit et anteacta describere, et agenda nuntiare, sicut haec eadem beati Job verba sunt, qui dum sua dicit, nostra praedicit; dumque lamenta propria per sermonem indicat, sanctae Ecclesiae causas per intellectum sonat. Ait enim:

CAPUT II.

CAP. XXIX, VERS. 21-23. Qui me audiebant, exspectabant sententiam, et intenti tacebant ad consilium meum. Verbis meis addere nihil audebant, et super illos stillabat eloquium meum. Exspectabant me sicut pluviam, et os suum aperiebant, quasi ad imbrem serotinum. 2. Fideles Ecclesiam docentem audiunt, ejus verba secuturi, non judicaturi. Hanc etenim apud beatum Job fuisse subjectorum reverentiam indubitanter credimus. Sed, sicut jam saepe diximus, sancta Ecclesia, haereticorum vel carnalium tribulationibus pressa, praeteritorum reminiscitur temporum, in quibus omne quod ab ea dicitur cum metu a fidelibus auditur, et adversariorum suorum proterviam deplorans, dicit: [Rec. II.] Qui me audiebant, exspectabant sententiam, et intenti tacebant ad consilium meum. Ac si aperte dicat: Non ut hi protervi ac tumidi, qui dum veritatis verba suscipere renuunt, praedicationis meae sententias quasi docendo praecurrunt. Cujus nunc discipuli intenti ad ejus consilium tacent, quia verba ejus non audent impugnare, sed credere. Ut enim proficere ex ipsis possint, ea procul dubio non judicaturi, sed secuturi audiunt. 3. Ejus doctrinae nihil addunt. Secus haeretici. De quibus recte subjungitur: Verbis meis addere nihil audebant, quia nimirum tunc haeretici cum contra hanc libertate pessima fuerint effrenati, dictis ejus addere aliquid praesumunt, cum praedicamentorum ejus rectitudinem quasi emendare moliuntur, Quae adhuc de bonis auditoribus subdit: Et super illos stillabat eloquium meum. 4. Praedicatores ad auditorum captum debent se contrahere. In hac stillatione eloquii quid aliud quam mensura sanctae praedicationis accipitur? quia oportet 636 ut exhortationis gratia singulis juxta capacitatem ingenii conferatur. Per hoc ergo quod dicitur: Verbis meis addere nihil audebant, reverentia laudatur audientium. Per hoc vero quod subditur: Et super illos stillabat eloquium meum, indicatur dispensatio magistrorum. Debet enim subtiliter is qui docet perspicere, ne plus studeat quam ab audiente capitur praedicare. Debet enim ad infirmitatem audientium semetipsum contrahendo descendere, ne dum parvis sublimia, et idcirco non profutura loquitur, se magis curet ostendere quam auditoribus prodesse. [Vet. II.] Jubente autem Domino, non solum phialae ad mensam tabernaculi, sed etiam cyathi praeparantur (Exod.

XXXVII, 16). Quid enim per phialas nisi larga praedicatio, quid vero per cyathos nisi minima et tenuis de Deo locutio designatur? In mensa igitur Domini et phialae praeparantur et cyathi, quia videlicet in doctrina sacri eloquii, non solum exhibenda sunt magna et arcana quae debriant, sed etiam parva et subtilia quae quasi per gustum notitiam praestant. Hujus ergo discretissimae dispensationis suae sancta Ecclesia extremis pressa temporibus reminiscatur, et dicat: Super illos stillabat eloquium meum. 5. Eorum doctrinae tanquam pluviae serotinae excipiendae humiles os aperiunt. Ubi apte quoque subjungitur: Exspectabant me sicut pluviam, et os suum aperiebant quasi ad imbrem serotinum. Verba quippe sanctae praedicationis sicut pluviam sustinemus, cum vera humilitate ariditatem nostri cordis agnoscimus, ut potu sanctae praedicationis irrigemur. Unde Deo recte per Psalmistam dicitur: Anima mea sicut terra sine aqua tibi (Psal. CXLII, 6). His doctrinae fluentis infundi propheta nos admonet, dicens: Sitientes, venite ad aquas (Isai. LV, 1). Qui dum in extrema parte jam saeculi verba sanctae praedicationis accipimus, quasi ad imbrem serotinum os cordis aperimus. Nam si os in corde non esset, Psalmista non diceret: Labia dolosa in corde, et corde locuti sunt mala (Psal. XI, 3). Os igitur cordis quia verbis intendimus ultimae praedicationis, hoc velut serotinis aperimus fluentis. Quae nimirum praedicatio ex ejus ad nos sacrificio prodiit, qui per Psalmistam dicit: Elevatio manuum mearum sacrificium vespertinum (Psal. CXL, 2). Quia enim Redemptor noster juxta mundi finem vim persequentium pertulit, semetipsum pro nobis sacrificium vespertinum dedit. De hoc imbre serotino alias scriptum est: Dabo vobis pluviam temporivam et serotinam (Jerem. V, 24). Temporivam quippe pluviam dedit, quia electis suis priori tempore legis intellectum contulit. Serotinam quoque pluviam tribuit, quia praedicari diebus ultimis incarnationis suae mysterium fecit. Quod quia sancta Ecclesia quotidie annuntiare non desinit, ora cordis audientium velut ex imbre serotino infundit. Sequitur:

CAPUT III [Rec. III].

VERS. 24. Si quando ridebam ad eos, non credebant, et lux vultus mei non cadebal in terram. 637 6. Praelatus sic se gravem exhibeat, ut non sit odiosus; sic hilarem, ut vilis non sit. Hoc si juxta historiae verba percipimus, credi necesse est quod vir sanctus talem se exhibuerit subditis, ut etiam ridens timeri potuisset. Sed cum superius patrem se pauperum, viduarum vero consolatorem fuisse perhibet, magna valde discretione res indiget, quomodo in tanto terrore regiminis, tanta quoque affuerit lenitas, et mansuetudo pietatis. Sine magna enim benignitatis lenitate non fuit hoc, quod se patrem pauperum et viduarum consolatorem dicit. Sed rursum sine magna severitate non potuit etiam ridens timeri. Qua in re quid aliud docemur, nisi quod talis debet esse dispensatio regiminis, ut is qui praeest ea se circa subditos mensura moderetur, quatenus et arridens timeri debeat, et iratus amari? ut eum nec nimia laetitia vilem reddat, nec immoderata severitas odiosum. Saepe enim subjectos frangimus, dum plus justo vigorem justitiae tenemus. Qui profecto vigor jam justitiae non erit, si se sub justo moderamine non custodit. Et saepe a disciplinae metu resolvimus subditos, si nostro regimini hilaritatis frena laxamus, quia dum nos quasi licenter laetos aspiciunt, audacter ipsi ad illicita resolvuntur. [Vet. III.] Sed ut rectoris vultus etiam laetus debeat timeri, necesse est ut ipse vultum sui conditoris sine cessatione timeat. Illi etenim menti difficile de laetitia creditur, quae quod se pro amore Domini continue affligat a subditis scitur. Qui enim incessanti aestu spiritalis desiderii superna appetit, valde de eo in dubium venit hoc, quod aliquando ante homines hilarescit. Unde et isdem beatus Job non longe post dicturus: Semper enim quasi tumentes super me fluctus timui Deum (Job. XXXI, 23). Sic quippe metuebat judicem suum, quasi subimminentes impetus fluctuum, jamjamque moriturus. Cujus ergo in mentem moeror divini timoris infuderat, recte hilaritati illius subditi non credebant, quia cogebantur ridenti non credere, cujus cor in timore conditoris noverant quam continua moestitia tenebat. 7. Lux nostra in terram cadit, cum terrena concupiscimus. Hoc quoque juxta historiam non inconvenienter accipitur, quod protinus subinfertur: Et lux vultus mei non cadebat in terram. [Rec. IV.] Scriptum quippe est: Oculi stultorum in finibus terrae (Prov. XVII, 24). Rursumque per eumdem Salomonem dicitur: Oculi sapientis in capite ejus (Eccle. II, 14). Paulus quoque ait: Caput viri Christus (I Cor. XI, 3). Oculi ergo sapientis in capite ejus sunt, dum Redemptoris sui semper opera quae imitari debeat, contemplatur. Lux ergo vultus ejus in terram non cecidit, quia ea quae terrena sunt per concupiscentiam non aspexit. 8. Sancti nunquam securi sunt. Grave periculum est incauta securitas. Sed quia superficiem historiae sub brevitate discussimus, quid in his de intellectu mystico lateat perpendamus. Unam esse personam Christum et Ecclesiam plerumque jam diximus, et saepe vox capitis ad vocem corporis, saepe vox corporis ad vocem capitis transit. Qui enim sunt in carne una, nil obstat ut conveniant etiam in voce una. Dicat ergo ex voce capitis de electis suis, dicat Ecclesia: Si quando ridebam ad eos, non credebant. Ridere etenim Dei est sanctorum vias prosequenti favore prosperari, sicut de his quoque per usum dicitur, quos in hoc saeculo felicitatis 638 blandimenta comitantur: Arrisit illis tempus. Unde e contrario, ira appellatur Domini, a bonis actionibus infirmari, sicut scriptum est: Ne quando irascatur Dominus, et pereatis de via justa (Psal. II, 12). Si igitur irasci Dominus perhibetur, cum viam justitiae homines perdunt, recte arridere Dominus dicitur, cum bona nostra opera favor gratiae supernae comitatur. [Res. V.] Sed electi quique quandiu in hac vita sunt, securitatis sibi confidentiam non promittunt. Horis enim omnibus contra tentamenta suspecti, occulti hostis insidias metuunt, qui etiam tentatione cessante, vel sola graviter suspicione turbantur. Nam saepe multis grave periculum incauta securitas fuit, ut callidi hostis insidias non tentati, sed jam prostrati cognoscerent. Vigilandum quippe semper est, ut mens continue sollicita nunquam relaxetur intentione superna, ne laboriosa deserens, in cogitationibus fluxis, quasi in quibusdam mollibus stramentis jacens, venienti corruptori diabolo mens se resoluta prostituat. Semper vero est ad certamen adversarii erigendus animus; semper contra occultas insidias cautela providenda. Hinc etenim Habacuc propheta ait: Super custodiam meam stabo (Hab. II, 1). Hinc rursum scriptum est: Statue tibi speculam; pone tibi amaritudines, qui evangelizas Sion (Jerem. XXXI, 21). Hinc per Salomonem dicitur: Beatus vir qui semper est pavidus; qui autem mentis est durae, corruet in malum (Prov. XXVIII, 14). Hinc iterum dicit: Uniuscujusque ensis super femur suum, propter timores nocturnos (Cant. III, 8). Nocturni quippe timores sunt insidiae tentationis occultae. Ensis autem super femur est custodia vigilans, carnis illecebras premens. Ne ergo nocturnus timor, id est occulta et repentina tentatio subrepat, semper necesse est ut lemur nostrum superpositus custodiae ensis premat. [Vet. IV.] Sancti etenim viri sic de spe certi sunt, ut tamen semper sint de tentatione suspecti; quippe quibus dicitur: Servite Domino in timore, et exsultate ei cum tremore (Psal. II, 11), ut et de spe exsultatio, et de suspicione nascatur tremor. Quorum voce iterum Psalmista dicit: Laetetur cor meum, ut timeat nomen tuum (Psal. LXXXV, 11). Qua in re notandum quod non ait: Laetetur ut securum sit, sed, Laetetur ut timeat. Meminerunt namque, quamvis eorum actio prosperetur, quia adhuc in hac vita sunt; de qua per eumdem Job dicitur: Tentatio est vita humana super terram (Job. VII, 1). Meminerunt rursum quod scriptum est: Corpus quod corrumpitur aggravat animam, et deprimit terrena inhabitatio sensum multa cogitantem (Sap. IX, 15). Meminerunt et metuunt, et certitudinem sibi in se promittere non praesumunt; sed positi inter gaudium spei, et tentationis metum, confidunt, et timent; confortantur, et titubant; certiorantur, et suspecti sunt. Bene ergo per vocem electi membri sub figura nostri capitis dicitur: Si quando ridebam ad eos, non credebant, quia Redemptori nostro quasi arridenti non credimus, dum multis jam ejus donis testantibus, et gratiam favoris ejus accipimus, et tamen adhuc sub ejus judicio de nostra infirmitate titubamus.

9. S. Paulus jam ad tertium coelum raptus a timore liber non fuit. Videamus qualiter Paulo et arridetur jam per supernam gratiam, et ipse adhuc quasi non credit per suspicionis metum. Jam e coelo illi Dominus 639 loquens, ejusque interius oculos aperiens, exterius claudens, potentiam suae majestatis ostenderat (Act. IX, 4); jam de eo Ananiae dixerat, Vas electionis mihi est (Ibid. IX, 15), jam ad tertium coelum super se raptus fuerat (II Cor. XII, 2); jam in paradisum ductus arcana verba quae dicere non posset audierat; et tamen adhuc timidus dicit: Castigo corpus meum, et in servitutem redigo, ne forte aliis praedicans ipse reprobus efficiar (I Cor. IX, 27). Ecce arridenti sibi divinae gratiae et jam credit per spem, et necdum tamen credit per securitatem. Nam quia bene haec verba Redemptoris nostri vocibus congruunt, etiam subjuncta testantur, cum dicitur: Et lux vultus mei non cadebat in terram. Quid namque terra, nisi peccator vocatur, cui prima sententia dictum est: Terra es, et in terram ibis (Genes. III, 19)? Lux ergo vultus Domini in terram nequaquam cadit, quia visionis ejus claritas peccatoribus non apparet. Scriptum namque est: Tollatur impius, ne videat gloriam Dei (Isai. XXVI, 10). Quasi enim lux in terram caderet, si in extremo judicio veniens, claritatem majestatis suae peccatoribus aperiret.
10. Infirmis fortia non praedicanda. Quod si haec verba ex sanctae Ecclesiae voce suscipimus, non incongrue intelligere poterimus lucem vultus ejus in terram non cadere, quia occupatis in terrenis actionibus vetat summa contemplationis suae mysteria praedicare. Dici enim infirmis fortia prohibet, ne dum incapabilia audiunt, praedicationis verbis quibus sublevari debuerant opprimantur. Lux quippe ipsa corporea, quae oculos sanos irradiat, infirmos obscurat; et dum lippientibus oculis claritati solis intenditur, plerumque eis caecitas ex luce generatur. Sancta itaque Ecclesia oppressa persecutionis tempore, memor autem praeteritae discretionis suae, dicat: Lux vullus mei non cadebat in terram. Sed quia ex ejus capite haec verba intelligere coepimus, in ipso adhuc quod sequitur exsequamur. Nam subditur:

CAPUT IV [Rec. VI].

VERS. 25. Si voluissem ire ad eos, sedebam primus. 11. In carnalium corde Christus ultimus sedet, in corde justorum primus. Quia in corde reproborum priori loco actiones carnis sunt, et posteriori actiones animae, in eorum procul dubio cogitationibus Christus non primus, sed ultimus sedet. Sed electi quique quia ea prae omnibus quae aeterna sunt cogitant, et posteriori cura, ac minima, si qua sunt temporalia disponunt, quibus et magistra voce Veritatis dicitur: Quaerite primum regnum Dei et justitiam ejus, et haec omnia adjicientur vobis (Matth. VI, 33), in eorum corde Dominus primus sedet. Ubi apte praemittitur: Si voluissem ire ad eos. Quia enim, sicut scriptum est (Ephes. I, 5), omnia operatur secundum consilium voluntatis suae; non secundum nostrum meritum, sed quia ipse ita vult, visitatione sua nos Dominus illustrat. Itaque et cum vult venit; et cum venerit, primus sedet, quia et adventus ejus in corde nostro gratuitus est, et appetitus ejus desiderii, in cogitatione nostra aequalis caeteris desideriis non est. Sequitur:

CAPUT V [Rec. VII].

IBID. Cumque sederem quasi rex circumstante exercitu, eram tamen moerentium consolator. 12. Christus in nobis sedens quasi rex moerentes consolatur. Idem praestat Ecclesia. Quasi rex Dominus sedet in corde, quia circumstrepentes regit animorum motus in nostra cogitatione. In mente quippe quam inhabitat, 640 dum torpentia excitat, inquieta frenat, frigida accendit, accensa moderatur, emollit rigida, fluxa restringit; ex ipsa hac diversitate cogitationum quasi quidam illum exercitus circumstat. Sive certe quasi rex sedet circumstante exercitu, quia praesidentem illum mentibus electorum circumstat turba virtutum. Qui etiam moerentium consolator est, ex ea promissione qua dicit, Beati qui lugent, quoniam ipsi consolabuntur (Matth. V, 5). Et rursus, Iterum videbo vos, et gaudebit cor vestrum; et gaudium vestrum nemo tollet a vobis (Joan. XVI, 22). Ea vero quae de sanctae Ecclesiae capite diximus, nil obstat, si ad vocem quoque ejusdem Ecclesiae referamus. In ea quippe ordo doctorum quasi rex praesidet, quem fidelium suorum turba circumstat. Quae scilicet multitudo fidelium recte quoque exercitus dicitur, quia in procinctu bonorum operum indesinenter quotidie contra tentationum bella praeparatur. [Vet. V.] Corda quoque moerentium sancta Ecclesia consolatur, dum praesentis peregrinationis aerumna afflictas mentes electorum pensat, et has aeternae patriae promissione laetificat. Considerat etiam quod cogitationes fidelium divino sint timore percussae; et quos de Deo conspicit districta audisse ut timeant, agit quoque quatenus et mansuetudinem pietatis ejus audiant ut praesumant.

13. Spem miscet et metum, ne incaute de misericordia confidamus, aut desperate justitiam timeamus. Sic namque sancta Ecclesia fidelibus suis de pietate et justitia Redemptoris in praedicationis serie spem miscet et metum, quatenus nec incaute de misericordia confidant, nec desperate justitiam timeant. Nam verbis sui capitis formidantes refovet, dicens: Nolite timere, pusillus grex, quia complacuit Patri vestro dare vobis regnum (Luc. XII, 32). Atque iterum praesumentes terret cum dicit: Vigilate et orate, ut non intretis in tentationem (Marc. XIV, 38). Rursum formidantes refovet, dicens: Gaudete quia nomina vestra scripta sunt in coelo (Luc. X, 20). Sed in semetipsis praesumentes deterret, cum ait: Videbam satanam sicut fulgur de coelo cadentem (Ibid., X, 18). Formidantes refovet, cum dicit: Oves meae vocem meam audiunt; et ego cognosco eas, et sequuntur me, et ego vitam aeternam do eis; et non peribunt in aeternum, et non rapiet eas quisquam de manu mea (Joan. X, 27). Sed in semetipsis praesumentes deterret, dicens: Dabunt signa magna et prodigia, ita ut in errorem inducantur, si fieri potest, etiam electi (Matth. XXIV, 24). Formidantes refovet, dicens: Qui perseveraverit usque in finem, hic salvus erit (Ibid., 13). Praesumentes deterret, dicens: Cum venerit Filius hominis, putas inveniet fidem in terra (Luc. XVIII, 8)? Metuentes refovet, cum latroni dicit: Hodie mecum eris in paradiso (Luc. XXIII, 43). Sed terret praesumentes, dum Judas ex apostolatus gloria in tartarum labitur. De quo per sententiae definitionem dicitur: Duodecim vos elegi, et unus ex vobis diabolus est (Joan. VI, 70). Formidantem refovet, cum dicit: Si dimiserit vir uxorem suam, et recedens ab eo duxerit virum alterum, nunquid revertetur ad eam ultra? Nunquid non contaminata, et polluta erit mulier illa? Tu autem fornicata es cum amatoribus tuis multis; tamen revertere ad me, dicit Dominus (Jerem. III, 1). Sed praesumentem deterret, cum dicit: Quid clamas super contritione tua? insanabilis est dolor tuus (Jerem. XXX, 12). Formidantem refovet, dicens: Ergo saltem amodo voca me: pater meus, dux 641 virginitatis meae tu es (Jerem. III, 4). Sed praesumentem deterret, dicens, Pater tuus Amorrhaeus, et mater tua Chetea (Ezech. XVI, 3). Formidantem refovet, cum ait: Revertere, adversatrix Israel, et non avertam faciem meam a vobis, quia sanctus ego sum, dicit Dominus, et non irascar in perpetuum (Jerem. III, 12). Sed praesumentem deterret, cum prophetam suum ab intercessione prohibet, dicens: Non assumas pro eis laudem et orationem, quia non exaudiam in tempore clamoris eorum ad me in tempore afflictionis, quia si steterint coram me Moyses et Samuel, non est anima mea ad populum istum (Jerem. VII, 16). [Rec. VIII.] Sancta itaque Ecclesia auditorum suorum mentem et de misericordiae benignitate sublevat, et de judicii districtione perturbat, quatenus in praedicatione sua dum bene utrumque permiscet electi ejus nec de exhibita justitia praesumant, nec de praeterita iniquitate desperent. 14. In bonis pastoribus sociantur benignitas et auctoritas, misericordia et disciplina. Sed hoc quod ait: Cum sederem quasi rex circumstante exercitu, eram tamen moerentium consolator; sciendum nobis est quod valde lectorem aedificare etiam juxta historiam potest, si perpendat quomodo bonis rectoribus permista sit et regendi auctoritas, et benignitas consolandi. Ait enim: Cumque sederem quasi rex circumstante exercitu, ecce auctoritas regiminis: Eram tamen moerentium consolator; ecce ministerium pietatis. [Vet. VI.] Disciplina enim (Dist. 45, cap. Disciplina) vel misericordia multum destituitur, si una sine altera teneatur. Sed circa subditos suos inesse rectoribus debet et juste consolans misericordia, et pie saeviens disciplina. Hinc est quod semivivi illius vulneribus, qui a Samaritano in stabulum ductus est, et vinum adhibetur et oleum (Luc. X, 33, 34), ut per vinum mordeantur vulnera, per oleum foveantur, quatenus unusquisque qui sanandis vulneribus praeest, in vino morsum districtionis adhibeat, in oleo mollitiem pietatis; per vinum mundentur putrida, per oleum sananda foveantur. Miscenda est ergo lenitas cum severitate, faciendumque quoddam, ex utraque temperamentum, ut neque multa asperitate exulcerentur subditi, neque nimia benignitate solvantur. Hoc nimirum illa tabernaculi arca significat, in qua cum tabulis virga simul, ac manna est (Hebr. IX, 4), quia cum Scripturae sacrae scientia est in boni rectoris pectore, si est virga districtionis, sit et manna dulcedinis. Hinc etiam David ait: Virga tua et baculus tuus ipsa me consolata sunt (Psal. XXII, 4). Virga etenim percutimur, et baculo sustentamur. Si ergo est districtio virgae quae feriat, sit et consolatio baculi quae sustentet. Sit itaque amor, sed non emolliens; sit vigor, sed non exasperans; sit zelus, sed non immoderate saeviens; sit pietas, sed non plus quam expediat parcens. Intueri libet in Moysi pectore misericordiam cum severitate sociatam. Videamus amantem pie, et districte saevientem. Certe cum Israeliticus populus ante Dei oculos pene inveniabilem contraxisset offensam, ita ut ejus rector audiret: Descende, peccavit populus tuus (Exod. XXXII, 7); ac si ei divina mox diceret: Qui in tali peccato lapsus est, jam meus non est, atque subjungeret: Dimitte me, ut irascatur furor meus contra eos, et deleam eos, faciamque te in gentem magnam; ille semel et iterum pro populo cui praeerat 642 obicem se ad impetum Dei irascentis opponens, ait: Aut dimitte eis hanc noxam; aut si non facis, dele me de libro tuo quem scripsisti (Ibid. XXXII, 32). Pensemus ergo quibus visceribus eumdem populum amavit, pro cujus vita de libro vitae deleri se petiit. Sed tamen iste, qui tanto ejus populi amore constringitur, contra ejus culpas pensemus quanto zelo rectitudinis accendatur. Mox enim ut petitione prima, ne delerentur, culpae veniam obtinuit, ad eumdem populum veniens, ait: Ponat vir gladium suum super femur suum. Ite et redite de porta usque ad portam per medium castrorum, et occidat unusquisque fratrem, et amicum, et proximum suum. Cecideruntque in die illo quasi viginti tria millia hominum (Ibid., XXXII, 27). Ecce qui vitam omnium etiam cum sua morte petiit, paucorum vitam gladio exstinxit. Intus arsit igne amoris, foris accensus est zelo severitatis. Tanta fuit pietas, ut se pro illis coram Domino morti offerre non dubitaret; tanta severitas, ut eos quos divinitus feriri timuerat, ipse judicii gladio feriret. Sic amavit eos quibus praefuit, ut pro eis nec sibi parceret; et tamen delinquentes sic persecutus est, quos amavit, ut eos etiam Domino parcente prosterneret. Utrobique legatus fortis, utrobique mediator admirabilis, causam populi apud Deum precibus, causam Dei apud populum gladiis allegavit. Intus amans, divinae irae supplicando obstitit; foris saeviens, culpam feriendo consumpsit. Succurrit citius omnibus, ostensa morte paucorum. Et idcirco omnipotens Deus fidelem famulum suum citius exaudivit agentem pro populo, quia vidit quid super populum acturus esset ipse pro Deo. In regimine ergo populi utrumque Moyses miscuit, ut nec disciplina deesset misericordiae, nec misericordia disciplinae. Unde hic quoque juxta utramque virtutem dicitur: Cumque sederem quasi rex circumstante exercitu, eram tamen moerentium consolator. Sedere quippe circumstante exercitu, vigor est ac disciplina regiminis; moerentium vero corda consolari, ministerium pietatis. Sed quia inter haec necesse est ut expositionis sermo ad spiritalem intelligentiam recurrat, sancta Ecclesia, ab adversariis suis extremis temporibus pressa, reminiscitur transacti jura regiminis; reminiscitur et quanta afflictis exhibuerit beneficia pietatis. Cujus videlicet disciplina et misericordia tunc a levibus irridetur. Unde et subditur:

CAPUT VI [Vet.

VII, Rec. IX]. CAP. XXX, VERS. 1. Nunc autem derident me juniores tempore. 15. Omnes haeretici Ecclesia sunt juniores. Omnes haeretici aetati universalis Ecclesiae comparati, juniores tempore congrue vocantur, quia ipsi ab ea, non autem ipsa egressa est ab illis. Unde recte quoque per Joannem dicitur: A nobis exierunt, sed non erant ex nobis; nam si fuissent ex nobis, permansissent utique nobiscum (I Joan. II, 19). Juniores ergo tempore sanctam Ecclesiam irrident, cum hi qui ab ea egressi sunt doctrinae ejus verba despiciunt, de quibus adhuc subditur: IBID. Quorum non dignabar patres ponere cum canibus gregis mei. Quis est grex sanctae Ecclesiae, nisi multitudo fidelium? Vel qui alii hujus gregis canes vocantur, 643 nisi doctores sancti, qui eorumdem fidelium custodes exstiterunt? Qui dum pro Domino suo diurnis nocturnisque vigiliis intenti clama verunt, magnos, ut ita dixerim, latratus praedicationis dederunt. De quibus eidem Ecclesiae per Psalmistam dicitur: Lingua canum tuorum ex inimicis ab ipso (Psal. LXVII, 24). Nonnulli quippe ab idolorum cultibus revocati, facti sunt praedicatores Dei. Lingua ergo canum Ecclesiae ex inimicis prodit, quia conversos gentiles Dominus etiam praedicatores facit. Unde Judaeorum tarditas, qui pro Deo loqui noluerunt, increpante propheta, reprehenditur, qui ait: Canes muti, non valentes latrare (Isai. LVI, 10). 16. Eorum duces, etiam in his quae bene gesta videnter, reprobati. Patres vero haereticorum dicimus, eos videlicet quos haeresiarchas vocamus; de quorum perversa praedicatione, id est locutionis semine, sequentes sunt populi in errore generati. Sancta ergo Ecclesia cum canibus gregis sui haereticorum patres ponere dedignatur, quia inventores errorum dijudicando respuit, eosque inter veros patres numerare contemnit. Qui etsi quosdam visi sunt a gentilitatis errore revocasse, quorumdam mores ad honesta agenda docuisse, pro eo tamen quod de Deo recta non senserunt, eos cum canibus gregis sui non ponit, quia cum rectis praedicatoribus non ponit, quia cum rectis praedicatoribus non ascribit. Liquet enim quod Arius, Photinus, Macedonius, Nestorius, Eutyches, Dioscorus, Severus, multique his similes, docendo atque suadendo conati sunt patres videri; sed errores eorum sancta universalis Ecclesia districta severitate dijudicans, eos inter custodes gregis sui non numerat, quos ejusdem gregis unitatem dissipantes damnat. De quibus voce Pauli Ephesiis dicitur: Scio quia post discessum meum ingredientur ad vos lupi graves, non parcentes gregi (Act. XX, 29). Et quia nonnunquam haeretici quanto magis in perfidiae errorem dilabuntur, tanto amplius in exteriori sese operatione custodiunt, ita ut agere prae caeteris magna videantur, sancta universalis Ecclesia cuncta eorum opera despicit, quae ex auctoritate fidei non prodire perpendit. Unde recte quoque beati Job voce subjungitur:

CAPUT VII.

VERS. 2. Quorum virtus manuum erat mihi pro nihilo: et vita ipsa putabantur indigni. 17. Quia charitatem Dei et proximi deseruerunt. Quidam haeretici miracula fecerunt. Haeretici vita indigni, quod sub nomine Christi contra Christum militent. Virtus quippe in manu est magnitudo, in operatione. Sed virtus manuum haereticorum sanctae Ecclesiae pro nihilo ducitur, quia nullius esse meriti conspicit, vera fide perdita, quidquid operantur. Charitatem quippe Dei et proximi deserunt, qui et de Deo falsa sentiunt, et a proximis jurgando dividuntur. Sed virtutem manuum sine charitate testatur praedicator egregius nil valere, qui ait: Si distribuero omnes facultates meas in cibos pauperum, et si tradidero corpus meum ut ardeam, charitatem autem non habeam, nihil mihi prodest (I Cor. XIII, 3). [Vet. VIII.] Nonnunquam vero haeretici signa quoque ac miracula faciunt, sed ut hic praemia afflictionis suae abstinentiaeque recipiant, videlicet laudes, quas quaerunt. Unde et Redemptoris voce dicitur: Multi mihi dicent in illa die: 644 Domine, Domine, nonne in nomine tuo prophetavimus, et in nomine tuo daemonia ejecimus, et in nomine tuo virtutes multas fecimus? Et tunc confitebor illis quia nunquam novi vos; discedite a me qui operamini iniquitatem. Qua nimirum sententia quid datur intelligi, nisi ut hominibus charitatis humilitas, non autem debeant virtutum signa venerari? Unde nunc sancta Ecclesia, etiam si qua fiant haereticorum miracula, despicit, quia haec sanctitatis specimen non esse cognoscit. Probatio quippe sanctitatis non est signa facere, sed unumquemque ut se diligere, de Deo autem vera , de proximo vero meliora quam de semetipso sentire. Nam quia vera virtus in amore est, non autem in ostensione miraculi, veritas demonstrat, quae ait: In hoc cognoscent omnes quia mei discipuli estis, si dilectionem habueritis ad invicem (Joan. XIII, 35). Qui enim non ait: In hoc cognoscetur quia mei discipuli estis, si signa feceritis, sed ait: Si dilectionem habueritis ad invicem, aperte indicat quia veros Dei famulos non miracula, sed sola charitas probat. Testimonium ergo superni discipulatus est donum fraternae dilectionis. Quam videlicet dilectionem, quia omnes haeretici habere refugiunt, dum ab universalis Ecclesiae unitate dividuntur, jure de eis dicitur: Quorum virtus manuum erat mihi pro nihilo. Et quia ad eadem signa quae exhibent nulla humilitate concordant, recte subditur: Et vita ipsa putabantur indigni. Vel certe omnes haereticos sancta Ecclesia vita ipsa fatetur indignos, quia nimirum sub nomine Christi militant contra nomen Christi. De quibus adhuc subditur:

CAPUT VIII [Rec. X].

VERS. 3. Egestate et fame steriles. 18. Curiose divina scrutantes, egestate et sterilitate laborant. Omnes haeretici, dum in sacro eloquio plus secreta Dei student perscrutari quam capiunt, fame sua steriles fiunt. Neque enim ea quaerunt ex quibus semetipsos ad humilitatem erudiant, mores in tranquillitate disponant, patientiam servent, longanimitatem exhibeant; sed ea solummodo quae eos doctos atque loquaces demonstrent, illa scire appetunt ex quibus singulariter eruditi videantur. Plerumque enim audacter de natura divinitatis tractant, cum semetipsos miseri nesciant. Egestate ergo ac fame sua steriles fiunt, quia ea perscrutari desiderant, ex quibus bonae vitae germina non producant. Ultra se quippe sunt quae perscrutantur, dumque ad hoc tendunt quod comprehendere nequeunt, ea cognoscere negligunt ex quibus erudiri potuerant. Quam bene eorum audaciam praedicator egregius refrenat, dicens: Non plus sapere quam oportet sapere, sed sapere ad sobrietatem (Rom. XII, 3). Hinc Salomon ait: Prudentiae tuae pone modum (Prov. XXIII, 4). Hinc rursum dicit: Mel invenisti, comede quod sufficit tibi, ne forte saturatus evomas illud (Prov. XXV, 16). Dulcedinem quippe spiritalis intelligentiae qui ultra quam capit comedere appetit, etiam quod comederat evomit, quia dum summa intelligere ultra vires quaerit, etiam quae bene intellexerat amittit. Hinc rursum dicit: Sicut qui mel multum comedit, non est ei bonum, sic qui 645 perscrutator est majestatis, opprimetur a gloria (Ibid., 27). Gloria quippe invisibilis conditoris, quae moderate inquisita nos erigit, ultra vires perscrutata premit. Itaque haeretici, quia de sublimi intelligentia quanto amplius repleri ambiunt, tanto amplius inanescunt, bene de eis dicitur: Egestate et fame steriles. Immoderatis namque ausibus cognitionis supernae scientiam quo plus appetunt, plus amittunt. [Vet. IX.] 19. Humiles coelestia intelligunt, aut non intellecta venerantur. At contra, hi qui in sancta Ecclesia veraciter sunt humiles, et veraciter docti, norunt de secretis coelestibus et quaedam considerata intelligere, et quaedam non intellecta venerari, ut et quae intelligunt veneranter teneant, et quae necdum intelligunt humiliter exspectent. Unde nobis per Moysen dicitur: Ut comedentes agnum, quidquid de eo reliquum fuerit igni comburamus (Exod. XII, 10). Agnum quippe comedimus, cum multa dominicae humanitatis intelligendo recondimus in ventrem mentis. Ex quo quaedam nobis remanent, quae comedi nequeunt, quia multa adhuc de illo restant, quae intelligi nequaquam possunt. Quae tamen igne comburenda sunt, quia ea quae capere de illo non possumus, humiliter sancto Spiritui reservamus. Quae plerumque humilitas ea etiam electorum sensibus aperit, quae ad intelligendum impossibilia esse videbantur. Nam perversae haereticorum mentes dum sibi superbe intellectum tribuunt, quasi certas dare sententias etiam de incognitis praesumunt. Unde fit ut ipsa eos elatio, quae intus apud semetipsos elevat, a veritate foras repellat, vixque in dictis Dei exteriora capiant, qui se secreta spiritalia penetrasse singulariter putabant. Unde hic quoque subditur:

CAPUT IX [Rec. XI].

VERS. 3, 4. Qui rodebant in solitudine, squalentes calamitate et miseria; et mandebant herbas, et arborum cortices. 20. Haeretici non medullam Scripturae sacrae comedunt, sed corticem rodunt. Rodi solet quod comedi non potest. Haeretici autem quia Scripturam sacram intelligere sua virtute moliuntur, eam procul dubio apprehendere nequaquam possunt; quam dum non intelligunt, quasi non edunt. Et quia per supernam gratiam non adjuti hanc comedere nequeunt, quasi quibusdam illam nisibus rodunt. Exterius quippe illam contrectant, cum quidem conantur, sed non ad ejus interiora perveniunt. Qui quia ab universalis Ecclesiae societate disjuncti sunt, non quolibet rodere, sed in solitudine memorantur. Ad quam nimirum solitudinem, quia praedicatores falsi sequaces suos traherent, longe ante Veritas praemonuit, dicens: Si dixerint vobis: Ecce in deserto est, nolite exire (Matth. XXIV, 26). Qui recte perhibentur calamitate et miseria squalidi, quia et morum sunt pernicie, et sensuum pravitate despecti. Qui herbas quoque et arborum cortices mandunt, quia elationis suae obice repulsi, in sacro eloquio magna et intima percipere nequeunt, sed vix in illo quaedam tenera et exteriora cognoscunt. Per herbas quippe dicta planiora, per arborum cortices Patrum eloquia exteriora signantur. Qui ergo ea scire appetunt ex quibus docti nequaquam sint, sed esse videantur, dum in sacris voluminibus vim charitatis erga Deum ac proximum medullitus non exquirunt, quasi ex herba et cortice pascuntur, quia vel ima, 646 vel exteriora sunt, quae mentes superbientium nutriunt. Vel certe herbas mandere est de Scriptura sacra minima praecepta servare, majora contemnere. Quos bene Veritas increpat, dicens: Vae vobis, Scribae et Pharisaei hypocritae, qui decimatis mentam, et anethum, et cuminum, et reliquistis quae graviora sunt legis (Matth. XXIII, 23). Qui arborum quoque cortices mandunt, quia sunt nonnulli qui in sacris voluminibus solam litterae superficiem venerantur, nec quidquam de spiritali intellectu custodiunt, cum nihil in verbis Dei amplius nisi hoc quod exterius audierint esse suspicantur. Quos tamen in cunctis erroribus suis inanis gloriae appetitus possidet, eosque honoris ambitus captivos tenet, et plerumque per ipsa quae loquuntur nihil aliud quam terrena lucra appetunt. De quibus per Paulum dicitur: Hujusmodi enim Christo Domino non serviunt, sed suo ventri (Rom. XVI, 18). Unde recte quoque subjungitur:

CAPUT X [Rec.

XII] VERS. 4. Et radix juniperorum erat cibus eorum. 21. Sola temporalia lucra quaerunt. Arbor namque juniperi pro foliis punctiones habet. Sic quippe sunt hirsuta quae profert, ut spinis similia contrectantem pungere valeant. Spina vero est omne peccatum, quia dum trahit ad delectationem, quasi pungendo lacerat mentem. Unde justi voce et poenitentis dicitur:

Conversus sum in aerumna mea dum confringitur spina (Psal. XXXI, 4), quia scilicet mens ad lamentum vertitur, ut peccati punctio poenitendo frangatur. In translatione vero alia non confringi, sed configi spina perhibetur, quod videlicet ab eodem sensu non dissonat, quia poenitentis animus ad luctum ducitur, dum perpetrata culpa in memoria fixa retinetur [Vet. X]. Quid ergo per radicem juniperi nisi avaritia designatur, ex qua peccatorum omnium spinae producuntur? De qua per Paulum dicitur: Radix omnium malorum est cupiditas (I Tim. VI, 10). Ipsa quippe latenter oritur in mente, sed punctiones peccatorum omnium patenter producit in opere. Quas videlicet punctiones ab hac radice surgentes, statim praedicator egregius insinuat, cum subdit: Quam quidam appetentes erraverunt a fide, et inseruerunt se doloribus multis (Ibid., 10). Qui enim multos dolores dixit, quasi nascentes innotuit ex hac radice punctiones. In juniperis ergo peccata, in radice vero juniperorum quid aliud quam avaritiam, id est, materiam intelligimus peccatorum? Quia igitur plerumque haeretici sola in verbis suis exteriora lucra sectantur, nec ignorant quia perversa astruunt, sed erroris praedicamenta non deserunt, dum sumptus percipere quasi doctorum volunt, bene de eis sancti viri nunc voce dicitur: Et radix juniperorum erat cibus eorum, quia dum totis mentis suae sensibus avaritiam cogitant, quasi eo alimento vescuntur, de quo nasci procul dubio peccatorum sequentium punctiones solent. Qui si quando in sacro eloquio quaedam quasi prudenter inveniunt, quae dum non intelligunt, pro suis esse assertionibus suspicantur, mox miseris auditoribus suis, quorum non animas, sed substantias appetunt, haec vociferantes apsergunt. Unde congrue subinfertur:

CAPUT XI [Rec. XIII].

VERS. 5. Qui de convallibus ista rapientes, cum singula reperissent, ad ea cum clamore currebant. 22. Obscuras Scripturae sacrae Patrumque sententias ad se detorquent et trahunt. De convallibus illa rapiunt, quia haec de humilibus dictis Patrum superbo spiritu colligunt. 647 Quae dum pro suis se partibus invenisse gloriantur, ad ea cum clamoribus currunt, quia videlicet omne quod sentiunt appetitu laudis ad aures hominum diffamare conantur. Sequitur:

CAPUT XII VERS.

6. In desertis habitabant torrentium, et in cavernis terrae, vel super glaream. 23. Haeretici latebris et instabilitate sunt insignes. Torrentes dicimus rivos qui aquis hiemalibus colliguntur, qui certis etiam temporibus arescunt. Jure itaque inventores perversorum dogmatum torrentes vocantur, quia a calore charitatis frigidi, quasi in torpore temporis hiemalis excrescunt, quia non perpetua plenitudine profluunt, sed Catholicorum allegationibus quasi aestivis solibus exsiccantur. Et quidem inventores perversorum dogmatum contra sanctam Ecclesiam exorti, fervore jam veritatis exstincti sunt, sed tamen eorum discipuli ea quae illi docuerunt tenere ac defendere non desistunt. Hi ergo qui illorum sequuntur errores, in desertis torrentium habitant, id est in eorum praedicatione confidunt, quorum eloquia Catholicorum jam responsione et ratiocinatione siccata sunt. [Vet. XI.] Quid vero aliud cavernas terrae quam occultas haereticorum praedicationes accipimus? Sic enim haeretici inter se clandestinis conventiculis coeunt, ut errori suo reverentiam, quam ex ratione non valent, praebeant ex occultatione, et infirmis animabus pravitatis sermo tanto reverendus appareat, quanto secretus. Unde apud Salomonem mulier ex typo haereseos suadet dicens: Aquae furtivae dulciores sunt, et panis absconditus suavior (Prov. IX, 17). Quae occulta scilicet praedicamenta detestatur Veritas, dicens: Si quis vobis dixerit: Ecce hic est Christus, aut ecce illic, nolite credere. Et rursum: Si dixerint vobis: Ecce in deserto est, nolite exire: ecce in penetralibus, nolite credere. Sicut enim fulgur exit ab Oriente, et paret usque in Occidentem, ita erit et adventus Filii hominis (Matth. XXIV, 23, 26). Hoc itaque illic in penetralibus, quod hic dicitur in cavernis. In cavernis ergo haeretici habitant, quia plerumque errorem suum secretis praedicationibus occultant, ut quo se doctioribus prudentioribusque non indicant, eo ad se vehementius imperitos trahant. Unde bene etiam subinfertur: Vel super glaream. Glaream quippe illos minutissimos lapides dicimus quos aqua fluvialis trahit. Doctores igitur perversorum dogmatum super glaream habitant, quia illas hominum mentes trahunt, quae nulla gravitatis stabilitate solidantur, quas velut de loco semper ad locum flumina errorum ducunt. Unde et praedicator egregius, cum auditores suos non temporaliter duci, sed forti cuperet gravitate solidari, admonuit dicens: Ut jam non simus parvuli fluctuantes, nec circumferamur omni vento doctrinae (Ephes. IV, 14). Sancta itaque Ecclesia ab adversariis ad modicum depressa, cum sibi audaces errantium mentes insultare conspexerit; quae eorum conversatio fuerit, ad memoriam reducit, dicens: In desertis habitabant torrentium, et in cavernis terrae, vel super glaream. Quia enim eorum perversa praedicatio, amisso igne charitatis, ex frigore mentis convaluit, profecto in torrentium desertis habitavit. Quia vero aperta et libera non fuit, in cavernis latuit. Quia autem plebem non fixam, sed mobilem tenuit, non super petram, 648 sed super glaream mansit; de quibus adhuc subditur:

CAPUT XIII [Rec. XIV].

VERS. 7. Qui inter hujuscemodi laetabantur, et esse sub sentibus delicias computabant. 24. In rebus pessimis exsultant et delectantur. Quid nomine sentium nisi eas quas jam supra diximus (Num. 21 hujus lib.) punctiones peccatorum intelligimus? Quia autem perversae mentes gaudent in iniquitatibus, quas flere debuerunt, omnes haeretici tanto se inani laetitia extollunt, quanto magis ad pejora convalescunt; atque esse sub sentibus delicias deputant, quia inde perversam mentem ad gaudium sublevant, unde spinas peccatorum portant. Nam si quando ad errorem suum valuerint quempiam trahere, sese per laetitiam jactant; atque unde sibi peccata quotidie, etiam alios perdendo, congregant, inde se esse quasi duces ad justitiam exsultant. Bene ergo dicitur: Qui inter hujuscemodi laetabantur, et esse sub sentibus delicias computabant. Trahunt enim quos valent ad perditionem suam, et sub peccatis esse, vel culpis culpas addere credunt se virtutum opulentiam cumulare.

CAPUT XIV [Rec. XV].

VERS. 8. Filii stultorum et ignobilium, et in terra penitus non parentes. 25. Parentes haereticorum stulti et ignobiles. Eorum videlicet filii, qui fuerunt errorum magistri. Filii igitur dicuntur, non de eorum semine, sed de imitatione generati, qui docendo perversa, stulti fuerunt per ignorantiam; vivendo nequiter, ignobiles per actionem. Qui Redemptori nostro nulla sapientiae, nulla vitae cognatione conjuncti sunt. De quo Salomonis voce in laude sanctae Ecclesiae dicitur: Nobilis in portis vir ejus (Prov. XXXI, 23). Hi itaque quia perversa errantium exempla secuti sunt, filii stultorum et ignobilium esse memorantur. Recte autem subjungitur: Et in terra penitus non parentes, quia dum hic videri aliquid appetunt, nimirum a terra viventium exsortes fiunt. 26. Eadem de carnalibus dici possunt quae de haereticis. Sed hoc quod in haereticorum typo diximus, omnino nil obstat si etiam de perversis atque carnalibus, quamvis in recta fide positis, sentiamus. Neque enim sancta electorum Ecclesia solos sibi adversarios deputat qui ab ejus fide positi extra dissentiunt, sed eos quoque qui vitam illius male vivendo interius premunt. Contempletur igitur aerumna irruentis adversitatis afflicta, quomodo prosperitatis suae tempore iniquorum et intra se viventium pravitate gravata sit. Contempletur quod exigentibus meritis quorumdam, non injuste in illa vita turbata sit omnium, et dicat: Qui rodebant in solitudine, squalentes calamitate et miseria. Sicut in prima hujus operis parte praefatus sum, per virtutem contemplationis nonnunquam solet intelligi solitudo mentis. Sed hoc in loco cum solitudo per objurgationem dicitur, quid aliud quam boni destitutio demonstratur? Unde et sub Judaeae typo Jeremias peccatoris animam deplorat, dicens: Quomodo sedet sola civitas plena populo (Thren. I, 1)? Sed cum per beatum Job de pravis dicitur: Rodebant in solitudine, libet intueri hoc etiam quod per Psalmistam dictum est: Inimici ejus terram lingent (Psal. LXXI, 9). 649 27. [Vet. XII]. Alii adulatione, alii aperta vi avaritiae student. Duo quippe sunt genera hominum ambitioni suae servientium: unum videlicet quod semper ad avaritiam blandimentis utitur linguae; aliud vero quod aperta vi intendit rapinae. Nam rodimus, cum aliquid exterius forti adnisu atterimus. Lambitur enim quando hoc quod edi facile non potest, impressa linguae lenitate gustatur. Omnes igitur etiam sub specie fidei prave viventes, qui aliena appetunt, sed ea quae appetunt rapere nequaquam possunt, blandis autem sermonibus et quasi mollitie dulcedinis concupita abstrahere conantur, quid aliud quam terram lingunt? quia terrena quaeque quae virtute nequeunt auferre, mollitie linguae moliuntur. Qui vero in hoc mundo aliqua potestate suffulti sunt, et concupiscentes aliena, blandiri quidem ex fraude despiciunt, quia etiam injusto robore possunt implere quod volunt, hi hoc quod appetunt non lambunt, sed rodunt, quoniam propinquorum vitam fortitudine virium velut adnisu dentium demoliuntur. Conspiciat itaque sancta Ecclesia veras divitias aeternae patriae; conspiciat frequentiam supernorum civium; conspiciat in electis suis cultum mentis, et innumerabilium bona virtutum, atque ab eis ad pravorum vitam omni bono destitutam, mentis oculum revocet; et ex illorum comparatione videat qualiter ista cunctis virtutibus sit vacua, quia superna deseruit, et infima concupivit. Videat quomodo plerumque id quod appetit, si fortasse praevalet, etiam violenter rapit. Videat tales quasi intra se positos diu tolerasse, atque ex eorum culpis usque ad bonorum quoque pericula ac detrimenta pervenisse, et dicat: Qui rodebant in solitudine. Ac si aperte conqueratur, dicens: Aliena etiam violenter rapiendo non roderent, nisi prius ipsi in interioribus suis soli ac vacui a virtutum cultura remanerent. Bene autem eorum qualitatem explicat, dicens: Squalentes calamitate et miseria. Aegra namque caro si studiose curari negligitur, squalore desuper ducto in infirmitate deterius gravatur: et dum calamitati aegritudinis negligentiae miseria additur, gravior molestia oborto squalore toleratur. 28. Naturae necessitatibus plus aequo servientes, ejus infirmitates augemus. Natura igitur humana bene condita, sed ad infirmitatem vitio propriae voluntatis lapsa, in calamitatem cecidit, quia pressa innumeris necessitatibus, nihil in hac vita nisi unde affligeretur invenit. Sed cum eisdem naturae nostrae necessitatibus plerumque plus quam expedit deservimus, mentisque curam negligimus, ex miseria negligentiae infirmitati nostrae addimus squalorem culpae. Necessitates namque naturales hoc habere valde periculosum solent, quod saepe in eis minime discernitur quid circa illas per utilitatis studium et quid per voluptatis vitium agatur. Crebro enim occasione seductionis inventa, dum necessitati debita reddimus, voluptatis vitio deservimus, et infirmitatis velamine ante discretionis oculos excusatio nostra se palliat, ac quasi sub patrocinio explendae utilitatis occultat. Infirmitatem vero naturae nostrae per negligentiam relaxare, nihil est aliud quam calamitati miseriam addere, ac vitiorum squalorem ex eadem miseria multiplicare. Unde sancti viri in omne quod agunt studiosissima intentione discernunt, 650 ne quid plus ab eis naturae suae infirmitas, quam debetur exigat, ne sub necessitatis tegmine in eis vitium voluptatis excrescat. Aliud enim ex infirmitate, aliud ex tentationis suggestione sustinent; et quasi quidam rectissimi arbitri inter necessitatem voluptatemque constituti, hanc consolando sublevant, illam premendo frenant. Unde fit ut et si infirmitatis suae calamitatem tolerent, tamen ad squalorem miseriae per negligentiam non descendant. Hoc ipsum enim esse in calamitate, est necessitates naturae ex carnis adhuc corruptibilis infirmitate sustinere. Quas videlicet necessitates cupiebat evadere, qui dicebat: De necessitatibus meis eripe me (Psal. XXIV, 17). Sciebat enim plerumque voluptatum culpas ex necessitatum occasione prorumpere; et ne quid sponte illicitum admitteret, hoc ipsum satagebat evelli, quod nolens ex radice tolerabat. 29. Carnales, dum necessitati obsequi videntur, voluptati serviunt. Utinam pravis mors sua sola sufficeret. At contra pravi gaudent in eis corruptionis suae necessitatibus, quia nimirum eas ad usum voluptatum retorquent. Cum enim reficiendis cibo corporibus naturae serviunt, per delectationem gulae in voluptatis ingluvie distenduntur. Cum tegendis membris vestimenta quaerunt, non solum quae tegant, sed etiam quae extollant expetunt; et contra torporem frigoris, non solum quae per pinguedinem muniant, sed etiam quae per mollitiem delectent; non solum quae per mollitiem tactum mulceant, sed etiam quae per colorem oculos seducant. Necessitatis igitur causam in usum voluptatis vertere, quid est aliud quam calamitati suae squalorem miseriae sociare? Pressa itaque tempore adversitatis Ecclesia, reminiscatur eorum ex quorum merito talia sustinet, et dicat: Qui rodebant in solitudine, squalentes calamitate et miseria. Calamitate scilicet non squalerent, si insitis necessitatibus voluptatum miseriam non superadderent. Quas videlicet necessitates ex parentis primi culpa meruimus. Hi vero qui calamitati suae miseriam adjungunt, ex cruciatu poenae ad augmenta prorumpunt culpae. Sed utinam tales cum ad melius permutari despiciunt, ita perversa agerent, ut non ea etiam aliis propinarent. Utinam illis mors sua sola sufficeret, et non virulentis persuasionibus alienam etiam vitam necarent. Invident enim alios esse quod non sunt, dolent alios adipisci quod perdunt. Nam si qua forte in aliorum actibus exoriri bona conspiciunt, mox ea manu pestiferae exprobrationis evellunt. Unde et sequitur [Vet. XIII]: Et mandebant herbas, et arborum cortices. 30. Incipientes et in bono proficientes pervertere conantur. Quid enim per herbas nisi tenera ac terrae proxima bene inchoantium vita, et quid per arborum cortices nisi exteriora opera eorum qui jam sublimia appetunt designantur? Pravi namque cum recta incipientes aspiciunt, aut irridendo, aut quasi consulendo contradicunt. Cum vero jam quosdam pensant ad summa proficere, quia eorum profectus funditus dissipare nequeunt, a quibusdam illos suis operibus divertunt. Herbas itaque eis et arborum cortices mandere, est vel studia bene inchoantium, vel operationes quorumdam jam more arborum ad superiora tendentium pestiferis persuasionibus quasi quibusdam malitiae suae dentibus 651 dissipare. Herbas mandunt reprobi cum infirmorum initia irridendo consumunt. Arborum quoque cortices mandunt cum manu perversi consilii a vita recte crescentium tegmen bonorum operum subtrahunt. Hos autem in quibusdam actibus velut arbores exspoliant; illos vero velut herbas, quia despicientes trahunt, quasi quae calcant comedunt. Quorumdam jam fortitudinem in alta surgentem ex parte demoliuntur; quorumdam vero teneritudinem et adhuc in imis positam penitus conterunt. Dicat igitur: Mandebant herbas, et arborum cortices, quia pravis irrisionibus in nonnullis exteriora opera, in nonnullis autem per spem virentia corda dissipabant. 31. Aliqui sola virtutis specie, quasi cortice vescuntur. Vel certe herbas mandere est, levia quaedam ac tenera de antiquis patribus imitari. Arborum vero cortices edere est eorum opera superficie tenus agere, sed intentionem rectam in eisdem operibus non tenere. Sunt enim nonnulli, qui dum praesentis mundi gloriam ejusdem mundi actionibus adipisci non possunt, speciem sanctitatis appetunt, habitum venerationis sumunt, imitatores antiquorum patrum videri concupiscunt, et quaedam quidem parva ac levia peragunt, sed eorum fortia, et quae ex solius charitatis radice prodeunt, imitari contemnunt. Hi videlicet herbas edunt, quia magna negligunt, et vilibus satiantur. Plerumque tamen etiam quaedam quasi robustiora opera exercent, sed intentionem rectam in eisdem operibus non tenent. Quibus profecto arborum cortices mandere est exteriores electorum actus assumere, et intentionem bonam in bonis actibus non habere. Dum enim pro humana laude recta opera exquirunt, sed imitari cor recte operantium negligunt, ex solis arborum corticibus replentur. Toto namque desiderio praesentis vitae gloriam, vel abundantiam quaerunt. Unde et recte subjungitur: Et radix juniperorum erat cibus eorum. 32. Prava actio quae delectat in culpa, pungit in poena. Intus enim quamvis per fidem positi, dum plerumque avaritiae cogitationibus serviunt, quasi illud comedunt, unde in extremo vitae suppliciorum aspera proferuntur. Qui dum frugem divini eloquii non concupiscunt, sed ad rerum temporalium ambitum serviunt, nequaquam pane tritici, sed radice juniperi satiantur. Ipsa quippe eos ab imis atque infimis oborta occupant, quae illos more juniperi postmodum ex duritia retributionum velut ex asperitate foliorum pungant. Contemnentes namque Deum hic, minime sentiunt quantum sit mali quod agunt. Adhuc enim juniperi radicem comedunt, sed hujus radicis quam sint rami asperi non attendunt, quia nimirum prava actio modo quasi ex radice delectat in culpa, sed postmodum quasi ex ramis pungit in poena. Ubi et bene subjungitur: Qui de convallibus ista rapientes, cum singula reperissent, ad ea cum clamore currebant. 33. In praesentis vitae convalle, magno clamore pro vili stipe saepe litigatur. In comparatione videlicet supernorum, omnis praesens vita convallis est. Hi autem quia sublimia montium, id est fortia acta sanctorum contemplari nesciunt, semper in oblectatione infima quasi in convallibus conversantur et dum quodlibet lucrum vel parvi stipendii inveniunt, cum 652 clamore currunt, quia hoc abstrahere etiam jurgando moliuntur. In convalle enim repertis singulis cum clamore currere, est subortis causarum occasionibus etiam pro parva stipe litigare. Plerumque autem quem sanctum bona actio ostentat, oborta terreni commodi occasio examinat. Videas namque nonnullos jam sublimia agere, jam in abstinentiae, jam in doctrinae opere patrum praecedentium exempla sectari; sed cum repente praesentis vitae lucrum quasi fructum convallis invenerint, ad hoc cum clamore currunt, quia dirupta ad illud superductae sanctitatis tranquillitate prosiliunt. [Vet. XIV]. 34. Multi virtutis praemium, non virtutem quaerunt. Possunt quoque per herbas atque arborum cortices non solum; ut praedictum est, bonorum opera, sed in hac vita consolationes ac prosperitates intelligi. Saepe enim omnipotens Deus electos suos cum donis interioribus ditat, exterioribus etiam honoribus sublevat. Cumque eos praeferendo caeteris honorabiles reddit, latius imitabiles ostendit; et nonnunquam pravi eorum quidem vitam despiciunt, sed felicitatem in hoc mundo assequi concupiscunt. Quia igitur blandimenta hic transitoriae consolationis quaerunt, herbas comedunt, quia in cogitationibus suis exteriorem eorum gloriam meditantur, arborum cortices mandunt. Et quoniam in his omnibus soli avaritiae tota intentione deserviunt, radice juniperi replentur. Quae cuncta de convallibus rapiunt, quia ex amore hujus infimae et corruptibilis vitae immensis cupiditatibus inardescunt. Et cum singula reperiunt, ad ea cum clamoribus currunt, quia videlicet sanctorum patrum, quorum merita adipisci non quaerunt, loca atque regimina apprehendere satagunt; et cum tranquille nequeunt haec plerumque assequi, etiam dirupta concordiae pace moliuntur. 35. Quae justi despiciunt, ea maxime concupiscunt. Qui pro eo quod longe a patrum praecedentium actione disjuncti sunt, recte subjungitur: In desertis habitabant torrentium, et in cavernis terrae, vel super glaream. In bona etenim parte recte torrentes, sanctos praedicatores accipimus, qui dum in praesenti vita divinis nobis eloquiis influunt, aquarum multitudine quasi in hieme colliguntur. Qui et aestivo sole adveniente se subtrahunt, quia cum aeternae patriae lux emicuerit, praedicare cessabunt. Horum torrentium deserta sunt vitae temporalis commoda. Ea namque deserunt, et ad lucra se coelestia adipiscenda convertunt. Cuncta autem haec torrens ille reliquerat, qui dicebat: Propter quem omnia detrimentum feci, et arbitror ut stercora (Phil. III, 8). Sed quia pravorum mentes ea in hac vita adipisci appetunt, quae despicientes justi derelinquunt, in desertis torrentium habitare referuntur.

Illa enim quae sanctis indigna sunt, ipsi percipere pro magno concupiscunt. Cavernae autem terrae sunt cogitationes pravae, in quibus se ab humanis oculis abscondunt. Pravi quippe ut sunt ab hominibus videri refugiunt, dumque aliud quam sunt simulant, sese in conscientiae suae latibulis quasi in terrae cavernis occultant. Qui cuncta haec non agerent, nisi de aeterna et solida vita desperarent, nisi in hoc incerto temporalitatis animum figerent. Unde bene subditur: Vel super glaream. 653 36. Fluxis inhaerentes, ad ima devolvuntur. Glarea namque est vita praesens, quae indesinenter ad terminum suum ipso defectu mutabilitatis, quasi impulsu fluminis ducitur. Super glaream itaque habitare, et fluxui vitae praesentis inhaerere, et ibi intentionem ponere, ubi gressum nequeat fixe stando solidare. Est aliud in glarea quod nequaquam debeat tacendo praeteriri, quia cum pes in ejus superficie ponitur, ipsa ejus volubilitate labitur, atque ad ima devolvitur. Cui videlicet rei in nullo discrepat vita pravorum, quia cum pro amore mundi aliqua student licita atque honesta agere, quasi planum in superficie pedem ponunt; sed repente pes ad ima labitur, quia eorum actio dum plura semper appetit, usque ad iniqua et illicita descendit. Cum ergo sancta Ecclesia hujus temporis contraria tolerat, ad vitam carnalium, quos adversarios sibi etiam in prosperis sustinuit, per memoriam recurrat, et quorum meritis haec patiatur agnoscat, dicens: In desertis habitabant torrentium, et in cavernis terrae, vel super glaream. Quia enim patrum doctrina destituti sunt, in desertis torrentium, quia in occultis se cogitationibus tegunt, in cavernis terrae, quia vero in praesentis saeculi mobilitate intentionem suam figere appetunt, super glaream habitare referuntur. Sed utinam tales, quia peccata nolunt impugnare tentantia, flendo tergerent vel commissa! utinam mala sua saltem perpetrata cognoscerent, atque sterili ficulneae cophinum stercoris, id est infructuosae menti pinguedinem lamentationis admoverent! [Vet. XV]. 37. Malum quod agimus oculo mentis obicem ponit. Sed habet hoc plerumque humanus animus proprium, quod mox ut in culpam labitur, a sui adhuc longius cognitione separetur. Hoc ipsum namque malum quod agit menti se obicem ante oculum rationis interserit. Unde fit ut anima prius voluntariis tenebris obsessa postmodum bonum jam nec quod quaerat agnoscat. Quanto enim magis malis adhaeret, tanto minus intelligit bona quae perdit. Lux quippe veritatis quia subtiliter reproborum culpas examinat, quo habita negligitur, eo permittit districtius judicans, ut nec amissa requiratur; et cum ab actu repellitur, fugit a sensu, ut cujus quasi facies in opere contemnitur, ejus per recordationem jam nec terga videantur. Hinc itaque est quod reprobi subjecti flendis sceleribus gaudent, de quibus per Salomonem dicitur: Qui laetantur cum malefecerint, et exsultant in rebus pessimis (Prov. II, 14). Hinc est quod lacrymarum causas tripudiantes peragunt; hinc est quod mortis suae negotium ridentes exsequuntur. Unde hic quoque apte subjungitur:

CAPUT XV [Rec. XVI].

VERS. 7. Qui inter hujuscemodi laetabantur, et esse sub sentibus delicias computabant. 38. In transitoriis laetantes, gravibus curis affliguntur. Inter hujuscemodi laetantur, quia nimirum attendunt transitoria quae percipiunt, et intueri negligunt permanentia bona quae perdunt. Cumque amore temporalium flagrant, veram laetitiam volentes ignorant. Quam si studiose cognoscere quaererent, quam flenda sint gaudia quae appetunt viderent. Sed dum meliora scire contemnunt, sola sibi velut summa eligunt, quae visibiliter oculis fugaci seductione blandiuntur. Visibilia scilicet sequentes cor figunt; et tanto extrinsecus 654 gaudent, quanto recordationem sui intrinsecus non habent. Miscentur tamen eorum gaudiis plerumque tribulationes, atque ex rebus ipsis ex quibus superbiunt flagellantur. Neque enim sine gravibus curarum molestiis possunt temporalia quae appetunt, vel non habita quaerere, vel quaesita servare, inter aequales praestantiorem gloriam appetere, a minoribus reverentiam plus quam oportet exigere, et minus quam debent eamdem majoribus exhibere; plerumque potentiam per impotentiam ostendere; semper prava agere, et tamen ne opinionem pravitatis habeant, formidolose custodire. Haec profecto omnia miseros pungunt, sed easdem punctiones ipso rerum temporalium victi amore non sentiunt. Unde et recte nunc dicitur: Et esse sub sentibus delicias computabant, quia peccatorum delectationibus pressi, ex affectu vitae praesentis quam sint aspera quae patiuntur ignorant. 39. Delicias aestimant manere sub sentibus. Laetantur itaque, sed sub sentibus, quia rebus quidem temporalibus gaudent, sed tamen dum dispensare sine tribulatione eadem temporalia non valent, ea cura punguntur miseri qua premuntur. Manent sub sentibus, et hoc ipsum delicias aestimant, quia et dura quidem ex praesentis vitae amore tolerant, et tamen affectu nimiae cupiditatis obligati, laborem ejusdem tolerantiae voluptatem putant. Unde recte Jeremias totius in se humanae conversationis speciem sumens, per lamentum queritur, dicens: Inebriavit me absynthio (Thren. III, 15). Ut enim in superiori jam parte praediximus (Lib. VII, n. 25), ebrius quisque quod patitur nescit. Qui vero absynthio debriatur, et hoc quod sumpsit amarum est, et tamen non intelligit eamdem amaritudinem qua repletur. Humanum igitur genus recto Dei judicio in voluptatibus suis sibi dimissum, atque per easdem voluptates spontaneis tribulationibus traditum, absynthio est ebrium, quia et amara sunt quae pro hujus vitae amore tolerat, et tamen eamdem amaritudinem caecitate cupiditatis quasi insensibilitate ebrietatis ignorat. Mundi enim gloriam sitiens, dum multas pro ea tribulationes reperit, amarum est quod bibit. Sed quia hoc nimis inhianter sumpsit, ejusdem amaritudinis malum discernere jam prae ipsa ebrietate non sufficit. [Vet. XVI.] Amant enim perversi homines pro hujus mundi gloria etiam tribulationes, cunctisque pro ea sudoribus libenter serviunt, et gravium laborum jugo devotissime colla submittunt. Quod bene sub Ephraïm specie Osee prophetante describitur, qui ait: Ephraim vitula docta diligere trituram (Osee X, 11). Vitula enim triturae laboribus assueta, relaxata plerumque ad eumdem laboris usum etiam non compulsa revertitur. Ita pravorum mens hujus mundi servitiis dedita, et rerum temporalium fatigationibus assueta, etiamsi sibi libere vacare liceat, subesse tamen terrenis laboribus festinat, et usum miserae conversationis trituram laboris quaerit, ut a jugo mundanae servitutis cessare non libeat, etiam si liceat. Quod videlicet jugum Dominus a discipulorum cervice solvebat, cum dixit: Attendite vobis, ne forte graventur corda vestra in crapula et ebrietate (Luc. XXI, 34), illico adjunxit: Et in curis hujus vitae; et superveniat in vos repentina dies illa. Et rursus: Venite ad 655 me omnes qui laboratis et onerati estis, et ego reficiam vos. Tollite jugum meum super vos, et discite a me, quia mitis sum et humilis corde (Matth. XI, 28). Quid est enim Domino mitem se in magisterio atque humilem dicere, nisi relictis exercendae elationis difficultatibus plana quaedam bene vivendi itinera demonstrare? Sed quia pravorum mentes plus per aspera elationis quam per blanda humilitatis ac mansuetudinis delectantur, esse sub sentibus delicias deputant. Dura enim prae amore saeculi quasi quaedam mollia ac delectabilia ferre parati sunt, dum in hac vita rerum culmina apprehendere conantur. 40. Asperitate laboris magis, quam quietis dulcedine, delectantur. Cessationem Dominus a mundi laboribus imperat, sanctae quietis dulcedinem persuadet; et tamen vaesana iniquorum mens plus se assequi aspera carnaliter quam tenere blanda spiritualiter gaudet, plus acerbitate fatigationis quam quietis dulcedine pascitur. Quod aperte in semetipso nobis Israeliticus populus ostendit (Exod. XVI, 3), qui dum refectionem mannae desuper perciperet, ab Aegypto ollas carnium, pepones, porros, cepasque concupivit. Quid enim signatur in manna, nisi esca gratiae, suave sapiens, ad refectionem interioris vitae bene vacantibus desuper data? Et quid per ollas carnium, nisi carnalia opera, vix tribulationum laboribus quasi ignibus excoquenda? Quid per pepones, nisi terrenae dulcedines? Quid per porros ac cepas exprimitur, quae plerumque qui comedunt, lacrymas emittunt, nisi difficultas vitae praesentis, quae a dilectoribus suis et non sine luctu agitur, et tamen cum lacrymis amatur? Manna igitur deserentes, cum peponibus ac carnibus porros cepasque quaesierunt, quia videlicet perversae mentes dulcia per gratiam quietis dona despiciunt, et pro carnalibus voluptatibus laboriosa hujus vitae itinera, etiam lacrymis plena, concupiscunt; contemnunt habere ubi spiritualiter gaudeant, et desideranter appetunt, ubi et carnaliter gemant. Horum itaque vecordiam veridica voce Job reprehendat, quia nimirum perverso judicio, perturbata tranquillis, dura lenibus, aspera mitibus, transitoria aeternis, suspecta securis anteponunt. Horum vecordiae sancta Ecclesia recordetur, cum saevis extrinsecus adversitatibus premitur, quos intra se velut fideles continuit, sed eorum vitam adversantem fidei diu toleravit, et dicat: Qui inter hujuscemodi laetabantur, et esse sub sentibus delicias computabant, quia nimirum mala quae agunt ex iniquorum praecedentium pravitate didicerunt. Unde et recte subjungitur:

CAPUT XVI [Vet. XVII].

VERS. 8. Filii stultorum et ignobilium. 41. Duplex est stultitia; alia summae nobilitati conjuncta. Sciendum nobis est quod alii intra sanctam Ecclesiam vocantur stulti, sed tamen nobiles, alii vero sunt stulti et ignobiles. Stulti namque dicuntur, sed esse ignobiles nequeunt, qui carnis prudentiam contemnentes, profuturam sibi stultitiam appetunt, et ad novitatem internae prolis virtutis nobilitate sublevantur; qui stultam sapientiam mundi despiciunt, et sapientem Dei stultitiam concupiscunt. Scriptum quippe est: 656 Quod stultum est Dei, sapientius est hominibus (I Cor. I, 25). Hanc nos stultitiam Paulus comprehendere admonet, dicens: Si quis videtur inter vos sapiens esse in hoc saeculo, stultus fiat, ut sit sapiens (Ibid., III, 18). Hanc stultitiam qui perfecte secuti sunt, voce sapientiae audire meruerunt: Vos qui secuti estis me, in regeneratione cum sederit Filius hominis in sede majestatis suae, sedebitis et vos super duodecim thronos, judicantes duodecim tribus Israel (Matth. XIX, 28). Ecce relinquentes temporalia gloriam potestatis aeternae mercati sunt. Quid itaque in hoc mundo stultius quam sua deserere? Et quid in aeternitate nobilius quam cum Deo judices venire? Horum scilicet judicum nobilitas Salomone attestante memoratur, cum hoc quod jam praefatus sum dicitur: Nobilis in portis vir ejus, quando sederit cum senatoribus terrae (Prov. XXXI, 23). Valde quippe nobiles considerat, quos senatores vocat. Hanc in se nobilitatem Paulus aspexerat, cum cognationi conditoris per spiritum junctus dicebat: Genus ergo cum simus Dei, non debemus aestimare auro, vel argento aut lapidi sculpturae artis, et cogitationi hominis divinum esse simile (Act. XVII, 29). Genus videlicet Dei dicimur, non ex ejus natura editi, sed per spiritum illius, et voluntarie conditi, et adoptive recreati. Tanto ergo ad hanc nobilitatem quisque erigitur, quanto per acceptam imaginem ad similitudinem illius ex imitatione renovatur. 42. Alia ignobilis, qua superna sapientia relinquitur. At contra sunt stulti et ignobiles, qui dum supernam sapientiam, semetipsos sequentes, fugiunt, in sua ignorantia quasi in abjectae prolis vilitate sopiuntur. Quo enim id ad quod conditi sunt, non intelligunt, eo etiam cognationem acceptae per imaginem generositatis perdunt. Stulti sunt ergo et ignobiles, quos ab aeternae haereditatis consortio repellit servitus mentis. Scriptum quippe est: Omnis qui facit peccatum, servus est peccati (Joan. VIII, 34). Et voce egregii praedicatoris dicitur: Sapientia hujus mundi, stultitia est apud Deum (I Cor. III, 19). Qui ergo dum terrena saperent ab intima generositate repulsi sunt, stulti simul et ignobiles fuerunt. Quorum dum plerique actus imitantur, filii stultorum et ignobilium fiunt; dumque eos sensibus ac moribus sequuntur, et stulti sunt, quia veram sapientiam non intelligunt, et ignobiles, quia nulla spiritus libertate renovantur. Sed hi quamvis iniquorum actus exerceant, plerumque tamen in hac vita occupant loca justorum, atque eorum se filios aestimant quorum per honoris concupiscentiam officia exterius administrant. Quos sancta correptio ad cognitionem sui revocat, ut, videlicet, in pravis desideriis positi, quorum sint filii attendant. Non enim eorum sunt filii quorum loca tenent, sed quorum opera exercent. Dicatur igitur recte: Filii stultorum et ignobilium. Ubi apte subjungitur:

CAPUT XVII.

IBID. Et in terra penitus non parentes. 43. Stulti sunt et ignobiles, quos Deus nescire profitetur. Multi veritatem cognoscendo premunt, non tangunt. Sicut enim plerique in terra sunt, et a cognitione hominum abjectione vilitatis suae quasi quadam superductione velaminis absconduntur, ita sunt nonnulli in Ecclesia qui dum se abjectioni pravorum operum subdunt, divino conspectui noti non sunt. Quibus et quandoque dicendum est: Amen dico vobis, nescio vos (Matth. XXV, 12). Esse ergo in terra et apparere, 657 est in fide recta per virtutem operis nobilitatem mentis ostendere. Esse vero in terra et penitus non apparere, et in Ecclesia quidem fide consistere, sed nil dignum fidei in opere demonstrare. Hi itaque intra sanctam Ecclesiam divinitatis oculis et videntur per judicium, et tamen per bonae vitae meritum non videntur, quia ea quae confitendo tenent, vivendo non exhibent. De quibus Paulus dicit: Confitentur se nosse Deum, factis autem negant (Tit. I, 16). Hi in sancta Ecclesia fidem quam tenere se asserunt premunt potius quam venerantur, dum sua magis illius nomine quam ejus adipisci lucra concupiscunt. [Vet. XVIII]. Electi autem dum servare fidei meritum rectis operibus curant, ad auctoris sui notitiam etiam inter reproborum tumultus appropinquant. Quod bene in Evangelio muliere sanguinis fluxu laborante signatum est, de qua cum Dominus diceret: Quis me tetigit (Luc. VIII, 45)? Petrus ratiocinando respondit: Turbae te comprimunt et affligunt, et dicis: Quis me tetigit? Sed audire causas verae rationis meruit, cum ei Dominus dixit: Tetigit me aliquis, nam et ego novi virtutem exisse de me. Ecce turbae premebant Dominum, sed tamen sola tetigit quae ad illum humiliter venit, quia nimirum multi etiam in sancta Ecclesia reprobi veritatem cognoscendo premunt, quam bene vivendo tangere negligunt. Premunt, et longe sunt, quia divinam notitiam professionibus sequuntur, moribus fugiunt. Premunt, inquam, sed longe sunt, quia eidem fidei, quam loquendo astruunt, agendo contradicunt. Sicut ergo hoc testimonio docemur quia nonnulli Dominum tangendo non tangunt, ita nonnulli non videntur a Domino etiam cum videntur, quia occultis ejus obtutibus et ad damnationis supplicium apparent, et ad electionis meritum non apparent. Dicatur igitur recte: Et in terra penitus non parentes, quia etsi illos specie tenus Ecclesia tenuit, eos tamen intra illam conditor quasi non vidit quos ignoravit. Qui tranquillitatis tempore idcirco fidem verbo tenus tenent, quia eamdem fidem florere generaliter vident. Sed cum repentina contra illam procella adversitatis oboritur, mox ab ea negatione publica disjunguntur, et quidquid prius quasi venerantes tenuerant, contra hoc postmodum deridentes pugnant. Unde apte subditur:

CAPUT XVIII [Res. XVII].

VERS. 9. Nunc in eorum canticum versus sum, et factus sum eis proverbium. 44. Iniquis crescentibus, fides in opprobrium, et veritas in crimen erit. Quibus videlicet verbis illud sanctae Ecclesiae tempus exprimitur, quo publice a reprobis irridetur, quando iniquis crescentibus, in opprobrium fides, et veritas erit in crimen. Tanto quippe despectior unusquisque erit, quanto justior esse potuerit; tanto abominabilis, quanto laudabilis. Sancta itaque electorum Ecclesia afflictionis tempore proverbium pravis efficitur, quia cum bonos mori per tormenta conspiciunt, ab eis similitudinem maledictionis sumunt. Quo enim transitoriam mortem vident, sed permanentem vitam non vident; tanto magis deridendo mala praesentia fugiunt, quanto per intellectum intrisecus ad bona permanentia non pertingunt. Sed ea quae subjuncta sunt, quia obscurioribus sententiis 658 implicata non sunt, debemus sub brevitate transcurrere, ut ad ea in quibus laborandum est valeamus citius pervenire. Sequitur:

CAPUT XIX.

VERS. 10. Abominantur me, et longe fugiunt a me, et faciem meam conspuere non verentur. 45. Iniquorum irrisionibus non dejicitur sed erigitur et crescit Ecclesia. Longe a sancta Ecclesia fugiunt omnes iniqui non passibus gresuum, sed qualitatibus morum; longe fugiunt non loco, sed merito; dum, crescente superbia, aperta eam exprobratione contemnunt. Faciem namque ejus conspuere est non tantum in absentia bonis detrahere, sed unumquemque justum etiam in praesentia confutare. Quos tunc pravi dum aperte irridendo despiciunt, in eorum contumeliis fluxa verba quasi defluentes salivas emittunt. [Vet. XIX.] Sed scit sancta Ecclesia in passionibus crescere, atque inter opprobria honorabilem vitam tenere; scit nec de adversis dejici, nec de prosperis gloriari; novit contra prospera mentem suam in dejectione sternere, novit contra adversa animum ad spem superni culminis exaltare; scit bona sua misericordiae Redemptoris, scit mala sua justitiae tribuere judicis; quod et bona illo largiente habeat, et mala illo permittente patiatur. Unde et mox de Domino subjungit, dicens:

CAPUT XX.

VERS. 11. Pharetram enim suam aperuit, et afflixit me. 46. Deo permittente, licet occulto judicio, mala se perpeti novit. Quid per pharetram Dei, nisi occultum consilium designatur? Sagittam vero de pharetra Dominus jacit, quando de occulto consilio apertam sententiam emittit. Quia enim flagellatur quisque, cognoscimus; sed qua ex causa flagellum veniat, ignoramus. Cum vero post flagella vitae correctio sequitur, etiam ipsa consilii virtus aperitur. Pharetra igitur clausa est consilium occultum. Sed aperta pharetra affligimur, quando per id quod post flagellum sequitur quo consilio flagellamur videmus. Cum peccata Dominus videt, et tamen manum ad vindictam non commovet, quasi clausam pharetram tenet, sed feriendo indicat quantum ei in nobis displicuit hoc quod diu videndo toleravit. Sancta itaque electorum Ecclesia tribulationibus pressa dicat: Pharetram enim suam aperuit, et afflixit me. Quae adversariorum voces insolentes sustinens, dum cernit quod ejus praedicatio non admittitur, quorumdam duritiam deserens, praedicationis suae verba moderatur. Perpendens etenim persecutores suos ad exhortationis suae vocem deteriores existere, magis eligit tacere. Cumque indignos qui audiant conspicit, praedicationem suam obducto silentio astringit. Unde apte subjungit:

CAPUT XXI.

IBID. Et frenum posuit in os meum. 47. A praedicatione feriendum est, cum ii qui verbum Dei excipiunt, inde pejores fiunt. Frenum sibi apud quosdam positum cognoverant, qui dicebant: Vobis oportebat primum loqui verbum Dei, sed quoniam repellitis illud, et indignos vos judicatis aeternae vitae, ecce convertimur ad gentes (Act. XIII, 46). Frenum silentii sibi superimpositum sancti viri apud dura reproborum corda conspiciunt, qui per Prophetam dicunt: Quomodo cantabimus canticum Domini in terra aliena (Psal. CXXXVI, 4)? Frenum poni etiam Paulus admonuit, qui discipulo praecepit, dicens: Haereticum post primam et secundam correptionem devita, sciens quia subversus est qui ejusmodi est, et delinquit proprio judicio condemnatus (Tit. III, 10). Sancti quippe doctores 659 plerumque alta consideratione resistentium corda conspiciunt, et dum ea derelicta divinitus vident, afflicti gementesque conticescunt. An non aliquando frenum Salomon doctoribus imponit, qui dicit: Noli arguere derisorem, ne oderit te (Prov. IX, 8). Sed si ab increpatione idcirco reticemus, quia contra nos insurgere derisoris odia formidamus, non jam lucra Dei, sed nostra quaerimus. Qua in re sciendum est quod nonnunquam cum redarguuntur pravi, deteriores existunt. Ipsis ergo et non nobis parcimus, si ab eorum redargutione pro eorum amore cessamus. Unde necesse est ut aliquando toleremus tacendo quod sunt, quatenus in nobis discant bene vivendo quod non sunt. Quia igitur sancta Ecclesia, quae verba sua semper per charitatem exerit, ea etiam nonnunquam ex charitate restringit, dicat: Frenum posuit in os meum. Ac si aperte fateatur, dicens: Quia in quibusdam provectum non vidi praedicationis, ab eis impetum temperavi, ut vitam meam saltem per patientiam discerent, cum verba mea admittere per oblatam praedicationem nollent. [Vet. XX.] Sed plus nobis hoc plerumque in tribulationibus dolet, quod eas ab illis patimur, in quibus germano amore confidebamus. Unde et subditur:

CAPUT XXII [Rec. XVII].

VERS. 12. Ad dextram orientis calamitates meae illico surrexerunt. 48. Pro sinistra gentiles, pro dextera Judaei intelligendi. Ad sinistram quippe calamitates surgerent, si a quibuslibet extra religionem positis, et aperte Christum negantibus, persecutionis adversa sustineret. Cum vero ab aliquibus quasi fidelibus tentationem cruciamentorum patitur, quasi ad dexteram illi calamitates oriuntur, quia hi qui sub Christi nomine militant Christi in ea nomen impugnant. Ipso enim locutionis usu pro dextro habere dicimus quod pro magno pensamus, pro sinistro vero id quod despicimus; quod Zacharias aperte insinuat, dicens: Et ostendit mihi Jesum sacerdotem magnum, stantem coram angelo Domini, et Satan stabat a dextris ejus, ut adversaretur ei (Zach. III, 1). Qui ut patentius hoc quod praemisit ostenderet, secutus adjunxit: Et dixit Dominus ad Satan: Increpet Dominus in te, Satan, qui elegit Jerusalem. Nunquid non est iste torris erutus de igne? Et Jesus indutus erat vestibus sordidis (Ibid., 2). Sordidis enim vestibus

Jesus indutus erat, quia quamvis alienus ab omni peccato, tamen in similitudinem venit carnis peccati. Cui venienti Satan a dextris stetit. Pro magno namque Dominus Judaicum populum, et pro nihilo gentes habere videbatur. Sed postquam incarnatus apparuit, gentilitas quae pro sinistro habita fuerat credidit; Judaicus vero populus ad perfidiam declinavit. Satan ergo illi a dextris stetit, quia illum ei populum rapuit, qui dudum dilectus fuit. Sed quia ipse Judaicus populus, modo perditus, in fine est quandoque crediturus, propheta testante, qui ait: Reliquiae salvae fient (Isa. X, 21), Satan a dextris suis Dominus removet, dicens: Increpet Dominus in te, Satan (Zach. III, 1). Et ejusdem populi liberationem indicans, subdit: Quia eligit Jerusalem (Ibid., 2). Qui nimirum populus, quia ad gehennae incendia, perfidia duce, defluebat, sed 660 dum ad fidem reducitur ab eodem aeterni ignis incendio liberatur, statim de eo illic subditur: Nunquid non est iste torris erutus de igne? 49. Et Ecclesiae fidem sectantes, a quibus ipsa aliquando vim patitur. Sicut ergo illic pro dextra plebs Judaica, ita hoc in loco dextrae vocabulo fidelis populus sanctae Ecclesiae designatur. Unde et venturus judex haedos ad sinistram, agnos ad dexteram ponet (Matth. XXV, 33). Sed cum sanctam Ecclesiam adversitatis tempore ipsi quoque lacessunt qui fideles esse videbantur, ei procul dubio calamitates ad dextram surgunt. [Vet. XXI.] Bene autem haec ipsa dextra Orientis vocatur. De ipso quippe ejusdem capite scriptum est: Oriens est nomen ejus (Zach. VI, 12). Nam quia ab Oriente lux surgit, recte Oriens dicitur cujus justitiae lumine nostrae injustitiae nox illustratur. Ad Orientis ergo dextram calamitates surgunt, quia hi quoque ad persecutionem prosiliunt, qui electa membra Redemptoris nostri esse credebantur. Quas videlicet calamitates recte illico asserit surgere, quia dum non erant extranei qui persequuntur, ab eis repente mala et illico fiunt. Si vero dextra hi qui veraciter fideles sunt appellantur, calamitates ad dextram Orientis surgunt, quia erumpente persecutionis articulo, crudeles pravorum impetus justi patiuntur. Sequitur:

CAPUT XXIII [Rec. XIX].

IBID. Pedes meos subverterunt, et oppresserunt quasi fluctibus semitis suis. 50. Ejus extrema membra quasi pedes quandoque subvertuntur. Quid per pedes Ecclesiae, nisi extrema illius membra signantur? Quae dum ad opera terrena deserviunt, tanto celerius ab adversariis falli possunt, quanto sublimia minus intelligunt. Hos itaque pedes adversarii subvertunt, videlicet cum extrema membra illius ad sui dogmatis errorem trahunt. Subversi pedes viam tenere nequeunt, cum infirmi quique persecutorum suorum vel promissionibus persuasi, vel minis territi, vel cruciatibus fracti, ab itinere recto deviant. Bene autem adversariorum semitae fluctibus comparantur, cum dicitur: Et oppresserunt quasi fluctibus semitis suis, quia scilicet vita pravorum insolenti inquietudine molesta ad obruendam, ut ita dixerim, navem cordis quasi tempestas illabitur. De qua videlicet tempestate per Salomonem dicitur: Quasi tempestas transiens non erit impius (Prov. X, 25). Cumque infirmus quisque perversos florere conspicit, hunc in perversitatis pelagus unda miserae imitationis mergit. Sequitur:

CAPUT XXIV.

VERS. 13. Dissipaverunt itinera mea, insidiati sunt mihi, et praevaluerunt, et non fuit qui ferret auxilium. 51. Occultis hostium insidiis ejus viae dissipantur, Deo ad tempus utiliter deserente. Dicat haec beatus Job de malignis spiritibus, videlicet hostibus occultis; dicat universa Ecclesia de pravis persequentibus, scilicet adversariis apertis. Ipsi quippe ejus itinera dissipant, cum in quorumdam infirmorum mentibus, veritatis vias callida persuasione perturbant. Ipsi insidiantes praevalent, cum eos quos aperte ad malum trahere nequeunt, bona simulando pervertunt. Sed mirum valde est quod subbjicit: Non fuit qui ferret auxilium, cum de divino adjutorio Psalmista clamet: Adjutor in opportunitatibus, in tribulatione (Psal. IX, 10);

661 et: Sperent in te, qui noverunt nomen tuum, quoniam non derelinques quaerentes te, Domine. Et cum rursum scriptum sit: Quis speravit in Domino, et confusus est; permansit in mandatis ejus, et derelictus est? Et quis invocavit illum, et despexit eum (Eccli. II, 11, 12)? Qua itaque ratione nunc dicitur: Non fuit qui ferret auxilium, nisi quia omnipotens Deus eos quos in aeternum diligit aliquando ad tempus relinquit? Unde scriptum est: Ad punctum in modico dereliqui te, et in miserationibus magnis congregabo te. In momento indignationis abscondi faciem meam parumper a te, et in misericordia sempiterna misertus sum tui (Isai. LIV, 7). Hinc etiam Psalmista deprecabatur, dicens: Non me derelinquas usquequaque (Psal. CXVIII, 8). Derelinqui igitur sese ad modicum posse utiliter noverat, qui ne usquequaque relinqueretur petebat. Sanctos etenim suos Dominus veniendo adjuvat, relinquendo probat; donis firmat, tribulationibus tentat. Unde recte quoque per quemdam sapientem dicitur: In primis elegit eum, timorem et metum et probationem inducet super illum, et excruciabit illum in tribulatione doctrinae suae, donec tentet illum in cogitationibus illius (Eccli. IV, 18). Justi quippe animam gratia vocat, tentatio interrogat. Et omnipotens Deus electorum suorum adversarios temporaliter permittit excrescere, ut per malorum saevitiam purgetur vita bonorum. 52. Utilitati justorum militat etiam potestas pravorum. Nunquam quippe Dominus adversos bonis esse permitteret, nisi etiam quantum prodessent videret. Nam dum injusti saeviunt, justi purgantur, et utilitati innocentium militat vita pravorum, dum hanc et premendo humiliat, et humiliando semper ad melius format. Unde recte quoque per Salomonem dicitur: Qui stultus est, serviet sapienti (Prov. XI, 29). Et tamen saepe conspicimus sapientes subesse, stultos vero arcem dominii tenere; sapientes serviliter obsequi, stultos tyrannica elatione dominari. Quomodo igitur definitione divinae sententiae sapienti stultus servit, dum plerumque hunc jure temporalis dominii comprimit? Sed sciendum est quia contra sapientis vitam, dum stultus praeeminens terrorem potestatis exercet, dum hunc laboribus fatigat, contumeliis lacerat, profecto hunc ab omni vitiorum rubigine urendo purgat. Stultus ergo sapienti etiam dominando servit, quem ad meliorem statum premendo provehit. Sic nonnunquam pupillis dominis ad disciplinae magisterium servi praesunt, terrent, premunt, feriunt, et tamen esse servi nullo modo desistunt, quia ad hoc ipsum ordinati sunt, ut proficientibus dominis etiam feriendo famulentur. Quia igitur mala reproborum bonos, dum cruciant, purgant, utilitati justorum militat etiam potestas iniquorum. Sed plerumque justi tribulatione deprehensi, tardam manum subvenientis aestimant, cum se persequentium immanitas paulo longius angustat. Et concita quidem sunt ereptoris remedia, sed hoc quod ab ereptore citius agitur, dolenti tardum videtur. Cumque adesse postulationi auxilium quaeritur, si vocem non statim sequitur, quia desit aestimatur. Unde nunc dicitur: Et non fuit qui ferret auxilium. Qua videlicet in voce ipsa vis passionis exprimitur, quia supernum auxilium, etsi ad est quantum ad ordinatam providentiam 662 protectoris, deesse tamen creditur quantum ad concita vota patientis. Sequitur:

CAPUT XXV [Vet.

XXII, Rec. XX]. VERS 14. Quasi rupto muro et aperta janua irruerunt super me, et ad meas miserias devoluti sunt. 53. Lugendus animae status, quando in eam hostes irruunt, rupto fidei muro, vel destructa disciplinae materia. Quid hoc loco muri nomine nisi Redemptor humani generis appellatur? De quo pro sanctae Ecclesiae aedificatione per prophetam dicitur: Ponetur in ea murus et antemurale (Isai. XXVI, 1). Ipse enim nobis murus est, qui ad corda nostra pertingere malignorum spirituum cursum vetat. Qui nostrae quoque fidei etiam antemurale posuit, quia priusquam se per carnem ostenderet praedicatores sui mysterii prophetas misit. Recte quippe antemuralis nomine vocantur, quia dum subsequentem praedicaverunt Dominum, quasi ante murum steterunt. Sed quasi murus rumpitur cum pravorum persuasionibus fides quae in Redemptore nostro est in quorumdam corde dissipatur. Cumque perversis in hac vita potestas tribuitur, quid aliud quam janua erroris aperitur? Quasi rupto ergo muro, et aperta janua, super bonos irruunt mali, cum, accepta temporaliter potestate, perversi ipsa quoque in quorumdam corde destruere munimina fidei conantur. De quibus apte dicitur: Et ad meas miserias devoluti sunt, quia videlicet prius, ad suas. Nisi enim perverse vivendo, ad suas ante miserias caderent, nequaquam ad eas postmodum et alios suaderent. Sed post suas reprobi et ad nostras miserias devolvuntur, quando ad ea mala in quibus jam ipsi implicati sunt etiam quosdam nobis unitos trahunt. 54. Potest quoque intelligi muri nomine munitio disciplinae; Salomone attestante, qui ait: Per agrum hominis pigri transivi, et per vineam viri stulti; et ecce totum repleverant urticae, operuerant superficiem ejus spinae, et maceria lapidum destructa erat (Prov. XXIV, 30). Per agrum enim hominis pigri atque per vineam viri stulti transire est cujuslibet vitam negligentis inspicere, ejusque opera considerare. Quam urticae vel spinae replent, quia in corde negligentium prurientia terrena desideria et punctiones pullulant vitiorum, quippe quia scriptum est: In desideriis est omnis otiosus (Prov. XXVIII, 19, sec. LXX). Maceria lapidum destructa erat, id est, disciplina patrum ab ejus corde dissoluta. Nam quia destructa maceria lapidum, dissolutam esse disciplinam vidit, protinus illic secutus adjunxit: Quod cum vidissem, posui in corde meo, et exemplo didici disciplinani (Prov. XXIV, 32). Quasi rupto ergo muro hostis ingreditur, cum vel malignorum spirituum, vel pravorum hominum persuasione callida, disciplinae munimina in corde dissipantur. Sed cum ejusdem disciplinae vigor in corde reproborum solvitur, ante eorum oculos cuncta honorum opera despectui habentur, nihilque esse aestimant quidquid de virtutibus electorum vident. Unde et subditur:

CAPUT XXVI.

VERS 15. Redactus sum in nihilum. 55. Despectis veris bonis, carnales fluxis, cum quibus pereunt, innituntur. Apud aestimationem quippe malorum in nihilum redigimur, quando ea quae ipsi quasi summa diligunt bona temporalia non tenemus. Despectis namque supernis promissionibus, terrena desiderant; et si quando in eorum mente aliquid de appetitu aeternitatis oritur, suborta citius transitoria 663 delectatione dissipatur. Unde et statim subjungitur: IBID.Abstulisti quasi ventus desiderium meum. Fidelis quippe populus se pati denuntiat, quod eos quos diligit pati dolet. Ventus ergo desiderium tollit, cum res quaelibet transitoria aeternitatis appetitum destruit. Unde adhuc congrue subinfertur: IBID. Et velut nubes pertransiit salus mea. Nubes quippe in alto eminet, sed hanc ad cursum flatus impellit. Sic nimirum, sic sunt temporalia iniquorum bona. Velut in alto quidem per honoris celsitudinem degere videntur; sed ad cursum vitae quotidie, quasi quibusdam mortalitatis suae flatibus impelluntur. Salus ergo ut nubes transit, quia perversorum gloria, quo alta est, fixa non est. Sed expletis desideriis actibusque infirmantium, ad electorum vocem sermo convertitur, cum protinus subinfertur:

CAPUT XXVII.

VERS. 16. Nunc autem in memetipso marcescit anima mea, et possident me dies afflictionis. 56. Nunc in se marcescunt electi, sed in Deo virent. Electorum quippe anima nunc marcescit, quia in illa postmodum aeterna exsultatione viridescit. Modo eos dies afflictionis possident, quia dies laetitiae post sequuntur. Scriptum quippe est: Timenti Deum bene erit in extremis (Eccli. I, 13, 19). Et rursum de Ecclesia dicitur: Ridebit in die novissimo (Prov. XXXI, 25). Nunc enim tempus afflictionis est bonis, ut sequatur eos exsultatio quandoque sine tempore. Hinc ab eis alias dicitur: Humiliasti nos in loco afflictionis (Psal. XLIII, 20). Locus namque afflictionis est vita praesens. Justi ergo hic, id est in loco afflictionis, humiliati sunt, quia in aeterna vita, id est in loco gaudii sublimantur. Cum vero marcescere animam diceret, recte etiam praemisit, In memetipso, quia in nobismetipsis quidem afficitur, sed in Deo mens nostra refovetur; tantoque a viriditate gaudii longe fit, quanto adhuc ab auctoris repulsa lumine ad se recedit. Tunc vero ad verae laetitiae viriditatem pervenit, quando per aeternae contemplationis gratiam sublevata etiam semetipsam transit. Sed haec quae allegorica indagatione transcurrimus, oportet ut per omnia etiam juxta historiam teneamus. Quae tamen nunc idcirco praetereo, quia haec aperta esse legentibus non ignoro. Diebus autem persecutionis ultimae, quia multi sunt qui pereunt, et pauci qui salvantur; idcirco vir sanctus passionis suae tempore et pauca de bonis, et multa de perversis loquitur. Unde et mox ad eorum personam qui corruunt, verba convertit; sicque sua insinuat, ut cadentibus possint congruere quae narrat. Nam sequitur

CAPUT XXVIII [Rec.

XXI, Vet. XXIII]. VERS. 17. Nocte os meum perforatur doloribus, et qui me comedunt non dormiunt. 57. Saeviente persecutione, fortes et qui in corpore Ecclesiae sunt velut ossa deficiunt. Si ipsi historiae intendimus, patet causa, quoniam sancti viri corpus per sinus ulcerum scaturiens vermium multitudo lacerabat. Si vero allegoriae mysterium perscrutamur, quid per ossa nisi fortes quique in sanctae Ecclesiae corpore designantur? 664 Qui quasi suo robore membra continent, dum mores infirmantium stabiliter portant. Sed cum tribulationis ultimae contra eam fervor excreverit, in nocte os illius perforatur doloribus, quia nonnunquam tormentis victi, etiam ipsi ad perfidiam defluunt, qui ad fidem alios tenere videbantur. Ait ergo: Nocte os meum perforatur doloribus. Ac si aperte dicat: Tribulationis tenebris pressi, ita afflictione terebrantur, ut et ipsi qui in me habebant vigorem fortitudinis, quasi jam quoddam habeant foramen timoris. Bene autem dicitur: Et qui me comedunt non dormiunt, quia maligni spiritus, qui carnales quosque de Ecclesia consumunt, tanto magis quiescere a tentatione nesciunt, quanto nullo carnis pondere gravantur. Sed persecutores sanctae Ecclesiae quia valde perversi sunt, essent utinam pauci. Sequitur:

CAPUT XXIX [Rec. XXII].

VERS. 18. In multitudine eorum consumitur vestimentum meum, et quasi capitio tunicae succinxerunt me. 58. Qui Ecclesiae velut vestimentum adhaerent, nonnunquam ab ea, vi tormentorum, separantur. Si historiae intendimus, quid aliud vestimentum beati Job quam ejus corpus accipimus? cujus videlicet vestimentum consumitur dum caro cruciatur. Juxta allegoriae vero mysterium, vestimentum est sanctae Ecclesiae fidelium vita. Nam sicut tota simul Ecclesia vestimentum Christi, ita fideles quique ejusdem Ecclesiae vestimenta deputantur. Si enim sancta Ecclesia vestimentum Christi non esset, Paulus profecto non diceret: Ut exhiberet sibi gloriosam Ecclesiam, non habentem maculam neque rugam (Ephes. V, 27); id est, nec per peccatum habentem maculam, nec per duplicitatem rugam, quia et per justitiam munda est, et per simplicem intentionem tensa. Quae igitur abluta est ne habeat maculam, tensa est ne habeat rugam, utique vestis est. Sicut ergo indumentum Christi tota generaliter Ecclesia dicitur, sic indumentum sunt Ecclesiae singulorum animae, quae ab errore conversae eamdem Ecclesiam credendo eique fideliter inhaerendo circumdant. De quibus eidem Ecclesiae per prophetam Dominus dicit: Vivo ego, quia omnibus his velut ornamento vestieris (Isai. XLIX, 18). Sed cum procella saevae persecutionis oboritur, plerique fidelium ab ejus amore separantur, qui ei sedulo inhaerere videbantur. Dicat ergo: In multitudine eorum consumitur vestimentum meum, quia dum multi sunt qui cruciant, destruuntur plurimi qui ei connexione amoris inhaerebant. 59. Reprobi vitam fidei et praedicationis vocem, in Ecclesia exstinguere conantur. Bene autem subditur: Et quasi capitio tunicae succinxerunt me. Tunicae quippe capitium collum circumdat induentis. Collum vero si stringitur, vocis usus et vitalis flatus necatur. Sanctam ergo Ecclesiam reprobi quasi capitio tunicae constringunt, quia in ea persecutionibus suis vitam fidei, et praedicationis vocem exstinguere conantur. Hoc quippe conari persecutores ejus specialiter solent, ut ab ea ante omnia verbum praedicationis tollant. Unde et hi qui sanctae fidei primordiis resistebant, caesis Apostolis denuntiabant, dicentes: Praecipiendo praecepimus vobis ne doceretis in nomine isto, et 665 ecce replestis Jerusalem doctrina vestra (Act. V, 28). Corpus ergo sanctae Ecclesiae quasi capitio tunicae cinxerant, qui constrictis praedicatoribus, velut ejus collum prementes, in ea claudere iter vocis volebant. Sed electi quique persecutionis suae tempore paratiores sunt mori quam tacere. Qui dum in morte corporaliter corruunt, a stultis quibusque et carnalibus despecti ac viles aestimantur, quia cum videre reprobi nequeunt quae electi bona spiritaliter teneant, quos carnaliter exstingui conspiciunt, infelices arbitrantur. Unde et subditur:

CAPUT XXX.

VERS. 19. Comparatus sum luto, et assimilatus sum favillae et cineri. 60. Hanc tanquam lutum, favillam et cinerem conculcant. In reproborum quippe judicio, sancta electorum Ecclesia luto comparatur, quia temporaliter conculcata despicitur. Favillae assimilatur et cineri, quia dum bona ejus interiora non vident, ad sola hanc mala pervenisse aestimant, quae in ea exhiberi corporaliter vident. Fidelis autem electorum populus, cum multos ex se cadere conspicit, optat, si obtinere valeat, adversitatis suae tempora mutari. Hujus quia oratio differtur, gemitus augetur, Unde adhuc subditur:

CAPUT XXXI.

[Vet. XXIV]. VERS. 20.Clamabo ad te, et non exaudies; sto, et non respicis me. 61. Ecclesiae liberari postulantis oratio non continuo exauditur. Qua ratione. Sancta quippe Ecclesia persecutionis suae tempore fide stat, desideriis clamat. Sed dolet se quasi non respici, dum sua videt in tribulationibus vota differri. Alto namque consilio omnipotens Deus, cum sancti ejus adversariorum persecutionibus comprimuntur, eumque assiduis ut liberentur interpellationibus clamant, differre solet voces petentium, ut merita patientium crescant, quatenus eo magis exaudiantur ad meritum, quo citius non exaudiuntur ad votum. Unde alias scriptum est: Deus meus, clamabo per diem, nec exaudies, et nocte (Psal. XXI, 3). Atque ipsa utilitas de exaudiendi mora mox subditur, cum illic protinus subinfertur: Et non ad insipientiam mihi (Ibid.). Ad multiplicandam quippe sanctorum sapientiam proficit quod postulata tarde percipiunt, ut ex dilatione crescat desiderium, ex desiderio intellectus augeatur. Intellectus vero cum intenditur, ejus in Deum ardentior affectus aperitur. Affectus autem ad promerenda coelestia tanto fit capax, quanto fuerit exspectando longanimis. Sed tamen inter haec sanctorum patientiam dolor urget ad vocem, et cum dilati proficiunt, metuunt ne deficientibus viribus despecti reprobentur. Sequitur:

CAPUT XXXII [Rec. XXIII].

VERS. 21. Mutatus es mihi in crudelem, et in duritia manus tuae adversaris mihi. 62. De Deo nihil dignum dicere aut cogitare possumus. Longe ab hac sententia vetus translatio dissonat, quia quod in hac de Deo dicitur, hoc in illa de adversariis ac persecutoribus memoratur. Sed tamen quia haec nova translatio ex Hebraeo nobis Arabicoque eloquio cuncta verius transfudisse perhibetur, credendum est quidquid in ea dicitur, et oportet ut verba illius nostra expositio subtiliter rimetur. Ait ergo: Mutatus es mihi in crudelem, et in duritia manus tuae adversaris mihi. 666 In Scriptura sancta cum de Deo aliquid indignum dicitur, movetur legentis animus, velut si aliquando de

Deo aliquid dignum dicatur. Pene omne quippe quod de Deo dicitur, eo ipso jam indignum est, quo potuit dici. Nam cujus laudi non sufficit obstupescens conscientia, quando sufficiet loquens lingua? Sanctus autem Spiritus hoc ipsum hominibus intelligentibus insinuans, quam sint ineffabilia summa et divina, his etiam verbis nonnunquam de Deo utitur quae apud homines habentur in vitio, ut ex his quae indigna videntur hominibus, et tamen dicuntur de Deo, admoneantur scire homines quod nec illa jam Deo digna sint quae, dum digna habentur apud homines, digna putantur Deo. 63. Quo sensu dicatur zelari, irasci, poenitere, misereri, praescire. Deo nihil praeteritum est aut futurum. Res non ideo videntur a Deo quia sunt, sed ideo sunt quia videntur. Dicitur enim Deus zelans, sicut scriptum est: Dominus zelotes nomen ejus (Exod. XXXIV, 14). Dicitur iratus, unde scriptum est: Iratus est Dominus contra Israel (Num. XXXII, 13). Dicitur Deus poenitens, sicut scriptum est: Poenitet me fecisse hominem super terram (Genes. VI, 7). Et rursus: Poenitet me quod constituerim Saul regem in Israel (I Reg. XV, 11). Dicitur misericors, sicut scriptum est: Misericors et miserator Dominus, patiens et multum misericors (Psal. LXXXV, 15). Dicitur praescius, sicut de illo ait Apostolus: Quos praescivit, et praedestinavit conformes fieri imaginis Filii sui (Rom. VIII, 29), dum nec zelus, nec ira, nec poenitentia, nec proprie misericordia, nec praescientia esse possit in Deo. Haec namque omnia ab humanis in illum qualitatibus tracta sunt, dum ad nostrae infirmitatis verba descenditur, ut, quasi quibusdam nobis gradibus factis, et juxta nos positis, per ea quae nobis vicina conspicimus ad summa ejus ascendere quandoque valeamus. Zelari enim dicitur qui cum cruciatu mentis castitatem custodit uxoris. Irasci dicitur qui fervore animi contra puniendum vitium accenditur. Poenitere dicitur cui id quod fecit displicet, et e contra mutando aliquid aliud facit. Misericors dicitur qui pietate ad proximum permovetur. Misericordia autem a misero corde vocata est, eo quod unusquisque intueatur quempiam miserum, atque ei compatiens, dum dolore animi tangitur, ipse cor miserum facit, ut eum a miseria liberet cui intendit. Praescire dicitur qui unamquamque rem antequam veniat videt, et id quod futurum est priusquam praesens fiat praevidet. Deus ergo quomodo zelans est, qui in custodienda castitate nostra nullo mentis cruciatu tangitur? Quomodo irascitur, qui in ulciscendis vitiis nostris nulla perturbatione animi commovetur? Quomodo est poenitens, qui id quod semel fecerit se fecisse nequaquam dolet? Quomodo habet misericordiam, qui cor nunquam miserum habet? Quomodo est praescius, dum nulla nisi quae futura sunt praesciantur? Et scimus quia Deo futurum nihil est, ante cujus oculos praeterita nulla sunt, praesentia non transeunt, futura non veniunt, quippe quia omne quod nobis fuit et erit, in ejus conspectu praesto est; et omne quod praesens est, scire potest potius quam praescire. Et tamen dicitur zelans, dicitur iratus, dicitur poenitens, 667 dicitur misericors, dicitur praescius, ut quia castitatem animae uniuscujusque custodit, humano modo zelans vocetur, quamvis mentis cruciatu non tangatur. Et quia culpas percutit, dicitur irasci, quamvis nulla animi perturbatione moveatur. Et quia ipse immutabilis id quod voluerit mutat, poenitere dicitur quamvis rem mutet, consilium non mutet. Et cum miseriae nostrae subvenit, misericors vocatur, quamvis miseris subveniat, et cor miserum nunquam habeat. Et quia ea quae nobis futura sunt videt, quae tamen ipsi semper praesto sunt, praescius dicitur, quamvis nequaquam futurum praevideat, quod praesens videt. Nam et quaeque sunt, non in aeternitate ejus ideo videntur quia sunt, sed ideo sunt, quia videntur. Dum ergo ad verba mutabilitatis nostrae descenditur, ex eis quibusdam gradibus factis ascendat qui potest ad incommutabilitatem Dei, ut videat sine zelo zelantem, sine ira irascentem, sine dolore et poenitentia poenitentem, sine misero corde misericordem, sine praevisionibus praescientem. In illo enim nec praeterita, nec futura reperiri queunt, sed cuncta mutabilia immutabiliter durant, et quae in scipsis simul existere non possunt, illi simul omnia assistunt, nihilque in illo praeterit quod transit, quia in aeternitate ejus modo quodam incomprehensibili, cuncta volumina saeculorum transeuntia manent, currentia stant. [Vet. XXV.] 64. Deus crudelis videtur, quando, etsi juste feriendo, non parcit. Sicut ergo accipimus sine zelo zelantem, sine ira irascentem, ita a sancto viro etiam sine crudelitate dici potuit crudelis. Crudelis quippe dicitur qui districte feriendo non parcit, ut videlicet hoc loco crudelis districte feriens possit intelligi, et ulciscendae culpae non parcens. Unde Isaias quoque cum videret ultimi judicii diem non jam cum venia, sed cum districtione esse venturum, ait: Ecce dies Domini veniet crudelis, et indignationis plenus, et irae furorisque ejus, ad ponendam terram in solitudine, et peccatores ejus conterendos de ea (Isai. XIII, 9). Sanctus igitur vir ut hanc eamdem crudelitatem sibi potius assereret congruere posse, quam Deo, ait: Mutatus es mihi in crudelem. Ac si aperte dicat: Qui in teipso crudelitatis nihil habes, mihi quem respirare a percussione non sinis, crudelis videris. Ita enim Deus crudelis esse non potest, sicut nec mutari ullatenus potest. Sed quoniam in Deo nec crudelitas, nec mutabilitas unquam venit, dum mihi dicit, quod in semetipso Deum nec crudelem nec mutabilem sentiat ostendit. Nam dum circa nos quaedam prospera et adversa variantur, in eo quod nos mutamur quasi ejus circa nos mutatum animum suspicamur. Ipse vero in se incommutabilis permanens, aliter atque aliter in cogitatione sentitur hominum, pro qualitate meritorum. Nam et lux solis cum nequaquam est sibimetipsi dissimilis, infirmis aspera, sanis autem oculis lenis videtur, eorum videlicet immutatione, non sua. Unde, ut praediximus, dicens: Mutatus es, adjunxit, Mihi, ut ipsa haec crudelitas atque immutatio non sit in qualitate judicis, sed in mente patientis. Quod verbis quoque aliis retexit, dicens: Et in duritia 668 manus tuae adversaris mihi. Manus etenim Dei dura creditur cum, voluntati nostrae contraria, hoc quod ei in nobis displicet feriendo persequitur et flagella ingeminat cum dolentis anima clementiam exspectat. Quae tamen juxta allegoriae mysterium bene sanctae Ecclesiae verbis congruunt ex vocibus infirmorum, qui plerumque se plus feriri aestimant quam mereri putant, et quasi crudelitatem arbitrantur judicis districtionem aequissimam sectionis, quia et cum vulnus aegri medicinali ferramento abscinditur, medicus crudelis vocatur, qui tamen per secantis manus duritiam adversatur vulneri, sed concordat saluti. CAPUT XXXIII [Rec. XXIV].

VERS. 22. Elevasti me, et quasi super ventum ponens, elisisti me valide. 65. Super ventum sedet, qui transitoriis successibus laetatur. Adversitas non dejicit, quem prosperitas non corrumpit. Quia praesentis vitae gloria quasi in alto cernitur, sed nulla stabilitate solidatur, velut elevatus super ventum ponitur, qui prosperitate transitoria laetatur, quoniam ad hoc solum hunc fugitivae felicitatis aura sublevat, ut repente deterius in infimis sternat. Quia enim sancta Ecclesia cunctis in honore est, infirmi quique in ea qui transitoriis successionibus laetantur, quo nisi super ventum positi videntur elevati? quia subsequente persecutionis tempore, dum prosperitatis aura pertransit, eorum protinus elevatio corruit, et repente cadentes discunt, quia elevati prius in ventum sederunt. Quae videlicet verba etiam sancti viri personae specialiter congruunt, non ad id quod erat, sed ad id quod esse videbatur. Neque enim mentem illius prosperitas fugitiva levaverat, quam inter tot rerum affluentias miro semper virtutis pondere premebat; sed juxta hoc quod videri exterius potuit, qui in suis humilis, in alienis oculis elevatus fuit, et quasi super ventum positus, elisus est valide, quia rebus exterioribus fultus, unde aestimabatur surgere, videbatur inde cecidisse. Quem videlicet casum sanctus vir in mente non pertulit, quia nulla adversitas dejicit, quem prosperitas nulla corrumpit. Qui enim veritati inhaeret, vanitati nullo modo succumbit, quia dum forti pede cogitationis intus intentionem fixerit, omne quod foras mutabiliter agitur, ad arcem mentis minime pertingit. Sequitur:

CAPUT XXXIV [Vet.

XXVI, Rec. XXV]. VERS. 23. Scio quia morti trades me, ubi constituta est domus omni viventi. 66. Nemo mortem effugit; pauci voluptatum foveam et interitum. Elias mortem distulit, non evasit. In superiori hujus operis parte (Supra, lib. XII, ca, Edit. Gussanv. novae, n. 13) tractatum est quod ante adventum Domini ad inferni receptacula etiam justi descenderent, quamvis non in suppliciis, sed in requie servarentur. Quod nunc testimoniis edocere negligimus, quia in ea jam sufficienter probatum putamus. Hoc ergo quod dicitur: Scio quia morti trades me, ubi constituta domus est omni viventi, recte beato Job etiam juxta historiam congruit, dum nimirum constat quia ante Redemptoris gratiam ad inferni claustra etiam justi ducerentur. Ipsa quippe inferni receptio domus omnium viventium dicitur, quia nullus huc venit qui ante Mediatoris adventum non 669 illuc ipsa corruptionis suae conditione pertransiit, nullus huc venit qui ad carnis mortem ejusdem corruptionis suae gressibus non tetendit. De qua videlicet morte per Psalmistam dicitur: Quis est homo qui vivit, et non videbit mortem (Psal. LXXXVIII, 49)? Nam etsi ad coelum raptus Elias esse perhibetur, mortem tamen distulit, non evasit. De ipso quippe ore veritatis dicitur: Elias quidem venturus est, et restituet omnia (Matth. XVII, 11). Veniet enim restituturus omnia, quia ad hoc nimirum huic mundo restituitur, ut et praedicationis munera impleat, et carnis debitum solvat. Quae tamen sancti viri sententia juxta allegoriae mysterium sanctae Ecclesiae vocibus ex persona congruit infirmorum, qui fidem verbo tenus tenent, sed contra praecepta fidei suis desideriis famulantur. Ait etenim: Scio quia morti trades me, ubi constituta domus est omni viventi. Quia enim multos in se voluptatibus deditos conspicit, eorumque jam interitum praescit, pensat quod in via vitae praesentis suis quidem desideriis serviunt, sed tamen ad mortis domum perveniunt omnes qui in ea carnaliter vivunt. Sunt vero nonnulli qui in voluptatum suarum foveam corruunt, sed tamen per lamenta poenitentiae ab imis citius pedem reducunt, quos supernae percussionis verbera ad eruditionem potius quam ad exstinctionem secant. Ex quibus apte subjungitur:

CAPUT XXXV.

VERS. 24. Verumtamen non ad consumptionem eorum emittis manum tuam et si corruerint, ipse salvabis. 67. Nonnulli a Deo percussi ad eruditionem non ad exstinctionem a peccato liberantur. In quibus profecto verbis hoc solerter debet intelligi, quod beatus Job, dum sua narrat, in se alios transfigurat. Velut enim de se specialiter dicebat: Elevasti me, et quasi super ventum ponens elisisti me valide; scio quia morti trades me, ubi constituta est domus omni viventi; et tamen non de se, sed de aliis adjugit: Verumtamen non ad consumptionem eorum emittis manum tuam. Dum enim de se loquens ratiocinando causas de aliis subdit, quam multorum personas in se significet ostendit. Manum itaque suam Dominus ad consumptionem peccantium non emittit, cum feriendo a peccatis corripit, et corruentes salvat, dum cadentes ad culpam in salutem corporis vulnerat, ut prostrati exterius, interius surgant, quatenus jacentes corpore ad interiorem statum redeant, qui stantes exterius a statu mentis jacebant. Sequitur:

CAPUT XXXVI [Rec. XXVI].

VERS. 25. Flebam quondam super eo qui afflictus erat, et compatiebatur anima mea pauperi. 68. Eleemosyna ex mentis affectu quo fit, potissimum aestimanda. Largitorem non faciat rerum abundantia, sed compassio. Quamvis vera compassio est passioni proximi ex largitate concurrere, nonnunquam tamen, cum exteriora quaeque abunde ad largiendum suppetunt, celerius dantis manus dationem invenit quam animus dolorem. Unde scire necesse est quia ille perfecte tribuit, qui cum eo quod afflicto porrigit afflicti quoque in se animum sumit, ut prius in se dolentis passionem transferat, et tunc contra dolorem illius per ministerium concurrat. Nam saepe, ut praediximus, largitorem muneris rerum facit abundantia, et non virtus compassionis. Qui enim afflicto perfecte compatitur, 670 plerumque et hoc indigenti tribuit, in quo ipse si dederit angustatur. Et tunc plena est cordis nostri compassio, cum malum inopiae pro proximo suscipere non metuimus, ut illum a passione liberemus. 69. Pietatis formam Christus nobis dedit, et docuit Paulus. Quam videlicet pietatis formam Mediator nobis Dei et hominum dedit. Qui cum posset nobis etiam non moriendo concurrere, subvenire tamen moriendo hominibus voluit, quia nos videlicet minus amasset, nisi et vulnera nostra susciperet; nec vim nobis suae dilectionis ostenderet, nisi hoc quod a nobis tolleret ad tempus ipse sustineret. Passibiles quippe mortalesque nos reperit, et qui nos existere fecit ex nihilo, revocare videlicet etiam sine sua morte potuit a passione. Sed ut quanta esset virtus compassionis ostenderet, fieri pro nobis dignatus est quod esse nos noluit, ut in semetipso temporaliter mortem susciperet, quam a nobis in perpetuum fugaret. An non in divinitatis suae divitiis nobis invisibilis permanens, miris nos potuit virtutibus ditare? [Vet. XXVII.] Sed ut ad internas divitias rediret homo, foras apparere dignatus est pauper Deus. Unde et praedicator egregius, ut ad largitatis gratiam viscera nostrae compassionis accenderet, dixit: Propter nos egenus factus est, cum dives esset (II Cor. VIII, 9). Qui sic etiam dicit: Non ut aliis sit remissio, vobis autem tribulatio (Ibid., 13). Haec procul dubio condescendendo infirmis intulit, quoniam quibusdam inopiam ferre non valentibus tolerabilius est minus tribuere quam post largitatem suam ex inopiae angustia murmurare. Nam ut ad magna largiendi studia audientium mentes accenderet, paulo post intulit, dicens: Hoc autem dico: Qui parce seminat, parce et metet (II Cor. IX, 6). Plus autem nonnunquam esse dicimus compati ex corde, quam dare, quia quisquis perfecte indigenti compatitur, minus aestimat omne quod dat. Nisi enim dantis manum bona voluntas vinceret, idem praedicator egregius discipulis non dixisset: Qui non solum facere, sed et velle coepistis ab anno priori (II Cor. VIII, 10). Facile quippe est in bono opere obedire etiam nolentem. Sed haec magna in discipulis virtus exstiterat, eos bonum quod illis praeceptum est et ante voluisse. 70. Exteriora largiens, aliquid de suo, compassionem impendens, aliquid dat de seipso. Quia itaque vir sanctus apud omnipotentem Deum aliquando majus datum noverat mentis esse quam muneris, dicat: Flebam quondam super eo qui afflictus erat, et compatiebatur anima mea pauperi. Exteriora etenim largiens, rem extra semetipsum praebuit. Qui autem fletum et compassionem proximo tribuit, ei aliquid etiam de semetipso dedit. Idcirco autem plus compassionem quam datum dicimus, quia rem quamlibet plerumque dat etiam qui non compatitur, nunquam autem qui vere compatitur quod necessarium proximo conspicit negat. 71. Ecclesia filiis suis poenitentibus compatiens, lacrymas et orationes jungit. Quae nimirum sententia bene quoque sanctae Ecclesiae vocibus congruit: quae dum afflictos quosque per lamenta poenitentiae conspicit, suos ei oratione continua fletus jungit, et toties egeno 671 compatitur, quoties menti virtutibus nudatae interventionis suae precibus opitulatur. Super afflictum quippe compatientes plangimus, quando aliena damna nostra deputamus, et culpas delinquentium nostris mundare fletibus nitimur. Quod videlicet agentes, plus plerumque nobis quam his pro quibus agitur subvenimus, quia apud intimum arbitrum et gratiam charitatis aspirantem, commissa quaeque perfecte diluit propria, qui pure plangit aliena. Persecutionis igitur ultimae sancta Ecclesia tribulatione deprehensa, reducat ad memoriam pacis tempore bona quae gessit, dicens: Flebam quondam super eo qui afflictus erat, et compatiebatur anima mea pauperi. Quae internae lucis gaudia aeterna desiderans, sed tamen adhuc dilata, quia malis exterioribus premitur, sancti viri vocibus adjungat:

CAPUT XXXVII [Rec. XXVII].

VERS. 26. Exspectabam bona, et venerunt mihi mala; praestolabor lucem, et eruperunt tenebrae. 72. Electorum, Ecclesiaeque dolor, etiam tempore pacis, a suis persecutionem tolerantium. Fidelis enim populus exspectat bona, sed mala suscipit; praestolatur lucem, et tenebras incurrit, quia per remunerationis gratiam interesse jamjamque angelorum se gaudiis sperat, et tamen hic diutius dilatus, manus persequentium tolerat; et qui se quantocius aestimat aeternae lucis retributione perfrui, hic adhuc compellitur persecutorum suorum tenebras pati. Quae videlicet mala persequentium minus dolerent, si ab infidelibus adversariisque consurgerent. Sed eo deterius mentem electorum cruciant, quo ab illis veniunt, de quibus bona praesumebant. Unde adhuc subditur: VERS. 27. Interiora mea efferbuerunt absque ulla requie. Sanctae quippe Ecclesiae interiora effervescere est ipsos quoque quos per amorem fidei velut viscera ante gestaverat in persecutionis atrocitate tolerare. Qui secreta prius illius cognoscentes, quanto sciunt ubi magis doleat, tanto deterius ab afflictione ejus minime quiescunt. Quos tamen et pacis suae tempore graviter tolerat, quia suis praedicationibus eorum mores contrarios pensat. Gemit enim, cum eorum vitam sibi dissimilem conspicit. De quibus et apte subjungitur: IBID. Praevenerunt me dies afflictionis. [Vet. XXVIII.] Scit namque sancta electorum Ecclesia quod persecutione ultima, mala multa passura sit; sed hanc afflictionis suae dies praeveniunt, quia malorum vitam intra se graviter etiam tempore pacis portat. Nam quamvis diebus ultimis aperta infidelium persecutio sequatur, hanc tamen et priusquam appareat, hi qui in ea verbo tenus fideles sunt, pravis moribus antecurrunt. Sequitur:

CAPUT XXXVIII [Rec. XXVIII].

VERS. 28. Moerens incedebam, sine furore consurgens in turba clamavi. 73. Sancti in honoris culmine humilitatem, in rebus laetis moerorem servant. Contra prosperitatem intus dimicant. Omne quod sine Dei visione abundat, inopia est. Notandum sollicite juxta historiam video quod sanctus vir, qui paulo superius dixit: Elevasti me, inferius adjungit: Moerens incedebam. Miro enim ordine, uno eodemque tempore convenire in actibus bonorum solet et foris honor culminis, et intus afflictae moeror humilitatis. Unde sanctus quoque vir elevatus rebus et honoribus moerens incedebat, quia etsi hunc praelatum hominibus gloria potestatis ostenderat, 672 interius tamen moerore suo secretum sacrificium Domino contriti cordis offerebat. Sacrificium quippe Deo est spiritus contribulatus (Psal. L, 19). Sciunt autem electi quique consideratione intima contra exterioris excellentiae tentamenta pugnare. Qui si ad exteriorem felicitatem suam cor apponerent, justi profecto non essent. Sed quia cor humanum non potest de ipsis prosperitatibus rerum quantulacunque gloria nullo modo tentari, contra ipsam prosperitatem suam sancti viri intrinsecus dimicant, non dico ne in elatione, sed ne in ejus saltem amore succumbant. Cui valde succubuisse est, captivam mentem ejus desideriis subdidisse. Quis autem terrena sapiens, temporalia amplectens, beatum Job inter tot prospera laetum non crederet, cum ei suppeteret salus corporis, vita filiorum, incolumitas familiae, integritas gregum? Sed quia in his omnibus non gauderet, ipse sibi testis est, qui ait: Moerens incedebam. Sancto enim viro adhuc in hac peregrinatione posito omne quod sine visione Dei abundat inopia est, quia cum sibi omnia electi adesse vident, gemunt quod omnium auctorem non vident; eisque totum hoc minus est, quia adhuc species unius deest; sicque eos foris exaltat gratia supernae dispensationis, ut tamen intus sub disciplina teneat moeror magistrae charitatis. Per quam videlicet discunt ut de his quae exterius accipiunt, apud semetipsos semper amplius humilientur, mentem sub jugo teneant disciplinae, nunquam ex potestatis licentia ad impatientiam erumpant. Unde et apte subjungitur: Sine furore consurgens in turba clamavi. Saepe namque seditiosorum tumultus hominum, praepositorum suorum mentem lacessunt, suique ordinis limitem inordinatis motibus excedunt. 74. Amica potestati pene semper impatientia est, quam superant boni. Et plerumque qui praesunt, nisi in ore cordis Spiritus sancti freno teneantur, in iratae retributionis atrocitatem prosiliunt, quantumque praevalent agere, tantum sibi in subditis aestimant licere. Amica etenim potestati pene semper impatientia est; eique etiam malae subjectae imperat, quia quod ipsa sentit, potestas exsequitur. Sed sancti viri plus se interius patientiae jugo subjiciunt, quam foris hominibus praesunt; et eo veriorem principatum foris exhibent, quo humiliorem Deo intrinsecus famulatum tenent; atque idcirco saepe plus quosdam tolerant, quo se de eis ulcisci amplius possunt; ac ne unquam ad illicita transeant, plerumque nolunt pro se exsequi etiam quod licet; subjectorum strepitus sufferunt, per amorem increpant quos per mansuetudinem portant. Unde nunc recte dicitur: Sine furore consurgens in turba clamavi, quia nimirum boni contra tumultus insolentium clamorem habent, et furorem non habent, quoniam eos quos clementer tolerant docere non cessant. Sed haec quae juxta historiam de uno diximus, juxta allegoriam necesse est ut de diversis electis Ecclesiae sentiamus. Ipsa quippe in electis suis etiam per prospera incedit moerens, quia nil sibi vere prosperum deputat, quousque bonum quod singulariter quaerit apprehendat. Fideles quippe illius temporali quidem pace perfruuntur, sed perpetuo suspirant; honorantur, et afflicti sunt; quia plerumque ibi videntur in culmine, ubi cives non sunt. 673 Ipsa etiam in turba sine furore consurgit, et clamat, quia pravorum vitam studio rectae aemulationis, non autem vesania furoris insequitur. Irascitur et amat, saevit et tranquilla est, quatenus infirmos suos corrigat ex aemulatione, faveat ex pietate. Sequitur:

CAPUT XXXIX [Rec. XXIX].

VERS. 29. Frater fui draconum, et socius struthionum. 75. Nulla vera sanctitas, nisi quae inter malos probata fuit. Quid draconum nomine nisi malitiosorum hominum vita signatur? De quibus et per prophetam dicitur: Traxerunt ventum quasi dracones (Jerem. XIV, 6). Perversi etenim quique ventum quasi dracones trahunt, cum malitiosa superbia inflantur. Qui autem struthionum appellatione intelligi, nisi simulatores solent? Struthio etenim pennas habet, et volatum non habet; quia simulatores quique speciem sanctitatis habent, sed virtutem sanctitatis non habent. Visio quippe eos bonae actionis decorat, sed a terra minime penna virtutis levat. Electus itaque sanctae Ecclesiae populus, quia pacis suae tempore intra se quosdam malitiosos ac simulatores patitur, dicat: Frater fui draconum, et socius struthionum. Quod beati quoque Job vocibus specialiter congruit, qui ad culmen magnae fortitudinis bonus inter malos fuit. [Vet. XXIX.] Nullus quippe perfectus est, qui inter proximorum mala patiens non est. Qui enim aequanimiter aliena mala non tolerat, ipse sibi per impatientiam testis est quia a boni plenitudine longe distat. Abel quippe esse renuit (7, q. 1, c. Adversitas, § 3, p. Abel), quem Cain malitia non exercet (Genes. IV, 3 seq.). 76. Mali inter bonos hic permisti, cur? Sic in tritura areae grana sub paleis premuntur, sic flores inter spinas prodeunt, et rosa quae redolet crescit cum spina quae pungit. Duos namque filios habuit primus homo, sed unus electus alter reprobus fuit (Genes. IV, 1, 2). Tres quoque filios Noe arca continuit, sed duobus in humilitate persistentibus, unus ad patris irrisionem ruit (Ibid., IX, 18). Duos Abraham filios habuit, sed unus innocens, alius vero fratris persecutor fuit (Ibid., XVI, 15; XXI, 9). Duos quoque Isaac filios habuit, unus in humilitate servatus, alter vero et priusquam nasceretur reprobatus est (Ibid., XXV, 24 seq.). Duodecim Jacob filios genuit, sed ex his unus per innocentiam venditus, caeteri vero per malitiam venditores fratris fuerunt [Ibid., XXXVII, 27). Duodecim quoque apostoli in sancta

Ecclesia sunt electi, sed ne improbati remanerent, unus eis admistus est, qui eos persequens probaret. Sic namque justo peccator cum malitia jungitur, sicut in fornace auro palea cum igne sociatur, ut quo ardet palea, purgetur aurum. Hi ergo veraciter boni sunt, qui in bonitate persistere etiam inter malos possunt. Hinc etiam sponsi voce sanctae Ecclesiae dicitur: Sicut lilium inter spinas, sic amica mea inter filias (Cant. II, 2). Hinc ad Ezechielem Dominus dicit: Fili hominis, increduli et subversores sunt tecum, et cum scorpionibus habitas (Ezech. II, 6). Hinc Petrus vitam beati Lot glorificat, dicens: Et justum Lot oppressum a nefandorum injuria conversatione eripuit (II Pet. II, 7). Aspectu enim et auditu justus erat, habitans apud eos qui de die in diem animam justi iniquis operibus cruciabant. Hinc Paulus discipulorum vitam glorificat, et glorificando 674 confirmat, dicens: In medio nationis pravae et perversae, inter quos lucetis sicut luminaria in mundo, verbum vitae continentes (Philip. II, 15). Hinc per Joannem angelus Pergami Ecclesiae attestatur, dicens: Scio ubi habitas, ubi sedes est Satanae, et tenes nomen meum, et non negasti fidem meam (Apoc. II, 13). Beatus igitur Job ut ostendat cujus fortitudinis fuerit, insinuet cum quibus vixit, dicens: Frater fui draconum, et socius struthionum. Quia minus esset quod ipse bona ageret, nisi et ad bonitatis suae cumulum ab aliis mala toleraret. Sequitur:

CAPUT XL [Rec. XXX].

VERS. 30. Cutis mea denigrata est super me, et ossa mea aruerunt prae caumate. 77. Propter infirmorum casum, fortes zeli sui igne aduruntur. Haec juxta historiam pensare negligimus, quia videlicet sermonis virtus patet ex poena passionis. Sed quia, ut saepe jam diximus, plerumque beatus Job sic narrat gesta, ut gerenda praenuntiet, bene hoc sanctae Ecclesiae vocibus congruit, quae dolorem persecutionis ultimae in infirmis graviter sentit. Cumque ab illa alii pereunt, valentiores quique moerore cruciantur. Exterior quippe causa ejus est terrena dispensatio, interior vero cura coelestis. Cutis ergo nomine infirmi signantur, qui nunc in ea exteriori utilitati deserviunt. Per ossa vero fortes ejus figurati sunt, in quibus corporis illius tota compago solidatur. Quia igitur aut provocati muneribus, aut persecutionibus afflicti, multi in ea ab statu fidei infirmi cadunt, eamque ipsi postquam ceciderunt persequuntur, quid aliud quam cutis suae nigredinem patitur, ut in ipsis postmodum foeda appareat, in quibus prius pulchra videbatur? Dum enim hi qui prius exteriora bene dispensare consueverant contra electos Dei postmodum saeviunt, quasi cutis Ecclesiae anteactae justitiae colorem perdidit, quae ad nigredinem iniquitatis venit. Quod Jeremias etiam sub praecipui metalli specie deplorat, dicens: Quomodo obscuratum est aurum, mutatus est color optimus (Thren. IV, 1)? Perversi ergo dum ab ejus sacramentis exeunt, plerumque inter reprobos locum honoris sumunt, ut ipsi contra sanctam Ecclesiam ex auctoritate saeviant, qui hanc atrocius quasi sciendo contemnunt. Unde et cum diceret: Cutis mea denigrata est, addidit, super me, quia hos quos prius ad decorem justitiae quasi candidos habuit, post deterius nigros portat. Sed cum cutis ad nigredinem vertitur, fortes qui in illa sunt zelo fidei contabescunt. Unde apte subjungit: Et ossa mea aruerunt prae caumate. Sic namque et priori tempore os fortissimum sanctae Ecclesiae quadam ariditate taedii Paulus aestuabat, cum quibusdam cadentibus diceret: Quis infirmatur, et ego non infirmor? quis scandalizatur, et ego non uror (II Cor. XI, 29)? Cutis ergo denigratur, et ossa prae caumate arescunt, quia dum infirmi ad iniquitatem prosiliunt, fortes quique zeli sui igne cruciantur, Sequitur:

CAPUT XLI [Vet.

XXX, Rec. XXXI]. Vers. 31. Versa est in luctum cithara mea, et organum meum in vocem flentium. 78. Verbi divini ministri, cum despiciuntur, sileant, et ad poenitentiae luctum confugiant. Abstinentiam discretio moderetur. Vitia carnis exstinguantur, non caro. Quia organum per fistulas, et cithara per chordas sonat, potest per citharam recta operatio, 675 per organum vero sancta praedicatio designari. Per fistulas quippe organi ora praedicantium, per chordas vero citharae intentionem recte viventium non inconvenienter accipimus. Quae dum ad vitam aliam per afflictionem carnis tenditur, quasi extenuata chorda in cithara per intuentium admirationem sonat. Siccatur etenim chorda, ut congruum in cithara cantum reddat, quia et sancti viri castigant corpus suum, et servituti subjiciunt (I Cor. IX, 27), atque ab infimis ad superiora tenduntur. Pensandum quoque est quod chorda in cithara si minus tenditur, non sonat; si amplius, raucum sonat, quia nimirum virtus abstinentiae aut omnino nulla est, si tantum quisque corpus non edomat quantum valet; aut valde inordinata est, si corpus atterit plus quam valet. Per abstinentiam quippe carnis vitia sunt exstinguenda, non caro; et tanto quisque sibimet debet moderamine praeesse, ut et ad culpam caro non superbiat, et tamen ad effectum rectitudinis in operatione subsistat. Intueri inter haec egregium praedicatorem libet, quanta arte magisterii fidelium animas velut in cithara chordas tensas, alias amplius tendendo extenuat, atque alias a tensione sua relaxando conservat. Aliis etenim dicit: Non in comessationibus et ebrietatibus, non in cubilibus et impudicitiis (Rom. XIII, 13). Et rursus ait: Mortificate membra vestra quae sunt super terram (Coloss. III, 5). Et tamen praedicatori charissimo scribit, dicens: Noli adhuc aquam bibere, sed modico vino utere, propter stomachum tuum, et frequentes tuas infirmitates (I Tim. V, 23). Illas ergo chordas extenuando tendit, ne non tensae omnimodo non sonent; hanc vero a tensione temperat, ne dum plus tenditur, minus sonet. 79. Duplex exhortationis modus, alius verbis, alius operibus. Sive autem sancti praedicatores in Ecclesia, seu quilibet simplices et abstinentes, prout vires accipiunt, in ea proximis suis canticum bonae exhortationis reddunt. Nam et prudentes quique ad praedicationis fructum solerter invigilant, atque ut alios ad vitam pertrahant, sono magnae persuasionis elaborant; et qui in ea tardioris ingenii videntur, ex ipso suae vitae merito in quantum se posse conspiciunt, exhortationis erga alios 676 auctoritatem sumunt, atque ad coelestem patriam quos valent trahere non desistunt. Sed sancta Ecclesia extremis persecutionibus pressa, cum verba sua a reprobis contemni considerat, amoris sui gratiam ad sola lamenta format, quia nimirum deflet quos exhortando trahere non valet. Dicat ergo: Versa est in luctum cithara mea, et organum meum in vocem flentium. Ac si aperte fateatur dicens: Pacis quidem meae tempore per alios parva more citharae, per alios vero more organi magna et sonora praedicabam, sed nunc in luctum cithara, et organum in vocem flentium versum est, quia dum me contemni conspicio, eos qui praedicationis cantum non audiunt deploro. Haec per quosdam sancta Ecclesia in fine factura est. haec per quosdam in suis jam exordiis fecit. Primus quippe martyr Stephanus Judaeis persequentibus prodesse praedicando conatus est, quos tamen post verba praedicationis, dum videret ad jaciendos lapides convolasse, fixis genibus orabat, dicens: Domine Jesu, ne statuas illic hoc peccatum (Act. VII, 59). Quid ergo buic, qui diu et parva et magna narraverat, nisi jam suae citharae atque organi cantus silebat atque in luctum versa fuerant, quia eos quos praedicando non traxerat, amando flebat? Quod nimirum quotidie sancta Ecclesia agere non desistit, quae praedicationis verbum pene ubique conticuisse jam conspicit. Alii namque loqui dissimulant, alii recta audire contemnunt. Sed electorum mens dum tacere cantum praedicationis conspicit, gemens ac tacita ad fletus redit. Dicat ergo: Versa est in luctum cithara mea, et organum meum in vocem flentium, quia electus quisque quo sanctae praedicationis vox siluit, eo damna Ecclesiae gravius plangit. Hucusque beatus Job descripsit mala quae pertulit, hoc vero ex loco incipit narrare subtilius bona quae fecit. Sed doloris verba historica atque allegorica expositione transcurrimus, virtutum vero opera ex magna parte juxta solius historiae textum tenemus, ne si haec ad indaganda mysteria trahimus, veritatem fortasse operis vacuare videamur.

LIBER VIGESIMUS PRIMUS.

Exponitur cap. XXXI lib. Job, ad versum 24 exclusive, et laudatis prius castitate, humilitate, misericordia, multa de occasione peccati fugienda potissimum docentur.

CAPUT PRIMUM.

1. In explicandis sacris Scripturis, nec solus historicus sensus sequendus est, nec semper allegoricus. Intellectus sacri eloquii inter textum et mysterium tanta est libratione pensandus, ut utriusque partis lance moderata, hunc neque nimiae discussionis pondus deprimat, neque rursus torpor incuriae vacuum relinquat. Multae quippe ejus sententiae tanta allegoriarum conceptione sunt gravidae, ut quisquis eas ad solam tenere historiam nititur, earum notitia per suam incuriam privetur. Nonnullae vero ita exterioribus praeceptis inserviunt, ut si quis eas subtilius penetrare desiderat, 677 intus quidem nihil inveniat, sed hoc sibi etiam quod foris loquuntur abscondat. 2. Probatur prior propositio. Unde bene quoque narratione historica per significationem dicitur: Tollens Jacob virgas populeas virides, et amygdalinas, et ex platanis, ex parte decorticavit eas, detractisque corticibus, in his quae exspoliata fuerant candor apparuit; illa vero quae integra erant viridia permanserunt, atque in hunc modum color effectus est varius (Genes. XXX, 37). Ubi et subditur: Posuitque eas in canalibus in quibus effundebatur aqua, ut cum venissent greges ad bibendum, ante oculos haberent virgas, et in aspectu earum conciperent. Factumque est ut in ipso calore coitus oves intuerentur virgas, et parerent maculosa et varia, et diverso colore respersa (Ibid., 38, 39). Quid est enim virgas virides, amygdalinas, atque ex platanis ante gregum oculos ponere, nisi per Scripturae sacrae seriem antiquorum Patrum vitas atque sententias in exemplum populis praebere? Quae nimirum quia juxta rationis examen rectae sunt, virgae nominantur. Quibus ex parte corticem subtrahit, ut in his quae exspoliantur, intimus candor appareat; et ex parte corticem servat, ut sicut fuerant exterius, in viriditate permaneant; variusque virgarum color efficitur, dum cortex ex parte subtrahitur, ex parte retinetur. Ante considerationis enim nostrae oculos praecedentium patrum sententiae quasi virgae variae ponuntur. In quibus dum plerumque intellectum litterae fugimus, quasi corticem subtrahimus, et dum plerumque intellectum litterae sequimur, quasi corticem reservamus. Dumque ab ipsis cortex litterae subducitur, allegoriae candor interior demonstratur, et dum cortex relinquitur, exterioris intelligentiae virentia exempla monstrantur. Quas bene Jacob in aquae canalibus posuit, quia et Redemptor noster in libris eas sacrae scientiae, quibus nos intrinsecus infundimur, fixit. Has aspicientes arietes cum ovibus coeunt, quia rationales nostri spiritus, dum in earum intentione defixi sunt, singulis quibusque actionibus permiscentur, ut tales fetus operum procreent, qualia exempla praecedentium in vocibus praeceptorum vident; et diversum colorem proles boni operis habeat, quia et nonnunquam subtracto litterae cortice, acutius interna considerat, et reservato nonnunquam historiae tegmine, bene se in exterioribus format. 3. Probatur altera. Nam quia divinae sententiae aliquando interius rimandae sunt, aliquando exterius observandae, per Salomonem quoque dicitur: Qui fortiter premit ubera ad eliciendum lac, exprimit butyrum; et qui vehementer emungit, elicit sanguinem (Prov. XXX, 33). Ubera quippe fortiter premimus, cum verba sacri eloquii subtili intellectu pensamus, qua pressione dum lac quaerimus, butyrum invenimus, quia dum nutriri vel tenui intellectu quaerimus, ubertate internae pinguedinis ungimur. Quod tamen nec nimie nec semper agendum est, ne dum lac quaeritur ab uberibus, sanguis sequatur. Plerumque etenim quidam dum verba sacri eloquii plus quam debent discutiunt, 678 in carnalem intellectum cadunt. Sanguinem quippe elicit, qui vehementer emungit, quia carnale efficitur hoc quod ex nimia spiritus discussione sentitur. Unde necesse est ut beati Job opera, quae inter increpantium amicorum verba idcirco narrat ne afflicta mens illius in desperatione deficiat, juxta pondus historiae perscrutemur, ne si haec animus plusquam necesse est spiritaliter investiget, a verborum ejus uberibus sanguis nobis pro lacte respondeat. Si quando vero quaedam mystica in suorum operum narratione permiscet, ad haec necesse est ut mens concita redeat, ad quae hanc ipse, ut datur intelligi, ordo loquentis vocat. Nam sanctus vir postquam ea quae sibi per flagellum Domini fuerant inflicta narravit, nunc per ordinem proprias enumerando virtutes, qualis ante flagellum fuerit innotescit; sic vitae suae historiam texens, ut ei perrarum aliquid quod allegorice intelligi possit interserat, quatenus et ex magna parte historica sint quae memorat, et tamen aliquando per haec eadem ad spiritalem intelligentiam consurgat. Qua itaque fortitudine ab omni lapsu exteriora sua custodiae interioris disciplina constrinxerit, insinuat dicens:

CAPUT II.

CAP. XXXI, VERS. 1. Pepigi foedus cum oculis meis, ut ne cogitarem quidem de virgine. 4. Ne mens illicita concupiscat, cohibendi sunt sensus exteriores qui sunt aditus mentis. Intueri non decet quod concupiscere non licet. Cum sit invisibilis anima, nequaquam corporearum rerum delectatione tangitur, nisi quod inhaerens corpori quasi quaedam egrediendi foramina ejusdem corporis sensus habet. Visus quippe, auditus, gustus, odoratus, et tactus, quasi quaedam viae mentis sunt, quibus foras veniat, et ea quae extra ejus sunt substantiam concupiscat. Per hos etenim corporis sensus quasi per fenestras quasdam exteriora quaeque anima respicit, respiciens concupiscit. Hinc etenim Jeremias ait: Ascendit mors per fenestras nostras, ingressa est domos nostras (Jerem. IX, 21). Mors quippe per fenestras ascendit, et domum ingreditur, cum per sensus corporis concupiscentia veniens, habitaculum intrat mentis. Quod contra hoc quod jam saepe diximus de justis per Isaiam dicitur: Qui sunt hi qui ut nubes volant, et quasi columbae ad fenestras suas (Isai. LX, 8)? Justi namque volare ut nubes dicti sunt, quia a terrenis contagiis sublevantur; et quasi columbae ad fenestras suas sunt, quia per sensus corporis exteriora quaeque intentione non respiciunt rapacitatis, eosque foras non rapit concupiscentia carnalis. Quisquis vero per has corporis fenestras incaute exterius respicit, plerumque in delectationem peccati etiam nolens cadit; atque obligatus desideriis, incipit velle quod noluit. Praeceps quippe anima dum ante non providet, ne incaute videat quod concupiscat, caeca post incipit desiderare quod vidit. Unde et Prophetae mens, quae sublevata saepe mysteriis internis intererat, quia alienam conjugem incaute vidit, obtenebrata postmodum sibimet illicite conjunxit (II Reg. XI, 2). Sanctus autem vir, qui acceptis corporis sensibus velut subjectis 679 ministris quidam aequissimus judex praeest, culpas conspicit antequam veniant, et velut insidianti hosti fenestras corporis claudit, dicens: Pepigi foedus cum oculis meis, ut ne cogitarem quidem de virgine. Ut enim cogitationes cordis caste servare potuisset, foedus cum oculis pepigit, ne prius incante aspiceret quod postmodum invitus amaret. Valde namque est quod caro deorsum trahit, et semel species formae cordi per oculos illigata vix magni luctaminis manu solvitur. Ne ergo quaedam lubrica in cogitatione versemus, providendum nobis est; quia intueri non decet quod non licet concupisci. Ut enim munda mens in cogitatione servetur a lascivia voluptatis suae deprimendi sunt oculi, quasi quidam raptores ad culpam. Neque enim Eva lignum vetitum contigisset, nisi hoc prius incaute respiceret. Scriptum quippe est: Vidit mulier quod bonum esset lignum ad vescendum, et pulchrum oculis, aspectuque delectabile; et tulit de fructu illius, et comedit (Genes. III, 6). Hinc ergo pensandum est quanto debeamus moderamine erga illicita visum restringere nos qui mortaliter vivimus, si et mater viventium per oculos ad mortem venit. Hinc etiam sub Judaeae voce, quae exteriora videndo concupiscens bona interiora perdiderat, propheta dicit: Oculus meus depraedatus est animam meam (Thren. III, 51). Concupiscendo enim visibilia, invisibiles virtutes amisit. Quae ergo interiorem fructum per exteriorem visum perdidit, per oculum corporis pertulit praedam cordis. Unde nobis ad custodiendam cordis munditiam exteriorum quoque sensuum disciplina servanda est. Nam quantalibet virtute mens polleat, quantalibet gravitate vigeat, carnales tamen sensus puerile quiddam exterius perstrepunt, et nisi interioris gravitatis pondere et quasi juvenili quodam vigore refrenentur, ad fluxa quaeque et levia mentem enervem trahunt. 5. Exemplum Job non solum carnis, sed etiam cordis et mentis luxuriam refrenantis. Per Moysen luxuria perpetrata, per Christum etiam cogitata damnatur. Qui coeli civis est luxuriam deserat, non timore, sed charitate. Videamus igitur quomodo beatus Job id quod in eo fluxum ac puerile caro sapere potuit, juvenili sapientiae vigore restrinxit. Ait enim: Pepigi foedus cum oculis meis. Et quia non in se actionem tantummodo, sed et cogitationem luxuriae exstinxit, secutus adjunxit: Ut ne cogitarem quidem de virgine. Sciebat nimirum luxuriam esse in corde refrenandam, sciebat, per sancti Spiritus donum, quod Redemptor noster veniens legis praecepta transcenderet, et ab electis suis non solum luxuriam carnis, sed etiam cordis aboleret, dicens: Scriptum est: Non adulterabis; ego autem dico vobis, quoniam omnis qui viderit mulierem ad concupiscendum eam, jam moechatus est eam in corde suo (Matth. V, 27). Per Moysen quippe luxuria perpetrata, per auctorem vero munditiae luxuria cogitata damnatur. Hinc est enim quod discipulis primus Ecclesiae pastor dicit: Propter quod succincti lumbos mentis vestrae, sobrii perfecte sperate in eam quae offertur vobis gratiam (I Pet. I, 13). Lumbos enim carnis succingere est luxuriam ab effectu refrenare. Lumbos vero mentis succingere est hanc etiam a cogitatione restringere. Hinc est quod angelus, qui Joannem alloquitur (Apoc. I, 13), zona aurea super mamillas cinctus 680 esse perhibetur. Quia enim Testamenti Novi munditia etiam cordis luxuriam frenat, angelus qui in eo apparuit in pectore cinctus venit. Quem bene zona aurea stringit, quia quisquis supernae patriae civis est, non jam timore supplicii, sed amore charitatis immunditiam deserit. Malum vero luxuriae aut cogitatione perpetratur, aut opere. Callidus namque hostis noster cum ab effectu operis expellitur, secreta polluere cogitatione molitur. Unde et serpenti a Domino dicitur: Pectore et ventre repes (Genes. III, 14). Serpens videlicet ventre repit, quando hostis lubricus per humana membra sibimet subdita usque ad expletionem operis luxuriam exercet. Serpens autem repit pectore, quando eos quos in opere luxuriae non valet polluit in cogitatione. Alius itaque luxuriam jam perpetrat actione, huic serpens repit ex ventre. Alius autem perpetrandam versat in mente, huic serpens repit ex pectore. Sed quia per cogitationem ad explenda opera pervenitur, recte serpens prius pectore, et postmodum repere ventre describitur. [Rec. III.] Unde beatus Job, quia disciplinam etiam in cogitatione tenuit, una custodia serpentis pectus ventremque superavit, dicens: Pepigi foedus cum oculis meis, ut ne cogitarem quidem de virgine. [Vet. III.] Quam nimirum cordis munditiam quisquis adipisci non appetit, quid aliud quam ejusdem a se munditiae auctorem repellit? Unde et beatus Job protinus subdit:

CAPUT III.

VERS. 2. Quam enim partem Deus haberet in me desuper, et haereditatem Omnipotens de excelsis? 6. Ut Dei haereditas simus, in nobis peccatum non regnet. Nihil prodest vel superba castitas, vel humilitas non casta. Ac si aperte dicat: Si mentem in cogitatione polluero, ejus qui munditiae auctor est, esse haereditas nequaquam possum. Nulla enim bona sunt caetera, si occulti judicis oculis castitatis testimonio non approbantur. Omnes quippe virtutes in conspectu conditoris vicaria ope se sublevant, ut quia una virtus sine alia vel nulla est omnino, vel minima, vicissim sua conjunctione fulciantur. Si enim vel castitatem humilitas deserat, vel humilitatem castitas relinquat, apud auctorem humilitatis et munditiae prodesse quid praevalet vel superba castitas, vel humilitas inquinata? Sanctus igitur vir ut ab auctore suo in bonis reliquis possideri mereatur, cordis munditiam custodiens, dicat: Pepigi foedus cum oculis meis, ut ne cogitarem quidem de virgine. Quam enim partem haberet Deus in me desuper, et haereditatem Omnipotens de excelsis? Ac si aperte fateatur, dicens. Habere me possessionem suam excelsorum conditor renuit, si mens mea ante conspectum illius in infimis desideriis tabescit. 7. Cogitatio immunda non inquinat cum pulsat, sed cum per delectationem subjugat. In carne corruptibili sufficit peccatum non regnare. Sed inter haec (De poenit., dist. 2, c. 23) sciendum est aliud esse quod animus de tentatione carnis patitur, aliud vero cum per consensum delectationibus obligatur. Plerumque enim cogitatione prava pulsatur, sed renititur; plerumque autem cum perversum quid concipit, hoc intra semetipsum etiam per desiderium volvit. Et nimirum mentem nequaquam cogitatio immunda inquinat cum pulsat, sed cum hanc sibi per delectationem subjugat. Hinc etenim praedicator egregius dicit: Tentatio vos non apprehendat, nisi humana (I Cor. X, 13). Humana quippe tentatio est, 681 qua plerumque in cogitatione tangimur etiam nolentes, quia ut nonnunquam et illicita ad animum veniant, hoc utique in nobismetipsis ex humanitatis corruptibilis pondere habemus. Jam vero daemoniaca est, et non humana tentatio, cum ad hoc quod carnis corruptibilitas suggerit per consensum se animus astringit. Hinc iterum dicit: Non regnet peccatum in vestro mortali corpore (Rom. VI, 12). Peccatum quippe in mortali corpore nequaquam non esse, sed regnare prohibuit, quia in carne corruptibili non regnare potest, sed non esse non potest. Hoc ipsum namque ei de peccato tentari peccatum est, quo quia quandiu vivimus perfecte omnimodo non caremus; sancta praedicatio quoniam hoc expellere plene non potuit, ei de nostri cordis habitaculo regnum tulit, ut appetitus illicitus etsi plerumque bonis nostris cogitationibus occulte se quasi fur inserit, saltem si ingreditur, non dominetur. Vir igitur sanctus dicens: Pepigi foedus cum oculis meis, ut ne cogitarem quidem de virgine, nequaquam vult intelligi quia ejus animum culpa in cogitatione non contigit, sed quia nunquam hunc ex consensu superavit. Nam velut integerrimam possessionem Dei mentem suam contra adversarii depraedationem vindicat, qui protinus adjungit: Quam enim partem haberet Deus in me desuper, et haereditatem Omnipotens de excelsis? Ac si aperte dicat: Carne quidem mortali corruptionis conditioni subjaceo, sed auctori unde servio, si ei integrum a consensu culpae animum non defendo? Sequitur:

CAPUT IV [Vet.

et Rec. IV]. VERS. 3. Numquid non perditio est iniquo, et alienatio operantibus iniquitatem. 8. Justi per asperum iter ad salutis patriam, reprobi per amaena prata ad foveam tendunt.Festina consolatio bonorum est consideratus finis malorum. Dum enim ex eorum interitu malum conspiciunt quod evadunt, leve existimant quidquid adversi in hac vita patiuntur. Eant ergo nunc reprobi, et delectationum suarum desideria compleant, in finis sui damnatione sensuri sunt quia mortem male viventes amaverunt. Transitorio autem verbere affligantur electi, ut a pravitate flagella corrigant quos paterna pietas ad haereditatem servat. Nunc etenim flagellatur justus, et verbere disciplinae corrigitur, quia ad aeternae haereditatis patrimonium praeparatur. In suis autem voluptatibus relaxtur injustus, quia tanto ei temporalia bona suppetunt, quanto aeterna denegantur. Injustus ad debitam mortem currens, effrenatis voluptatibus utitur, quia et vituli qui mactandi sunt in liberis pastibus relinquuntur. At contra justus a delectationis transitoriae jucunditate restringitur, quia et nimirum vitulus ad laboris usum vitae deputatus sub jugo retinetur. Negantur electis in hac vita bona terrena, quia et aegris, quibus spes vivendi est, nequaquam a medico cuncta quae appetunt conceduntur. Dantur autem reprobis bona quae in hac vita appetunt, quia et desperatis aegris omne quod desiderant non negatur. Perpendant igitur justi quae sint mala, quae iniquos manent, et nequaquam eorum felicitati invideant quae percurrit. Quid est enim quod de eorum gaudiis admirentur, quando et ipsi per iter 682 asperum ad salutis patriam, et illi quasi per amoena prata ad foveam tendunt? Dicat ergo vir sanctus: Nunquid non perditio est iniquo, et alienatio operantibus iniquitatem? Quod videlicet alienationis verbum durius sonaret, si hoc interpres in suae linguae voce tenuisset. Quod enim apud nos alienatio, hoc apud Hebraeos anathema dicitur. Tunc ergo alienatio erit reprobis, cum ab haereditate districti judicis se anathema esse conspiciunt, quia hic eum perversis moribus contempserunt. Floreant igitur iniqui, a flore aeternae haereditatis alieni; justi vero semetipsos solerter inspiciant, et in cunctis actionibus suis a Domino se videri pertimescant. Unde et apte mox subditur:

CAPUT V.

VERS 4. Nonne ipse considerat vias meas, et cunctos gressus meos dinumerat? 9. Minutissimae cogitationes, et tenuissima verba quae parvi pendimus, in judicio Dei non praetermittentur. Per gradus culpae, crescit ordo sententiae condemnatoriae. Quid viarum nomine nisi actiones denuntiat? Hinc enim per Jeremiam dicitur: Bonas facite via, vestras et studia vestra (Jerem. VII, 3). Quid vero gressuum appellatione, nisi vel motus mentium, vel profectus accipimus meritorum? Quibus profecto gressibus ad semetipsam nos Veritas vocat, dicens: Venite ad me omnes, qui laboratis, et onerati estis (Matth. XI, 28). Ad se quippe venire nos Dominus praecipit, nimirum non gressibus corporis, sed profectibus cordis. Ipse namque ait: Veniet hora quando neque in monte hoc, neque in Jerosolymis adorabitis Patrem (Joan. IV, 21). Et paulo post: Veri adoratores adorabunt Patrem in spiritu et veritate, nam et Pater tales quaerit qui adorent eum

(Ibid., 23). In corde ergo esse gressus insinuat, quando et ut veniamus vocat et tamen motu corporis nequaquam nos ad alia transire denuntiat. [Vet. V.] Sic autem Dominus uniuscujusque considerat vias, sic dinumerat gressus, ut ne minutissimae quidem cogitationes ejus judicio ac verba tenuissima, quae apud nos usu viluerunt, indiscussa remaneant. Hinc enim dicit: Qui irascitur fratri suo, reus erit judicio. Qui dixerit fratri suo: Racha, reus erit concilio. Qui dixerit: Fatue, reus gehennae ignis (Matth. V, 22). Racha quippe in Hebraeo eloquio vox interjectionis est, quae quidem animum irascentis ostendit, nec tamen plenum verbum iracundiae exprimit. Prius ergo ira reprehenditur sine voce, postmodum vero ira cum voce, sed necdum pleno verbo formata; ad extremum quoque cum dicitur: Fatue ira redarguitur, quae cum excessu vocis expletur etiam perfectione sermonis. Et notandum quod in ira perhibet reum esse judicio; in voce irae, quod est racha, reum concilio; in verbo vocis quod est fatue, reum gehennae ignis. Per gradus etenim culpae crevit ordo sententiae, quia in judicio adhuc causa discutitur, in concilio autem jam causae sententia definitur, in gehenna vero ignis ea quae de concilio egreditur sententia expletur. Quia igitur humanorum actuum Dominus subtili examine gressus enumerat, ira sine voce, judicio; ira in voce, concilio; ira vero in voce atque sermone, gehennae ignibus mancipatur. Hanc subtilitatem considerationis ejus propheta aspexerat, cum dicebat: Fortissime, magne, potens Dominus exercituum; nomen tibi, magnus consilio, incomprehensibilis cogitatu, cujus oculi aperti 683 sunt, super omnes vias filiorum Adam, ut reddas unicuique secundum vias suas, et secundum fructum adinventionum ejus (Jerem. XXXII, 18). 10. Nulla sine mercede bona, nulla mala sine poena.Sic easdem vias Dominus subtili examinatione considerat, ut in unoquoque nostrum nec ea quae remuneret bona praetereat, nec mala, quae videlicet displicent, sine increpatione derelinquat. Hinc est enim quod angelum Ecclesiae Pergami et in quibusdam laudat, et in quibusdam redarguit dicens: Scio ubi habitas, ubi sedes est satanae, et tenes nomen meum, et non negasti fidem meam (Apoc. II, 13, 14). Et paulo post: Sed habeo adversum te pauca, quia habes illic tenentes doctrinam Balaam. Hinc angelo Ecclesiae Thyatirae dicitur: Novi opera tua, et charitatem tuam, et fidem, et ministerium, et patientiam tuam, et opera tua novissima plura prioribus; sed habeo adversum te pauca, quia permittis mulierem Jezabel, quae se dicit propheten, docere et seducere servos meos, et fornicari, et manducare idolothytum (Ibid., 19). Ecce bona memorat, nec tamen resecanda mala sine poenitentia relaxat, quia scilicet sic singulorum vias considerat, sic gressus enumerans pensat, ut subtili examine perpendat vel quantum quisque ad bona proficiat, vel quantum ad mala devians suis profectibus contradicat. Incrementum quippe meritorum, quod bonae vitae studiis augetur, plerumque mali admistione retrahitur; et bonum quod animus operando construit, hoc alia perpetrando pervertit. Unde sancti viri tanto se subtilius in cogitatione constringunt, quanto a superno judice districtius considerari conspiciunt. Mentem quippe discutiunt, invenire si qua dereliquerint quaerunt, ut tanto fiant irreprehensibiles judici, quanta semetipsos quotidie et sine cessatione reprehendunt. Nec tamen hac de re jam gaudia securitatis sumunt, quia ab illo se videri considerant qui in eis et illa videt quae videre ipsi in semetipsis non valent. Et quidem beatus Job perfectionis vitam inter veteres tenuit; sed quia ejus intentio ad Redemptoris adventum prophetico spiritu erumpit in illius praeceptis, pensat ipse quam multa de perfectione minus habeat. Unde et subdit:

CAPUT VI [Vet.

VI, Rec. V]. VERS. 5, 6. Si ambulavi in vanitate, et festinavit in dolo pes meus, appendat me in statera justa, et sciat Deus simplicitatem meam. 11. Sancti merita sua in Christo tanquam in stater curent appendere, ut quod minus habent, agnoscant.Scire Deus dicitur scire nos facere, usitato nostrae locutionis modo, qui laetum diem dicimus, ex quo contingit ut laetemur. Hinc est enim quod ad Abraham Dominus dicit: Nunc cognovi quod timeas Deum (Genes. 22, 12). Neque enim creator temporum quidquam cognovit ex tempore; sed cognoscere ejus est ex cujuslibet causae emergentis articulo nobis cognitionem praebere. Quis vero staterae nomine nisi Mediator Dei et hominum designatur? In quo aequa lance omnia merita nostra pensantur, et in cujus praeceptis agnoscimus quid in nostra vita minus habeamus. In hac autem statera appendimur, quoties ad vitae ejus exempla provocamur. Hinc namque scriptum est: Christus pro nobis passus est, vobis relinquens exemplum, ut sequamini 684 vestigia ejus, qui peccatum non fecit, nec inventus est dolus in ore ejus. Qui cum malediceretur, non maledicebat; cum pateretur, non comminabatur (I Pet. II, 21). Hinc per Paulum dicitur: Per patientiam curramus ad propositum nobis certamen, aspicientes in auctorem fidei et consummatorem Jesum, qui proposito sibi gaudio sustinuit crucem, confusione contempta (Hebr. XII, 1). Ad hoc itaque Dominus apparuit in carne, ut humanam vitam admonendo excitaret, exempla praebendo accenderet, moriendo redimeret, resurgendo repararet. Cum ergo nulla in se beatus Job jure redarguenda reperit, ad excedentem omnia Redemptoris vitam mentis oculos tendit, ut in illa cognoscat ipse quid minus habeat, cum dicit: Si ambulavi in vanitate, et festinavit in dolo pes meus, appendat me in statera justa, et sciat Deus simplicitatem meam. Ac si aperte dicat: Si qua unquam leviter, si qua perniciose perpetravi, Dei et hominum Mediator appareat, ut in ejus vita cognoscam an ego veraciter simplex fuerim. Qui enim, ut diximus, suorum temporum viros excesserat, Mediatorem Dei et hominum quaerebat, ut in illo pensatus agnosceret si vitam simplicem vere tenuisset. Dicat ergo: Appendat me in statera justa, et sciat Deus simplicitatem meam. Quod est scire me faciat. Ac si patenter fateatur, dicens: Quantum ad humanae vitae modum, nulla in me reprehendenda jam video; sed nisi Mediator Dei et hominum cum subtilioris vitae praeceptis appareat, quantum adhuc a vera simplicitate discrepem, non cognosco. Rectus vero ordo servatur, si prius in vanitate, et postmodum pes in dolo festinasse dicatur. Vanitas quippe ad levitatem, dolus vero ad malitiam pertinet. Et nonnulli plerumque ad quaedam post malitiosa perveniunt, quia prius levia non declinant. Sequitur.

CAPUT VII [Vet. VII].

VERS. 7. Si declinavit gressus meus de via. 12. A via declinamus, quoties errori consentimus. Toties gressus de via declinat, quoties nostra cogitatio iter rectitudinis per consensum relinquit erroris. Quasi vero tot gressus extra viam ponimus, quot perversis desideriis a coelestis vitae delectatione separamur. Ut enim praefati sumus, adhuc carnis corruptibilis pondere gravati, nequaquam valemus sic vivere, ut nulla nos possit culpae delectatio pulsare. Sed aliud est nolentem tangi, aliud consentientem animum perimi. Sancti autem viri tanto vigilantiori se circumspectione custodiunt, quanto se pulsari sinistris motibus vel transitoriae delectationis dedignantur. Unde et adhuc subditur:

CAPUT VIII [Rec VI].

IBID. Si secutus est ocutus meus cor meum. 13. Cordi illicita concupiscenti oculus famulari deneget. Tentatio aliquando per oculos trahitur, aliquando intrinsecus concipitur. Qui exteriori negligenter utitur, interiori oculo juste caecatur. Ecce iterum per interioris vigoris custodiam ad exteriorum membrorum disciplinam redit, ut si quid fortasse cor illicitum concupisceret, pressus disciplinae magisterio oculus videre recusaret. Sicut enim saepe tentatio per oculos trahitur, sic nonnunquam concepta intrinsecus compellit sibi extrinsecus oculos deservire. Nam plerumque res quaelibet innocenti mente respicitur, sed ipso conspectu animus concupiscentiae gladio confoditur. Non enim, ut exempli causa jam diximus, 685 David Uriae conjugem ideo studiose respexit, quia concupierat, sed potius ideo concupivit quia incaute respexit. Fit vero rectae retributionis examine ut qui exteriori negligenter utitur, interiori oculo non injuste caecetur. Saepe autem intrinsecus concupiscentia dominatur, et illecebratus animus ad usus suos sensus corporeos famulari more tyrannidis exigit, suisque voluptatibus oculos servire compellit, atque, ut ita dicam, fenestras luminis ad tenebras aperit caecitatis. Unde sancti viri cum sinistra pulsari delectatione se sentiunt, ipsa per quae formae species ad mentem ingreditur disciplinae magisterio lumina restringunt, ne pravae cogitationi visio lenocinata famuletur. Quae si unquam subtiliter custodiri negligitur, cogitationis immunditia protinus ad operationem transit. Unde et mox subditur:

CAPUT IX [Rec. VII].

IBID. Et si in manibus meis adhaesit macula. 14. Ne culpa ad opus prodeat, intus ubi nascitur, exstinguatur. Sanctus ergo vir sciens quod plerumque prava cogitatio per oculos veniat ad mentem, paulo superius dixit: Pepigi foedus cum oculis meis, ut ne cogitarem quidem de virgine. Perpendens etiam quod nonnunquam in mente oritur, sed huic obortae oculi perverse famulantur, ait: Si secutus est oculus meus cor meum. Ac si aperte dicat: Nec passim videre volui quae concupiscerem, nec videndo unquam secutus sum quae concupivi. Dicat ergo: Si secutus est oculus meus cor meum, quia et si quid unquam illicitum mens ejus, ut videlicet humana, concepit, altioris disciplinae magisterio constrictos sequi se per illicita sibique famulari oculos noluit. Pensemus ad haec conscientias nostras, et quanti culminis vir iste fuerit, ex nostri cordis dejectione videamus. Ecce si qua illicita aliquando cogitavit, quia ea citius intra arcana cordis gladio sancti vigoris exstinxit, pervenire illa usque ad opera non permisit. Unde, ut praemisimus, illico subjungit. Et si in manibus meis adhaesit macula. Quando enim macula in manibus, id est culpa actionibus inhaeret, quam censura disciplinae non sinebat in cogitatione proficere? Neque enim culpa ad opus prodire permittitur, si intus ubi nascitur exstinguatur. Si autem tentationi in corde nascenti festine non resistitur, hac eadem qua nutritur mora roboratur; et existens foris in operibus, vinci vix praevalet, quia ipsam intus membrorum dominam mentem captivam tenet. Quia vero vir sanctus superiora omnia sub conditione intulit, si haec unquam perpetraverit, sententia se maledictionis astringit, dicens:

CAPUT X [Rec. VIII].

VERS. 8. Seram, et alius comedat, et progenies mea eradicetur. 15. Serit jejunus praedicator, et alius comedit, quando quae docet non operatur. More sacri eloquii serere dicimus, verba vitae praedicare. Hinc etenim propheta ait: Beati qui seminatis super omnes aquas (Isai. XXXII, 20). Sanctae quippe Ecclesiae praedicatores super omnes aquas seminare conspexit, quia cunctis late populis verba vitae, quasi coelestis panis grana, tradiderunt. Comedere autem est bonis operibus satiari. Unde per semetipsam Veritas dicit: Meus cibus est ut faciam voluntatem ejus qui misit me (Joan. IV, 34). Si ergo ea quae protulit facere praetermisit, ait: Seram, et alius comedat. Ac si aperte dicat: Quod os meum loquitur, non ego, sed alter operetur. Praedicator quippe 686 qui a suis vocibus moribus descrepat, jejunus serit quod alius manducet, quia suo semine ipse non pascitur, quando a verbi sui rectitudine prava actione vacuatur. [Vet. VIII.] Et quia plerumque discipuli incassum bona audiunt, cum ex magistri vita operum exemplo destruuntur, recte subjungitur: Et progenies mea eradicetur. 16. Ejus progenies eradicatur, quia quos per verbum gignit, per exemplum necat. Doctoris enim progenies eradicatur quando is qui per verbum nascitur per exemplum necatur, quia quem lingua vigilans gignit, vitae negligentia occidit. Neque enim torpenti nobis est mente transeundum quod apud Salomonem mulier filium, quem vigilans lactare consueverat, dormiens interemit (III Reg. III, 19), quia nimirum magistri vigilantes quidem scientia, sed vita dormientes, auditores suos quos per vigilias praedicationis nutriunt, dum quod dicunt facere negligunt, per somnum torporis occidunt, et negligendo opprimunt quos alere verborum lacte videbantur. Unde plerumque dum ipsi reprehensibiliter vivunt, et habere discipulos vitae laudabilis nequeunt, et alienos sibi attrahere conantur, quantenus dum bonos se habere sequaces ostendunt, apud judicia hominum excusent mala quae agunt, et quasi per subditorum vitam mortiferam tegant negligentiam. Unde illic mulier filium quia exstinxit proprium, quaesivit alienum. Sed tamen veram matrem Salomonis gladius invenit, quia videlicet cujus fructus vivat, vel cujus intereat, extremo examine ira districti judicis demonstrat. Ubi et illud est solerter intuendum, quod vivens filius prius dividi praecipitur, ut soli postmodum matri reddatur, quia in hac vita quasi partiri conceditur vita discipuli, dum ex illa nonnunquam alter apud Deum meritum, alter vero apud homines laudem habere permittitur. 17. Amissis propriis filiis, alienos vivere invidet. Sed falsa mater eum quem non genuit, occidi non metuit, quia arrogantes magistri et charitatis ignari, si plenissimum nomen laudis ex alienis discipulis consequi nequeunt, eorum vitam crudeliter insequuntur. Invidiae enim face succensi, nolunt aliis vivere, quos se conspiciunt non posse possidere. Unde illic perversa mulier clamat. Nec meus sit, nec istius (Ibid., 26). Ut enim diximus, quos sibi obsequi non vident ad gloriam temporalem, eos aliis invident vivere per veritatem. Vera autem mater satagit ut ejus filius saltem apud extraneam sit et vivat, quia concedunt veraces magistri ut ex eorum discipulis alii quidem magisterii laudem habeant, si tamen integritatem vitae iidem discipuli non amittant. Per quae pietatis viscera haec eadem vera mater agnoscitur, quia omne magisterium in examine charitatis approbatur; et sola recipere totum meruit, quae quasi totum concessit, quia fideles praepositi, pro eo quod ex bonis discipulis suis non solum aliis laudem non invident, sed utilitatem eis etiam profectus exorant, ipsi et integros et viventes filios recipiunt, quando in supremo examine ex eorum vita perfectae retributionis gaudia consequuntur. Haec paucis per excessum diximus, ut auditorum progenies per doctorum negligentiam qualiter exstinguitur monstraremus, quia quisquis juxta hoc quod loquitur non vivit, quos verbo genuit a stabilitate rectitudinis opere evellit. Sed beatus 687 Job, quos praedicatione vigilans edidit, nequaquam actione dormiens exstinxit, atque ideo fidenter dicit: Si quominus praedicta complevi, Seram, et alius comedat, et progenies mea eradicetur. Qui adhuc se de inquinatione pravi operis discutiens, subdit:

CAPUT XI [Vet.

et Rec. IX]. VERS. 9. Si deceptum est cor meum super muliere, et si ad ostium amici mei insidiatus sum. 18. In sacris litteris adulterium et fornicatio aliquando distinguuntur, aliquando idem sonant. Utrumque prohibitum. Ab utriusque vel cogitatione Job abstinuit. Quamvis nonnunquam a reatu adulterii nequaquam discrepet culpa fornicationis, cum Veritas dicat: Qui viderit (D. 32, q. 5, ca) mulierem ad concupiscendum eam, jam moechatus est eam in corde suo (Matth. V, 28). (Quia enim Graeco verbo moechus adulter dicitur, cum non aliena conjux, sed mulier videri prohibetur, aperte Veritas ostendit quia etiam solo visu cum turpiter vel innupta concupiscitur, adulterium perpetratur.) Tamen plerumque ex loco, vel ordine concupiscentis discernitur, quia scilicet sic hunc in sacro ordine studiosa concupiscentia, sicut illum adulterii inquinat culpa. In personis tamen non dissimilibus idem luxuriae distinguitur reatus, in quibus fornicationis culpa, quia ab adulterii reatu discernitur, praedicatoris egregii lingua testatur, qui inter caetera asserit, dicens: Neque fornicarii, neque idolis servientes, neque adulteri, regnum Dei possidebunt (I Cor. VI, 9). Quod enim disjuncto reatui sententiam subdit, quam valde a se dissideat ostendit. Per hoc ergo quod dicitur: Si deceptum est cor meum super muliere, neque cogitasse vir sanctus de fornicationis macula demonstratur. Per hoc autem quod subjicit: Et si ad ostium amici mei insiditatus sum, patenter innotescit quod a reatu adulterii liber fuit. Sed ad haec fortasse aliquis dicat: Quid de se mirum sanctus vir asserit, si non solum ab adulterii crimine, verum etiam a fornicationis inquinatione se liberum servavit? Haec autem parvipendimus, si virtutum ejus tempora minime pensamus. Necdum enim ad restrictionem carnis revelatae gratiae districtior censura processerat, quae non solum corporis, sed et cordis lasciviam reprehendit. Necdum multorum continentium castitatis bona imitanda prodierant, et tamen beatus Job exempla munditiae, quae non acceperat, tradebat. A multis autem nunc etiam post prohibitionem Dei carnis immunditia perpetratur. Hinc ergo colligendum est, cum tanta culpa nunc etiam post praeceptum in gravibus delinquitur, cum quanta laude antea a gravibus abstinebatur. Qui si hoc unquam fecerit, eamdem culpam verti sibi expetit in poenam, dicens:

CAPUT XII.

VERS. 10. Scortum alterius sit uxor mea, et super illam incurventur alii. 19. Luxuriae crimen usque ad perditionem vorat, omnesque virtutes destruit. Nemo hic sine peccato. Et quia plerumque hoc quod faciendo non perpendimus quam grave sit, patiendo pensamus ejusdem vim facinoris quod se pati, si reus sit, debere denuntiat, exprimendo manifestat, dicens: VERS. 11, 12. Hoc enim nefas est et iniquitas maxima; ignis est usque ad perditionem devorans, et omnia eradicans genimina. 688 Hoc inter peccatum distat et crimen, quod omne crimen peccatum est, non tamen omne peccatum crimen est. Et in hac vita multi sine crimine, nullus vero esse sine peccatis valet. Unde et praedicator sanctus, cum virum dignum gratia sacerdotali describeret, nequaquam dixit: Si quis sine peccato; sed, Si quis sine crimine est (Tit. I, 6). Quis vero esse sine peccato valeat, cum Joannes dicat: Si dixerimus quia peccatum non habemus, nosmetipsos seducimus, et veritas in nobis non est (I Joan. I, 8). In qua videlicet peccatorum, et criminum distinctione pensandum est quia nonnulla peccata animam polluunt, quam crimina exstinguunt. Unde beatus Job crimen luxuriae definiens, ait: Ignis est usque ad perditionem devorans, quia nimirum reatus hujus facinoris non solum usque ad inquinationem maculat, sed usque ad perditionem vorat. Et quia quamlibet alia fuerint bona opera, si luxuriae scelus non abluitur, immensitate hujus criminis obruuntur, secutus adjunxit: Et omnia eradicans genimina. Genimina quippe sunt animae operationes bonae. Cui tamen si perverso ordine caro dominatur, igne luxuriae omnia bene prolata concremantur. Nulla quippe ante omnipotentis Dei oculos justitiae pietatisque sunt opera, quae corruptionis contagio monstrantur immunda. Quid enim prodest si pie quisquam necessitati compatitur proximi, quando impie semetipsum destruit habitationem Dei? Si ergo per cordis munditiam libidinis flamma non exstinguitur, incassum quaelibet virtutes oriuntur, sicut per Moysen dicitur: Ignis exarsit ab ira mea, et ardebit usque ad inferos deorsum; comedet terram, et nascentia ejus (Deut. XXXII, 22). Ignis quippe terram atque ejus nascentia comedit, cum libido carnem, atque per hanc omnia bene acta consumit. Nam quidquid prodit ex fruge rectitudinis, hoc nimirum concremat flamma corruptionis. Dicat ergo: Ignis est usque ad perditionem devorans, et omnia eradicans genimina, quia si corruptionis malo non resistitur, et illa procul dubio pereunt quae bona videbantur. Sed solent nonnullos ad humilitatem vitia sternere, atque ad tumorem mentis virtutes elevare. [Vet. I.] Quaerendum ergo nobis est, si beatus Job in tanta castitatis munditia etiam humilis fuit. Sed sanctus vir cum alta virtutum teneat, quam de se humilia sentiat, repente aperit, cum subjungit:

CAPUT XIII.

VERS. 13. Si contempsi judicium subire cum serva meo et ancilla mea, cum disceptarent adversum me. 20. Mira Job in tanta vitae innocentia humilitas.Qui enim judicari cum servis ancillisque non renuit, liquido indicat quod contra nullum unquam proximum apud se tumidus fuit. Inter haec autem libet intueri, vitam suam in omnibus quanta vir sanctus discretione custodivit. Non enim longe superius dixit: Videbant me juvenes, et abscondebantur, et senes assurgentes stabant; principes cessabant loqui, et digitum superponebant ori suo; vocem suam cohibebant duces, et lingua eorum gutturi suo adhaerebat. (Reg. X.] Nunc vero ait: Si contempsi judicium subire cum servo meo et ancilla mea, cum 689 disceptarent adversum me. Quis digne considerare valeat hujus viri tam sublimia virtutum moderamina? In quo tanta est auctoritas regiminis, ut ad silentium restringantur duces: tanta humilitas cordis, ut ex aequo ad judicium venire permittantur ancillae. Ecce apparet miro modo in potestate principibus potior, in certamine servis aequalis; in coetu principum memor regiminis, in certamine famulorum memor conditionis. Se quippe sub vero domino famulum conspicit, ideoque cordis altitudine se super famulos non extollit. Unde et protinus subdit:

CAPUT XIV.

VERS. 14. Quid enim faciam cum surrexerit ad judicandum Deus? et cum quaesierit, quid respondebo illi? 21. Qui aliis praesunt, Deo se subesse semper attendant. Qui venturum judicem cogitat, indesinenter quotidie rationum suarum in melius causas parat; qui aeternum Dominum tremore cordis intuetur, jura temporalis dominii super subjectos moderari compellitur. Perpendit enim nil esse quod temporaliter praeest caeteris, quando illi ad reddendam rationem subest qui sine fine dominatur. Saepe namque transitoria potestas animum per abrupta elationis rapit. Et quia eo quisque extollitur, quo se esse super aliquos videt, illum oportet qui super se est semper aspiciat, ut ejus metu qui supra omnia est crescentem intrinsecus animi tumorem premat. Intuetur enim qui sub ipso sint, sed consideret sub quo ipse sit, ut ex consideratione veri domini, decrescat tumor falsae dominationis. Unde beatus Job, quia ejus judicium qui super omnia est metuit, hic ad temporale judicium famulis aequalis venit, dicens: Si contempsi judicium subire cum servo meo et ancilla mea, cum disceptarent adversum me. Quid enim faciam cum surrexerit ad judicandum Deus? et cum quaesierit, quid respondebo illi? Qui ut semper cor in humilitate deprimat, nequaquam in eisdem famulis conspicit, quod sibi status est dispar, sed quod natura communis. Unde etiam subdit:

CAPUT XV [Vet. XI].

VERS. 15. Nunquid non in utero fecit me, qui et illum operatus est, et formavit in vulva unus? 22. Cogitent aequalitatem conditionis, non potestatem ordinis? et plus prodesse quam praeesse studeant. Potentibus viris magna est virtus humilitatis, considerata aequalitas conditionis. Omnes namque homines natura aequales sumus; sed accessit dispensatorio ordine, ut quibusdam praelati videamur. Si igitur hoc a mente deprimimus quod temporaliter accessit, invenimus citius quod naturaliter sumus. Plerumque enim se animo accepta potestas objicit, eumque tumidis cogitationibus fallit. Manu ergo humillimae considerationis deprimendus est tumor elationis. Si enim apud semetipsam mens descendit de vertice culminis, citius planitiem invenit naturalis aequalitatis. Nam, ut praefati sumus, omnes homines natura aequales genuit, sed variante meritorum ordine, alios aliis dispensatio occulta postponit. Ipsa autem diversitas, quae accessit ex vitio, recte est divinis judiciis ordinata, ut quia omnis homo iter vitae aeque non graditur, alter ab altero regatur. Sancti autem viri cum praesunt, non in se potestatem ordinis, sed aequalitatem conditionis attendunt, nec praeesse gaudent hominibus, sed prodesse. Sciunt enim quod antiqui patres nostri, non tam reges hominum quam pastores pecorum fuisse memorantur. Et cum Noe Dominus filiisque ejus diceret. 690 Crescite et multiplicamini et implete terram, subdit: Et terror vester ac tremor sit super cuncta animalia terrae (Genes. IX, 1, 7). Non enim ait: Sit super homines, qui futuri sunt; sed, Sit super cuncta animalia terrae. 23. Homo irrationalibus animantibus, non autem caeteris hominibus natura est praelatus. Homo quippe animalibus irrationabilibus, non autem caeteris hominibus natura praelatus est; et idcirco ei dicitur, ut ab animalibus et non ab homine timeatur, quia contra naturam superbire est, ab aequali velle timeri, quamvis plerumque a subditis etiam sancti viri timeri appetunt, sed quando ab eisdem subditis Deum minime timeri deprehendunt, ut humana saltem formidine peccare metuant, qui divina judicia non formidant. Nequaquam ergo praepositi ex hoc quaesito timore superbiunt, in quo non suam gloriam, sed subditorum justitiam quaerunt. In eo enim quod metum sibi a perverse viventibus exigunt, quasi a non hominibus, sed brutis animalibus dominantur, quia videlicet ex qua parte bestiales sunt subditi, ex ea etiam debent formidini jacere substrati. 24. Nulla cogente vitii corrigendi necessitate, praelati metui refugiant, et pluris aestimari. Cum vero deest vitium quod corrigatur, non de excellentia potestatis, sed de aequalitate conditionis gaudent; et non solum ab eis metui, sed etiam plus quam necesse est honorari refugiunt. Neque enim leve se perpeti damnum humilitatis credunt, si ab eis pro merito fortasse ordinis pluris aestimentur. Hinc est enim quod primus pastor Ecclesiae, cum, adorante se Cornelio, super se sibi honorem videret oblatum ad aequalitatem conditionis suae citius recurrit, dicens: Surge, et ipse ego homo sum (Act. X, 26). Quis enim nesciat quod conditori suo homo debeat et non homini prosterni? Quia ergo humiliari sibi plus quam debuit proximum vidit, ne ultra humanitatis metas mens intumesceret, esse se hominem recognovit, quatenus illati sibi honoris elationem frangeret ex considerata aequalitate conditionis. Hinc a Joanne angelus adoratus, creaturam se esse cognovit, dicens: Vide ne feceris; conservus tuus sum, et fratrum tuorum (Apoc. XIX, 10; XXII, 9). Hinc propheta, cum ad videnda sublimia rapitur, filius hominis vocatur (Ezec. III, 1), ut ductus ad coelestia, hominem se esse meminerit. Ac si eum divina vox verbis apertioribus admoneat dicens: Memento quid sis, ne de his ad quae raperis extollaris, sed altitudinem revelationis tempera memoria conditionis. Ex eo ergo colligendum est quanta communis naturae memoria in corde deprimi debeat terrenae potestatis tumor, si ex humanitatis vocabulo agitur, ne cogitationis elatio ex secretis coelestibus generetur. Cujus videlicet humanitatis bene beatus Job semper recordationem tenuit, qui ait: Nunquid non in utero fecit me, qui et illum operatus est, et formavit in vulva unus? Ac si aperte dicat: Cur non aeque debeamus in cujuslibet negotii judicio discuti, qui per conditoris potentiam sumus aequaliter facti? Sed quia castitatis ejus atque humilitatis acta cognovimus, nunc liberalitatis opera cognoscamus. Sequitur:

CAPUT XVI [Vet.

XII, Rec. XI]. VERS. 16. Si negavi quod volebant pauperibus, et oculos viduae exspectare feci. 25. Liberalitas Job pauperibus dantis ad eorum votum. Qui extra metas inopiae petunt, obtinere non merentur.Per haec dicta vir sanctus ostenditur, non solum ad inopiam pauperibus, sed etiam ad habendi desiderium deservisse. Sed quid si ipsa vellent 691 pauperes quae fortasse accipere non expediret? An quia in Scriptura sacra dici pauperes humiles solent, ea sola aestimanda sunt quae accipere pauperes volunt, quae humiles petunt? Et procul dubio oportet ut incunctanter detur quidquid cum vera humilitate requiritur; id est, quod non ex desiderio, sed ex necessitate postulatur. Nam valde jam superbire est, extra metas inopiae aliquid desiderare. Unde et superbe petentibus dicitur: Petitis et non accipitis, ec quod male petatis (Jac. IV, 3). Quia ergo illi sunt veraciter pauperes, qui inflati per superbiae spiritum non sunt, quos aperte Veritas exprimit, cum dicit: Beati pauperes spiritu (Matth. V, 3); recte nunc per sanctum virum dicitur: Si negavi quod volebant pauperibus, quoniam qui ea volunt quae profecto liquet quod eis non expediunt, eo ipso quod superbiae abundant spiritu, jam pauperes non sunt. Sed beatus Job dum pauperes humiles appellat, quidquid ab eo accipere pauper voluit, non negavit, quia veraciter quisque humilis quod non potuit oportere, nec voluit. 26. Munificentia Job non solum ex munere, sed ex dandi celeritate pensanda. Sed cum largitatem mentis suae indicat, quia ad votum se pauperibus concurrisse manifestat, necesse est ut quaeramus ne lumen misericordiae dationis tarditate fuscaverit. Unde subjungit: Et oculos viduae expectare feci. Petentem se viduam exspectare noluit, ut non solum ex munere, sed etiam ex celeritate muneris, bonorum operum merita augeret. Unde alias scriptum est: Ne dicas amico tuo, vade et revertere, cras dabo tibi, cum statim possis dare (Prov. III, 28). Sed nonnulli solent exterius multa largiri, communis autem vitae gratiam repellentes habere pauperes socios in domestica conversatione refugiunt. Unde beatus Job, ut non solum se insinuet exterius multa praebuisse, sed apud se quosque inopes etiam in domestica conversatione recepisse, protinus adjungit:

CAPUT XVII [Rec. XII].

VERS. 17. Si comedi buccellam meam solus, et non comedit pupillus ex ea. 27. Inopes hospitio recipiendi et ad mensam adhibendi.Scilicet pietati se praejudicium facere aestimans, si solus comederet quod Dominus omnium communiter creasset. Quae profecto communio conversationis esse cum talibus intra domesticos parietes debet, ex quibus aeternae proficiant merita retributionis. Unde sanctus vir non quemlibet, sed ad manducandum socium pupillum se habuisse perhibet. Sed tanta haec pietatis viscera utrum a semetipso habuerit, an conditoris sui gratia sit consecutus, innotescat. Sequitur:

CAPUT XVIII [Rec. XIII].

VERS. 18. Quia ab infantia mea crevit mecum miseratio, et de utero matris meae egressa est mecum. 28. Sancti bona sua non sibi, sed Deo tribuunt. Quidam dum aetate crescunt, ab innocentia decrescunt. Miseratio etenim etsi ejus fuerit arbitrii, ut cum ipso proficeret, liquet tamen quia ejus arbitrii non fuit ut cum ipso de utero exiret. Constat ergo quia suae virtuti nil tribuit, qui profecto testatur quia hoc ex conditionis munere accepit. Bonum igitur quod a conditione habuisse se intimat, liquet procul dubio quia ad laudem conditoris narrat, indicans ab ipso se accepisse ut pius esset, a quo accepit ut esset, quia sicut suo opere in utero conditus non fuit, ita nec sua virtute ab utero 692 pius fuit. Sed pensandum nobis est, quod asserit: Crevit mecum. Nonnulli enim quoad aetatem crescunt, ab innocentia decrescunt. Electis vero cum foris aetas corporis, intus, si dici liceat, crescit aetas virtutis. Sequitur:

CAPUT XIX [Vet.

XIII, Rec. XIV]. VERS. 19, 20. Si despexi praetereuntem, eo quod non habuerit indumentum, et absque operimento pauperem; si non benedixerunt mihi latera ejus, et de velleribus ovium mearum calefactus est. 29. Misericordiam in pauperes comitetur humilitas. Qui praemissis probris eleemosynam tribuunt, vix pro illata injuria satisfaciunt. Quod pauperem non despexit, virtutem humilitatis exhibuit; quod autem operuit, pietatis. Duae quippe istae virtutes ita sibimet esse connexae debent, ut vicario semper opere fulciantur; quatenus nec humilitas, cum veneratur proximum, largitatis gratiam deserat, nec pietas cum largitur intumescat. Erga indigentiam itaque proximi humilitatem pietas fulciat, humilitas pietatem, ut cum indigentem rebus necessariis naturae tuae consortem videris, nec per impietatem desinas tegere, nec per superbiam negligas venerari quem tegis. Nam sunt nonnulli qui mox ut ab egenis fratribus fuerint necessaria postulati, post dona largituri, in eos prius contumeliosa verba jaculantur. Qui etsi rebus ministerium pietatis perficiunt, verbis tamen gratiam humilitatis perdunt; ita ut plerumque videatur quia illatae jam injuriae satisfactionem solvunt, cum post contumelias dona largiuntur. Nec magni est operis quod postulata tribuunt, quia ipso dationis suae munere vix eumdem excessum sermonis tegunt. Quibus bene per Ecclesiasticum librum dicitur: Omni dato non des tristitiam verbi mali (Eccli. XVIII, 16). Et rursum: Ecce verbum super datum bonum, et utraque cum homine justificato (Ibid., 17), videlicet, ut datum exhiberi debeat per pietatem, et bonum verbum tribui per humilitatem. At contra, alii egenos fratres non student rebus fulcire cum possint, sed blandis tantum sermonibus fovere. Quos vehementer Jacobi praedicatio sancta reprehendit, dicens: Si autem frater aut soror nudi sunt, et indigent victu quotidiano, dicat autem aliquis ex vobis illis: Ite in pace, calefacimini et saturamini; non dederitis autem eis quae necessaria sunt corpori, quid vobis proderit? Quos Joannes quoque Apostolus admonet, dicens: Filioli mei, non diligamus verbo, nec lingua, sed opere et veritate (I Joan. III, 13). Dilectio namque nostra semper exhibenda est et veneratione sermonis, et ministerio largitatis. [Vet. XIV.] Pauperibus eleemosynam dantes, patronis munera offerimus. Seminamus quae postea cum magno fenore metamus. Multum vero ad edomandam dantis superbiam valet, si cum terrena tribuit verba sollicite magistri coelestis penset, qui ait: Facite vobis amicos de mammona iniquitatis, ut cum defeceritis, recipiant vos in aeterna tabernacula (Luc. XVI, 9). Si enim eorum amicitiis aeterna tabernacula acquirimus, dantes procul dubio pensare debemus, quia patronis potius munera offerimus quam egenis dona largimur. Hinc per Paulum dicitur: Vestra abundantia illorum inopiam suppleat, ut et illorum abundantia vestrae inopiae sit supplementum (II Cor. II, 14). Ut videlicet sollicite perpendamus quia et eos quos nunc inopes cernimus, abundantes quandoque videbimus; et 693 qui abundantes aspicimur, si largiri negligimus quandoque inopes erimus. Qui itaque nunc temporale subsidium pauperi tribuit, ab eo postmodum perpetua recepturus, ut ita dicam, quasi ad frugem terram excolit, quae quod acceperit uberius reddit. Restat ergo ut nunquam elatio surgat ex munere quando videlicet dives ex eo quod pauperi tribuit agit ut in perpetuum pauper non sit. Beatus igitur Job ut diligenter ostenderet humilitas atque misericordia quanta in eo fuerit consideratione sociata ait: Si despexi praetereuntem, eo quod non habuerit indumentum, et absque operimento pauperem; si non benedixerunt mihi latera ejus, et de velleribus ovium mearum calefactus est. Ac si aperte diceret: In amore proximi uno eodemque ordine et superbiae vitium, et impietatis premens, praetereuntem quempiam et humiliter aspiciens non despexi, et misericorditer calefeci. Quisquis enim super eum cui aliquid tribuit fastu se elationis extollit, majorem culpam intrinsecus superbiendo peragit, quam extrinsecus largiendo, mercedem, fitque ipse bonis interioribus nudus, cum nudum despicit vestiens; eoque agit ut se ipso deterior fiat, quo se indigenti proximo meliorem putat. Minus quippe inops est qui vestem non habet quam qui humilitatem. Unde necesse est ut cum naturae nostrae consortes exteriora non habere conspicimus, quam multa nobis desint bona interiora pensemus; quatenus sese super inopes cogitatio non elevet, cum solerter videt quia nos tanto verius quanto et interius indigentes sumus. 31. Etiam incognitis erogetur eleemosyna. Et quia sunt nonnulli qui pietatis suae viscera tendere usque ad incognitos nesciunt, sed solis quos per assiduitatem notitiae didicerint miserentur, apud quos nimirum plus familiaritas quam natura valet, dum quibusdam necessaria non quia homines, sed quia noti sunt, largiuntur, bene nunc per beatum Job dicitur: Si despexi praetereuntem, eo quod non habuerit indumentum.

Ignoto enim proximo misertum se indicat, quem praetereuntem vocat, quia videlicet apud piam mentem plus natura valet quam notitia. Nam et unusquisque qui indiget, eo ipso quo homo est, ei jam incognitus non est. Sequitur:

CAPUT XX [Rec. XV].

VERS. 21. Si levavi super pupillum manum meam, etiam cum viderem me in porta superiorem. 32. Sancti libenter injuriam patiuntur, et quae sibi debentur cavent districtius exigere. Mos apud veteres fuit ut ad portam seniores sederent, qui certantium jurgia judiciaria examinatione discernerent; quatenus urbem, in qua concorditer oporteret vivere, discordes minime intrarent. Unde et per prophetam Dominus dicit: Constituite in porta judicium. (Amos. V, 15). Hoc itaque loco quid portae nomine exprimitur nisi id quod agebatur in porta? Sicut enim pugnare castra dicimus, pro eo quod pugnatur ex castris; ita judicium, quod in porta agi consueverat, porta nominatur. In porta ergo se superiorem videt, qui se melioris partis esse in judicio aequitatis merito conspicit. Beatus igitur Job, quia nec tunc contra pupillum manum exeruit, cum se etiam per justitiae meritum potiorem vidit, nobis timoris regulam insinuans, dicit: Si levavi super pupillum 694 manum meam, etiam cum viderem me in porta superiorem. Ac si patenter dicat: Neque tunc utilitatis meae negotia virtute contra pupillum exsequi volui, quando me in judicio etiam ex justitia potiorem vidi. [Vet. XV.] Sancti etenim viri quando cum personis minoribus contentionum negotia subeunt, dum gravare vel in minimis timent, ipsi contra justitiam gravari nequaquam refugiunt. Sciunt quippe quia omnis humana justitia injustitia esse reprehenditur, si divinitus districte judicetur. Unde hoc quod sibi competit cavent vehementer exigere, ne eorum actus supernam rectitudinem contingat subtiliter examinare. Sed ut inveniri justi in divino examine valeant, plerumque apud humana judicia gravari se et injuste patiuntur. Beatus autem Job vitae suae celsitudinem narrans, et multa sunt et mira quae dixit. Sed quia plerumque humana mens renuit bona credere, quae nescit operari, maledicti sibi sententiam protinus subjicit, si qua horum quae dixerat opere non implevit, dicens:

CAPUT XXI [Rec. XVI].

VERS. 22. Humerus meus a junctura sua cadat, et brachium meum cum ossibus suis conteratur. 33. Concordia in societate, sine patientia perseverare non potest. Quia operatio corporea per humerum ac brachium agitur, bona quae ore protulit, si opere non implevit, cadere sibi humerum et conteri brachium exoptat. Ac si aperte dicat: Si ea quae dixi operari renui, ipsum quod mihi ad operandum datum est corporis membrum perdam, ut videlicet cadat a corpore, quod exercere nolui ad utilitatem. Si vero haec maledicti sententia ad spiritualem est intelligentiam referenda, liquet profecto quod brachium corpori per humerum jungitur. Et sicut per brachium bona operatio, ita per humerum socialis vitae conjunctio designatur. Unde propheta quoque intuens sanctos universalis Ecclesiae populos Deo concorditer servituros, ait: Et servient ei in humero uno (Sophon. III, 9). In eo ergo quod dicit: Si levavi super pupillum manum meam, etiam cum viderem me in porta superiorem, miram virtutem patientiae servasse se asserit, qui gravari se a personis minimis, nec contra hoc quod sibi juste competere poterat, declinavit. Quod tamen si minime fecerit, adjungit: Humerus meus a junctura sua cadat. Quia nimirum qui patientiam servare contemnit socialem vitam citius per impatientiam deserit. A junctura etenim humerus cadit, cum adversitatis aliquid ferre animus non valens, fraternam concordiam relinquit; et quasi membrum separatur a corpore, cum is qui operari bona poterat a bonorum omnium abscinditur universitate. Neque enim unquam servari concordia nisi per solam patientiam valet. Crebro namque in humana actione nascitur, unde mentes hominum vicissim a sua unitate ac dilectione separentur; et nisi ad adversa toleranda se animus praeparet, procul dubio humerus corpori non inhaeret. Hinc etenim Paulus ait: Invicem onera vestra portate, et sic adimplebitis legem Christi (Galat. VI, 2). Hinc per semetipsam Veritas dicit: In patientia vestra possidebitis animas vestras (Luc. XXI, 19). [Vet. XVI.] 34. Sine patientia charitati conjuncta bona opera pereunt. Recte autem, humero cadente, subjungitur: Et brachium meum cum ossibus suis conteratur: 695 quia nimirum cuncta nostra operatio, cum quibuslibet videatur esse virtutibus, solvitur, nisi per charitatis vinculum patientia conservetur. Sua enim bona perdit operari qui aliena mala renuit perpeti. Fervore quippe iracundi spiritus laesus quisque a dilectione resilit, et cum se exterius gravari non tolerat, intus se per amissum lumen charitatis obscurat; nec videt jam quo tendat pedem boni operis, qui oculum perdidit dilectionis. Sed sancti viri humerus a junctura sua non cadit, quia videlicet ejus dilectio a socialis vitae concordia per impatientiam non recedit. Ejusque brachium minime frangitur, quia omnis ejus operatio in conjunctione humeri, id est in charitatis connexione custoditur, Sed qua consideratione bona haec tanta egerit, atque a malis omnibus sese abstinuerit, adjungit dicens.

CAPUT XXII [Rec. XVII].

VERS. 23. Semper enim quasi tumentes super me fluctus timui Deum, et pondus ejus ferre non potui. 35. Timoris Dei quanta vis ad omnium contemptum persuadendum. Extremi judicii signa praevia. A pavore tantae similitudinis pensemus, si possumus, quanta in sancto viro fuerit vis timoris. Fluctus etenim cum tumentes desuper imminent, cumque eam quam deferunt mortem minantur, nulla tunc navigantibus rerum cura temporalium, nulla carnis delectatio ad mentem reducitur; ea ipsa quoque ex navi projiciunt, pro quibus longa navigia sumpserunt; cunctae res in despectum mentis veniunt, amore vivendi. Quasi ergo tumentes super se fluctus Deum metuit, qui dum veram vitam desiderat, omnia despicit quae hic possidens portat. Nam velut tempestate deprehensi pondus navis abjicimus, quando ab oppressa mente desideria terrena removemus. Fitque ut sublevata navis enatet, quae mergebatur onerata, quia nimirum curae quae in hac vita deprimunt mentem in profundum trahunt. Quae videlicet mens tanto altius inter tentationum fluctus attollitur, quanto sollicitius ab hujus saeculi cogitatione vacuatur. Est vero et aliud quod de maris concussione debeat solerter intueri. Tempestas quippe cum oritur, prius lenes undae, et postmodum volumina majora concitantur; ad extremum fluctus se in alta erigunt, et navigantes quosque ipsa sua altitudine subvertunt. Sic sic nimirum extrema illa properat, quae universum mundum 696 subruat tempestas animarum. Nunc enim bellis et cladibus quasi quibusdam undis sua nobis exordia ostendit, et quanto ad finem quotidie propinquiores efficimur, tanto graviora irruere tribulationum volumina videmus. Ad extremum vero commotis omnibus elementis, supernus judex veniens finem omnium apportat, quia videlicet tunc tempestas fluctus in coelum levat. Unde et dicitur: Adhuc modicum, et ego movebo non solum terram, sed etiam coelum (Aggae. II, 7). Quam scilicet tempestatem quia sancti viri vigilanter aspiciunt quasi tumentes super se quotidie fluctus expavescunt, atque ex his tribulationibus quae mundum feriunt praevident quae sequantur. 36. Judicium extremum sancti formidant; quanto magis expavescere debent peccatores. Bene autem subditur: Et pondus ejus ferre non potui, quoniam qui extremi judicii adventum intenta mente considerat, profecto videt quia tantus pavor imminet, quantum non solum tunc videre, sed se etiam nunc praevidere pertimescat. Consideratione namque tanti terroris metu animus palpitat, et intentionis suae oculos declinans, intueri quod praevidet recusat. Bene ergo dicitur: Et pondus ejus ferre non potui, quia cum supernae majestatis vim ad judicium venientis terroremque tanti examinis considerando animus conatur exquirere, mox ad semetipsum refugiens, sese expavescit invenisse. Sed inter haec pensandum est quia beatus Job ista de se loquitur laudatus et flagellatus. Si igitur saltem ad meritorum profectum ita percussus est qui sic timuit, quomodo feriendus est qui contemnit? Quomodo depressura sunt Dei judicia eos qui se elevant, si et illos ad tempus deprimunt qui haec semper in humilitate formidant? Quomodo pondus Dei poterit ferre qui despicit, si hoc et ille in verbere pertulit qui per timorem praevidit? Unde summopere formidandum nobis est illud tantae districtionis examen. Constat autem quia in hac vita cum percutit, si percussionem correctio sequitur, disciplina patris est, non ira judicis; amor corrigentis est, non districtio punientis. Ex ipso ergo praesenti verbere judicia aeterna pensanda sunt. Hinc etenim perpendere summopere debemus quomodo feratur illa quae reprobat, si ferri modo vix valet ejus ira quae purgat.

LIBER VIGESIMUS SECUNDUS.

Quod supererat capitis XXXI libri Job explicatur, commendanturque praesertim animi demissio et moderatio, patientia, charitas, et erga subditos sollicitudo.

CAPUT PRIMUM.

1. Ad cavendam desperationem, licet recte a se gestorum recordari.Quod a me saepe jam dictum est, hoc me crebro repetere onerosum non est, quia et praedicator egregius dicit: Eadem vobis scribere mihi quidem non pigrum, vobis autem necessarium (Phil. III, 1). Beatus Job idcirco gestas virtutes narrat, quia inter increpationis verba et percussionis verbera deprehensus, a spei fiducia mentem suam labefactari considerat. Multa quippe et egisse se mala ab increpantibus amicis audierat, et ne verbis pariter et flagellis pressa in desperationem mens corruat, hanc per suarum virtutum memoriam ad spem reformat, ut nequaquam se debeat in calamitate dejicere, quae tranquillitatis suae tempore se meminerat tam sublimia egisse. Quia igitur intentionis ejus 697 causam diximus, restat ut auditas virtutes illius subtiliter perpendamus. 2. Una virtus sine aliis, aut nulla est, aut minima. Hoc autem primum sciendum est, quia quisquis virtute aliqua pollere creditur, tunc veraciter pollet, cum vitiis ex alia parte non subjacet. Nam si ex alio vitiis subditur, nec hoc est solidum, ubi stare putabatur. Unaquaeque enim virtus tanto minor est, quanto desunt caeterae: Nam saepe quosdam pudicos quidem vidisse nos contigit, sed non humiles; quosdam vero quasi humiles, sed non misericordes; quosdam quasi misericordes, sed nequaquam justos; quosdam vero quasi justos, sed in se potius quam in Domino confidentes. Et certum est quia nec castitas in ejus corde vera est, cui humilitas deest, quippe quia superbia se intrinsecus corrumpente fornicatur, si semetipsum diligens, a divino recedit amore. Nec humilitas

vera est cui misericordia juncta non est, quia nec debet humilitas dici, quae ad compassionem fraternae miseriae nescit inclinari. Nec misericordia vera est quae a rectitudine justitiae existit aliena, quia quae potest per injustitiam pollui, nescit procul dubio sibimetipsi misereri. Nec justitia vera est quae fiduciam suam non in conditore omnium, sed in se fortasse, aut in rebus conditis ponit, quia dum a creatore spem subtrahit, ipse sibi principalis justitiae ordinem pervertit. Una itaque virtus sine aliis, aut omnino nulla est, aut imperfecta. Ut enim, sicut quibusdam visum est, de primis quatuor virtutibus loquar, prudentia, temperantia, fortitudine, atque justitia; tanto perfectae sunt singulae, quanto vicissim sibimet conjunctae. Disjunctae autem perfectae esse nequaquam possunt, quia nec prudentia vera est quae justa, temperans et fortis non est, nec perfecta temperantia quae fortis, justa et prudens non est, nec fortitudo integra quae prudens, temperans et justa non est, nec vera justitia quae prudens, fortis et temperans non est. 3. Omnes in Job convenerunt. Beatus itaque Job, quod non unam sine alia, sed conjunctas in se virtutes habuerit, enumerando singulas innotescit. Nam bona pudicitiae insinuans, dicit: Si deceptum est cor meum super mulierem (Cap. XXXI, 9). Atque ut eidem pudicitiae demonstraret humilitatis gratiam nullatenus defuisse, post caetera subjungit: Si contempsi subire judicium cum servo meo (Vers. 13). Qui ut humilitati suae ostenderet misericordiam fuisse conjunctam, paulo post dicit: Si negavi quod volebant pauperibus (Vers. 16). Atque ut misericordiam suam ostenderet de justitiae radice descendere, paulo superius praemisit, dicens: Si ambulavi in vanitate, et festinavit in dolo pes meus (Vers. 5). Atque ut monstraretur quam fuerit ad cuncta pavidus, et ad omnia circumspectus inferius asserit, dicens: Semper enim quasi tumentes super me fluctus timui Dominum (Vers. 25). Qui scilicet in prosperis positus, atque abundantia rerum fultus, si spem aut in suis actibus aut in circumfluentibus rebus poneret, profecto justus non esset. Sed quando iste vir sanctus in se spem posuit, qui aperte dicit: Ecce non est auxilium mihi in me (Job. VI, 13)? [Vet. et Rec. II.] Quid ergo nunc superest, nisi ut ipsas quoque divitias qua mente possederit innotescat? Ait enim: 698 CAP. XXXI, VERS. 24. Si putavi aurum robur meum, et obryzo dixi, fiducia mea.

CAPUT II.

4. Non in labentibus divitiis, sed in Deo solo confidendum. Obryzum dicimus obrude aurum. Sanctus ergo vir nec aurum robur, nec sibi esse obryzum, id est rudis auri molem fiduciam credidit, quia spem atque delectationem suam in solius gratia conditoris figens, neque de quantitate auri, neque de specie peccavit. De creatore quippe desperasse fuerat, spem in creatura posuisse. In rebus autem dubiis spem fixerat dives ille, qui dicebat: Anima, habes multa bona reposita in annos plurimos, requiesce, comede, bibe, epulare. Sed hunc superna vox increpat, dicens: Stulte, hac nocte animam tuam repetunt a te; quae autem parasti, cujus erunt (Luc. XII, 19, 20)? Eadem enim nocte sublatus est, qui in rerum sibi abundantia multa tempora fuerat praestolatus, ut scilicet qui in longum sibi subsidia colligendo prospiceret, subsequentem diem vel unum minime videret. Quasi in aquis enim defluentibus fundamentum ponere est in rebus labentibus spei fiduciam velle solidare. Stante enim in perpetuum Deo, transeunt omnia. Quid ergo a stante fugere est, nisi transeuntibus rebus inhaerere? Quis namque unquam decurrentium fluminum tumidis vorticibus raptus manere ipse fixus potuit, deorsum unda defluente? Quisquis ergo defluere devitat, superest ut quod defluit fugiat, ne per hoc quod amat in hoc cogatur pervenire quod vitat. Qui enim rebus labentibus inhaeret, illo videlicet trahitur, quo tendit quod tenet. Prius itaque curandum est ne quis temporalia diligat, ac deinde ne in eisdem temporalibus quae non ad delectationem sibi, sed ad usum retinet, fiduciam ponat, quoniam conjunctus decurrentibus mox statum suum animus perdit. Nam vitae praesentis fluctus trahit quem levat, et valde demens est qui in unda volvitur, et plantam figere conatur. Sed sunt plerique qui etsi in rebus transeuntibus fiduciam nequaquam ponunt, cum tamen sibimet ad usus necessarios abunde adsunt, mente tacita laetantur. Qua in re dubium non est, quia tanto quisque minus dolet quod desint aeterna, quanto magis gaudet quod adsint temporalia; et qui minus dolet quod desint temporalia, certius exspectat ut adsint aeterna. Hoc itaque de terrenis rebus gaudium beatus Job non se habuisse testificans, subjungit dicens:

CAPUT III [Vet. III].

VERS. 25. Si laetatus sum super multis divitiis meis, et quia plurima reperit manus mea. 5. Sancti bonorum temporalium onus aut largiendo partiuntur, aut contemnendo totum deponunt. Sancti quippe viri in hujus peregrinationis aerumna, quoniam eam quam appetunt adhuc creatoris sui speciem contemplari minime sinuntur, omnem praesentis vitae copiam inopiam deputant, quia videlicet nil extra Deum sufficit menti quae veraciter Deum quaerit; et plerumque eis ipsa sua abundantia fit vehementer onerosa, quia hoc ipsum graviter tolerant, quod festinantes ad patriam in itinere multa portant. Unde fit ut haec cum indigentibus proximis devote partiantur, quatenus dum sumit iste quod non habet, deponat ille quod amplius habebat; nec conviator vacuus ambulet, nec eum quem retardare in via poterat nimium onus gravet. Electi ergo de multa abundantia minime 699 laetantur, quam videlicet pro amore coelestis patrimonii aut largiendo dispergunt, aut despiciendo deserunt. Sequitur:

CAPUT IV.

VERS. 26-28. Si vidi solem cum fulgeret, et lunam incedentem clare; et laetatum est in abscondito cor meum, et osculatus sum manum meam ore meo, quae est iniquitas maxima, et negatio contra Deum altissimum. 6.

Sensus coercent, et continuo studio intra mentem suam se colligunt. Incertum non est quod utraque haec luminaria humanis ministeriis deputata, coeli militiae vocantur. In quorum cultum multos novimus, scriptura teste, cecidisse, sicut scriptum est: Adoraverunt universam militiam coeli (IV Reg. XVII, 16). Et quia sol et luna aliter videntur ad usum, aliter ad venerationem, eo more quo a cultoribus suis venerari solent, solem et lunam beatus Job nequaquam vidisse se perhibet, nec laetatum fuisse cor suum, nec osculatum manum ore suo. In qua videlicet osculatione, quid aliud quam gratia venerationis exprimitur? Quod si fecisset unquam, hoc iniquitatem maximam et Dei negationem vocat. Sed postquam tanta de se locis superioribus virtutum culmina narravit, quid nunc mirum memorat, si solem ac lunam non se adorasse manifestat? Unde pensandum est quod postquam in auro non habuisse fiduciam, nec in multis divitiis laetatum se fuisse testatur, adhuc ad sublimiora ducitur, ut tanto nos magis erudiat, quanto de se aliqua subtilius narrat. Ait enim: Si vidi solem cum fulgeret, et lunam incedentem clare, et laetatum est in abscondito cor meum. Quid hoc in loco videre dicitur, nisi desideranter intueri? Unde Psalmista ait: Iniquitatem si conspexi in corde meo, non exaudiat Deus (Psal. LXV, 18). Quae nimirum iniquitas in ore exprimi non posset, si non conspiceretur in corde. Sed aliud est videre per judicium, aliud per appetitum. Beatus ergo Job fulgentem solem, et clare incedentem lunam nequaquam vidisse se perhibet, ut se demonstret praesentis lucis speciem non appetisse. Ac si post despectum terrenae suae abundantiae patenter insinuet: Quid dicam, quia nequaquam in auro laetatus sum, qui in ipsa quoque luce corporea delectatus non sum? Sancti etenim viri postquam omnia praesentis vitae oblectamenta despiciunt, prae illius lucis internae dulcedine, ab hac exteriori animum luce quasi a tenebris avertunt: multumque secum intrinsecus contendunt, ne hujus lucis, quae fulget extrinsecus, delectatione rapiantur. Lux quippe visibilis si incaute diligitur, a luce invisibili cor caecatur, quia quanto extra se inhians animus funditur, tanto amplius in internis obtutibus reverberatur. Unde solertes quique ne corporeis sensibus nimis ad exteriora dilabantur, continuo studio intra mentem suam occulta custodiae disciplina se colligunt, ut tanto magis inveniantur interius integri, quanto minus sunt exterius fusi. Hoc enim vigore disciplinae intra mentis suae se arcana constrinxerat, qui exterioris vitae appetitum fugiens, dicebat: Diem hominis non concupivi, tu scis (Jerem. XVII, 16). Quod ergo apud prophetam dicitur: Diem hominis non concupivi, tu scis, hoc de semetipso beatus Job verbis aliis asserit, quia fulgentem solem et lunam incedentem clare non viderit, atque ex his in cordis abditis laetatus non sit, quia nimirum gaudere non poterat de his quae per delectationis desiderium non videbat. [Vet. IV.] 7. Cavent ne suae prudentiae innitantur. Si vero cuncta haec quae juxta historiam tractando 700 discurrimus per allegoriae quoque mysteria perscrutemur, quid hoc in loco aurum accipimus, nisi praeclari intellectus ingenium; quid obryzum, nisi mentem? quae dum igne amoris excoquitur, semper in se servat claritatem pulchritudinis quotidiana innovatione fervoris. Nescit enim mens per torporem veterascere, quae studet per desiderium semper inchoare. Hinc namque per Paulum dicitur: Renovamini spiritu mentis vestrae (Ephes. IV, 23). Hinc Psalmista, qui ad perfectionis jam culmen pervenerat, quasi inchoans dicebat: Dixi, nunc coepi (Psal LXXVI, 11), quia videlicet si lassescere ab inchoatis bonis nolumus, valde necesse est ut inchoare nos quotidie credamus. Nec abhorret a rationis ordine quod auro dicimus ingenium designari, quia sicut in ornamento aurum supponitur, ut gemmarum desuper ordo disponatur, ita clara sanctorum ingenia divinis muneribus humiliter substernuntur, et distincta super se gratiarum dona percipiunt. Et nisi quid simile aurum cum sapientia haberet, quidam sapiens minime dixisset: Sapientia absconsa, et thesaurus invisus, quae utilitas in utriusque (Eccli. XX, 32; XLI, 17)? Sancti autem viri robur suum aurum non deputant, quia quantolibet ingenio fulgeant, nihil se esse ex suis viribus pensant. Et cum sentire omnia valenter possunt, prius intelligere semetipsos cupiunt, quatenus lumen ingenii more solis prius illustret locum in quo oritur, et postmodum caetera, ad quae procedendo dilatatur, ne si intendendo cognoscendis aliis semetipsos nesciant, ibi solis radius ubi oritur obtenebrescat. Ingenii itaque virtutem ad cognoscendam propriam infirmitatem dirigunt, atque ex infirmitatis suae melius cognitione convalescunt. Aurum ergo robur non creditur, si in accepto ingenio fiducia non habetur. Quod bene Salomon admonens, ait: Habe fiduciam in Domino in toto corde tuo, et ne innitaris prudentiae tuae (Prov. III, 3). Dicat ergo: Si putavi aurum robur meum, et obryzo dixi, fiducia mea. Ac si aperte fateatur, dicens: Nec quae veraciter intellexi, meo ingenio tribui, nec menti propriae, si qua egisse me bona contigit, haec principaliter deputavi. Qui adhuc subtilius humilitatem nobis sui cordis insinuans, adjungit dicens:

CAPUT V [Rec. III].

VERS 25. Si laetatus sum super multis divitiis meis, et quia plurima reperit manus mea. 8. Multa in sacris litteris intelligere periculosum, nisi intellecta custodiantur. Quid multas divitias appellatas per significationem credimus, nisi abundantia acumina consiliorum? Quae quaerentis manus invenit, cum haec cogitatio tractantis gignit. Has etenim Salomon sapientiae divitias contemplatus ait: Corona sapientium divitiae eorum (Prov. XIV, 24). Qui quia divitias non metalla terrena, sed prudentiam nominat, illico per contrarietatem subdit: Fatuitas stultorum imprudentia (Ibid., 24). Si enim coronam sapientium terrenas divitias diceret, procul dubio fatuitatem stultorum paupertatem potius quam imprudentiam fateretur. Sed dum fatuitatem stultorum imprudentiam subdidit, sapientum divitias quia prudentiam dixerit, indicavit. Has in se Paulus scientiae divitias contemplatus, et contemplationem suam consideratione humanae fragilitatis humilians, ait: Habemus thesaurum istum in vasis fictilibus (II Cor. IV, 7). Multas itaque apud nos divitias reperimus, cum dona abundantis intelligentiae, sacra eloquia investigando percipimus, atque in his plura, nec tamen sibimet diversa sentimus. Non est autem secura laetitia 701 in divinis paginis vel fortia, vel multa cognoscere, sed cognita custodire. Nam qui bene intelligit, quid intelligendo debeat agnoscit. Quanto enim intellectu latius extenditur, tanto ad explenda opera enixius ligatur. Unde in Evangelio Veritas dicit: Cui multum datum est, multum quaeretur ab eo; et cui commendaverunt multum, plus repetent ab eo (Luc. XII, 48). [Vet. V.] 9. Intelligentia data, est quasi pecunia mutuo accepta, cum fenore reddenda. Deputemus igitur intelligentiam datam quasi pecuniam mutuam, quia quo plus nobis creditur ex benignitate, eo debitores amplius tenemur in opere; et plerumque eadem intelligentiae accepta pecunia, cum ad usuras auditoribus datur, amittitur, nisi caute tribuatur. Neque enim negligenter intuendum est in Regum volumine, quod prophetarum filii cum in Jordane ligna caederent, uni eorum securis ex manubrio in profundum lapsa disparuit (IV Reg. VI). Ferrum quippe in manubrio est donum intellectus in corde. Ligna vero per hoc caedere est prave agentes increpare. Quod nonnunquam dum fluxe agitur, dum lapsus vanae gloriae in accepta eadem scientia non vitatur, ferrum in aqua perditur, quia ex dissoluto opere intelligentia fatuatur. Quam profecto intelligentiam ad hoc novimus dari, ut ante dantis oculos ex bona debeat actione restitui. Unde recte is qui ferrum amiserat clamabat: Heu! heu! heu! domine mi, et hoc ipsum mutuo acceperam (IV Reg. VI, 5). Habent enim hoc electi proprium, ut si quando eis in sua scientia furtiva vanae gloriae culpa subrepit, ad cor velociter redeant, et quidquid in se ante districti judicis oculos damnabile inveniunt, lacrymis insequantur. Qui flentes non solum caute inspiciunt mala quae commiserunt, sed ex accepto munere quae reddere etiam bona debuerunt, quia nimirum tanto se amplius peccatores sentiunt, quanto ex neglectis bonis quae agere poterant debitores tenentur. Recte ergo qui ferrum perdidit, clamabat: Heu! heu! heu! et hoc ipsum mutuo acceperam. Ac si dicat: Illud per dissolutionem negligentiae perdidi, quod ut per bona opera redderem ex gratia creditoris accepi. Sed nunquam Deus mentem deserit quae in peccatis se veraciter agnoscit. Unde et mox Elisaeus veniens, lignum deorsum mittit, et ferrum in superficiem attollit, quia videlicet Redemptor noster pie nos respiciens, cor peccatoris humiliat, et ei quam amiserat intelligentiam reformat, lignum mergit, et ferrum relevat, quia cor affligit, et scientiam reparat. Unde bene in alia translatione dicitur quod confregit lignum atque jactavit, et sic ferrum sustulit. Lignum namque confringere est cor ab elatione conterere. Lignum ad ima jactare est elatum cor in cognitione, ut diximus, propriae infirmitatis humiliare. Atque illico ferrum ad superficiem redit, quia ad usum exercitationis pristinae intelligentia recurrit. 10. Hinc de dono sibi credito justi plus timent quam gaudeant. Igitur quoniam donum intellectus quod accipitur vix cum tot difficultatibus custoditur (curandum quippe est ne otio torpeat, curandum ne in exercitatione operis vitio elationis evanescat), sancti viri, minime exsultant cum cognoscunt 702 quae faciant, sed cum faciunt quae cognoverant; et si intelligendo congaudent muneri largitoris, moerentes tamen considerant debitum operis, ut videlicet actione persolvant quod eis praerogatum est in cognitione. Stultus namque est debitor qui gaudens pecunias mutuas accipit, et tempus quo reddere debeat non attendit. Moderatur autem laetitia accipiendi, quando solerti providentia etiam constitutum tempus reddendi cogitatur. Quia igitur viri justi in his quae vigilanter intelligunt secura laetitia non extolluntur, dicatur recte: Si laetatus sum super multis divitiis meis, et quia plurima reperit manus mea. Ac si aperte diceretur: Nequaquam me in eo locupletem ex justitia credidi, quo recta quae agere debui etiam multa cognovi, nec intelligentia cor extulit, quia illud consideratio debitae operationis pressit. [Vet. VI.] Sciendum vero est, quod plerumque contingit, ut cum intelligentiae altitudo percipitur, circa semetipsum animus valde sollicitus ab elationis lapsu teneatur. Sed cum mira quae intelligit etiam operari coeperit, eo ipso nonnunquam quo foras ostenditur labitur, atque in suis actibus se caeteros praeire gloriatur. Beatum igitur Job sicut intelligentiae aurum non extulit, nec lumen quoque ante humanos oculos mirae operationis elevavit. Unde et apte subjungit:

CAPUT VI [Rec. IV].

VERS. 26. Si vidi solem cum fulgeret. 41. Ad bonorum operum suorum fulgorem non exsultant. Non absolvitur debitor qui multa reddit, sed qui omnia. Sol quippe in fulgore est bonum opus in manifestatione. Scriptum namque est: Luceat lux vestra coram hominibus, ut videant opera vestra bona, et glorificent patrem vestrum qui in coelis est (Matth. V, 16). Et rursum: Sint lumbi vestri praecincti, et lucernae ardentes (Luc. XII, 33). Quod enim hoc in loco fulgente sole, id in Evangelio lucernis ardentibus designatur. Bonum quippe opus cum in medio perfidorum lucet, lucerna ardet in nocte; cum vero in Ecclesia resplendet, sol fulget in die. Bonum opus si adhuc tale est, quod soli mali mirantur, lucerna videlicet in nocte est; si autem ita proficit, ut mirari a bonis ac perfectioribus possit, nimirum sol est in die. Bonum opus cum per activam vitam corporis lucet, quasi lucernae more, lumen ex testa resplendet. Cum vero per solam virtutem mentis in contemplatione attollitur, quasi more solis de coelo veniens lux videtur. Quia igitur multa beatus Job hospitalitatis ac misericordiae de se bona narraverat, quae profecto tanto adhuc minima, quanto et corporaliter noverat gesta, ad virtutum spiritalium culmen mentis oculum revocans, perfectionis suae meminit, et lucem exemplorum, quam de se aliis tribuit, solem vocavit. [Reg. V.] Sunt vero nonnulli qui cum bona aliqua faciunt, iniquitatum suarum protinus obliviscuntur, et cordis oculum in consideratione bonorum operum quae exhibent figunt; atque eo se jam sanctos existimant, quo inter bona quae agunt malorum suorum, in quibus et fortasse adhuc implicati sunt, memoriam declinant. Qui scilicet si districtionem judicis vigilanter attenderent, plus de malis suis metuerent quam de imperfectis bonis exsultarent, 703 plus inspicerent quod de his quae adhuc eis agenda sunt debitores tenentur, quam quod operantes quaedam jam debiti partem solvunt. Neque enim absolutus est debitor qui multa reddit, sed qui omnia; nec ad bravium victoriae pervenit qui in magna parte spectaculi velociter currit, si juxta metas veniens in hoc quod est reliquum deficit. Nec ad quaelibet destinata loca pergentibus inchoando prodest longum iter carpere, si non etiam totum valeant consummare. Qui ergo aeternam vitam quaerimus, qui aliud quam quaedam itinera agimus, per quae ad patriam festinamus? Sed quid prodest quod carpimus tam multa, si ea quae ad perveniendum restant, negligimus reliqua? 12. Non quid itineris jam peractum sit, consideremus, sed quid supersit peragendum. More itaque viatorum, nequaquam debemus aspicere quantum jam iter egimus, sed quantum superest ut peragamus, ut paulisper fiat praeteritum quod indesinenter et timide adhuc attenditur futurum. Amplius igitur debemus inspicere quae bona necdum fecimus, quam ea quae jam nos fecisse gaudemus. Sed habet hoc humana infirmitas proprium, ut plus ei intueri libeat quod sibi in se placet quam quod sibi in se displicet. Aeger quippe oculus cordis, dum laborare in consideratione sua metuit, quasi quoddam stratum delectationis in animo, ubi molliter jaceat, requirit; atque idcirco quae commoda de peractis bonis sit assecutus intelligit, sed quae damna de neglectis patitur nescit. Plerumque enim hoc vitio tentantur etiam electi. Plerumque eorum cordi suggeritur ut bona quaeque quae fecerunt ad animum revocent, et securitatis jam laetitia exsultent. Sed si vere electi sunt, ab eo in quo sibi placent mentis oculos divertunt, omnem in se de peractis bonis laetitiam deprimunt, et de his quae se minus egisse intelligunt tristitiam requirunt, indignos se aestimant, et pene soli bona sua non vident, quae in se videnda omnibus ad exemplum praebent. Hinc est quod Paulus, dum expleta in se bona postponeret, et sola adhuc reliqua quae essent explenda cogitaret, dixit: Ego me non arbitror apprehendisse (Philip. III, 13). Hinc est quod ut posset se de bonis quae agebat humiliare, studebat ad animum praeterita mala reducere, dicens: Qui prius fui blasphemus, et perseculor, et contumeliosus (I Tim. I, 13). [Vet. VII.] 13. Quando bona a se facta in memoriam revocari, aut narrare liceat. Qui et si aliquando dixit: Bonum certamen certavi, cursum consummavi, fidem servari (II Tim. IV, 7)? Intuendum summopere est quia illud eo tempore intulit quo jam ex corpore discessurum se esse cognovit. Ibi quippe praemisit dicens: Ego enim jam delibor, et tempus meae resolutionis instat (Ibid., 6). Tunc ergo ad memoriam perfectionem reduxit operis, cum jam praevidit ad largitatis spatium minime subesse tempus operationis. Sicut enim, dum vivimus, debemus bona nostra a memoria repellere, ne extollant, ita appropinquante exitu, plerumque ea ad memoriam iterum revocamus, ut videlicet fiduciam praebeant, et desperatum timorem premant. Qui etsi Corinthiis bona sua enumerando narravit, 704 illos confirmare studuit, non se ostendere. Nam quia eadem bona non in se attenderet, patefacta tribulatione propriae tentationis edocuit qua expressa subjunxit: Propter quod placeo mihi in infirmitatibus meis (II Cor. XII, 10). Ut ergo discipulos instrueret, de se summa referebat; ut vero se in humilitate custodiret, considerationis oculum non in virtutibus suis, sed in infirmitatibus fixerat. Habent itaque proprium sancti viri, ut bona quidem quae agunt videant; et tamen cum peregerint, ab eorum memoria oculos avertant. Unde recte per beatum Job dicitur: Si vidi solem cum fulgeret. Ac si aperte diceret: Opus meum etiam cum aliis exemplorum, lucem tribueret, ad praesumptionis gratiam non attendi, quia dum de eo extolli timui, ab intuendo eo oculos averti. Sequitur:

CAPUT VII.

IBID. Et lunam incedentem clare. 14. Fama ex bonis operibus non aucupanda. Post praemissum solem, apte quoque incedentem clare lunam subdidit, quia videlicet post opus bonum, fama laudabilis sequitur, per quam celebre nomen in hac praesentis vitae nocte possidetur. Si autem verum est quod quidam putant, illustrationem lunam per occultum circulum a radio solis accipere, ut possit lucem nocturnis cursibus exhibere, ab hujus significationis ordine haec quoque suspicio non abhorret. Fama quippe a bono opere vires accipit, et favoris gratiam quasi claritatem luminis aspergit. Est et aliud in luna quod per similitudinem bona spargenti famae conveniat. Lux namque ejus etiam in tenebrarum tempore iter ambulantibus ostendit, quia et dum de aliena vita lux laudis emicat, alios ad exercitium boni operis illustrat; cumque illius opinio clara cognoscitur, huic quasi pergenti in itinere exempli lumen praebetur. Sed nonnunquam opus quod ab aliena opinione sumitur minus mundo desiderio in animo formatur. Nam infirmae mentes cum bona de aliis audiunt, aliquando se ad operationem rectam non amore virtutis, sed delectatione laudis accendunt. Et profecto liquet quia sicut natura solis est ut quaeque attigerit accendat et siccet, ita lunaris ignis est proprium ut quidquid contigerit exurat quidem, sed exurendo humidum reddat. Ad vitam igitur bonam alios pro amore Dei affectus recti operis, alios vero amor laudis inflammat. Sed cum recti operis affectu accendimur, quasi per ignem solis a vitiorum humore siccamur. Eum vero quem ad opus bonum laudis amor provocat, concupita fama, quasi luna, attingit, quia videlicet ejus animum et accendit et resolvit. Accendit scilicet ad exercitium operis, resolvit vero ad concupiscentiam favoris. Plerumque tamen ad exercenda bona opera aliena nos utiliter exempla persuadent. Et cum mente humili opinionis alienae bona suscipimus, nostra vel ad melius bona producimus, vel ad bonum mala permutamus. Cumque nos de vita proximi famae splendor irradiat, mens nostra, ut praediximus, quae ad obtinendum virtutis iter se dirigit, quasi in lunae lumine gressus ponit. Sed sicut ex aliena opinione proficimus, sic plerumque, si famae nostrae laudibus intendimus, a virtute vacuamur, 705 quia cum delectatur animus in hoc quod de se extrinsecus haberi considerat, illud obliviscitur ad quod introrsus anhelabat. [Vet. VIII.] 15. Intelligentia, bona opera, laudes, humilitati Job (quod raro accidit) nihil nocuerunt. Quia igitur sanctum virum intelligentia scientiae non corrupit, de multis divitiis gaudere despexit. Quia vero eum magnitudo operis non inflavit, solem fulgentem non vidit. Quia autem illum nec fama laudis extulit, clare incedentem lunam minime attendit. Sunt enim nonnulli qui eo in elationem corruunt, quo per subtilem intelligentiam vel quae non faciunt bona cognoscunt. Hi nimirum super multis divitiis laetantur, cum quaelibet summa intelligendo reperiunt, atque in elatione ipsis inventionibus corrumpuntur. Sunt vero nonnulli quos intelligentia quidem non elevat, sed exhibita operatio exaltat. Qui dum actiones suas respiciunt, apud mentem suam sibi caeteros dedignando postponunt. Hi videlicet etsi in multis divitiis non gaudent, solem tamen fulgentem vident quia de sola boni operis magnitudine quasi alios despiciendo tument. Et sunt nonnulli quos nec operatio propria extollit; sed cum laudari ab hominibus pro hac eadem bona operatione coeperint, ipsis hominum favoribus devicti, quasi magnos se quosdam in sua cogitatione conspiciunt, atque a cordis custodia dissolvuntur. Hi profecto etsi fulgentem solem videre noluerunt, lunam tamen clare incedentem respiciunt, quia inter hujus vitae tenebras dum in opinionis suae claritate animum defigunt, humilitatis gratiam quasi ex nocturno lumine amittunt; et intuentes lunam, se non vident, qui semetipsos nescire incipiunt, dum mentis oculos in transitorium favorem defigunt. 16. Varii ad virtutem progressus et gradus. Quid in uno quoque metuendum. Sic autem profectus est hominum, sicut incrementa esse conspicimus arbustorum. Vis quippe futurae arboris prius in semine est, postmodum in ortu, atque ad extremum producitur in ramos. Sic nimirum sic uniuscujusque virtus succrescit operantis. Seminatur namque in intelligentia, oritur in operatione, atque ad ultimum convalescit usque ad profectus magni latitudinem. Sed cum quemlibet sua intelligentia extollit, arbor quae oriri poterat in semine putrescit. Cum autem post operationem bonam elationis peste corrumpitur, quasi jam orta siccatur. Cum vero neque intelligentia, neque operatio corrumpit, sed excrescente magnitudine, dum favor laudantium sequitur, atque a statu suo bene operantis animum evertit, linguarum ventos arbor pertulit, et omne quod in ea robustum creverat tempestas famae radicitus evulsit. Quo enim arbor altius ad superiora surrexerit, eo ventorum vim vehementius sentit, quia quo plus quisque in bonis operibus attollitur, eo ampliori ab ore laudantium flatu fatigatur. Si itaque adhuc arbor in semine est, metuendum est ne ipsa scientiae cognitione putrefiat. Si jam ad virgultum prodiit, curandum est ne hanc manus elationis tangat, atque a viriditate suae actionis arefaciat. Si autem valenti robore jam ad alta se sublevat, valde formidandum est, ne hanc admotae laudis ventus gravior radicitus evellat. [Vet. IX.] 706 17. Periculo ex fama et humanis laudibus, Deus permittit opponi detractiones. Sed inter haec sciendum est quia ne immoderatis laudibus eruamur, plerumque miro rectoris nostri moderamine etiam detractionibus lacerari permittimur, ut cum nos vox laudantis elevat, lingua detrahentis humiliet, quia et arbor saepe quae unius venti impulsu ita impellitur, ut pene jam erui posse videatur, alterius e diverso venientis flatu erigitur, et quae hac ex parte inflexionem pertulit, ab alia ad statum redit. Unde et illa arbor alte radicata quasi inter adversantes ventos fixa steterat, quae dicebat: Per gloriam et ignobilitatem, per infamiam et bonam famam (II Cor. VI, 8). Saepe enim laus bene agentis auribus insolenter admota, dum foris sermonibus perstrepit, intus quamdam menti per tacitum, elationis tempestatem gignit: fitque ut hoc, quod animus de humanis favoribus gaudet, non facile exterius ostendat, sed tamen corruptionis vim non tenuiter interius sentiat. Et sunt nonnulli quos ita laus inflat, ut usque ad verba elationis pertrahat. Quidam vero, ut praediximus, hoc ipsum patefacere quod elevantur erubescunt, atque auditis suis praeconiis extolluntur; sed tamen usque ad elationis verba non exeunt, et gaudere se in talibus non ostendunt. Unde beatus Job, quia noverat arrogantem se non solum nullo modo in verbis, sed etiam in cogitatione quoque tacita minime fuisse, postquam dixit: Si vidi solem cum fulgeret, et lunam incedentem clare, illico subdidit:

CAPUT VIII.

VERS. 27. Et laetatum est in abscondito cor meum. 18. De suis laudibus vel tacite laetari vetitum. Qua videlicet attestatione quid nobis innuitur, nisi quod magno metu et circumspectione opus est, ne mens nostra unquam de suis laudibus vel tacita laetetur? Quisquis enim quasi claritatem lunae famae suae magnitudinem conspicit, sibique in occulto mentis gaudium facit, cui iste nisi auctori se praetulit, cujus dono ut bene operaretur percepit, et tamen in ejus munere de gratia suae laudis hilarescit? Despecto enim honore conditoris, semetipsum plus amare convincitur, cujus praeconiis laetatur. Quamvis nonnunquam etiam sancti viri de bona sua opinione gaudeant; sed cum per hanc ad meliora proficere audientes pensant, non jam de opinione sua, sed de proximorum gaudent utilitate quia aliud est favores quaerere, et aliud de profectibus exsultare. Qua in re necesse est ut cum audientium utilitati non proficit, mentem nostram fama laudabilis non elevet, sed fatiget. Cum enim humanae linguae attestatione laudamur, occulta pulsatione requirimur quid de nobisipsis sentiamus. Superba etenim mens etiam cum de se falsa bona dicuntur exsultat, quia non apud Deum qualiter vivat, sed apud homines qualiter innotescat, excogitat. Judicium enim de se omnipotentis Dei despiciens, et solummodo hominum quaerens, inter auditas laudes extollitur, et quae hoc solum quaesierat, quasi de bravio operis laetatur. At contra, si cor veraciter humile est, bona quae de se audit, aut minime recognoscit, et quia falsa dicuntur metuit; aut certe si adesse ea sibi veraciter scit, eo ipso formidat ne ab aeterna Dei retributione sint perdita, quo haec considerat hominibus divulgata, 707 pavetque vehementer ne spes futuri muneris in mercedem permutetur transitorii favoris. 19. Sancti suis laudibus cruciantur. Qua ex re agitur ut electorum animus magno laudum suarum igne crucietur, atque ab omni torporis sui rubigine moerore cogitationis excoquatur. Cauta enim consideratione trepidat, ne aut de his in quibus laudatur et non sunt majus Dei judicium inveniat, aut de his in quibus laudatur et sunt competens praemium perdat. Unde plerumque fit ut sicut injustus ex laude sua polluitur, ita vir justus audita sua laude purgetur. Nam dum bona quae egit ab hominibus proferri cognoscit, subtile contra se, ut dictum est, extremi judicii examen metuit, ac trepidus ad conscientiam recurrit, et quidquid illic inest reprehensibile corrigit. Dum enim bona sua innotuisse formidat, subtilitatem secuturi examinis pertimescens, si qua in se mala occulta sunt amputat. Pavet namque si saltem talis Deo non ostenditur qualis ab hominibus putatur, et neque contentus est ut in quo potuit innotescere, in hoc debeat remanere. Jam enim de bonis suis quasi retributionem sibi factam aestimat, nisi eis et alia quae ab hominibus nesciuntur adjungat. Unde bene per Salomonem dicitur: Sicut probatur in conflatorio argentum, et in fornace aurum, ita probatur homo ore laudantis (Prov. XXVII, 21). Argentum quippe vel aurum, si reprobum est, igne consumitur; si probum vero, igne declaratur. Sic nimirum est et sensus operantis. Nam qualis sit, in eo quod laudatur ostenditur. Si enim se auditis suis laudibus extollit, quid iste aliud quam aurum vel argentum reprobum fuit, quem videlicet fornax linguae consumpsit? Si autem favores suos audiens, ad superni judicii considerationem redit, ac ne de his apud occultum arbitrum gravetur metuit, quasi expurgationis igne ad magnitudinem claritatis excrescit, et unde incendium trepidationis sustinet, inde clarius fulget. Beatus igitur Job, quia nequaquam de operatione se praetulit, fidenter dicit: Si vidi solem cum fulgeret. Quia vero hunc a judicii interioris intuitu fama laudabilis non divertit, adjungit: Et lunam incedentem clare. Quia autem opinionis suae gratia animum devinci, nec tacita cogitatione permisit, protinus subdidit: Et si laetatum est in abscondito cor meum. [Vet. X.] Et quia plerumque inconsiderata mens, dum transitorio favori non renititur, ad hoc usque pertrahitur, ut laudet ipsa quod facit, conditioni quae praemissa est quasi congrue subinfertur:

CAPUT IX.

IBID. Et osculatus sum manum meam ore meo. 20. Deo, non sibi, sua bona opera tribuunt. Gratia praeveniens. Per manum quippe operatio, per os autem locutio designatur; sicut per Salomonem dicitur: Abscondit piger manum suam sub axilla sua, et laborat si ad os suum porrigat eam (Prov. XIX, 24). Pigro labor est manum suam ad os porrigere, quia desidiosus quisque praedicator nec hoc vult operari quod dicit. Manum quippe ad os porrigere est voci suae opere concordare. Manum ergo suam osculatur ore suo, qui laudat quod facit, et testimonio propriae locutionis sibi virtutem tribuit operis. Qua in re quis despicitur, nisi is qui ipsa operandi munera largitur? Unde bene per egregium praedicatorem dicitur: Quid autem habes, quod non accepisti? Si autem 708 accepisti, quid gloriaris, quasi non acceperis (I Cor. IV, 7)? Sancti autem viri sciunt post primi parentis lapsum de corruptibili stirpe se editos, et non virtute propria, sed praeveniente superna gratia ad meliora se vota vel opera commutatos; et quidquid sibi mali inesse cognoscunt, de mortali propagine sentiunt meritum; quidquid vero in se boni inspiciunt, immortalis gratiae cognoscunt donum, eique de accepto munere debitores fiunt, qui et praeveniendo dedit eis bonum velle quod noluerunt, et subsequendo concessit bonum posse quod volunt. Unde bene per Joannem dicitur: Adoraverunt viventem in saecula saeculorum, mittentes coronas suas ante thronum Domini (Apoc. IV, 10). Coronas namque suas ante thronum Domini mittere est certaminum suorum victorias non sibi tribuere, sed auctori, ut ad illum referant gloriam laudis, a quo se sciunt vires accepisse certaminis. Beatus ergo Job, quia sic bona quae operatus est narrat, ut tamen haec suae operationi non tribuat, sed ad auctoris laudem recurrat, manum suam ore suo osculatum fuisse se denegat. Ac si patenter dicat: Ego mea opera tanquam mea non profero, quia auctoris sui gratiam negare convincitur, quisquis sibi tribuit quod operatur. Unde et protinus subdit:

CAPUT X.

VERS. 28. Quae est iniquitas maxima, et negatio contra Deum altissimum. 21. Deum negat qui de viribus suis praesumit. Liquet etenim quia illum negat, cujus despecta gratia, sibi vires boni operis arrogat. Quod recte quoque et iniquitas maxima vocatur, quoniam omne peccatum quod ex infirmitate est spem nequaquam perdit, quia a superno judice veniam requirit. Praesumptio autem virtutis propriae tanto gravius in desperatione est, quanto longius ab humilitate. Cumque vires sibi tribuit operis, ad adjutorium non recurrit auctoris; fitque ut eo gravius peccator pereat, quo et ipsum hoc, quia est peccator, ignorat. Sequitur:

CAPUT XI [Rec. VI].

VERS. 29. Si gavisus sum ad ruinam ejus qui me oderat, et exsultavi quod invenisset eum malum. 22. Dei discipulos nos facit sola charitas. Charitatis argumenta et signa. Omnipotentis Dei nos esse discipulos, sola custodia charitatis probat. Hinc est enim quod per semetipsam Veritas dicit: In hoc cognoscent omnes, quia mei discipuli estis, si dilectionem habueritis ad invicem (Joan. XIII, 35). Quae nimirum dilectio si cor nostrum veraciter replet, duobus modis ostendi solet, scilicet si et amicos in Deo, et inimicos diligimus propter Deum. Sed sciendum est quia inimici dilectio tunc veraciter custoditur, cum nec de profectu addicimur, nec de ruina illius laetamur. Nam saepe in dilectionis imagine erga inimicum animus fallitur, seque hunc diligere aestimat, si ejus vitae contrarius non existat. Sed dilectionis vim occulte et veraciter aut profectus inimici, aut casus interrogat. Hac etenim de re ad plenum semetipsam mens hominis nescit, nisi eum quem sibi adversarium credit in defectu vel profectu mutasse modum sui status invenerit. Si enim de prosperitate addicitur, et de calamitate se odientis laetatur, constat quia non amat quem non vult esse meliorem, eumque etiam stantem voto persequitur, quem cecidisse gratulatur. [Vet. XI] 709 23. Qui possumus illaesa charitate de inimici ruina laetari, aut de ejus gloria dolere. Quid hac in re cavendum. Sed inter haec sciendum est quia evenire plerumque solet ut non amissa charitate et inimici nos ruina laetificet, et rursum ejus gloria sine invidiae culpa contristet, cum et ruente eo quosdam bene erigi credimus, et proficiente illo plerosque injuste opprimi formidamus. Qua in re mentem nostram nec ejus jam defectus erigit, nec ejus profectus addicit, si recta nostra cogitatio non quid in ipso, sed quid de ipso circa alios agatur attendit. Sed ad haec servanda valde est necessarium subtilissimae discretionis examen, ne cum nostra odia exsequimur, fallamur sub specie utilitatis alienae. Si enim de inimici morte gaudendum omnino non esset, Psalmista non diceret: Laetabitur justus, cum viderit vindictam impiorum (Psal. LVII, 11). Sed aliud est impium, aliud vero inimicum perpeti. Nam sunt plerique inimici qui non sunt impii; et sunt nonnulli impii, qui nobis specialiter non videntur inimici. Humana autem mens omnem quem inimicum tolerat, etiam impium et iniquum putat, quia ejus culpas apud cogitationem suam livor accusator exaggerat. Quibuslibet vero flagitiis prematur, minus iniquus creditur, si adversarius minime sentitur. Qua in re discernendum est aliud esse quod nobis, aliud vero quod sibi et caeteris noster inimicus nocet. Nam si aliis bonus est, sine nostra forsitan culpa esse non potest nobis malus; nec omnino jam de ejus ruina gaudendum est, cujus nos solos certum est adversa tolerasse. Cum vero noster ac multorum hostis perimitur, de ereptione proximorum potius quam de inimici interitu necesse est ut animus laetetur. 24. Condolendum est miseriae pereuntis, et congaudendum justitiae judicis. Oportet namque ut pereunte adversario subtiliter pensare debeamus, et quid debemus ruinae peccatoris, et quid justitiae ferientis. Nam cum perversum quemque Omnipotens percutit, et condolendum est miseriae pereuntis, et congaudendum justitiae judicis, ut nobis et in luctu sit poena morientis proximi, et rursus in gaudium veniat exhibita aequitas judicantis Dei, quatenus nec pereunti homini existamus adversarii, nec judicanti Deo inveniamur ingrati. Beatus igitur Job, quia cuncta in adversitate odia perfecte calcavit, dicat: Si gavisus sum ad ruinam ejus qui me oderat, et exsultavi quod invenisset eum malum; qui videlicet et inimicum diligens, dum adversario ruenti condoluit, in malis illius ipse ad bonum crevit, ut inde iste ad benignitatem cresceret, unde illum mala quae merebatur invenissent. Quia vero saepe nonnulli eos quos sibi adversarios aestimant maledictione feriunt, quoniam virtute nequaquam possunt; in quibus patenter apparet quae mala si possent facerent, qui ea quae facere nequeunt imprecari minime desistunt; beatus Job ostendens se a culpa etiam maledictionis alienum, secutus adjunxit:

CAPUT XII.

VERS. 30. Non enim dedi ad peccandum guttur meum, ut expeterem maledicens animam ejus. 25. A maledictis abstinendum. Peccaret quippe si hoc optaret a Deo fieri, quod ipse facere, vel omnino non posset, vel, si posset, minime deceret. Nam qui maledictionibus 710 inimicum impetunt, quid aliud in illo facere Deum volunt, nisi quod ipsi facere aut nequeunt, aut erubescunt? Mortem namque adversario exoptant, quam et si possunt inferre metuunt, ne aut perpetrati homicidii rei teneantur, aut iniqui appareant etiam cum sint. Quid est ergo Deo dicere: Occide quem odi, nisi apertis ei vocibus clamare: Hoc fac meo adversario, quod me in illum facere nec peccatorem decet? In quibus profecto verbis pensandum nobis est, ubi iste vir legerat: Diligite inimicos vestros (Luc. VI, 27, 35); ubi legerat: Benedicite, et nolite maledicere (Rom. XII, 14); et rursum: Non reddentes malum pro malo, nec maledictum pro maledicto (I Petr. III, 9). Sed exterius non audita supernae gratiae praecepta servabat, quia haec in mente illius sancti Spiritus afflatus scribebat. Cui tamen minus esset quod positos extra diligeret, nisi et interius viventes secumque quotidie conversantes etiam familiares adversarios toleraret. Unde subjungit:

CAPUT XIII [Rec. VII].

VERS. 31. Si non dixerunt viri tabernaculi mei: Quis det de carnibus ejus, ut saturemur? 26. Domesticos et familiares nobis adversantes patienter tolerare debemus. Altaris sacrificium. Adversa patienda sunt exterius fortiter, et interius clementer. Quae nimirum sententia potest quoque per mysterium ex voce Redemptoris intelligi. Viri quippe ejus tabernaculi de carnibus illius saturari cupierunt, vel Judaei scilicet persequentes, vel gentiles credentes, quia et illi moliti sunt corpus illius, quasi consumendo, exstinguere, et isti esurientem mentem suam desiderant per quotidianum immolationis sacrificium de ejus carnibus satiare. [Vet. XII.] Sed nunc solius historiae virtutem sequentes, pensemus quanta fortitudine sancti viri animus extra intraque sollicitus ad omnia partitur. Qui si injuste agentibus aut unquam per silentium cederet, aut per rectitudinem non contrairet, profecto adversarios non habuisset. Sed in eo quod vias vitae tenuit, exoptatores suae mortis invenit. Foris patentes adversarios pertulit, intus latentes. Minor est autem virtus certaminis foris quempiam videre mala quae superet, et intus quod toleret non habere. Perfectae autem magnitudinis laus est adversa perpeti ei exterius fortiter, et interius clementer. Nam sunt nonnulla quae in ipsa quoque familiarium conversatione corrigi nequeunt sine culpa corrigentis; atque ideo cum vel corrigentem inquinant, vel non omnino haec agentem gravant, magna magisterii arte dissimulanda sunt, ipsaque hac dissimulatione toleranda. Quae contra nos illata citius a corde laxamus, si nostra circa proximos errata cognoscimus. Unde bene quoque per Salomonem dicitur: Cunctis sermonibus qui dicuntur ne accommodes cor tuum, ne forte audias servum tuum maledicentem tibi. Scit enim tua conscientia, quia et tu crebro maledixisti aliis (Eccle. VII, 22, 23). Dum enim pensamus quales erga alios fuimus, esse circa nos tales alios minus dolemus, quia aliena injustitia in nobis vindicat quod in se juste nostra conscientia accusat. Sequitur:

CAPUT XIV [Rec. VIII].

VERS. 32. Foris non mansit peregrinus, ostium meum viatori patuit. 27. Misericordiae in parcendo succedat misericordia in largiendo. Quia, teste Paulo, charitas patiens et benigna 711 describitur (I Cor. XIII, 4), per patientiam aliena mala aequanimiter tolerat, per benignitatem quoque bona misericorditer impendit sua. Unde beatus Job et patienter domesticos maledicentes pertulit, et viatores atque peregrinos apud se benigne suscepit: illis morum exempla tribuens, istis exteriorum ope concurrens; illis per mansuetudinem non concitus ad irascendum, istis per misericordiam ad subveniendum paratus. Vir enim sanctus Redemptorem generis humani per prophetiae spiritum intuens, praedicamenta quoque illius in opere servabat, quibus nos admonet, dicens: Dimittite, et dimittetur vobis; date, et dabitur vobis (Luc. VI, 37). Dare namque nostrum ad res pertinet quas exterius habemus, dimittere autem ad relaxandum dolorem quem interius ex aliena culpa contraximus. Sed sciendum est quia qui dimittit, et non dat, etsi non plene operatus est, meliorem tamen partem misericordiae tenuit. Qui autem dat, et minime dimittit, omnino misericordiam nullam facit, quia ab omnipotente Deo munus ex manu non accipitur, quod corde obligato in malitia profertur. 28. Eleemosynae meritoriae conditiones. Mundari etenim debet prius animus qui eleemosynam praebet, quia omne quod datur Deo ex dantis mente pensatur. Cuncta itaque malitiae macula ab interiori nostro homine cogitationis immutatione tergenda est, quia iram judicis placare nescit oblatio, nisi ex munditia placeat offerentis. Unde scriptum est: Respexit Deus ad Abel et ad munera ejus, ad Cain autem et ad munera ejus non respexit (Genes. IV, 4, 5). Neque etenim sacrum eloquium dicit: Respexit ad munera Abel, et ad Cain munera non respexit; sed prius ait quia respexit ad Abel, ac deinde subjunxit, Et ad munera ejus. Et rursum dicit quia non respexit ad Cain, ac deinde subdidit, Nec ad munera ejus. Ex dantis quippe corde id quod datur accipitur. Idcirco non Abel ex muneribus, sed ex Abel munera oblata placuerunt. Prius namque ad eum legitur Dominus respexisse qui dabat, quam ad illa quae dabat. Unde bene beatus Job dicturus nobis in hospitalitatis gratia largitatem suam, prius circa adversarios protulit patientiam et benignitatem suam: quod de ruina non exsultavit inimici, quod verbis maledicis persecutores suos non impetiit, quod saevientes intrinsecus aequanimiter toleravit, et tunc demum hospitalitatis suae munificentiam protulit; ut audito scilicet narrationis ejus ordine, discamus quia exteriora munera ex interna cordis munditia condiuntur, ut virtutum ejus contextio lectorem doceat qualis apud se esse debeat, cum exteriora bona aliis subministrat. 29. In bonis operibus cavenda elatio. Sed quis se inter tanta virtutum culmina sanctum esse non crederet? Quis non utcunque ipsis tot meritis tentaretur, ut si quando ut homo delinqueret, delictum suum hominibus nollet innotesci; et leve esse crederet, si quid in minimis 712 peccaret; culpamque suam mallet silentio tegere quam voce confessionis aperire? Saepe namque contingit ut elatus virtutibus animus, dum multa bona in aestimatione proximorum de se spargi cognoverit, agnosci non velit si quid est quod reprehensibiliter facit. Quas videlicet erroris tenebras idcirco mens tolerat, quia cordis oculum tumor gravat. Unde beatus Job inter tot eximia facta virtutum, qui tam summus exstitit in operatione, ut demonstraret quam humilis fuerit in mente, protinus adjunxit:

CAPUT XV [Vet.

XIII, Rec. IX]. VERS. 33. Si abscondi quasi homo peccatum meum, et celavi in sinu meo iniquitatem meam. 30. Humilitatis argumentum est culpam suam confiteri; superbiae, excusare. Peccata excusando, graviora reddimus. Haec sunt namque verae humilitatis testimonia, et iniquitatem suam quemque cognoscere, et cognitam voce confessionis aperire. At contra, usitatum humani generis vitium est, et latendo peccatum committere, et commissum negando abscondere, et convictum defendendo multiplicare. Ex illo quippe lapsu primi hominis haec augmenta nequitiae ducimus, ex quo ipsam radicem traximus culpae. Sic namque ille dum lignum vetitum contigisset, abscondit se a facie Domini inter ligna paradisi. In qua absconsione, scilicet quia Deum latere non poterat, non latendi effectus describitur, sed affectus notatur. Qui cum argueretur a Domino, quod de ligno vetito contigisset, illico respondit: Mulier quam dedisti mihi sociam ipsa mihi dedit de ligno, et comedi (Genes. III, 12). Ipsa quoque mulier inquisita respondit, dicens: Serpens decepit me, et comedi (Ibid., 13). Ad hoc quippe requisiti fuerant, ut peccatum quod transgrediendo commiserant confitendo delerent. Unde et serpens ille persuasor, qui non erat revocandus ad veniam, non est de culpa requisitus. Interrogatus itaque homo est ubi esset, ut perpetratam culpam respiceret, et confitendo cognosceret quam longe a conditoris sui facie abesset. Sed adhibere sibimet utrique defensionis solatia quam confessionis elegerunt. Cumque excusare peccatum voluit vir per mulierem, mulier per serpentem, auxerunt culpam, quam tueri conati sunt: oblique Adam Dominum tangens, quod ipse peccati eorum auctor exstiterit, qui mulierem fecit; et Eva culpam ad Dominum referens, qui serpentem in paradiso posuisset. Qui enim ore diaboli fallentis audierant: Eritis sicut dii (Ibid., 5), quia Deo esse similes in divinitate nequiverunt, ad erroris sui cumulum Deum sibi facere similem in culpa conati sunt. Sic ergo reatum suum dum defendere moliuntur, addiderunt ut culpa eorum atrocior discussa fieret quam fuerat perpetrata. 31. Multi Adamum imitantur, velut arborum foliis peccatum abscondere cogitantem. Peccator e sepulcro exit per confessionem. Unde nunc quoque humani generis rami ex hac adhuc radice amaritudinem trahunt, ut cum de vitio suo quisque arguitur, sub defensionum verba quasi sub quaedam se arborum folia abscondat, et velut ad quaedam excusationis suae opaca secreta faciem conditoris fugiat, dum non vult 713 cognosci quod fecit. In qua videlicet occultatione non se Domino, sed Dominum abscondit sibi. Agit quippe ne omnia videntem videat, non autem ne ipse videatur. Quo contra cuique peccatori jam exordium illuminationis est humilitas confessionis, quia sibimetipsi jam parcere renuit, qui malum non erubescit confiteri quod fecit; et qui defendendo accusari potuit, accusando se celerrime defendit. Unde et mortuo Lazaro, qui mole magna premebatur, nequaquam dicitur: Revivisce, sed: Veni foras (Joan. XI, 43). Ex qua scilicet resurrectione, quae gesta in illius est corpore, signatur qualiter nos resuscitemur in corde, cum videlicet mortuo dicitur: Veni foras, ut nimirum homo in peccato suo mortuus, et per molem malae consuetudinis jam sepultus, quia intra conscientiam suam absconsus jacet per nequitiam, a semetipso foras exeat per confessionem. Mortuo enim Veni foras dicitur, ut ab excusatione atque occultatione peccati ad accusationem suam ore proprio exire provocetur. Unde David propheta, ab illa tanti morte facinoris reviviscens, ad vocem Domini quasi foras exiit, dum, per Nathan correptus, quod fecerat accusavit (II Reg. XII, 13). 32. Occultandi peccati culpa vehementer excrevit. Quia igitur haec occultationis culpa in humano genere vehementer excrevit, bene beatus Job cum diceret: Si abscondi peccatum meum, interposuit: quasi homo. Hominis quippe esse proprium conspicit, quod ex parentis veteris imitatione descendit. Ubi apte subditur: Et celavi in sinu meo iniquitatem meam. [Vet. XIV, rec. X.] Scriptura etenim sacra plerumque sinum ponere pro mente consuevit, sicut voce Ecclesiae de persecutoribus nostris, qui nobis natura quidem conjuncti sunt, sed vita disjuncti, per Psalmistam dicitur: Redde vicinis nostris septuplum in sinu eorum (Psal. LXXVIII, 12). Ac si aperte diceret: In mente sua recipiant hoc quod in nostris corporibus saevientes operantur, ut dum nos exterius ex parte puniunt, ipsi interius perfecte puniantur. Quia igitur sinus secretum mentis accipitur, in sinu iniquitatem celare est hanc in conscientiae latibulis occultare, nec per confessionem detegere, sed per defensionem velare. Quo contra Jacobus dicit: Confitemini alterutrum peccata vestra, et orate pro invicem, ut salvemini (Jac. V, 16). Salomon quoque ait: Qui abscondit scelera sua, non dirigetur; qui autem confessus fuerit, et dereliquerit ea, misericordiam consequetur (Prov. XXVIII, 13). 33. Ficta est peccati confessio sine humilitate. Sincerae confessionis indicia. Sed inter haec sciendum est quod plerumque homines et culpas confitentur, et humiles non sunt. Nam multos novimus qui arguente nullo peccatores se esse confitentur; cum vero de culpa sua fuerint fortasse correpti, defensionis patrocinium quaerunt, ne peccatores esse videantur. Qui si tunc cum id sponte dicunt peccatores se esse veraci humilitate cognoscerent, cum arguuntur ab aliis, esse se quod confessi fuerant non negarent. Qua in re indicia verae confessionis sunt, si cum quisque se peccatorem dicit, id de se dicenti etiam alteri non contradicit. Nam quia scriptum est: Justus in principio accusator est sui (Prov. XVIII, 17), non magis peccator, sed justus videri appetit, cum peccatorem 714 se quisque nullo arguente confitetur, sed confessionis veritatem probat, cum alter malum quod fecimus increpat. Quod si superbe defendimus, liquet quia peccatores nos ex nobis ficte dicebamus. Unde summopere curandum est ut mala quae fecimus, et sponte fateamur, et haec aliis arguentibus non negemus. Superbiae quippe vitium est ut quod de se fateri quisque quasi sua sponte dignatur, hoc sibi dici ab aliis dedignetur 34. Job in peccati confessione humilitas. Saepe gravioris certaminis est peccata confiteri quam vitare. Beatus itaque Job quantae fuerit humilitatis ostendit, qui se et inter adversarios noverat vivere, et tamen non verebatur culpas voce confessionis aperire. Sed notandum quod superius virtutes suas loquitur, inferius peccatum fatetur. Hinc enim liquido demonstrat quam vera de bonis suis dixerat, qui noluit tacere de malis. Modo virtutes suas indicat, modo culpam, quia et perpetraverit peccatum, et non tacuerit, manifestat. Unde certissime apparet quantae munditiae in omnipotentis Dei oculis fuerit, qui et vitavit mala, ne committeret, et tamen quae eum committere contigit, hominibus non abscondit, quatenus ei et justitiae sit gloria declinasse peccatum, et justitiae custodia quod non potuit declinare prodidisse. Videatur vir iste cuilibet magnus in virtutibus suis, mihi certe sublimis apparet etiam in peccatis suis. Mirentur in eo qui volunt castitatis continentiam, mirentur integritatem justitiae, mirentur viscera pietatis; ego in eo non minus admiror confessionem humillimam peccatorum quam tot sublimia gesta virtutum. Scio enim quod per infirmitatis verecundiam plerumque gravioris est certaminis commissa peccata prodere quam non admissa vitare, et unumquodque malum quamvis robustius vitetur, tamen humilius proditur. Beatus ergo Job, qui, tot magnis operibus fultus, confiteri culpam non erubuit, ostendit in virtutibus quam humilis fuit. Sed quia ex humilitate vera secura semper auctoritas nascitur, ut tanto foris nil metuat, quanto ad rerum culmina animus per elationis desiderium non anhelat, expressa confessione peccati, recte subjungitur:

CAPUT XVI.

VERS. 34. Si expavi ad multitudinem nimiam, et despectio propinquorum terruit me; et non magis tacui, nec egressus sum ostium. 35. Cordis a terrenarum rerum cupiditate liberi mira securitas. Quae tamen a custodiae disciplina non eximit. Magna est securitas cordis, nil concupiscentiae habere saecularis. Nam si ad terrena adipiscenda cor inhiat, securum tranquillumque esse nullatenus potest, quia aut non habita concupiscit ut habeat, aut adepta metuit ne amittat; et dum in adversis sperat prospera, in prosperis formidat adversa, huc illucque quasi quibusdam fluctibus volvitur, ac per modos varios rerum alternantium mutabilitate versatur. Si vero semel in appetitione supernae patriae forti stabilitate animus figitur, minus rerum temporalium perturbatione vexatur. A cunctis quippe externis motibus eamdem intentionem suam quasi quemdam secretissimum secessum petit, ibique incommutabili inhaerens, et mutabilia cuncta transcendens, ipsa jam tranquillitate quietis suae in mundo extra mundum est. Excedit profecto ima omnia intentione summorum, 715 et cunctis rebus quas non appetit libertate quadam se superesse sentit, nec tempestatem rerum temporalium intus sustinet, quam intuetur foris. quia terrena omnia, quae concupita opprimere mentem poterant, despecta subterjacent. Unde bene per prophetam dicitur: Statue tibi speculam (Jerem. XXXI, 21), ut dum quisque speculatur summa, superemineat infimis. Hinc etiam Habacuc dicit: Super custodiam meam stabo (Habac. II, 1). Stat quippe super custodiam suam, qui per solertiam disciplinae terrenis desideriis non succumbit, sed supereminet, ut dum semper stantem appetit aeternitatem, infra sit ei omne quod transit. 36. Quia carnis infirmitates et perturbationes non excludit. Sancti Dei dono imperturbabiles, propria infirmitate perturbationibus subjacent. Tamen quia sanctus vir quantalibet virtute profecerit, eum in hac vita positum adhuc extrinsecus carnis infirmitas premit, ut scriptum est: Quanquam in imagine Dei ambulet homo, tamen vane conturbatur (Psal. XXXVIII, 7), plerumque agitur, ut et turbetur exterius, et imperturbabilis perduret interius; et quod vane conturbari potest, de infirmitate carnis sit, quamvis quod in imagine Dei ambulat, de virtute mentis, quatenus et roboretur intus divino adjutorio, et tamen adhuc foris sarcina prematur humana. Unde bene Habacuc iterum unam sententiam protulit ad utraque servientem. Ait enim: Et introivit tremor in ossa mea, et subtus me turbata est virtus mea (Habac. III, 16). Ac si diceret: Non mea virtus est in qua superius raptus imperturbabilis maneo, et mea virtus est in qua inferius turbor. Ipse ergo super se imperturbabilis est, ipse sub se perturbabilis, quia super se ascenderat, in quantum rapiebatur ad summa; et sub semetipso erat, in quantum adhuc reliquias trahebat in infima. Ipse super se imperturbabilis est, quia in Dei jam contemplationem transierat; ipse sub se perturbabilis, quia sub semetipso adhuc infirmus homo remanebat. Huic sententiae David propheta concinens, ait: Ego dixi in excessu mentis meae: Omnis homo mendax (Psal. CXV, 2). Cui responderi potest: Si omnis homo, et tu, falsaque jam erit sententia quam mendax ipse protulisti. Si vero ipse non es mendax, vera jam sententia non erit, quia dum tu verax es, non omnis homo cognoscitur mendax. Sed notandum est quod praemittitur: Ego dixi in excessu mentis meae. Per excessum ergo mentis etiam semetipsum transiit, cum de hominis qualitate definivit. Ac si patenter dicat: De falsitate omnium hominum inde veram sententiam protuli, unde ego ipse super hominem fui. In tantum vero et ipse mendax, in quantum homo; in tantum autem omnino non mendax, in quantum per excessum mentis super hominem. 37. Haec internae quieti et contemplationi non officiunt. Sic itaque sic perfecti omnes, quamvis adhuc aliquid turbulentum de infirmitate carnis tolerent, jam tamen intrinsecus tranquillissimo secreto perfruuntur per contemplationem mentis, ut quidquid acciderit exterius, in nullo turbet interius. Unde beatus Job securitatem sanctae mentis ostendens, postquam de se tot virtutum praedicamenta protulit, hoc quod praemisimus secutus, adjunxit. [Vet. XVI, Rec. XI.] Si expavi ad multitudinem nimiam, et despectio propinquorum

716 terruit me; et non magis tacui, nec egressus sum ostium. Ac si apertius dicat: Turbatis contra me extrinsecus aliis, ipse in me intrinsecus imperturbabilis mansi. Quid namque in hoc loco ostium nisi os debemus accipere? Per hoc quippe quasi egredimur, dum verbis quibus possumus secreta nostri cordis aperimus; et quales intus manemus in conscientia, tales foras egredimur per linguam. 38. Sancti commotionis tempore silent. Secus alii. Silendum, nisi loquendo aliis prodesse possimus. Sunt vero nonnulli qui omnino despici metuunt, ac ne viles fortasse judicentur, sapientes videri appetunt. Hi coguntur ostium egredi, quia pulsati contumeliis, quam magni apud se lateant loquentes denuntiant. Dumque per impatientiam victi quaedam de se quae nesciebantur produnt, tanquam per oris ostium egrediuntur. Unde beatus Job dicturus quod oris ostium non fuisset egressus, bene praemisit: Tacui, quia videlicet impatientia turbatus a domo conscientiae exisset, si tacere nescisset. [Rec. XII.] Sancti etenim viri in commotionis tentatione semetipsos ostendere omnino refugiunt, et cum audientibus prodesse nequeunt, etiam despici tacentes volunt, ne de sapientiae suae ostentatione glorientur. Cumque aliquid dicunt prudenter, non quaerunt gloriam suam, sed auditorum vitam. Cum vero conspiciunt quia auditorum vitam loquendo lucrari non possunt, tacendo abscondunt scientiam suam. Ad imitandam quippe vitam Domini, quasi ad quoddam nobis propositum signum currimus. Ipse enim, quia Herodem vidit non profectum quaerere, sed signa vel scientiam velle mirari, requisitus ab eo tacuit, et quia constanter tacuit, ab eo irrisus exivit. Scriptum namque est: Herodes autem, viso Jesu, gavisus est valde; erat enim cupiens ex multo tempore videre eum, eo quod audiret multa de illo, et sperabat signum aliquod videre ab eo fieri (Luc. XXIII, 8). Ubi et subditur: Interrogabat autem illum multis sermonibus, at ipse nihil illi respondebat. Tacens vero Dominus quam sit despectus ostenditur, cum illic protinus subinfertur: Sprevit illum Herodes cum exercitu suo, et illusit. Quod videlicet factum oportet nos audientes discere, ut quoties auditores nostri nostra volunt quasi laudanda cognoscere, non autem sua perversa mutare, omnino taceamus, ne si ostentationis studio verbum Dei loquimur, et illorum culpa quae erat esse non desinat, et nostra quae non erat fiat. [Vet. XVII.] 39. Unde sciri queat utrum auditores ex praedicatorum doctrina proficiant. Quid sit loqui ex Deo et coram Deo. Dicat fortasse aliquis: Unde novimus quo corde quis audiat? Sed multa sunt quae audientis animum produnt, maxime si auditores nostri et semper laudant quod audiunt, et nunquam quod laudant sequuntur. Hanc inanem loquendi gloriam praedicator egregius fugerat, cum dicebat: Non enim sumus sicut plurimi, adulterantes verbum Dei; sed ex sinceritate, sicut ex Deo, coram Deo in Christo loquimur. Adulterari namque verbum Dei, est aut aliter de illo sentire quam est, aut ex eo non spiritales fructus, sed adulterinos fetus quaerere laudis humanae. Ex sinceritate vero loqui, est nil in eloquio extra quam oporteat quaerere. 717 Sicut ex Deo autem loquitur qui scit non se a se habere, sed ex Deo accepisse quod dicit. Coram Deo vero loquitur qui in omni quod dicit, non humanos favores appetit, sed omnipotentis Dei praesentiae intendit; non suam, sed auctoris gloriam requirit. Qui autem scit quidem ex Deo se accepisse quod dicit, et tamen dicendo propriam gloriam quaerit, sicut ex Deo loquitur, sed non coram Deo, quia eum quem cordi suo non proponit cum praedicat quasi absentem putat. Sed sancti viri et ex Deo loquuntur, et coram Deo, quia et ab eo se sciunt habere quod dicunt, et ipsum suis sermonibus adesse judicem auditoremque considerant. Unde fit ut cum se a proximis despici agnoscunt, suaque dicta vitae audientium non prodesse, abscondant quantae virtutis sint, ne si secretum cordis inutiliter sermo prolatus aperiat, ad inanem gloriam prorumpat. 40. Job ad suas virtutes narrandas, nec superbia nec impatientia coegit. Beatus igitur Job inter obstinatas mentes non appetens ex virtutis suae patefactione clarescere, ait: Si despectio propinquorum terruit me, et non magis tacui, nec egressus sum ostium. Qui enim per humilitatem solidus nequaquam despici timuit, hunc ut foras lingua ejiceret impatientia non evicit. Ubi bene praemittitur: Si expavi ad multitudinem nimiam, ut cujus constantiae fuerit agnoscatur, quia videlicet nequaquam terret exterius numerus hominum, quem non devastat interius turba vitiorum. In hac etenim vita, qui nulla prospera appetit, nulla procul dubio adversa pertimescit. 41. Quae de se narrat Job, de Christo sunt intelligenda. Quae scilicet verba si ad intellectum mysticum pertrahimus, in eis citius operationem nostri Redemptoris invenimus. Ipse quippe ad multitudinem nimiam non expavit, qui persecutores suos cum gladiis et fustibus venientes una tantum responsione perculit, dicens: Ego sum (Joan. XVIII, 6). Ipsum despectio propinquorum non terruit, qui nos ab aeternis suppliciis liberans, palmas in facie aequanimiter accepit. Ipse tacuit, et ostium egressus non est, qui sub ipsa jam hora passionis cum humanitatis infirma pateretur, divinitatis suae potentiam exercere noluit. Mediatori quippe Dei et hominum quasi egredi ostium fuisset, si cum teneretur ut homo, majestatis suae potentiam voluisset ostendere, et per divinitatis magnitudinem susceptae carnis infirma transire. Ut enim apertus homo mori posset, Deus mansit occultus: Quia si cognovissent, nunquam Dominum gloriae crucifixissent (I Cor. II, 8). Non est ergo egressus ostium, qui et requisitus a Pilato tacuit; atque inter persecutorum manus et corpus passioni obtulit quod pro electis assumpserat, et resistentibus noluit demonstrare quod erat. Unde etiam per Psalmistam dicitur: Posuerunt me in abominationem sibi, traditus sum, et non egrediebar (Psal. LXXXVII, 9). Cum enim despiceretur quia homo videbatur, egressus fuisset, si occultam majestatem suam ostentare voluisset. Sed quia infirmitatem prodidit, potentiam abscondit; in eo quod persecutoribus suis incognitus mansit, ad eos minime exivit. Qui tamen ad electos exit, quia divinitatis suae suavitatem quaerentibus aperit. Unde ei per prophetam dicitur: Existi in salutem populi tui, ut salvos facias christos tuos (Habac. III, 13). Sequitur:

CAPUT XVII [Vet.

XVIII, Rec. XIII]. 718 VERS. 35. Quis mihi tribuat adjutorem, ut desiderium meum Omnipotens audiat? 42. Nemo suis meritis innitatur. Quaerendus adjutor et Mediator Christus. Sanctus vir postquam tot virtutum suarum sublimia gesta narravit, sciens quod suis meritis ad summa pervenire nequeat, adjutorem quaerit. Et quem nimirum nisi unigenitum Dei Filium contemplatur, qui humanam naturam in hac mortalitate laborantem dum suscepit adjuvit? Ipse quippe adjuvit hominem factus homo, ut quia puro homini via redeundi non patebat ad Deum, via redeundi fieret per hominem Deum. Longe quippe distabamus a justo et immortali, nos mortales et injusti. Sed inter immortalem et justum et nos mortales et injustos apparuit Mediator Dei et hominum mortalis et justus, qui et mortem haberet cum hominibus, et justitiam cum Deo, ut quia per ima nostra longe distabamus a summis, in seipso uno jungeret ima cum summis, atque ex eo nobis via redeundi fieret ad Deum, quo summis suis ima nostra copularet. Hunc ergo beatus Job per totius Ecclesiae significationem loquens, Mediatorem requirit, qui cum dixisset: Quis mihi tribuat adjutorem, apte subdidit: Ut desiderium meum Omnipotens audiat. Sciebat quippe quod ad requiem liberationis aeternae humanae preces nisi per advocatum suum audiri non possent. De quo per Joannem apostolum dicitur: Si quis peccaverit. advocatum habemus apud Patrem Jesum Christum justum, et ipse est propitiatio pro peccatis nostris; non pro nostris autem tantum, sed etiam pro totius mundi (Joan. II, 1, 2). De quo Paulus apostolus dicit: Christus Jesus, qui mortuus est pro nobis, imo qui et resurrexit, qui est in dextera Dei, qui etiam interpellat pro nobis (Rom. VIII, 34). Unigenito enim Filio pro homine interpellare est apud coaeternum Patrem seipsum hominem demonstrare, eique pro humana natura rogasse est eamdem naturam in divinitatis suae celsitudine suscepisse. Interpellat igitur pro nobis Dominus, non voce, sed miseratione, quia quod damnari in electis noluit, suscipiendo liberavit. Adjutor ergo quaeritur ut desiderium exaudiatur, quia nisi pro nobis interpellatio Mediatoris intercederet, ab aure Dei procul dubio nostrarum precum voces silerent. 43. Non verba sed desideria cordis Deus exaudit. Notandum quoque est quod nequaquam dicitur preces, sed desiderium meum Omnipotens audiat. Vera quippe postulatio non in oris est vocibus, sed in cogitationibus cordis. Valentiores namque voces apud secretissimas aures Dei non faciunt verba nostra, sed desideria. Aeternam etenim vitam si ore petimus, nec tamen corde desideramus, clamantes tacemus. Si vero desideramus ex corde, etiam cum ore conticescimus, tacentes clamamus. Hinc est, quod in eremo populus vocibus perstrepit, et Moyses a strepitu verborum tacet; et tamen silens aure divinae pietatis auditur, cum dicitur: Quid clamas ad me (Exod. XIV, 15)? Intus ergo in desiderio est clamor secretus, qui ad humanas aures non pervenit, et tamen auditum conditoris replet. Hinc est quod Anna ad Templum pergens, ore quidem tacuit, et tamen tot sui desiderii voces emisit (I Reg. I, 13). Hinc in Evangelio Dominus dicit: Intra in cubiculum tuum, et clauso ostio in abscondito, et Pater tuus, qui videt in abscondito, reddet tibi (Matth. VI, 6). 719 Clauso quippe ostio petit in cubiculo, qui, tacente ore, in conspectu supernae pietatis fundit affectum mentis. Et vox auditur in abscondito, cum per sancta desideria silenter clamatur. Unde recte quoque per Psalmistam dicitur: Desiderium pauperum exaudivit Dominus; praeparationem cordis eorum audivit auris tua (Psal. XIX, 17). Sed beatus Job quem sibi in exaudiendo desiderio adjutorem quaerat, subjunctis verbis aperit, dicens:

CAPUT XVIII [Vet. XIX].

IBID. Et librum scribat ipse qui judicat. 44. Quaerendus adjutor Christus, qui est legislator et judex. Ezechielis de eo vaticinium. Quia enim timenti adhuc populo lex est transmissa per servum, diligentibus vero filiis

Evangelii gratia est collata per Dominum, qui ad redemptionem nostram veniens novum nobis testamentum condidit, sed de ejusdem nos testamenti mandato discutiens, quandoque etiam judex venit, necessarium non est ut per expositionem clarescat quia librum scribit ipse qui judicat. Ipsa enim per se Veritas dicit: Pater non judicat quemquam, sed omne judicium dedit Filio (Joan. V, 22). Erit ergo tunc auctor judicii, qui nunc est conditor libri, ut tunc districtus exigat quod modo mansuetus jubet. Sic namque quotidie conspicimus quod magistri pueris elementa litterarum blandientes imponunt, sed haec ab eis saevientes exigunt; et quae dant cum mansuetudine, cum verbere requirunt. Blanda namque nunc sonant eloquii divini mandata, sed erunt aspera in exactione sentienda. Mansueta modo est admonitio vocantis, sed tunc districta ventura est justitia judicis, eo quod certum est quia nihil vel minimi mandati sine discussione praetereat. Quo videlicet constat quia librum scripsit ipse qui judicat. Quem scilicet librum Novi Testamenti, quia ipse per se humani generis Redemptor in extremo conderet, bene Ezechiel propheta denuntiat, dicens: Ecce sex viri veniebant de via portae superioris, quae respicit ad Aquilonem, et uniuscujusque vas interitus in manu ejus. Vir quoque unus in medio eorum vestitus lineis, et atramentarium scriptoris ad renes ejus (Ezech. IX, 2). Quid namque aliud in sex viris venientibus nisi sex aetates humani generis designantur? Qui de via portae superioris veniunt, quia a conditione paradisi, sicut ab ingressu mundi, a superioribus generationibus evolvuntur. Quae porta ad Aquilonem respicit, quia videlicet mens humani generis vitiis aperta, nisi calorem charitatis deserens torporem mentis appeteret, ad hanc mortalitatis latitudinem non exisset. Et uniuscujusque vas interitus in manu ejus, quia unaquaeque generatio singulis quibusque aetatibus evoluta, ante Redemptoris adventum in sua operatione habuit, unde poenam damnationis sumpsit. Vir quoque unus in medio eorum vestitus lineis, quia Redemptor noster, etiam de sacerdotali tribu juxta carnem parentes habere dignatus, vestitus lineis venire perhibetur. Vel certe quia linum de terra, non autem sicut lana de corruptibili carne nascitur, quia indumentum sui corporis ex matre virgine, non autem ex corruptione commistionis sumpsit, profecto ad nos vestitus lineis venit. Et atramentarium scriptoris ad renes ejus. In renibus posterior corporis pars est. Et quia ipse Dominus postquam pro nobis 720 mortuus est, et resurrexit, et ascendit in coelum, tunc Testamentum Novum per apostolos scripsit, vir iste atramentarium ad renes habuit. Qui enim scripturam Testamenti Novi postquam discessit condidit, atramentarium quasi a tergo portavit. Hoc ergo atramentarium viro lineis vestito inhaerere considerat, qui dicit: Et librum scribat ipse qui judicat. Sed cur, beate Job, ab eo qui judex est, librum scribi desideras? Sequitur:

CAPUT XIX [Vet.

XX, Rec. XIV]. VERS. 36. Ut in humero meo portem illum, et circumdem illum quasi coronam mihi. 45. Scriptura sacra humero portanda per operationem, ut sicut corona circumdetur per remunerationem. Librum quippe in humero portare, est Scripturam sacram operando perficere. Et notandum quam ordinate describitur, et prius in humero portari, et postmodum sicut corona circumdari, quia videlicet sacri eloquii mandata, si modo bene portantur in opere, post nobis coronam victoriae exhibent in retributione. Beatus autem Job cur scribi librum a judice postulat, qui ad Testamenti Novi pervenire tempora non valebat? Sed sicut saepe jam dictum est, electorum vocibus utitur, atque ex eorum significatione postulat, quod profuturum eis per omnia praevidebat. Ipse namque per spiritum, hunc apud se librum jamdudum tenebat, quem per gratiam aspirationis acceperat et vivendo cognoscere et praevidendo nuntiare. Sed inter haec sciendum est quia cum ejusdem sacri eloquii praecepta cogitamus, cumque mentem a vitae corruptibilis amore divertimus, quasi quibusdam cordis passibus ad interiora properamus. Nemo autem infima deserens, repente fit summus, quia ad obtinendum perfectionis meritum, dum quotidie mens in altum ducitur, ad hoc procul dubio velut ascensionis quibusdam gradibus pervenitur. Unde hic quoque apte subjungitur:

CAPUT XX.

VERS. 37. Per singulos gradus meos pronuntiabo illum. 46. Varii sunt gradus ad perfectionem. Ut ad Deum proficiamus a nobis deficiendum. De his quippe meritorum gradibus per Psalmistam dicitur: Ambulabunt de virtute in virtutem (Psal. LXXXIII, 8). De his iterum sanctam Ecclesiam contemplatus, ait: Deus in gradibus ejus dignoscitur, dum suscipiet eam (Psal. XLVII, 4). Neque enim, sicut dictum est, repente ad summa pervenitur, sed ad virtutum celsitudinem per incrementa mens ducitur. Hinc namque est quod Propheta idem iterum dicit: Exercitatus sum, et defecit paulisper spiritus meus (Psal. LXXVI, 4). Quid est itaque, quod ait: Spiritus meus, nisi spiritus hominis, videlicet spiritus elationis? Et quia per occultam gratiam ad amorem Dei temperata desuper mensura proficimus, quanto in nobis quotidie de Dei spiritu virtus crescit, tanto noster spiritus deficit. Qui spiritus erroris, quia non a nobis subito penitus amputatur, bene paulisper defecisse perhibetur. Tunc vero in Deo plene proficimus, cum a nobis ipsis funditus defecerimus. Hae itaque crescentium mensurae virtutum, sancti viri vocibus gradus dicuntur. Electus etenim quisque a rudimenti sui prius teneritudine inchoat, ad robusta postmodum et fortia convalescit. Quod aperte in Evangelio demonstrat Veritas, dicens: Sic 721 est regnum Dei, quemadmodum si jaciat homo sementem in terram, et dormiat, et exsurgat nocte ac die, et semen germinet, et increscat, dum nescit ille (Marc. IV, 26). Cujus nimirum seminis incrementa denuntians, adjungit: Ultro enim terra fructificat, primum herbam, deinde spicam, deinde plenum frumentum in spica. Cujus profectus quoque etiam finem subrogat, dicens: Et cum ex se produxerit fructus, statim mittit falcem, quoniam venit tempus messis. Ecce

Veritatis voce per qualitates frugum distincta sunt incrementa meritorum. Ait enim: Primum herbam, deinde spicam, deinde plenum frumentum in spica. An non herba adhuc tunc fuerat Petrus cum ab ancillae ore subito unius flatu sermonis inflexus est, jam quidem per devotionem viridis, sed adhuc per infirmitatem tener. Plenum vero frumentum in spica inventus est quando persequentibus principibus resistebat, dicens: Obedire oportet magis Deo quam hominibus (Act. V, 29). Plenum vero frumentum in tritura persecutionis tot verbera pertulit, et tamen nequaquam palearum more imminutus est, sed granum integrum mansit. Paulisper quippe in unaquaque anima, ut ita dicam, internae gratiae humor exuberat, ut herba in frugem crescat. Nemo ergo quemlibet proximum, cum adhuc herbam videt, de frumento desperet. Ad herbarum quippe foliis, quae huc illucque molliter defluunt, surgentia frugum grana solidantur. [Vet. XXI.] 47. Diversi profectuum gradus per Danielem expressi. Bene autem Daniel propheta, loquente ad se Domino, dum positionem nobis sui corporis insinuare studuit, haec meritorum incrementa signavit. Ait enim: Audivi vocem verborum ejus, et audiens jacebam consternatus super faciem meam, vultusque meus haerebat terrae. Et ecce manus tetigit me, et erexit me super genua mea, et super articulos manuum mearum, et dixit ad me: Daniel vir desideriorum, intellige verba quae ego loquor ad te, et sta in gradu tuo; nunc enim missus sum ad te. Cumque dixisset mihi sermonem istum, steti tremens, et ait ad me: Noli metuere (Dan. X, 9). Quam videlicet positionem sui corporis, dum verba intrinsecus loquentis audiret, nequaquam nobis tanta cura exprimeret, si a mysteriis vacare cognovisset. In Scriptura enim sacra justi viri non solum quod dicunt prophetia est, sed etiam plerumque quod agunt. Vir itaque sanctus internis mysteriis plenus per positionem quoque corporis exprimit virtutem vocis, et per hoc quod primum in terra prostratus jacuit, per hoc quod se postmodum in manuum suarum articulis et in genibus erexit, per hoc quod ad extremum erectus quidem sed tremens constitit, in semetipso nobis omnem ordinem nostri profectus innotescit. Verba enim Dei in terra jacentes audimus, cum in peccatis positi, terrenae pollutioni conjuncti, sanctorum voce spiritalia praecepta cognoscimus. Ad quae praecepta quasi super genua et super 722 manuum nostrarum articulos erigimur, quia a terrenis contagiis recedentes, quasi jam ab infimis mentem levamus. Sicut enim totus terrae inhaeret qui consternatus jacet, ita qui in genibus et manuum suarum articulis incurvatur, inchoante profectu ex magna jam parte a terra suspenditur. Ad extremum vero voce dominica erecti quidem, sed trementes assistimus, cum, a terrenis desideriis perfecte sublevati, verba Dei quo plenius cognoscimus plus timemus. Adhuc enim quasi in terra jacet, qui ad coelestia erigi terrenorum desideriis negligit. Quasi sublevatus autem adhuc manibus et genibus incumbit, qui quaedam jam contagia deserit, sed quibusdam adhuc terrenis operibus non contradicit. Jam vero ad verba Dei erectus assistit, qui perfecte mentem ad sublimia erigit, et per immunda desideria incurvari contemnit. 48. A timore ad amorem et charitatem perveniendum.Bene autem trementem se stetisse indicat, quia examen subtilitatis internae, quo plus ad illud proficitur, amplius formidatur. Ubi apte divina voce subjungitur: Noli metuere, quia cum plus ipsi quod timeamus agnoscimus, plus nobis de Deo per internam gratiam infunditur quod amemus; quatenus et contemptus noster paulisper transeat in timorem, et timor transeat in charitatem, ut quia quaerenti nos Deo per contemptum resistimus, per timorem fugimus, et contemptu quandoque et timore postposito, solo ei amore jungamur. Paulisper enim etiam timorem ejus discimus, cujus solius dilectioni inhaeremus. Appositis igitur quasi quibusdam gradibus profectus nostri, mentis pedem prius per timorem in imo ponimus, et postmodum per charitatem ad alta amoris levamus, ut ab eo quo quisque tumet, reprimatur ut timeat, et ab eo quod jam metuit, sublevetur ut praesumat. Hos autem virtutum gradus non magni laboris est prehendere, cum ab una ad alteram transitur. 49. Singularum virtutum gradus sunt varii. Fidei incrementa. Sed subtilissima disputatione res inindiget, cum mens pensare nititur, in una eademque virtute quibus profectus sui gradibus elevetur. Ut enim prima elementa virtutum, fidem scilicet et sapientiam, loquar, obtineri singula perfecte nequeunt, nisi ad haec distinctis ordinatisque modis, quasi quibusdam gradibus, ascendamus. Ipsa enim fides, quae ad bona alia perfecte capessenda nos imbuit, plerumque in exordiis suis et nutat, et solida est; et jam certissime habetur, et tamen de ejus fiducia adhuc sub dubitatione trepidatur. Pars namque ejus prius accipitur, ut in nobis postmodum perfecte compleatur. Si enim certo gradu in credentis mente non proficeret, requisitus in Evangelio pater sanandi pueri non dixisset: Credo, Domine, adjuva incredulitatem meam (Marc. IX, 23). Adhuc ergo ascendebat ad fidem quam jam perceperat, qui uno eodemque tempore clamabat se et jam credere, et adhuc ex incredulitate dubitare. Hinc est etiam quod Redemptori nostro a discipulis dicitur: 723 Auge nobis fidem (Luc. XVII, 5), ut quae jam accepta per initium fuerat, quasi per augmenta graduum ad perfectionem veniret. [Vet. XXII.] 50. Sapientia bonorum operum magistra, per incrementa tribuitur. Diversi ejus gradus. Ipsa quoque sapientia, quae esse bonorum operum solet magistra, anhelanti menti per incrementa tribuitur, ut ad eam procul dubio magni moderaminis gradibus ascendatur. Quod bene Ezechiel propheta figurata narratione denuntiat, qui de eo viro quem in excelso monte viderat narrat dicens: Mensus est cubitos mille, et transduxit me per aquam usque ad talos. Rursumque mensus est mille, et transduxit me per aquam usque ad genua. Et mensus est mille, et transduxit me per aquam usque ad renes. Et mensus est mille torrentem, quem non potui pertransire, quoniam intumuerunt aquae profundae torrentis, qui non potest transvadari (Ezech. XLVII, 3, 4). Quid namque millenario numero nisi collati muneris plenitudo signatur? Vir itaque qui apparuit mille cubitos metitur, et propheta per aquas usque ad talos ducitur, quia Redemptor noster cum nobis ad se conversis boni exordii plenitudinem tribuit, dono spiritalis sapientiae prima nostri operis vestigia infundit. Aquam quippe usque ad talos venire est jam nos per acceptam sapientiam desideratae rectitudinis vestigia tenere. Qui rursum mille metitur, et propheta usque ad genua per aquam ducitur, quia cum boni operis plenitudo tribuitur, ad hoc usque nostra sapientia augetur, ut in pravis jam actibus minime flectatur. Hinc namque per Paulum dicitur: Remissas manus et dissoluta genua erigite, et gressus rectos facite pedibus vestris (Hebr. XII, 12). Aqua ergo ad genua pervenit cum nos percepta sapientia perfecte ad boni operis rectitudinem stringit. Qui iterum metitur mille, et propheta per aquam usque ad renes ducitur, quia videlicet tunc in nobis plenitudo operis excrescit quando in nobis percepta sapientia omnem quoque, in quantum est possibile, delectationem carnis exstinxerit. Nisi enim carnis delectatio esset in renibus, Psalmista minime dixisset: Ure renes meos, et cor meum (Psal. XXV, 2). Aqua igitur ad renes venit cum dulcedo sapientiae etiam incentiva carnis interimit, ut ea quae urere mentem poterant delectationis incendia frigescant. Qui adhuc mensus est mille, torrentem videlicet, quem propheta pertransire non potuit, de quo etiam dicit: Quoniam intumuerunt aquae profundae torrentis, qui non potest transvadari. Percepta namque perfectione operis ad contemplationem venitur. In qua scilicet contemplationem dum mens in altum ducitur, sublevata videt in Deo, quia non potest penetrare quod videt, et quasi tangit aquam torrentis, quam pertransire non valet, quia et intuetur speculando quod libeat, et tamen hoc ipsum perfecte non valet intueri quod libet. Propheta ergo quandoque ad aquam pervenit, quam non pertransit, quia ad contemplationem sapientiae cum ad extremum ducimur, ipsa ejus immensitas, quae ex se hominem sublevat, ad se humano animo plenam cognitionem negat, ut hanc et tangendo amet, et tamen nequaquam pertranseundo penetret. 51. His emensis, ad contemplationem pervenitur. Beatus igitur Job haec incrementa virtutum 724 quia distincte hominibus superno munere tribui conspexit, gradus vocavit, quoniam per ipsos ascenditur ut ad coelestia obtinenda veniatur. Sacri itaque libri, id est divini eloquii, memoriam faciens, dicit: Per singulos gradus meos pronuntiabo illum, quia nimirum ille ad doctrinam Dei veraciter ascendit, qui ad obtinendam hanc gradibus sanctae operationis eruperit. Et quasi per singulos gradus suos librum pronuntiat, qui percepisse se ejus scientiam non per verba tantummodo, sed etiam per opera demonstrat. Unde adhuc subditur: VERS. 37. Et quasi principi offeram eum. Omne enim quod offerimus, in manibus tenemus. Venienti ergo ad judicium principi librum offerre est verba praeceptorum illius in actione tenuisse. Sequitur:

CAPUT XXI [Vet.

XXIII, Rec. XV]. VERS. 38-40. Si adversum me terra mea clamat, et cum ipsa sulci ejus deflent; si fructus ejus comedi absque pecunia, et animam agricolarumm ejus afflixi; pro frumento oriatur mihi tribulus, et pro hordeo spina. 52. De praelatorum injustitia et erratis, minus perfecti clamant et non dolent; perfecti vero tacent et lugent. Perfecti tanto magis de alienis damnis dolent quanto minus de suis. Quid est clamare terram, deflere sulcos, et fructus proprios emendo comedere? Cui unquam necesse est sua emere? Quis clamantem audivit terram? Quis sulcos deflentes vidit? Et cum sulci terrae semper ex terra sint, quid est quod pronuntiatione distincta et clamasse terra, et sulci ejus cum ea deflesse denegantur? Cum enim nihil sit aliud sulcus terrae quam terra, magnae distinctionis ratione non caret, dum subjungit: Et cum ea sulci ejus deflent. Qua videlicet in re quia ordo historiae deficit, sese nobis intellectus mysticus quasi apertis jam foribus ostendit. Ac si patenter clamet: Quia rationem litterae defecisse cognoscitis, nimirum restat ut ad me sine dubitatione redeatis. Omnis enim qui vel privato jure domesticam familiam regit, vel pro utilitate communi fidelibus plebibus praeest, in hoc quod jura regiminis in commissis sibi fidelibus possidet, quid aliud quam terram incolendam tenet? Ad hoc quippe divina dispensatione caeteris unusquisque praeponitur, ut subjectorum animus, quasi subacta terra, praedicationis illius semine fecundetur. Sed terra contra possessorem clamat, si contra eum qui sibi praeest aliquid justum vel privata domus, vel sancta Ecclesia murmurat. Clamare quippe terram est contra regentis injustitiam rationabiliter subjectos dolere. Ubi recte subjungitur: Et cum ea sulci ejus deflent. Terra enim, etiam nullis operibus exculta, plerumque ad usum hominis aliquod alimentum profert, exarata vero fruges ad satietatem parit. Et sunt nonnulli qui nullo lectionis, nullo exhortationis vomere proscissi, quaedam bona, quamvis minima, tamen ex semetipsis proferunt, quasi terra necdum exarata. Sunt vero nonnulli qui, ad audiendum semper atque retinendum sanctis praedicationibus ac meditationibus intenti, a priori mentis duritia, quasi quodam linguae vomere scissi, semina exhortationis accipiunt, et fruges boni operis per sulcos voluntariae afflictionis reddunt. Saepe vero contingit ut hi qui praesunt injusta aliqua faciant, fitque ut ipsi subjectis noceant qui prodesse debuerant. 725 Quae dum rudes quique conspiciunt, commoti contra rectorem murmurant, nec tamen valde proximis per compassionem dolent. Cum vero hi qui jam aratro lectionis attriti sunt, atque ad frugem boni operis exculti, gravari vel in minimis innocentes aspiciunt, per compassionem protinus ad lamenta convertuntur, quia velut sua plangunt ea quae proximi injuste patiuntur. Perfecti namque cum semper de spiritalibus moveantur, tanto sciunt de alienis corporalibus damnis ingemiscere, quanto jam edocti sunt non dolere de suis. Omnis ergo qui praeest, si perversa in subditis exercet, contra hunc terra clamat, et sulci deflent, quia contra ejus injustitiam rudes quidem populi in murmurationis vocibus erumpunt, sed perfecti quique pro pravo ejus opere sese in fletibus affligunt, quodque imperiti clamant et non dolent, hoc probatioris vitae subjecti deflent et tacent. Cum clamante ergo terra sulcos plangere est per hoc unde multitudo fidelium juste contra rectorem queritur uberioris vitae homines ad lamenta pervenire. Sulci itaque et ex terra sunt, et tamen a terrae vocabulo distinguuntur, quia hi qui in sancta Ecclesia mentem suam labore sanctae meditationis excolunt, caeteris fidelibus tanto meliores sunt, quanto per accepta semina fecundiores operum fruges reddunt. Et sunt nonnulli qui, sanctis plebibus praelati, vitae quidem stipendia ex ecclesiastica largitate consequuntur, sed exhortationis ministeria debita non impendunt. Contra quos adhuc exemplum sancti viri recte subjungitur, cum ab eo protinus subinfertur:

CAPUT XXII [Rec. XVI].

VERS. 39. Si fructus ejus comedi absque pecunia. 53. Quantum peccent praelati, qui bona ecclesiastica muti comedunt. Quantam sollicitudinem sibi subditis debeant qui praesunt. Fructus etenim terrae absque pecunia comedere est ex Ecclesia quidem sumptus accipere, sed eidem Ecclesiae praedicationis pretium non praebere. De qua videlicet praedicatione auctoris voce dicitur: Oportuit te committere pecuniam meam nummulariis, et veniens ego recepissem utique quod meum erat cum usura (Matth. XXV, 27). Terrae igitur fructus absque pecunia comedit, qui ecclesiastica commoda ad usum corporis percipit, sed exhortationis ministerium populo non impendit. Quid ad haec nos pastores dicimus, qui adventum districti judicis praecurrentes, officium quidem praeconis suscipimus, sed alimenta ecclesiastica muti manducamus? Exigimus quod nostro debetur corpori, sed non impendimus quod subjectorum debemus cordi. Ecce vir sanctus tot in hoc saeculo pignoribus obstrictus, inter occupationes innumeras liber ad studium praedicationis fuit. Qui fructus terrae nunquam sine pecunia comedit, quia nimirum subditis verbum bonae admonitionis reddidit, a quibus fructus corporeae servitutis accepit. Hoc namque debet omnipotenti Deo omnis qui praeest populo, hoc qui multis, hoc qui paucioribus praeest, ut sic debita ministeria a subditis exigat, quatenus ipse etiam quid semper admonitionis debeat sollicitus attendat. Omnes namque qui sub dispensatione conditoris vicario nobis ministerio jungimur sub uno ac vero Domino, quid nobis aliud 726 nisi invicem servi sumus? Cum igitur is qui subest servit ad obsequium, restat procul dubio ut is qui praeest serviat ad verbum. Cum is qui subest jussis obtemperat, oportet ut is qui praeest curam sollicitudinis ac pietatis impendat. Sicque fit ut dum studiose nunc servire nobis invicem per charitatem nitimur, quandoque cum vero Domino communi exsultatione dominemur. [Vet. XXIV.] Sed sunt nonnulli qui in eo quod officium praedicationis exhibent, aliis invident bonum quod habent, atque ideo jam veraciter non habent. Quibus recte per Jacobum dicitur: Quod si zelum amarum habetis inter vos, et contentiones sunt in cordibus vestris, non est ista sapientia desursum descendens, sed terrena, animalis, diabolica (Jac. III, 14). Unde hic quoque cum dictum est: Si fructus ejus comedi absque pecunia, recte subjungitur:

CAPUT XXIII.

IBID. Et animam agricolarum ejus afflixi. 54. Ecclesiarum rector sibi in praedicatione cooperantibus non invideat. Agricolae quippe hujus terrae sunt hi qui, minori loco positi, quo valent zelo, quanto possunt opere, ad eruditionem sanctae Ecclesiae in praedicationis gratia cooperantur. Quos videlicet terrae hujus agricolas hoc est non affligere, eorum laboribus non invidere, ne rector Ecclesiae dum soli sibi jus praedicationis vindicat, etiam aliis recte praedicantibus invidia se mordente contradicat. Pia etenim pastorum mens, quia non propriam gloriam, sed auctoris quaerit, ab omnibus vult adjuvari quod agit. Fidelis namque praedicator optat, si fieri valeat, ut veritatem quam solus loqui non sufficit ora cunctorum sonent. Unde cum Josue duobus in castris remanentibus atque prophetantibus vellet obsistere, recte per Moysen dicitur: Quid aemularis pro me? Quis tribuat ut omnis populus prophetet, et det eis Dominus spiritum suum (Num. XI, 29)? Prophetare quippe omnes voluit, qui bonum quod habuit aliis non invidit: Quia igitur beatus Job cuncta haec suspensa intulit, et si ea minime fecerit sententia se maledictionis adstringit, sequitur:

CAPUT XXIV [Rec. XVII].

VERS. 40. Pro frumento oriatur mihi tribulus, et pro hordeo spina. 55. Praelatis sua auctoritate male utentibus oritur pro frumento tribulus, et pro hordeo spina. Ac si aperte dicat: Si injustum quid erga subditos gessi, si exigi debita, et ipse quod debui non impendi, si exercitationem boni operis aliis invidi, pro bonis quae in aeternum reficiunt, retribuantur mihi in judicio mala quae pungunt. Pro frumento quippe tribulus, et pro hordeo spina oritur, cum in retributione ultima, de qua remuneratio laboris quaeritur, punctio doloris invenitur. Et notandum quod sicut a frumento hordeum distat, quamvis utrumque reficiat, sic a tribulo spina, quamvis sit utrumque quod pungat, quia tribulus mollior, et ad pungendum semper durior est spina. Ait ergo: Pro frumento oriatur mihi tribulus, et pro hordeo spina. Ac si patenter dicat: Egisse quidem et magna me et minima bona scio, sed si non ita est, pro bonis magnis mala minima, et pro bonis minimis mihi respondeant mala majora. Quamvis hoc intelligi et aliter potest. In frumento quippe spiritale opus, quod mentem reficit, in hordeo autem terrenarum rerum dispensatio 727 figuratur. In qua saepe dum servire infirmis atque carnalibus cogimur, quasi sua jumentis alimenta praeparamus, atque ipse nostrorum usus operum quasi more hordei habet aliquid de admistione palearum. Et plerumque contingit ut rector qui praeest, dum injusta contra subditos exercet, dum nullo bonos blandimento refovet, dum, quod gravius est, bene operantes quosque ex invidia affligit etiam quaedam bona aliquando faciat, ac si frumentum serat, seseque in dispensandis terrenis rebus nonnunquam non avaritiae studio, sed pro

utilitate carnalium misceat, et sic ejusdem laboris fructum velut messem hordei exspectet. Sed subjecti quique pro eo quod in maximis gravantur, gaudere in ejus bonis minimis nequeunt, quia nec hoc opus coram Deo placet, quod alterius operis injustitia polluit, nec ipsa terrenarum rerum dispensatio pro utilitate subditorum suscipi creditur, quando is qui praeest anhelare per avaritiam videtur. Unde fit ut ad ipsa etiam pauca bona, quae fieri inter multa mala considerant, non laudes, sed gemitus reddant; atque infirmantes murmurent, dum perpendunt puri operis non esse quod vident. Ait ergo: Si adversum me terra mea clamat, et cum ipsa sulci ejus deflent; si fructus ejus comedi absque pecunia, et animam agricolarum ejus afflixi; pro frumento oriatur mihi tribulus, et pro hordeo spina. Ac si aperte dicat: Si magna quae debui sollicite non feci, 728 punctiones murmuris a subjectis recipiam, etiam de bono quod feci. Si neglexi exhibere quod foveat, juste in querelam prosiliens eorum lingua me pungat. 56. Praelati a malis exemplis praebendis, subditi a temerariis judiciis caveant. Qua in re semper sollicita consideratione pensandum est, ne aut hi qui praesunt exempla mali operis subjectis praebeant, eorumque vitam suae gladio pravitatis exstinguant; aut hi qui alieno regimini subjacent, facile judicare audeant facta rectorum, atque per hoc quod de his qui sibi praelati sunt murmurant, non humano, sed ei qui cuncta disponit divino ordini contradicant. Illis namque dicitur: Oves meae his quae conculcata pedibus vestris fuerant pascebantur, et quae pedes vestri turbaverant, haec bibebant (Ezech. XXXIV, 19). Oves enim turbata pedibus bibunt cum subjecti ea ad exemplum vivendi appetunt quae praelati quique pravo opere pervertunt. At contra a praelatis hi audiunt: Nos enim quid sumus? Nec contra nos est murmur vestrum, sed contra Dominum (Exod. XVI, 8). Qui enim contra superpositam sibi potestatem murmurat, liquet quod illum redarguit qui eamdem homini potestatem dedit. Tandem beati Job plenas mystica virtute sententias, in quibus contra amicorum verba respondit, Deo largiente digessimus; nunc superest ut ad

Eliu verba veniamus, quae tanto graviori circumspectione pensanda sunt, quanto et per juventutis audaciam spiritu ferventiore proferuntur.

LIBER VIGESIMUS TERTIUS.

Exponuntur cap. XXXII et XXXIII usque ad versum 22. ubi, silente Job, Eliu junior multa recta et sana, sed non recte et sana intentione edisserit.

CAPUT PRIMUM.

729 Quo Dei consilio, quibusve modis Job probatus fuerit. Praefationem hujus operis toties necessario repeto, quoties hoc in distinctione voluminum locutionis meae pausatione succido, ut cum legendi exordium sumitur, prius ipsa memoriae lectionis causa renovetur, et tanto robustius surgat doctrinae aedificium, quanto ex considerata causae origine studiosius ponitur in mente fundamentum. Beatus Job, Deo soli sibique cognitus, in tranquillitate ad nostram notitiam perducendus tactus est verbere, ut odorem suarum virium tanto latius spargeret, quanto more aromatum melius ex incensione fragraret. Noverat in bonis pie subditos regere, et a malis se districte custodire. Noverat bene uti rebus habitis, sed nesciebamus si patiens permaneret ablatis. Noverat quotidiana Deo pro sanis pignoribus sacrificia solvere, sed incertum erat si ei gratiarum sacrificium et orbatus immolaret. Ne quid ergo vitii salus tegeret, dignum fuit ut hoc dolor aperiret. Data itaque est contra sanctum virum hosti callido tentandi licentia. Qui dum bona ejus multis cognita interimere appetit, etiam bonum patientiae quod latebat ostendit; et quem se angustare persequendo credidit, flagellis auctum et in exemplo dilatavit. Nec sine gravi arte exercuit licentiam quam accepit. Nam combussit greges, extinxit familias, obruit haeredes, percussit salutem corporis, et ad intorquendum gravioris tentationis jaculum, linguam servavit uxoris (Job. I, II, IX, etc.), quatenus sancti viri forte ac solidum pectus et per damna rerum dolore sterneret, et per verba conjugis maledictione perforaret. Sed quot vulnera saeviens intulit, tot sancto viro nesciens victorias ministravit. Nam fidelis Dei famulus, uno eodemque tempore inter vulnera et verba deprehensus, et dolentem carnem aequanimiter pertulit, et desipientem conjugem 730 prudenter increpavit. Antiquus itaque hostis, quia vinci se in domesticis doluit, protinus exteriora requisivit. Amicos namque ejus de locis singulis, quasi pro exercenda charitate commovit, eorumque ora sub specie consolationis aperuit; sed per haec jacula increpationis intorsit, quae eo durius cor secure audientis infigerent, quo inter ostensae et non servatae charitatis tenebras improvise vulnerarent. Post hos quoque ad contumelias etiam Eliu junior excitatur, ut tranquillitatem tantae mansuetudinis saltem dedignata levitas perturbaret aetatis. Sed contra tot antiqui hostis machinas stetit invicta constantia, stetit aequanimitas infracta. Nam uno eodemque tempore verbis adversantibus opposuit prudentiam, rebus vitam. Nemo igitur sanctum virum, quamvis de illo aperte post flagella scriptum sit: In omnibus his non peccavit Job labiis suis (Ibid., II, 10), saltem postmodum in contentione amicorum aestimet inter verba deliquisse. Satan quippe tentationem illius expetiit; sed Deus, qui hunc laudaverat, in seipso ejus intentionem certaminis accepit. Quisquis ergo beatum Job deliquisse in suis sermonibus queritur, quid aliud quam Deum, qui pro illo proposuit, perdidisse confitetur? 2. Antiqui Patres arboribus fructiferis similes. Eorum fructus fuit Christum signare, et Ecclesiam. Quia vero antiqui Patres fructiferis arboribus similes, non solum pulchri sunt per speciem, sed etiam utiles per ubertatem, sic eorum vita pensanda est, ut cum miramur quae sit viriditas in historia, inveniamus et quanta sit ubertas in allegoria; quatenus cum blandum est quod in foliis redolet, cognoscamus et quam dulce sit quod in fructibus sapit. Nullus quippe supernae adoptionis gratiam habuit, nisi qui hanc per cognitionem Unigeniti accepit. Dignum itaque est ut ipse in eorum vita et lingua resplendeat, qui eos ut resplendere mereantur illustrat. Nam cum in tenebris 731 lucernae lumen accenditur, prius lucerna eadem, quae videri caetera efficit, videtur. Unde necesse est ut si vere intendimus illuminata cernere, studeamus mentis oculos ad ipsum illuminans lumen aperire. Quod et in eisdem beati Job sermonibus, etiam remotis allegoriarum umbris, quasi depressis altae noctis tenebris, corusci more pertranseuntis intermicat, cum dicitur: Scio quod Redemptor meus vivit, et in carne mea videbo Deum (Job. XIX, 25). Hoc nimirum in nocte historiae, Paulus lumen invenerat, cum dicebat: Omnes in Moyse baptizati sunt in nube et in mari, et omnes eamdem escam spiritalem manducaverunt, et omnes eumdem potum spiritalem biberunt. Bibebant autem de spiritali consequente eos petra, petra autem erat Christus (I Cor. X, 2). Si igitur Redemptoris speciem petra tenuit, cur non figuram illius beatus Job insinuet, qui eum quem voce protulit etiam passione signavit? Unde et non immerito Job videlicet dolens dicitur, quia illius in se imaginem exprimit de quo per Isaiam longe ante annuntiatur quod dolores nostros ipse portavit (Isai. LIII, 4). Sciendum quoque est quod Redemptor noster unam se personam cum sancta Ecclesia, quam assumpsit, exhibuit. De ipso enim dicitur: Qui est caput, Christus (Ephes. IV, 15). Rursumque de ejus Ecclesia scriptum est: Et corpus Christi, quod est Ecclesia (Coloss. I, 24). Beatus igitur Job, qui Mediatoris typum eo verius tenuit quo passionem illius, non loquendo tantummodo, sed etiam patiendo prophetavit, cum in dictis factisque suis expressioni Redemptoris innititur, repente ad significationem corporis aliquando derivatur, ut quod Christum et Ecclesiam unam personam credimus, hoc etiam unius personae actibus significari videamus. 3. Uxor Job, carnales Ecclesiae; amici, haereticos adumbrant. Uxor vero ejus, quae eum ad maledicendum provocat, quid aliud quam pravitatem carnalium signat? Qui intra sanctam Ecclesiam incorrectis moribus positi, eo durius vitam fidelium quo vicinius premunt, quia dum vitari a fidelibus quasi fideles nequeunt, tanto gravius quanto et interius tolerantur. [Vet. II.] Amici vero ejus, qui quasi dum consulunt invehuntur, haereticorum figuram exprimunt, qui sub specie consulendi agunt negotium seducendi. Unde et ad beatum Job dum pro

Domino verba faciunt, a Domino reprobantur, quia videlicet omnes haeretici dum Deum defendere nituntur offendunt. Unde eis apte et ab eodem viro sancto dicitur: Disputare cum Deo cupio, prius vos ostendens fabricatores mendacii, et cultores perversorum dogmatum (Job. XIII, 3, 4). Constat ergo eos haereticorum typum gerere, quos sanctus vir redarguit cultui perversorum dogmatum deservire. Quia igitur Job interpretatur dolens, quo nimirum dolore vel Mediatoris passio, vel sanctae Ecclesiae labor exprimitur, quae multiplici praesentis vitae fatigatione cruciatur, amici quoque ejus ex vocabulo nominis meritum suae indicant actionis. Nam Eliphaz Latina lingua dicitur Dei contemptus. Et quid aliud haeretici faciunt, nisi quod dum falsa de Deo sentiunt, eum superbiendo contemnunt? Baldad interpretatur vetustas sola. Bene autem omnes haeretici in his quae de Domino loquuntur, dum non intentione recta, sed appetitione temporalis gloriae videri praedicatores appetunt, vetustas sola nominantur. Ad loquendum quippe, non zelo novi hominis, 732 sed vitae veteris pravitate concitantur. Sophar quoque Latino sermone dicitur dissipatio speculae, vel speculationem dissipans. Mentes namque fidelium ad contemplanda superna se erigunt; sed dum haereticorum verba pervertere recta contemplantes appetunt, speculam dissipare conantur. In tribus itaque amicorum Job nominibus tres in haereticis perditionum casus exprimuntur. Nisi enim Deum contemnerent, nequaquam de illo perversa sentirent; et nisi vetustatem contraherent, in novae vitae intelligentia non errarent; et nisi speculationem bonorum destruerent, nequaquam eos superna judicia tam districto examine pro verborum suorum culpa reprobarent. Contemnendo igitur Deum, in vetustate se retinent; sed in vetustate se retinendo, pravis suis sermonibus speculationi rectorum nocent. 4. Eliu figura doctorum fidelium sed superborum. Post hos quoque Eliu junior in beati Job exprobratione subjungitur, ex cujus persona videlicet species quorumdam doctorum fidelium sed tamen arrogantium designatur. Cujus verba non facile intelligimus, nisi ea ex subsequenti dominica correptione pensemus. Ait namque de illo Dominus: Quis est iste involvens sententias sermonibus imperitis (Job. XXXVIII, 2)? Cum vero dicit sententias, sed non addit protinus quales, vult procul dubio bonas intelligi Nam cum sententiae nominantur, nisi etiam malae dicantur, malae sentiri non possunt. In bono enim semper sententias accipimus quae sine reprobationis adjectione ponuntur, sicut scriptum est: Sapientior sibi videtur piger, septem viris loquentibus sententias (Prov. XXVI, 16). Quod vero dicitur, quia ejus sententiae imperitis sermonibus involvuntur, hoc summopere ostenditur, quia ab eo cum elationis fatuitate proferuntur. Magna quippe in eo imperitia est humiliter dicere nescire quod dicit, et veritatis sensibus elationis verba miscere. [Vet. III.] 5. Aliquando mala bene, et bona male dicuntur. Omne enim quod dicitur quadripartita potest qualitate distingui: si aut mala male, aut bona bene, aut mala bene, aut bona male dicantur. Male enim malum dicitur, cum res perversa suadetur, sicut scriptum est: Benedic Deo, et morere (Job. II, 9). Bonum bene dicitur, cum recte recta praedicantur, sicut Joannes ait: Agite poenitentiam, appropinquavit enim regnum coelorum (Matth. III, 2). Malum bene dicitur, quando per os dicentis idcirco vitium exprimitur, ut reprobetur, sicut Paulus ait: Feminae eorum immutaverunt naturalem usum in eum qui est contra naturam (Rom. I, 26). Quo loco exsecranda quoque virorum facinora subdidit; sed honeste inhonesta narravit, ut multos ad honestatis formam inhonesta narrando revocaret. Male autem bonum dicitur, cum rectum aliquid recto studio non profertur, sicut illuminato caeco Pharisaei dixisse perhibentur: Tu sis discipulus ejus (Joan. IX, 28). Quod maledictionis utique dixerunt studio, non orationis voto. Vel sicut Caiphas ait: Expedit unum hominem mori pro populo, ut non tota gens pereat (Joan. XI, 50). Bonum quippe, sed non bene locutus est, quia dum crudelitatem necis appetiit, redemptionis gratiam prophetavit. Hoc igitur modo Eliu quoque dicere non bene bona reprehenditur, quia in his quae veraciter loquitur arroganter inflatur. Qui in eo speciem arrogantium signat, quo per sensum rectitudinis in tumoris verba se elevat. 733 6. In amicorum Job reconciliatione, agnoscenda haereticorum conversio. Eorum sacrificia Deo non placent, sed quae ab Ecclesia offeruntur. Sed quid est quod tres amicos reconciliari per septem sacrificia, divina vox praecipit; Eliu vero sub unius tantummodo sententiae increpatione derelinquit, nisi quod nonnunquam haeretici, divinae gratiae largitate perfusi, ad unitatem sanctae Ecclesiae redeunt? Quod bene ipsa amicorum reconciliatione signatur, pro quibus tamen beatus Job exorare praecipitur, quia nimirum haereticorum sacrificia accepta Deo esse non possunt, nisi pro eis universalis Ecclesiae manibus offerantur, ut ejus meritis remedium salutis inveniant, quam verborum suorum jaculis impugnando feriebant. Unde et septem pro eis sacrificia memorantur oblata, quia dum septiformis gratiae Spiritum confitentes accipiunt, quasi septem oblationibus expiantur. Hinc in Joannis Apocalypsi per septenarium Ecclesiarum numerum, universalis Ecclesia designatur (Apoc. I, 11). Hinc per Salomonem de sapientia dicitur: Sapientia aedificavit sibi domum, excidit columnas septem (Prov. IX, 1). Ipso ergo sacrificiorum numero reconciliati haeretici quid prius fuerint exprimunt, qui perfectioni septiformis gratiae nonnisi redeundo junguntur. Bene autem tauros pro se et arietes obtulisse describuntur. In tauro quippe cervix superbiae, in ariete autem ducatus gregum sequentium designatur. Quid itaque est pro eis tauros arietesque mactare, nisi eorum superbum ducatum interficere, ut de se humilia sentiant, et post se corda innocentium jam non seducant? Cervice enim tumenti ab Ecclesiae universitate resilierant, et infirmos post se populos quasi sequentes greges trahebant. Veniant igitur ad beatum Job, id est revertantur ad Ecclesiam, et septenario sacrificio tauros et arietes mactandos offerant, qui ut universali Ecclesiae conjungantur, humilitate interveniente, interficiant quidquid prius tumidum de superbo ducatu sapiebant. [Vet. IV.] 7. Non reconciliantur qui recte praedicando, vanae gloriae serviunt, sed saepissime reprobantur. Eliu vero per quem vanae gloriae amatores signati sunt, intra sanctam Ecclesiam constituti, qui ea quae recte sentiunt humiliter proferre contemnunt, nequaquam per sacrificium reconciliari praecipitur quia arrogantes quidem, sed tamen fideles, pro eo quod jam intus sunt, per septem sacrificia revocari non possunt. Quos tamen sub Eliu specie sententia divina redarguit, atque in eis non veritatis sententias, sed elationis mentem ac verba reprehendit. Quae nimirum reprehensio quid aliud signat, nisi quod eos intra positos supernae districtionis increpatio vel per flagellum corrigit, vel per justum examen sibimetipsis relinquit? Tales quippe intra sanctam Ecclesiam recta quidem praedicant, sed tamen, Deo judice, audire merentur adversa, quia per ea bona quae non propria proferunt, non auctoris sui gloriam, sed propriam laudem quaerunt. Unde hoc quoque caute pensandum est, quod divina voce de Eliu dicitur: Quis est iste (Job. XXXVIII, 2)? Prima quippe exprobratio est talis interrogatio. Nam Quis est iste non dicimus, nisi de eo utique quem nescimus. Nescire autem Dei reprobare est; unde quibusdam quos reprobat in fine dicturus est: Nescio vos unde sitis, discedite a me omnes operarii iniquitatis (Luc. XIII, 27). Quid est ergo 734 de hoc arrogante requirere: Quis est iste? nisi aperte dicere: Ego arrogantes nescio, id est eorum vitam in sapientiae meae virtute non approbo, quia dum laudibus humanis inflantur, a vera gloria aeternae retributionis inanescunt. Cujus dum sententias minime respuit, sed tamen eum ipsum qui illas protulit reprehendit, quasi aperte insinuat, dicens: Novi quae dicit, sed ignoro qui dicit, quia veraciter prolata approbo, sed eum qui de bonis quae profert extollitur non agnosco. 8. Optimi praedicatoris imago eximia. Bona vix sine periculo innotescunt. Qui sapit, studeat esse sapiens, non videri. Ut vero apertius ostendamus in elationis jactantia. Eliu quam turpiter defluat, formam prius ostendere boni praedicatoris debemus, quatenus ex statu hujus rectitudinis monstretur liquido tortitudo quam prava sit incurvationis.

Sanctae universalis Ecclesiae spiritalis quisque praedicator in cunctis quae dicit solerti cura se inspicit, ne in eo quod recta praedicat vitio se elationis extollat; ne vita a lingua discordet; ne pacem, quam in Ecclesia nuntiat, in seipso, dum bene dicit, et male vivit, amittat. Sed studet summopere contra maledicos rumores adversantium et defendere loquendo quod vivit, et ornare vivendo quod dicit. Nec in his omnibus suam, sed auctoris gloriam quaerit; atque omnem sapientiae gratiam, quam ut loqueretur accepit, non suis se aestimat meritis, sed eorum intercessionibus pro quibus loquitur accepisse. Sicque dum se infra dejicit, superest, quia suae nimirum magis mercedi proficit, quod bona quae exercere praevalet alienis meritis reddit. Indignum se omnibus judicat, etiam cum dignius cunctis vivat. Scit enim, quod bona quae innotescunt hominibus, sine periculo esse vix possunt. Et quamvis sapientem se esse sentiat, vellet tamen esse sapiens, nec videri, atque hoc sibi omnimodo quod loquendo proditur pertimescit; et si liceat, tacere appetit, dum esse multis tutius silentium cernit, eosque esse feliciores putat, quos intra sanctam Ecclesiam locus inferior per silentium occultat; et tamen ut sanctam Ecclesiam defendat, quia ad loquendum vi charitatis impellitur, ex necessitate quidem officium locutionis suscipit, sed ex magno desiderio otium taciturnitatis quaerit. Hoc servat voto, illud exercet ministerio. Hanc autem dicendi formulam arrogantes ignorant. Neque enim loquuntur quia causae eveniunt, sed causas evenire appetunt ut loquantur. Quorum nunc Eliu speciem signat, qui in locutione sua immenso se vitio elationis exaltat. Igitur finitis beati Job sermonibus, subditur: CAP. XXXII, VERS. 7. Omiserunt autem tres viri isti respondere Job, eo quod justus sibi videretur. [Vet. V, Rec. II.] Hoc quod de eo dicitur: Eo quod justus sibi videretur, sacrae hujus scriptor historiae ad amicorum judicium retulit, non autem beatum Job de elationis tumore reprobavit. Sequitur:

CAPUT II.

VERS. 2. Et iratus, indignatusque est Eliu filius Barachel Buzites, de cognatione Ram. 9. Per Eliu, ejusque patrem et cognationem, signantur superbi verae fidei tenaces. Bene haec ipsa vel ejus, vel parentis, vel loci, vel cognationis nomina notam propriae exprimunt actionis. Eliu quippe interpretatum sonat, Deus meus iste, vel Deus Dominus. Per quem, sicut superius diximus (Num. 7), designatur recta 735 fides arrogantium intra Ecclesiam positorum. Unde eis et hoc ipsum ejus etiam nomen congruit. Nam quamvis juxta dominica praecepta non vivant, Deum tamen dominum esse recognoscunt; quia in veritate carnis etiam formam Deitatis intelligunt, sicut per Prophetam dicitur: Scitote quod Dominus ipse est Deus (Psal. XCIX, 3). Barachel vero interpretatum dicitur benedictio Dei, Buzites autem contemptibilis. Quod arroganter praedicantibus bene utrumque concordat, quia in praedicationis facundia benedictionem quidem gratiae divinae percipiunt, sed in elatis suis moribus esse eam contemptibilem ostendunt. Ipsa quippe quae acceperunt bona, eo despicabilia faciunt, quo nequaquam eis bene uti noverunt. Apte autem etiam de cognatione Ram dicitur. Ram quippe interpretatur excelsus. Excelsus namque est fidelium populus, qui hujus vitae infima et abjecta contemnit. Excelsi sunt qui dicere cum Paulo noverunt: Nostra conversatio in coelis est (Philip. III, 20). Eliu itaque de cognatione Ram dicitur, quia unusquisque praedicator arrogans intra universalem Ecclesiam positus, sanctis populis fidei veritate sociatur, quamvis ab eorum vita elationis pravitate disjungatur. Sequitur:

CAPUT III [Rec. III].

VERS. 2, 3. Iratus est autem adversus Job, eo quod justum se diceret coram Deo. Porro adversus amicos ejus indignatus est, eo quod non invenissent responsionem rationabilem, sed tantummodo condemnassent Job. 10. Hi simul haereticos premunt recte praedicando, et Ecclesiam superbiendo. Solerter intuendum est quod beatum Job ideo reprehendit quod coram Deo se justum esse dixerit; amicos vero ejus ideo redarguit, quod condemnantes eum responsionem contra illum rationabilem non dederunt. Istis namque indiciis aperte colligitur quod per eum species amatorum vanae gloriae designatur. Job quippe de praesumpta justitia, amicos vero ejus de stulta responsione redarguit. Cuncti enim vanae gloriae sectatores, dum se omnibus praeferunt, alios quidem de fatuis sensibus, alios autem de indignis meritis reprehendunt; id est, alios censent nihil scire, alios non bene vivere. Et quamvis juste omnes extra Ecclesiam positos prava sentire redarguant, tamen etiam eos qui intus sunt pro vitae despectu contemnunt, et contra illos ex magnitudine recte sentiendi, contra istos vero quasi ex merito bene vivendi superbiunt. [Vet. VI.] Bene autem Eliu modo beatum Job, modo amicos ejus increpare perhibetur, quia amatores vanae gloriae aliquando intra sanctam Ecclesiam constituti, et adversarios premunt, dum vera praedicant, et ejusdem sanctae Ecclesiae moribus contradicunt, dum de ipsa praedicatione gloriantur. Premunt adversarios virtute dicti, premunt sanctam Ecclesiam qualitate dicendi. Illos praedicatione veritatis, istam vitio elationis impugnant. Sequitur: VERS. 4, 5. Igitur Eliu exspectavit Job loquentem, eo quod seniores essent qui loquebantur. Cum autem vidisset quod tres respondere non potuissent, iratus est vehementer. 11. Non nisi post haereticorum certamina prodiere acuti sensus et perplexior indago verborum. Quamvis sancta Ecclesia sit procul dubio adversariis suis antiquior, quia de illa ipsi, non autem exiit ipsa de illis, sicut de eis per Joannem 736 dicitur: Ex nobis exierunt, sed non erant ex nobis (I Joan. II, 19); recte tamen eisdem adversariis Eliu junior fuisse describitur, quia nimirum post exorta haereticorum bella, esse intra sanctam Ecclesiam fastu scientiae inflati arrogantes coeperunt. Cum enim graviora hostium prodiere certamina, tunc sunt profecto subtiliora sensuum spicula requisita, tunc argumentorum obstacula, tunc perplexior indago verborum. Quae saepe viri ferventes ingenio, dum congrue inveniunt, arroganter intumescunt; et, quod per elationis vitium plerumque contingit, iisdem acutis sensibus quibus hostem feriunt, prosternuntur, dum in his quae recte de Deo sentiunt, non Dei, sed suam gloriam quaerunt. Unde Eliu quoque multa quidem recte loquitur, et tamen divina voce, ac si perversa dixerit, increpatur. Cum vero dicitur quia Eliu exspectavit Job loquentem, eo quod seniores essent qui loquebantur, aperte beato Job non pro sua, sed pro amicorum reverentia honorem reservasse monstratur, quia videlicet arrogantes intra positi eamdem sanctam Ecclesiam, quam defendunt, despiciunt; et plerumque contingit ut plus ingenia male sapientium quam simplicem vitam innocentium venerentur, plus reservent linguis extra loquentium quam meritis intra positorum, quamvis utrisque ex diverso obvient, cum et ab illis rectitudine sensuum, et a sancta Ecclesia morum pravitate discordent. Sequitur:

CAPUT V.

VERS. 6, 7. Respondensque Eliu filius Barachel Buzites, dixit: Junior sum tempore, vos autem antiquiores; idcirco demisso capite veritus sum indicare vobis meam sententiam. Sperabam enim quod aetas prolixior loqueretur, et annorum multitudo doceret sapientiam. 12. Tacere, saepe est sapere. Cuncta haec, quae ab eo per tumorem superbiae proferuntur, cursim potius perstringenda sunt quam attentius exponenda. Quae enim soliditate gravitatis carent, expositionis subtilitate non indigent. Sed solum puto breviter intimandum quod Eliu quandiu pro aetatis suae respectu tacuit, sapientior fuit; cum vero in aliis annorum multitudinem, semetipsum praeferens, despicit, quam pueriliter desipiat ostendit. Nam contra ejus sententiam et aetas prolixior loquitur, et per annorum multitudinem sapientia docetur, quia etsi longaevitas sensum non praebet, usu tamen vehementer exercet. Sequitur:

CAPUT VI [Rec. IV].

VERS. 8. Sed, ut video, spiritus est in hominibus, et inspiratio Omnipotentis dat intelligentiam. 13. Quatuor species tumoris in arrogantibus: prima, bonum a semetipso habere se credere; secunda, sibi pro suis meritis datum. Gratia non datur pro meritis. Tertia bonum aliquod falso sibi tribuere; quarta sibi soli, despectis caeteris, illud vindicare. Haec recte diceret si eamdem intelligentiam sibi prae caeteris non arrogaret. Neque enim prava condemnatio est ex eo bono quod communiter datur private gloriari, scire bonum unde acceperit, et nescire quomodo bono uti debeat quod accepit. [Vet. VII.] Quatuor quippe sunt species quibus omnis tumor arrogantium demonstratur, cum bonum aut a semetipsis habere se aestimant, aut si sibi datum desuper credunt, pro suis se hoc accepisse meritis putant; aut certe cum jactant se habere quod non habent; aut, despectis caeteris, singulariter videri appetunt habere quod habent. A semetipso enim bonum se habere jactabat, cui per Apostolum dicitur: Quid autem habes quod non accepisti, 737 quid gloriaris quasi non acceperis (I Cor. IV, 7)? Rursum ne dari nobis bonum gratiae pro nostris praecedentibus meritis crederemus, idem Apostolus admonet, dicens: Gratia estis salvati per fidem, et hoc non ex vobis, sed Dei donum est, non ex operibus, ut ne quis glorietur (Ephes. II, 8). Qui etiam de semetipso ait: Qui prius fui blasphemus, et persecutor, et contumeliosus; sed misericordiam consecutus sum (I Tim. I, 13). Quibus verbis aperte declarat quod gratia non pro meritis tribuatur, dum ex seipso docuit et quid de malitia meruit, et quid de benevolentia accepit. Rursum nonnulli jactant se habere quod non habent, sicut divina voce per prophetam de Moab dicitur: Superbiam ejus, et arrogantiam ejus ego novi, et quod non sit juxta eam virtus ejus (Jerem. XLVIII, 29). Et sicut angelo Ecclesiae Laodiceae dicitur: Quia dicis quod dives sum, et locupletatus, et nullius egeo; et nescis quia tu es miser, et miserabilis, et pauper, et caecus, et nudus (Apoc. III, 17). Rursum nonnulli, despectis caeteris, videri appetunt singulariter bonum habere quod habent. Unde et Pharisaeus idcirco de templo absque justificatione descendit (Luc. XVIII, 14), quia bonorum operum merita sibi quasi singulariter tribuens, oranti publicano se praetulit. Sancti quoque apostoli ab hoc elationis vitio revocantur, qui de praedicatione redeuntes, cum elati dicerent: Domine, in nomine tuo etiam daemonia nobis subjecta sunt (Luc. X, 17), ne de hac miraculorum singularitate gauderent, illico eis respondit Dominus, dicens: Videbam Satanam velut fulgur de coelo cadentem (Ibid., 18). Ipse quippe singulariter elatus dixerat: Super astra coeli exaltabo solium meum, sedebo in monte testamenti, in lateribus Aquilonis, similis ero Altissimo (Isai. XIV, 13). Et mire Dominus, ut in discipulorum cordibus elationem premeret, mox judicium ruinae retulit, quod ipse magister elationis accepit, ut in auctore superbiae discerent quid de elationis vitio formidarent. In hac itaque arrogantiae quarta specie crebro humanus animus labitur, ut id quod habet habere se singulariter glorietur. In qua tamen similitudini diabolicae vicinius appropinquat, quia quisquis bonum se habere singulariter gaudet, quisquis videri sublimior caeteris quaerit, illum videlicet imitatur, qui despecto bono societatis angelorum, sedem suam ad Aquilonem ponens, et Altissimi similitudinem superbe appetens, per iniquum desiderium quasi ad quoddam culmen conatus est singularitatis erumpere. Eliu ergo quamvis dari a Domino sapientiam confitetur, in hac tamen elationis specie labitur, ut sapientiorem se caeteris gaudeat, et quasi de singulari bono sese inaniter extollat. Quod verbis sequentibus indicat, dicens:

CAPUT VII.

VERS. 9-12. Non sunt longaevi sapientes, nec senes intelligunt judicium. Ideo dicam: Audite me, ostendam vobis ego meam sapientiam. Exspectavi enim sermones vestros, audivi prudentiam vestram, donec disceptaretis sermonibus; et donec putabam vos aliquid dicere, considerabam. 14.

Quidam superbe tacent; et senes audiunt, non ut discant, sed ut judicent. Quantum ad intentionem litterae spectat, loquens Eliu indicat quam superbe tacuerit. Cum enim dicit: Exspectavi enim sermones vestros, et putabam vos aliquid dicere, aperte declarat se ad verba senum judicantis potius studio quam discentis voto tacuisse. Quamvis haec melius vitam 738 arrogantium designant, qui aliquando intra sanctam Ecclesiam positi, cum ejusdem sanctae Ecclesiae adversarios conspiciunt, non in eis annos temporum, sed intentionem solent pensare verborum. Nam quantolibet sint eisdem arrogantibus antiquiores haeretici, eos audacter comprimunt, in quorum verbis dogmata perversa reprehendunt. Sequitur:

CAPUT VIII [Vet. VIII].

VERS. 12, 13. Sed, ut video, non est qui arguere possit Job, et respondere ex vobis sermonibus ejus. Ne forte dicatis: Invenimus sapientiam, Deus projecit eum, non homo. 15. Deus in hac vita solatia aliquando concedit, nullo vitae aeternae detrimento. Saepe haeretici per hoc quod esse et hominibus despicabiles solent, cum a cunctis fere gentibus sanctam Ecclesiam venerari conspiciunt, opinionem ejus quibus valent obtrectationibus lacerare contendunt, dicentes: Idcirco illi cuncta temporalia suppetunt, quia ei praemia aeternorum munerum subtrahuntur. Quorum vocibus Eliu obviat, dicens: Ne forte dicatis: Invenimus sapientiam, Deus projecit eum non homo. Ac si arrogantes intra sanctam Ecclesiam sed tamen fideles contra haereticos dicant: Per hoc quod sanctam Ecclesiam in honore hominum florere temporaliter cernitis, projectam eam a Domino non credatis. Scit enim Redemptor ejus, et in hoc itinere solatia venienti tribuere, et pervenienti ad aeternam patriam superna praemia reservare. Incassum igitur dicitis quia Deus eam et non homo projecerit, cum venerari illam a cunctis fere hominibus videtis, quia sic ei terrenae gloriae adjumentum tribuitur, ut per hoc multiplicius etiam ad coelestia subvehatur. Sequitur:

CAPUT IX.

VERS. 14. Nihil locutus est mihi, et ego non secundum vestros sermones respondebo illi. 16. Superbi, cum corripiuntur, non audiunt, aut dissimulant. Quid est, quod ait: Nihil locutus est mihi? Nunquid sancta Ecclesia per praedicatores justos cum intra se arrogantes conspicit, erudire ac redarguere praetermittit? Exercet haec, et quotidie exercere non cessat. Sed Eliu, qui loquentem publice beatum Job audierat, dicat: Nihil locutus est mihi, quia nimirum omnes arrogantes voces quidem sanctae Ecclesiae audiunt, sed sibi eas dici dissimulant, quando elationis vitium emendare contemnunt. Nec se de superbia redargui aestimant, quia esse se humiles putant, qui etiam redargui despiciunt, dum sapientiores se et ipsis redarguentibus arbitrantur. Quod vero ait: Et ego non secundum sermones vestros respondebo illi, bene beato Job non secundum sermones eorum respondere se dicit. Arrogantes enim intra sanctam Ecclesiam positi respondent contra eam, sed non sicut haeretici exterius constituti. Neque enim contradicunt ei prava praedicando, sed perverse vivendo, quia nec de Deo, ut haeretici, indigna sentiunt, sed de se plus quam necesse est, digna suspicantur. Sequitur: VERS. 15. Extimuerunt, nec responderunt ultra, abstuleruntque a se eloquium. [Vet. IX.] Bene ad Eliu verba amici Job extimuisse referuntur, quia nonnunquam arrogantes Ecclesiae defensores, quamvis ordinem dicendi non teneant, tamen adversarios ipsa dictorum virtute perturbant. Sequitur:

CAPUT X.

VERS. 16. 739 Quoniam igitur exspectavi, et non sunt locuti; steterunt, nec responderunt ultra. 17. Errantes dum redarguunt, suam sapientiam ostentare tantum cupiunt, non aliis prodesse. Secus boni praedicatores. Finis esse locutionis sapientium solet, ut eo usque dicant quo adversariis silentium imponant. Non enim se ostendere, sed prava docentes compescere cupiunt. Postquam vero de amicis Job dictum est: Extimuerunt, nec responderunt ultra, abstuleruntque a se eloquium; Eliu subjungens, ait: Exspectavi, et non sunt locuti; steterunt, nec responderunt ultra. Et illis jam silentibus, adhuc verba multiplicat, quia videlicet vir arrogans, et formam in se arrogantium intentans, non adversariorum dicta superare, sed suam sapientiam ostentare festinat. Unde et sequitur: VERS. 17. Respondebo et ego partem meam, et ostendam scientiam meam. Hanc enim partem suam omnis arrogans aestimat, si scientiam non tam habeat quam ostendat, quia nimirum omnes elati scientiam non habere appetunt, sed ostendere. Quo contra bene per Moysen dicitur: Vas quod non habuerit operculum, nec ligaturam desuper, immundum erit (Num. XIX, 15). Tegmen quippe operculi, vel ligatura, est censura disciplinae, qua quisquis non premitur, quasi vas immundum pollutumque reprobatur. An non vas sine operculo Eliu fuerat, qui hanc esse partem suam aestimaverat, si ostenderet scientiam quam habebat? Quasi enim vas sine operculo, vel ligatura, polluitur, qui per studium ostentationis patens, nullo velamine taciturnitatis operitur. [Vet. X.] Praedicatores autem sancti partem suam reputant, si intus quidem ipsi de sapientia sua gaudeant, foris autem alios ab errore compescant; neque a se ipsis ita loquendo exeunt, ut gaudium mentis in ostensione ponant disertae locutionis, sed bonum scientiae in cordis secreto meditantur, et ibi gaudent ubi hoc percipiunt, non ubi inter tot tentationum laqueos innotescere compelluntur, quamvis cum bonum quod accipiunt innotescunt, media interveniente charitate, ex profectu audientium, et non ex propria ostensione gratulantur. Arrogantes enim cum scientiam accipiunt, nihil se accepisse aestimant, si hanc eos occultam habere contingat. Nusquam quippe suum gaudium, nisi in ore hominum ponunt. Unde et fatuae virgines in vasis suis oleum non sumpsisse referuntur (Matth. XXV, 3), quia arrogantes omnes cum se ab aliquibus fortasse vitiis continent, bonum gloriae intra conscientias habere non possunt. In vase autem proprio sumpserat Paulus oleum, qui dicebat: Gloria nostra haec est, testimonium conscientiae nostrae (II Cor. I, 12). Inane ergo vasculum ferre est intus corde vacuo foris humani oris judicium quaerere. Eliu itaque, quia gloriam dum exterius quaerit intra vas oleum non habet, dicit: Respondebo et ego partem meam, et ostendam scientiam meam. Unde et hoc ipsum, quod de fervore vanae gloriae intus patitur, verbis sequentibus aperit, dicens:

CAPUT XI [Rec. V].

VERS. 18-20. Plenus sum sermonibus, et coarctat me spiritus uteri mei. En venter meus quasi mustum absque spiraculo, quod lagunculas novas disrumpit. Loquar, et respirabo paululum; aperiam labia mea, et respondebo. 18. Locutionis eorum celsitudinem, non utilitatis intentionem imitantur superbi. Nonnunquam arrogantes viri, dum praedicatores 740 sanctos magna eloqui ac pro locutione sua venerari conspiciunt, locutionis eorum celsitudinem et non utilitatem intentionis imitantur; neque hoc amant quod illi appetunt, sed hoc summopere appetunt quod clari hominibus ostendantur. Nam saepe contingit ut sapientes viri cum se non audiri considerant, ori suo silentium indicant; sed plerumque dum conspiciunt quod iniquorum facinora ipsis tacentibus et non corripientibus crescunt, vim quamdam spiritus sui sustinent, ut in locutionem apertae correptionis erumpant. Unde propheta Jeremias cum praedicationis sibi silentium indixisset, dicens: Non recordabor ejus, neque loquar ultra in nomine illius; illico adjunxit: Et factus est in corde meo quasi ignis exaestuans, claususque in ossibus meis, et defeci, ferre non sustinens; audivi enim contumelias multorum (Jerem. XX, 9). Pro eo enim quod se minime audiri conspexit, silentium appetiit; sed cum crescentia mala cerneret, in eodem silentio non permansit. Quia enim foris tacuit, ex taedio locutionis intus ignem pertulit de zelo charitatis. Inflammantur quippe corda justorum, cum non correpta crescere conspiciunt acta malorum, eorumque culpae se participes credunt quos in iniquitate crescere silendo permittunt. David propheta postquam sibi silentium indixerat, dicens: Posui ori meo custodiam, dum consisteret peccator adversum me; obmutui, et humiliatus sum, et silui a bonis (Psal. XXXVIII, 2), in ipso suo silentio, isto zelo charitatis exarsit, qui illico subdidit: Et dolor meus renovatus est, concaluit cor meum intra me, et in meditatione mea exardescet ignis (Ibid., 3). Intus ergo cor concaluit, quia dilectionis ardor per admonitionem locutionis exterius emanare recusavit. Ignis in meditatione cordis exarsit, quia increpatio delinquentium a correptione oris refrixit. Charitatis enim zelus consolatione admirabili augendo se temperat, quando contra iniquorum opera per vocem correptionis emanat, ut et quae corrigere non valet, increpare non desinat, ne se participem delinquentium ex consensu taciturnitatis addicat. [Vet. XI.] 19. Nonnulla vitia virtutes mentiuntur. Sed quia saepe nonnulla vitia virtutes se esse mentiuntur, sicut effusio nonnunquam misericordia, et tenacia nonnunquam parcimonia, et crudelitas aliquando justitia vult videri, ita plerumque mentem ad loquendi impetum, vanae gloriae anxietas nequaquam se intra silentium capiens, quasi zelus charitatis inflammat, atque appetitae ostensionis vis ad effrenationem locutionis impellit, et quasi sub studio consulendi libido erumpit apparendi. Non enim curat loquendo quid prosit, sed quid appareat; nec studet ut malum quod cernit corrigat, sed bonum quod sentit ostendat. Unde Eliu quoque spiritu elationis extensus, et sese intra silentii claustra non capiens, ait: Plenus sum sermonibus, et coaretat me spiritus uteri mei. En venter meus quasi mustum absque spiraculo, quod lagunculas novas disrumpit. 20. Elationis inflatio, zelum ex afflatu Spiritus sancti quandoque imitatur. Quod si intelligere spiritaliter debemus, hoc loco videlicet ventrem sinum cordis appellat. In musto vero sancti Spiritus fervor accipitur, de quo in Evangelio Dominus dicit: Vinum novum mittunt in utres novos (Matth. IX, 17). Ex quo dum repente replerentur apostoli (Act. II, 4), dum linguis omnibus 741 loquerentur, a Judaeis nescientibus, sed tamen vera attestantibus, dictum est: Hi musto pleni sunt (Ibid., 13). Lagunculas vero infirmas ipsa humanitate conscientias, vel certe haec terrena corporum vascula, non inconvenienter accipimus, de quibus Paulus apostolus ait; Habemus thesaurum istum in vasis fictilibus (II Cor. IV, 7). Eliu autem, quia, sicut superius diximus, sic inflatione elationis extenditur, ac si ad loquendum per charitatis gratiam ardore Spiritus sancti accendatur, sensus sui spiritum in eo quod tacuit, quasi musto absque spiraculo comparavit. Et bene ait: Quod lagunculas novas disrumpit; quia sancti Spiritus fervor non solum veteri, sed etiam nova vita vix capitur. Mustum ergo lagunculas novas disrumpit, quia fervoris ejus potentia etiam spiritalia corda transcendit. Loquar, et respirabo paululum; aperiam labia mea, et respondebo. Bene ait: Respirabo, quia sicut labor justorum est videre prava, nec corrigere; ita gravis est labor arrogantium, si quod sapiunt non ostendunt. Vim quippe intrinsecus aestuantem ferre vix possunt, si omne quod sentiunt paulo tardius innotescunt. Unde necesse est ut cum res bona agitur prius ejus elatio in corde vincatur, ne si a radice miserae intentionis prodeat, amaros nequitiae fructus producat. [Vet. XII, Rec. VI.] 21. Qui adhuc vitiis subjacent, alios regere non praesumant. Hi ergo qui adhuc vitiorum bello subjacent nequaquam per praedicationis usum praeesse magisterio caeterorum de bent (Dist. 44, cap. Non liceat). Hinc est enim quod, juxta divinae dispensationis vocem ab anno vigesimo et quinto Levitae tabernaculo serviunt, sed a quinquagesimo custodes vasorum fiunt. Quid enim per annum quintum ac vigesimum, in quo flos juventutis oboritur, nisi ipsa contra unumquodque vitium bella signantur? Et quid per quinquagesimum, in quo et jubilaei requies continetur, nisi interna quies edomito bello mentis exprimitur? Quid vero per vasa tabernaculi, nisi fidelium animae figurantur? Levitae ergo ab anno vigesimo et quinto tabernaculo serviunt, et a quinquagesimo custodes vasorum fiunt, ut videlicet qui adhuc impugnantium vitiorum certamina per consensum delectationis tolerant, aliorum curam suscipere non praesumant; cum vero tentationum bella subegerint, quo apud se jam de intima tranquillitate securi sunt, animarum custodiam sortiantur. Sed quis haec tentationum praelia sibi perfecte subigat, cum Paulus dicat: Video aliam legem in membris meis repugnantem legi mentis meae, et captivum me ducentem in lege peccati (Rom. VII, 23)? Sed aliud est bella fortiter perpeti, aliud bellis enerviter expugnari. In istis exercetur virtus, ne extolli debeat; in illis omnimodo exstinguitur, ne subsistat. Qui igitur scit fortiter tentationem ferre certaminis, et cum tentatione concutitur in alta arce praesidet quietis, quia etiam apud semetipsum sub seipso esse contentiones vitiorum conspicit, quibus nulla fractus delectatione consentit. Sequitur:

CAPUT XII.

VERS. 21, 22. Non accipiam personam viri, et Deum homini non aequabo. Nescio enim quandiu subsistam, et si post modicum tollat me factor meus. 22. Vitae praesentis tempus breve est, quia non permanet. Recta consideratio, quod Deum homini idcirco non aequat, quia quandiu hic subsistat, vel quando ad Dei judicium tollatur, ignorat. Et bene ait: 742 Post modicum tollat me factor meus, quia quamlibet longum fuerit tempus vitae praesentis, eo ipso breve est, quo permanens non est. Neque enim dignum est ut diutinum judicetur, quidquid fine circumscribitur. Sed inter has sententias quas ex veritate solidas profert, ad verba rursum elationis erumpit, dicens:

CAPUT XIII [Rec. VII].

CAP. XXXIII, VERS. 12. Audi igitur, Job, eloquia mea, et omnes sermones meos ausculta. Ecce aperui os meum, loquatur lingua mea in faucibus meis.

23. Superbi sanam doctrinam non sane praedicant, quod insolescant. Pensemus de qua elatione descendit, quod beatum Job audire se admonet, quod os aperuisse se perhibet, quod linguam suam in faucibus loqui promittit. Hoc enim habet proprium doctrina arrogantium (Dist. 46, cap. Hoc habet) ut humiliter nesciant inferre quod docent, et recta quae sapiunt recte ministrare non possint. In verbis enim eorum proditur quod cum docent, quasi in quodam sibi videntur summitatis culmine residere, eosque quos docent ut longe infra se positos veluti in imo respiciunt, quibus non consulendo loqui, sed vix dominando dignantur. Recte autem his per prophetam Dominus dicit: Vos autem cum austeritate imperabatis eis, et cum potentia (Ezech. XXXIV, 4). Cum austeritate enim et potentia imperant, qui subditos suos non tranquille ratiocinando corrigere, sed aspere inflectere dominando festinant. [Vet. XIII.] 24. Vera doctrina elationem fugit. At contra vera doctrina tanto vehementius hoc elationis vitium fugit per cogitationem, quanto ardentius verborum suorum jaculis ipsum magistrum elationis insequitur. Cavet enim ne eum magis elatis moribus praedicet, quem in corde audientium sacris sermonibus insectatur. Humilitatem namque, quae magistra est omnium materque virtutum, et loquendo dicere, et vivendo conatur ostendere, ut eam apud discipulos veritatis plus moribus quam sermonibus eloquatur. Unde Paulus Thessalonicensibus loquens, quasi culminis proprii apostolatus oblitus, ait: Facti sumus parvuli in medio vestrum (I Thess. II, 7). Unde Petrus apostolus, cum diceret: Parati semper ad satisfactionem omni poscenti vos rationem de ea quae in vobis est spe (I Pet. III, 15), in ipsa doctrinae scientia qualitatem docendi asseruit esse servandam, subdens: Sed cum modestia et timore, conscientiam habentes bonam (Ibid., 16). Hoc autem quod discipulo Paulus ait: Praecipe haec, et doce cum omni imperio (I Tim. IV, 11; Tit. II, 15); non dominationem potentiae, sed auctoritatem suadet vitae. Cum imperio quippe docetur quod prius agitur quam dicatur. Nam doctrinae subtrahit fiduciam, quando conscientia praepedit linguam. Non ergo ei potestatem elatae locutionis, sed bonae fiduciam insinuavit actionis. Unde etiam de Domino scriptum est: Erat enim docens, sicut potestatem habens, non sicut Scribae et Pharisaei (Matth. VII, 29). Singulariter namque ac principaliter solus ex potestate bona locutus est, quia ex infirmitate mala nulla commisit. Ex divinitatis quippe potentia habuit id quod nobis per humanitatis suae innocentiam ministravit. [Vet. XIV, Rec. VIII.] 25. Quid praedicatoribus, ut elationem fugiant, considerandum. Nos enim, quia infirmi homines sumus, cum de Deo hominibus loquimur, debemus primum meminisse quod sumus, ut ex propria infirmitate pensemus quo docendi ordine infirmis fratribus consulamus. Consideremus igitur quia aut tales sumus, 743 quales nonnullos corrigimus; aut tales aliquando fuimus, etsi jam divina gratia operante non sumus, ut tanto temperantius humili corde corrigamus, quanto nosmetipsos verius in his quos emendamus agnoscimus. Si autem tales nec sumus, nec fuimus, quales adhuc illi sunt quos emendare curamus, ne cor nostrum forte superbiat, et de ipsa innocentia pejus ruat, quorum mala corrigimus, alia eorum bona nobis ante oculos revocemus. Quae si omnino nulla sunt, ad occulta Dei judicia recurramus, quia sicut nos meritis nullis hoc ipsum bonum quod habemus accepimus, ita illos quoque potest gratia supernae virtutis infundere, ut excitati posterius etiam ipsa possint bona quae nos ante accepimus praevenire. Quis enim crederet quod per apostolatus meritum Saulus lapidatum Stephanum praecessurus erat (Act. VII, 57), qui in morte ejus lapidantium vestimenta servabat? His ergo primum cogitationibus humiliari cor debet, et tunc demum delinquentium iniquitas increpari. Sed hunc, ut saepe dictum est, locutionis modum Eliu ignorare ostenditur, qui in locutione sua elationis typo quasi potentia cujusdam auctoritatis inflatur, dicens: Audi igitur, Job, eloquia mea, et omnes sermones meos ausculta. Ecce aperui os meum, loquatur lingua mea in faucibus meis. 26. Nonnulli modestiam solum simulant. In faucibus vero loqui est silenter dicere, et non clamoribus vociferari. Quibus verbis arrogantes intra sanctam Ecclesiam positos signat. Hi enim velut in faucibus loqui dicuntur, quando non contra adversarios extra viventes clamant, sed quosdam intra sinum sanctae Ecclesiae quasi vicinos ac juxta positos increpant. Saepe vero arrogantes eamdem quam tenent arrogantiam se fugere ostendunt; et dum sic cuncta agunt, ut nullum lateant, haec private singulis quasi latenter narrant: quatenus non solum de sensu intelligentiae, sed de ipso apud homines etiam arrogantiae contemptu glorientur. Unde nunc dicitur: Loquatur lingua mea in faucibus meis. Ac si aperte dicatur: Quae contra te prudenter sentio, ecce silenter narro. Aliquando autem in tantam impudentiae elationem prosiliunt, ut aliis tacentibus ipsi soleant laudare quod dicunt. Unde subjungit:

CAPUT XIV.

VERS. 3. Simplici corde meo sermones mei, et sententiam puram labia mea loquentur. 27. De simplicitate falso gloriantur. Magnae virtutis laus est simplicitas locutionis. Quam quia arrogantes non habent, habere se hanc sollicitius asserunt, ut securius audiantur. Et pure se locuturos denuntiant, quae duplicitatis suae malitiam deprehendi formidant. Saepe autem et falsis vera permiscent, ut inde eorum mendacio citius credatur, unde inesse eis assertio veritatis agnoscitur. Quia igitur Eliu et pure se locuturum perhibuit, et dicta sua appellando sententias favore praecucurrit, eamdem jam sententiam quam promisit adjungit, dicens:

CAPUT XV [Vet.

XV, Rec. IX]. VERS. 4. Spiritus Dei fecit me, et spiraculum Omnipotentis vivificavit me. 28. Doctrina inordinate prolata sterilescit et foedat. Subditurus vera, praemisit elata; et dicturus 744 hoc quod recte saperet, ante innotuit quantum tumeret. Sic nimirum, sic arrogantium mentes insaniunt, ut et in eis quae recte sentiunt elationis suae tortitudine depraventur. Unde fit ut etiam eorum recta auditores nequaquam instruant, quia profecto illos per ea quae tumide sentiunt, non ad sui reverentiam, sed ad contemptum vocant. Dumque dictis prudentibus stultitiae verba miscentur, quia stultitia ab audiente despicitur, etiam prudentia non tenetur. Hinc enim per Moysen dicitur: Vir qui fluxum seminis sustinet immundus erit (Levit. XV, 10). Quid est enim sermo, nisi semen? Qui dum ordinate emittitur, audientis mens quasi concipientis uterus ad boni operis prolem fetatur. Si vero importune defluit, emittentem polluens, generandi virtutem perdit. Nam si sermo semen non esset, de praedicante Paulo nequaquam Athenienses dicerent: Quid vult sibi seminiverbius hic dicere (Act. XVII, 18)? De quo et Lucas dicit: Ipse enim erat dux verbi (Act. XIV, 11). Semen ergo usui propaginis dicatum incompetenter fluens caetera membra coinquinat, cum sermo per quem in audientium sensibus nasci scientia debuit, si inordinate prodeat, etiam quae recte senserit foedat. Unde Eliu quoque etiam quae recte potest sentire commaculat, dum cui vel quid loquatur ignorat; et quasi fluxum seminis sustinet, cum linguam utilitati congruam per verba vanae locutionis movet. Bono autem ordine et factum se astruit, et animatum. Per spiritum factum, et per spiraculum se narrat animatum. Facto quippe Adam, scriptum est: Inspiravit in faciem ejus spiraculum vitae, et factus est homo in animam viventem (Genes. II, 7). Sed haec quae recte astruit utrum recte exsequatur audiamus. Sequitur:

CAPUT XVI.

VERS. 5. Si potes, responde mihi et adversus faciem meam consiste. 29. Insulsa plus justo sibi arrogantium jactantia. Ecce dum narrat ordinem verae conditionis, in fastum subito superbae elationis erumpit, atque aliis verbis hoc idem replicat, dicens: VERS. 6, 7. Ecce et me sicut et te fecit Deus, et de eodem luto ego quoque formatus sum. Verumtamen miraculum meum non te terreat, eloquentia mea non sit tibi gravis. Quid est hoc, quod Eliu ordinem verae conditionis agnoscit, et modum rectae locutionis ignorat? Quid est, quod se beato Job et conditus exaequat, et locuturus exaltat, nisi hoc, quod arrogantes omnes cunctis quidem hominibus se aequaliter conditos meminerunt, sed per fastum scientiae auditores suos aequales sibi vel esse vel credere dedignantur, eisque se per naturae conditionem conferunt, sed per tumorem scientiae superponunt? Aequales quidem se judicant exstitisse nascendo, sed non aequales remansisse vivendo. Atque in eo quod aequales quasi vivendo jam non sunt, illud ad majus miraculum revocant, quod aequales nascendo fuerunt. Unde inflatus Eliu dicit: Ecce et me sicut et te fecit Deus, et de eodem luto ego quoque formatus sum. Verumtamen miraculum meum 745 non te terreat, et eloquentia mea non sit tibi gravis [Vet. XVI]. Habent hoc etiam arrogantes proprium, quod prius quam dicant, mira se dicere semper existimant, et locutionem suam admirando praeveniunt, quia vel in acutis sensibus ipsa elatio quanta sit fatuitas ignorant. Notandum quoque est quod Paulus, dum mire Hebraeos admoneret, adjunxit: Rogo autem vos, fratres, ut sufferatis verbum solatii; etenim perpaucis scripsi vobis (Hebr. XIII, 22). Eliu autem inania protulit, et quasi consolando subjunxit: Miraculum meum non te terreat, et eloquentia mea non sit tibi gravis. Ille dicta sua verbum solatii, hic vero eloquentiam, et miraculum vocat. Ecce quam distincti sapores pro deunt fructuum ex diversa radice cogitationum. Ille de magnis humiliter sentit, iste de mininis se inaniter erigit. Quid ergo inter haec, nisi hoc solerter est intuendum, quod et ascensuri in imo se esse considerant, et casuri semper in praecipiti stant? Salomone attestante, qui ait: Ante ruinam exaltatur cor, et ante gloriam humiliatur (Prov. XVI, 18). Sequitur: VERS. 8-11. Dixisti ergo in auribus meis, et vocem verborum tuorum audivi. [Rec. X.]. Atque eamdem vocem subjungens, ait: Mundus sum ego, et absque delicto immaculatus, et non est iniquitas in me. Quia querelas in me reperit, ideo arbitratus est me inimicum sibi. Posuit in nervo pedes meos, custodivit omnes semitas meas. Moxque contra haec verba quae beatum Job dixisse narravit sententiam suam proferens, ait:

CAPUT XVII.

VERS. 12. Hoc est ergo in quo non es justificatus. 30. Student magis increpare, quam consolari. Profecto beatus Job veraciter dixerat quod absque culpa fuerit flagellatus. Hoc enim ipse de se, quod de illo ad diabolum Dominus dixit: Commovisti me adversus eum, ut affligerem illum frustra (Job. II, 3). Sed Eliu non credidit, cessante culpa, potuisse eum etiam pro gratia flagellari. Nesciebat enim flagellis ejus non deleri vitium, sed meritum augeri, et pro eo quod sine delicto se dixerat flagellatum, hac eum sententia increpat, dicens: Hoc est ergo in quo non es justificatus. Habent enim hoc arrogantes proprium, ut plus arguere appetant quam consolari; et quaeque hominibus evenire cognoscunt, ex solis evenisse iniquitatibus arbitrentur. Nesciunt quippe occulta judicia subtiliter quaerere, atque id quod non intelligunt humiliter perscrutari, quia eos saepe a secretis investigationibus judiciorum Dei ipsa scientiae suae elatio dejicit, dum extollit. 31. Obstaculum est veritatis tumor mentis. Verae scientiae effectus. Obstaculum namque veritatis est tumor mentis, quia dum inflat obnubilat. Qui et si quando scientiam videntur adipisci, quasi de quadam rerum cortice, et non de secretae dulcedinis medulla pascuntur; micantibusque ingeniis saepe exteriora tantummodo attingunt, sed interni gustum saporis ignorant, videlicet foris acuti, sed intus caeci sunt. Neque id de Deo sentiunt, quod dulce interius sapiat, sed quod excussum exterius sonet. Qui etsi secreta quaedam intelligendo percipiunt, eorum dulcedinem experiri non possunt; et si noverunt quomodo sunt, ignorant, ut dixi, 746 quomodo sapiunt. [Vet. XVII.] Et fit plerumque ut fortiter dicant, sed tamen juxta ea quae dicunt vivere nesciant. Unde bene quidam sapiens dixit: Mihi autem det Deus haec dicere ex sententia (Sap. VII, 15). Sententia quippe a sensu vocata est. Et recta quae intelligit, non ex sola scientia, sed etiam ex sententia dicere appetit, qui nequaquam tantummodo sciendo dicere, sed sentiendo desiderat experiri quod dicit. Sed mens arrogantium dictorum suorum sensum non penetrat, quia ab interno gustu, recto judicio in eos favores reliditur, quos foris amat. Vera autem scientia afficit, non extollit; nec superbientes quos repleverit, sed lamentantes facit. Qua quisque cum repletus fuerit, primo loco se scire appetit; et jam sui conscius, tanto per illam robustius sapit quanto se infirmum in illa verius recognoscit; atque ampliorem viam hujus scientiae ipsa ei humilitas aperit; dumque imbecillitatem suam conspicit, ipsa ei cognitio secretorum sublimium absconditos sinus pandit, qua cognitione pressus, subtilior redditur, quo ad occulta rapiatur. Eliu ergo in flagellis beati Job idcirco veracem rationem non invenit, quia eam quaerere humiliter nescit; et increpare potius quam consolari paratior, dicit: Hoc est ergo, in quo non es justificatus. 32. Superbi saepe alios increpando, mentiuntur. Notandum quoque est quod beatus Job in nervo pedem suum positum dixit, sed nequaquam mundum se hoc modo, quo ei objicitur, absque peccato, vel immaculatum, et sine iniquitate fuisse memoravit. Sed Eliu, dum cum austeritate studuit increpare quae dicta sunt, mentiens addidit quae dicta non sunt. Qui enim semper increpare appetunt, et nunquam fovere, multa plerumque increpando mentiuntur. Nam ut arguere docte videantur, fingunt nonnunquam quae redarguant; et cum ipsi equino more in cursum suae ostentationis inferveant, in subjectorum invectionibus ex fictis sibi iniquitatibus campum parant. Sciendum praeterea est, sicut et superius dixi (Num. 31), quod arrogantes viri inflatis suis sermonibus saepe fortia dicta permiscent, nec considerant aliquando quid vivant, sed pensant studiose quid doceant. Quorum nunc Eliu speciem tenet, qui non recte vivere appetit, sed docere. Quia ergo sciens sed arrogans loquitur, taceamus jam quid tumidum vivit, et audiamus quid solidum dicit.

Post tot itaque elationis verba, tandem scientiam suam ostendere inchoans, ait:

CAPUT XVIII.

VERS. 12. Respondebo tibi quod major sit Deus homine. 33. Quod a Deo nobis meliore patimur, justum credamus. Dicatur fortasse ab aliquo: Quis istud vel cum non audit ignorat? Sed nimirum haec sententia vilis creditur, si non ex ipsa intentionis suae radice pensetur. [Vet. XVIII.] Flagellato videlicet loquebatur, qui et percussionis verbera acceperat, et causas verberum nesciebat. Idcirco ergo intulit: Respondebo tibi quod major sit Deus homine, ut flagellatus homo considerans quia illo major est Deus, in omne quod patitur ejus judicio se postponat, quo se minorem esse non dubitat; et quod a meliore patitur, justum credat, etiam si ejusdem justitiae causas ignorat. Quisquis etiam pro peccato percutitur, nisi murmurando renitatur, eo ipso jam justus esse 747 inchoat, quo ferientis justitiam non accusat. Homo namque sub Deo est conditus, et ad conditionis ordinem redit, quando sibi aequitatem judicis sui, etiam quam non intelligit, anteponit. Bene ergo dicitur: Respondebo tibi quod major sit Deus homine, ut considerata potentia creatoris, deferveat tumor mentis per memoriam conditionis. Unde David propheta, cum percussionis pondere in excessum vocis erumpere cogeretur, ad considerationem conditionis suae se recolligens, ait: Obmutui, et non aperui os meum, quoniam tu fecisti me (Psal. XXXVIII, 3). Pensavit enim conditionis suae ordinem, et justitiam percussionis invenit, quia qui benigne eum qui non erat condidit, eum profecto qui erat non nisi juste percussit. Sequitur:

CAPUT XIX [Rec. XI].

VERS. 13, 14. Adversus eum contendis, quod non ad omnia verba responderit tibi. Semel loquetur Deus, et secundo idipsum non repetet. 34.

In Scriptura sacra quidquid scire nos decet, docet Deus. Afflicti cordis est proprium ut in omne quod appetit, et tamen rerum ordinem contrarium sentit, si possit fieri, cur ita, vel non ita sit, divinis sibi responderi vocibus velit, ut Deum de cuncta rerum controversia consulat, et responsionis ejus cognita ratione conquiescat. Eliu autem praevidens quod scripturam sacram Dominus conderet, ut in ea vel publicis vel occultis cunctorum quaestionibus responderet, ait: Adversus eum contendis, quod non ad omnia verba responderit tibi. Semel loquetur Deus, et secundo idipsum non repetet. Ac si diceret: Deus singulorum cordibus privatis vocibus non respondet, sed tale eloquium construit, per quod cunctorum quaestionibus satisfaciat. [Vet. XIX.] In scripturae quippe ejus eloquio causas nostras singuli si requirimus, invenimus, nec opus est ut in eo quod specialiter quisque tolerat responderi sibi divina voce specialiter quaerat. Ibi enim nobis omnibus in eo quod specialiter patimur communiter respondetur, ibi vita praecedentium fit forma sequentium. Ut enim unum e pluribus proferamus, ecce dum passione aliqua vel molestia carnis afficimur, scire fortasse occultas causas passionis ejusdem vel molestiae optamus, quatenus in eo quod patimur ex ipsa rerum scientia consolemur. Sed quia de specialibus tentationibus nostris nequaquam nobis singulis specialiter respondetur, ad Scripturam sacram recurrimus. Ibi videlicet invenimus quod Paulus carnis infirmitate tentatus audivit: Sufficit tibi gratia mea, nam virtus in infirmitate perficitur (II Cor. XII, 9). Quod idcirco illi in infirmitate propria dictum est, ne singillatim nobis omnibus diceretur. In Scriptura igitur sacra vocem Dei, afflicto Paulo, audivimus, ne cum fortasse affligimur, singuli audire eam privata consolatione quaereremus. Non ergo Dominus ad omnia 748 verba nobis respondet, quia semel loquetur, et secundo idipsum non repetet; id est, in his quae per Scripturam sacram ad patres nostros protulit, nos erudire curavit. Dicant itaque sanctae Ecclesiae doctores, dicant etiam arrogantes, cum in ea laborare quosdam pusillanimitate conspiciunt, quia nobis Deus ad verba omnia non respondet, quia semel loquetur Deus, et idipsum secundo non repetet; id est, cogitationibus vel tentationibus singulorum non jam passim per prophetarum voces, non per angelica officia satisfacit, quia in Scriptura sacra quidquid potest singulis evenire comprehendit, atque in illa per exempla praecedentium etiam vitam sequentium informare curavit. 35. Loqui Dei est Verbum genuisse. Quamvis quod ait: Semel loquetur Deus, et secundo idipsum non repetet, hoc intelligi subtilius potest, quod Pater unigenitum consubstantialem sibi Filium genuit. Loqui enim Dei est Verbum genuisse. Semel autem loqui Dei est Verbum aliud praeter unigenitum non habere. Unde et apte subditur: Et secundo idipsum non repetet, quia videlicet hoc ipsum Verbum, id est Filium, nonnisi unicum genuit. Quod autem non ait, Locutus est, sed loquetur, non videlicet tempus praeteritum, sed futurum ponens, liquet omnibus quia Deo nec praeteritum tempus congruit, nec futurum. Tanto ergo in eo quodlibet tempus ponitur libere, quanto nullum vere. Neque enim quodlibet libere dici poterat, si saltem unum proprie diceretur. Inde itaque dici in Deo tempus audacter quoslibet licet, unde in eo dici proprie nullum licet. Verbum namque Pater sine tempore genuit. 36. Hanc generationem mirari debemus, non scrutari. Et quis digne fari queat illam ineffabilem nativitatem, quod de aeterno natus est coaeternus, quod existens ante saecula genuit aequalem, quod gignente natus posterior non est? Quae videlicet nos mirari possumus, sed intueri minime valemus. Illius autem nativitatis vim jam mirari posse, aliquatenus videre est. Sed quomodo videmus quod nequaquam comprehendimus? Est autem quod de usu carnis trahere ad sensum spiritus debemus. Nam si quis in tenebris clausis oculis jaceat, atque ante eum subitum lucernae lumen erumpat, clausi ejus oculi ipso adventu luminis feriuntur, ut patescant. Cur ergo turbati sunt, si clausi nihil viderunt? Nec tamen aliquid perfectum fuit, quod videre clausi potuerunt. Nam si perfecte totum vidissent, cur aperti quaererent quod viderent? Sic itaque, sic sumus, cum de incomprehensibili nativitate intueri aliquid conamur. Eo ipso enim quo fulgoris admiratione percutitur animus, et quasi videt quod videri non valet, velut in tenebris positus, vim lucis oculis clausis videt. Quia vero 749 haec divinae naturae secreta admiratio non facile occupatis per terrena desideria mentibus innotescit, apte Dei locutio qualiter ad nos fiat insinuat, dicens:

CAPUT XX [Vet.

XX, Rec. XII]. VERS. 15. Per somnium in visione nocturna, quando irruit sopor super homines, et dormiunt in lectulo. 37. Vox Dei auditur quando tranquilla mente ab operibus saecularibus quiescitur. Quid est quod per somnium nobis locutio divinitatis innotescit, nisi quod Dei secreta non cognoscimus, si in terrenis desideriis vigilemus? In somnio enim exteriores sensus dormiunt, et interiora cernuntur. Si ergo interna contemplari volumus, ab externa implicatione dormiamus. Vox videlicet Dei quasi per somnium auditur, quando tranquilla mente ab hujus saeculi actione quiescitur, et in ipso mentis silentio divina praecepta pensantur. Cum enim ab externis actionibus mens sopitur, tunc plenius mandatorum Dei pondus agnoscitur. Tunc verba Dei mens vivacius penetrat, cum ad se admittere curarum saecularium tumultus recusat. Male autem homo vigilat, quando eum saecularium negotiorum aestus insolenter inquietat. Aurem quippe cordis terrenarum cogitationum turba dum perstrepit claudit, atque in secretario mentis, quanto minus curarum tumultuantium sonus compescitur, tanto amplius vox praesidentis judicis non auditur. Neque enim perfecte homo sufficit ad utraque divisus, sed dum sic interius erudiri appetit, ut tamen exterius implicetur, unde exterius auditum aperit, inde interius obsurdescit. Moyses admistus Aegyptiis quasi vigilabat, et idcirco vocem Domini in Aegypto positus non audiebat (Exod. II, 11, 12, seq.). Sed exstincto Aegyptio, postquam in desertum fugit, illic dum quadraginta annis deguit, quasi ab inquietis terrenorum desideriorum tumultibus obdormivit; atque idcirco divinam vocem percipere meruit, quia per supernam gratiam quanto magis ab appetendis exterioribus torpuit, tanto verius ad cognoscenda interiora vigilavit. Rursus Israelitici populi turbis praelatus, ut legis praecepta percipiat, in montem ducitur, atque ut interna penetret, ab externis tumultibus occultatur (Exod. XIX, 3). [Vet. XXI.] 38. Qui exterioribus ministeriis deserviunt, studiose ad cordis secreta refugiant. Unde et sancti viri qui exterioribus ministeriis deservire officii necessitate coguntur, studiose semper ad cordis secreta refugiunt; ibique cogitationis intimae cacumen ascendunt, et legem quasi in montibus percipiunt, dum, postpositis tumultibus actionum temporalium, in contemplationis suae vertice supernae voluntatis sententiam perscrutantur. Hinc est quod idem Moyses crebro de rebus dubiis ad tabernaculum redit, ibique secreto Dominum consulit, et quid certi decernat agnoscit. Relictis quippe turbis ad tabernaculum redire, est, postpositis exteriorum tumultibus, secretum mentis intrare. Ibi enim Dominus consulitur, et quod foris agendum est publice, intus silenter auditur. Hoc quotidie boni rectores faciunt, cum se res dubias discernere non posse cognoscunt, ad secretum mentis, velut ad quoddam tabernaculum revertuntur; divina lege perspecta, quasi coram posita arca, Dominum consulunt, et quod prius intus tacentes audiunt, hoc foris postmodum agentes innotescunt. Ut enim exterioribus officiis inoffense deserviant, ad secreta cordis recurrere incessabiliter curant; et sic vocem Dei quasi per somnium audiunt, dum in meditatione mentis 750 a carnalibus motibus abstrahuntur. Hinc est quod sponsa in Canticis canticorum sponsi vocem quasi per somnium audierat, quae dicebat: Ego dormio, et cor meum vigilat (Cant. V, 2). Ac si diceret: Dum exteriores sensus ab hujus vitae sollicitudinibus sopio, vacante mente vivacius interna cognosco. Foris dormio, sed intus cor vigilat, quia dum exteriora quasi non sentio, interiora solerter apprehendo. 39. Nonnisi obscure et quasi visione nocturna, divina et interna contemplamur. Bene ergo Eliu ait quia per somnium loquitur Deus, atque apte subdidit, In visione nocturna. Nocturna enim visio apparere contemplatione mentis sub quibusdam imaginibus solet. In diurna autem luce certius cernimus, in nocturna vero visione cunctanter videmus. Et quia sancti omnes quandiu in hac vita sunt divinae naturae secreta quasi sub quadam imaginatione conspiciunt, quia videlicet necdum sicut sunt ea manifestius contemplantur, bene Eliu, postquam dixit Deum nobis per somnium loqui, subdit: In visione nocturna. Nox quippe est vita praesens, in qua quandiu sumus, per hoc quod interna conspicimus, sub incerta imaginatione caligamus. Propheta namque ad videndum Dominum quadam se premi caligine sentiebat, dicens: Anima mea desideravit te in nocte (Isai. XXVI, 9). Ac si diceret: In hac obscuritate vitae praesentis videre te appeto, sed adhuc infirmitatis nubilo circumscribor. David quoque hujus noctis caliginem vitans, claritatem veri luminis praestolatus ait: Mane astabo tibi, et videbo (Psal. V, 5). Adhuc ergo in nocte minus se videre conspicit, qui ad videndum Deum futurum mane concupiscit. Quia vero, ut diximus, ab exteriori actione cessare dormire est, bene Eliu subdit: Quando irruit sopor super homines. Quia autem sancti viri cum exteriori actioni non deserviunt, intra mentis cubilia conquiescunt, apte subjungit: Et dormiunt in lectulo. Sanctis enim viris dormire in lectulo est intra mentis suae cubile quiescere. Unde scriptum est: Exsultabunt sancti in gloria, laetabuntur in cubilibus suis (Psal. CXLIX, 5). Dicatur ergo, quod semel nobis loquitur Deus per somnium in visione nocturna, quando irruit sopor super homines, et dormiunt in lectulo, quia nimirum tunc secreta divinitatis agnoscimus, cum ab hujus mundi tumultuosa concupiscentia intra mentis nostrae cubilia segregamur. Quia vero, ut saepe jam diximus, aurem cordis tumultus saecularium negotiorum claudit, et quies secretae considerationis aperit, apte subjungit: VERS. 16. Tunc aperit aures virorum, et erudiens eos instruit disciplina. 40. Qui ab exterioribus operibus cessant, ad compunctionem erudiuntur. Cum enim ab exterioribus actionibus sopiuntur, aperta aure interni examinis causas audiunt. Qui dum subtiliter vel flagella publica, vel judicia occulta considerant, semetipsos afficere flendo non cessant. [Rec. XIII.] Unde bene dictum est. Et erudiens eos instruit disciplina, quia consideranti menti, et sese per poenitentiam laceranti, quasi quaedam plagae percussionis sunt lamenta compunctionis. Unde etiam Salomon recte vim percussionis utriusque conjungens ait: Livor vulneris abstergit mala, et plagae in secretioribus ventris (Prov. XX, 30). Per livorem quippe vulneris, disciplinam insinuat corporeae percussionis. Plagae vero in secretioribus ventris sunt interna mentis vulnera, quae per compunctionem fiunt. 751 Sicut enim venter cibis repletus extenditur, ita mens pravis cogitationibus dilatata sublevatur. Abstergunt igitur mala, et livor vulneris, et plagae in secretioribus ventris, quia et disciplina exterior culpas diluit, et extensam mentem compunctio poenitentiae ultione transfigit. Sed hoc inter se utraque haec differunt, quod plagae percussionum dolent, lamenta compunctionum sapiunt. Illae affligentes cruciant, ista reficiunt, dum affligunt. Per illas in afflictione moeror est, per haec in moerore laetitia. Quia tamen ipsa compunctio mentem lacerat, eamdem compunctionem non incongrue disciplinam vocat. 41. Quatuor modis justi in compunctione afficiuntur; quod exemplo Pauli ostenditur et Davidis. Quatuor quippe sunt qualitates quibus justi viri anima in compunctione vehementer afficitur, cum aut malorum suorum reminiscitur, considerans ubi fuit; aut judiciorum Dei sententiam metuens, et secum quaerens, cogitat ubi erit; aut cum mala vitae praesentis solerter attendens, moerens considerat ubi est, aut cum bona supernae patriae contemplatur, quae quia necdum adipiscitur, lugens conspicit ubi non est. Malorum suorum Paulus meminerat, et ex eis se in quibus fuerat affligebat, cum diceret: Non sum dignus vocari apostolus, quia persecutus sum Ecclesiam Dei (I Cor. XV, 9). Rursum divinum judicium subtiliter pensans, in futuro male esse metuebat, dicens: Castigo corpus meum, et servituti subjicio, ne forte aliis praedicans, ipse reprobus efficiar (I Cor. IX, 27). Rursus mala praesentis vitae pensabat, cum diceret: Dum sumus in hoc corpore, peregrinamur a Domino (II Cor. V, 6). Et: Video aliam legem in membris meis repugnantem legi mentis meae, et captivum me ducentem in lege peccati, quae est in membris meis. Infelix ego homo, quis me liberabit de corpore mortis hujus (Rom. VII, 23). Et rursum bona aeternae patriae considerabat, dicens: Videmus nunc per speculum in aenigmate; tunc autem facie ad faciem. Nunc cognosco ex parte, tunc autem cognoscam, sicut et cognitus sum (I Cor. XIII, 12). Atque iterum: Scimus quoniam si terrestris domus nostra hujus habitationis dissolvatur, quod aedificationem ex Deo habemus, domum manufactam, aeternam in coelis (II Cor. V, 1). Cujus domus bona intuens, Ephesiis dicit: Ut sciatis quae sit spes vocationis ejus, et quae divitiae gloriae haereditatis ejus in sanctis, et quae sit supereminens magnitudo virtutis ejus in nos, qui credidimus (Ephes. II, 18). Mala vitae praesentis beatus Job considerans, ait: Tentatio est vita humana super terram (Job. VI, 1). Unde David quoque, ait: Universa vanitas omnis homo vivens (Psal. XXXVIII, 6). Et quanquam in imagine Dei ambulet homo, tamen vane conturbabitur. Qui rursum aeternam patriam contemplatus, et haec mala pensans in quibus erat, atque illa bona considerans in quibus adhuc non erat, ait: Heu me! quia incolatus meus prolongatus est (Psal. CXIX 5). Et, Ego dixi in pavore meo: projectus sum a vultu oculorum tuorum (Psal. XXX, 23). Sublevatus in exstasi, quod nostri interpretes pavorem proprie vocaverunt, a vultu oculorum Dei vidit se esse projectum. Post interni quippe luminis visionem, quae in ejus anima per contemplationis gratiam radio claritatis emicuit, ad semetipsum rediit; et cognitione percepta, vel quibus illic bonis deesset, vel quibus malis 752 hic adesset, invenit. Neque enim quis praesentis vitae mala sicut sunt conspicere praevalet, si bona aeternae patriae per contemplationis gustum contingere necdum valet. Unde et a vultu oculorum Dei projectum se esse cognovit. Sublevatus quippe vidit quod de se hic videre non posse ad se relapsus ingemuit. 42. Compunctionis effectus in perfectis. Perfectam scilicet animam ista compunctio afficere familiarius solet, qua omnes imaginationes corporeas insolenter sibi obviantes discutit, et cordis oculum figere in ipso radio incircumscriptae lucis intendit. Has quippe figurarum corporalium species ad se intus ex infirmitate corporis traxit. Sed perfecte compuncta hic summopere invigilat, ne cum veritatem quaerit, eam imaginatio circumscriptae visionis illudat, cunctasque sibi obviantes imagines respuit. Quia enim per illas infra se lapsa est, sine illis super se ire conatur; et postquam per multa indecenter sparsa est, in unum se colligere nititur, ut si magna vi amoris praevalet, esse unum atque incorporeum contempletur. 43. Contemplationis sapor non nisi raptim mentem afficit. Hinc pii gemitus, delectationis tamen expertes. Unde aliquando ad quamdam inusitatam dulcedinem interni saporis admittitur, ac raptim aliquo modo ardenti spiritu afflata renovatur; tantoque magis inhiat, quanto magis quod amet degustat. Atque hoc intra se appetit quod sibi dulce sapere intrinsecus sentit, quia videlicet ejus amore dulcedinis sibi coram se viluit; et postquam hanc, utcumque percipere potuit, quid sine illa dudum fuisset invenit. Cui inhaerere conatur, sed ab ejus fortitudine sua adhuc infirmitate repellitur; et quia ejus munditiam contemplare non valet, flere dulce habet, sibique ad se cadenti infirmitatis suae lacrymas sternere. Neque enim mentis oculum potest in id quod intra se raptim conspexerit figere, quia ipso vetustatis suae usu deorsum ire compellitur. Inter haec anhelat, aestuat, super se ire conatur, sed ad familiares tenebras suas victa fatigatione relabitur. Quia ergo sic affecta anima contra semetipsam grave certamen tolerat semetipsam, et quia omnis haec de nobis controversia, cum nos afficit, quamvis delectatione permista, non modicum dolorem parit, Eliu, postquam dixit Deum nobis per somnium loqui, et locutione ejus nostras aures aperiri, non immerito eamdem apertionem aurium disciplinam vocat, quia eo magis nos afficiendo conterit, quo magis ad nos per occultam ejus inspirationis gratiam internae intelligentiae sonus erumpit. Neque enim fleret extrinsecus quisque quod est, si non intrinsecus potuisset sentire quod nondum est. Namque cum nosmetipsos inspicimus bene conditos, sed ad persuasionem diabolicam pestifera consensione deceptos, in nobismetipsis attendimus aliud esse quod fecimus, aliud quod facti sumus; conditione nos integros, sed culpa vitiatos. Proinde compuncti appetimus vitare quod fecimus, ut ad id quod facti fuimus reformemur. Unde et apte sequitur:

CAPUT XXII [Al. XXII].

VERS. 17. Ut avertat hominem ab his quae fecit, et liberet eum de superbia. 44. Compunctione avertimur a peccatis prius perpetratis, et a superbia liberamur. Quid enim homo de seipso nisi peccatum fecit? 753 Et scriptum est: Initium omnis peccati superbia (Eccl. X, 15). Bene ergo dicitur quia homo cum ab his quae fecit avertitur de superbia liberatur. Contra conditorem quippe superbire est praecepta ejus peccando transcendere, quia quasi a se jugum dominationis ejus excutit, cui per obedientiam subesse contemnit. At contra qui id quod fecit vitare appetit, id quod a Deo factus est recognoscit, et ad conditionis suae ordinem humiliter redit, dum sua opera fugiens, talem se qualis a Deo factus est diligit. Quia vero per hanc intelligentiam gloria sempiterna recipitur, supplicia aeterna vitantur, apte subjungitur:

CAPUT XXIII [Rec. XIV].

VERS. 18. Eruens animam ejus de corruptione, et vitam illius, ut non transeat in gladium. 45. Sic eruitur anima a corruptione et a divini judicii gladio. Omnis quippe peccator ab hac corruptione vitiorum illuc ad gladium compellitur transire poenarum, ut unde hic inique delectatus est, inde illic juste crucietur. Notandum est ergo quod Deus nobis per somnium loquens, prius nos a corruptione, et postmodum a gladio liberat, quia nimirum illius vitam illic eripit ab ultione supplicii, cujus hic mentem subrahit a delectatione peccati. Neque enim illic habet quod formidare debeat de gladio sententiae, quem hic post emendationem suam pollutio non corruperit culpae. Bene ergo dicitur: Eruens animam ejus de corruptione, et vitam illius, ut non transeat in gladium. De corruptione namque ad gladium transire est post peracta vitia ad toleranda supplicia pervenire. Sequitur:

CAPUT XXIV [Vet.

XXIII, Rec. XV]. VERS. 19. Increpat quoque per dolorem in lectulo, et omnia ossa ejus marcescere facit. 46. In praesenti vita, omnis quam nobis paramus requies tentationibus turbatur. In quolibet secessu vivere sine tentationibus non possumus. In Scriptura sacra lectus, sive grabatus, seu stratum, aliquando voluptas carnis, aliquando repausatio in bonis operibus, aliquando requies temporalis accipitur. Quid est enim quod in Evangelio sanato cuidam Dominus dicit: Surge, tolle grabatum tuum, et vade in domum tuam (Joan. V, 8), nisi quod per grabatum voluptas corporis designatur? Et jubetur utique ut hoc sanus portet, ubi infirmus jacuerat, quia nimirum omnis qui adhuc vitiis delectatur, infirmus jacet in voluptatibus carnis. Sed sanatus hoc portat ubi infirmus jacuerat, quia divino adjutorio ereptus a vitiis, ejusdem carnis contumelias postmodum tolerat, in cujus prius desideriis requiescebat. Rursum per lectum vel stratum repausatio in bonis operibus designatur. Unde in apostolorum Actibus Petrus apostolus dicit: Aenea, sanet te Dominus Jesus Christus; surge, et sterne tibi (Act, IX, 34). Quid est dicere, Surge, nisi, mala quae perpetrasti, derelinque? Et quid est dicere, Sterne tibi, nisi, mercedis causas in quibus requiescere debeas operare? ut et deserat surgendo quae fecit, et inveniat sternendo quod fecerit. Quod utrumque Propheta breviter comprehendit, dicens: Declina a malo, et fac bonum (Psal. XXXVI, 27). Declinare quippe a malo est ab eo quo jacuit surgere; bonum vero facere, est mercedis opera, in quibus requiescere debeat, praeparare. Qui enim declinat a malo, sed bona adhuc non facit, surrexit quidem ab eo quo jacuit, sed ubi requiescere debeat, nondum stravit. Et rursum lectus vel stratum requies temporalis accipitur, sicut scriptum est: Universum stratum ejus versasti in infirmitate ejus 754 (Ps. XL, 4). Cum enim quisque curis saecularibus fatigatus deserere per divinam gratiam hujus mundi itinera laboriosa compungitur, cogitare solet quomodo praesentis vitae desideria fugiat, et ab ejus laboribus requiescat, sibique mox desideratae quietis ordinem quaerit, et velut quoddam stratum, sic a cunctis laboribus cessationis locum invenire concupiscit. Sed quia in hac vita adhuc homo positus, in cujuslibet ordinis loco, in cujuslibet secreti secessu vivere sine tentationibus nullatenus potest, plerumque in id quod ad requiem construitur, major dolor tentationis invenitur. Unde recte per Prophetam dicitur: Universum stratum ejus versasti in infirmitate ejus. Ac si diceret: Omne quod hic sibi paravit ad requiem, hoc ei mutasti occulto judicio ad perturbationem. Quod pio quidem Dei consilio agitur, ut hujus peregrinationis tempore electorum vita turbetur. [Vet. XXIV.] 47. Hic optimo Dei consilio affligimur, ne viam pro patria diligamus. Via quippe est vita praesens, qua ad patriam tendimus; et idcirco hic occulto judicio frequenti perturbatione conterimur, ne viam pro patria diligamus. Solent etenim nonnulli viatores, cum amoena fortasse in itinere prata conspiciunt, pergendi moras innectere, et a coepti itineris rectitudine declinare, eorumque gressus tardat pulchritudo itineris, dum delectat. Electis ergo suis ad se pergentibus Dominus hujus mundi iter asperum facit, ne dum quisque vitae praesentis requie, quasi amoenitate viae pascitur, magis eum diu pergere, quam citius pervenire delectet; ne, dum oblectatur in via, obliviscatur quod desiderabat in patria. Quia ergo in hac vita omnis nostra, quam fortasse paravimus, requies turbatur, recte dicitur: Increpat quoque per dolorem in lectulo, id est, in praesentis vitae requie vel tentationis nos stimulis vel flagelli afflictione conturbat. Nam saepe humanus animus quamlibet brevi tempore sine tentatione in bonis studiis fuerit, mox de eisdem studiis in quibus quiescendo se exerit, de ipsis virtutibus quibus multiplicari nititur, dum proficere se sentit, elevatur. Unde pio rectoris nostri moderamine, impulsu tentationis afficitur, ut in eo ipsa profectus sui elatio comprimatur. Quapropter postquam dixit: Increpat quoque per dolorem in lectulo, apte subjunxit [Rec. XVI]: Et omnia ossa ejus marcescere facit. 48. Per tentationem cognoscimus, quid ex viribus propriis, quid divino ex munere possimus. Ossa in Scriptura sacra virtutes accipimus, sicut scriptum est. Dominus custodit omnia ossa eorum, unum ex eis non conteretur (Psal. XXXIII, 21). Quod utique non de ossibus corporis, sed de viribus dicitur mentis. Nam certe novimus quod et multorum martyrum corporaliter ossa confracta sunt, et persecutores Domini, latronis illius, cui dictum est, Hodie mecum eris in paradiso (Luc. XXIII, 43), sicut latronis alterius in cruce crura fregerunt. Cum ergo increpat per dolorem in lectulo, omnia ossa facit marcescere, quia cum in ea requie quam nobis ab hoc saeculo praeparamus flagello tentationis afficimur, qui fortasse de virtutibus nostris inflari potuimus, cognitae infirmitatis nostrae taedio extenuamur. Cum enim sicut cupimus ad Deum proficimus, si profectum nostrum tentatio nulla pulsaret, alicujus nos fortitudinis esse crederemus. Sed quia nobiscum superna dispensatione agitur, ut infirmitatis nostrae quia proficientes obliviscimur, 755 tentati recolamus, et in profectu nostro quid de divino munere, et in tentatione cognoscimus quid de propriis viribus sumus. Quae nos profecto tentatio ad plenum raperet, nisi protectio superna servaret. Sed pulsat, nec frangit; impellit, nec movet; quatit, nec dejicit, ut de nostra infirmitate sentiamus esse quod quatimur, et de divino munere esse quod stamus. Et quia saepe anima alicujus boni sibi conscia, cum virtutes suas sibi ad memoriam revocat, quadam delectatione pascitur, et quasi gratulatione propriae plenitudinis impinguatur, bene dicitur quod tentatione pulsante marcescunt ossa, quia dum propria infirmitas tentatione interrogante cognoscitur, omnis illa nostrarum virium, velut pinguis viridisque gratulatio, subito anxietatis moerore siccatur, et qui nos alicujus esse momenti bona nostra pensando credidimus, pulsati paulo amplius perituros nos jam jamque formidamus. Tunc omne bonorum nostrorum gaudium vertitur in pavorem poenarum. Tunc iniquos nos esse deprehendimus, qui sanctos paulo ante credebamus. Tabescit mens, stupent oculi, omne quod prius prosperum arridebat evanescit; lux ipsa fastidio est, et solae se in animo tenebrae moeroris effundunt; nihil quod delectet aspicitur, triste est quidquid occurrit. Unde et apte sequitur:

CAPUT XXV [Rec. XVII].

VERS. 20.Abominabilis ei fit in vita sua panis, et animae illius cibus ante desiderabilis. 49. Per panem in Scriptura sacra multa significantur: 1o Christus; 2o gratia; 3o sacra doctrina; 4o haereticorum praedicatio; 5o subsidium vitae praesentis; 6o jucunditas humanae delectationis. Ac si aperte dicat: Afflicta mens sibi in amaritudinem verti considerat quidquid se antea blande libenterque satiabat. [Vet. XXV.] In Scriptura enim sacra panis aliquando ipse Dominus, aliquando spiritualis gratia, aliquando divinae doctrinae eruditio, aliquando haereticorum praedicatio, aliquando subsidium vitae praesentis, aliquando jucunditas humanae delectationis accipitur. In pane Dominus signatur, sicut ipse in Evangelio dicit: Ego sum panis vivus, qui de coelo descendi (Joan. VI, 51). Rursum per panem gratia doni spiritalis accipitur, sicut per prophetam dicitur: Qui obturat aures suas, ne audiat sanguinem, et claudit oculos suos, ne videat malum, iste in excelsis habitabit: munimenta saxorum sublimitas ejus, panis ei datus est (Isai. XXXIII, 15). Quid est enim obturare aures suas, ne audiat sanguinem, nisi peccatis suadentibus, quae de sanguine et carne nascuntur, non praebere consensum? Et quid est, ne malum videat, oculos claudere, nisi omne quod rectitudini adversum est non approbare? Iste in excelsis habitabit, quia quamvis eum adhuc caro in inferioribus retinet, mentem jam in sublimibus fixit. Munimenta saxorum sublimitas ejus, quia qui abjecta desideria terrenae conversationis calcat, ad supernam patriam per praecedentium patrum exempla se sublevat. Et quia per contemplationis donum gratia spiritali satiatur, apte subjungitur: Panis ei datus est, id est refectionem spiritalis gratiae percipit, quia se a bonis infimis coelestia sperando suspendit. Hinc etiam de sancta Ecclesia per David Dominus dicit: Pauperes ejus saturabo panibus (Psal. CXXXI, 15), quia in illa mentes humilium positae spiritalium implentur refectione donorum. Rursum per panem divinae doctrinae eruditio 756 designatur, sicut per prophetam dicitur: Qui habitatis in terra Austri, cum panibus occurrite fugienti (Isai. XXI, 14). In terra quippe Austri habitant qui in sancta Ecclesia positi superni Spiritus charitate perflantur. Fugit autem qui hujus mundi mala evadere concupiscit. Qui ergo in terra Austri habitat, fugienti cum panibus occurrat, id est, is qui jam sancto Spiritu intra Ecclesiam plenus est eum qui mala sua evadere nititur eruditionis alloquio consoletur. Fugienti scilicet cum panibus occurrere est metuenti aeterna supplicia doctrinae sacrae escas offerre, et modo tumorem terrore comprimere, modo pavorem exhortatione refovere. Quia panis refectio Scripturae sacrae non inconvenienter accipitur, per eumdem prophetam Judaeis solam litteram servantibus dicitur: Quare appenditis argentum, et non in panibus (Isai. LV, 2)? Ac si diceret: Pensatis sacra eloquia, sed non in refectione, quia dum solam litterae speciem custoditis, de spiritali intelligentia pinguedinem internae refectionis amittitis. Unde illic apte subjungitur: Et laborem vestrum non in saturitate (Ibid.). [Vet. XXVI.] Rursum per panem haereticorum praedicatio designatur, sicut per Salomonem mulier haereticae ecclesiae typum gestans, et stultos convocans, dicit: Panes occultos libenter edite (Prov. IX, 17). Vel, sicut in nostra translatione scriptum est: Aquae furtivae dulciores sunt, et panis absconditus suavior. Sunt enim nonnullae haereses quae aperte metuunt praedicare quod sentiunt, et apud infirmorum mentes verba sua tanto magis condiunt, quanto quasi amplius reverenter abscondunt. Unde non immerito dicitur: Panes occultos libenter edite. Miseris enim cordibus occulta haereticorum verba eo magis sapiunt, quo cum reliquis communiter non habentur. Rursum per panem subsidium praesentis vitae accipitur, sicut Jacob ad Laban transiens, ait: Domine Deus, si dederis mihi panem ad manducandum, et vestem ad induendum (Genes. XXVIII, 20). Et sicut in Evangelio Dominus turbis se sequentibus dicit: Quaeritis me, non quia vidistis signa, sed quia manducastis ex panibus, et saturati estis (Joan. VI, 26). De septem enim panibus fuerant satiati. Et per eorum personam Dominus illos intra sanctam Ecclesiam detestatur, qui per sacros ordines ad Dominum propinquantes, non in eisdem ordinibus virtutum merita, sed subsidia vitae praesentis exquirunt; nec cogitant quid vivendo imitari debeant, sed quae compendia percipiendo satientur. Satiatos quippe de panibus Dominum sequi est de sancta Ecclesia temporalia alimenta sumpsisse. Et non pro signis est Dominum, sed pro panibus quaerere, ad religionis officium, non pro augendis virtutibus, sed pro requirendis subsidiis inhiare. Rursum per panem jucunditas humanae delectationis accipitur. Unde Jeremias propheta dum synagogae perditos mores defleret, dixit: Omnis populus ejus gemens et quaerens panem: dederunt pretiosa quaeque pro cibo ad refocillandam animam (Thren. I, 11). Gemens enim populus quaerit panem, dum prava hominum multitudo affligitur, quia non ad votum de praesentis vitae jucunditate satiatur. Sed et pretiosa quaeque pro cibo dat, quia virtutes mentis in appetitum delectationis transitoriae inclinat. Et refocillare animam 757 nititur, quia perversis suis desideriis satisfacere conatur. Unde bene mox ex voce illius electae multitudinis subdit: Vide, Domine, et considera quia facta sum vilis (Thren. I, 11). Vilis quippe plebs Dei efficitur, quando pravorum numero crescente, in eis non summa et coelestia, sed abjecta et terrena sectatur. [Vet. XXVII.] 50. Quidquid sapit, vi tentationis amarescit. Eliu itaque quid aliud panem quam praesentis vitae delectationem vocat? Qui postquam vim tentationis expressit, illico subdidit: Abominabilis ei fit in vita sua panis, et animae illius cibus ante desiderabilis, quia videlicet omne quod prius de ipsa prosperitate vivendi dulce sapiebat, postmodum per vim tentationis amarescit. Nonnunquam vero quidquid gaudii, quidquid virtutis favere videbatur, subito in pavore tentationis amittitur, et quasi evacuatus eisdem virtutibus tristis animus solo moerore possidetur. Cum enim paulo vehementius impulsu tentationis afficitur, quia exerere vim solitae fortitudinis non valet, eam jam velut perditam dolet, seque ex se vacuum sentiens, infirmitatem suam ex ipsa sua inanitate cognoscit. Unde ab omni mox jucunditate quasi frangitur; et escas prioris laetitiae respuens, eo quem solum libenter appetit luctu satiatur. Unusquisque enim cum sibi bene vivendi prosperitas arridet hilarescit, atque ipsa hilaritas animum velut desiderabilis cibus reficit. Sed cum tentatione paulo amplius imminente pulsatur, a mente ejus per moeroris fastidium gaudium omne respuitur, quae prius eodem gaudio quasi satiata laetabatur. Quia igitur homo tentatus ab ore cordis omnem cibum respuit delectationis, nihilque eum aliud quam semetipsum et cognoscere et flere delectat, bene dicitur: Abominabilis ei fit in vita sua panis, et animae illius cibus ante desiderabilis. 51. Tentationum et flagellorum utilitas. Sed, sicut superius diximus (Num. 48), idcirco moderamine occultae dispensationis ita tentari permittimur, ut qui ex divino munere in virtute proficimus, etiam quid sumus ex propria infirmitate memoremur; et qui ex perceptione muneris opera virtutis inferimus, ex infirmitatis nostrae memoria sacrificium humilitatis offeramus. Aliquando autem post profectum virium non solum tentant vitia, sed etiam flagella castigant. Cum autem tentamur vitiis, pia dispensatione nobiscum agitur, ne his virtutibus quibus proficimus extollamur. Cum vero flagellis atterimur, malis increpantibus admonemur ne mundo blandiente seducamur. Vitia dum nos tentant, proficientes in nos virtutes humiliant; flagella dum tentant, surgentes in corde hujus mundi voluptates eradicant. Per tentantia vitia discimus quid de nobis simus, per ferientia flagella cognoscimus quid de hoc mundo fugiamus. Per illa restringimur, ne intrinsecus extollamur, per ista comprimimur, ne quid extrinsecus appetamus. In hac ergo vita dum sumus, et flagellis atteri, et aliquando tentari vitiis necesse est. Sive enim in laboribus flagellorum, seu in certamine vitiorum, non solum nobis nostra infirmitas innotescit, sed etiam in quanta virtute profecerimus agnoscimus. (Rec. XVIII.] Nemo quippe vires suas in pace cognoscit. Si enim bella desunt, 758 virtutum experimenta non prodeunt. Improvidus miles est, qui fortem se in pace gloriatur. [Vet. XXVIII.] Quia ergo saepe virium merita per flagellorum adversa patefiunt, apte Eliu subjungit, dicens:

CAPUT XXVI.

VERS. 21. Tabescet caro illius, et ossa quae tecta fuerant nudabuntur. 32. Nemo quantum profecerit, nisi inter adversa cognoscit. Cum enim flagellis prementibus omnis exterior voluptas atteritur, internae fortitudinis ossa nudantur. Quid autem hoc loco carnis nomine nisi ipsa delectatio carnalis accipitur? Vel quid per ossa nisi virtutes animae designantur? Tabescit ergo caro, et ossa nudantur, quia dum flagellis arguentibus carnalis delectatio extenuatur, ea quae dudum quasi sub carne latuerant virtutum fortia patefiunt. Nemo quippe quantum profecerit nisi inter adversa cognoscit. Cum enim adsunt prospera, cerni virium documenta non possunt. Unde alias scriptum est: In die mandavit Dominus misericordiam suam, et nocte declaravit (Psal. XLI, 9); quia videlicet unusquisque superni doni gratiam in tranquillitate quietis percipit, sed quantum perceperit, in adversitate perturbationis ostendit. Tabescat ergo caro, ut nudentur ossa. Feriamur paternis correptionibus, ut quantum proficimus agnoscamus. Flagellis enim

Domini pinguedo carnalis delectationis atteritur, sed virtutum nostrarum ossa patefiunt. Decus nostrum exterius ipsa hujus mundi adversitate foedatur, sed quid in nobis intrinsecus latebat ostenditur. Caesis namque apostolis denuntiatum est ne loquerentur ultra in nomine Jesu, sed magna exsultatione gavisi sunt, quod digni habiti sunt pro nomine Jesu contumeliam pati, suisque adversariis cum fiducia responderunt: Obedire oportet Deo magis quam hominibus (Act. V, 29). Ecce inter adversa validius fidei robur emicuit; ecce concisa est integritas carnium, sed patefacta sunt ossa virtutum. Hinc de eis per Sapientiam dicitur: Deus tentavit illos, et invenit illos dignos se (Sap. III, 5). Tentati sunt quippe adversitate plagarum, sed digni inventi sunt nudatione ossium. Nam quia haec eorum illa tentatio est quae ex flagellis adhibetur, illic aperte declaratur, dum sequitur: Tanquam aurum in fornace probavit illos, et quasi holocausti hostiam accepit illos (Sap. III, 6). Quia ergo uniuscujusque vires non nisi per adversa patefiunt, bene dicitur: Tabescet enim caro ejus, et ossa quae tecta fuerant nudabuntur. Tabescit enim caro, dum omne quod fluxum infirmumque est flagellis atteritur. Nudantur ossa, dum per haec in nobis etiam quod validum latet aperitur. Quia vero, sicut et superius dictum est, in ipsa adversitate tentationis non solum detegitur robur fortitudinis, sed etiam cognoscitur infirmitas humanitatis, et tentatus quisque ostendit quidem quantum de Deo profecerit, sed in ipsis flagellorum afflictionibus etiam quantum de semetipso sit infirmus agnoscit, quia non tantummodo nudantur ossa, sed etiam tabescit caro, apte subjungitur:

CAPUT XXVII [Rec. XIX].

VERS. 22.Appropinquabit corruptioni anima ejus, et vita illius mortiferis. 53. A corruptela, cum magis imminere videtur in tentatione, liberamur. Tentati enim uniuscujusque justi anima corruptioni appropinquare dicitur quando, ne eam virtus possit extollere, per flagella compellitur quid 759 sit ex propria infirmitate sentire. Corruptioni videlicet appropinquat, quia ex suis se viribus perditioni proximum non ignorat, ut hoc quod a perditione longe est, non sibi, sed Domino tribuat. Appropinquat vero mortiferis, quia ex infirmitate carnis proximum se peccatis mortem ferentibus respicit, a quibus divino munere tanto magis longe fit, quanto se eis proximum ex suis meritis deprehendit. Per contemplationem conditionis suae David corruptioni appropinquaverat, cum dicebat: Memento, Domine, quod pulvis sumus: homo sicut fenum dies ejus (Psal. CII, 15). Per contemplationem quoque infirmitatis propriae Paulus mortiferis appropinquaverat, cum dicebat: Video aliam legem in membris meis repugnantem legi mentis meae, et captivum me ducentem in lege peccati, quae est in membris meis. Infelix ego homo, quis me liberabit de corpore mortis hujus (Rom. VII, 23)? Corruptioni ergo et mortiferis appropinquare est, considerata infirmitate humanitatis suae, peccatorem se ex suis meritis cernere, atque apud se arrogantiam ex propriis viribus non habere. Quid enim sumus, si a conditoris nostri protectione deseramur? Quae nimirum protectio minus necessaria creditur, si semper habeatur. Sed utiliter plerumque subtrahitur, ut sibimetipsi homo quam sine illa nihil sit ostendatur. Manus igitur Dei aliquando nos nobis per adversa insinuat, quae etiam nescientes nos in prosperis portat. Qua destituti dum cadere incipimus, et tamen adjuti retinemur, et doctrina fit quod in lapsu trepidamus, et custodia quod in statu permanemus. 760 54. Nunquam de viribus nostris praesumendum. Nemo ergo se alicujus virtutis aestimet, etiam cum quid fortiter potest, quia si divina protectio deserat, ibi repente enerviter obruitur, ubi se valenter stare gloriabatur. Quid est enim quod vir Dei contra altare Samariae ad prophetandum directus praesente rege auctoritatem liberae vocis exercuit, ejusdemque regis extensum brachium in rigorem mirabiliter astrinxit, quod tamen mox misericorditer saluti restituit (III Reg. XIII, 4)? cujus in domo invitatus comedere noluit, quia ne in via comederet, prohibitionis dominicae praecepta servavit? Qui tamen in eadem via et seductus comedit, et pastus interiit. Qua in re quid subtili consideratione colligimus, quid, ut ita dixerim, formidando suspicamur, nisi quod forsitan apud semetipsum tacitus pro praeceptis dominicis regem se contempsisse gloriabatur? Unde ab interna mox soliditate quassatus est; et inde ei in opere culpa subrepsit, unde gloria in corde surrexit, ut prophetae falsi verbis deceptus disceret, quia nequaquam propriae fortitudinis fuerit, quod ad regis verba restitisset. Bene autem ex ejus ore mortis sententiam accepit, cujus seductione a vitae praecepto deviavit, ut inde poenam veraciter sumeret, unde culpam negligenter admisisset. Quia igitur unumquemque electum suum divina gratia tunc magis erudiendo custodit, cum quasi percutiens deserit, dicatur recte: Appropinquabit corruptioni anima ejus, et vita illius mortiferis, ut quo se suis viribus vicinum morti per adversa considerat, eo in cunctis quae fortiter egerit, ad divinae spei munimen fugiens solidius vivat.

LIBER VIGESIMUS QUARTUS.

Exponuntur undecim versus posteriores cap. XXXIII, et octodecim priores cap. XXXIV, praeclaraque de Christo mediatore, de contemplatione, de conversionis ordine, de pastorali officio docentur.

CAPUT PRIMUM.

1. Cuncti, etiam electi, tentationibus obnoxii sunt. Eliu vim supernae dispensationis insinuans, de electi uniuscujusque percussione intulit, dicens: Appropinquabit corruptioni anima ejus, et vita illius mortiferis. Et dum tentatum hominem demonstrat unum, in qua tentatione sit positum humanum genus ostendit universum; dumque narrat quid specialiter agatur in singulis, liquido intimat quid generaliter agatur in cunctis. Sic enim tentationem expressit quorumdam, proprie singulorum, ut possit intelligi et universaliter omnium. Cunctum quippe electorum genus in hac vita hujus taedio laboris afficitur. Unde et mox huic generali pestilentiae generale subintulit remedium medicinae, dicens:

CAPUT II.

CAP. XXXIII, VERS. 23, 24. Si fuerit pro eo angelus loquens unum de similibus, ut annuntiet hominis aequitatem, miserebitur ejus. [Rec. II.] 2. Christus Deus et homo pro hominibus Deum interpellat. Incarnationis oeconomia. Quis enim est iste angelus, nisi ille qui per prophetam dicitur: Magni consilii angelus (Is. IX, 6, sec. LXX)? Quia enim Graeca lingua evangelizare denuntiare dicitur, semetipsum nobis annuntians Dominus angelus vocatur. Et bene ait: Si fuerit pro eo angelus loquens, quia, sicut ait Apostolus, etiam interpellat pro nobis (Rom. VIII, 34). Sed quid pro nobis loquatur, audiamus: Unum de similibus. Mos medicinae est ut aliquando similia similibus, aliquando contraria contrariis curet. Nam saepe calida calidis, frigida frigidis; saepe autem frigida calidis, calida frigidis sanare consuevit. Veniens ergo ad nos desuper medicus noster, tantisque nos inveniens languoribus pressos, quiddam nobis simile, et quiddam contrarium apposuit. Ad homines quippe homo venit, sed ad peccatores justus. Concordavit nobis veritate naturae, sed discrepavit a nobis vigore justitiae. Vitiosus enim homo corrigi non poterat nisi per Deum. Videri autem debuit qui corrigebat, ut praebendo imitationis formam, anteactae malitiae mutarent vitam. Sed videri ab homine non poterat Deus; ergo homo factus est, ut videri potuisset. [Vet. II.] Justus igitur atque invisibilis Deus, apparuit 761 similis nobis homo visibilis, ut dum videtur ex simili, curaret ex justo; et dum veritate generis concordat conditioni, virtute artis obviaret aegritudini. 3. Dominus in carne veniens, nec culpam ex vitio, nec poenam ex necessitate suscepit. Quia ergo in carne veniens Dominus, non culpam nostram ex vitio, non poenam ex necessitate suscepit (nulla enim labe peccati pollutus, reatus nostri teneri conditione non potuit, atque ideo mortem nostram omni necessitate calcata, cum voluit, sponte suscepit), recte dicitur quod pro tentato homine iste angelus unum de similibus loquitur, quia nec ita natus ut reliqui, nec ita mortuus, nec ita resuscitatus. Non enim cooperante coitu, sed Spiritu sancto superveniente conceptus est (Luc. I, 33). Natus autem materna viscera et fecunda exhibuit, et incorrupta servavit. Rursum nos omnes cum nolumus morimur, quia ad solvendae poenae debitum culpae nostrae conditione coarctamur; ille autem, quia nulli admistus est culpae, nulli ex necessitate succubuit poenae. Sed quia culpam nostram dominando subdidit, poenam nostram miserando suscepit, sicut ipse ait: Potestatem habeo ponendi animam meam, et potestatem habeo iterum sumendi eam (Joan. X, 18). Qui etiam praemisit: Nemo tollit eam a me, sed ego pono eam a meipso. Rursum non ut reliqui suscitatus est, quia nostra resurrectio in saeculi finem dilata est, illius vero die tertio celebrata. Et nos quidem per illum resurgimus, nam ipse per se. Neque enim qui Deus erat sicut nos ab alio ut resuscitari potuisset indigebat. In eo ergo ejus resurrectio distat a nostra, quod non per nosmetipsos resurgimus, sicut ipse. Pro eo enim quod simpliciter homines sumus, superiori adjutorio ut resurgere valeamus indigemus. Ille autem ejusdem resurrectionis vim cum Patre et Spiritu sancto Deus exhibuit, quam tamen solus in humanitate percepit. [Vet. III.] Quia igitur Dominus vere natus, vere mortuus, vere suscitatus, in omnibus tamen distat a nobis magnitudine potentiae, sed sola concordat nobis veritate naturae, bene dicitur, quia pro nobis angelus iste unum de similibus loquitur. Cum enim in cunctis operationibus suis immensa nos virtute transcendat, in uno tamen a nobis, id est in formae veritate non discrepat. 4. Pro nobis Patri loquitur, cum se nobis similem ostendit. Per hoc pro nobis Patri loquitur, per quod semetipsum nobis similem ostendit. Loqui quippe ejus, vel interpellare, est ipsum se pro hominibus hominem demonstrare. Et bene cum dixisset: Unum de similibus loquitur, illico adjunxit: Ut annuntiet hominis aequitatem. Quia nisi ille hominibus similis fieret, aequus homo ante Deum non appareret. Inde quippe annuntiat aequitatem nostram, unde suscipere dignatus est infirmitatem nostram. Omnes videlicet nos inimica illa persuasio in culpae contagio ab ipsa radice polluerat (Genes. III, 5), nullusque erat qui apud Deum pro peccatoribus loquens, a peccato liber appareret, quia ex eadem massa editos aeque cunctos par reatus involverat (Rom. V, 11). Proinde venit ad nos Unigenitus Patris, assumpsit ex nobis naturam, non perpetrans culpam. Sine peccato quippe 762 esse debuit, qui pro peccatoribus intervenire potuisset, quia nimirum alienae pollutionis contagia non tergeret, si propria sustineret. Bene ergo dicitur quia in eo quod similis nobis apparuit, aequitatem hominibus annuntiavit. Intercedens enim pro peccatoribus, semetipsum justum hominem qui pro aliis indulgentiam mereretur ostendit. Sequitur:

CAPUT III [Rec. III].

VERS. 24. Miserebitur ejus, et dicet: Libera eum, ut non descendat in corruptionem, inveni in quo ei propitier. 5. Solus Christus nos liberavit, Deumque propitiavit. Fortitudo ex humilitate. Mediator Dei et hominum, homo Christus Jesus in eo miseretur homini, quo formam hominis sumpsit (I Tim. II, 5; Philipp. II, 7); qua misericordia pro redempto homine dicit Patri: Libera eum, ut non descendat in corruptionem. Sicut jam supra diximus, dicere ejus est Libera hominem, naturam hominis assumendo liberam demonstrare. Ex ea quippe carne quam sumpsit, etiam hanc ostendit liberam quam redemit. Quae redempta videlicet caro nos sumus, qui cognitione nostri reatus astringimur. Sed Mediatoris tanti aequitate liberamur, sicut ipse ait: Si vos Filius liberaverit, vere liberi eritis (Joan. VIII, 36). Et bene pro hoc redempto homine dicitur: Non descendat in corruptionem. [Vet. IV.] Superius enim dictum fuerat: Appropinquabit corruptioni anima ejus; postmodum dicitur: Non descendat in corruptionem. Ac si diceret: Quia cognoscendo infirmitatem suam, esse se corruptioni proximum non ignorat, idcirco ad corruptionis interitum non descendat. Ad corruptionem enim juste descenderet, si suis viribus longe se a corruptione esse judicaret. Sed quia corruptioni appropinquavit humiliter, debet ab ea misericorditer liberari: ut eo contra impugnantia vitia fortis sit, quo se suis meritis agnoscit infirmum. Quisquis enim supra se extollitur, ipso elationis suae pondere gravatur; et eo se in infimis mergit, quo, in superbiae vitium proruens, ab eo qui vere excelsus est elongavit; atque inde magis ima appetit, unde se conjunctum summis aestimavit; sicut per prophetam extollenti se animae dicitur: Quo pulchrior es descende, et dormi cum incircumcisis [Ezech. XXXII, 19]. Omnis enim qui foeditatem infirmitatis suae considerare negligit, sed per elationis fastum virtutis suae gloriam attendit, unde pulchrior est, inde descendit, quia extollendo se de suis meritis, inde in ima interitus corruit, unde gloriosum se esse judicavit. Qui descendens cum incircumcisis dormit, quia in aeterna morte cum caeteris peccatoribus deficit. Quia ergo homo iste humiliter corruptioni se propinquum esse cognovit, bene de eo dicitur: Libera eum, ut non descendat in corruptionem, ut eo magis evadat poenam, quo oculos suos non advertit ad culpam. Quia vero nullus erat cujus meritis nobis Dominus propitiari debuisset; Unigenitus Patris, formam infirmitatis nostrae suscipiens, solus justus apparuit, ut pro peccatoribus intercederet (Phil. II, 7). 6. Nullus hominum coram Deo intercessor justus pro hominibus apparuit. Et bene pro redempto homine isto loquens angelus dicit: Inveni in quo propitier ei. Ac si aperte 763 Mediator Dei et hominum dicat: Quia nullus hominum fuit qui coram Deo intercessor justus pro hominibus appareret, memetipsum ad propitiandum hominibus hominem feci, et dum me hominem exhibui, in quo juste hominibus propitiarer inveni. Et quia infirmitatem suscipiens Dominus, dum poenam nostram moriendo toleravit, corruptionem nostram resurgendo mutavit, bene iste angelus mortalitatis nostrae flagella subjungit, eorumque miseretur, dicens:

CAPUT IV.

VERS. 25. Consumpta est caro ejus a suppliciis; revertatur ad dies adolescentiae suae. 7. A Deo recedentes, nihil nisi quo affligeremur, invenimus. In illo quippe primo homine a Deo recedente repulsi a paradisi gaudiis, in hanc mortalis vitae aerumnam cecidimus, et quam gravem culpam serpentis suasione commisimus (Genes. III, 23), poena nostrae ultionis sentimus. Huc enim lapsi, nihil extra Deum, nisi quo affligeremur, invenimus. Et quia per oculorum visum carnem secuti sumus, de ipsa carne, quam praeceptis Dei praeposuimus, flagellamur. In ipsa quippe quotidie gemitum, in ipsa cruciatum, in ipsa interitum patimur, ut hoc nobis mira dispositione Dominus in poenam verteret, per quod fecimus culpam; nec aliunde esset interim censura supplicii, nisi unde fuerat causa peccati, ut ejus carnis amaritudine homo erudiretur ad vitam, cujus oblectatione superbiae pervenit ad mortem. 8. A carnalis vitae suppliciis Christus nos eruit, et innovavit. Quia ergo innumeris humanum genus carnalis vitae suppliciis premebatur, sed Redemptore nostro veniente, et vitia corruptionis nostrae et tormenta deleta sunt, dicatur de redempto homine: [Vet. V, Rec. IV.] Consumpta est caro ejus a suppliciis; revertatur ad dies adolescentiae suae. Ac si diceret: Mortalitatis suae poena in quadam vetustatis suae senectute dejectus est; revertatur ad dies adolescentiae suae, id est prioris vitae integritate renovetur, ut non in eo remaneat quo lapsus est, sed ad hoc redemptus redeat ad quod percipiendum conditus fuit. Scriptura enim sacra saepe adolescentiam pro novitate vitae ponere consuevit. Unde venienti sponso dicitur: Adolescentulae dilexerunt te (Cant. I, 3); id est, electorum animae gratia baptismatis renovatae, quae non in vitae veteris usu deficiunt, sed novi hominis conversatione decorantur. Senectutem quippe veteris hominis inter vitia tabescentem deflebat ille qui ait: Inveteravi inter omnes inimicos meos (Psal. VI, 8). E contra alius gaudere in virtutibus admonens, dicit: Laetare, juvenis, in adolescentia tua (Eccle. XI, 9). Ac si diceret: Fortis quisque gaudeat in renovatione sua; id est, laetitiam suam non in vitae veteris voluptate, sed in conversationis novae virtute constituat. Quia vero ad hoc novitatis robur non nostris viribus, sed Redemptore interveniente revocamur, pro hoc flagellato homine deprecans angelus dicat: Revertatur ad dies adolescentiae suae. Et quia dum Redemptor noster Patrem pro nobis interpellat, nos quoque vitae pristinae torpore discusso, ad sitim orationis accendimur, apte de hoc homine redempto subjungitur:

CAPUT V.

VERS. 26. Deprecabitur Deum, et placabilis ei erit. 9. Christus pro nobis orans ad orandum nos accendit. Prius enim postulare angelum, et postmodum hominem dicit, quia nisi ante ipse Dominus 764 per incarnationem suam interpellans Patrem, vitam nostram peteret, nunquam se insensibilitas nostra ad postulanda ea quae aeterna sunt excitaret. Sed incarnationis ejus praecessit oratio, ut torporis nostri evigilatio subsequatur. [Vet. VI, Rec. V.] Quia vero post tentationes, saepe post immensas amaritudines menti nostrae in occulto gaudio lux veritatis erumpit; bene de hoc tentato homine et deprecante subjungitur:

CAPUT VI.

IBID. Et videbit faciem ejus in juvito. 10. Duplex compunctio, una tristitiae, altera laetitiae lacrymas eliciens. Ex hac ineffabile gaudium oritur. Superius dictum est (Lib. XXIII, n. 40 et seq.), quomodo Deus innotescendo afficit, nunc vero dicitur quomodo dum innotescit exhilarat. Aliter enim quisque compungitur, cum, interna intuens, malorum suorum pavore terretur; aliter vero compungitur, cum, gaudia superna conspiciens, spe quadam et securitate roboratur. Illa compunctio afficientes et tristes, haec vero laetas lacrymas movet. Jubilum namque dicitur, quando ineffabile gaudium mente concipitur, quod nec abscondi possit, nec sermonibus aperiri; et tamen quibusdam motibus proditur, quamvis nullis proprietatibus exprimatur. Unde David propheta intuens electorum animas tantum gaudium mente concipere quantum sermone non valent aperire, ait: Beatus populus, qui scit jubilationem (Psal. LXXXVIII, 16). Non enim ait, Qui loquitur; sed, Qui scit, quia sciri quidem jubilatio intellectu potest, sed dicto exprimi non potest. Sentitur per illam quippe, quod ultra sensum est. Et cum vix ad hoc contemplandum sufficiat conscientia sentientis, quomodo ad hoc exprimendum sufficiat lingua dicentis? Quia ergo cordibus nostris lux se veritatis insinuans, modo districtam justitiam praetendendo contristat, modo interna gaudia aperiendo laetificat; post tentationum amaritudines, post tribulationum luctus, apte subjungitur: Videbit faciem ejus in jubilo. 11. Ad illud non pervenitur nisi prius purgata igne tribulationis mente. Menti enim nostrae de consideratione caecitatis suae prius ignis tribulationis immittitur, ut omnis vitiorum aerugo concremetur; et tunc mundatis oculis cordis illa laetitia patriae coelestis aperitur, ut prius purgemus lugendo quod fecimus; et postmodum manifestius contemplemur per gaudia quod quaeramus. Prius a mentis acie exurente tristitia interposita malorum caligo detergitur, et tunc resplendente raptim coruscatione incircumscripti luminis illustratur. Quo utcunque conspecto, in gaudio cujusdam securitatis absorbetur, et quasi post defectum vitae praesentis ultra se rapta, in quadam novitate aliquo modo recreatur. Ibi mens ex immenso fonte infusione superni roris aspergitur; ibi non se sufficere ad id quod rapta est contemplatur, et veritatem sentiendo, videt quia quanta est ipsa veritas, non videt. Cui veritati tanto magis se longe existimat, quanto magis appropinquat, quia nisi illam utcunque conspiceret, nequaquam eam conspicere se non posse sentiret. 12. Animus in contemplatione luce divina reverberatus ad se relabitur. Contemplatio non est solida et permanens visio. Adnisus ergo animi, dum in illam intenditur, immensitatis ejus coruscante circumstantia reverberatur. Ipsa quippe cuncta implens, cuncta circumstat; et idcirco mens nostra nequaquam se ad comprehendendam incircumscriptam circumstantiam 765 dilatat, quia eam inopia suae circumscriptionis angustat. Unde et ad semetipsam citius labitur, et prospectis quasi quibusdam veritatis vestigiis, ad sua ima revocatur. Haec ipsa tamen per contemplationem facta non solida et permanens visio, sed, ut ita dixerim, quasi quaedam visionis imitatio, Dei facies dicitur. [Vet. VII.] Quia enim per faciem quemlibet agnoscimus, non immerito cognitionem Dei, faciem ejus vocamus. Unde Jacob postquam cum angelo luctatus est, ait: Vidi Dominum facie ad faciem (Genes. XXXII, 30). Ac si diceret: Cognovi Dominum, quia me cognoscere ipse dignatus est. Quam cognitionem plenissime fieri Paulus testatur in fine dicens: Tunc cognoscam sicut et cognitus sum (I Cor. XIII, 12). Quia ergo post laborum certamina, post tentationum fluctus, saepe in excessu anima suspenditur, ut cognitionem divinae praesentiae contempletur, quam tamen praesentiam et sentire possit, et explere non possit, recte post tot labores de hoc tentato homine dicitur: Videbit faciem ejus in jubilo. Quia vero unusquisque quanto amplius coelestia contemplatur, tanto magis a terrena operatione corrigitur, bene post gratiam contemplationis, justitiam subdit operationis, dicens:

CAPUT VII.

IBID. Et reddet homini justitiam suam. 13. Qua ratione justitia, nostra dicatur. Justitia nostra dicitur, non quae ex nostro nostra est, sed quae divina largitate fit nostra, sicut in Dominica oratione dicimus: Panem nostrum quotidianum da nobis hodie (Matth. VI, 11; Luc. XI, 3). Ecce et nostrum dicimus; et tamen, ut detur oramus. Noster quippe fit, cum accipitur, qui tamen Dei est, quia ab illo datur. Et Dei ergo est ex munere, et noster fit veraciter per acceptionem. Ita ergo hoc loco homini suam justitiam Dominus reddit, non quam ex semetipso habuit, sed quam conditus ut haberet accepit, et in qua lapsus perseverare noluit. Illam ergo justitiam reddet Deus homini, ad quam conditus fuit, ut inhaerere Deo libeat, ut minacem ejus sententiam pertimescat, ut serpentis callidi blandis jam promissionibus non credat. 14. Quotidie diabolus verba Dei de cordibus hominum conatur evellere. Quod enim in paradiso egit (Genes. III, 5), hoc quotidie antiquus hostis agere non desistit. Verba quippe Dei de cordibus hominum molitur evellere, atque in eis ficta promissionis suae blandimenta radicare; quotidie id quod Deus minatur levigat, et ad hoc credendum quod falsum promittit invitat. Falso enim pollicetur temporalia, ut mentibus hominum ea supplicia leviget quae Deus minatur aeterna. Nam cum praesentis vitae gloriam spondet, quid aliud dicit quam, Gustate, et eritis sicut dii? [Vet. VIII.] Ac si aperte dicat: Temporalem concupiscentiam tangite, et in hoc mundo sublimes apparete. Et cum timorem divinae sententiae amovere conatur, quid aliud loquitur quam id quod primis hominibus dixit: Cur praecepit vobis Deus, ut non comederetis de omni ligno paradisi (Genes. III, 1)? Sed quia divino munere redemptus homo justitiam recepit, quam dudum conditus amisit, robustiorem se jam contra blandimenta callidae persuasionis exercet, quia experimento didicit quantum obediens esse debeat praecepto. Et quem tunc culpa duxit ad poenam, nunc poena sua restringit a culpa, ut tanto magis delinquere metuat, quanto cogente supplicio et ipse jam quod perpetravit accusat. Unde et sequitur:

CAPUT VIII [Rec. VI].

VERS. 27 Respiciet homines, et dicet: Peccavi. 766 15. Qui sanctorum Patrum exempla respicit, peccatorem se intelligit, quod justitiae est initium. Se peccatorem non cognosceret, si justitiam non haberet. Nemo quippe tortitudinem suam, nisi cum rectus esse coeperit, deprehendit. Nam qui omnino perversus est, neque hoc potest videre quod est. Qui vero peccatorem se intelligit, jam ex parte aliqua justus esse inchoavit, atque id quod non justus fecerat, ex eo quod justus est accusat. Qua accusatione sua Deo inhaerere inchoat, dum rectum contra se judicium proferens, hoc in se quod illi sentit displicere condemnat. Recepta ergo justitia sua dicit homo iste: Peccavi. Et notandum quod praemittitur: Respicit homines; et tunc deinde subjungitur: Et dicet, Peccavi. Ideo enim nonnulli peccasse se nesciunt, quia homines non attendunt. Nam si considerarent homines, citius agnoscerent quantum peccando infra homines cecidissent. Et quamvis Scriptura sacra aliquando homines ponere soleat humana sapientes, sicut ait Apostolus: Cum enim sit inter vos zelus et contentio, nonne carnales estis (I Cor. III, 3)? et paulo post subjicit, dicens: Nonne homines estis? nonnunquam tamen homines dicit eos quos a bestiis ratio distinguit, id est quos non atteri bestiali passionum motu demonstrat. Quibus per prophetam Dominus dicit: Vos autem greges pascuae meae homines estis (Ezech.

XXXIV, 31), quia illos nimirum Dominus pascit, quos voluptas carnis jumentorum more non afficit. At contra hi qui carnali affectioni succumbunt, non jam homines, sed jumenta nominantur, sicut de quibusdam in peccato suo morientibus per prophetam dicitur: Computruerunt jumenta in stercore suo (Joel. I, 17). Jumenta quippe in stercore suo computrescere est carnales homines in fetore luxuriae vitam finire. Non enim esse homines, sed jumenta declarantur, de quibus per prophetam dicitur: Unusquisque ad uxorem proximi sui hinniebat (Jerem. V, 8). Et de quibus propheta alius dicit: Ut carnes asinorum, carnes eorum; et fluxus equorum, fluxus eorum (Ezech. XXIII, 20). Unde et per David dicitur: Homo cum in honore esset, non intellexit, comparatus est jumentis insipientibus, et similis factus est illis (Psal. XLVIII, 13). Cum ergo vocentur homines hi qui justitiae ratione suffulti sunt, et irrationabilia jumenta nominentur hi qui carnali delectationi deserviunt, recte de hoc poenitente dicitur: Respiciet homines, et dicet: Peccavi. [Vet. IX.] Ac si dicatur: Sanctorum virorum exempla conspicit, atque eorum comparatione se pensans, iniquum se esse deprehendit. Qui enim plenissime intelligere appetit qualis est, tales nimirum debet conspicere qualis non est ut ex bonorum forma metiatur, quanto ipse deserto bono deformis est. Ex his quippe quibus plenissime bona adsunt, perpendit recte, quae sibi minus sunt, atque in illorum pulchritudine conspicit foeditatem suam, quam in semetipso et potest perpeti, et sentire non potest. Lucem namque debet conspicere, qui vult de tenebris judicare, ut in illa videat quid de tenebris aestimet, per quas videre praepeditur. Peccator namque si incognita vita justorum semetipsum conspicit, peccatorem se nullatenus comprehendit. Videre enim se non potest, quia, fulgorem lucis nesciens, cum semetipsum conspicit, quid aliud quam tenebras attendit? Justorum ergo debemus vitam conspicere, ut subtiliter deprehendamus nostram. Illorum videlicet species, quasi quaedam formanobis imitanda proponitur. 767 16. Justi libri sunt, ex quibus judicabimur.Viva lectio est vita bonorum; unde et non immerito iidem justi in sacro eloquio libri nominantur, sicut scriptum est: Libri aperti sunt, et alius liber apertus est, qui est vitae, et judicati sunt mortui ex his quae scripta erant in libris (Apoc. XX, 12). Liber namque vitae est ipsa visio advenientis judicis. In quo quasi scriptum est omne mandatum, quia quisquis eum viderit, mox, teste conscientia, quidquid non fecit intelligit. Libri etiam aperti referuntur, quia justorum tunc vita conspicitur, in quibus mandata coelestia opere impressa cernuntur. Et judicati sunt mortui ex his quae scripta erant in libris, quia in ostensa vita justorum, quasi in expansione librorum legunt bonum quod agere ipsi noluerunt, atque ex eorum qui fecerunt comparatione damnantur. Ne ergo unusquisque tunc videns eos quod non fecit defleat, nunc in eis quod imitetur attendat. Quod quidem facere electi non cessant. Meliorum namque vitam considerant, et deterioris usus conversationem mutant. [Vet. X.] 17. Et lilia inter quae pasci debemus. Unde sponsi voce sanctae Ecclesiae in Canticis canticorum dicitur: Duo ubera tua sicut duo hinnuli capreae gemelli, qui pascuntur in liliis, donec aspiret dies, et inclinentur umbrae (Cant. IV, 5). Quae enim sunt duo ubera, nisi ex Judaea ac gentilitate veniens uterque populus, qui in sanctae Ecclesiae corpore per intentionem sapientiae arcano est cordis infixus? Ex quo populo hi qui electi sunt idcirco capreae hinnulis comparantur, quia per humilitatem quidem parvos sese ac peccatores intelligunt, sed eis per charitatem currentibus, si qua obstacula de impedimento temporalitatis obviant, transeunt, et datis contemplationis saltibus, ad superna conscendunt. Qui ut haec agant praecedentium sanctorum exempla conspiciunt. Unde et in liliis pasci referuntur. Quid enim per lilia, nisi illorum vita declaratur, qui veraciter dicunt: Christi bonus odor sumus Deo (II Cor. II, 15)? Electi ergo ut assequi summa praevaleant, conspecta odorifera et candida justorum vita, satiantur. Jam quidem videre Dominum sitiunt, jam de ejus contemplatione satiari charitatis aestibus inardescunt. Sed quia in hac vita positi necdum valent, per praecedentium interim Patrum exempla pascuntur. Unde et apte illic tempus de ipso liliorum pastu definitur, dum dicitur: Donec aspiret dies, et inclinentur umbrae. Tandiu quippe refici justorum exemplis indigemus, donec praesentis mortalitatis umbras, aeterno die aspirante, transeamus. Cum enim hujus temporalitatis umbra, transacta hac mortalitate, fuerit inclinata, quia ipsius diei internum lumen cernimus, nequaquam jam appetimus ut ad amorem ejus per aliorum exempla flagremus. Nunc autem quia necdum eum intueri possumus, summopere necesse est ut eorum qui illum perfecte secuti sunt conspectis actionibus incitemur. Intueamur ergo quam pulchra est agilitas sequentium, et videamus quam turpis sit nebetudo pigrorum. Statim namque, ut bene agentium gesta respicimus, nosmetipsos confusione intima ulciscente judicamus: mox verecundia mentem concutit, mox juste saeviens reatus addicit; et vehementer hoc etiam displicet, quod adhuc fortasse turpiter libet. 18. Justus templum Dei est, ex cujus conspectu de iniquitatibus nostris confundimur. Unde bene per Ezechielem dicitur: Fili hominis, 768 ostende domui Israel templum, ut confundantur ab iniquitatibus suis, et metiantur fabricam, et erubescant ex omnibus quae fecerunt (Ezech. XLIII, 10). Templum quippe Dei filiis Israel ad confusionem ostenditur, quando uniuscujusque justi anima, quam inspirando Deus inhabitat, quanta sanctitate fulgeat, ad confusionem suam peccatoribus demonstratur, ut in illa bonum quod negligunt videant, et in seipsis malum quod operantur erubescant. Metiri vero fabricam est pensare subtiliter justorum vitam. Sed dum metitur fabricam, necesse est ut ex cunctis quae fecimus erubescamus, quia bonorum vitam quanto subtilius pensando discutimus, tanto severius in nobis omnia inique gesta reprobamus. Bene autem prophetae dicitur ut ostendat templum. Quia enim justorum rectitudinem considerare peccator dissimulat, saltem hanc ex voce praedicantis agnoscat. Templum quippe peccatoribus ostendere est sponte sua considerare nolentibus rectorum opera narrare. Qui itaque, sicut diximus, perduci ad summa desiderant, semper necesse est ut meliorum provectibus intendant, quatenus tanto districtius in se culpas judicent, quanto in illis altius quod admirentur vident. 19. Ipsi justi ex aliorum sanctorum consideratione proficiunt. Sed quid ista de peccantibus dicimus, cum ipsos quoque operatores justitiae tanta provehi dispensatione videamus (I Cor. XII, 8, 9, 10 et 11)? Alius namque donum scientiae accipit, et tamen ad virtutem mirae abstinentiae non pertingit. Alius magna abstinentiae virtute accingitur, nec tamen in summa scientiae contemplatione dilatatur. Alius per prophetiae spiritum valet omnia ventura praenoscere, sed tamen per curationis gratiam non valet praesentis molestiae mala sublevare. Alius per curationis gratiam mala praesentis molestiae sublevat, sed tamen quia prophetiae spiritum non habet, quid sequatur ignorat. Alius indigentibus multa jam propria largiri potest, sed tamen injuste agentibus obviare libere non potest. Alius injuste agentibus audacter pro Deo obviat, sed tamen indigentibus quae habet tribuere omnia recusat. Alius jam et ab otioso se sermone restringens, linguae lasciviam superat, sed tamen adhuc insurgentes irae stimulos perfecte non calcat. Alius insurgentem iram jam perfecte edomat, sed tamen adhuc linguam in laetitiam relaxat. Quid est hoc, quod iste eo bono indiget quo alius pollet; et ille, cum multis polleat, abunde aliis bonum adesse considerat quod sibi deesse suspirat, nisi quod mira nobiscum dispensatione agitur, ut per hoc quod alter habet, et iste non habet, unus altero melior ostendatur, quatenus tanto ardentius ad humilitatem quisque proficiat, quanto ex bonis quae non habet inferiorem se habentibus pensat? Sicque fit ut dum ille in isto, atque hic in illo respicit quod admiretur, distincta bona et ab altitudine elationis reprimant, et ad studium profectus accendant. Magna namque sollicitudine ad curam nostrae meliorationis accingimur, quando id virtutis in aliis cernimus quod non habemus. Unde Ezechiel propheta, cum volantia animalia descripsisset, adjunxit: Et audivi post me vocem commotionis magnae: Benedicta gloria Domini de loco sancto suo, et vocem alarum animalium percutientium 769 alteram ad alteram (Ezech. III, 12). Quid namque alas animalium, nisi virtutes debemus sentire sanctorum? Qui dum terrena despiciunt, ad coelestia volando sublevantur. [Vet. XI.] Unde recte etiam per Isaiam dicitur: Qui confidunt in Domino, mutabunt fortitudinem, assument pennas ut aquilae (Isai. XL, 31). Volantia itaque animalia alis suis se vicissim feriunt, quia sanctorum mentes in eo quod superna appetunt, consideratis invicem alternis virtutibus excitantur. Ala enim sua me percutit, qui exemplo sanctitatis propriae me ad melius accendit. Et ala mea vicinum animal ferio, si aliquando alteri opus bonum quod imitetur ostendo. 20. Quod exemplo sanctorum apostolorum Pauli et Petri confirmatur. Sed quia sanctorum vitam significari istis animalibus diximus, libet in ipso volatu animalium oculos mentis attollere, et quanta vicissim alarum percussione se excitent, subtili consideratione pensare. Paulus namque, cum caeterorum sanctorum sollicitudinem in praedicatione robustius laborando transcenderet, ut ab elatione se premeret, et vires suas in humilitatis gremio nutriret, crudelitatis suae antiquae non immemor, apostolorum omnium innocentiam contemplatus, ait: Ego enim sum minimus apostolorum, qui non sum dignus vocari apostolus, quia persecutus sum Ecclesiam Dei (I Cor. XV, 9). Et tamen eorumdem omnium apostolorum primus, quasi accepti principatus oblitus, ac si minus ipse aliquid saperet, in Paulo sapientiam miratur, dicens: Sicut et charissimus frater noster Paulus secundum datam sibi sapientiam scripsit vobis, sicut et in omnibus epistolis, loquens in eis de his in quibus sunt quaedam difficilia intellectu (II Petr. III, 15). Ecce Paulus in apostolis miratur innocentiam, ecce apostolorum princeps miratur in Paulo sapientiam. [Vet. XII.] Quid est hoc, nisi quod sancti viri, dum virtutum consideratione vicissim sibi alios praeferunt, volantia animalia alarum percussione se tangunt, ut eo ad volatum se altius excitent, quo humilius alter in altero quod admiretur videt? Hinc itaque colligendum est quanta debemus sollicitudine meliorum vitam conspicere nos, qui in infimis jacemus, si et hi qui jam tanta sanctitate sublimes sunt, ut per humilitatis gressum ad majora proficiant, adhuc quaerunt in aliis quod imitantes admirentur. 21. Reprobi ad deteriorum exempla semper convertuntur. Sed haec reprobi nesciunt, quia mentis oculos semper in infimis premunt, qui et si quando in viam Domini veniunt, non ad meliorum vestigia, sed ad intuenda semper deteriorum exempla vertuntur. Neque enim eorum vitam considerant, quibus se humiliando postponant, sed quibus superbiendo se praeferant. Deteriores namque respiciunt, quibus meliores se esse gloriantur; et idcirco proficere ad meliora non possunt, quia hoc sibi sufficere aestimant, quod pessimos antecedunt. O miseri, viam pergunt, et in terga respiciunt. Per spem quidem, quasi ante se pedem proferunt, sed per considerationem pravorum hominum post se oculos tendunt. Recti videri appetunt, sed ad inveniendos se tortam regulam sumunt. Si enim semetipsos quales sunt cognoscere appetunt, non deteriorum conspicere, sed meliorum exempla debuerant. Idcirco ergo peccatores se esse non intelligunt, quia homines non attendunt. Nam si homines attenderent quantum 770 peccando distarent a bonis hominibus, invenirent. De hoc ergo poenitente qui idcirco bonorum exempla considerat ut sibimetipsi quantum a bono recessit innotescat bene dicitur:

CAPUT IX.

VERS. 27. Respiciet homines et dicet: Peccavi et vere deliqui, et ut eram dignus non recepi. 22. Dum se ficte peccatores esse confitentur, de confessione peccati ornari volunt, non humiliari.Peccatores se esse plerumque confitentur etiam qui se peccasse non credunt. Nam saepe contingit ut passim se homines iniquos esse fateantur, sed cum peccata sua veraciter aliis arguentibus audiunt, defendunt se summopere, atque innocentes videri conantur. Unusquisque ergo cum talis est, si deliquisse se dicit, vere non dicit, quippe qui peccatorem se non ex cordis intimo, sed verbotenus asserit. Quia enim scriptum est: Justus in principio accusator est sui (Prov. XVIII, 17), iste de confessione peccati ornari voluit, non humiliari; per accusationem suam humilis appetiit videri, non esse. Nam si confitendo peccatum esse humilis veraciter appeteret, de perpetratione peccati arguentes se alios non impugnaret. Itaque justus vitam suam judicans per exempla meliorum ex cordis intimo cognoscit se esse quod dicit. Ait enim: Peccavi, et vere deliqui. Atque de eo ipso quod tolerat flagello subjungit: Et ut eram dignus non recepi. 23. Qui pro peccatis flagellatur, minus se percussum quam mereatur, agnoscat. Paena nos interrogat, si vere culpam agnoscamus. Unusquisque enim in flagello positus minus adhuc peccata sua considerat, si vel tantum vel amplius se percussum quam merebatur existimat. Iste autem, quia quanto majorum exempla considerat, tanto districtiori examinatione se pensat, minus se percussum quam merebatur agnoscit, quia in illorum justitia conspicit quam gravis sibi culpa fuerit quod erravit; et idcirco hoc quod patitur districtum esse non sentit, quia districte novit pensare quod fecit. Valde autem facile est ut peccatorem se quisque, cum nihil pro peccato suo patitur fateatur. Secure videlicet iniquos nos dicimus, cum vindictam nullam de iniquitate sentimus. Nam peccatores nos quidem in tranquillitate loquimur, sed cum de peccatis ipsis flagello interveniente corripimur, murmuramus. Poena ergo nos interrogat, si veraciter cognoscimus culpam. Vir itaque justus, quia culpam suam districte considerat, etiam in flagello positus dicat: Et ut dignus eram non recepi. Sequitur:

CAPUT X.

VERS. 28. Liberavit enim animam suam, ne pergeret in interitum. 24. Gratiae praevenientis et liberi arbitrii subsequentis concordia. Quia praeveniente divina gratia in operatione bona, nostrum liberum arbitrium sequitur, nosmetipsos liberare dicimur, qui liberanti nos Domino consentimus. Unde Paulus, cum diceret: Abundantius illis omnibus laboravi (I Cor. XV, 10), ne labores suos sibi tribuisse videretur, illico adjunxit: Non autem ego, sed gratia Dei mecum. Quia enim praevenientem Dei gratiam in se per liberum arbitrium fuerat subsecutus, apte subjungit, Mecum: ut et divino muneri non esset ingratus, et tamen a merito liberi arbitrii non remaneret extraneus. De hoc autem qui liberatori suo semetipsum cognoscendo consensit, recte dicit: Liberavit animam suam, ne pergeret in interitum. Sequitur: IBID. Sed vivens lucem videret. Lucem scilicet veritatis quam corde mortuus videre non posset. Vel certe, quia Dominus dixit: Ego sum lux mundi (Joan. VIII, 12), videbunt lucem etiam mortui, 771 quando omnes injusti eum venire ad judicium in humanitatis forma conspexerint. Sed vivens tunc lucem respicit, qui liberis oculis cordis in forma eum divinitatis attendit. Sequitur:

CAPUT XI.

[Rec. VII]. VERS. 29. Haec omnia operatur Deus tribus vicibus per singulos. 25. Tribus vicibus electi prius maerore, posterius gaudio affici solent. De hoc tentato flagellatoque homine dictum superius fuerat: Abominabilis ei fit in vita sua panis; et appropinquavit corruptioni anima ejus, et vita illius mortiferis. Inferius vero subnexum est: Deprecabitur Deum, et placabilis ei erit; et videbit faciem ejus in jubilo, et liberavit animam suam, ne pergeret in interitum, sed vivens lucem videret. In his itaque jam collectis coacervatisque sententiis, et supra moeror amaritudinis, et infra subjuncta est laetitia securitatis; moxque post haec dicitur: Haec omnia operatur Deus tribus vicibus per singulos. Ac si diceret: Quod semel de uno dixi, hoc tribus vicibus per singulos agitur. Sed solerter intuendum est quae tres istae vices sint quibus unusquisque homo anxietate moeroris afficitur, et post moerorem protinus ad securitatem laetitiae revocatur. Id enim superius, sicut jam dixi, narraverat, quod et gravis prius moeror afficit, et magna postmodum laetitia attollit. Igitur si vigilanter intendimus, has tres vices moeroris et laetitiae in uniuscujusque electi animo istis alternari modis invenimus, id est conversione, tentatione et morte. 26. 1. In conversione, cum hinc spiritus vocat, hinc caro revocat. In prima quippe quam diximus conversionis vice gravis moeror est, cum sua unusquisque peccata considerans, curarum saecularium vult compedes rumpere, et viam Dei per spatium securae conversationis ambulare; desideriorum temporalium onus grave abjicere, et leve jugum Domini libera servitute portare. Cogitanti enim ista occurrit illa familiaris sua delectatio carnalis, quae inveterata dudum, quanto eum diutius tenuit, tanto arctius astringit, atque a se tardius abire permittit. Et quis ibi moeror, quae anxietas cordis, quando hinc spiritus vocat, hinc caro revocat; hinc amor novae conversationis invitat, hinc usus vetustae perversitatis impugnat; hinc desiderio ad coelestem patriam flagrat, et hinc in semetipso carnalem concupiscentiam tolerat, quae eum etiam aliquo modo invitum delectat? Recte ergo de hoc amarescente homine dici potest: Abominabilis ei fit in vita sua panis; et appropinquavit corruptioni anima ejus, et vita illius mortiferis. Sed quia divina gratia diu nos istis difficultatibus affici non permittit, ruptis peccatorum nostrorum vinculis citius nos ad libertatem novae conversationis consolando perducit, et praecedentem tristitiam subsequens laetitia refovet; ita ut conversi uniuscujusque animus eo magis ad votum suum perveniendo gaudeat, quo magis se pro illo meminit laborando doluisse. Fit cordi immensa laetitia, quia ei quem desiderat, jam per spem securitatis propinquat, ut recte de hoc dici debeat: Deprecabitur Deum, et placabilis ei erit; et videbit faciem ejus in jubilo. Vel certe: Liberavit animam suam ne pergeret in interitum, sed vivens lucem videret. 27. 2. In tentationum exercitatione. Acriores sunt post conversionem tentationum stimuli. At ne conversus quisque jam sanctum se esse credat, et quem moeroris pugna superare non valuit, ipsa postmodum securitas sternat, dispensante Deo 772 permittitur ut post conversionem suam tentationum stimulis fatigetur. Jam quidem per conversionem Rubrum mare transitum est; sed adhuc in eremo vitae praesentis ante faciem hostes occurrunt. Jam peccata praeterita velut exstinctos Aegyptios post terga relinquimus; sed adhuc nocentia vitia, quasi alii hostes obviant, ut ad terram promissionis pergentibus coeptum iter intercludant. Jam priores culpae, velut insequentes adversarii, sola divina virtute prostratae sunt, sed tentationum stimuli, quasi hostes alii contra faciem veniunt, qui et cum nostro labore superentur. Conversio videlicet securitatem parit, mater autem negligentiae solet esse securitas. Ne ergo securitas negligentiam generet, scriptum est: Fili, accedens ad servitutem Dei, sta in justitia et timore, et praepara animam tuam ad tentationem (Eccli. II, 1). Non enim ait, ad requiem, sed ad tentationem, quia hostis noster adhuc in hac vita nos positos, quanto magis nos sibi rebellare conspicit, tanto amplius expugnare contendit. Eos enim pulsare negligit, quos quieto jure possidere se sentit. Contra nos vero eo vehementius incitatur, quo ex corde nostro quasi ex jure propriae habitationis expellitur. Hoc enim in seipso Dominus sub quadam dispensatione figuravit (Matth. IV, 1), qui diabolum non nisi post baptisma se tentare permisit, ut signum nobis quoddam futurae conversionis innueret, quod membra ejus postquam ad Deum proficerent, tunc acriores tentationum insidias tolerarent. Post primam igitur vicem moeroris atque laetitiae, quam unusquisque per studium conversionis agnoscit, haec secunda suboritur, quia ne securitatis negligentia dissolvatur, impulsu tentationis afficitur. Et quidem quisque in ipso conversionis initio magna plerumque excipitur dulcedine consolationis, sed durum laborem postmodum experitur probationis. [Vet. XIII.] 28. Tres conversionis gradus. Tres quippe modi sunt conversorum, inchoatio, medietas, atque perfectio. In inchoatione autem inveniunt blandimenta dulcedinis, in medio quoque tempore certamina tentationis, ad extremum vero perfectionem plenitudinis. Prius ergo illos dulcia suscipiunt, quae consolentur; postmodum amara, quae exerceant; et tunc demum suavia atque sublimia, quae confirment. Nam et sponsam suam vir quisque prius dulcibus blandimentis fovet, quam tamen jam conjunctam asperis increpationibus probat, probatam vero securis cogitationibus possidet. Unde et plebs Israelitica, cum despondente se Deo ad sacras mentis nuptias ex Aegypto vocaretur, quasi arrharum vice prius accepit blandimenta signorum; conjuncta autem, probationibus exercetur in eremo; probata vero, in repromissionis terra virtutis plenitudine confirmatur. Ante igitur in miraculis degustavit quod appeteret, postmodum in labore tentata est si custodire noverit quod gustasset; ad extremum quoque plenius accipere meruit, quod laboribus probata custodivit. Ita ergo vitam uniuscujusque conversi, et inchoatio blanda permulcet, et aspera medietas probat, et plena post perfectio roborat. 29. Initia conversionis pacatissima excipiunt graves tentationes. Nam saepe conversi quique in ipso adhuc aditu inchoationis suae, vel tranquillitatem pacatissimam carnis, vel dona prophetiae, vel praedicamenta doctrinae, 773 vel signorum miracula, vel gratiam curationis accipiunt (I Cor. XII, 10); post haec autem duris tentationum probationibus fatigantur, a quibus tentationibus adhuc, cum inciperent, valde liberos se esse crediderunt. Quod divinae gratiae dispensatione agitur, ne in inchoatione sua tentationum asperitate tangantur, quia si eorum initia amaritudo tentationis exciperet, tam facile ad ea quae reliquerant redirent quam nec longius discesserant; nam contemptis prius vitiis, quasi juxta positis replicarentur [Quasi reimplicarentur, seu iterum implicarentur]. Unde et scriptum est: Cum emisisset Pharao populum, non eos duxit Dominus per viam terrae Philisthiim, quae vicina est, reputans ne forte poeniteret eum, si vidisset adversum se bella consurgere, et reverteretur in Aegyptum (Exod. XIII, 17). Ex Aegypto itaque exeuntibus e vicino bello subtrahuntur, quia derelinquentibus saeculum qnaedam prius tranquillitas ostenditur, ne in ipsa sua teneritudine atque inchoatione turbati, ad hoc territi redeant quod evaserunt. Prius ergo suavitatem securitatis sentiunt, prius pacis quiete nutriuntur; post cognitam vero dulcedinem, tanto jam tolerabilius tentationum certamina sustinent, quanto in Deo altius cognovere quod ament. Unde et Petrus prius in montem ducitur, prius claritatem transfigurationis Dominicae contemplatur (Marc. IX, 1), et tunc demum tentari ancilla interrogante permittitur (Matth. XXVI, 70), ut per tentationem factus sibi ex infirmitate conscius, ad illud flendo et amando recurreret quod vidisset; et cum eum timoris unda in peccati pelagus raperet (Matth. XIV, 24), esset prioris dulcedinis anchora quae retineret. Saepe autem tam diutina sunt tentationum certamina, quam longa inchoationum fuerant blandimenta. Saepe vero majus datur in inchoatione dulcedinis, minus autem in labore probationis. Saepe minus in inchoatione dulcedinis, majus in labore probationis. Nunquam vero laborem tentationis dispar sequitur perfectio firmitatis, quia juxta summam certaminis remuneratur quisque plenitudine perfectionis. Plerumque autem in eo quisque conversus labitur, quod dum quibusdam donis gratiae, dulcedine inchoationis excipitur, confirmationem accepisse se perfectionis arbitratur, et plenitudinis consummationem aestimat, quae adhuc blandimenta esse inchoationis ignorat. Unde fit ut dum subita tentationis procella tangitur, despectum se Deo et perditum suspicetur. Qui si inchoationi suae non passim crederet, adhuc in prosperis positus, mentem ad adversa praepararet, et vitiis venientibus postmodum tam firmius resisteret quam ea etiam sagacius praevidisset. Quae quidem tranquillius si praevidet tolerat. Eorum tamen omnino certamina, etiamsi praevideat, non declinat, quia cursus nostri itineris nequaquam peragitur sine pulvere tentationis. 30. Cur tentationes post conversionem acriores quam ante videantur. Plerumque autem conversus quisque talibus tentationum stimulis agitatur, qualibus ante conversionis gratiam nunquam pulsatum se esse reminiscitur, non quia tunc haec eadem radix tentationis deerat, sed quia non apparebat. [Vet. XIV.] Humanus quippe animus multis cogitationibus occupatus, saepe sibimetipsi aliquo modo manet incognitus, ut omnino quod tolerat nesciat, quia dum per multa 774 spargitur, ab interna sui cognitione removetur. Si autem Deo vacare appetat, et ramos multimodae cogitationis abscidat, tunc libere conspicit, quod de intima radice carnis procedit. Carduus namque si nascatur in via, itinerantium pedibus teritur, atque ipso usu transeuntium ejus superficies ne appareat confricatur. Sed quamvis desuper fruticantes spinae non appareant, subter tamen radix occulta perdurat. Si autem eum transeuntium pedes terere et calcare cessaverint, mox in superficiem surgendo progreditur, et per spinam prodit in publicum quidquid in radice vivebat occultum. Ita et in corde saecularium saepe occulta quaedam tentationum radix non facile apparet exsurgere, quia velut in via actionum sita transeuntium teritur pede cogitationum, et per innumeras curas quasi multis itinerantibus premitur, ne videatur. Si autem per conversionis gratiam a via cordis curarum turba removetur, ut nulla actionum insolentia conterat, nullus cogitationum tumultus premat, tunc quod occultum latebat agnoscitur, tunc de radice vitiorum pungit libere spina tentationum. Contra quam bene viventis manu agitur ut, in quantum potest fieri, non tegatur occulta, sed radicitus evellatur. Quod donec fiat, uniuscujusque conversi animum ita haec spina conturbat, ut saepe percussione subita pene superari se sentiat, ejusque vulnus medullitus inflictum exitialiter pertimescat. [Vet. XV.] 31. Tentationes, cum ob assiduitatem despiciuntur, periculosae. Deus tentationibus probat, non reprobat. Plerumque vero ipsi tentationum stimuli, dum in usum veniunt, dilatantur, et non quidem acriores, sed longiores existunt. Minus autem dolent, sed magis inficiunt, quia dum menti diutius adhaerent, tanto fiunt minus pavendi, quanto magis assueti. Inter haec ergo deprehensa mens huc illucque distenditur, et multiplicibus tentationum aestibus dissipatur, et saepe hinc inde provocata, cui tentanti vitio obviet, vel quod primum impugnet, ignorat. Unde plerumque evenit ut dum nimis insurgentia vitia cruciant, dum repugnantis animum jamjamque quasi in lapsum desperationis inclinant, conversus quisque hanc ipsam sublimitatis viam, quam sibi ad remedium eligit, expavescat, et quasi in summo eductus titubat, qui in imo solidius stabat. Ita vero circumfrementibus tentationum motibus angustatur, ut recte de eo dici debeat: Abominabilis ei fit in vita sua panis, et animae illius cibus ante desiderabilis. Vel certe: Appropinquavit corruptioni anima ejus, et vita illius mortiferis. Sed quia misericors Deus probari nos permittit tentationibus, non reprobari, sicut scriptum est: Fidelis autem Deus, qui non patitur vos tentari supra id quod potestis, sed faciet cum tentatione etiam proventum, ut possitis sustinere (I Cor. X, 13), citius nobis consolationis ope succurrit, et surgentes tentationum stimulos mitigat, impugnantesque se cogitationum motus interna pace tranquillat. Moxque anima immensam de spe coelesti laetitiam percipit, dum devictum malum respicit, quod toleravit, ut jure de hoc tentato liberatoque homine dici debeat: Videbit faciem ejus in jubilo; et, liberavit animam suam, ne pergeret in interitum, sed vivens lucem videret. Istis itaque duabus vicibus, id est conversionis et probationis, per moerorem 775 laetitiamque transactis, superest tertia, cujus et moerorem adhuc sustineat, et gaudia consequatur. [Vet. XVI.] 32. Tertia vice justi ex pavore mortis et timore extremi judicii auxiliantur. Post conversionis namque certamina, post probationis aerumnam, restat adhuc dura tentatio, quia venire non potest ad petrectae gaudia libertatis, nisi prius debitum solverit humanae conditionis. Conversus autem quisque sibi caute sollicitus, tacite secum considerare non cessat, aeternus judex quam districtus adveniat, suumque terminum quotidie prospicit, et ante severitatem tantae justitiae quas rationes vitae suae sit positurus attendit. Etsi cuncta prava opera, quae intelligere potuit, devitavit, venturus tamen coram districto judice, illa magis quae in semetipso non intelligit, pertimescit. Quis enim considerare valeat quanta mala per momenta temporum ipsis inconstantibus cogitationum motibus perpetramus? Facile est enim opera perversa vitare, sed nimis difficile est ab illicita cogitatione cor tergere. Et tamen scriptum est: Vae vobis qui cogitatis inutile (Mich. II, 1). Et rursum: In die cum judicabit Dominus occulta hominum (Rom. II, 16). Qui etiam praemisit: Inter se invicem cogitationum accusantium, aut etiam defendentium (Ibid., 15). Et rursum: Labia dolosa in corde, et corde locuti sunt mala (Psal. XI, 3). Et rursum: Etenim in corde iniquitates operamini in terra (Psal. LVII, 3). Humana autem anima semel aeternitatis statum deserens, ad fluxum temporalitatis delapsa, hanc mutabilitatem alternantium motionum, quam dum caderet volens appetiit, dum conatur surgere, cogitur invita tolerare. Inde quippe punita est unde delectata, quia inde conversa habet laborem certaminis, unde perversa appetiit gaudium voluptatis. [Vet. XVII.] Saepe ergo electis etiam nolentibus in cogitatione subrepitur quod in se quidem solerter inspiciunt, et ante Dei oculos quanti sit reatus attendunt; et cum de his omnibus semper judicia districta pertimescant, tunc tamen haec vehementer metuunt, cum ad solvendum humanae conditionis debitum venientes, districto judici appropinquare se cernunt. Et fit tanto timor acrior, quanto et retributio aeterna vicinior. Ante oculos autem cordis nihil inane tunc transvolat de phantasmate cogitationis, quia subductis e medio omnibus, se et illum tantummodo considerant, cui appropinquant. Crescit pavor vicina retributione justitiae, et urgente solutione carnis, quanto magis districtum judicium jamjamque quasi tangitur, tanto vehementius formidatur. Et si ea quae sciunt nunquam se praetermisisse meminerunt, formidant tamen illa quae nesciunt, quia videlicet semetipsos dijudicare et comprehendere omnino non possunt, atque urgente exitu, subtiliori terrentur metu. Unde Redemptor noster solutioni carnis appropinquans, et membrorum suorum servans speciem, factus in agonia, coepit prolixius orare (Luc. XXII, 44). Quid enim pro se ille cum in agonia esset peteret, qui in terris positus coelestia cum potestate tribuebat? Sed appropinquante morte, nostrae mentis in se certamen expressit, qui vim quamdam terroris ac formidinis patimur, cum per solutionem carnis aeterno propinquamus judicio. Neque enim tunc cujuslibet anima immerito terretur, quando post pusillum hoc invenit, quod in aeternum mutare non possit. [Vet. XVIII.] 33. Quid imminente morte sit formidandum. Consideramus quippe quod viam vitae praesentis 776 nequaquam sine culpa transire potuimus, consideramus etiam quia nec hoc quidem sine aliquo reatu nostro est, quod laudabiliter gessimus, si remota pietate judicemur. Quis enim nostrum vitam praecedentium patrum valeat vel superare, vel assequi? Et tamen David dicit: Ne intres in judicium cum servo tuo, quia non justificabitur in conspectu tuo omnis vivens (Psal. CXLII, 2). Paulus cum diceret: Nihil mihi conscius sum, caute subjunxit: Sed non in hoc justificatus sum (I Cor. IV, 4). Jacobus dicit: In multis enim offendimus omnes (Jac. III, 2). Joannes dicit: Si dixerimus quia peccatum non habemus, ipsi nos seducimus, et veritas in nobis non est (I Joan. I, 8). Quid ergo facient tabulae, si tremunt columnae? Aut quomodo virgulta immobilia stabunt, si hujus pavoris turbine etiam cedri quatiuntur. Solutioni ergo carnis appropinquans, nonnunquam terrore vindictae etiam justi anima turbatur. Cui et si quid tranquillum in hac vita sapere potuit, mortis articulo interveniente concutitur, ut jure dici debeat: Abominabilis fit ei panis in vita sua, et animae ejus cibus ante desiderabilis. Vel certe propter pavoris poenam hoc, quod illic subditur: Appropinquavit corruptioni anima ejus, et vita illius mortiferis. 34. Justorum animae hoc pavore a levibus culpis purgantur. Sed quia justorum animae a levibus quibusque contagiis ipso saepe mortis pavore purgantur, et aeternae retributionis gaudia jam ab ipsa carnis solutione percipiunt, plerumque vero contemplatione quadam retributionis internae etiam priusquam carne exspolientur hilarescunt, et dum vetustatis debitum solvunt, novi jam muneris laetitia perfruuntur, recte dicitur: Videbit faciem ejus in jubilo. Vel certe: Liberavit animam suam, ne pergeret in interitum, sed vivens lucem videret. Justi itaque anima in jubilo faciem Dei conspicit, quia tantum de laetitia interna percipit, quantum capere vel assumpta vix possit. Ibi igitur lucem vivens videt, quia spiritalem oculum in radios aeterni solis infigit. Ibi lucem vivens videt, quia omni jam mutabilitatis vicissitudine atque obumbratione calcata, veritati aeternitatis inhaeret; eique inhaerendo quem cernit, ad similitudinem incommutabilitatis assurgit, atque in semetipsam auctoris sui inconversibilem speciem dum respicit assumit. Quae enim ad mutabilitatem per semetipsam lapsa est, ad immutabilitatis statum immutabilitatem videndo formatur. Igitur Eliu de afflicto hoc liberatoque homine, quia prius moeroris amaritudinem et postmodum gaudia consolationis expressit, apte subjunxit: Haec omnia operatur Deus tribus vicibus per singulos, videlicet conversionis, probationis, et mortis, quia per tria haec, et duris primum stimulis moeroris afficitur, et magnis postmodum securitatis gaudiis refovetur. Et quia electi uniuscujusque mens iisdem tribus vicibus, id est vel labore conversionis, vel tentatione probationis, vel formidine solutionis atteritur, atque ipsa attritione purgata liberatur, apte subjungitur:

CAPUT XII [Vet. XIX].

VERS. 30. Ut revocet animas eorum a corruptione, et illuminet luce viventium. 35. Lux praesens, morientium est; lux aeterna, viventium. Lux quippe morientium est, quam corporeis oculis cernimus. Qui autem adhuc huic mundo vivunt, luce morientium tenebrescunt. Illuminantur autem luce viventium, qui, despecto temporali lumine, ad splendorem internae claritatis recurrunt, 777 ut ibi vivant, ubi verum lumen sentiendo videant, ubi non aliud lumen, atque aliud vita, sed ubi ipsa lux vita sit, ubi sic nos lux exterius circumscribat, ut interius impleat; sic interius impleat, ut incircumscripta exterius circumscribat. Illuminantur ergo hac luce viventium, quam tanto tunc subtilius conspiciunt, quanto nunc ad illam purius vivunt. 36. Superbi veris et mysticis inania et tumida solent permiscere. Magna Eliu ac valde fortia protulit, sed hoc unusquisque arrogans habere proprium solet, quod dum vera ac mystica loquitur, subito per tumorem cordis quaedam inania et superba permiscet. Foris enim placere appetit in hoc quod veraciter sentit; et inde mox inanescit a vero, unde per elationis typum recedit ab intimo. Quia enim approbari doctus exterius quaerit, intus plenitudinem qua docebatur amittit. Unde et Eliu, quem tenere arrogantium typum saepe jam diximus, postquam multa sapientiae profunda digessit, subito post easdem sententias veraces ac mysticas fastu scientiae inflatus extollitur, cujus mox inflationis merito ejus sensus ad inania verba derivatur. Nam subdidit, dicens:

CAPUT XIII.

VERS. 31-33. Attende, Job, et audi me, et tace dum ego loquor. Si autem habes quod loquaris, responde mihi: loquere, volo enim te apparere justum. Quod si non habes, audi me; tace, et docebo te sapientiam. 37. Quando aliquid humiliter loquuntur, diu in ejusdem humilitatis specie non perseverant. Qualem se apud se habeat hac locutione manifestat, qua dicit: Attende, Job, et audi me, et tace dum ego loquor. Immensa enim superbia est, a seniore sibi reverentiam exigere, et silentium imperare meliori se. [Vet. XX.] Quia autem praedicatores justi dum quoslibet corripiunt, saepe per humilitatis gratiam ad cogitationum suarum intima revertuntur, atque in eo ipso quod corripiunt, ne quid fortasse fallantur exquirunt, correptisque licentiam tribuunt ut si quid pro seipsis justius sentiant fateantur, hoc nonnunquam etiam arrogantes imitari appetunt. Paulisper enim in verbis elatione postposita, quasi eorum quos corripiunt, si forte reperire potuerint, justitiam quaerunt, non quia ita sentiunt, sed quia ornari per humilitatis speciem concupiscunt. Metuunt enim ne superbi ac tumidi, quia sunt, esse videantur. Unde Eliu statim subdidit, dicens: Si autem habes quod loquaris, responde mihi; loquere, volo enim te apparere justum. Sed quia haec ex corde non protulit, audire quod quaesierat non exspectavit. Nam illico subjunxit: Quod si non habes, audi me; tace, et docebo te sapientiam. Qui enim veraciter quaerunt audire quod justum est, aequanimiter exspectant audire quod quaerunt. Eliu autem, quia veraciter requisitionis verba non protulit, dici quod quaesierat non permisit, sed mox quod intrinsecus gestabat erupit, qualemque se in oculis suis habebat ostendit, dicens: Tace, et docebo te sapientiam. Arrogantes enim viri quando aliquid humiliter sonant, diu in ejusdem humilitatis specie non perdurant. Cum fortasse quaerunt ut audiant, mox loquendo obviant ne doceantur, quia superficiem vocis quam protulerant citius ostentationis intentio 778 comprimit, quae ex radice cordis exsurgit, atque eamdem humilitatis formam specie tenus sumptam eo celerius probant quia aliena est, quo illam diutius tenere non possunt. Ecce Eliu justitiam cum requirit ut discat, promittit quia doceat. Ecce quasi requirendo quod justum est aliquid planum sonuerat lingua; sed mox celare non potuit hoc quod altum tumebat conscientia. Nam repente subjunxit: Tace, et docebo te sapientiam. Quia vero arrogantes omnes in eo quod proferunt typho superbiae inflantur, et, velut in alto positi sic doctorum speciem sumunt ac si eorum verba dignatione quadam super indignos homines coelitus effundantur, bene a scriptore hujus historiae versus interponitur, quo dicatur:

CAPUT XIV [Vet.

XXI, Rec. VIII]. CAP. XXXIV, VERS. 1.Pronuntians quoque Eliu, etiam haec locutus est. 38. Justi ex radice humilitatis loquuntur; secus iniqui. Quid enim per hujus pronuntiationis vocabulum, nisi inflatio elationis ostenditur, ut verba, quae de alta superbiae radice veniebant, cum quadam quasi altitudine et distinctione procederent. Ita videlicet praedicare omnes arrogantes solent? Cum quodam enim fastu proferunt hoc quod singulariter intellexisse se credunt; et fortasse tunc humilitatem praedicant, cum per elationis typhum exempla superbiae ostentant. Unde fit ut eorum praedicatio concors sibi manere non possit, quia id quod rectum loquentes seminant, perverse tumentes impugnant. Humilibus namque auditoribus verba sua non compatiendo, sed vix dedignando largiuntur. Longe quippe se in altum positos aestimant, et super eosdem auditores suos quasi praecedentes doctrinae respectum vix de summo dignanter inclinant. At contra verba justorum ex radice veniunt humilitatis, ut fructum valeant ferre pietatis: et quidquid salubre potuerint, non tumendo, sed compatiendo subministrant. Per verba quippe charitatis vel se in auditoribus suis, vel auditores suos in se ita transformant, ac si et illi per istos hoc quod audiunt doceant, et isti per illos hoc quod docendo proferunt discant. Eliu ergo typum arrogantium tenens, et cum pronuntiationis ostentatione inchoans, quid dicat audiamus. Sequitur:

CAPUT XV.

VERS. 2, 3. Audite, sapientes, verba mea, et eruditi auscultate me. Auris enim verba probat, et guttur escas gustu dijudicat. 39. Superbi doctores non quaerunt auditores suos sapientes efficere, sed suam sapientiam ostentare. Ac si diceret: Sicut nec auris escas, nec guttur verba cognoscit; ita nec stultus quisque sententiam sapientis intelligit. Sapientes ergo atque eruditi audite quod dico, qui potestis ea quae fuerint dicta cognoscere. Videamus igitur quantum tumeat, qui verba sua non nisi a sapientibus audiri decenter existimat. Verus autem sapientiae praedicator dicit: Sapientibus et insipientibus debitor sum (Rom. I, 14). At contra arrogans in praedicatione sua aures tantummodo sapientium exspectat, quia non ideo praedicat ut possit quoslibet sapientes efficere, sed ideo sapientes quaerit, ut possit quod senserit superbiendo monstrare. Sicut enim superius dictum est, non illos appetit erudire, sed se ostendere; nec intuetur quam justi qui audiunt fiant, sed ipse quam doctus , cum a doctis auditur 779 appareat. [Vet. XXII.] Quia vero praedicationem arrogantium nullus admitteret, si non et aliquid de humilitatis imagine permiscerent, bene Eliu postquam per tumida verba se extulit, rursum quasi ad aequalitatis concordiam condescendit, dicens:

CAPUT XVI VERS.

4. Judicium eligamus nobis, et inter nos videamus quid sit melius. 40. Humilitatem quandoque prae se ferunt, sed fictam. Sed utrum hoc judicium ex humili corde quaesierit, facile cognoscimus, si subsequentia ejus verba pensemus. Sequitur: VERS. 5, 6. Quia dixit Job: Justus sum, et Deus subvertit judicium meum. In judicando enim me mendacium est; et violenta sagitta mea absque ullo peccato. Justos falsorum criminum insimulant. Haec beatum Job dixisse queritur, quae tamen quia minime dixerit, requisita sacrae historiae verba testantur. Sed qui judicium aeque quaesierat, ex culpa quam finxit, protinus sententiam promulgat. Nam sequitur: VERS. 7, 8. Quis est vir, ut est Job, qui bibit subsannationem quasi aquam, qui graditur cum operantibus iniquitatem, et ambulat cum viris impiis? [Rec. IX.] Ecce judicium quaerens judicium protulit, et post allegationem suam nulla beati Job exspectata sententia, eum damnatione dignum ex reproborum societate judicavit. Ait enim: Quis est vir, ut est Job? Ut utique subaudiamus, nullus. Atque subjungit: Qui bibit subsannationem quasi aquam. Aqua autem cum bibitur, ita liquide sumitur, ut ad sorbendum nulla sui pinguedine retardetur. Subsannationem vero ut aquam bibere est Deum sine aliquo obstaculo cogitationis irridere, ut in eo quod superbit lingua vel conscientia, nulla trepidatio contradicat. Haec autem ejus sententia super beatum Job quantum a tramite veritatis exorbitet, illa Domini attestatione cognoscimus, qua ad diabolum dicit: Nunquid considerasti servum meum Job, quod non sit ei similis in terra (Job. I, 8)? Ecce quem Veritas dicit absque comparatione justum, eum Eliu asserit absque comparatione peccatorem. Sed haec esse propria arrogantium praedicatorum solent, ut etiam afflictos auditores suos magis districte corripere appetant, quam blande refovere. Plus enim student, ut mala objurgando increpent, quam bona laudando confirment. Superiores quippe videri desiderant, et magis gaudent cum eorum animum ira elevat, quam cum charitas exaequat. Semper invenire optant quod increpando rigide feriant. Unde scriptum est: In ore stulti virga superbiae (Prov. XIV, 3), quia videlicet percutere rigide scit, sed compati humiliter nescit. 41. Sancti praedicatores, cum alios correpturi sunt, blandimenta praemittunt. Ut periti medici, prius palpant, postea feriunt.Solent etiam praedicatores justi auditores suos objurgando corripere, solent in eorum vitia districta increpatione saevire. Unde scriptum est: Verba sapientium quasi stimuli, et sicut clavi in altum defixi (Eccl. XII, 11). Recte autem eorum verba clavi vocati sunt, quia culpas delinquentium nesciunt palpare, sed pungere. An Joannis verba clavi non erant, cum dicebat: Progenies viperarum, quis vobis demonstravit fugere ab ira ventura (Matth. III, 7)? An verba Stephani clavi non erant, cum dicebat: Vos 780 semper Spiritui sancto resistitis (Act. VII, 51). An verba Pauli clavi non erant, cum dicebat: O insensati Galatae, quis vos fascinavit (Galat. III, 1)? Et rursum cum Corinthiis diceret: Cum enim sit inter vos zelus et contentio, nonne carnales estis, et secundum hominem ambulatis (I Cor. III, 3)? Sed necesse est ut caute videamus quia praedicatores justi in ipsis quos corrigunt, cum ex parte alia fortasse aliquid bonae operationis inveniunt, ad eadem objurgationis verba cum quanta dispensatione descendunt. Ecce Paulus Corinthios docens, eosque in culpa divisionis aspiciens exorsus est, dicens: Gratias ago Deo meo semper pro vobis, in gratia Dei, quae data est vobis in Christo Jesu, quia in omnibus divites facti estis in illo (I Cor. I, 4). Multum profecto laudavit quos in Christo divites in omnibus dixit. Et ecce adhuc blandimenta multiplicat, dicens: In omni verbo et in omni scientia, sicut testimonium Christi confirmatum est in vobis (Ibid., 5). Testimonium Christi confirmatum est in vobis, dixit, ac si opere peregissent quod doctrina didicerant. Et mox in laudis consummatione subjunxit: Ita ut nihil vobis desit in ulla gratia, exspectantibus revelationem Domini nostri Jesu Christi. Quaeso te, Paule, istis tot favoribus jam quo tendas insinues. Et ecce paulo post sequitur: Obsecro vos autem, fratres, per misericordiam Domini nostri Jesu Christi, ut idipsum dicatis omnes, et non sint in vobis schismata. Significatum est enim mihi de vobis, fratres mei, ab his qui sunt Chloes, quia contentiones inter vos sunt. (Ibid., 10). De quibus contentionibus paulo post subdidit, dicens: Cum enim sit inter vos zelus et contentio, nonne carnales estis, et secundum hominem ambulatis (I Cor. III, 3)? Ecce quibus laudibus ad aperta correptionis verba descendit; ecce in corde audientium quam blanda favoris manu viam districtae increpationis aperuit. Prius namque superborum brachia studuit per blandimentorum vincula religare, ut postmodum potuisset vulnus superbiae ferro correptionis incidere. Erant profecto in Corinthiis et quae laudari debuissent, erant et quae argui. Peritus itaque medicus prius sana membra, quae circa vulnus erant, laudando palpavit, et postmodum putridum sinum vulneris feriendo transfixit. Habet ergo in sanctis praedicatoribus ad utraque aptum doctrinae regula pondus suum, ut et recta faventes nutriant, et perversa animadvertentes abscindant. [Vet. XXIV, Rec. X.] 42. Aliud est percutere cum justitia stimulat, aliud cum inflat superbia. Quis in correptione servandus modus. Hunc ignorant superbi. Nonnunquam vero etiam praedicatores justi rigide feriunt. Sed aliud est cum justitia stimulat, aliud cum superbia inflat. Justi cum severe corrigunt, internae dulcedinis gratiam non amittunt. Nam saepe pro inquietudine refrenanda pravorum duritiam districti vigoris assumunt, sed intus charitatis igne liquefiunt, atque eorum amore ardent, in quos aspera correptione saeviunt; seque etiam eis intrinsecus in secreto cordis humiliant, quos foris duris animadversionum stimulis quasi despiciendo castigant.

Plerumque autem et non despiciendo despiciunt, et non desperando desperant, ut tanto eos celerius a culpa pavescere ac resilire faciant, quanto jam quasi vicinius mortis foveam ostentant. Saepe etiam quodam decenti moderamine 781 suas culpas coram discipulis indicant, ut illi audientes discant quomodo semetipsos de suis actionibus subtiliter reprehendant. Tanta autem dispensatione se temperant, ut neque cum se erigunt intrinsecus rigidi sint, neque rursum cum se humiliant extrinsecus remissi, quia et in disciplina humilitatem custodiunt, et in humilitate disciplinam. Paulus disciplinam tenuit, cum Corinthiis diceret: Cum enim sit inter vos zelus et contentio, nonne carnales estis, et secundum hominem ambulatis (I Cor. III, 3)? Sed humilitatem in disciplina non perdidit, quia deprecando praemisit, dicens: Obsecro vos, fratres, per misericordiam Dei, ut idipsum dicatis omnes, et non sint in vobis schismata (I Cor. I, 10). Rursum humilitatem tenuit, cum eisdem Corinthiis loquens paulo latius fortasse quam voluerat, semetipsum reprehendit, dicens: Factus sum insipiens (II Cor. XII, 11). Sed disciplinam in hac humilitate non perdidit, quia illico adjunxit: Vos me coegistis. Exemplum magnae humilitatis exhibuit, cum discipulis dixit: Non enim nosmetipsos praedicamus, sed Jesum Christum Dominum nostrum, nos autem servos vestros per Christum (II Cor. IV, 5). Sed in hac humilitate disciplinae justitiam non amisit, qui eisdem delinquentibus dicit: Quid vultis, in virga veniam ad vos (I Cor. IV, 21)? et caetera. Sciunt ergo praedicatores sancti utroque moderamine artem magisterii temperare, et cum delinquentium reatus inveniunt, sciunt modo severe corripere, modo humiliter deprecari. Sed cum arrogantes viri eos imitari appetunt, sumunt ab eis aspera verba correptionis, et sumere ab eis veraciter nesciunt preces humilitatis. Magis enim terribiles possunt esse quam mites; et idcirco discunt unde se erigant, et discere negligunt, ut animum submittant. Cumque admonere delinquentes placide nesciunt, nimio rigoris usu per invectionis iracundiam, etiam contra recte agentes effrenantur. Quorum iste

Eliu speciem tenens, beatum Job non refovet, sed objurgat, dicens: Quis est vir, ut est Job, qui bibit subsannationem quasi aquam, qui graditur cum operantibus iniquitatem, et ambulat cum viris impiis? [Vet. XXV.] Et quia aliena semper est a veritate superbia, mox et ad falsa prorumpit, dicens:

CAPUT XVII.

VERS. 9. Dixit enim: Non placebit vir Deo, etiamsi cucurrerit cum eo. 43. Aliena semper est a veritate superbia. Quod profecto quia minime dixerit, quisquis beati Job verba legit agnoscit. Sed qui idcirco loquitur, ut semetipsum ostendendo superbiat, quid mirum si in altero fingit quod reprehendat? Quomodo enim veritati cohaereat in verbis increpationis, quem intra semetipsum longe ab eadem veritate dirimit tumor mentis? Sequitur: VERS. 10. Ideo viri cordati audite me. Ecce iterum fastu superbiae inflatus, eos tantummodo, qui quasi digne intelligendo, se assequi valeant quaerit, et sic quod sentiebat erumpit, dicens:

CAPUT XVIII.

VERS. 10 et 11. Absit a Deo impietas, et ab Omnipotente iniquitas. Opus enim hominis reddet ei, et juxta vias singulorum restituet eis. 782 44. Deus in hac vita non semper reddit singulis juxta opera. Bene dixit, quia in omnipotente Deo iniquitas vel impietas non est. Sed in hac vita nequaquam semper hoc agitur, quod subjunxit, quia juxta opus suum singulis et juxta vias proprias reddit. Nam et multos illicita et perversa perpetrantes gratuito praevenit, atque ad opera sancta convertit, et nonnullos rectis actibus deditos flagello interveniente corripit, ac sic placentes quasi displiceant affligit, Salomone attestante, qui ait: Sunt justi quibus multa eveniunt, quasi opera egerint impiorum; et sunt impii qui ita securi sunt, ac si justorum facta habeant (Eccle. VIII, 14). Quod nimirum omnipotens Deus inaestimabili pietate dispensat, ut et justos flagella crucient, ne opera extollant; et injusti saltem sine poena hanc vitam peragant, quia ad tormenta quae sine fine sunt male agendo festinant. Nam quia aliquando justi nequaquam juxta opera flagellantur, hac ipsa historia quam tractamus ostenditur. Neque enim idem beatus Job pro culpa fuerat flagellatus, qui ante flagelli stimulum ipso judice attestante laudatus est. Verius ergo Eliu diceret, si dixisset: Quia in omnipotente Deo impietas atque iniquitas non est, etiam cum juxta vias proprias hominibus reddere non videtur. Nam et quod a nobis non intelligitur, ex occulti judicii non injusta lance profertur. Quia vero praedicatores arrogantes, dum multa inania spargunt, etiam saepe vera ac solida proferunt, Eliu recte subjungit:

CAPUT XIX [Vet. XXVI].

VERS. 12. Vere enim Deus non condemnabit frustra, nec Omnipotens subvertet judicium. 45. Justa Dei judicia, etsi occulta. Ad diabolum Dominus dicit: Commovisti me adversus eum, ut afflgerem eum frustra (Job. II, 3). Eliu autem dicit: Quia non condemnabit Dominus frustra. Quod utique discordare dictis Veritatis creditur, nisi subtili consideratione pensetur. Aliud namque est damnare, aliud affligere. Affligit ergo juxta aliquid frustra, sed frustra non damnat. An non juxta aliquid frustra Job afflixerat, cum non delebatur vitium, sed meritum augebatur? Frustra enim condemnare non potest, quia damnatio fieri non ex parte ad aliquid potest, quae videlicet in extremo punit omne quod hic quisque inique commiserit. Nec omnipotens Deus subvertit judicium, quia etsi minus recta videntur esse quae patimur, recte tamen in occulto examine decernuntur. Sequitur:

CAPUT XX [Rec. XI].

VERS. 13. Quem constituit alium super terram, aut quem posuit super orbem, quem fabricatus est? 46. Quem per se condidit mundum, per se quoque regit. Ut videlicet subaudias nullum. Per se quippe mundum regit, quem per se condidit; nec eget alienis adjutoriis ad regendum, qui non eguit ad faciendum. Sed haec idcirco colliguntur, ut liquido indicet quia omnipotens Deus, si per semetipsum regere non negligit quod creavit, quod bene creavit utique bene regit, quia quod pie condidit impie non disponit; et qui necdum facta curavit ut essent, quae sunt facta non deserit. Quia ergo praesens est in regimine qui auctor exstitit in creatione, ideo curam nostri non praeterit. Unde et apte subjungit:

CAPUT XXI.

VERS. 14. Si direxerit ad eum cor suum, spiritum illius et flatum ad se trahet. 783 47. Curva hominum corda, cum vult, ad se erigendo, dirigit. Curvum cor est cum ima appetit, dirigitur cum ad superna sublevatur. Si ergo homo cor suum ad Dominum dirigit, spiritum et flatum illius Dominus ad se trahit. Spiritum videlicet pro internis cogitationibus, flatum vero qui per corpus trahitur, pro externis actionibus ponit. Deo ergo spiritum hominis et flatum a se trahere est ad conversionem sui desiderii et interiora nostra et exteriora commutare, ut nihil jam menti exterius libeat, nihil caro inferius, vel si appetit, adipisci conetur; sed omne quod homo est ad eum videlicet a quo est et interius desiderando ferveat, et exterius se edomando constringat. Unde et apte subjungit:

CAPUT XXII [Rec. XII].

VERS. 15. Deficiet omnis caro simul, et homo in cinerem revertetur. 48. Tunc caro deficiet, et homo in cinerem per humilitatem revertitur. Simul enim omnis caro deficit, quando jam nullis suis moribus servit, quia praesidens spiritus cuncta ejus fluxa restringit, et quodam districtionis suae gladio omne quod in illa male vivebat, interficit. Hoc nimirum disciplinae gladio semetipsum Jeremias interfecerat, cum dicebat: Postquam convertisti me, egi poenitentiam; et postquam ostendisti mihi percussi femur meum

(Jerem. XXXI, 19). Quid enim in femore, nisi voluptas carnis accipitur? Et quid est quod ait: Postquam ostendisti mihi, percussi femur meum, nisi quod postquam superna spiritaliter vidit, omne quod in se inferius carnaliter vivebat exstinxit, ut quanto magis summa patescerent, tanto amplius ima quae tenuerat non liberent? Nam quanto incipit quisque superius vivere, tanto et inchoat inferius interire. Juxta affectum namque carnalis operationis omnis caro Pauli simul interierat, cum dicebat: Vivo autem jam non ego, vivit vero in me Christus (Galat. II, 29). [Vet. XXVII.] 49. Peccator mortalitatis suae obliviscitur, secus justus. Bene etiam Eliu hoc loco subdidit: Et homo in cinerem revertetur. In peccato enim quisque positus mortalitatis suae obliviscitur, et terram se esse non meminit, dum adhuc per superbiam inflatur. Post conversionis vero suae gratiam, cum humilitatis spiritu tangitur, quid esse se aliud quam cinerem recordatur? Jam in cinerem David reversus fuerat, cum dicebat: Memento, Domine, quod pulvis sumus (Psal. CII, 15). Abraham in cinerem reversus fuerat, dicens: Loquar ad Dominum meum, cum sim pulvis et cinis (Genes. XVIII, 27). Et si viventem carnem necnon in terra mors solverat, hoc tamen apud se erant, quod se futuros absque dubitatione praevidebant. Hinc alias dicitur: Auferes spiritum eorum, et deficient, et in pulverem suum revertuntur (Psal. CIII, 29). Qui autem spiritus, nisi spiritus superbiae nominatur? Tollatur ergo spiritus eorum ut deficiant, id est subducto superbiae spiritu, nihil se de se esse cognoscant. Et revertantur in pulverem, id est humilientur ex infirma conditione. Propter hunc pulverem, ad cujus memoriam qui semetipsos considerant revocantur, per Sapientiam dicitur: Justi fulgebunt, et sicut scintillae in arundineto discurrent (Sap. III, 7). Sancti enim viri dum peccatoribus permiscentur, eos exemplorum suorum igne succendunt, atque omne quod nitent, in cinerem redigunt, quia pietatis flamma consumpti, dum infirmitatem conditionis suae conspiciunt, nihil aliud quam favillam se esse cognoscunt, ut a superbiae suae duritia resoluti, per poenitentiam dicant id quod supra protulimus: Memento, Domine, quia pulvis sumus (Psal. CII, 15). 784 Bene ergo dicitur quia cum ad se spiritum hominis Dominus trahit, deficiet omnis caro simul, et homo in cinerem revertetur. [Rec. XIII.] Haec Eliu et vera sunt et magna, quae dicit; sed quia male mox ex eo quod bene sensit intumuit, verbis sequentibus prodit, dicens:

CAPUT XXIII [Vet. XXVIII].

VERS. 16. Si habes ergo intellectum, audi quod dicitur, et ausculta vocem eloquii mei. 50. Superbi plus videndo caligant et caecutiunt. Quo magis superbiae vitium patimur, minus videmus. Habent hoc proprium omnes arrogantes, ut cum fortasse acutum aliquid sentiunt, inde mox ad vitium elationis erumpant, sensusque omnium in sui comparatione despiciant, seque in suo judicio aliorum meritis anteponant. Quibus contingit miseris ut plus videndo tenebrescant, quia dum subtilia attendunt, semetipsos intueri nesciunt; et quo intelligentiam acutius percipiunt, eo per superbiam deterius cadunt. Qui bene quidem subtilia conspicerent, si in eo quod proferunt se viderent. Superius namque Eliu dixerat: Si habes quod loquaris, responde mihi: loquere, volo enim te apparere justum (Job XXXIII, 32). Nunc autem ait: Si habes intellectum, audi quod dicitur. Ecce quomodo paulisper elatio per verborum incrementa proficit. Superius dubitavit si posset beatus Job proferre quod justum est; nunc vero discutit si hoc quod dicitur saltem possit audire. Ibi dixit: Si habes quod loquaris, responde mihi. Ac si diceret: Dic aliquid, si tamen dignus poteris esse qui dicas. Hic autem ait: Si habes intellectum, audi quod dicitur. Ac si aperte dicat: Audi me, si tamen dignus poteris esse qui audias. Isti sunt quotidiani defectus, qui in cordibus reproborum fiunt, quibus indesinenter ad deteriora descendunt, quia dum minora incaute negligunt, ad majora perniciose prorumpunt. Jam et hoc de superbia fuerat, quod beatum Job id quod justum est loqui posse dubitabat. Sed dum hanc in semetipso considerare negligit, ad nequiora pervenit, ut non solum posse ab eo dici quod justum est dubitet, sed etiam dicentem se justa ab eo intelligi posse desperet. Unde vitium superbiae ab ipsa mox radice secandum est, ut cum latenter oritur, tunc vigilanter abscidatur, ne provectu vigeat, ne usu roboretur. Difficile enim in se quisque inveteratam superbiam deprehendit, quia nimirum hoc vitium quanto magis patimur, tanto minus videmus. Sic quippe in mente superbia, sicut in oculis caligo generatur. Quo se haec latius dilatat, eo vehementius lumen angustat. Paulisper ergo elatio in praecordiis crescit, et cum se vastius extenderit, oppressae mentis oculum funditus claudit, ut captivus animus typum elationis et pati possit, et tamen id quod patitur videre non possit. Sed quia arrogantes viri aliquando, ut diximus, recta non recte sentiunt, et bona invenire noverunt, sed haec bene proferre contemnunt, Eliu post elationis typum, quo dixerat: Si habes intellectum, audi quod dicitur, subdit dicens:

CAPUT XXIV [Vet. XXIX].

VERS. 17. Nunquid qui non amat judicium sanari potest? Quomodo tu eum qui justus est in tantum condemnas? 51. In omnibus quae dicimus attendendum; quid, cui, quando et quomodo dicatur. Bonam quidem sententiam protulit, sed beato Job proferenda non fuit. In omni enim quod dicitur summopere intuendum est quid dicatur, cui dicatur, quando dicatur, quomodo dicatur. Eliu autem attendit quid diceret, sed cui diceret non attendit. Beatus quippe Job amabat judicium, 785 quia causas suas cum Domino pensare subtiliter noverat. Nec condemnaverat eum qui justus est, sed cur sine peccato percussus fuerat in dolore positus cum humilitate requirebat. Amat judicium quisquis vias suas subtiliter discutit, et secretarium cordis ingressus, quid Dominus ipsi tribuat, quid ipse Domino debeat pensat. Quod beatus Job quomodo non fecerat, qui tam crebra sacrificia in expiatione filiorum etiam pro cogitationibus offerebat? Quia ergo Eliu dixit quod is qui judicium non amat sanari non possit, arguens beatum Job quod judicium non amaret, et quia eum qui justus est condemnasset, illico ejusdem justi, id est Domini, justitiam subdit, dicens:

CAPUT XXV [Rec.

XIV] VERS. 18. Qui dicit regi, apostata; qui vocat duces impios. 52. Apostata est qui aliis praeest non ut prosit, sed ut dominetur. Saepe novimus quod plerique qui praesunt inordinatum sibi metum a subditis exigunt, et non tam propter Dominum quam pro Domino venerari volunt. Intus enim se tumore cordis extollunt, cunctosque subditos in sui comparatione despiciunt, nec condescendendo consulunt, sed dominando premunt, quia videlicet alta cogitatione se erigunt, et aequales se illis quibus eos praeesse contingit non agnoscunt. Contra hunc tumorem per Ecclesiasticum librum dicitur: Ducem te constituerunt; noli extolli, sed esto in illis quasi unus ex illis (Eccli. XXXII, 1). Hunc tumorem Dominus per prophetam in pastoribus increpans ait: Vos autem cum austeritate imperabatis eis, et cum potentia (Ezech. XXXIV, 4). Ipsa enim bona quae subditis dicunt dominando potius quam consulendo proferunt, quia videlicet quidquam eis quasi ex aequo dicere semetipsos existimant dejecisse. Singularitate enim gaudent culminis, et non aequalitate conditionis. Sed quia haec tumentia corda rectorum subtiliter Dominus pensat, bene contra eos dicitur: Qui dicit regi, apostata. Unusquisque enim superbus rector toties ad culpam apostasiae dilabitur, quoties, praeesse hominibus delectatus, honoris sui singularitate laetatur. Sub quo enim sit non considerat, et quod aequalibus quasi non sit aequalis exsultat. Unde autem haec vitiorum radix pullulat in corde regentium, nisi ex imitatione illius qui, despectis angelorum societatibus, dixit: Ascendam super altitudinem nubium, et similis ero Altissimo (Isai. XIV, 14)? Quia ergo unusquisque rector quoties extollitur in eo quod caeteros regit, toties per lapsum superbiae a summi rectoris servitio separatur; et cum aequales sibi subditos despicit, ejus super se dominium sub quo omnes aequales sunt non agnoscit, recte dicitur: Qui dicit regi, apostata. [Vet. XXX.] 53. Impius est, si suae superbiae exemplo, subditos in praeceps trahat. Quia vero cum dominando praesunt, exemplo suae superbiae subditos ad impietatem trahunt, apte subjungitur. Qui vocat duces impios. Ad viam namque pietatis ducerent, si subditorum oculis humilitatis exempla monstrarent. [Rec. XV.] Dux autem est impius, qui a tramite veritatis exorbitat; et dum ipse in praeceps ruit, ad abrupta sequentes invitat. Dux est impius, qui per tumoris exempla viam ostendit erroris. Paulus dux esse impietatis metuebat, cum potestatis suae celsitudinem reprimebat, dicens: Nec quaerentes ab hominibus gloriam, neque a vobis, neque ab aliis, cum possimus oneri esse, 786 ut Christi apostoli, sed facti sumus in medio vestrum parvuli (I Thessal. II, 6). Parvulus in medio eorum factus fuerat, quia timebat ne si inter discipulos honorem suae celsitudinis vindicaret, exempla elationis ostenderet. Timebat nimirum ne dum ipse sibi potestatem pastoralis potentiae quaereret, grex subditus per abrupta sequeretur, et ad impietatem sequentes duceret, qui pietatis officium suscepisset. 54. Sibi subditis virtutum splendore praeluceat. Eorum culpas prudenter et humiliter corrigat. Unde necesse est ut is qui praeest quae exempla subditis praebeat solerter attendat; et tantis se sciat vivere, quantis praeesse; ac vigilanter inspiciat ne in eo quod praelatus est intumescat; ne jura debitae potestatis immoderatius exigat; ne disciplinae jus mutetur in rigorem superbiae; et unde a perversitate subditos restringere poterat, inde magis intuentium corda pervertat; ne, ut dictum est, impietatis dux per officium pietatis existat. Non autem debet hominum ducatum suscipere, qui nescit homines bene vivendo praeire; ne qui ad hoc eligitur ut aliorum culpas corrigat, quod resecare debuit, ipse committat. Hinc inde ergo se qui praesunt circumspiciant, ut sibi et subditis vivant, ut bonum quod faciunt, et intra sinum mentis abscondant, et tamen ex eo ad provectum sequentium exempla rectae operationis impartiant, ut subditorum animadvertentes

culpas corrigant, nec tamen per vim ejusdem animadversionis intumescant, ut quaedam leniter correpta tolerent, nec tamen disciplinae vincula eadem lenitate dissolvant, ut quaedam tolerando dissimulent, nec tamen ea crescere dissimulando permittant. Laboriosa sunt ista, et nisi divina gratia fulciat, ad custodiendum difficilia. Recte vero de adventu districti judicis per Sapientiae librum dicitur: Horrende et cito apparebit, quoniam judicium durissimum his qui praesunt fiet (Sap. VI, 6). Quia ergo plerumque per potestatem regiminis ad culpam prorumpitur elationis, atque apud districtum judicem ipsa elatio impietas aestimatur, bene de Domino per Eliu dicitur: Qui vocat duces impios. De ipso quippe ducatu dum superbiunt, exemplo suo subditos ad impietatem trahunt. 55. Alios judicans, superno judici assidue se sistat. Potestas accepta non honor, sed onus aestimanda. Ambitus infinita mala. Cura pastoralis nec cupiditate amplectenda, nec formidine deferenda. Unde magnopere curandum est ut qui regendis hominibus praefertur, apud se intra secretarium mentis in cathedra praesideat humilitatis. Cumque judicanti ei a caeteris foris assistitur, vigilanti oculo incessanter aspiciat, cui quandoque judici ipse de his judicandus assistat, ut quanto nunc ante eum quem non videt, sollicitius trepidat, tanto eum cum viderit securior cernat. [Rec. XVI.] Penset ergo qui ad satisfaciendum districto judici de sua tantummodo anima fortasse vix sufficit, quia quot regendis subditis praeest, reddendae apud eum rationis tempore, ut ita dicam, tot solus animas habet. Quae nimirum cogitatio, si assidue mentem excoquit, omnem superbiae tumorem premit. Et rector providus tanto jam neque rex apostata, neque dux impius vocabitur, quanto ei cogitatione sollicita potestas quae accepta est, non honor, sed onus aestimatur. Nam cui esse nunc judiciem libet, huic videre tunc judicem non libet. Numerari enim culpae nequeunt, quae habendae potestatis amore perpetrantur. Tunc solum vero 787 potestas bene geritur, cum non amando, sed timendo retinetur. Quae ut ministrari recte valeat, oportet primum ut hanc non cupiditas, sed necessitas imponat. Percepta autem nec pro formidine debet deseri, nec ex libidine amplecti; ne aut pejus quis quasi ex humilitate superbiat, si divinae dispensationis ordinem fugiendo contemnat; aut eo jugum 788 superni rectoris abjiciat, quo eum super caeteros privatum regimen delectat. Potestas ergo cum percipitur, non ex libidine amanda est, sed ex longanimitate toleranda, ut inde tunc ad judicium salubriter levis sit, unde nunc ad ministerium patienter gravis innotescit.

LIBER VIGESIMUS QUINTUS.

In explicatione capitis XXXIV, a versu 19 ad 30, de reproborum poena occultisque Dei judiciis disseritur.

CAPUT PRIMUM.

1. Error illorum qui in hominibus quod habent, non quod sunt, attendunt. Ipsa humanae conditionis qualitas indicat quam longe rebus caeteris praestat. Nam collata homini ratio asserit quantum omnia quae vel vita, vel sensu, vel ratione carent, natura rationalis antecedit. Et tamen, quia ab internis atque invisibilibus oculos claudimus, et visibilibus pascimus, plerumque hominem non ex eo quod ipse est, sed ex his quae circa ipsum sunt veneramur. Cumque non intuemur quid ipse sit, sed quid possit in acceptione personarum, non ex personis, sed ex rebus adjacentibus ducimur. Sicque fit ut is quoque apud nos intus in despectionem veniat, qui foris honoratur, quia dum pro his quae circa illum sunt honorabilis habetur, rebus suis in examine nostro postponitur. Sed omnipotens Deus vitam hominum ex sola qualitate interrogat meritorum; et saepe inde plus punit, unde hic majora ad ministerium contulit, Veritate attestante, quae ait: Cui multum datum est, multum quaeretur ab eo (Luc. XII, 48). Unde bene nunc per Eliu dicitur:

CAPUT II.

CAP. XXXIV, VERS. 19. Qui non accipit personam principum, nec cognovit tyrannum cum disceptaret contra pauperem. 2. Non est acceptio personarum apud Deum. Potest autem per principem vel tyrannum quisque superbus intelligi; per pauperem vero humilis designari. Tyrannum ergo disceptantem contra pauperem non cognoscit, quia superbos omnes vitam nunc humilium deprimentes, in judicio nescire se perhibet, dicens: Nescio vos unde sitis (Luc. XIII, 25). Et quia sic potenter cum vult destruit, sicut cum voluit potenter creavit, apte ratiocinando subjungitur: IBID. Opus enim manuum ejus sunt universi. [Rec. II.] Atque mox subditur:

CAPUT III.

VERS. 20. Subito morientur, et in media nocte curvabuntur populi, et pertransibunt. 3. Iniquorum omnium mors subita, quia non praevisa. Quamlibet sero de hac vita tollantur iniqui, subito et repente tolluntur, quia finem suum cogitando praevidere nesciunt. Subitum est homini, quod ante cogitare non potuit. Subito dives ille tultus est, qui horrea quae praeparabat deseruit, et inferni locum quem non praevidebat invenit. Ad aliud exercebat animam per cogitationem, sed ad aliud emisit per sententiam; aliud dum viveret contemplatus est, aliud dum moreretur expertus. Reliquit enim diu tractata temporalia, et inopinata invenit aeterna. Unde ei propter hanc ignorantiam caecitatis suae bene per divinam sententiam dicitur: Hac nocte repetunt animam tuam a te (Luc. XII, 20). In nocte quippe ablata est, quae in obscuritate est cordis amissa. In nocte ablata est, quae considerationis lucem habere noluit, ut quod poterat pati praevideret. Unde bene discipulis futura cogitantibus Paulus apostolus dicit: Vos autem fratres, non estis in tenebris, ut vos dies illa tanquam fur comprehendat. Omnes enim vos filii lucis estis, et filii diei; non sumus noctis neque tenebrarum (I Thess. V, 4). Dies enim exitus tanquam fur in nocte comprehendit, quando stultorum animas futura non praevidentes ejicit. Unde hic quoque apte subjungitur: Et in media nocte curvabuntur populi, et pertransibunt. In media nocte curvati pertranseunt, qui obscuritate suae negligentiae humiliati rapiuntur. Tunc curvabuntur per sententiam judicis, qui nunc curvari negligunt per humilitatem cordis. Electi autem ne inviti curventur in morte, sponte curvantur in humilitate. Unde sanctae Ecclesiae de conversa prole persecutorum dicitur: Venient ad te curvi filii eorum, qui humiliaverunt te (Isai. LX, 14). 4. Vita hominis post peccatum, transitus est: secus ante peccatum. Et bene de morientibus populis non ait: Transibunt, sed pertransibunt, quia etiam vivendo temporaliter quotidie ad finem tendimus, et praesentem vitam quasi quamdam viam subigendo transimus. Hoc ipsum enim morituros vivere quasi ad mortem ire est. Et quot dies vitae peragimus, quasi in itinere ad locum propositum tot passibus propinquamus. Ipsa quippe augmenta detrimenta sunt temporum, quia vitae nostrae spatia quanta esse coeperint, incipiunt jam tanta non esse. [Vet. II.] Primus vero homo ita conditus fuit, ut manente illo decederent tempora, ne cum temporibus ipse transiret. Stabat enim momentis decurrentibus, quia nequaquam ad vitae terminum per dierum incrementa tendebat. Stabat tanto robustius quanto semper stanti arctius inhaerebat. At ubi vetitum contigit, mox 789 offenso creatore coepit ire cum tempore. Statu videlicet immortalitatis amisso, cursus eum mortalitatis absorbuit (Genes. III, 4). Et dum juventute ad senium, senio traheretur ad mortem, transeundo didicit stando quid fuit. Cujus nos quia de propagine nascimur, radicis amaritudinem quasi in virgulto retinemus. Nam quia ex illo originem ducimus, ejus cursum nascendo sortimur, ut eo ipso quotidiano momento quo vivimus incessanter a vita transeamus, et vivendi nobis spatium unde crescere creditur, inde decrescat. Quia ergo ad summam moriendi quotidie tendimus per incrementa vivendi, bene de morientibus nequaquam transibunt dicitur, sed pertransibunt, quia transeunt etiam dum vivunt, sed pertranseunt dum moriuntur: Sequitur.

CAPUT IV [Rec. III].

Ibid. Et auferent violentum absque manu. 5. Iniquos non praevisa Dei manus ad supplicium rapit. Subaudis divina judicia. Absque manu vero auferent eum qui manu violentus fuit. Absque manu auferent, quia videlicet subito exitu urgente invisibiliter rapitur, qui visibiliter rapiebat. Vidit ipse quos rapuit, sed quis illum in morte rapiat non videt. Absque manu ergo violentus aufertur, quia et raptorem suum non intuetur, et tamen ducitur. Quem tanto sequitur districtior sententia, quanto peccanti ei magna est patientia prorogata, quia divina severitas eo iniquum acrius punit, quo diutius pertulit. Saepe vero evenit, ut dum peccatores superna clementia exspectat, in majorem cordis caecitatem prosiliant. Unde scriptum est: An ignoras, quia benignitas Dei ad poenitentiam te adducit? Tu autem secundum duritiam tuam et cor impoenitens, thesaurizas tibi iram in die irae, et revelationis justi judicii Dei (Rom. II, 4). Et ecce dum violentus quisque quos valuerit rapit, dum invalidos opprimit, et dum diu omne quod nequiter concupiscit exercet, quia non subito percutitur, sed ejus in finem poena differtur, nequissima ejus actio a Deo videri non creditur. Unde apte postquam ejus narravit interitum, illico de Domino adjungit, dicens:

CAPUT V.

VERS. 21. Oculi enim ejus super vias hominum, et omnes gressus eorum considerat. 6. Stulte et impie peccator ex Dei patientia cogitat, sua flagitia aut non videri a Deo, aut approbari. Oculos aperiet poena, quos culpa clausit. Tunc enim nequaquam considerare credebatur, quando violentus iste omne malum quod poterat inulte perpetrabat. Aestimabatur Deus injusti acta non cernere, quia differebat juste damnare; et magna ejus patientia quasi quaedam negligentia putabatur. Iniquus quoque ipse toties se in peccatis suis non videri a Deo credidit, quoties inulte peccavit. Cui per quemdam sapientem dicitur: Ne dicas, peccavi, et quid accidit mihi triste (Eccli. V, 4)? Emendare non vult nequitiam, pro qua dignam non pertulit poenam; et quo pie exspectatus est, eo est ad peccandum nequiter instigatus; et patientiae supernae longanimitatem despiciens, unde corrigere culpam suam debuit, inde cumulavit, sicut per eumdem Job dicitur: Dedit ei Deus locum poenitentiae, et ille abutitur eo in superbia (Job XXIV, 23). Saepe etiam, quia poenam quam meretur repente non suscipit, hoc ipsum Deo non aestimat displicere quod facit. [Vet. III.] Eat itaque nunc, et ad quaslibet blasphemias praesumendo prorumpat; voluptatum suarum nequitias impleat, aliena rapiat, innocentium oppressione 790 satietur, et quia necdum percutitur, vias suas a Domino aut non videri aestimet, aut quod pejus est, approbari! Veniet profecto, veniet aeterna et repentina percussio; et tunc cognoscet a Deo cuncta conspici, quando se improviso exitu viderit pro cunctorum retributione damnari. Tunc in poena sua oculos aperiet, quos diu tenuit clausos in culpa. Tunc considerasse omnia verum judicem sentiet, quando malorum suorum meritum jam evadere sentiendo non possit. Iniquus ergo qui diu exspectatus est, idcirco est repente sublatus, quia oculi Domini super vias hominum, et omnes gressus eorum considerat. Ac si diceret: Quia ea quae diu patienter conspicit, quandoque inulta non deserit. Nam ecce subito violentum rapuit, et mala ejus quae exspectando pertulit animadvertendo resecavit. Nemo igitur dicat humana facta Deum non cernere, cum iniquum quempiam iniquitates suas libere prospicit cumulare. Subito enim tollitur, qui diu toleratur. 7. Gressus hominis quos Deus considerat, qui sint. Gressus vero hominum vocat, vel singulas operationes quibus innitimur, vel alternantes motus intimae cogitationis quibus quasi passibus, vel longe a Domino recedimus, vel pie Domino propinquamus. Ad Deum enim quasi tot gressibus mens accedit, quot bonis motibus proficit. Et rursum tot gressibus longe fit, quot malis cogitationibus deterescit. Unde plerumque contingit ut necdum procedat in opere motus mentis, et tamen perfecta jam culpa sit ex ipso reatu cogitationis, sicut scriptum est: Manus in manu non erit innocens malus (Prov. XI, 21). Manus enim manui jungi solet, quando quiescit in otio, et nullus eam usus laboris exercet. Manus ergo in manu non erit innocens malus. Ac si diceret: Et cum manus cessat ab iniquo opere, malus tamen non est innocens per cogitationem. Quia ergo novimus quod districte omnia non solum facta, sed saltem cogitata pensentur, quid faciemus de incessu mali operis, si sic subtiliter Deus judicat gressus cordis? Ecce occulta mentis nostrae itinera nullus hominum videt, et tamen ante Dei oculos tot gressus ponimus quot affectus movemus. [Vet. IV.] Toties ante illum labimur quoties a recto itinere infirme cogitationis pede claudicamus. Nisi enim in conspectu ejus iste assiduus nostrarum mentium lapsus incresceret, per prophetam scilicet non clamaret: Auferte malum cogitationum vestrarum ab oculis meis (Isai. I, 16). Haec nimirum dicens, vim coopertae nostrae malitiae quasi ferre se non posse testatur. Quae cooperta illi esse non potest, quia videlicet importune ejus conspectui ingeritur quidquid a nobis illicitum occulte cogitatur Omnia enim, sicut scriptum est, nuda et aperta sunt oculis ejus (Hebr. IV, 13). Unde hic quoque apte subjungitur:

CAPUT VI [Rec. IV].

VERS. 22. Non sunt tenebrae, et non est umbra mortis, ut abscondantur ibi qui operantur iniquitatem. 8. Nemo judicio Dei qui nihil aut obliviscitur aut ignorat, absconditur. Quid per tenebras, nisi ignorantiam, et quid per umbram mortis, nisi oblivionem studuit designare? De quorumdam quippe ignorantia dicitur: Tenebris obscuratum habentes intellectum (Ephes. IV, 18). Et rursum de oblivione quae in morte contingit scriptum est: In illa die peribunt omnes cogitationes eorum (Psal. CXLV, 4). Quia ergo 791 per mortem funditus oblivioni traditur quidquid vivendo cogitatur, quasi quaedam umbra mortis oblivio est. Sicut enim agit mors interveniens non esse quod fuit in vita, ita interveniens agit oblivio non esse quod fuit in memoria. Recte itaque umbra ejus dicitur, quia velut de ipsa exprimitur, dum vim illius sopiendo sensus imitatur. Deus autem quia mala hominum nec cogitata ignorat, nec perpetrata obliviscitur, nisi ab ejus oculis poenitendo deleantur, congrue dictum est: Non sunt tenebrae et non est umbra mortis, ut abscondantur ibi qui operantur iniquitatem. Ac si diceret:

Idcirco ejus judicio nullus absconditur, quia nullatenus potest aut non videre quod facimus, aut oblivisci quod videt. 9. Omnis mutabilitatis Deus est expers. Non homo, non angeli. Quamvis intelligi tenebrae vel umbra mortis, etiam aliter possunt. Omnis namque immutatio velut quaedam mortis imitatio est. Id enim quod mutat quasi ab eo quod erat interficit, ut desinat esse quod fuit, et incipiat esse quod non fuit. Lumen igitur verum, creator videlicet noster, quia nulla mutabilis vicissitudine tenebrescit, nullis naturae suae defectibus obumbratur, sed ejus esse sine mutabilitate fulgere est, tenebrae vel umbra mortis dicitur ei non inesse. Unde alias scriptum est: Apud quem non est transmutatio, nec vicissitudinis obumbratio (Jac. I, 17). Et unde rursus Paulus apostolus dicit: Qui solus habet immortalitatem, et lucem habitat inaccessibilem (I Tim. VI, 16). [Vet. V.] Sed cum cuncti noverimus quod et humana anima et angelici spiritus sint immortales instituti, cur ab Apostolo solus Deus immortalitatem habere perhibetur, nisi quia solus Deus vere non moritur, qui solus nunquam mutatur? 10. Humana quippe anima in lapsum non caderet, si mutabilis non fuisset; quae a paradisi quoque gaudiis expulsa, si mutabilis non esset, ad vitam nunquam rediret. In hoc ipso vero quod ad vitam redire nititur, defectus suos cogitur alternante semper mutabilitate tolerare. Quia ergo ex nihilo est condita ex se nihilominus infra se tendit, nisi ad boni desiderii statum artificis sui manu teneatur. Ex eo itaque quod creatura est, deorsum ire habet. Virtute namque propria in praeceps posse se ire considerat, sed ad creatorem suum amoris manu se retinet, ne cadat, quousque ad immutabilitatem transeat, et eo vere immortaliter, quo immutabiliter vivat. 11. Ipsi quoque angelici spiritus mutabiles ex natura sunt conditi, quatenus aut sua sponte caderent aut ex arbitrio starent. Sed quia humiliter elegerunt ei inhaerere, a quo creati sunt, hanc ipsam in se mutabilitatem suam standi jam immutabilitate vicerunt: ut hoc ipsum merito transcenderent, quod naturae suae ordine mutabilitati subesse potuissent. Quia ergo solius divinae naturae est umbras ignorantiae mutabilitatisque non perpeti, dicatur recte, Non sunt tenebrae, et non est umbra mortis, ut abscondantur ibi qui operantur iniquitatem. [Vet. VI.] Lux enim aeterna, quae Deus est, quanto incommutabiliter 792 fulget, tanto penetrabiliter videt; et neque occulta nescit, quia cuncta penetrat, neque penetrata obliviscitur, quia incommutabilis durat. Proinde quoties indignum aliquid corde concipimus, toties in luce peccamus, quia ipsa nobis et non sibi praesentibus praesto est, et perverse gradientes in ipsam impingimus, a qua per meritum longe sumus. Cum vero nos videri non credimus, in sole clausos oculos tenemus. Illum videlicet nobis abscondimus, non nos illi. Nunc ergo dum possumus, a conspectu aeterni judicis et male cogitata, et pejus perpetrata deleamus; revocemus ante oculos cordis quidquid perverse egimus per nequitiam praesumptionis. Nihil sibi nostra blandiatur infirmitas, atque in his quae recolit, semetipsam delicate non palpet, sed quanto sibi mali sit conscia, tanto in se benignius sit severa, proponat contra se futurum judicium, et quaeque in se sentit districte ferienda per sententiam judicis, haec in se pie feriat per poenitentiam conversionis. Unde apte postquam violenti hujus poena descripta est, sequitur:

CAPUT VII [Rec. V].

VERS. 23. Neque enim ultra in hominis potestate est ut veniat ad Deum in judicium. 12. Dei judicium praevenire debemus nosmetipsos judicando. Versus iste tanto majore disputatione indiget, quanto hoc quod dicit, si negligitur, acrius dolet. Hic nimirum non illud judicium designatur, quod per aeternam retributionem punit, sed quod mente conceptum per conversationem diluit. Ad illud quippe venire non desiderat, quisquis se per illud damnari formidat. Dum ergo dicitur: Neque enim ultra in hominis potestate est, ut veniat ad Deum in judicium, profecto ostenditur esse quoddam judicium quod quandoque etiam a damnatis ac reprobis desideretur. Et quod est illud, nisi hoc, de quo Paulus apostolus dicit: Si nosmetipsos dijudicaremus, non utique judicaremur (I Cor. XI, 31)? et de quo per prophetam dicitur: Non est judicium in gressibus eorum (Isai. LIX, 8); et de quo David ait: Honor regis judicium diligit (Psal. XCVIII, 4); videlicet qui jam Deum honorat ex fide, sollicite judicet quid ei debeat in operatione. Unde rursum scriptum est: Judicare coram Domino, et exspecta eum (Job. XXXV, 14). Coram Domino scilicet judicatur, qui corde Dominum conspicit, et actus suos sub ejus praesentia, sollicita inquisitione discernit. Quem tanto quis securius exspectat, quanto quotidie vitam suam suspectus examinat. Qui enim ad extremum ejus judicium venit, non jam coram illo, sed ab illo judicatur. De hoc quoque mentis judicio obliviscenti animae per prophetam Dominus dicit: Reduc me in memoriam, ut judicemur simul; narra si quid habes, ut justificeris (Isai. XLIII, 26). [Rec. VI.] 13. Judicii hujus ordo. Accusat conscientia, ratio judicat, timor ligat, dolor cruciat. Debet enim uniuscujusque mens et causas suas apud Dominum, et causas Domini contra se sollicita inquisitione discutere; debet caute pensare, vel quae ab eo bona perceperit, vel quae mala bonis illius perverse vivendo responderit. Quod electi quidem quotidie facere omnino non cessant. Unde bene Salomon ait: Cogitationes justorum, judicia (Prov. XII, 5). 793 Accedunt enim ad secretarium judicis intra sinum cordis: considerant quam districte quandoque feriat qui diu patienter exspectat; metuunt in his quae se egisse meminerunt, et puniunt flendo quod perpetrasse se intelligunt; timent subtilia Dei judicia, etiam de his quae in semetipsis intelligere fortasse non possunt. Vident enim videri divinitus quod ipsi in se per humanitatem non vident; conspiciunt districtum judicem, qui quo tardius venit, eo severius percutit. Sanctorum etiam patrum residere conventum cum eo pariter contemplantur, eorumque vel exempla, vel dicta se contempsisse reprehendunt, atque in hoc secreto interioris judicii, ipsa mentis suae exsecutione constricti, poenitendo feriunt quod superbiendo commiserunt. Ibi namque adversum se quidque se impugnat, enumerant: ibi ante oculos suos omne quod defleant, coacervant; ibi quidquid per iram districti judicis decerni possit, intuentur; ibi tot patiuntur supplicia, quot pati timent; nec deest in hoc judicio mente cencepto omne ministerium, quod punire reos suos plenius debeat. Nam conscientia accusat, ratio judicat, timor ligat, dolor excruciat. Quod judicium eo certius punit, quo interius saevit, quia videlicet ab exterioribus non accedit. Unusquisque enim cum causam hujus examinis contra se aggredi coeperit, ipse est actor qui exhibet, ipse reus qui exhibetur; odit se qualem fuisse se meminit, et ipse qui est, per semetipsum insequitur illum qui fuit, atque ab ipso homine adversus semetipsum fit quaedam rixa in animo, parturiens pacem cum Deo. Hanc cordis rixam Dominus requirebat, cum per prophetam diceret: Attendi et auscultavi, nemo quod bonum est loquitur, nullus est qui agat poenitentiam super peccato suo, dicens: Quid feci (Jerem. VIII, 6)? Ista cordis humani rixa placatus est, cum prophetae suo de Achab rege semetipsum reprehendente loqueretur, dicens: Vidisti Achab humiliatum coram me? Quia igitur humiliatus est mei causa, non inducam malum in diebus ejus (III Reg. XXI, 29). 14. Hoc judicium quod mali declinant, justi semper exercent, quam utiliter subeamus. Sic a peccati vetustate renovamur. Quia ergo nunc in potestate est internum mentis nostrae contra nos subire judicium, recognoscendo accusemus nosmetipsos, et quales fuimus poenitendo torqueamus; non cessemus dum licet judicare quod fecimus, audiamus caute quod dicitur: Neque enim ultra in hominis potestate est, ut veniat ad Deum in judicium. Reproborum namque esse proprium solet, semper prava agere, et nunquam quae egerint retractare. Omne enim quod faciunt caeca mente pertranseunt, factumque suum nisi cum puniti fuerint, non agnoscunt. At contra electorum est actus suos quotidie ab ipso cogitationis fonte discutere, et omne quod turbidum profluit ab intimis exsiccare [Vet. VII]. Sicut enim non sentimus quomodo crescunt membra, proficit corpus, mutatur species, nigredo capillorum albescit in canis (haec quippe omnia nobis nescientibus aguntur in nobis), ita mens nostra per momenta vivendi ipso curarum usu a semetipsa permutatur, et non agnoscimus, nisi vigilanti custodia ad interiora nostra residentes, provectus nostros quotidie defectusque pensemus. Hoc ipsum enim in hac mortali vita consistere, quasi ad vetustatem ire est, 794 et cum indiscussa mens relinquitur, in quodam senio torporis sopitur, quia sui negligens, propositum robur insensibiliter perdens, a forma prioris fortitudinis dum nescit senescit. Unde et per prophetam sub Ephraim specie dicitur: Comederunt alieni robur ejus, et nescivit; sed et cani effusi sunt in eo, et ipse ignoravit (Oseae II, 9). Cum vero semetipsam quaerit, et subtiliter poenitendo se discutit, ab ipsa hac vetustate sua lota lacrymis et moerore incensa renovatur, et quae jam pene inveterata frixerat, per subministrata interni amoris studia novum calet. Unde Paulus apostolus usu mortalis vitae veterascentes discipulos admonet, dicens: Renovamini spiritu mentis vestrae (Ephes. IV, 23). [Rec. VII.] 15. Ut hoc agamus, nos admonent exempla SS. Patrum et divina praecepta. Sed ad haec agenda valde exempla patrum et sacri eloquii praecepta nos adjuvant. Si enim sanctorum opera inspicimus, et divinis jussionibus aurem praebemus, alia nos contemplata, alia audita succendunt, et cor nostrum torpore non constringitur, dum imitatione provocatur. Unde bene ad Moysen dicitur: Ignis in altari semper ardebit, quem nutriet sacerdos, subjiciens mane lingua per singulos dies (Levit. VI, 12). Altare quippe Dei est cor nostrum, in quo jubetur ignis semper ardere, quia necesse est ex illo ad Dominum charitatis flammam indesinenter ascendere. Cui per singulos dies sacerdos ligna subjiciat, ne exstinguatur. Omnis enim Christi fide praeditus membrum utique summi sacerdotis effectus est, sicut cunctis fidelibus Petrus apostolus dicit: Vos autem genus electum, regale sacerdotium (I Pet. II, 9). Et sicut Joannes apostolus dicit: Fecisti nos Deo nostro regnum et sacerdotes (Apoc. II, 6). Sarcerdos ergo in altari ignem nutriens, quotidie ligna subjiciat, id est fidelis quisque, ne in eo charitatis flamma deficiat, in corde suo tam exempla praecedentium quam sacrae Scripturae testimonia congerere non desistat. Nam quasi quaedam fomenta igni dare est in excitatione charitatis vel exempla patrum vel praecepta dominica ministrare. Quia etenim interna novitas nostra ipsa quotidie hujus vitae conversatione veterascit, ignis iste adhibitis lignis nutriendus est, ut dum per usum se nostrae vetustatis extenuat, per patrum testimonia et exempla reviviscat. Et bene illic praecipitur ut mane ligna per dies singulos congerantur. Haec quippe non fiunt, nisi cum nox caetitatis exstinguitur. Vel certe quia mane prima pars diei est, postpositis cogitationibus vitae praesentis, hoc primo loco quisque fidelium cogitet, ut quod in se jamjamque quasi deficit, quibus valet nisibus studium charitatis inflammet. Ignis enim iste in altari Domini, id est in corde nostro citius exstinguitur, nisi solerter adhibitis exemplis patrum et dominicis testimoniis reparetur. 16. Ita charitatis igne succensi, holocaustum Deo sumus. Bene autem illic subjungitur: Et imposito holocausto desuper adolebit adipes pacificorum (Levit. VI, 12). Nam quisquis in se ignem hunc charitatis accendit, semetipsum utique holocaustum desuper imponit, quia omne vitium quod in se male vivebat exurit. Cum enim cogitationum suarum interna considerat, et vitam reprobam per immutationis gladium nactat, in ara se sui cordis imposuit, et igne charitatis 795 incendit. De qua hostia pacificorum adipes redolent, quia interna novae charitatis impinguatio pacem inter nos et Deum faciens, odorem de nobis suavissimum reddit. Quia vero eadem charitas in cordibus electorum inexstinguibilis manet, apte illic subditur: Ignis est iste perpetuus, qui nunquam deficiet de altari (Ibid., 13). Nunquam profecto de altari ignis iste deficiet, quia etiam post hanc vitam eorum mentibus fervor charitatis accrescit. Aeterna quippe contemplatione agitur, ut omnipotens Deus quo magis visus fuerit, eo amplius diligatur. [Vet. VIII.] 17. Divinis praeceptis et sanctorum exemplis adjuti, libertatem consequimur. Quod autem divinis admonitionibus et praecedentium exemplis adjuti de hujus vitae profundo liberamur, bene etiam propheta Jeremia in puteum misso signatum est, qui ut levetur ex puteo, funes ad eum et panni veteres deponuntur (Jerem. XXXVIII, 11). Quid enim funibus nisi praecepta dominica figurantur? Quae quia nos in mala operatione positos, et convinciunt, et eripiunt, quasi ligant et trahunt, coarctant et levant. Sed ne ligatus his funibus dum trahitur incidatur, simul etiam panni veteres deponuntur, quia ne divina praecepta nos terreant, antiquorum patrum nos exempla confortant, et ex eorum comparatione facere nos posse praesumimus, quod ex nostra imbecillitate formidamus. Si ergo levari de hoc profundo festinamus, ligemur funibus, id est praeceptis dominicis astringamur. Intersint etiam panni veteres, cum quibus melius teneantur funes; id est, praecedentium confortemur exemplis, ne infirmos nos ac timidos praecepta subtilia vulnerent dum levant. Quasi quosdam pannos veteres Paulus apostolus subjungebat, cum levandis discipulis suis praeceptis spiritalibus exempla veterum commodaret, dicens: Justi ludibria et verbera experti, insuper et vincula et carceres: lapidati sunt, secti sunt, tentati sunt, in occisione gladii mortui sunt (Hebr. XI, 36). Et paulo post: Habentes itaque tantam impositam nubem testium, deponentes omne pondus, et circumstans nos peccatum, per patientiam curramus ad propositum nobis certamen (Hebr. XII, 1). Et iterum: Mementote praepositorum vestrorum, qui vobis locuti sunt verbum Dei; quorum intuentes exitum conversationis, imitamini fidem (Hebr. XIII, 7). Superius videlicet, dum spiritalia praecepta loqueretur, quasi funes miserat, postmodum vero memorans exempla majorum, quasi veteres pannos adhibebat. 18. A rebus exterioribus ad cor redeundum. Excitati ergo tot vocibus praeceptorum, adjuti tot comparationibus exemplorum, ad corda nostra redeamus, discutiamus omne quod agimus, et quidquid in nobis divinae rectitudinis regulam offendit, accusemus, ut apud districtum judicem ipsa nos accusatio excuset. In hoc enim mentis nostrae judicio tanto citius absolvimur, quanto nos districtius reos tenemus. Nec ad haec agenda praetermittenda sunt tempora, quibus vacat, quia ad haec agenda post hujus vitae tempora non vacat. Vacue quippe non dicitur: Neque enim ultra in hominis potestate est ut veniat ad Deum in judicium. Idcirco namque memoramur quod tunc non possumus, 796 ne nunc quod possumus negligamus. Sed ecce negotia occupant quae nobis incessanter apposita a considerandis nobismetipsis mentis nostrae oculum declinant. In istis namque visibilibus quae intuetur cor nostrum extra se spargitur, et quid de se intrinsecus agatur obliviscitur dum extrinsecus occupatur. Divina autem vox terribilibus sententiis suis quasi quibusdam clavis illud pungit ut evigilet, ut homo occulta super se judicia quae pressus torpore dissimulat, terrore saltem pulsatus expavescat. Ut enim superius diximus, ipso usu vitae veteris mens male assueta deprimitur, et in haec quae spectat exterius quasi dormiens sopitur: quae postquam semel se ad appetenda visibilia foras fudit, a contemplandis invisibilibus intus evanuit. Unde nunc necesse est ut quae per visibilia spargitur de invisibilibus judiciis feriatur; et quia in iis se exterioribus male delectata prostravit, saltem percussa requirat quod deseruit. Ecce autem Scriptura sacra terrore quodam torpentia corda transfigit, ne in his inhaereant quae exterius defluunt, sed quae interius aeterna perdiderunt. Indicat quid sententia occulta decernitur, ne immoderate a nobis haec publica cogitentur. Dicit quid super nos agatur de nobis, ut ab hoc publico temporalitatis colligamus oculum cordis ad secretum internae dispositionis. [Vet. IX.] Nam postquam multa narrata sunt de poena malorum, subito infertur occultum judicium, quod pie super nos justeque disponitur, quomodo alii perdunt quod tenere videbantur, et alii accipiunt quod alii ex meritis perdunt. Ait enim:

CAPUT VIII.

VERS. 24. Conteret multos et innumerabiles, et stare faciet alios pro eis. 19. Alii perdunt quod tenere videbantur, alii prius perditum recipiunt. In exteriora respui reprobationis signum; sicut praedestinationis, ad interiora trahi. Hoc quotidie agitur. Sed quia adhuc finis partium utrarumque non cernitur, minus timetur. Nunquam enim culpam suam reprobi nisi in poena cognoscunt. Et quia poena differtur, culpa despicitur. Labuntur vero a statu justitiae, et locum vitae, illis cadentibus, alii sortiuntur. Sed eo lapsum suum negligunt, quo interitum qui se in aeternum maneat non attendunt. Si enim ad illud quod illic passuri sunt oculos suos mitterent, hoc quod hic faciunt timerent. Cunctis autem liquet quod in illa extrema requisitione examen publicum facturus est omnipotens Deus, ut alios ad tormenta deserat, alios ad participationem regni coelestis admittat. Sed hoc nunc secreto judicio quotidie agitur, quod tunc publico demonstratur. Nam juste ac misericorditer singulorum corda vel examinans, vel disponens, alios in exteriora respuit, alios ad ea quae sunt intrinsecus trahit; hos accendit interna appetere, illos pro voluptatibus suis deserit exteriora cogitare; horum mentem ad superna erigit, illorum superbiam in infimis desideriis mergit. Aliena autem corda humanis oculis clausa sunt, et nescitur qui repellitur, quia penetrari nequeunt quae ab unoquoque cogitantur. Nam saepe corde perverso necdum processit usque ad effectum operis deliberatio cogitationis, et adhuc fortasse per habitum intus astringitur, qui jam 797 mente foris vagatur. Sed talis quilibet iste tunc ante oculos interni judicis cecidit, cum ab appetendis interioribus per desiderium exivit. Nonnunquam vero alii post malae operationis usum ad spem coelestem subito amore reviviscunt; et qui in perversa actione se sparserant, ad sinum internae retractationis semetipsos increpando recolligunt. Hos adhuc respicientes homines quales dudum in opere noverant, tales putant. At contra illi per districtae considerationis examen vitam suam qualem fuisse recolunt insequuntur, sciturque quid fuerint, sed quid jam coeperint esse nescitur. In hoc ergo utroque genere hominum saepe contingit ut et ii qui videntur stare humano judicio jam in conspectu aeterni judicis jaceant; et qui adhuc coram hominibus jacent, jam in conspectu aeterni judicis stent. Quis enim hominum aestimare potuisset Judam vivendi sortem etiam post ministerium apostolatus amittere (Luc. XXIII, 40)? Et quis e contra latronem crederet causam vitae etiam in ipso articulo mortis invenire? Occultus autem judex praesidens, et utrorumque corda discernens, alterum pie statuit, alterum juste confregit. Illum districte exterius repulit, hunc introrsus misericorditer traxit. Unde bene etiam per prophetam casuros alios passionis suae tempore atque alios resurrecturos annuntians, ait: Potum meum cum fletu temperabam (Psal. CI, 10). Potus quippe ab exterioribus interius trahitur, fletus autem ab interioribus exterius emanat. Potum ergo Domino cum fletu temperare est alios ab exterioribus introrsus trahere, alios ab interioribus in exteriora reprobare. [Vet. X, Rec. VIII.] Conteret ergo multos et innumerabiles, et stare faciet alios pro eis. 20. Reprobatio prius intus agitur, et postea extrinsecus ostenditur. Electorum numerus certus et definitus. Sicut autem superius diximus, haec contritio prius intus agitur, ut post extrinsecus ostendatur. Hac contritione nonnunquam adhuc quorumdam exteriora quasi sana sunt, sed jam interiora putruerunt. Scriptum namque est: Ante ruinam exaltatur cor (Prov. XVI, 18). Ibi ergo feriuntur, ubi superbiunt. Unde scriptum est: Contrivi cor eorum fornicans et recedens a me (Ezech. VI, 9). Interius enim fornicari est exterius vetitis delectari. Magna autem contritio cordis est haec eadem elatio superbientis. Eo quippe ipso ab integritate salutis corruit, quo jactantia cujuslibet virtutis intumescit. Superbientes enim Deum despiciunt, et relicta creatoris sui gloria, propriam quaerunt. Quibus jam hoc ipsum cecidisse est, amissa superioris sui potentia, in se venisse. Conteruntur etiam, quia, relictis coelestibus, terram quaerunt. Quae autem major poterit esse contritio quam deserto creatore creaturam quaerere; desertis supernis gaudiis, infimis rebus inhiare? Unde bene per Prophetam dicitur: Humiliat autem peccatores usque ad terram (Psal. CXLVI, 6). Amissis enim coelestibus, terrenum est omne quod sitiunt; et dum plus videri conantur, minus est quod appetunt. De quibus recte per Jeremiam dictum est: Recedentes a te, in terra scribentur (Jerem. XVII, 13). At contra de electis dicitur: Gaudete, quia nomina vestra scripta sunt in coelis (Luc. X, 20). Ista ergo contritio prius serpit in mente, ut postmodum procedat in opere; prius fundamenta cogitationis concutit, ut postmodum fabricam operationis allidat. Unde summa est cura 798 satagendum ut illic vitetur ubi oritur. Scriptum namque est: Omni custodia serva cor tuum, quoniam ex ipso vita procedit (Prov. IV, 23). Et rursum scriptum est: Ex corde exeunt cogitationes malae (Matth. XV, 18). Intus ergo vigilandum est ne mens dum extollitur cadat. Intus servemus omne quod foris agimus. Si enim semel medullam cordis elationis putredo consumpserit, citius corruit cortex vacua externae visionis. Notandum vero est quia dum aliis cadentibus ad standum alii solidari perhibentur, electorum numerus certus et definitus ostenditur. Unde etiam Philadelphiae Ecclesiae per angelum dicitur: Tene quod habes, ne alius accipiat coronam tuam (Apoc. III, 11). [Vet. XI.] 21. Doctrina Ecclesiae de praedestinatione et reprobatione spem nutrit humilium, et elationem superborum premit. Innumerabiles sunt reprobi. Hac ergo sententia, qua narratur aliorum erigi, aliorum autem vita confringi, et spes nutritur humilium, et elatio premitur superborum, dum et illi bona possunt amittere de quibus superbiunt, et isti ea percipere quae quia non habebant contemnuntur. Formidemus igitur in his quae accepimus, nec eos qui illa necdum assecuti sunt desperemus. Quid enim sumus hodie novimus, quid autem post paululum possimus esse nescimus. Hi vero quos fortasse despicimus, et tarde possunt incipere, et tamen vitam nostram ferventioribus studiis anteire. Timendum itaque est ne etiam nobis cadentibus surgat, qui a nobis stantibus irridetur; quamvis stare jam non novit, qui non stantem novit irridere. Hunc autem supernorum judiciorum metum Paulus apostolus discipulorum cordibus incutiens, ait: Qui se existimat stare, videat ne cadat (I Cor. X, 12). Quod autem dicens: Conterit multos, illico adjunxit, Innumerabiles, vel multitudinem exprimere studuit reproborum, quae humanae rationis numerum transit; vel certe indicare voluit quod omnes qui pereunt intra electorum numerum non habentur, ut eo sint innumerabiles, quo extra numerum currunt. Unde Propheta intuens tantos hoc Ecclesiae tempore specie tenus credere, quantos nimirum certum est electorum numerum summamque transire, ait: Multiplicati sunt super numerum (Psal. XXXIX, 6). Ac si diceret: multis Ecclesiam intrantibus, etiam hi ad fidem specie tenus veniunt qui a numero regni coelestis excluduntur, quia electorum summam sua videlicet multiplicitate transcendunt. Unde et per Jeremiam prophetam dicitur: Aedificabitur civitas Domino a turre Ananehel usque ad portam anguli, et exibit ultra normam mensurae (Jerem. XXXI, 38). Civitatem quippe esse Domini sanctam Ecclesiam nullus ignorat. Ananehel vero Dei gratia interpretatur. In angulo autem duplex paries jungitur. Civitas ergo Domini a turre Ananehel usque ad portam anguli aedificari perhibetur, quia sancta Ecclesia a celsitudine supernae gratiae inchoans, usque ad ingressum susceptionemque construitur utrorumque populorum, Judaici videlicet atque gentilis. Sed quia in ea crescente multitudine etiam reprobi colliguntur, apte subditur: Et exibit ultra normam mensurae, quia usque ad eos quoque extenditur, qui normam justitiae transeuntes, intra mensurae coelestis numerum non sunt. Unde per Isaiam quoque eidem Ecclesiae dicitur: Ad dexteram enim et ad laevam dilataberis, et semen tuum gentes haereditabit (Isai. LIV, 3). In tanta quippe multitudine gentium ad dexteram 799 extenditur, dum quosdam justificandos suscipit. Ad laevam quoque dilatatur, dum ad se quosdam etiam in iniquitate permansuros admittit. Propter hanc multitudinem, quae extra electorum numerum jacet, in Evangelio Dominus dicit: Multi sunt vocati, pauci vero electi (Matth. XX, 16). Sed quia hoc quod electis aliis alii conteruntur, de merito patientis est, non de iniquitate punientis: Non enim iniquus Deus, qui infert iram, apte subjungitur (Rom. III, 5).

CAPUT IX [Rec. IX].

VERS. 25. Novit enim opera eorum, et idcirco inducet noctem, et conterentur. 22. Deus peccatorem aliquando punit excaecatione. Sciendum summopere est quod iniquus quisque duobus modis in nocte conteritur, vel cum exterioris poenae tribulatione percutitur, vel cum occulta sententia interius caecatur. In nocte corruit, cum per extremum judicium vivendi lumen in perpetuum amittit. Unde scriptum est: Ligate ei manus et pedes, et mittite eum in tenebras exteriores (Matth. XXII, 13). Tunc enim coactus in tenebras exteriores mittitur, quia nunc in interioribus excaecatur voluntarie. Rursum in nocte iniquus conteritur, cum pecatorum praecedentium confusione damnatus, veritatis lumen non invenit, et quid deinceps agere debeat non agnoscit. [Vet. XII.] Omne quippe peccatum, quod tamen citius poenitendo non tergitur, aut peccatum est et causa peccati, aut peccatum et poena peccati. Peccatum namque quod poenitentia non diluit ipso suo pondere mox ad aliud trahit. Unde fit ut non solum peccatum sit, sed peccatum et causa peccati. Ex illo quippe vitio culpa subsequens oritur, ex quo caecata mens ducitur ut pejus ex alio ligetur. Sed peccatum quod ex peccato oritur, non jam peccatum tantummodo, sed peccatum est et poena peccati, quia justo judicio omnipotens Deus cor peccantis obnubilat, ut praecedentis peccati merito etiam in aliis cadat. Quem enim liberare noluit, deserendo percussit. Non ergo immerito poena peccati dicitur, quod justa desuper irrogata caecitate, ex praecedentis peccati ultione perpetratur. Quod videlicet agitur dispositione superius ordinata, sed inferius iniquitate confusa, ut et praecedens culpa sit causa subsequentis, et rursum culpa subsequens sit poena praecedentis. Quod bene in infidelibus et lubricis

Paulus quasi quoddam semen erroris aspexerat, cum dicebat: Qui cum cognovissent Deum, non sicut Deum glorificaverunt, aut gratias egerunt; sed evanuerunt in cogitationibus suis (Rom. I, 21). Sed quod ex hujus erroris semine pullulavit, illico adjungit, dicens: Propter quod tradidit illos Deus in desideria cordis eorum, in immunditiam, ut contumeliis afficiant corpora sua in semetipsis (Ibid., 24). Quia enim cognoscentes Deum peccatum superbiae intelligendo commiserunt, caecantur etiam ne intelligant quod committunt. Et qui intelligentiam suam sequi nolunt in peccato et causa peccati, et ipsum lumen intelligentiae perdunt in peccato et poena peccati. Prioris ergo peccati merito peccatorum subsequentium fovea tegitur, ut qui malum sciens perpetrat, deinceps juste in aliis etiam nesciens cadat. 23. Culpae culpis puniuntur, ut ex vitiorum incremento supplicia augeantur. Hoc quippe agitur, ut culpae culpis feriantur, quatenus supplicia fiant peccantium ipsa incrementa vitiorum. Nam quia omnipotens Deus ad poenitentiam tempus indulget, quod tamen humana malitia ad usum suae iniquitatis intorquet, 800 nimirum justo Dei judicio augeri culpa permittitur, ut ad feriendum altius quandoque cumuletur. Hinc enim rursum de quibusdam Paulus apostolus dicit: Ut impleant peccata sua semper (I Thess. II, 16). Hinc voce angeli ad Joannem dicitur: Qui nocet, noceat adhuc; et qui in sordibus est, sordescat adhuc (Apoc. XXII, 11). Hinc David ait: Appone iniquitatem super iniquitatem eorum, ut non intrent in justitiam tuam (Psal. LXVIII, 28). [Vet. XIII.] Hinc rursum de Domino ab eodem Psalmista dicitur: Immissiones per angelos malos viam fecit semitae irae suae (Psal. LXXVII, 49). Cor quippe Dominus prioribus meritis aggravatum juste permittit etiam subsequentibus malignorum spirituum persuasionibus falli, quod cum digne in culpa trahitur, reatus ejus in poena cumulatur. Unde et irae suae Dominus viam de semita fecisse perhibetur. Latior enim est via quam semita. Ex semita vero irae suae viam facere est irae causas districte judicando dilatare, ut qui illuminati agere recte noluerunt, juste caecati adhuc faciant, unde amplius puniri mereantur. Hinc per Moysen dicitur: Nondum completa sunt peccata Amorrhaeorum (Genes. XV, 16). Hinc per eumdem Moysen Dominus dicit: Ex vinea enim Sodomorum vitis eorum, et propago eorum ex Gomorrha (Deut. XXXII, 32). Uva eorum uva fellis, et botrus amaritudinis in ipsis. Furor draconum vinum eorum, et furor aspidum insanabilis. Nonne haec omnia congregata sunt apud me, et signata in thesauris meis? In die ultionis reddam eis (Ibid., 33, 34). Quam multa eorum mala narravit, et tamen illico adjungit: In tempore quo lapsus fuerit pes eorum (Ibid., 35). Ecce atrocissima illorum facinora describuntur, et tamen ad ultionis diem adhuc subsequens lapsus aspicitur, quo eorum culpae cumulentur. Habent jam quidem unde feriri mereantur; sed sustinetur tamen adhuc peccatum crescere, ut peccantes possit atrocior poena cruciare. Jam meretur supplicium peccatum et causa peccati; sed exspectatur adhuc, ut augmentum supplicii subroget peccatum, et poena peccati. 24. Idem peccatum aliquando poena est et causa peccati. Deus excaecat a caecitate non liberando. Plerumque vero unum atque idem peccatum, et peccatum est ut et poena et causa peccati. Quod melius ostendemus si res ipsas ad medium deducamus. Effrenata enim ventris ingluvies in fervorem luxuriae plenitudinem carnis instigat. Perpetrata autem luxuria saepe aut perjurio, aut homicidio tegitur, ne humanarum legum ultione puniatur. Ponamus ergo ante oculos quod quidam voracitatis sibi frena laxavit, qua voracitate superatus adulterii facinus admisit; deprehensus autem in adulterio, latenter virum adulterae, ne ad judicium traheretur, occidit. Hoc itaque adulterium, inter voracitatem et homicidium positum, de illa videlicet nascens, hoc generans, peccatum est et poena et causa peccati. Peccatum profecto est per semetipsum; poena vero peccati est, quia culpam voracitatis auxit; causa autem peccati est, quia subsequens etiam homicidium genuit. Unum ergo idemque peccatum est et poena praecedentis, et causa culpae subsequentis, quia et transacta dum exaggerat damnat, et adhuc sequentia quae damnari debeant seminat. Igitur quia peccatis praecedentibus caecatur oculus cordis, ipsa caecitas quae peccantis animum ex anteactae culpae damnatione confundit merito nox vocatur, quia per hanc ab oculis delinquentis 801 lumen veritatis absconditur. Bene itaque dicitur: Novit enim opera eorum, et idcirco inducet noctem, et conterentur, quia, ut saepe dictum est, praecedentia nimirum mala faciunt, ut ad peccandum iterum tenebris subsequentibus involvantur, ut eo jam lumen justitiae videre non possint, quo illud et quando poterant videre noluerunt. Inducere autem noctem Dominus dicitur, non quod ipse tenebras inferat, sed quod obscura corda peccantium misericorditer non illustret, ut hoc ipsum in nocte caecasse sit a caecitatis tenebris liberare noluisse. Sequitur:

CAPUT X [Rec. X].

VERS. 26. Quasi impios percussit eos in loco videntium. 25. In Ecclesiae sinu inique viventes, divina ultio quasi impios percutit. Quasi quid significat in Scripturis. Ecclesia locus est videntium. In Scriptura sacra quasi aliquando pro similitudine, aliquando pro veritate poni consuevit. Pro similitudine enim quasi ponitur, sicut Apostolus dicit: Quasi tristes, semper autem gaudentes (II Cor. VI, 10). Pro veritate vero ponitur, sicut Joannes ait: Vidimus gloriam ejus, gloriam quasi unigeniti a Patre (Joan. I, 14). Hoc autem loco nihil differt utrum pro similitudine an pro veritate sit positum, quia quolibet dicatur ordine, aperte prava malorum vita signatur. Impios vero Scriptura sacra proprie infideles appellat. Hac namque distantia peccatores ab impiis discernuntur, quia cum omnis impius sit peccator, non tamen omnis peccator est impius. Peccator enim dici etiam qui in fide pius est potest. Unde Joannes ait: Si dixerimus quia peccatum non habemus, ipsi nos seducimus (I Joan. I, 8). Impius vero proprie dicitur qui a religionis pietate separatur. De talibus enim propheta ait: Non resurgent impii in judicio (Psal. I, 5). [Vet. XIV.] Locus autem videntium sancta Ecclesia vocatur. In ipsa enim recte consistitur, ut lumen verum, quod Deus est, videatur. Unde ad Moysen dicitur: Est locus penes me, et stabis supra petram cum transeat mea majestas (Exod. XXXIII, 21). Et post paululum: Auferam manum meam et videbis posteriora mea (Ibid., 23). Per locum quippe Ecclesia, per petram Dominus, per Moysen vero multitudo plebis Israeliticae figuratur, quae Domino in terra praedicante non credidit. Ipsa ergo in petra stetit, terga Domini transeuntis aspiciens, quia videlicet post passionem ascensionemque dominicam, intra sanctam Ecclesiam deducta, fidem Christi percipere meruit; et cujus praesentiam non vidit, ejus posteriora cognovit. Dicatur ergo de his, quos intra sanctam Ecclesiam divina ultio invenit in iniquitatibus perdurantes, dicatur de his quorum vitam Paulus apostolus notat, Qui confitentur se nosse Deum, factis autem negant (Tit. I, 16): Quasi impios percussit eos in loco videntium. Ibi quippe stabant, ubi Deum videre videbantur. Ibi tenebras dilexerunt, ubi lumen veritatis aspicitur. Et quamvis apertos habuerunt oculos in fide, tenuerunt tamen eos clausos in opere. Unde bene et de Judaea dicitur: Speculatores ejus caeci (Isai. LVI, 10), quia videlicet non videbant opere quod professione cernebant. Unde etiam de Balaam scriptum est: Qui cadens apertos habet oculos (Num. XXIV, 16). Cadens quippe in opere apertos tenuit oculos in contemplatione. Ita ergo hi etiam oculos aperientes in fide, et non videntes in opere, intra Ecclesiam positi pia specie, extra Ecclesiam inventi sunt impia conversatione. De quibus alias bene scriptum est: Vidi impios sepultos, qui cum adviverent, in loco sancto erant, et laudabantur in civitate quasi justorum operum (Eccle. VIII, 10). 802 26. Multos falsos Christianos Ecclesiae pax abscondit. Quidam ex professione Christianae religionis gloriam quaerunt. Multos enim peste propriae pravitatis obsessos sub Christiano nomine ipsa tranquillitas ecclesiasticae pacis abscondit. Quos tamen si levis persecutionis aura pulsaverit, mox extra aream velut paleas tollit. [Vet. XV.] Quidam vero idcirco Christianitatis vocatione signantur, quia Christi nomine sublimiter exaltato, pene omnes jam videri fideles aspiciunt; et pro eo quod hoc vocari alios cernunt, ipsi non videri fideles erubescunt, sed esse negligunt quod dici gloriantur. Rem enim virtutis intimae ad decorem sumunt visionis externae; et qui ante supernum judicem nudi conscientiae infidelitate consistunt, ante humanos oculos professione sancta verbo tenus palliantur. 27. Fideles qui nequiter vivunt saepe divino judicio fidei jacturam faciunt. Multi in domo fidei, sine fide moriuntur. Iis vero fidelium societas in supplicii cumulum cedit. Nonnulli autem fidem medullitus tenent, sed vivere fideliter nullatenus curant. Insequuntur enim moribus quod credulitate venerantur. Quibus divino judicio saepe contingit ut per hoc quod nequiter vivunt, et illud perdant quod salubriter credunt. Incessanter namque se pravis actionibus polluunt, et super hoc vindictam justi judicii retribui posse diffidunt; et saepe cum bene vivere negligunt, etiam persequente nullo usque ad perfidiam dilabuntur. Nam qui imminere districtum judicium non credunt, qui inulte se peccare suspicantur, quod pacto vel esse vel dici fideles possunt? Fidem quippe perdidisse, est incorrectis malis operibus digna supplicia reddi posse non credere. Quia ergo digna fidei opera servare contemnunt, etiam fidem perdunt, quam tenere videbantur. Super quos bene per Prophetam sub Jerusalem specie inimicorum destruentium verba memorantur, a quibus scilicet dicitur: Exinanite, exinanite usque ad fundamentum in ea (Psal. CXXXVI, 7). Paulus quippe ait: Fundamentum aliud nemo potest ponere praeter id quod positum est, quod est Christus Jesus (I Cor. III, 11). Inimici ergo destruentes usque ad fundamentum Jerusalem exinaniunt, quando perversi spiritus a corde fidelium, destructo prius aedificio boni operis, soliditatem quoque exhauriunt religionis. Sicut enim supra fundamentum fabrica, sic super fidem opera construuntur. Usque ad fundamentum ergo exinanisse est everso bene vivendi opere etiam robur fidei dissipasse. Hinc etiam ad Judaeam per Jeremiam dicitur: Filii quoque Mempheos et Taphneos constupraverunt te usque ad verticem (Jerem. II, 16). Usque ad verticem quippe constuprari est post malae operationis usum etiam in ipsa fidei sublimitate corrumpi. Cum enim nequissimi spiritus uniuscujusque animam in pravis operibus involvunt, sed integritatem fidei vitiare non possunt, quasi adhuc inferiora membra polluunt, sed ad verticem non pertingunt. Quisquis autem in fide corrumpitur, jam usque ad verticem constupratur. Malignus enim spiritus quasi ab inferioribus membris usque ad summa pertingit, quando activam vitam polluens, castam celsitudinem fidei diffidentiae morbo corrumpit. Quia igitur cuncta haec humanis oculis absconsa sunt, sed divinis obtutibus patent, et multi in hac domo fidei sine fide moriuntur, dicatur recte: Quasi impios percussit eos in loco videntium. Pios enim se in Ecclesia hominibus ostendunt; sed quia divina judicia latere non possunt quasi impii feriuntur. Quibus hoc magis 803 ad supplicii cumulum crescit, quod unusquisque eorum in Ecclesia fidelibus admistus veritatem fidei sciendo contemnit; atque eo gravior ultio sequitur, quo per exempla rectorum etiam bene vivendi eos scientia comitatur. Quot enim eis modo recti ac fideles fratres ostenduntur, tot in venturo judicio testibus impugnantur. Sciunt ergo quod sequi negligunt. Unde et apte subjungitur:

CAPUT XI [Vet.

XVI, Rec. XI]. VERS. 27.Qui quasi de industria recesserunt ab eo. 28. Peccatum aut ignorantia, aut infirmitate, aut studio, quod gravius, perpetratur. Aliud bonum non facere, aliud nec amare, aliud odisse. Sciendum quippe est quod peccatum tribus modis committitur (De poenit., dist. 2, can., Sciendum). Nam aut ignorantia, aut infirmitate aut studio perpetratur. Et gravius quidem infirmitate quam ignorantia, sed multo gravius studio quam infirmitate peccatur. Ignorantia Paulus peccaverat, cum dicebat: Qui prius fui blasphemus, et persecutor, et contumeliosus; sed misericordiam consecutus sum, quia ignorans feci in incredulitate (I Tim. I, 13). Petrus vero infirmitate peccavit, quando in eo omne robur fidei quod Domino perhibuit una vox puellae concussit, et Deum quem corde tenuit voce denegavit (Luc. XXII, 57). Sed quia infirmitatis culpa vel ignorantiae eo facilius tergitur, quo non studio perpetratur, Paulus quae ignoravit sciendo correxit, et Petrus motam et quasi arescentem jam radicem fidei lacrymis rigando solidavit. Ex industria vero peccaverant ii de quibus ipse magister dicebat: Si non venissem et locutus fuissem eis, peccatum non haberent; nunc autem excusationem non habent de peccato suo (Joan. XV, 22). Et paulo post: Et viderunt, et oderunt me et Patrem meum (Ibid., 24). Aliud est enim bona non facere, aliud bonorum odisse doctorem; sicut aliud est praecipitatione, aliud deliberatione peccare. Saepe enim peccatum praecipitatione, committitur, quod tamen consilio et deliberatione damnatur. Ex infirmitate enim plerumque solet accidere amare bonum, sed implere non posse. Ex studio vero peccare est bonum nec facere nec amare. Sicut ergo nonnunquam gravius est peccatum diligere, quam perpetrare, ita nequius est odisse justitiam quam non fecisse. Sunt ergo nonnulli in Ecclesia qui non solum bona non faciunt, sed etiam persequuntur; et quae ipsi facere negligunt, etiam in aliis detestantur. Horum peccatum scilicet non ex infirmitate vel ignorantia, sed ex solo studio perpetratur, quia videlicet si vellent implere bona, nec tamen possent, ea quae in se negligunt saltem in aliis amarent. Si enim ea ipsi vel solo voto appeterent, facta ab aliis non odissent; sed quia bona eadem audiendo cognoscunt, vivendo despiciunt, animadvertendo persequuntur, recte dicitur: Qui ex industria recesserunt ab eo. Unde et apte subjungitur:

CAPUT XII.

IBID. Et omnes vias ejus intelligere noluerunt. 29. Quam graviter delinquant, qui sua ignorantia impunitatem peccandi quaerunt. Aliud est nescisse, aliud scire noluisse. Non enim ait: Infirmitate non intelligunt, sed, intelligere noluerunt, quia saepe quae facere despiciunt, etiam scire contemnunt. Quia enim scriptum est: Servus nesciens voluntatem domini sui, et faciens digna plagis, vapulabit paucis; et servus sciens voluntatem domini sui, et non faciens juxta eam, plagis vapulabit multis (Luc. XII, 47); impunitatem peccandi existimant remedium nesciendi. 804 Qui nimirum sola superbiae caligine tenebrescunt, atque ideo non discernunt quia aliud est nescisse, aliud scire noluisse. Nescire enim ignorantia est; scire noluisse, superbia. Et tanto magis excusationem non possunt habere quia nesciant, quanto magis eis etiam nolentibus opponitur quod cognoscant. Unde per Salomonem dicitur: Nunquid non sapientia clamitat, et prudentia dat vocem suam, in summis excelsisque verticibus super viam in mediis stans semitis (Prov. VIII, 1)? Transire fortasse per viam vitae temporalis cum ejus ignorantia poteramus, si haec eadem sapientia in semitae angulis constitisset. 30. Viae divinae sapientiae per Incarnationem omnibus patent. Vias Dei intelligere, quid sit. Lumen intelligentiae humilitas aperit, superbia claudit. Investiganda fuerat, si occultari voluisset. Sed postquam incarnationis suae mysteria publice ostendit, postquam humilitatis exempla superbientibus praebuit, semetipsam nobis quasi transeuntibus in mediis semitis fixit, ut videlicet in eam, quam quaerere nolumus, impingamus; et quam transeuntes videre negligimus, tangamus offendentes. Dicatur itaque: Et omnes vias ejus intelligere noluerunt. Via quippe est incarnatae sapientiae omnis actio quam temporaliter gessit. Viae ejus sunt vivendi ordines, quos ad se venientibus stravit. Tot itaque ad se venientibus vias praebuit, quot bene vivendi exempla monstravit. Humilitatis ejus vias Propheta aspexerat, cum suspirabat, dicens: In mandatis tuis me exercebo, et considerabo vias tuas (Psal. CXVIII, 15). Hinc rursum de unoquoque justo dicitur qui curat ut per dominica exempla gradiatur: A Domino gressus hominis diriguntur, et viam ejus cupit nimis (Psal. XXXVI, 23) [Vet. XVII]. Quia ergo superbi quique humiliatis dominicae facta contemnunt, recte dicitur: Vias ejus intelligere noluerunt. Viae enim istae visione despectae sunt, sed intellectu reverendae. Aliud quippe est in eis quod cernitur, aliud quod exspectatur. Quid enim in hac vita aliud quam dejectionem, sputa, ludibria, mortemque intuentium oculis ostendit? Sed per haec infima transitur ad summa, per haec dedecora quae praecedunt aeterna nobis et gloriosa pollicentur. Viderunt ergo superbi vias Dei, sed intelligere noluerunt, quia dum abjecta quae in se illae ostendunt despiciunt, perdiderunt isti sublimia quae promittunt. Vias itaque Dei intelligere est et humiliter tolerare transitoria, et perseveranter exspectare mansura, ut exemplo Domini coaeterna quaeratur gloria opprobriis temporalibus comparata, et non quod hic quisque tolerat, sed in id quod exspectat intendat. Ad haec ergo superbi clausos oculos tenuerunt, quia dum in gloria praesentis vitae superbiunt, humilitatis Dominicae celsitudinem non viderunt. Lumen enim intelligentiae humilitas aperit, superbia abscondit. Nam secretum quoddam pietatis est, et tanto minus ad illud animus pervenit, quanto magis intumescit, quia eo ipso foras repellitur, quo insanius afflatur. Sequitur:

CAPUT XIII [Rec. XII].

VERS. 28. Ut pervenire facerent ad eum clamorem egeni, et audiret vocem pauperum. 31. Clamor pauperum ad Deum quando perveniat. Fictus est pastor qui praedicatione neglecta, curis saecularibus occupatur. Confessionis necessitas. Cum enim isti superbiunt, clamant ad Deum hi qui ab ipsis superbientibus opprimuntur. Vel certe idcirco dicitur quod ad Deum fecerunt clamorem pauperum 805 pervenire, quia istis cadentibus, in eorum locum pauperes, id est spiritu humiles subrogantur. Et quia hoc eorum casu factum est, ipsi fecisse referuntur, eo videlicet locutionis genere, quo pugnare castra dicimus, quia pugnatur ex illis. Vel certe quia cuncta quae superius dicta sunt referri etiam ad rectores Ecclesiasticos possunt, qui relicto praedicationis studio, sub occasione regiminis, terrenis negotiis involvuntur, apte subjungitur: Ut pervenire facerent ad eum clamorem egeni, et audiret vocem pauperum; quia nimirum dum ipsi curis saecularibus occupati praedicationis officium deserunt, gregem subditum in querelarum prorumpere clamorem compellunt, ut quasi jure unusquisque subjectus de vita ficti pastoris immurmuret, cur teneat magistri locum, qui non exercet officium. Quamvis fortasse melius per tumorem potentium superbia Judaeorum, et per clamorem pauperum desideria gentium figurantur, sicut, attestante Veritate, per epulantem splendide divitem Judaicus populus designatur; copiam scilicet legis non ad necessitatem salutis, sed ad pompam elationis assumens, atque in praeceptorum verbis non semetipsum ordinate reficiens, sed jactanter ostendens; et per vulneratum Lazarum, qui interpretatur adjutus, forma populi gentilis exprimitur, quem divinum adjutorium tanto magis erigit, quanto minus de suarum virium facultate confidit. Qui pauper et plenus vulneribus esse describitur, quia gentilitas corde humilis peccatorum suorum aperuit confessiones. Nam sicut in vulnere ab internis trahitur virus in cute, ita in confessione peccati, dum in publicum secreta panduntur, quasi mali humores a visceribus intimis foras prorumpunt. Illis ergo peccantibus, pauperum clamor auditur, quia dum Judaei contra Deum superbiunt, ad Deum vota gentilium pervenerunt. Unde et mox haec ipsa immensa ac profunda judicia perhorrescens, non ea curat ratione discutere, sed admiratione venerari, atque ait:

CAPUT XIV [Rec. XIII].

VERS. 29. Ipso enim concedente pacem, quis est qui condemnet? ex quo absconderit vultum suum, quis est qui contempletur eum? 32. Cur unus vocetur et trahatur, alter repellatur, nemo discutiat. Nemo ergo discutiat cur, stante Judaico populo, dudum in infidelitate gentilitas jacuit; et cur, ad finem gentilitate surgente, judaicum populum infidelitatis culpa prostravit. Nemo discutiat cur alius trahatur ex dono, alius repellatur ex merito. Si enim gentilitatem miraris assumptam, Ipso concedente pacem, quis est qui condemnet? Si Judaeam obstupescis perditam, ex quo absconderit vultum suum, quis est qui contempletur eum? Itaque consilium summae et occultae virtutis satisfactio fit apertae rationis. Unde et in Evangelio Dominus, cum de hujus rei causa loqueretur, ait: Confiteor tibi, Pater Domine coeli et terrae, quia abscondisti haec a sapientibus et prudentibus, et revelasti ea parvulis. Ita, pater (Matth. XI, 25). Atque mox tanquam rationem quamdam absconsionis ac revelationis adjungens, ait: Quia sic fuit placitum ante te. Quibus nimirum verbis exempla humilitatis accipimus, ne temere discutere superna consilia de aliorum vocatione, aliorum vero repulsione praesumamus. Cum enim intulisset utrumque, non mox rationem reddidit, sed sic Deo placitum dixit, 806 hoc videlicet ostendens, quia injustum esse non potest quod placuit justo. Unde et in vinea laborantibus mercedem reddens, cum quosdam operarios inaequales in opere aequaret in praemio, et plus in mercede quaereret qui labori amplius insudasset, ait: Nonne ex denario convenisti mecum? Volo autem et huic novissimo dare sicut et tibi; an non licet mihi quod volo facere (Matth. XX, 13)? In cunctis ergo quae exterius disponuntur, aperta causa rationis est occultae justitia voluntatis. Dicatur itaque: Ipso enim concedente pacem, quis est qui condemnet? ex quo absconderit vultum suum, quis est qui contempletur eum? [Vet. XIX.] Et quia sic minima sicut maxima, sic singula Deus judicat sicut cuncta, apte subjungitur:

CAPUT XV.

IBID. Et super gentem, et super omnes homines. 33. Deus minimis providet ut maximis; et singulis ut universis. Ac si aperte admoneamur intendere, quia hoc judicium, quod super unam gentem describitur, etiam super omnes

homines invisibili examinatione celebratur, ut alius eligatur, alius repellatur occulte, sed nullus injuste. Hoc ergo quod in maximis fieri cernimus, etiam in nobis singulis caute timeamus. Sic enim intenduntur divina judicia super unam animam, sicut super unam urbem; sic super unam urbem, sicut super unam gentem; sic super unam gentem, sicut super universam generis humani multitudinem; quia et sic intendit Dominus singulis, ac si vacet a cunctis; et sic simul intendit omnibus, ac si vacet a singulis. Qui enim omnia administrando implet, regit implendo; nec universis deest, cum disponit unum; nec uni deest, cum disponit universos, cuncta scilicet naturae suae potentia quietus operatur. Quid ergo mirum quia non angustatur intentus, qui operatur quietus? Dicatur itaque quia hoc subtile judicium exercet et super gentem, et super omnes homines. [Rec. XIV.] Quia igitur de specie transivit ad genus, nunc de genere se convertit ad speciem, et quid Judaea proprie mereatur, ostendit dicens:

CAPUT XVI [Vet. XX].

VERS. 30. Qui regnare facit hominem hypocritam propter peccata populi. 34. Qui malis praelatis subjacent, id suae culpae tribuant. Propter peccata populorum regnaturus est Antichristus. Verum namque regem super se Judaea regnare noluit, et idcirco exigentibus meritis hypocritam accepit, sicut ipsa quoque Veritas in Evangelio dicit: Ego veni in nomine Patris mei, et non accepistis me; si alius venerit in nomine suo, illum accipietis (Joan. V, 43). Et sicut Paulus ait: Pro eo quod charitatem veritatis non receperunt, ut salvi fierent, ideo mittet illis Deus operationem erroris, ut credant mendacio (II Thess. II, 10). In eo ergo quod dicitur: Qui regnare facit hominem hypocritam propter peccata populi, potest ipsum omnium hypocritarum caput Antichristus designari. Seductor quippe ille tunc sanctitatem simulat, ut ad iniquitatem trahat. Sed propter peccata populi regnare permittitur, quia nimirum tunc ipsi sub illius regimine praeordinantur, qui ejus dominio digni ante saecula praesciuntur, qui peccatis subsequentibus exigunt, ut sub illo judiciis praecurrentibus disponantur. Quod ergo tunc Antichristus super impios regnat, non est ex injustitia judicantis, sed ex culpa patientis; quamvis plerique et principatum illius non viderunt, et tamen ejus principatui peccatorum suorum conditione deserviunt, quia et quem dominantem sibi minime conspiciunt, eum proculdubio perverse vivendo venerantur. An non 807 ejus membra sunt, qui per affectatae sanctitatis speciem appetunt videri quod non sunt? Ille namque principaliter hypocrisim sumit, qui cum sit damnatus homo, et nequam spiritus, Deum se esse mentitur. Sed proculdubio ex ejus nunc corpore prodeunt, qui iniquitates suas sub tegmine sacri honoris abscondunt, ut professione videri appetant, quod esse operibus recusant. Quia enim scriptum est: Omnis qui facit peccatum, servus est peccati, quanto nunc liberius peragunt perversa quae volunt, tanto ejus servitio obnixius obligantur (Joan. VIII, 34). Sed nullus, qui talem rectorem patitur, cum quem patitur accuset, quia nimirum sui fuit meriti perversi rectoris subjacere ditioni. Culpam ergo proprii magis, accuset operis quam injustitiam gubernantis. Scriptum namque est: Dabo tibi reges in furore meo (Osee XIII, 11). Quid ergo illos nobis praeesse despicimus, quorum super nos regimina ex Domini furore suscipimus? Si igitur irascente Deo secundum nostra merita rectores accipimus, in illorum actione colligimus, quid ex nostra aestimatione pensemus. Quamvis plerumque et electi subjaceant reprobis. Unde et diu David Saulem pertulit (I Reg. XVIII, 11); sed subsequente culpa adulterii proditur, quia dignus tunc fuit qui tanta praepositi asperitate premeretur. 35. Ob delicta gregis aliquando bonus pastor pervertitur. Sic ergo secundum merita subditorum tribuuntur personae regentium, ut saepe qui videntur boni, accepto mox regimine permutentur; sicut Scriptura sacra de eodem Saule intulit, quia cor cum dignitate mutavit. Unde scriptum est: Cum esses parvulus in oculis tuis, caput te constitui in tribubus Israel (I Reg. XV, 17). Sic pro qualitatibus subditorum disponuntur acta regentium, ut saepe pro malo gregis etiam vere boni delinquat vita pastoris. Ille enim, Deo attestante, laudatus, ille supernorum mysteriorum conscius David propheta, tumore repentinae elationis inflatus, populum numerando peccavit, et tamen vindictam populus, David peccante, suscepit (II Reg. XXIV, 9). Cur hoc? quia videlicet secundum meritum plebium disponuntur corda rectorum. Justus vero judex peccantis vitium ex ipsorum animadversione corripuit, ex quorum causa peccavit. Sed quia ipse scilicet sua voluntate superbiens, a culpa alienus non fuit, vindictam culpae etiam ipse suscepit. Nam ira saeviens, quae corporaliter populum perculit, rectorem quoque populi intimo cordis dolore prostravit. Certum vero est quod ita sibi invicem et rectorum merita connectantur et plebium, ut saepe ex culpa pastorum deterior fiat vita plebium, et saepe ex plebium merito mutetur vita pastorum. [Vet. XXI.] 36. Subditi praelatos etiam malos tolerent, si salva fide possint. Humilitas recti magistra. Sed quia rectores habent judicem suum, magna cautela subditorum est non temere vitam judicare regentium. Neque enim frustra per semetipsum Dominus aes nummulariorum fudit, et cathedras vendentium columbas evertit (Matth. XXI, 21); nimirum significans quia per magistros quidem vitam judicat plebium, sed per semetipsum facta examinat magistrorum. Quamvis etiam subditorum vitia, 808 quae a magistris modo vel dissimulantur judicari, vel nequeunt, ejus procul dubio judicio reservantur. Igitur dum salva fide res agitur, virtutis est meritum, si quidquid prioris est toleratur. Debet tamen humiliter suggeri, si fortasse valeat quod displicet emendari. Sed curandum summopere est ne in superbiam transeat justitiae inordinata defensio, ne dum rectitudo incaute diligitur, ipsa magistra rectitudinis humilitas amittatur; ne eum sibi praeesse quisque despiciat, quem fortasse contingit ut in aliqua actione reprehendat. Contra hunc tumorem superbiae, subditorum mens ad custodiam humilitatis edomatur, si infirmitas propria incessanter attenditur. Nam vires nostras veraciter examinare negligimus; et quia de nobis fortiora credimus, idcirco eos qui nobis praelati sunt districte judicamus. Quo enim nosmetipsos minus agnoscimus, eo illos quos reprehendere nitimur plus videmus. Singula haec mala sunt, quae saepe a subditis in praelatos, saepe a praelatis in subditos committuntur, quia et omnes subditos hi qui praesunt minus quam ipsi sunt sapientes arbitrantur, et rursum qui subjecti sunt rectorum suorum actiones judicant, et si ipsos regimen habere contingeret, se potuisse agere melius putant. Unde plerumque fit ut et rectores minus prudenter ea quae agenda sunt videant, quia eorum oculos ipsa nebula elationis obscurat; et nonnunquam is qui subjectus est hoc cum praelatus fuerit faciat, quod dudum fieri subjectus arguebat; et pro eo quod illa quae judicaverat perpetrat, saltem quia judicavit erubescat. Igitur sicut praelatis curandum est ne eorum corda aestimatione singularis sapientiae locus superior extollat, ita subjectis providendum est ne sibi rectorum facta displiceant. [Vet. XXII.] 37. Pastores mali honorandi, non imitandi. Si autem magistrorum vita jure reprehenditur, oportet ut eos subditi, etiam cum displicent, venerentur. [Rec. XV.] Sed hoc est solerter intuendum, ne aut quem venerari necesse est, imitari appetas, aut quem imitari despicis, venerari contemnas. Subtilis etenim via tenenda est rectitudinis et humilitatis, ut sic reprehensibilia magistrorum facta displiceant, quatenus subditorum mens a servanda magisterii reverentia non recedat. Quod bene in Noe debriato exprimitur, cujus nudata verecundiora boni filii aversi veniendo texerunt (Genes. IX, 21). Aversari quippe dicimur quod reprobamus. Quid est ergo quod filii verecunda patris superjecto dorsis pallio aversi venientes operiunt, nisi quod bonis subditis sic praepositorum suorum mala displicent, ut tamen haec ab aliis occultent? Operimentum aversi deferunt, quia judicantes factum, et venerantes magisterium, nolunt videre quod tegunt. [Rec. XVI.] 38. Pastores temporalibus vacantes contemnere, est Deum accusare. Potestas regiminis ministrari non potest sine studio curae temporalis. Sunt vero nonnulli qui si parum quid de spiritali conversatione inchoant, cum rectores suos temporalia agere et terrena considerant, mox ordinem supernae dispositionis accusant, quod nequaquam bene ad regendum praelati sint, per quos conversationis infimae exempla monstrantur. Sed hi nimirum dum temperare se a rectorum suorum 809 reprehensione negligunt, culpae suae exigentibus meritis, usque ad reprehensionem conditoris excedunt: cujus profecto dispensatio inde ab humilibus rectior agnoscitur, unde ab elatis non recta judicatur. Quia enim potestas regiminis ministrari non potest sine studio curae temporalis, aliquando omnipotens Deus mira dispensatione pietatis, ut tenerae spiritalium mentes a terrena cura disjunctae sint, onus regiminis duris ac laboriosis cordibus injungit, ut tanto illae ab hoc mundo securius lateant, quanto haec in terrenis sollicitudinibus libenter elaborant. In exhibitione quippe suscepti oneris pro ipsis quoque utilitatibus subditorum durae viae sunt mundanae servitutis. 39. Quantum debeamus iis qui a temporalium cura, ipsis vacando, nos liberant. Et saepe, ut dictum est, misericors Deus quo suos tenere diligit, eo illos sollicite ab externis actionibus abscondit. Nam et plerumque paterfamilias ad eum laborem servos dirigit, a quo subtiles filios suspendit; et inde filii sine vexatione decori sunt, unde servi in pulvere foedantur. Quod quam recte in Ecclesia divinitus agitur, ipsa tabernaculi constructione signatur. Ad Moysen quippe divina voce praecipitur ut ad tegenda interius sancta sanctorum ex bysso, cocco atque hyacintho vela texantur, jussumque est ut ad protegendum tabernaculum, vela cilicina et pelles extenderet, quae nimirum vel pluvias, vel ventos, vel pulverem tolerarent (Exod. XXVI, 1). Quid ergo per pelles et cilicia, quibus tabernaculum tegitur, nisi grossas hominum mentes accipimus, quae aliquando in Ecclesia occulto Dei judicio, quamvis durae sint, praeferuntur? Quae quia servire curis temporalibus non timent, oportet ut tentationum ventos et pluvias de hujus mundi contrarietatibus portent.

Quid vero per hyacinthum, coccum, byssumque signatur, nisi sanctorum vita tenera, sed clara? Quae dum caute in tabernaculo sub ciliciis et pellibus absconditur, sua ei integra pulchritudo servatur. Ut enim in interioribus tabernaculi byssus fulgeat, coccus coruscet, hyacinthus caeruleo colore resplendeat, desuper pelles et cilicia imbres, ventos et pulverem portant. Qui igitur magnis virtutibus in sanctae Ecclesiae sinu proficiunt, praepositorum suorum vitam despicere non debent, cum vacare eos rebus exterioribus vident, quia hoc quod ipsi securi intima penetrant, ex illorum adjumento est qui contra procellas hujus saeculi exterius laborant. Quam enim candoris sui gratiam retineret, si byssum pluvia tangeret? Aut quid fulgoris atque claritatis coccus vel hyacinthus ostenderet, si haec susceptus pulvis foedaret? Sit ergo desuper textura cilicii fortis ad pulverem, sit inferius color hyacinthinus aptus ad decorem. Ornent Ecclesiam qui solis rebus spiritalibus vacant, tegant Ecclesiam, quos et labor rerum corporalium non gravat. Nequaquam ergo contra rectorem suum exteriora 810 agentem murmuret is qui intra Ecclesiam sanctam jam spiritaliter fulget. Si enim tu secure interius ut coccus rutilas, cilicium quo protegeris cur accusas? [Vet. XXIII.] 40. Prava praelatorum exempla Deus ordinat in poenam superborum subditorum. Dum maledicere videntur prophetae, praedicunt. Sed a quibusdam quaeritur quia dum saltem pro utilitate subditorum rectores nimium temporalibus curis inserviunt, plerique in Ecclesia eorum exemplo deterescunt. Quod verum valde esse quis abneget, cum curari a pastoribus terrena quam coelestia sollicitius videt? Sed neque haec injusta sunt, si, ut superius diximus, res praesidentium juxta subditorum merita disponuntur. Occulte namque et sponte perpetratae culpae exigunt ut prava et a pastoribus exempla praebeantur, quatenus justo judicio is qui de via Dei superbus exorbitat, in via qua graditur etiam per ducatum pastoris offendat. Unde per prophetam quoque praenuntiantis studio dicitur, non maledicentis voto: Obscurentur oculi eorum, ne videant, et dorsum eorum semper incurva (Psal. LXVIII, 24). Ac si dicat: Qui humanae vitae actionibus quasi praevidendis itineribus praesunt, veritatis lucem non habeant, ut et qui sequuntur subditi, iniquitatum suarum oneribus incurvati, omnem statum rectitudinis amittant. Quod factum procul dubio in Judaea novimus, cum in ipso nostri Redemptoris adventu pharisaeorum turba atque sacerdotum a vero lumine mentis oculos clausit, et per praepositorum exempla gradiens in infidelitatis tenebris populus erravit. 41. Quo sensu Deus faciat regnare hypocritam. Sed quaeri rationabiliter potest quomodo hoc in loco dicitur quod regnare hypocritam Dominus facit, cum de hac re specialiter per prophetam conqueritur, dicens: Ipse regnaverunt, et non ex me; principes exstiterunt, et non cognovi (Osae. VIII, 4). Quis enim recte sentiens dicat quia facit Dominus quod minime cognoscit? Sed quia scire Dei approbare est, nescire reprobare; unde quibusdam quos reprobat dicit: Nescio vos unde sitis, discedite a me omnes operarii iniquitatis (Luc. XIII, 25); et aliquando facere Dei est id quod fieri prohibet, irascendo permittere; unde et regis Aegypti cor se obdurare asseruit (Exod. IV, 21), quia videlicet obdurari permisit; miro modo hypocritas Dominus et regnare facit et nescit: facit sinendo, nescit reprobando. Unde necesse est ut ad omne quod in hac vita concupiscitur prius voluntas interna requiratur. Quam cum humani cordis auris percipere appetit, sciat quia haec non verbis, sed rebus sonat. Locus ergo regiminis cum regendus offertur, in se prius necesse est ut quisque discutiat, si loco vita congruit, si ab honore actio non dissentit, ne justus omnium rector eo post in tribulatione preces non audiat, quod ipsa quoque ejus, de quo tribulatio oritur, exordia honoris ignorat.

LIBER VIGESIMUS SEXTUS.

Exponit sanctus Doctor septem ultimos versus cap. XXXIV, et caput XXXV ex integro, cum uno et viginti prioribus versibus cap. XXXVI. Ubi latissime in sensus tum allegoricos tum morales excurrit.

CAPUT PRIMUM.

1. 811 Fictae ac verae humilitatis indicia. In locutionibus suis hoc arrogantes viri habere inter alia proprium solent, quod ab auditoribus suis ne quid fortasse inordinatum dixerint tunc requirunt, cum se laudabiliter aliquid dixisse cognoscunt. Haec videlicet faciunt, non quod de dictis suis ambigant, sed quod ab audientium judicio favores quaerant. Nam inveniri facile poterit quo animo percunctantur, si quisquam cum eorum bona laudat, etiam mala reprehendat. Certum quippe est quia sicut inflantur laudibus, ita correptionibus inflammantur; et cum a quolibet se vel juste reprehendi conspiciunt, mox in malis suis fomitem defensionis exquirunt. Quomodo ergo de bonis suis humiliter ambigunt, qui mala sua defendere etiam perverse moliuntur? Ille est enim vere humilis in bonis, qui non est defensor in malis. Nam qui de malis suis arguitur, et contra verba arguentis accenditur, quando de bonis suis quasi humiliter titubat, per humilitatis vocem ornari appetit, non doceri. Eliu itaque vitam arrogantium signans, postquam multa interna et sublimia intulit, ecce in verbis formam humilitatis assumit, et aequitate proposita, sub quadam discipulatus imagine beatum Job alloquitur dicens:

CAPUT II.

CAP. XXXIV, VERS. 31, 32.Quia ego locutus sum ad Deum, te quoque non prohibebo. Si erravi, tu doce me; si iniquitatem locutus sum, ultra non addam. 3. Humilitatis larva cito abjicitur. Sicut saepe contingit ut bona loquantur et mali, multa Eliu fortia paulo superius se dixisse meminerat, et securus idcirco ne fortasse erraverit requirebat. Neque enim requireret, si se errasse credidisset. Est namque, ut dixi, propria arrogantium fraus ut tunc de errore requirere studeant, quando se noverint non errasse. Qui rursum requirere vel argui de errore despiciunt, si quando se errasse veraciter praecognoscunt. Non enim esse, sed videri humiles appetunt; et tunc requirendo speciem humilitatis assumunt, quando de ipsa magis requisitione laudantur. Sed quia omnino difficile est ut elatio quae regnat in corde non erumpat in voce; auditores arrogantium si eorum dicta paulisper taciti exspectant atque considerant, citius corda illorum subsequentia verba manifestant. Diu quippe morari non possunt in ipsa humilitatis imagine, quam specie tenus sumunt. Superbis enim mentibus humilitas alta est, et cum ejus formam conscendere ambiunt, lassatis animi gressibus quasi a clivosis atque asperis itineribus dilabuntur. Alienum est scilicet quod videri appetunt, et idcirco ejus imagini diu inhaerere nequaquam possunt. Grave pondus aestimant, cum eam saltem specie tenus portant, et quousque 812 hanc abjiciant, vim quamdam in corde patiuntur, quia videlicet elationis usui male dominanti deserviunt, atque ejus imperio semetipsos quales sint prodere compelluntur, ne diu possint videri quod non sunt. Unde Eliu quoque postquam de errore doceri se petiit, postquam iniquitatem non se ultra locuturum promisit, subito ab humilitatis specie ad verba tumidae causationis exsilivit. Nam subdidit, dicens:

CAPUT III.

VERS. 33. Nunquid a te Deus expetit eam, quia displicuit tibi? 3. Sancti humanum judicium non metuunt, sed divinum, ad quod etiam provocare simulant mali. Ac si diceret: Ego coram Domino rationes positurus sum cur modo iniquitas mea a te reprehenditur, quae constat quod in judicio a te non requiratur. Recti viri cum injuste ab hominibus impetuntur, ad supernum judicium recurrunt. [Vet. et Rec. II.] Unde et ab eodem beato Job dicitur: Ecce in coelo testis meus, et conscius meus in excelsis (Job. XVI, 19). Et quia ei placere summopere cupiunt, ejus solius testimonium requirunt. Perversi quoque, quia justorum vitam deserunt, sed nonnunquam eloquia sequuntur, cum de suis male gestis increpantur, hoc assumunt in argumentum defensionis, quod justi proferunt in testimonium puritatis. Unde eis et consuetudo jam facta est, ut si quis eos de factis suis arguat, Dei magis judicium quam hominum quaerant. A Deo enim et cum se damnandos noverint, judicari non metuunt, et judicari ab hominibus erubescunt. Proponunt ergo majus quod non metuunt, ut hoc minus declinare valeant quod erubescunt. Scriptum quippe est: Unusquisque nostrum pro se rationem reddet Deo (Rom. XIV, 12). Quia ergo tunc damnatio uniuscujusque manifesta est, exinde modo iniqui colligunt, ut etiam perversa uniuscujusque actio sit secura; ne modo eam quilibet justus arguendo discutiat, a qua constat quod in judicio alienus existat. At contra piorum conscientiae grande sibi conferri praemium credunt, cum de quibusdam modo suis actionibus illicitis arguuntur. Proponunt etenim ante oculos cordis quia districtum Dei judicium tanto verius tunc super eos mitigabitur, quanto nunc acrius arguente homine praevenitur; et temporalem iram super se lucrum computant, per quam se aeternam posse evadere non ignorant. Eliu ergo typum cunctorum arrogantium tenens, et magis eligens aeterna invectione percuti, quam temporaliter increpari, dicat: Nunquid a te Deus expetit eam, quia displicuit tibi? Quia vero esse culpabiliores solent hi qui loqui in contentione inchoant, quam qui respondent, subdidit, dicens:

CAPUT IV.

IBID. Tu enim coepisti loqui, et non ego. 4. Frustra se innocentes putant, qui pulsati dura respondent. Eo se innocentem credidit, quo pulsatus erupit; 813 nimirum nesciens quia innocentia non tempore defenditur, sed ratione.

Quid enim ejus defensionibus adminiculatur, quod etsi tacenti nulla intulit, recte tamen inchoanti prava respondit? Postquam vero in verbis elationis ostenditur, ecce iterum sub requisitionis velamine palliatur, atque infert, dicens: IBID. Quod si quid melius nosti, loquere. Quamvis dum non ait: Quia melius nosti, sed, Si quid melius nosti, loquere, nimis hoc ipsum superbisse est, de melioris scientia dubitasse. Hoc tamen, quod beato Job locum loquendi tribuit, humilitatem se exhibuisse indicavit. Sed, sicut supra dictum est, quia in actione arrogantium omne quod superducto sermone tegitur, prorumpente rursum intentione elationis aperitur, citius Eliu innotuit qua mente beatum Job loqui postulavit. Nam sequitur:

CAPUT V [Rec. III].

VERS. 34, 35. Viri intelligentes loquantur mihi, et vir sapiens audiat me. Job autem stulte locutus est, et verba illius non sonant disciplinam. 5. Mentiri non licet humilitatis gratia. Ecce dum quasi humiliter beato Job loqui tribuit, quid intrinsecus gestaret ostendit, dicens: Viri intelligentes loquantur mihi; dedignatus videlicet si beatus Job loqui praesumeret, qui quasi ejus intelligere verba non posset. Et quia non solum ad loquendum, sed etiam ad audiendum, beatum Job indignum fuisse judicavit, illico adjunxit: Vir sapiens audiat me. Ac si diceret: Huic loqui injuste conceditur, qui etiam audire verba sapientium non meretur. Atque mox aperte, quam despecta de illo sentiat, manifestat, dicens: Job autem stulte locutus est, et verba illius non sonant disciplinam. Sine disciplina locutum beatum Job credidit, quia justum se in suis operibus fuisse memoravit. Verum fortasse Eliu diceret, si ea quae beatus Job de seipso narraverat, non de illo haec eadem ipse disciplinae auctor existimasset. Innocenter enim Job se asseruit flagellatum, quem Deus etiam perhibuit frustra percussum (Job. II, 3). Quid ergo vox percussi superbum sonuit, quae a sententia ferientis nullatenus discrepavit? Incaute sunt humiles (22, q. 2, c. Incaute), qui se mendacio illaqueant, dum arrogantiam vitant; imo mentiendo superbiunt, quia contra veritatem se erigunt quam relinquunt. Qui enim, necessitate cogente, vera de se bona loquitur, tanto magis humilitati jungitur, quanto et veritati sociatur. An Paulus humilis non fuit, quando aemulatione veritatis contra falsos apostolos tot de se discipulis fortia gesta narravit (I Tim. II, 7; Act. XX, 18, 19) Qui nimirum veritati inimicus existeret, si abscondendo virtutes proprias, praedicatores errorum praevalere permisisset. Sed quia arrogantes viri in eo quod bonorum dicta superbe examinant, verborum magis superficiem quam rerum ordinem pensant, Eliu beati Job sententias disciplinam credidit non sonasse. [Vet. III.] Quia vero saepe asperitas superborum usque ad duritiam maledictionis extenditur, illico contra beatum Job, quasi ad Deum faciens verba, subjungit:

CAPUT VI [Rec. IV].

VERS. 36. Pater mi, probetur Job usque ad finem. 814 6. Superbi afflictis compati nesciunt. In correptione sic tumentia premenda sunt, ut cruenta foveantur. Ecce hoc quod de arrogantiae tumore conceperat in verbis etiam maledictionis exaltat. Sed fortasse benevolae vim probationis optaret, si stetisse eum in probatione judicasset. Ut ergo aperte malitia ejus crudelitatis appareat, probari eum adhuc per flagella deprecatur, quem inter flagella lapsum fuisse jam queritur. Praemisit quod sensit, ut apertius cognosci debeat quod optavit. Adhuc feriri postulat quem jam peccasse sub manu ferientis accusat. Propria haec arrogantium vota sunt, ut vitam dolentium examinari acrius deprecentur, quia quanto sibimetipsis justiores sunt, tanto alienis doloribus duriores existunt. Nesciunt enim in se passionem alienae infirmitatis trahere, et sicut suae, ita etiam proximi imbecillitati misereri. Quia enim de se alta sentiunt, idcirco humilibus nullatenus condescendunt. Eliu beatum Job pro culpa percussum credit, atque ideo exhibenda ei pietatis viscera nec inter tot dolores aestimavit. Viri autem veraciter sancti cum flagellari quempiam etiam pro culpa cognoscunt, etsi quaedam ejus inordinata corripiunt, ad quaedam tamen dolentia compatiuntur; et sic sciunt tumentia premere, ut sciant etiam cruenta refovere, quatenus in eis cum dura emolliuntur, infirma roborentur. [Vet. IV, Rec. V.] At contra arrogantes viri quia charitatis viscera non habent, non solum non compatiuntur etiam justis dolentibus, sed eos insuper sub specie justae increpationis affligunt; et vel si qua in eis sunt parva mala exaggerant, vel ea quae vere bona sunt male apud se interpretando commutant. 7. Sancti doctores delinquentium vitia exaggerare solent. Quid sit cordis parietem fodere. Quamvis etiam casti doctores saepe exaggerare soleant delinquentium vitia, et ex quibusdam signis publicis occulta rimari, ut possint ex minimis majora cognoscere. Unde ad Ezechielem dicitur: Fili hominis, fode parietem (Ezech. VIII, 8). Ubi mox subdidit: Et cum fodissem parietem, apparuit ostium unum, et dixit ad me: Ingredere, et vide abominationes pessimas, quas isti faciunt hic. Et ingressus vidi; et ecce omnis similitudo reptilium, et animalium abominatio, et universa idola domus Israel depicta erant in pariete (Ibid., IX, 10). Per Ezechielem quippe praepositorum persona signatur, per parietem duritia subditorum. Et quid est parietem fodere, nisi asperis correptionibus duritiam cordis aperire? Quem cum perfodisset, apparuit ostium, quia cum cordis duritia asperis correptionibus aperitur, quasi quaedam janua ostenditur, ex qua omnia in eo qui corripitur cogitationum interiora videantur. Unde et bene illic sequitur: Et dixit ad me: Ingredere, et vide abominationes pessimas, quas isti faciunt hic. Quasi ingreditur ut abominationes aspiciat, qui discussis quibusdam signis exterius apparentibus, ita corda subditorum penetrat, ut cuncta ei quae illici e cogitantur innotescant. Unde et subdidit: Et ingressus vidi; et ecce omnis similitudo reptilium, et animalium abominatio. In reptilibus, cogitationes omnino terrenae signantur; in animalibus vero, jam quidem aliquantulum a terra suspensae, sed adhuc terrenae mercedis praemia requirentes. Nam reptilia toto ex corpore terrae 815 inhaerent; animalia autem ventre a terra suspensa sunt, appetitu tamen gulae ad terram semper inclinantur. Reptilia itaque sunt intra parietem, quando cogitationes volvuntur in mente quae a terrenis desideriis nunquam levantur. Animalia quoque sunt intra parietem, quando et si qua jam justa, si qua honesta cogitantur, appetendis tamen lucris temporalibus honoribusque deserviunt; et per semetipsa quidem jam quasi a terra suspensa sunt, sed adhuc per ambitum quasi per gulae desiderium sese ad ima submittunt. Unde et bene subditur: Et universa idola domus Israel depicta erant in pariete. Scriptum quippe est: Et avaritia, quae est idolorum servitus (Coloss. III, 5). Recte ergo post animalia idola describuntur, quia etsi honesta actione quasi a terra se erigunt, ambitione tamen inhonesta semetipsos ad terram deponunt. Bene autem dicitur: Depicta erant, quia dum exteriorum rerum intrinsecus species attrahuntur, in corde quasi depingitur quidquid fictis imaginibus cogitatur. [Vet. V.] 8. Rectoris animarum in scrutandis cordis piaculis pia severitas. Qui a correptione cessat, damnari metuat. Notandum itaque est quia prius foramen in pariete, ac deinde ostium cernitur, et tunc demum occulta abominatio demonstratur, quia nimirum uniuscujusque peccati prius signa forinsecus, deinde janua apertae iniquitatis ostenditur, et tunc demum omne malum quod intus latet aperitur. Idcirco ergo solent etiam sancti doctores graviter minuta discutere, ut ab extremis exterioribus ad occulta possint majora pervenire. Verba asperae increpationis movent, ut spinas mortiferae cogitationis eradicent; et haec cum agunt, charitatis amore saeviunt, non inflatione elationis intumescunt. Mori enim pro ipsis parati sunt, quos quasi usque ad mortem saevientes affligunt. Servant in cogitatione quod diligunt, sumunt in specie quod persequuntur. Bona praedicantes insinuant, mala autem caventes praenuntiant, non ut Eliu desiderantes exorant. Erga commissos sibi ita nonnunquam in correptione fervent, ac si de tranquillitate nihil habeant; sed ita in dilectione tranquilli sunt, ac si nullus eos fervor accendat. Valde enim metuunt ne si a pravorum correptione cessaverint, ipsi pro eorum damnatione puniantur; et cum ad verba invectionis inflammantur, inviti quidem ad haec veniunt, sed tamen haec defensionem sibi apud districtum judicem praeparant. 9. Corripiendorum et erudiendorum ad poenitentiam et pietatem delinquentium ordo. Unde et eidem rursus Ezechieli dicitur: Fili hominis, sume tibi laterem, et pones eum coram te, et describes in eo civitatem Jerusalem, et ordinabis adversus eam obsidionem, et aedificabis munitiones, et comportabis aggerem, et dabis contra eam castra, et pones arietes in gyro. Et tu sume tibi sartaginem ferream, et pones eam murum ferreum inter te et inter civitatem (Ezech. IV, 1, seq.). Cujus enim Ezechiel nisi magistrorum speciem tenet? cui dicitur: Sume tibi laterem, et pones eum coram te, et describes in eo civitatem Jerusalem. Doctores quippe sancti sibi laterem sumunt, quando terrenum cor auditorum ut doceant apprehendunt. Quem laterem coram se ponunt, quia tota illud sollicitudinis intentione custodiunt. In quo et civitatem Jerusalem 816 jubentur describere, quia praedicando terrenis cordibus curant summopere quanta sit supernae pacis visio demonstrare. Cui bene etiam dicitur: Et ordinabis adversus eam obsidionem, et aedificabis munitiones. Sancti enim praedicatores obsidionem circa laterem in quo Jerusalem civitas descripta est ordinant, quando terrenae menti, sed jam supernam patriam requirenti, quanta eam in hujus vitae tempore vitiorum impugnet adversitas demonstrant. Cum enim unumquodque peccatum quomodo menti insidietur ostenditur, quasi obsidio circa Jerusalem civitatem voce praedicatoris ordinatur. Sed quia non solum insinuant quomodo mentem insidiantia vitia expugnent, sed etiam quomodo custoditae virtutes roborent, recte subjungitur: Et aedificabis munitiones. Munitiones quippe sanctus praedicator aedificat, quando quae virtutes quibus vitiis obvient, insinuare non cessat. Et quia virtutibus crescentibus plerumque bella tentationis augentur, recte adhuc additur: Et comportabis aggerem; et dabis contra eam castra, et pones arietes in gyro. Aggerem namque comportat, quando praedicator quisque molem crescentis tentationis indicat. Et contra Jerusalem castra erigit, quando rectae intentioni audientium hostis callidi circumventiones quasi incomprehensibiles insidias praedicit. Atque in gyro arietes ponit, quando tentationum aculeos in hac vita nos undique circumdantes, et virtutum murum perforantes innotescit. 10. Quis et quantus zelus ad id necessarius. Ubi bene additur: Et tu sume tibi sartaginem ferream, et pones eam murum ferreum inter te et inter civitatem (Ezech. IV, 3). Per sartaginem namque frixura, per ferrum vero fortitudo ostenditur. Quid autem ita magistri atque doctoris mentem quam zelus Domini frigit et excruciat? Unde et Paulus hujus sartaginis incendebatur frixura, cum diceret: Quis infirmatur, et ego non infirmor? et quis scandalizatur, et ego non uror (II Cor. XI, 29) Et quia quisquis zelo Dei contra peccantes accenditur, forti in perpetuum custodia munitur, ne ex neglecta praedicationis et regiminis cura damnetur, recte dicitur: Pones eam murum ferreum inter te et inter civitatem (Ezech. IV, 3). Sartago enim ferrea murus ferreus inter prophetam et civitatem ponitur, quia cum nunc fortem zelum doctores exhibent, eumdem zelum postmodum inter se et auditores suos fortem munitionem tenent, ne tunc ad vindictam destituti sint, si nunc fuerint in correptione dissoluti. Hanc sartaginem propheta idem, ut inter se et auditores suos murum sumeret, audiebat, cum ei divina vox praemitteret, dicens: Si tu annuntiaveris impio, et ille non fuerit conversus ab impietate sua, et a via sua impia, ipse quidem in impietate sua morietur, tu autem animam tuam liberasti (Ezech. III, 19). Hanc sartaginem inter se et discipulos murum Paulus posuerat, cum dicebat: Mundus sum a sanguine omnium vestrum; non enim subterfugi quominus annuntiarem omne consilium Dei vobis (Act. XX, 26). Nunc ergo doctores necesse est ut appetant zeli ardoribus frigi, ne cogantur post de torpore negligentiae igne gehennae cruciari. [Vet. VI.] 11. Qua discretione exercendus. Ex occulto odio non prodeat. Sed aliud est quod injustis et subditis, aliud 817 quod justis et non subditis debemus. Ad illorum nos correptionem atque custodiam reddendarum rationum debet timor accendere; ad istorum vero venerationem ipsa considerata aequitas inclinare. Sed arrogantes viri, quia hujus formam discretionis ignorant, hoc justis et non subditis exhibent, quod a bonis praedicatoribus fieri et injustis et subditis vident. Qui cum ad fervorem invectionis injuste prosiliunt, etiam per verba maledictionis excedunt. Quia enim nequaquam proximos sicut se diligunt, proximis optare non desinunt quod ipsi sibimet evenire pertimescunt. Unde Eliu occultum odium in manifestatione maledictionis exsudans, ait: Pater mi, probetur Job usque ad finem, ne desinas ab homine iniquitatis. Hominem iniquitatis vocat, quem Deus justum prae omnibus superna attestatione denuntiat. Et quia multa adhuc sub hac indiscretione subjuncta sunt, breviter ea aestimo transcurrenda. Dicta enim quae gravitate carent, intenta expositione non indigent. Sequitur:

CAPUT VII [Rec. VI].

VERS. 37. Qui addidit super peccata sua blasphemiam. 12. Eliu eos adumbrat, qui cum pro veritate loqui videantur, a veritate sunt alieni. Accusat eum et pro peccatis flagella meruisse, et post flagella peccasse. Longe vero aliter Dominus judicat, qui et frustra flagellatum insinuat, et bona duplicia post flagella retribuit (Job. II, 3). Poena enim debetur culpae, non praemium. Beatus ergo Job sine culpa locutus ostenditur, quem post locutionem praemia subsequuntur (Job. XLII, 10). Eliu itaque, quia pro Domini defensionibus loquens, de beato Job aliud quam Dominus sentit, quasi dum pro veritate verba multiplicat, a veritate discordat. Sequitur:

CAPUT VIII.

IBID. Inter nos interim constringatur, et tunc ad judicium provocet sermonibus suis Deum. 13. Non solum inepta dicere student, sed multa. Ac si diceret: Ex nostra assertione cognoscat quia nequaquam divinae examinationi sufficiat. Et quia arrogantes viri non solum student inepta dicere, sed etiam multa; versus qui sequitur, bene de illo frequenter infertur.

CAPUT IX [Vet.

et Rec. VII]. CAP. XXXV, VERS. 1. Igitur Eliu haec rursum locutus est. 14. Superborum immensa loquacitas. Omnis qui multa loquitur, in locutione sua semper incipere studet, quatenus inchoatione ipsa suspensos auditores faciat, ut eo attentius taceant, quo quasi novum audire aliquid exspectant. Eliu vero alia finiens, alia incessanter exorditur, ut immensa loquacitas per subjuncta semper initia continuetur. Sequitur:

CAPUT X.

VERS. 2. Nunquid aequa tibi videtur tua cogitatio, ut diceres: Justior sum Deo? 15. Innocentes quam injuste soleant accusare. Quia beatus Job justiorem se Deo non dixerit, omnis qui textum historiae legit, agnoscit, sed ait: Proponat aequitatem contra me, et perveniet ad victoriam judicium meum (Job. XXIII, 7). Vitam suam videlicet pensans, et causas percussionis ignorans, ut saepe jam dictum est, pro diluendis peccatis se credidit et non pro augendis meritis flagellari; et idcirco judicium suum ad victoriam pervenire confisus est, quia culpam in se, pro qua debuisset percuti, non invenit. Quod quidem de illo et Dominus ad diabolum dixit: Commovisti me adversus eum, ut affligerem eum frustra (Job. II, 3). Quid ergo haec loquendo peccavit, qui verbis istis divinae de se et occultae sententiae etiam nesciendo consensit? Aut quid obest si a rectitudine veritatis humano judicio verba nostra superficie tenus discrepant, quando in cordis 818 cardine ei compaginata concordant? Humanae aures verba nostra talia judicant qualia foris sonant (22, q. 5, c. Humanae); divina vero judicia talia ea audiunt qualia ex intimis proferuntur. Apud homines cor ex verbis, apud Deum vero verba pensantur ex corde. Beatus ergo Job dum hoc ait exterius quod interius Dominus dixit, omne quod locutus est tanto juste exterius intulit, quanto pie ab interna sententia non recessit. Quamvis prophetico spiritu repletus, in eo quod ait: Proponat aequitatem contra me, et perveniet ad victoriam judicium meum (Job. XXIII, 7), intueri Redemptoris nostri praesentiam potuit. Ipse enim qui est virtus Patris et sapientia, etiam ejus aequitas non inconvenienter accipitur. Unde scriptum est: Qui factus est nobis a Deo sapientia, et justitia, et sanctificatio (I Cor. I, 30). Quam scilicet aequitatem, quia Deus iniquis fugentibus incarnatam ostendendo contra posuit, eos protinus ab iniquitate revocavit, et humanum genus in eo judicio antiquum adversarium vicit, quo aequitatem Dei adversantem suis itineribus invenit. Sequitur:

CAPUT XI.

VERS. 3. Dixisti enim: Non tibi placet quod rectum est, vel quid tibi proderit si ego peccavero? 16. Aut falsa loquuntur, aut si vera, at non convenientia. Si tota libri series attenditur, nihil horum beatus Job dixisse monstratur. Sed arrogantes viri, sicut et superius diximus, habere hoc proprium solent, ut dum in nimia invectione prodeunt, etiam invehendo mentiantur; et cum non possunt juste reprehendere quae sunt, reprehendant mentiendo quae non sunt. Sequitur: VERS. 4. Itaque ego respondebo sermonibus tuis et amicis tuis tecum. Dictis superioribus quasi beati Job culpabilia verba narravit, atque ex eis sibi materiam loquendi proposuit; sed verbis subsequentibus forti acumine discutit hoc quod sibi ad dicendi materiam fallaciter finxit. Et fortes quidem sunt sententiae quae sequuntur, sed beati Job personae non congruunt; tantoque eum increpationis hujus tela non feriunt, quanto contra eum injuste mittuntur. Sequitur:

CAPUT XII [Rec. VIII].

VERS. 5-7. Suspice coelum, et intuere, et contemplare aethera quod altior te sit. Si peccaveris, quid ei nocebis; et si multiplicatae fuerint iniquitates tuae, quid facies contra eum? Porro si juste egeris quid donabis ei, aut quid de manu tua accipiet? 17. Vestigia Dei sunt creaturae. Quamvis beato Job scienti majora nequaquam dici ista debuerint, vera tamen sunt quae dicuntur, quod videlicet Deo nec peccata nostra noceant, nec bene gesta concurrant. Unde subsecutus, adjunxit: VERS. 8. Homini qui similis tui est nocebit impietas tua, et filium hominis adjuvabit justitia tua. Sed inter haec illud est solerter intuendum, quod ait: Suspice coelum, et intuere, et contemplare aethera quod altior te sit. Haec enim dicens, nimirum colligit ut considerare debeat quanto minus Deo actione sua aut prosit aut noceat, qui altitudini coeli atque aetheris prodesse vel nocere non possit. Quamvis in coelo vel aethere possimus supernas potestates accipere, divinis semper obtutibus inhaerentes, ut cum angelicos spiritus longe adhuc a nobis distare conspicimus, ipsi creatori atque dominatori spirituum quam longe distamus inferius agnoscamus, corpoream tamen coeli aetherisque materiam hoc loco sentire nil obstat. [Vet. VIII.] Nam si vigilanter exteriora conspicimus, per ipsa 819 eadem ad interiora revocamur. Vestigia quippe creatoris nostri sunt mira opera visibilis creaturae. Ipsum namque adhuc videre non possumus; sed jam ad ejus visionem tendimus, si eum in his quae fecit miramur. Ejus ergo vestigia creaturam dicimus, quia per haec quae ab ipso sunt sequendo imus ad ipsum. Unde Paulus ait: Invisibilia ejus per ea quae facta sunt intellecta conspiciuntur, sempiterna quoque virtus ejus et divinitas (Rom. I, 20). Unde et in libro Sapientiae scriptum est: Per magnitudinem enim creaturae et speciem potest intelligibiliter creator videri (Sap. XIII, 5). Menti enim nostrae peccato suo exterius sparsae necdum Deus sicut est interius innotescit; sed dum facturae suae decus foris proponit, quasi quibusdam nobis nutibus innuit, et quae intus sequamur ostendit, ae miro modo ipsis formis exterioribus nos ad interiora perducit; innuit immensa admiratione quod est, mira haec exterius ostendendo quae non est. Hinc enim de sapientia scriptum est: In viis ostendit se illis hilariter, et omni providentia occurrit illis (Sap. VI, 17). 18. Vitae sunt ad Creatorem. Per visibilia a Deo recessimus; per eadem ad Deum reverti debemus. Viae quippe ad Creatorem sunt opera considerata creaturae. Quae dum facta cernimus, potentiam factoris miramur. In istis viis a sapientia omni nobis providentia occurritur, quia factoris nobis virtus inquirenda proponitur in omne quod mirabiliter factum videtur; et quocumque se verterit anima, si vigilanter intendit, in iisdem ipsis Deum invenit, per quae reliquit; ejusque potentiam ex eorum rursus consideratione cognoscit, quorum amore deseruit; et per quae perversa cecidit, per haec conversa revocatur. Ubi enim lapsi sumus, ibi incumbimus ut surgamus; et quasi ibi surgendo manum considerationis figimus, ubi pede amoris lubrici corruentes negligendo jacebamus. Quia enim ab invisibilibus per visibilia cecidimus, dignum est ut ad invisibilia ipsis rursum visibilibus innitamur, ut quo casu anima venit ad infima, eo gradu revertatur ad summa; atque eisdem quibus corruit passibus surgat, dum, sicut dictum est, illa nos ad Deum bene considerata revocant, quae nos ab eo male electa diviserunt. Eliu itaque, ut vim considerationis admoveret, atque ex corporeis rebus ostenderet quanto sit homine excelsior Deus, bene intulit: Suscipe coelum, et intuere, et contemplare aethera quod altior te sit. Ipsis enim rebus creatis atque corporeis agnoscimus quantum a creatoris nostri sublimitate distamus, quia per omne quod cernimus esse humiles admonemur, ut quasi quaedam sit lectio menti nostrae species considerata creaturae. Dicat ergo: Suscipe coelum; et intuere, et contemplare aethera quod altior te sit. Si peccaveris, quid ei nocebis? et si multiplicatae fuerint iniquitates tuae, quid facies contra eum? Porro si juste egeris, quid donabis ei, aut quid de manu tua accipiet? Ac si diceret: Ex ipsis creaturis intellige quas altiores te esse corporaliter vides, quantum a divinae potentiae sublimitate disjungeris; atque ex hac tua consideratione collige quia Deum nec bene vivendo adjuves, nec rursus malis actionibus graves. 19. Angelis inferiores sumus, quanto magis Deo! Si vero, sicut superius diximus, in coelo vel aethere supernas potestates accipimus, verbis istis 820 Eliu considerare nos admonet, ut quia ipsi angelici spiritus creatoris nostri potentiam plene contemplari non possunt, de quibus tamen certum est quia nobis eo ipso altiores sunt quo lapsi in infimis non sunt, videlicet colligamus quanto Deo inferiores existimus, qui etiam creaturis sublimibus sed longe illo inferioribus subjacemus. Ac si diceret: Vide quantum a divina celsitudine separaris, a cujus potentia etiam potestates illae humilitate contremiscunt quae te immensa sublimitate transcendunt, et quanto ipse summo inferior es, qui inferiorem te esse etiam inferioribus deprehendis. Ostendendo vero summa, reducit ad aequalia, atque ait:

CAPUT XIII.

VERS. 8. Homini qui similis tui est nocebit impielas tua, et filium hominis adjuvabit justitia tua. 20. Homo homini nocere aut prodesse potest, non angelis. (1, quaest. 4, can. Homini.) Humana impietas ei nocet, quem pervertendo inquinat. Et rursus eum adjuvat nostra justitia quem a pravis actionibus immutat. Nocere enim vel juvare nesciunt ea quae vel a bono corrumpere vel a malo permutare non possunt. Supernae igitur potestates eo laedi vel juvari nequeunt, quo esse jam incommutabiles acceperunt. Sed considerare haec nequeunt, qui terrenis desideriis implicantur. Sparsis enim foris mentibus ad semetipsas redire difficile est, quia prava itinera semel captas tanto delectabiliter tenent, quanto in eis omne quod libuerit licet. Nullus quippe disciplinae murus obviat qui constringat, nulla retributionis prospicitur poena quae terreat, sed clausis oculis cordis eo anima praecipitatur in infimis, quo obscuratur a summis; et tanto securius mala temporalia perpetrat, quanto durius bona aeterna desperat. [Vet. et Rec. IX.]

21. Mali bonos premendo purgant. Sed ista reproborum nequitia triturae more electorum vitam quasi grana a paleis separans, premit ut purget. Mali enim bonos magis ab hujus mundi desideriis expediunt, dum affligunt; quia dum multa eis hic violenta ingerunt, festinare illos ad superna compellunt. Quod bene de Israelitico populo vocante Moyse et Pharaone rege saeviente signatum est (Exod. III, 7). Tunc namque Moyses ad vocandum missus est, cum jam Pharao duris operibus ad opprimendum fuerat excitatus, ut Israelitarum mentes Aegypto deformiter inhaerentes, alius dum vocaret quasi traheret, alius quasi impelleret dum saeviret; et plebs in servitio turpiter fixa, vel provocata bonis, vel malis impulsa moveretur. Hoc quotidie agitur, dum praedicatis coelestibus praemiis, saevire in electos reprobi permittuntur, ut si ad repromissionis terram vocati exire negligimus, pressuris saltem saevientibus impellamur, atque haec Aegyptus, videlicet vita praesens, quae nos oppressit blandiens, adjuvet premens; et quae dum fovit, servitutis jugo contrivit, libertatis viam dum cruciat ostendat. Haec utique causa est quod ab injustis justi sinuntur affligi, ut scilicet dum futura audiunt bona quae cupiant, patiantur etiam mala praesentia quae perhorrescant, atque ad faciliorem exitum dum amor provocat, cruciatus impellat. Unde Eliu eosdem labores electorum sub oppressionibus reproborum exsequens, ait:

CAPUT XIV [Rec. X].

821 VERS. 9. Propter multitudinem culumniatorum clamabunt et ejulabunt propter vim brachii tyrannorum. 22. Pejores sunt qui pravis exemplis, virtutibus nos spoliant, quam qui exterioribus bonis. Calamniatores recte dicere possumus omnes iniquos, non solum qui exteriora bona rapiunt, sed etiam qui malis suis moribus, et vitae reprobae exemplo interna nostra dissipare contendunt. Illi namque ea quae nobis extra sunt invadere ambiunt, isti vero nos praedari interius quaerunt. Illi amore rerum, isti non cessant odio saevire virtutum. Illi invident quod habemus, isti quod vivimus. Illi student rapere bona exteriora, quia placent; isti satagunt interiora bona dissipare, quia displicent. Quanto igitur morum vita a rerum distat substantia, tanto gravior calumniator est qui male videndo vim nostris infert moribus, quam qui violenter opprimendo damna ingerit rebus. Nihil iste de nostra sustentatione subtraxit, sed exempla nobis perditionis apposuit. Eo ergo graviorem calumniam intulit, quo quietum cor in tentatione commovit. Qui etsi nequaquam nobis actionis suae opera persuasit, pugnam tamen tentationis ingessit. Gravem igitur de vita ejus calumniam sustinemus, quia nimirum iutus patimur quod cum labore vincamus. Et quia in hoc mundo abundat malorum vita quae cruciet, recte dicitur: Propter multitudinem calumniatorum clamabunt. 23. Alii vitia suadens, alii jubent et tyrannica vi ad ea cogunt. Quia vero ea quae verbis suadere non valent extorquere nonnunquam etiam effrenatis viribus student, apte subjungitur: Et ejulabunt propter vim brachii tyrannorum. [Vet. X.] Quisquis enim male vivere suo nos exemplo compellit, adhuc in nobis voce calumniatoris utitur; quisquis vero peccatum suadens etiam terrere nos appetit, jam contra nos brachio tyrannidis saevit. Aliud est enim vitia suadere vivendo, aliud jubere terrendo. Dum ergo exempla malae actionis aspicimus, quasi adhuc strepitum calumniatoris audimus; dum vero vi peccare cogimur, jam tyrannum in corde sustinemus. 24. Eorum tamen conatibus resistunt electorum mentes. Ad Deum eundum est, non solum per mollia, sed etiam per aspera. Sed robustorum mentes in Deo immobiliter fixae tanto ista despiciunt, quanto cernunt quod contra praecepta conditoris excrescunt. Aeternitatis quippe praemia praestolantes vires ex adversitatibus sumunt, quia crescente pugna gloriosiorem sibi non ambigunt manere victoriam. Sic itaque electorum desideria dum praemuntur, adversitate proficiunt, sicut ignis flatu premitur ut crescat; et unde quasi extingui cernitur, inde roboratur. In eo namque ostendimus quanta ad Dominum cupiditate flagramus, si non solum ad eum per tranquilla et mollia, sed etiam per aspera et dura transimus. Hinc namque propheta ait: Qui perfecit pedes meos quasi cervi (Psal. XVII, 34). Cervus enim cum montium juga conscendit, quaeque aspicit aspera, quaeque se objiciunt sentibus illigata, dato saltu transgreditur, et absque ullo cursus sui obstaculo in superiora elevatur. Ita etiam electorum mentes quaeque sibi in hoc mundo obsistere atque obviare conspiciunt, contemplationis saltu transcendunt, et more cervorum, despectis terrenarum rerum sentibus, in superna se evehunt. Hinc rursum dicit: Et in Deo meo transgrediar murum (Ibid., 30). 822 Murus quippe est omne quod itineri nostro objicitur, ne ad eum qui diligitur, transeatur. Sed murum transgredimur, cum prae amore supernae patriae, quaeque in hoc mundo fuerint objecta calcamus. Hinc per eumdem Prophetam certanti animae Dominus dicit: Exaudivi te in abscondito tempestatis, probavi te ad aquas contradictionis (Psal. LXXX, 8). Absconditum quippe tempestatis est, cum in corde contrito cogitationum tentantium fluctus intumescunt, cum contra amoris sancti studia curarum saecularium se tumultus illidunt. In abscondito ergo tempestatis auditur, quia clamor deprecantis est haec ipsa tribulationis fluctuatio. Quia vero omnino non desunt qui bona quaerentibus suadere perversa moliantur, aquae contradictionis sunt populi resistentes. Et quia tunc probatur desiderium cum aliqua ei adversitate resistitur, recte dicitur: Probavi te ad aquas contradictionis. His itaque virtutum nisibus robusti ex adversitate proficiunt, sed infirmi saepe in desideriis suis, si qua eis fuerint, ex adverso objecta, languescunt, et cum valida tribulatione pulsantur, pusillanimitate deficiunt. Unde Eliu beato Job probra pusillanimitatis impingens, praemissis malorum oppressionibus, infirmorum mox pusillanimitates exsequitur, dicens:

CAPUT XV [Rec. XI].

VERS. 10. Et non dixit, Ubi est Deus qui fecit me? 25. Qui tentatione frangitur, Dei providentiam serio non cogitat. Mos sacrae Scripturae est ut a singulari numero ad pluralem subito transeat, atque a plurali saepe se ad singularem vertat. Unde Eliu cum diceret: Clamabunt, et ejulabunt, nequaquam subdidit: Non dixerunt, ubi est Deus: Non dixit ubi est Deus. A plurali quippe numero in singularem veniens, ad personam subito infirmi uniuscujusque transivit, fortasse quia a singulis melius recognoscitur quidquid dici de eis singulariter auditur, ut ad cor suum quisque redeat, et in semetipso hoc quod de unoquoque dicitur reprehendat. Singularem igitur numerum tenuit, dicens: Non dixit, Ubi est Deus qui fecit me. Quisquis enim adversitatum tribulatione frangitur a quo factus est minime contemplatur. Nam qui quod non erat fecit, factum sine gubernatione non deserit; et qui benigne hominem condidit, nequaquam injuste cruciari permittit; nec sinit neglecte perire quod est, qui hoc etiam quod non fuit creavit ut esset. Cum ergo causam tribulationis nostrae requirimus, et fortasse tardius invenimus, est ista consideratio, quod nihil injuste patiamur, quia si Deo auctore sumus qui non fuimus, Deo regente non affligimur injuste qui sumus. Sequitur:

CAPUT XVI [Vet.

XI, Rec. XII]. IBID. Cui dedit carmina in nocte 26. Ne vincamur, Deus tribulationes consolatione condit. Carmen in nocte est laetitia in tribulatione, quia etsi pressuris temporalitatis affligimur, spe jam tamen de aeternitate gaudemus. Carmina Paulus in nocte praedicabat, dicens: Spe gaudentes, in tribulatione patientes (Rom. XII, 12). Carmen in nocte David sumpserat, qui dicebat: Tu mihi es refugium a pressura quae circumdedit me, exsultatio mea, redime me a circumdantibus me (Psal. XXXI, 7). Ecce noctem pressuram nominat, et tamen liberatorem suum inter angustias exsultationem vocat. Foris quidem nox erat in circumdatione pressurae, sed intus carmina 823 resonabant de consolatione laetitiae. Quia enim ad aeterna gaudia redire non possumus, nisi per temporalia detrimenta, tota sacrae Scripturae intentio est ut spes manentis laetitiae nos inter haec transitoria adversa corroboret. Unde et Ezechiel propheta librum se accepisse testatur, in quo scriptae erant lamentationes, carmen et vae (Ezech. II, 9). Quid enim libro hoc, nisi divina eloquia figurantur? Quae quia nobis lacrymas luctusque praecipiunt, lamentationes in eo scriptae referuntur. Carmen quoque et vae continent, quia sic de spe gaudium praedicant, ut in praesenti tamen pressuras atque angustias incident. Carmen et vae continent, quia etsi illic dulcia appetimus, prius necesse est ut hic amara toleremus. Carmen et vae discipulis praedicabat Dominus, cum dicebat: Haec locutus sum vobis, ut in me pacem habeatis; in mundo pressuram habebitis (Joan. XVI, 33). Ac si aperte diceret: Sit vobis de me interius quod consolando reficiat, quia erit de mundo exterius quod saeviendo graviter premat. Quia ergo infirmus quisque cum premitur, a spe gaudii nimia pusillanimitate lassatur, et dum foris adversa tolerat, intus obliviscitur quo gaudebat, bene dicitur: Non dixit, Ubi est Deus qui fecit me, qui dedit carmina in nocte? Si enim ista diceret, vim quam patitur temperaret; et per hoc quod mansurum intus quaereret, id quod foris transitorium sustinet esse intolerabile non aestimaret. Sequitur:

CAPUT XVII [Rec. XIII].

VERS. 11. Qui docet nos super jumenta terrae, et super volucres coeli erudit nos. 27. Deus nos docet carnis voluptates, et spiritus elationem cavere. Jumenta terrae sunt, qui usu vitae carnalis ima appetunt; volucres vero coeli sunt, qui superbae curiositatis studio sublimia perscrutantur. Illi vivendo se deponunt infra quam sunt, isti inquirendo se elevant ultra quam possunt. Illos in infimis voluptas dejicit carnis, istos quasi in superioribus erigit libido curiositatis. Illis per sacra eloquia dicitur: Nolite fieri sicut equus et mulus, quibus non est intellectus (Psal. XXXI, 9); istorum superbus labor increpatur, dum dicitur: Altiora te ne quaesieris, et fortiora te ne scrutatus fueris (Eccli. III, 22). Illis dicitur: Mortificate membra vestra, quae sunt super terram, fornicationem, immunditiam, libidinem, concupiscentiam malam (Coloss. III, 5); istis dicitur: Nemo vos decipiat per philosophiam et inanem fallaciam (Coloss. II, 8). Docet igitur nos Deus super jumenta terrae et volucres coeli, quia dum hoc quod sumus agnoscimus, nec carnis nos infirmitas dejicit, nec superbiae spiritus elevat; nec defluendo imis subjicimur, nec superbiendo de sublimibus inflamur. Qui enim carne labitur, jumentorum appetitu prosternitur; qui vero extollitur mente, more volucrum quasi levitatis penna sublevatur. [Vet. XII.] 28. Superbia luxuriae seminarium. Caro mergit quos superba scientia sublevat. Juste mens amittit carnis dominium si Deo servire deneget. Sed si vigilanter intenditur, ut et mentis humilitas, et carnis castimonia teneatur, cito cognoscimus, quia alterum custoditur ex altero. Nam multis saepe superbia luxuriae seminarium fuit, quia dum eos spiritus quasi in altum erexit, caro in infimis mersit. Hi enim prius secreto elevantur, sed postmodum publice corruunt, quia dum occultis intumescunt motibus cordis, apertis cadunt lapsibus corporis. 824 Sic sic elati justa fuerant retributione feriendi, ut quia superbiendo se hominibus praeferunt, luxuriando usque ad jumentorum similitudinem devolvantur. Homo quippe cum in honore esset, non intellexit, comparatus est jumentis insipientibus, et similis factus est illis (Psal. XLVIII, 13). Quasi scientiae enim illos in altum penna sublevaverat, de quibus Paulus hoc quod et superius protulimus dicebat: Quia cum cognovissent Deum, non sicut Deum glorificaverunt, aut gratias egerunt, sed evanuerunt in cogitationibus suis (Rom. I, 21). Quomodo autem in jumentorum, aut plusquam jumentorum voluptatem deciderint, subdidit dicens: Tradidit eos Deus in desideria cordis eorum, in immunditiam (Ibid., 24). Ecce caro mersit quos superba scientia sublevavit, et a volatu volucrum ultra appetitum lapsi sunt jumentorum; atquae inde sub se prostrati sunt, unde super se ire videbantur. Curandum itaque est, et omni custodia mens a superbiae tumore servanda. Non enim ante oculos Dei vacuae transvolant cogitationes nostrae; et nulla momenta temporis per animum transeunt sine statu retributionis. Intus ergo videt Deus quod mentem elevat, et idcirco permittit foris invalescere quod deponat. Intus prius extollitur, quod foris postmodum luxuriae corruptione feriatur. Occultam videlicet culpam sequitur aperta percussio, ut malis exterioribus interiora puniantur et cor publice corruat, quod latenter tumebat. Hinc quippe per Osee contra Israelitas dicitur: Spiritus fornicationis in medio eorum, et Dominum non cognoverunt (Ose. V, 4). Qui ut ostenderet quod causa libidinis ex culpa proruperit elationis, mox subdidit dicens: Et respondebit arrogantia Israel in faciem ejus (Ibid., 5). Ac si diceret: Culpa quae per elationem mentis in occulto latuit per carnis luxuriam in aperto respondit. Proinde per humilitatis custodiam servanda est munditia castitatis. Si enim pie spiritus sub Deo premitur, caro illicite super spiritum non levatur. Habet quippe spiritus commissum sibi dominium carnis, si tamen sub Domino recognoscit jura legitimae servitutis. Nam si auctorem suum superbiendo contemnit, jure et a subjecta carne praelium suscipit. Unde et ille primus inobediens mox ut superbiendo peccavit, pudenda contexit (Genes. III, 7). Quia enim contumeliam spiritus Deo intulit, mox contumeliam carnis invenit. Et quia auctori suo esse subditus noluit, jus carnis subditae quam regebat amisit, ut in seipso videlicet inobedientiae suae confusio redundaret, et superatus disceret, quid elatus amisisset. [Vet. XIII.] 29. Si cordis humilitatem negligamus, Deus carnis integritatem despicit. Nullus ergo postquam superna appetere coeperit, si carnis voluptate prosternitur, tunc se victum judicet, cum aperte superatur. Si enim plerumque virus libidinis de radice nascitur elationis, tunc caro vicit, cum spiritus latenter intumuit: jam tunc anima per originem culpae in petulantiam jumentorum cecidit, cum efferendo se, more volucrum, ultra quam debuit evolavit. Hinc est enim quod longa continentia repente solvitur, hinc quod plerumque et usque ad senium virginitas servata vitiatur. Quia enim negligitur 825 humilitas cordis, rectus judex despicit etiam integritatem corporis; et quandoque per apertum malum reprobos annuntiat, quos dudum reprobos in occulto tolerabat. Nam qui diu servatum bonum subito perdidit, apud semetipsum intus aliud malum tenuit, ex quo aliud subito erupit per quod ab omnipotente Deo etiam tunc alienus exstitit, quando se ei per munditiam corporis inhaerere monstravit. Quia igitur mentis elatio ad pollutionem pertrahit carnis, reproborum cor a volatu volucrum ad petulantiam mergitur jumentorum. Sancti autem viri ne appetitu bestiali ad luxuriae voraginem devolvantur, sollicite cogitationes mentis a superbiae volatu custodiunt; ac ne in infima desipiendo corruant, omne quod sublimiter sapiunt, humiliter premunt. Recte itaque dicitur: Qui docet nos super jumenta terrae, et super volucres coeli erudit nos. Subaudis, hoc quoque non dixit. 30. In adversis deficimus, quia prosperis uti moderate nescimus. Hoc itaque quod jumentis ac volucribus antecellit, eum non dicit in tribulatione memorari; ac si diceret: Infirmus quisque idcirco nequaquam se in perturbatione corroborat, quia et in tranquillitate non temperat; et ideo nescit adversa tolerare, quia constitutus in prosperis cogitatione se non novit a volatu volucrum premere, nec carnales motus a jumentorum ingluvie sublevare. Sed hoc beato Job tanto inconvenienter dicitur, quanto vita ejus inter alta et infima mirabiliter temperatur. Quod quidem intelligi et aliter potest: Qui docet nos super jumenta terrae, et super volucres coeli erudit nos. Nam sicut jumentorum vocabulo signatur vita hominum carnis adhuc motibus subditorum, ita appellatione volucrum figuratur elatio spirituum superborum, ut per jumenta quidem terreni homines, per volucres vero daemonia designentur. Unde cum semina Dominus juxta viam diceret cecidisse, subjungit: Venerunt volucres coeli, et comederunt ea (Matth. XIII, 4), nimirum per volucres signans aereas potestates. 31. Sancti dum Deo se subdunt, cuncta transitoria superant et despiciunt. Sancti autem viri, quia nec infima hominum exempla appetunt, nec rursum daemoniaca subtilitate falluntur, et super jumenta terrae, et super coeli volucres virtute eruditionis excrescunt. Super jumenta enim terrae edocti sunt, quia quidquid in imis potest ambiri despiciunt. Super volucres quoque coeli eruditi sunt, quia omnes immundorum spirituum insidias comprehendunt. Super jumenta terrae edocti sunt, quia nihil in hac vita quod praeterit quaerunt. Super voluores coeli eruditi sunt, quia potestates aereas, quas adhuc per carnis infirmitatem tolerant, jam vitae meritis calcant. Paulus jam super jumenta terrae edoctus fuerat, dicens: Multi enim ambulant. Et paulo post: Quorum finis interitus, quorum deus venter est, et gloria in confusione ipsorum, qui terrena sapiunt. Nostra autem conversatio in coelis est (Philip. III, 18, 19). Et rursum super volucres coeli eruditum se noverat, cum dicebat: Nescitis quoniam angelos judicabimus (I Cor. VI, 3)? Sub se jumenta cernebat, quia videlicet in terra adhuc positus calcabat mores hominum qui in infimis conversantur. Et rursum volatum volucrum meritorum dignitate transcenderat, quia subiturus coelestia judicaturum se angelos non ignorabat. In illis immundorum infima, in istis superborum summa 826 calcabat. [Vet. XIV.] Mentes quippe sanctorum transitoria cuncta despiciunt, et sub se labi quidquid superbit, quidquid praeterit, contemplantur; et quasi in quodam rerum vertice constitutae, tanto sibi omnia subesse conspiciunt, quanto semetipsas verius auctori omnium subdunt; atque inde cuncta transcendunt, unde creatori cunctorum vera se humilitate substernunt. Dicat ergo: Qui docet nos super jumenta terrae, et super volucres coeli erudit nos. Ac si diceret: Infirmus pusillanimitate victus ista non dixit, et idcirco eum adversitas tentationis perculit, quia tranquillitatis tempore haec cuncta transeuntia nulla perfectione superavit. Hujus enim vitae adversa non perhorresceret, si perfectionis merito etiam secunda calcasset. Sequitur:

CAPUT XVIII [Rec. IV].

VERS. 12. Ibi clamabunt, et non exauaret propter superbiam malorum. 32. Justi permittuntur opprimi ut purgentur, et ut oppressorum nequitia consummetur. Ibi videlicet in tribulatione, ut e contra de gaudio scriptum est: Filii servorum tuorum inhabitabunt ibi (Psal. CI, 29). Sed videtur incertum utrum dicat: Propter superbiam malorum non exaudiet; an, propter superbiam malorum clamabunt. Intelligi autem melius potest, si non exaudiri potius propter malorum superbiam, quam clamare referantur. Nam quod propter malorum superbiam clamant, jam supra dictum est, eo versu quo dicitur: Propter multitudinem violentorum clamabunt. Aliquid ergo nobis hoc versu innuitur quod paulo subtilius attendatur, quia saepe oppressi quidam dum clamaverint, ex se quidem merentur audiri, sed tamen eorum desideria propter opprimentium superbiam differuntur. Justus quippe Deus et suos permittit temporaliter opprimi, et violentorum malitiam nequiter augeri, ut dum horum vita in purgatione teritur, illorum nequitia consummetur. [Vet. XV.] Plerumque vero accidit, ut justi in tribulatione deprehensi, supernum solatium etiam temporaliter percipiant, quod tamen non temporaliter implorant. Salvari enim non propter se, sed propter adversariorum salutem concupiscunt, ut dum illos omnipotens Deus ab immensis periculis facto quodam miraculo liberat, virtutem suam ipsis etiam persecutoribus innotescat; atque inde adversarios ad aeternitatem redimat, unde suos temporaliter salvat, sicut Propheta quoque vocem martyrum suscipiens, ait: Propter inimicos meos eripe me (Psal. LXVIII, 19). Ac si diceret: Propter me quidem eripi de temporali tribulatione non appeto, sed tamen eripi propter adversarios meos concupisco, ut dum mea vita salvari mirabiliter cernitur, ipso miraculorum visu inimicorum duritia convertatur. Sicut ergo saepe Dominus suorum vitam temporaliter pro inimicorum conversione eripit, ita saepe suorum voces propter damnationem persequentium non exaudit, ut videlicet inde reatum suum cumulent, unde praevaluisse se nequiter gaudent. Nam qui invisibilia despiciunt, moveri nonnunquam visibilibus miraculis possunt. Sed idcirco cum justis plerumque nil mirum visibiliter agitur, quia eorum adversarii illuminari invisibiliter non merentur. Dicatur ergo: Ibi clamabant, et non exaudiet propter superbiam malorum. Ac si diceret: Reatus opprimentium audire voces prohibet oppressorum. Nec eripiuntur visibiliter justi, 827 quia salvari invisibiliter non merentur injusti. Unde rursum per Prophetam dicitur: Cum viderit sapientes morientes, simul insipiens et stultus peribunt (Psal. XLVIII, 11). Quos enim visibiliter mori conspiciunt, invisibiliter vivere posse non credunt; atque eo reatum infidelitatis suae cumulant, quo visa morte fidelium de aeternitate desperant. Igitur violenti quique inde deterius deficiunt, unde contra vitam innocentium exterius convalescunt; tantoque illos intima veritas a se foras ejicit, quanto eos contra suos temporaliter quod volunt posse permittit. 33. Malorum poena gravior, est prosperitas. Manifestum est reprobationis indicium. Quisquis itaque bonorum vitam persequitur, tunc pejore ultione damnatur, cum nulla ei adversitate resistitur; et tunc fortioris irae periculis subjacet, cum prospere peragit quod nequiter concupiscit, quia videlicet vindicta superni judicii ad futura eum supplicia reservando deseruit, cui hic in malo obviare contempsit. Hinc enim per Prophetam Dominus dicit: Dimisi eos secundum desideria cordis eorum, et ibunt in voluntatibus suis (Psal. LXXX, 13). Hinc rursum dicitur: Non est virga Dei super illos (Job. XXI, 9). Hinc etiam de ipso eorum capite scriptum est: Faciet et prosperabitur (Dan. VIII, 12). Hinc rursus de eodem dicitur: Et dolus in manu ejus dirigetur (Dan. VIII, 25). In manu quippe Antichristi dolus dirigitur, quia in hoc quod contra bonos proposuerit implere temporaliter nulla adversitate praepeditur. Hinc rursus per Salomonem dicitur: Prosperitas stultorum perdet illos (Prov. I, 32). [Vet. XVI.] Manifestum ergo perditionis indicium est, quando affectatis iniquitatibus subsequens favet effectus, et nulla contrarietas impedit quod mens perversa conceperit. Nam saepe pravorum hominum dum tardantur vota, mutantur; et dum difficultatem perfectionis sentiunt, reatum malae actionis agnoscunt; et quibus prius invitis contradicitur, volentes postmodum hoc quod conceperant, adversantur. Quia igitur malos cum deserit Dominus praevalere permittit, et unde superborum nequitia perficitur, inde humilium longanimitas consummatur, dicatur recte: Ibi clamabunt, et non exaudiet propter superbiam malorum. Sequitur:

CAPUT XIX [Rec. XV].

VERS. 13. Neque enim frustra audiet Deus, et Omnipotens singulorum causas intuebitur. 34. Desideria sanctorum eo cumulatius exaudiuntur, quo tardius. Notandum quod duo sunt dicta, quia et clamantem non frustra audit, et tamen quod patitur respicit, et exaudire voces dissimulat, et quod unusquisque tolerat non ignorat. Nemo ergo qui tardius auditur credat quod a superna cura negligatur. Saepe enim nostra desideria, quia celeriter non fiunt, exaudiuntur; et quod impleri concite petimus, et ipsa melius tarditate prosperatur. Saepe vox nostra eo perficitur quo differtur; et cum superficietenus petitio negligitur, vota nostra altius in cogitationum radice complentur: sicut et semina messium gelu pressa solidantur; et quo ad superficiem tardius exeunt, eo ad frugem multipliciora consurgunt. Desideria itaque nostra dilatione extenduntur, ut proficiant; proficiunt, ut ad hoc quod perceptura sunt convalescant; exercitantur in certamine, ut 828 majoribus cumulentur praemiis in retributione, labor protrahitur pugnae, ut crescat corona victoriae. Suos ergo Dominus cum velociter non exaudit, quo repellere creditur trahit. Internus quippe est medicus, et peccatorum in nobis contagia quae inesse medullitus reprobat secat, abscindit virus putredinis ferro tribulationis; et quo voces aegri audire dissimulat, eo aegritudinis finem procurat. Hinc enim Propheta ait: Deus meus, clamabo per diem, et non exaudies; et nocte, et non ad insipientiam mihi (Psal. XXI, 3). Ac si diceret: Nequaquam mihi ad insipientiam proficit quod die ac nocte clamantem me continue non exaudis, quia unde me in temporali tribulatione quasi deseris, inde ad aeternam sapientiam plus erudis. Hinc etiam dicit: Adjutor in opportunitatibus, in tribulatione (Psal. IX, 10). Tribulationem quippe dicturus, opportunitates praemisit, quia saepe et tribulatione conterimur, et tamen opportunum nondum est ut ad desiderium ereptionis adjuvemur. Dicatur ergo: Neque enim frustra audiet Deus, et Omnipotens singulorum causas intuebitur. [Vet. XVII.] Sed quia plerumque nonnulli et ipsa adjutorii tarditate franguntur, apte subjungit: CAPUT. XX [Rec. XVI]. VERS. 14. Etiam cum dixeris: Non considerat, judicare coram illo, et exspecta eum. 35. Desperationis procella ingruente, ad memoriam revocanda sunt Dei beneficia. Fortasse enim dum clamor noster quasi negligitur, spes quae cordi inerat infirmatur; et superna adjutoria defutura credimus, quia tardius impetramus; ac pene inconsiderata Deo esse ingemiscimus, quae inulta toleramus. Sed cum ista nos desperationis procella conturbat, concussa mens citius in portum spei se collocat, si causas suas cum Domino subtiliter pensat, si bona ejus ad memoriam revocat, si mala quae bonis ejus reddidit apud semetipsam callide non excusat, si perpendit quid ab eo juste meruit et quid clementer accepit, si vitam suam vivaciter discutit, si ante Dei oculos omne quod agit examinans semetipsam sibimet non abscondit, si factam se quae non erat meminit, si illuminatam se atque sublevatam quae in tenebris jacebat agnoscit. Haec ergo in semetipsa cuncta recolligens, dum bona accepta considerat, adversa quae tolerat non accusat; nec desperatione frangitur, quae tantorum munerum consolatione roboratur, quia spem de futuris recipit, dum transacta beneficia recognoscit. Dicat itaque: Etiam cum dixeris: Non considerat, judicare coram illo, et exspecta eum. Ac si diceret: Cum idcirco Deus considerare non creditur, quia tarde miseretur, intima cogitationis ingredere, atque illic coram ejus oculis causae tuae judicium suscipe; et quae ipse vivendo contulisti, vel quae misericorditer percepisti, discerne; et tunc ad spei fiduciam redis, dum bona tantae benignitatis erubescis, quatenus inter adversa fidenter exspectes quem et post delicta propitium recolis. Speranda etenim fuerant superna adjutoria, etiam si nulla beneficia praecessissent. Sciendumque quia Deus hominem quem benigne condidit inique non spernit. 36. Qui praeterita munera considerat, futura non desperet. Pensandum est igitur quanti est periculi transacta munera cernere, et futura desperare; 829 quanti est periculi si in hac procella tribulationum desperationis naufragio frangimur, qui ad portum spei velut immensis funibus praeteritis donis ligamur. Dicatur itaque recte: Judicare coram illo, et exspecta eum. Nam qui semetipsum coram Deo non judicat, eum dum affligitur non exspectat. Cujus enim bona praecessisse dissimulat, adjutoria subsequi posse desperat; et cum praeteritorum obliviscitur, etiam subsequentium largitate fraudatur. Sed ecce dum nos affligimur, dum consolationis gratiam longanimiter sustinemus, mali ad pejora prorumpunt, atque eo iniquitatis exaggeratione proficiunt, quo sine verbere relinquuntur. Et tamen omnipotens peccantes misericorditer exspectat, tempus ad poenitentiam tribuit, quod non conversis ad gravioris reatus testimonium vertit; patienter iram retinet, quam quandoque irretractabiliter effundit. Unde apte subjungitur:

CAPUT XXI [Vet.

XVIII, Rec. XVII]. VERS. 15. Nunc enim non infert furorem suum, nec ulciscitur valde scelus. 37. Deus hic diu tolerat quos in aeternum est damnaturus. Diu quippe Deus tolerat quem in perpetuum damnat; et furorem nunc inferre dissimulat, quia effundendum sine fine in posterum servat. Electorum namque est hic conteri, ut ad praemia debeant aeternae haereditatis erudiri. Nostrum est hic flagella percipere, quibus servatur de aeternitate gaudere. Hinc enim scriptum est: Flagellat omnem filium quem recipit (Hebr., XII, 6). Hinc ad Joannem dicitur: Ego quos amo arguo et castigo (Apoc. III, 19). Hinc Petrus ait: Tempus est ut incipiat judicium de domo Dei (I Petr. IV, 17). Ubi mox admirando subjungit: Si autem primum a nobis, qui finis eorum qui non credunt Dei Evangelio (Ibid., 17)? Peccata quippe nequaquam divina severitas inulta remanere permittit, sed ira judicii a nostra hic correptione inchoat, ut in reproborum damnatione conquiescat. Eant ergo nunc reprobi, et voluptatum suarum desideria inulta iniquitate consumment; atque eo temporalia flagella non sentiant, quo aeterna eos supplicia exspectant. Bene autem inulta eorum nequitia Cham peccante signata est, cui a patre dicitur: Maledictus Chanaan puer, servus erit fratribus suis (Gen. IX, 25). Chanaan videlicet Cham filius. Et quid est quod Cham peccante Chanaan ejus filius sententiam ultionis accipit? Quid est quod non in se, sed in posteritate percutitur, nisi quod reproborum nequitiae hic quidem inultae proficiunt, sed in posterum feriuntur? Dicatur ergo: Nunc enim non infert furorem suum, nec ulciscitur valde scelus. 38. Eos tamen aliquando hac in vita ferire inchoat. Notandum vero est quod subintulit, Valde, quia etsi quaedam longanimiter tolerat, quaedam tamen etiam in hac vita flagellat et hic nonnunquam ferire inchoat, quod aeterna damnatione consummat. Ergo et nonnulla percutit, et nonnulla inulta derelinquit, quia si nulla resecaret, quis Deum res humanas curare crederet? Et rursus, si hic cuncta percuteret, extremum judicium unde 830 restaret? Quaedam igitur feriuntur, ut rectoris nostri super nos sollicitudinem formidemus; quaedam vero inulta servantur, ut adhuc judicium restare sentiamus. Bene ergo dicitur: Nec ulciscitur valde scelus, quia dum exiguum quiddam de iniquitatepercutitur, inconversis mentibus aeterni jam judicii sententia propinatur. 39. Aliud est rectum dicere, aliud recte. Totum itaque hoc ab Eliu rectum dicitur, si recte diceretur. Scit enim quid loqui debeat, sed cui loquatur ignorat. Vera sunt namque quae dixit, sed a beati Job increpationibus aliena, quia tanto hac correptione non eguit, quanto nec aliqua pusillanimitate peccavit. [Vet. XIX.] Sed quia justis viris solet occasio esse virtutum elatio superborum, occulto judicio cum beato Job agitur, ut post flagella poenarum etiam per verba arrogantium crescat. Ecce enim tanto magis a superbiae ministro despicitur quanto a magistra veritate intrinsecus idem refovetur. Nam Eliu postquam tot fortia se dixisse cognovit, quid elationis gestaret aperuit, atque beatum Job alta de se sentiendo despexit, dicens:

CAPUT XXII.

VERS. 16. Ergo Job frustra aperit eos suum, et absque scientia verba multiplicat. 40. Superborum vitia sunt loquacitas, et audiendi impatientia. Haec nimirum inferens, beatum Job et nil scisse asserit, et multa dixisse; et cum ipse quae sentit loquaciter inferat, hunc de vitio loquacitatis accusat. Sed hoc quoque esse proprium arrogantium vitium solet, ut et pauca credant quae ipsi multa dixerint, et multa credant quae ipsis pauca dicuntur. Quia enim sua dicere semper volunt, aliena audire non possunt; vim se pati existimant, si ea quae immoderate sentiunt immoderatius non effundant. Et quamvis beatus Job ad ejus verba tacuerit, Eliu tamen de locutione illius, qua amicis responderat, causam invectionis invenit, ut sibi exhibere latius ejus silentium posset, atque ut ipse multa respondeat, illum verba multiplicasse confirmat. Nam et mox initia prolixae locutionis exorditur; et quasi adhuc nil dixerit, inchoare conatur. Unde subditur:

CAPUT XXIII [Vet.

XX, Rec. XVIII]. CAP. XXXVI, VERS. 1, 2. Addens quoque Eliu, etiam haec locutus est: Sustine me paululum, et indicabo tibi. 41. Ex multiloquio suam doctrinam metiuntur. Dum sese ostentant, pro Deo loqui fingunt. Multa jam dixerat, et sustineri adhuc paululum sperat, quia videlicet arrogantes grave se damnum perpeti judicant, si scientiam suam loquendi brevitate constringant. Tanto enim semetipsos credunt doctiores ostendere, quanto se potuerint multiplicitate loquacitatis aperire. Sed quia saepe sibi sentiunt silentii reverentiam non deferri, Domini nonnunquam potentiam de quo quasi loquuntur insinuant, ac sub praetextu illius sibi silentium exigunt, quod minime merentur; et dum specietenus Deum proferunt, auditum sibi ex reverentia ejus exigentes, se student magis ostendere quam illius facta praedicare. Unde et Eliu subjungit, dicens: IBID. Adhuc enim habeo quod pro Deo loquar. 831 Quia vero nonnunquam doctores sancti crebro repetunt si qua obscurius dicunt, ut quae occulta praedicant auditorum cordibus voce haec iterationis infundant, plerumque hoc appetunt etiam arrogantes imitari, et insolenter ea quae dixerint replicant, non quo auditorum cordibus insinuare res appetant, sed quo eorum judicio videri eloquentes volunt. Unde Eliu subjungens ait: VERS. 3. Repetam scientiam meam a principio. Sed quia nominata scientia, tumor cordis in voce claruerat; arrogans aperte cognoscitur, si non citius aliquo velamine pallietur. Unde mox in occultatione suae arrogantiae Domini justitiam subinferens, ait: IBID. Et operatorem meum probabo justum. Ut dum quasi pro Dei justitia loquitur, apud humana judicia quidquid arroganter effluit excusetur. Sequitur:

CAPUT XXIV.

VERS. 4. Vere enim absque mendacio sermones mei. 42. Testimonium a Deo non habentes, ab hominibus quaerunt. Cum ab infirmis auditoribus se intelligi non posse conspiciunt, solent plerumque etiam justi laudare bona quae dicunt, non quo ipsi suis laudibus inhient, sed quo auditores suos ad audiendi sollicitudinem accendant, ut dum eorum voce proferuntur, ab illorum cordibus ardentiori affectu rapiantur. Unde Paulus cum mira Corinthiis et multa dixisset: adjunxit Os nostrum patet ad vos, o Corinthii, cor nostrum dilatatum est (II Cor, VI, 11). Sed arrogantes dum cor bonorum nesciunt, et solas aliquando voces imitantur, efferunt laudando quae dicunt, non quod eis torpor audientium displicet, sed quod sibi inhianter placent. Justorum vocem imitantes simulant, sed vim vocis ignorant. Vident quod justi proferunt, sed nesciunt quod requirunt. Cum enim sancti doctores laudem praedicationis exaltant, quasi manu vocis ab imis cogitationibus corda audientium levant, ut excussa velociter dictis sequentibus velut in itinere occurrant et tanto ea intelligentiae amplexu constringant, quanto illa et quasi priusquam cernerent in voce laudantis amaverant. Sed haec, ut dixi, arrogantes nesciunt. Quia enim foris est quod appetunt, quid sit intus desiderabile sentire non possunt. De electorum quippe Ecclesia scriptum est: Omnis gloria ejus filiae regum ab intus (Psal. XLIV, 14). Et sapientes virgines in vasis oleum portare referuntur (Matth. XXV, 4). Unde et sanctorum voce dicitur: Gloria nostra haec est, testimonium conscientiae nostrae (II Cor. I, 12). Arrogantes autem, quia coram Deo conscientiae suae testimonium non habent, quaerunt coram hominibus testimonium vocis alienae; quam cum tarde reperiunt, ipsi etiam in impudentiam sui favoris erumpunt. Si enim non inveniunt voces hominum, quas inhianter exspectant, ipsi scientiam suam laudantes praedicant. Unde et Eliu subdit dicens:

CAPUT XXV.

IBID. Et perfecta scientia probabitur tibi. 43. Cordis elatio licet occulta, inexcusabilis; quanto magis quae verbis foras erumpit. Nimirum sensit se magna dicturum, sed tumenti corde hoc quod de semetipso sublimiter aestimavit tacere non potuit: et idcirco quod rectum sensit laudando praecucurrit: quia jam quidem divino judicio reus esset, si magna de se saltem silendo sensisset. Ante subtile enim veritatis examen securi omnino non sumus, etiam si humano 832 judicio quod in nobis reprehendi debeat non habemus. Nam plerumque negligentius cogitantes elatione pulsamur, quam tamen tacentes premimus. Sed nisi retractatione concita tumor occultus in ipso cubili cordis, in quo oritur, suffocetur, coram districto judice omne meritum nostrae actionis exstinguitur. Hinc ergo pensandum est illa cordis elatio quanta animadversione damnabitur, quae usque ad audaciam vocis nutritur, si neque haec est excusabilis quae in corde latenter oboritur. Considerandum quoque qualis intrinsecus regnat, quae eo usque servata est, ut etiam foras erumpere non erubescat. Eliu ergo quia magna sensit, semetipsum humiliter temperare nescivit, scientiae celsitudinem tenuit, humilitatis gratiam recusavit; et dum sequitur bonum quo bene dicere appetiit, bonum quo bene vivere potuisset amisit. Scientia quippe instat, charitas vero aedificat (I Cor. VIII, 1). Sed jam nunc rectum dicat, quod tamen recte dicere ignorat. Nam postquam inflatas animi cogitationes per verba elationis exhalavit, fortem sententiam subdidit, dicens:

CAPUT XXVI [Vet.

XXI, Rec. XIX]. VERS. 5. Deus potentes non abjicit, cum et ipse sit potens. 44. Potentia temporalis, etsi bona, elationis tentationi est obnoxia. Qui se videt plus caeteris posse, plus sapere facile credit. Hic Satanae similis. In usu vitae mortalis quaedam ex semetipsis sunt noxia, quaedam vero ex his quae circa ipsa versantur. Ex semetipsis quaedam sunt noxia, sicut peccata atque flagitia. Quaedam vero nonnunquam nobis ex his quae circa ipsa sunt nocent, sicut temporalis potentia, vel copula conjugalis. Bonum namque est conjugium, sed mala sunt quae circa illud ex hujus mundi cura succrescunt. Unde Paulus ait: Qui autem cum uxore est cogitat quae sunt mundi, quomodo placeat uxori (I Cor. VII, 33). Unde et quibusdam meliora persuadens, eos a conjugio revocat, dicens: Hoc autem dico, non ut laqueum vobis injiciam, sed ad id quod honestum est, et quod facultatem praebeat sine impedimento Dominum obsecrandi (Ibid., 35). Dum ergo tenetur quod non nocet, ex rebus juxta positis committitur plerumque quod nocet; sicut saepe rectum mundumque iter pergimus, et tamen ortis juxta viam vepribus per vestimenta retinemur. In via quidem munda non offendimus, sed a latere nascitur quo pungamur. Magna est etiam potentia temporalis, quae habet apud Deum meritum suum de bona administratione regiminis; nonnunquam tamen eo ipso quo praeeminet caeteris, elatione cogitationis intumescit; et dum ad usum cuncta subjacent, dum ad votum velociter jussa complentur, dum omnes subditi si qua bene gesta sunt laudibus efferunt, male gestis autem nulla auctoritate contradicunt, dum plerumque laudant etiam quod objurgare debuerunt, seductus ab his quae infra subduntur, super se animus tollitur; et dum foris immenso favore circumdatur, intus veritate vacuatur; atque oblitus sui, in voces se spargit alienas; talemque se credit, qualem foris audit, non qualem intus discernere debuit; subjectos despicit, eosque aequales sibi naturae ordine non agnoscit; et quos sorte potestatis excesserit, transcendisse se etiam vitae meritis credit; cunctis se aestimat amplius sapere, quibus se videt amplius posse. In quodam quippe se constituit culmine apud semetipsum; et qui aequa caeteris naturae conditione constringitur, 833 ex aequo respicere caeteros dedignatur; sicque usque ad ejus similitudinem ducitur de quo scriptum est: Omne sublime videt, et ipse est rex super universos filios superbiae (Job. XLI, 25). Et de cujus corpore dicitur: Generatio cujus excelsi sunt oculi, et palpebrae ejus in alta surrectae (Prov. XXX, 13). Ad ejus similitudinem ducitur, qui singulare culmen appetens, et socialem angelorum vitam despiciens, ait: Ascendam super altitudinem nubium; similis ero altissimo (Isai. XIV, 14). Miro ergo judicio intus foveam dejectionis invenit, dum foris se in culmine potestatis extollit. Apostatae quippe angelo similis efficitur, dum homo hominibus esse similis dedignatur. Sic Saul ab humilitatis merito in tumorem superbiae culmine potestatis excrevit. Per humilitatem quippe praelatus est per superbiam reprobatus, Domino attestante qui ait: Nonne cum esses parvulus in oculis tuis, caput te constitui in tribubus Israel (I Reg. XV, 17)? Parvulum se ante potestatem viderat, sed, fultus temporali potentia, jam se parvulum non videbat. Caeterorum namque comparatione se praeferens, magnum se apud se esse judicabat. Miro autem modo cum apud se parvulus, apud Dominum magnus; cum vero apud se magnus, apud Dominum parvulus fuit. Magnos nos Dominus apud nos esse prohibet per prophetam dicens: Vae qui sapientes estis in oculis vestris, et coram vobismetipsis prudentes (Isai. V, 21). Ne magni apud nos esse debeamus, Paulus admonens, ait: Nolite prudentes esse apud vosmetipsos (Rom. XII, 15). Plerumque ergo dum ex subjectorum affluentia animus inflatur, in luxum superbiae ipso potentiae fastigio lenocinante corrumpitur. 45. Legitima potestas ea est, quae super culpas, non super homines erigitur. S. Petri exemplum, et S. Pauli. Sed aliud est quaelibet bona non esse, aliud bona bene habere nescire. Bona namque est ordine suo potentia, sed cauta regentis indiget vita. Igitur bene hanc exercet, qui et retinere illam noverit, et impugnare. Bene hanc exercet, qui scit per illam super culpas erigi, et scit cum illa caeteris aequalitate componi. Humana enim mens plerumque extollitur, etiam cum nulla potestate fulcitur; quanto magis in altum se erigit, cum se etiam ei potestas adjungit? Et tamen corrigendis aliorum vitiis apta exsecutione praeparatur. Unde et per Paulum dicitur: Minister enim Dei est, vindex in iram ei qui malum agit (Rom. XIII, 4). [Vet. XXII.] Cum ergo potentiae temporalis ministerium suscipitur, summa cura vigilandum est, ut sciat quisque et sumere ex ea quod adjuvat, et expugnare quod tentat; et aequalem se cum illa caeteris cernere, et tamen se peccantibus zelo ultionis praeferre. Quam discretionem plenius cognoscimus, si etiam potestatis ecclesiasticae exempla cernamus. Petrus namque, auctore Deo, Ecclesiae principatum tenens a bene agente Cornelio, et sese ei humiliter prosternente, immoderatius venerari recusavit, seque illi similem recognovit, dicens: Surge, ne feceris, et ego ipse homo sum (Act. X, 26). Sed cum Ananiae et Sapphirae culpam reperit, mox quanta super caeteros potentia excrevisset ostendit (Act. V, 5, seq.). Verbo enim eorum vitam perculit, quam spiritu perscrutante deprehendit; et summum se intra Ecclesiam contra peccata recoluit, quod, honore sibi vehementer impenso, coram bene agentibus fratribus non agnovit. Illic communionem aequalitatis meruit sanctitas actionis, 834 hic zelus ultionis jus aperuit potestatis, Paulus bene argentibus fratribus praelatum se esse nesciebat, cum diceret: Non quia dominamur fidei vestrae, sed adjutores sumus gaudii vestri (II Cor. I, 23). Atque illico adjunxit: Fide enim statis. Ac si diceret: Ideo non dominamur fidei vestrae, quia fide statis. Aequales enim vobis sumus, ubi vos stare cognoscimus. Quasi praelatum se fratribus esse nesciebat, cum diceret: Facti sumus parvuli in medio vestrum (I Thess. II, 7), et, Nos autem servos vestros per Jesum Christum (II Cor. IV, 5). Sed cum culpam quae corrigi debuisset invenit, illico magistrum se esse recoluit, dicens: Quid vultis? in virga veniam ad vos (I Cor. IV, 5)? 46. Praelati dum culpas puniunt jure potestatis, aequales se iis qui corriguntur agnoscant per humilitatis custodiam. Ipsis etiam se postponant, quare. Summus itaque locus bene regitur, cum is qui praeest vitiis potius quam fratribus dominatur. Cunctos quippe natura aequales genuit; ut autem alii ad regendum aliis committantur, non eos natura, sed culpa postponit. Vitiis ergo se debent rectores erigere, quorum et causa praeferuntur; et cum delinquentes corrigunt, sollicite attendant, ut per disciplinam culpas quidem jure potestatis feriant, sed per humilitatis custodiam aequales se ipsis fratribus qui corriguntur agnoscant. Quamvis plerumque etiam dignum est ut eosdem quos corrigimus tacita nobis cogitatione praeferamus. Illorum namque per nos vitia disciplinae vigore feriuntur; in his vero quae ipsi committimus ne verbi quidem ab aliquo invectione laceramur. Tanto ergo apud Dominum obligatiores sumus quanto apud homines inulte peccamus. [Vet. XXIII.] Disciplina autem nostra subditos tanto divino judicio liberiores reddit, quanto hic eorum culpas sine vindicta non deserit. Servanda itaque est in corde humilitas, et in opere disciplina. Atque inter haec solerter intuendum, ne dum immoderatius custoditur virtus humilitatis, solvantur jura regiminis; et dum praelatus quisque plus se quam decet dejicit, subditorum vitam stringere sub disciplinae vinculo non possit. Teneamus ergo exterius quod pro aliorum utilitate suscipimus, teneamus interius quod de nostra aestimatione sentimus. Sed tamen decenter quibusdam erumpentibus signis tales nos apud nos esse ipsi etiam qui nobis commissi sunt non ignorent, ut et de auctoritate nostra quod formident videant, et de humilitate quod imitentur agnoscant. Servata autem auctoritate regiminis, ad cor nostrum sine cessatione redeamus, et consideremus assidue quod sumus aequaliter cum caeteris conditi, non quod temporaliter caeteris praelati. Potestas enim quanto exterius eminet, tanto premi interius debet, ne cogitationem vincat, ne in delectationem sui animum rapiat, ne jam sub se mens eam regere non possit, cui se libidine dominandi supponit. 47. Potestatis humiliter administratae exemplum in David. Bene David regni potentiam regere noverat, qui elationem ejusdem potentiae semetipsum premendo vincebat, dicens: Domine, non est exaltatum cor meum (Psal. CXXX 1). Quippe in ejus humilitatis augmentum subjunxit: Neque elati sunt oculi mei. Atque addidit: Neque ambulavi in magnis. Et adhuc subtilissima semetipsum inquisitione discutiens, ait: Neque in mirabilibus super me. Omnesque etiam cogitationes suas a fundo cordis exhauriens, 835 subjungit, dicens: Si non humiliter sentiebam sed exaltavi animam meam. Ecce humilitatis hostiam ab intimo cordis oblatam crebro replicat, et iterum atque iterum confitendo offerre non cessat; eamque multipliciter loquens judicis sui oculis ostentat. Quid est hoc? et quomodo istud sacrificium Deo placere cognoverat, quod in conspectu ejus tanta iteratione vocis immolabat, nisi quod vicina esse superbia potentibus solet, et pene semper rebus affluentibus elatio sociatur, quia et saepe humoris abundantia duritiam dat tumoris? [Vet. XXIV.] 48. Rara humilitatis et potestatis societas. Mirum vero valde est cum in cordibus sublimium regnat humilitas morum. Unde pensandum est quia potentes quique cum humiliter sapiunt, culmen extraneae et quasi longe positae virtutis attingunt, et recte hac virtute Dominum quantocius placant, quia illud ei sacrificium humiliter offerunt, quod potentes invenire vix possunt. Subtilissima namque ars vivendi est culmen tenere, gloriam premere; esse quidem in potentia, sed potentem se esse nescire; ad largienda bona potentem se cognoscere, ad rependenda noxia omne quod potenter valet ignorare. Recte itaque de talibus dicitur: Deus potentes non abjicit, cum et ipse sit potens. Deum quippe imitari desiderat, qui fastigium potentiae alienis intentus utilitatibus, et non suis laudibus elatus administrat, qui praelatus caeteris prodesse appetit, non praeesse. Tumoris namque elatio, non ordo potestatis in crimine est. Potentiam Deus tribuit, elationem vero potentiae malitia nostrae mentis invenit. Tollamus ergo quod de nostro contulimus, et bona sunt quae Deo largiente possidemus. Quia enim nequaquam justa potentia, sed actio prava damnatur, apte subjungitur:

CAPUT XXVII [Rec. XX].

VERS. 6. Sed non salvat impios, et judicium pauperibus tribuit. 49. Deus potestatis superbiam non celsitudinem damnat. Scriptura sacra plerumque pauperes, humiles vocare consuevit. Unde in Evangelio cum adjectione spiritus nominantur, dum dicitur: Beati pauperes spiritu, quoniam ipsorum est regnum coelorum (Matth. V, 3). Quia enim divitiae visibiliter potentes ostendunt, apud semetipsos pauperes sunt, qui elati in suis conscientiis non sunt. Eos vero impios vocat, qui aut a fidei pietate disjuncti sunt, aut in hoc quod fideliter credunt pravis sibi moribus contradicunt. Quia ergo omnipotens Deus malitiae superbiam, non potentiae celsitudinem damnat, postquam dictum est: Deus potentes non abjicit, cum et ipse sit potens, recte subjungitur: Sed non salvat impios, et judicium pauperibus tribuit. Id est, elatos destruit, humiles vero per judicium liberos reddit. Vel certe judicium pauperibus tribuit, quia hi qui nunc nequiter opprimuntur, ipsi tunc super oppressores suos judices veniunt. 50. Reproborum alii judicantur, alii non judicantur. Duae quippe sunt partes, electorum scilicet, atque reproborum. Sed bini ordines eisdem singulis partibus continentur. Alii namque judicantur et pereunt, alii non judicantur et pereunt. Alii judicantur et regnant, alii non judicantur et 836 regnant. Judicantur et pereunt quibus Dominica inclamatione dicitur: Esurivi, et non dedistis mihi manducare; sitivi, et non dedistis mihi potum; hospes eram, et non collegistis me; nudus, et non operuistis me; aeger et in carcere, et non visitastis me (Matth. XXV, 42, 43). Quibus praemittitur: Discedite a me, maledicti, in ignem aeternum, qui paratus est diabolo et angelis ejus (Ibid., 41). Alii vero in extremo judicio non judicantur et pereunt, de quibus Propheta ait: Non resurgunt impii in judicio (Psal. I, 5). Et de quibus Dominus dicit: Qui autem non credit, jam judicatus est (Joan. III, 18). Et de quibus Paulus ait: Qui sine lege peccaverunt, sine lege peribunt (Rom. II, 12). Resurgunt ergo etiam omnes infideles, sed ad tormentum, non ad judicium. Non enim eorum tunc causa discutitur, quia ad conspectum districti judicis jam cum damnatione suae infidelitatis accedunt. Professionem vero fidei retinentes, sed professionis opera non habentes, redarguunt ut pereant. Qui vero nec fidei sacramenta tenuerunt increpationem judicis in extrema examinatione non audiunt, quia, praejudicati infidelitatis suae tenebris, ejus quem despexerant invectione redargui non merentur. Illi saltem judicis verba audiunt, quia ejus fidei saltem verba tenuerunt. Isti in damnatione sua aeterni judicis nec verba percipiunt, quia ejus reverentiam nec verbo tenus servare voluerunt. Illi legaliter pereunt, quia sub lege positi peccaverunt; istis in perditione sua de lege nihil dicitur quia nihil legis habere conati sunt. [Vet. XXV.] Princeps namque terrenam rempublicam regens, aliter punit civem interius delinquentem, atque aliter exterius hostem rebellantem. In illo jura sua consulit, eumque sub verbis dignae invectionis addicit; contra hostem vero bella movet, instrumenta perditionis exercet, dignaque ejus malitiae tormenta retribuit, de malo vero ejus quid lex habeat non requirit. Neque enim lege necesse est perimi, qui lege nunquam potuit teneri. Ita ergo in extremo judicio et legalis illum invectio percutit qui ab eo quod professione tenuit, actione declinavit; et iste sine judicii invectione perimitur, qui lege fidei non tenetur. 51. Electorum quoque alii judicium subeunt, alii non, sed judices sedent. Ex electorum vero parte alii judicantur et regnant, qui vitae maculas lacrymis tergunt, qui mala praecedentia factis sequentibus redimentes, quidquid illicitum aliquando fecerunt ab oculis judicis eleemosynarum superductione cooperiunt. Quibus judex veniens in dextera consistentibus dicit: Esurivi, et dedistis mihi manducare; sitivi, et dedistis mihi bibere; hospes eram, et collegistis me; nudus, et cooperuistis me; infirmus, et visitastis me; in carcere eram, et venistis ad me (Matth. XXV, 35). Quibus praemittit, dicens: Venite, benedicti Patris mei, possidete paratum vobis regnum a constitutione mundi (Ibid., 34). Alii autem non judicantur et regnant qui etiam praecepta legis perfectione virtutum transcendunt, quia nequaquam hoc solum quod cunctis divina lex praecipit implere contenti sunt, sed praestantiori desiderio plus exhibere appetunt quam praeceptis generalibus audire potuerunt. Quibus dominica voce dicitur: Vos qui reliquistis omnia, et secuti estis me, cum sederit Filius hominis 837 in sede majestatis suae, sedebitis et vos super duodecim thronos, judicantes duodecim tribus Israel (Matth. XIX, 28). Et de quibus propheta ait: Dominus ad judicium veniet cum senioribus populi sui (Isai. III, 14). Et de quibus Salomon, cum de sanctae Ecclesiae sponso loqueretur, intulit dicens: Nobilis in portis vir ejus, quando sederit cum senatoribus terrae (Prov. XXXI, 23). Hi itaque in extremo judicio non judicantur et regnant, quia cum auctore suo etiam judices veniunt. Relinquentes quippe omnia plus prompta devotione exsecuti sunt quam juberi generaliter audierunt. Speciali namque jussione paucis perfectioribus, et non generaliter omnibus, dicitur hoc quod adolescens dives audivit: Vade et vende omnia quae habes, et da pauperibus, et habebis thesaurum in coelo, et veni et sequere me (Matth. XIX, 21). Si enim sub hoc praecepto cunctos jussio generalis astringeret, culpa profecto esset aliquid nos de hoc mundo possidere. Sed aliud est quod per sacram Scripturam omnibus generaliter praecipitur, aliud quod specialiter perfectioribus imperatur. Hi ergo recte sub generali judicio non tenentur, qui et praecepta generalia vivendo vicerunt. Sicut enim non judicantur et pereunt, qui suadente perfidia lege teneri contemnunt, ita non judicantur et regnant, qui, suadente pietate, etiam ultra generalia divinae legis praecepta proficiunt. Hinc est quod Paulus, etiam specialia praecepta transcendens, plus opere exhibuit quam institutione permissionis accepit (I Thess. II, 7). Cum enim accepisset ut Evangelium praedicans de Evangelio viveret, et Evangelium audientibus contulit, et tamen Evangelii sumptibus sustentari recusavit. Cur ergo iste judicetur ut regnet, qui minus quod servaret accepit, sed majus quod viveret invenit? Dicatur igitur recte: Judicium pauperibus tribuit, quia quanto huic mundo magna humilitate despecti sunt, tanto tunc acceptis sedibus majore culmine potestatis excrescunt. Unde et sequitur:

CAPUT XXVIII [Rec. XXI].

VERS. 7. Non auferet a justo oculos suos, et reges in solio collocat in perpetuum, et illic eriguntur. 52. Deus justos tunc magis respicit, cum injuste affliguntur. Abstulisse enim a justis oculos suos fortasse Dominus creditur, quia injustorum crudelitatibus hic sine vindicta lacerantur; sed famulos suos tunc magis respicit, cum injuste eos nequitia persequentis affligit. Videns enim quid hic humiliter tolerent, nimirum jam praevidet quid illic eis misericorditer recompenset. Non ergo aufert a justo oculos suos. Ecce iste humiliter ingemiscit, ille superbit et nequiter floret. Iste cor conterit, ille se de gloria iniquitatis extollit. Horum ergo quis divinis obtutibus longe est, qui injustitiam pertulit, an qui eam patientibus irrogavit; qui supernam gratiam inter maeroris tenebras tenuit, an qui inter exteriora gaudia lumen justitiae intus amisit? [Vet. XXVI.] 53. Cur sancti, reges in S. Scriptura vocantur. Sanctos in throno cum Christo sedere est ex ejus potestate judicare. Bene autem sancti viri Scripturae sacrae testimonio reges vocantur, quia, praelati cunctis motibus carnis, modo luxuriae appetitum frenant, 838 modo aestum avaritiae temperant, modo gloriam elationis inclinant, modo suggestionem livoris obruunt, modo ignem furoris exstingnunt. Reges ergo sunt, quia tentationum suarum motibus non consentiendo succumbere, sed regendo praeesse noverunt. Quia igitur ab hac potestate regiminis ad potestatem transeunt retributionis, dicatur recte: Reges in solio collocat in perpetuum. Semetipsos enim regendo, ad tempus fatigati sunt, sed in regni erectionis aeternae solio in perpetuum collocantur; et eo illic accipiunt alios digne judicare, quo hic nesciunt sibimetipsis nequiter parcere. Hinc enim alias dicitur: Donec justitia convertatur in judicium (Psal. XCIII, 15). Paulus de se suisque consortibus dicit: Ut nos efficeremur justitia Dei in ipso (II Cor. V, 21). Justitia ergo in judicium vertitur, quia hi qui nunc juste atque irreprehensibiliter vivunt, tunc judicandi potentiam nanciscuntur. Hinc Laodiceae Ecclesiae Dominus dicit: Qui vicerit, dabo ei sedere mecum in throno meo, sicut et ego vici, et sedi cum Patre meo in throno ejus (Apoc. III, 21). Vincens Dominus in throno cum Patre sedisse se asserit, quia post passionis certamina, post resurrectionis palmam, clarius se omnibus quod potestati Patris esset aequalis indicavit, eique se non disparem calcato mortis aculeo innotuit. Unde et Mariae necdum credenti se Patri similem, dicit: Noli me tangere, nondum enimascendi ad Patrem (Joan. XX, 17). Nobis enim in throno filii sedere, est ex ejusdem Filii potestate judicare. Quia enim judicii principatum ex ejus virtute percipimus, velut in throno ejus residemus. [Vet. XXVII.] Nec abhorret a vero quod alias super duodecim thronos venturos testatur esse discipulos (Matth. XIX, 28), hic vero in throno suo perhibet esse sessuros. Per thronos quippe duodecim universale judicium, per thronum vero Fili singulare culmen judiciariae potestatis ostenditur. Hoc ergo duodecim thronis, quod uno throno Filii designatur, quia videlicet universale judicium ex Mediatoris nostri interventione percipitur. Dicatur ergo: Reges in solio collocat in perpetuum. 54. Sanctorum sessio est aeterna. Prius humiliati, erigentur. Apte autem in perpetuum subdens aperte quid dicat insinuat. Si enim de terreni regni solio diceret, nullatenus in perpetuum subdidisset, quia qui illud arripiunt, profecto non in eo in perpetuum, sed temporaliter collocantur. Bene autem subdidit: Et illic eriguntur. Ac si intentioni audientis innueret, dicens: Quia hic humiliati sunt, illic eriguntur. Sanctis namque viris iste locus humilitatis est, ut ille sit celsitudinis. Unde alias scriptum est: Humiliasti eos in loco afflictionis (Psal. XLIII, 20). Locus quippe afflictionis est vita praesens: Qui ergo ad aeternam patriam tendunt, nunc semetipsos temporaliter in afflictionis loco despiciunt, ut tunc in loco gaudii veraciter sublimentur. Sequitur:

CAPUT XXIX Rec.

[XXII]. VERS. 8, 9. Et si fuerint in catenis, et vinciantur funibus paupertatis, indicabit eis opera eorum, et scelera eorum, quia violenti fuerint 55. Catenis ligari se putant sancti, quandiu hic vivunt. Catenae obligationis sunt ipsa adhuc retentio 839 peregrinationis. Ligatum se his catenis Paulus aspexerat, cum dicebat: Desiderium habens dissolvi, et cum Christo esse (Philip. I, 23). Paupertatis funibus vinctum se esse cernebat, quando veras divitias intuens, eas etiam discipulis exorabat, dicens: Ut sciatis quae sit spes vocationis ejus, quae divitiae gloriae haereditatis ejus in sanctis (Ephes. I, 18). Bene autem post ista subditur: Indicabit eis opera eorum, et scelera eorum, quia violenti fuerint. Cum enim supernam gloriam magis amando cognoscimus, tunc mala quae egimus graviora fuisse sentimus.

Unde et Paulus post perceptam gratiam supernorum ea quae in se studia virtutum crediderat fuisse jam scelera cognoscebat, dicens: Qui prius fui blasphemus, et persecutor, et contumeliosus; sed misericordiam consecutus sum, quia ignorans feci in incredulitate (I Tim. I, 13). Vel certe: Sed quae mihi fuerunt lucra, haec arbitratus sum propter Christum detrimenta (Philip. III, 7). Unde et apte subditur:

CAPUT XXX.

VERS. 10.Revelabit quoque aurum eorum, ut corripiat; et loquetur, ut revertantur ab iniquitate. 56. Amore coelestis gloriae graviora fiunt peccata prius perpetrata. Aurem ab iniquitate revelare est intellectum cognitionis aperire. Revelata vero aure unusquisque corripitur, quando intrinsecus aeternorum bonorum desiderium percipit, et quae mala extrinsecus perpetravit agnoscit Potest vero in catenis et funibus paupertatis poena etiam temporalis afflictionis intelligi, quia saepe qui jubentis verba non audiunt, ferientis verberibus admonentur, ut ad bona desideria saltem poenae trahant, quos praemia non invitant. Unde per Prophetam dicitur: In camo et freno maxillas eorum constringe, qui non approximant ad le (Psal. XXXI, 9). Si vero etiam flagella despiciunt, constat nimirum quod tanto illic gravioris vindictae supplicia sentiant, quanto hic majoris providentiae gratiam calcant. Unde et sequitur:

CAPUT XXXI.

VERS. 11, 12. Si audierint et observaverint, complebunt dies suos in bono, et annos suos in gloria. Si autem non audierint, transibunt per gladium, et consumentur stultitia. 57. Quam severe puniendi, qui a perditis moribus nec flagellis coercentur. Per bonum recta actio, per gloriam vero superna retributio designatur. Qui ergo obedire praeceptis coelestibus student, dies suos in bono complent, annos in gloria, quia et cursum praesentis temporis in recto opere, et consummationem suam perficiunt felici retributione. Si vero non audierint, transibunt per gladium, et consumentur stultitia, quia et vindicta eos in tribulatione percutit, et finis in fatuitate concludit. [Vet. XXVIII.] Sunt enim nonnulli quos a perditis moribus nec tormenta compescunt. De quibus per prophetam dicitur: Percussisti eos nec doluerunt; flagellasti eos, et renuerunt accipere disciplinam (Jerem. V, 3). Et de quibus sub Babylonis specie dicitur: Curavimus Babylonem, et non est sanata (Jerem. LI, 9). De quibus rursum dicitur: Interfeci et perdidi populum meum, et tamen a viis suis non sunt reversi (Jerem. XV, 7). Hi nonnunquam deteriores existunt ex verbere, quia pulsati doloribus, aut contumaci pertinacia duriores existunt, aut, quod pejus est, in blasphemiae etiam exasperationem prosiliunt. Bene ergo dicitur quod per gladium transeunt, et stultitia consumuntur, quia peccata quae flagellis emendare 840 debuerant, flagellis exaggerant. Et hic jam poenas percussionis sentiunt, et illic justae retributionis supplicia non evadunt. Fatuitas quippe stultitiae est quod illos sic imquitas obligat, ut a culpa eos nec poena compescat. Sequitur:

CAPUT XXXII [Rec. XXIII].

VERS. 13. Simulatores et callidi provocant iram Dei. 58. Simulatoris callidi imago. Cum simulatores diceret, apte subjungit et callidi, quia nisi ingenio calleant, quod videri appetunt congrue simulare non possunt. Sunt enim nonnulla vitia quae etiam a sensu tardioribus facile perpetrantur. Elatione namque intumescere, avaritiae aestibus inhiare, luxuriae pulsanti succumbere, etiam quilibet obtusis sensibus potest; simulationis vero falsitatem exsequi, nisi qui subtilioris ingenii fuerit, non potest. Quisquis enim talis est, ad custodienda duo videlicet continua observatione dividitur, ut callide noverit et occultare quod est, et ostentare quod non est; et vera mala premere, et falsa bona monstrare; nec se aperte in hoc quod videtur extollere, atque, ut majorem gloriam teneat, saepe se simulare gloriam declinare. Quia enim ante oculos hominum sequendo eam apprehendere non potest, studet plerumque gloriam tenere fugiendo. Haec itaque simplicibus minime congruunt, quia si congruunt, jam simplices non sunt. 59. Iram Dei non solum meretur, sed provocat. Bene autem cum diceret: Simulatores et callidi, non subdidit, merentur, sed provocant iram Dei. Iram quippe Dei mereri, est etiam nesciendo peccare. Provocare vero est mandatis illius sciendo contraire; scire bonum, sed despicere; facere posse, nec velle. Hi enim perpetratione nequitiae intrinsecus tenebrescunt, et ostentatione justitiae superficie tenus dealbantur. Quibus voce Dominica dicitur: Vae vobis, Scribae et Pharisaei hypocritae, quia similes estis sepulcris dealbatis, quae foris parent hominibus speciosa, intus vero plena sunt ossibus mortuorum, et omni spurcitia; ita et vos quidem foris apparetis hominibus justi, intus autem pleni estis hypocrisi et iniquitate. (Matth. XXIII, 27). Foris ergo ostendendo servant quae vivendo intus impugnant. Intus vero mala cogitantes exaggerant quae foris aliud superducentes occultant. Ante districtum itaque judicem excusationem jam de ignorantia habere non possunt, quia dum ante oculos hominum omnem modum sanctitatis ostentant, ipsi sibi sunt testimonio quia bene vivere non ignorant. Dicatur igitur recte: Simulatores et callidi provocant iram Dei. Quid vero eos ad extremum sequatur, adjungit, dicens:

CAPUT XXXIII.

Ibid. Neque clamabunt cum vincti fuerint. 60. Etiam percussus peccata confiteri erubescit. Omnis iniquus qui cum iniquus sit, sanctus videri non appetit, in flagelli percussione deprehensus, fateri quod iniquus sit non erubescit. Qui vero iniqua agens, humana de se judicia sub specie sanctitatis intercipit, etiam cum flagello percutitur, iniquum se prodere refugit, quia sanctus videri consuevit. Si quando autem graviter coarctatur, iniquum se vix superficie tenus confitetur, quia interna sua detegere veraci confessione confunditur. Quasi liberi vero sumus, cum nulla correptione castigamur; vincimur autem, cum flagello percussionis astringimur. Vincti igitur tanto 841 clamamus altius, quanto in percussione positi peccata nostra veracius confitemur. Apud aures quippe Dei vox valida devota confessio est. Quia ergo simulatores quosque, etiam cum percussionis flagella corripiunt, ad confessionem simplicem non perducunt (cognosci enim peccatores refugiunt, quia sancti omnium opinione ferebantur), quamvis eos ad extremum jam flagella feriant, quamvis duci se ad aeterna supplicia non ignorent, tales tamen cupiunt apud humana judicia remanere, quales se studuerant semper ostendere. Deprehensi ergo etiam flagello percussionis extremae, quia confessionem puram vel afflicti exerere negligunt, quasi vincti clamare contemnunt. Bene ergo dicitur: Neque clamabunt cum vincti fuerint. 61. Hypocritae sanctos se, non quia sunt, sed quia dicuntur, existimant. Vana spe delusi, ad confessionis remedium etiam in extremis non confugiunt. Ab homine longe saepe distat ejus cor. Quamvis intelligi etiam aliter potest. Omnis enim qui, cum iniquus sit, dici sanctus ab hominibus non pertimescit, etsi iniquum se tacita cogitatione reprehendit, tamen dum saepius sanctum audire se coeperit, hoc quod de se intrinsecus tenebat amittit. Cor quippe exterius fundit, et quia libenter foris falsum de se testimonium recipit, qualem se intus habeat non requirit. Unde fit ut vacuae laudis fomenta etiam cum defuerint quaerat, et oblitus quod est appetat videri quod non est. [Vet. XXIX.] Igitur qui tales sunt, dum justos se ante humana judicia simulant, dum actiones suas laudibus dignas intuentium oculis ostentant, occulta cum eis justitia agitur, ut quo nituntur foris alios fallere, eo de se intus etiam ipsi fallantur. Nam omnem circa se sollicitae investigationis oculum perdunt. Vitam enim suam et discutere et perscrutari dissimulant, sed tales se quales audiunt putant, sanctosque se esse, non quia ita vivunt, sed quia ita dicuntur, existimant. Subtile autem Dei judicium, seque ipsos intueri negligunt, quia fidem sui meriti in attestatione ponunt oris alieni. Cum vero subita percussione feriuntur, iniquos se vel veraciter fateri, vel sicut sunt, deprehendere omnino non possunt, quia videlicet sanctos se humana professione crediderunt. Bene ergo dicitur: Neque clamabunt cum vincti fuerint. Spe enim vacua tales se ante supernum judicem venire confidunt, quales se hominibus innotuisse cognoscunt; seque ipsos miseri nec inter tormenta deprehendunt, et dum testimonium falsae laudis aspiciunt, remedium verae confessionis amittunt. Etiam vincti ducuntur, et non clamant, quia, humanae laudis importunitate superati, sanctos se miseri et cum in peccatis moriuntur putant. Quibus bene per prophetam dicitur: Redite, praevaricatores, ad cor (Isai. XLVI, 8). Si enim ad cor redirent, per exterioris attestationis se verba non funderent. Nam quid vicinius nobis est corde nostro? quid vicinius nobis est ea re quae intra nos est? Et tamen cum per pravas cogitationes spargitur, a nobis cor nostrum longius evagatur. Longe ergo prophetas praevaricatorem mittit, cum eum ad cor suum redire compellit, quia quo se exterius fudit, eo ad se unde possit redire vix invenit. Quia vero simulatorum mens pro eo quod ab una aeternitatis intentione dividitur, cogitationum multiplicium inundatione vastatur, recte subjungitur:

CAPUT XXXIV.

VERS. 14. Morietur in tempestate amma ecrum. 842 62. Tempestate subita hypocritae moriuntur. Quasi tranquille namque videbantur vivere, cum de sanctitatis curarent laude gaudere. Sed tempestatesubita eorum anima moritur, quae humanae laudis pessima tranquillitate laetabatur. Plerumque subito inopinata tempestas omne quod aer serenum blanditur immutat; et eo periculum vitari non potest, quo nec potuit praevideri. Unde simulatores, qui vitae suae custodiam negligunt, in tempestate mori referuntur. Hinc quippe eos turbo subitus internae percussionis ejicit, quos arrogantia externi favoris extollit; et dum amplectuntur in laude quod non sunt, repente inveniunt in ultione quod sunt. [Vet. XXX.] Bene autem per Salomonem dicitur: Quomodo probatur in conflatorio argentum, et in fornace aurum, sic probatur homo ore laudantis (Prov. XXVII, 21). Laus quippe sua justos cruciat, iniquos exaltat. Sed justos dum cruciat purgat, iniquos dum laetificat reprobos monstrat. Isti enim sua laude pascuntur, quia auctoris sui gloriam non requirunt. Illi autem qui auctoris gloriam quaerunt, sua laude cruciantur, ne non sit intus quod foris dicitur, ne, si est etiam quod dicitur, ante Dei oculos ipsis favoribus vacuetur: ne humana laus robur mentis emolliat, eamque in sui delectatione prosternat; et quae adjumentum debet esse augendi operis, jam retributio sit laboris. Cum vero sua praeconia in Dei laudem tendere sentiunt, ea etiam desiderabiliter amplectuntur. Scriptum namque est: Videant opera vestra bona, et glorificent Patrem vestrum qui in coelis est (Matth. V, 16). Viam se ergo hominibus faciunt, quoties in se aliquid quo Deus cognoscatur ostendunt, quia non student in se humanam laudem figere, sed quaerunt eam per se medios ad auctoris gloriam pertransire. Arrogantes autem humanis laudibus mollia corda prostituunt, quia suis amoribus corrumpuntur. De quibus alias dicitur: Erunt homines seipsos amantes (II Tim. III, 2). Apte vero hic de hac eorum corruptione subjungitur:

CAPUT XXXV.

IBID. Et vita eorum inter effeminatos. 63. Effeminati sunt qui laudibus humanis corrumpuntur. Si enim virditer viverent, laus transitoria nulla eos corruptione vitiaret. Unde electis Propheta persuadet, dicens: Viriliter agite, et confortetur cor vestrum (Psal. XXX, 25). Dicens enim Viriliter agite, et confortetur cor vestrum, illico subdidit, quasi sexum cordis munire curavit. Luxuriosi quippe mens corrumpitur, si rebus transitoriis delectatur. Igitur simulatorum vita inter effeminatos moritur, quia laudis luxuria corrupta reperitur. Translatione vero alia non habetur: Vita eorum inter effeminatos, sed, Vita eorum vulneretur ab angelis. Utramque tamen etsi sermone discrepat, ratione concordat, quia effeminatorum vitam angeli vulnerant, dum nuntii veritatis eam jaculis sanctae praedicationis impugnant. Quia igitur de damnatione reproborum quid agatur audivimus, de ereptione humilium quid sequatur audiamus: VERS. 15. Eripiet pauperem de angustia sua. 64. Humiles, cum moriuntur, de angustia liberantur. Pauper de angustia sua eripitur cum unusquisque humilis de hac peregrinationis suae afflictione liberatur. Nam et assiduis hic tribulationis premitur, ut ad requirendum verae consolationis gaudium provocetur. Unde et sequitur: IBID. 843 Et revelabit in tribulatione aurem ejus. Aurem in tribulatione revelare est auditum cordis verberum plagis aperire. Cum enim praecepta despicimus, pia districtione nobiscum agitur, ut flagella timeamus. Aurem itaque cordis tribulatio aperit, quam saepe hujus mundi prosperitas claudit. Per Salomonem namque dicitur: Aversio parvulorum interficiet eos, et prosperitas stultorum perdet illos (Prov. I, 32). Sequitur:

CAPUT XXXVI [Rec. XXIV].

VERS. 16. Igitur salvabit te de ore angusto latissime. 65. Peccati consuetudo puteus arctissimus, ex quo sola gratia nos potest educere. Omnis qui vitae viam deserens in peccatorum se tenebras dejicit, semetipsum quasi in puteum vel foveam mergit. Si vero diutina perpetratione etiam consuetudine iniquitatis opprimitur ne ad superiora jam possit exsurgere, quasi angusto ore putei coarctatur. Unde David propheta sub specie peccantium exorat, dicens: Non me demergat tempestas aquae, neque absorbeat me profundum, neque urgeat super me puteus os suum (Psal. LXVIII, 16). Quem enim mali operis iniquitas a bona stabilitate commovit, quasi tempestas aquae rapuit; sed si adhuc longa consuetudine non praevaluit, non demersit. Jam in puteum cecidit qui hoc quod divina lex prohibet perpetravit. Sed si adhuc longa consuetudo non deprimit, nequaquam os suum puteus coangustavit. Tanto erga facilius egreditur, quanto minori consuetudine coarctatur. Unde Jeremias propheta, dum Judaeam iniquitatibus longa consuetudine obrutam fuisse conspiceret, in lamentis suis sub ejus specie semetipsum deplorat, dicens: Lapsa est in lacum vita mea, et posuerunt lapidem super me (Thren. III, 53). [Vet. XXXI.] In lacum quippe vita labitur cum labe iniquitatis inquinatur. Lapis vero superponitur cum etiam dura consuetudine mens in peccato devoratur, ut etsi velit exsurgere, jam utcumque non possit, quia moles desuper malae consuetudinis premit. Sed quia divinae potentiae subjacet, et post angustiam pravae consuetudinis ad bonae actionis amplitudinem revocatur, idcirco dicitur: Salvabit te de ore angusto latissime. Latissime quippe de ore angusto salvatur, qui et post iniquitatis jugum ad libertatem boni operis poenitendo reducitur. 66. Quanta angustia est ab opprimente mala consuetudine exsurgere velle nec posse. Quaedam namque ab opprimente mala consuetudine exsurgere velle, nec posse; jam quidem desiderio ad superna tendere, sed adhuc actu in infimis remanere; praeire corde, nec tamen sequi opere, atque in semetipso contradictionem perpeti semetipsum. Cum vero ita tendens anima manu gratiae exaltantis adjuvatur, ab angusto ore ad latitudinem pervenit, quia, victis difficultatibus, opera bona perficit quae concupiscit. David propheta conclusionem angusti oris conspexerat, cum dicebat: Salvam fecisti de necessitatibus animam meam, nec conclusisti me in manus inimici (Psal. XXX, 9). Latissime autem salvatum se noverat, cum subderet, dicens: Statuisti in loco spatioso pedes meos (Ibid.). In spatioso quippe loco pedes stabiliti sunt, quando et ad congruentia bona tendimus, et nulla difficultate praepedimur. Quasi enim per latum locum quo volumus pergimus, quia nullis objectis difficultatibus angustamur. 844 67. In hunc puteum cecidisse Job immerito creditus. Sed haec Eliu recte diceret, si beato Job ejus sententia conveniret. Pro culpa enim flagellatum credidit, et idcirco eum in os angustum cecidisse judicavit.

Quo enim validioribus vidit eum plagis affici, eo deterioribus credidit iniquitatibus praegravari, profecto nesciens quod flagella ejus augmentum essent meriti, non poena peccati. Cum vero eum in os angustum cecidisse fateatur, ad huc quasi latius exsequitur in quanta Job profunditate teneatur dicens:

CAPUT XXXVII [Vet. XXXII].

IBID. Et non habente fundamentum subter se. 68. Quem includit puteus arctus malae consuetudinis, infernus absorbet, et desperationis abyssus. Omne peccatum fundamentum non habet, quia non ex propria natura subsistit. Malum quippe sine substantia est. Quod tamen, utcunque sit, in boni natura coalescit. Igitur os angustum nullum subter se dicitur habere fundamentum, quia peccati inquinatio subsistendi jus non habet proprium. Quia vero a fundo dicitur fundamentum, possumus etiam fundamentum pro fundo positum non inconvenienter accipere, sicut auditus ab aure dicitur, et tamen plerumque ipsa auris auditus nomine designatur. Cum ergo diceret os angustum, explere profundi voraginem volens, subdidit: Et non habente fundamentum subter se. Quem enim rapit iniquitas, infernus absorbet. Internus vero recte fundum non habere creditur, quia quisquis ab illo rapitur, in immenso profundo devoratur. Immensam namque ejus explere latitudinem volens propheta, ait: Dilatavit infernus animam suam, et aperuit os suum absque ullo termino (Isai. V, 14). Sicut ergo sine termino dilatatus dicitur qui ad se plurimos trahit, ita sine fundo altus non incongrue creditur, quia eos quos in se suscipit, quasi in quadam abysso suae immensitatis absorbet. Itaque cum diceret: Salvabit te de ore angusto latissime, apte subjunxit: Et non habente fundamentum subter se. Ac si diceret: De ore angusto salvabit quod sub se fundum non habet, quia enim per peccatum tenditur ad infernum, quem a peccato salvat, de ore angusto liberat. Quem vero de ore angusto eripit, ab inferni profundo subducit. 69. Quamvis etiam aliter intelligi potest. Nam sicut qui in puteum mergitur putei profundo retinetur, ita corruens quasi in quodam fundi loco consisteret anima, si semel lapsa in aliqua se peccati mensura retineret. Sed cum peccato in quod labitur non potest esse contenta, dum quotidie ad deteriora dejicitur, quasi in puteo quo cecidit fundum non invenit quo figatur. Esset enim fundus putei, si fuisset mensura peccati; unde bene alias dicitur: Peccator cum venerit in profundum malorum, contemnit (Prov. XVIII, 3). Redire namque dissimulat, quia misereri sibi posse desperat. Sed cum desperando amplius peccat, quasi puteo suo fundum subtrahit, ne ubi retineri possit inveniat. Sequitur:

CAPUT XXXVIII.

IBID. Requies autem mensae tuae erit plena pinguedine. 70. Quem eripit gratia, internae satietatis delectatione replet. Requies mensae est refectio satietatis internae; quae pinguedine plena dicitur, quia in aeternae voluptatis delectatione praeparatur. Hujus mensae epulas esuriebat Propheta, cum diceret: Satiabor dum manifestabitur gloria tua (Psal. XVI, 15). Hujus mensae pocula sitiebat, dicens: Sitivit anima mea ad Deum vivum; 845 quando veniam, et apparebo ante faciem Dei (Psal. XLII, 3)? Eliu itaque in beato Job temporalia verbera aeternorum volens retributione consolari, quod jure ei debebatur ex meritis, ex semetipso quasi gratuito promittit, dicens: Requies autem mensae tuae erit plena pinguedine. Sequitur:

CAPUT XXXIX [Rec. XXV].

VERS. 17. Causa tua quasi impii judicata est, causam judiciumque recipies. 71. Flagellantur justi, ut ad majorem vigilantiam orudiantur. Bonorum causa justitia est. Quorum causa quasi impii judicatur, quia eorum hic justitia paterno flagello fatigatur, ut ad ampliorem vigilantiam non solum praeceptione mandatorum, sed etiam verberum percussione doceantur. Sed causam judiciumque recipiunt, quia ex ea justitia qua modo vivunt tunc in culmine judiciariae potestatis enitescunt, ut tanto tunc potentius cuncta judicent, quanto nunc in eis subtilius cuncta judicantur. Haec Eliu quasi nova spondendo intulit, quae beatus Job semper credendo stabiliter tenuit. [Vet. XXXIII.] Habent profecto haec propria omnes arrogantes, ut et malum mentientes exaggerent, et si quod forsitan bonum dicunt, hoc velut incognitum proferant. Unde fit ut etiam doctiores se docere audeant, quia videlicet se scire talia solos putant. Cum vero ad aliqua consolationis verba descendunt, statim viluisse se aestimant, et per increpationis tumidae asperitatem quasi quoddam sibi ingenium reformant, ut qui condescendisse blandientes testes visi sunt, exorta subito increpatione timeantur. Unde et mox Eliu subdidit, dicens:

CAPUT XL.

[Rec. XXVI]. VERS. 18-21. Non te ergo superet ira, ut aliquem opprimas; nec multitudo locorum inclinet te. Depone magnitudinem tuam absque tribulatione, et omnes robustos fortitudine. Ne protrahas noctem, ut ascendant populi pro eis. Cave ne declines ad iniquitatem; hanc enim coepisti sequi post miseriam. 72. Superbi quidquid ab aliis recte fit, carpunt. In plerisque Codicibus, donorum; in paucis vero, sed antiquioribus, locorum invenimus. Sed quia expositione non indiget si dicatur: Nec multitudo donorum inclinet te, hoc magis exponi placuit quod cum difficultate aliquantula videtur aperiri. Haec autem quantae elationis verba sint, ipse qui ea formavit tumor ostendit. Sed quia Eliu arrogantium et beatum Job tenere typum diximus electorum, si ea subtilius discernimus, etiam nunc intra Ecclesiam quomodo arrogantibus congruant demonstramus. Sancti viri aliena opera etiam parva mirantur, sua vero etiam magna despiciunt. At contra, arrogantes aliena etiam magna despiciunt, sua vel quae parva sunt admirantur; et plerumque de suis malis bona aestimant, de alienis autem

bonis mala sentire non cessant. Nam dum propriam gloriam quaerunt, perniciose student ut quidquid virtutis ab aliis agitur iniquitatis nota laceretur, et bonae pondus actionis vertunt in maculam criminis. Saepe enim cum vident ab Ecclesia districte pravos corrigi, quasi queruntur injuste innocentes affligi, et nitorem disciplinae ejus commutant appellatione nequitiae. Unde Eliu figuram 846 arrogantium servans, beatum Job quasi admonens, ait: Non te ergo superet ira, ut aliquem opprimas. [Vet. XXXIV.] Arrogantes enim irae motum deputant, quidquid a sancta Ecclesia geritur censura disciplinae. Et quia humanae laudis appetitu benigni student semper apparere, nullos censent districtione severitatis corrigendos. Unde et a bonis rectoribus, sicut superius dictum est, opprimi aestimant quos invitos cernunt a vitiis coerceri. 73. Ecclesiae in cunctis mundi partibus potentia temporalis. Hanc immerito Ecclesiae hostes ei exprobrant. Etsi quidam intra ejus sinum sint qui de ipsius gloria superbiant. Auctore autem Domino, quia in cunctis mundi partibus sancta Ecclesia culmine religionis excrevit, hanc ipsam temporalem potentiam, qua quidem bene utitur, obtrectando in vitium elationis inflectunt. [Rec. XXVII.] Unde Eliu subjungit, dicens: Nec multitudo locorum inclinet te. Ac si eidem sanctae Ecclesiae humilitatem magis in prosperis conservanti arrogantium voce dicatur: Quia ubique fidei reverentia coleris, cave ne ejusdem reverentiae fascibus extollaris. Quosdam quippe conspiciunt qui sub religionis obtentu vitio elationis intumescunt, et quod in quibusdam jure reprehendunt, hoc injuste ad crimen omnium pertrahunt: nequaquam videlicet perpendentes quod sint in ea qui et despicientes noverint perfecte temporalia regere, et amantes aeterna plenis desideriis exspectare; et dispensationem potestatis acceptae peragere, et humilitatis insitae ministerium custodire, ut nec humilitatis causa curam suscepti regiminis negligant, nec rursum occasione regiminis in eis humilitas intumescat. Etsi quidam fortasse intra ipsam sunt qui non Dei sed suae gloriae sub religionis praetextu deserviunt, studet tamen eos, aut, si valet, districte corrigere, aut, si non valet, aequanimiter tolerare; et vel corrigendo illos quasi filios amplectitur, vel tolerando quasi ab hostibus exercetur. Scit namque quod per eorum superbiam laceretur vita justorum, scit quod in ejus crimen extenditur quidquid talium pravitate peccatur, sed notam alieni criminis sustinere tanto minus metuit quanto et caput suum talia tolerasse cognoscit. De illo quippe scriptum est: Et cum iniquis deputatus est (Marc. XV, 28). De illo rursum dicitur: Languores nostros ipse tulit, et dolores nostros ipse portavit (Isai. LIII, 4). Eant ergo arrogantes, et aestimatione pravorum vitam mordeant innocentum. Scit electorum Ecclesia et illorum facta, et horum verba tolerare, scit pravorum mentes tolerando convertere. Qui etsi converti nequiverint, eorum tamen ignominiam aequanimiter suffert. Perpendit quippe quia ad duplex ejus praemium proficit quod ex eorum meritis foris despicitur, quorum et intus vita laceratur. 74. Qui temporaliter extollitur, cadit. Notandum vero quod non ait: Nec multitudo locorum extollat te, sed ait: Nec multitudo locorum inclinet te. Omnis enim qui temporaliter extollitur eo ipso quo extollitur inclinatur, quia cum se exterius erigit, intus cadit. Eliu itaque casum cordis in elatione intuens, ait: Nec multitudo locorum inclinet te. Ac si voce arrogantium sanctae Ecclesiae diceretur: Cave ne, si universitatis veneratione extolleris, 847 ab interna intentione curveris. Sequitur:

CAPUT XLI [Rec.

XXVIII). VERS. 19. Depone magnitudinem tuam absque tribulatione, et omnes robustos fortitudine. 75. Apostolis et Ecclesiae fortibus ad praemia vocatis, Deus eorum vice debiles ad certamina roboravit. Quos alios sanctae Ecclesiae robustos accipimus, nisi eos qui ad vincenda mundi hujus desideria et coeptis sublimibus et consummatis profectibus convalescunt? Magnitudo itaque ejus in robustorum suorum vita consistit, quia tunc gloriosior redditur, cum pro defensione veritatis ad mortem usque ab electis illius constanti virtute certatur. Arrogantes igitur viri subductis de hoc mundo apostolis, subductis ad superna martyribus, quia fortasse doctiores valentioresque praepositos abunde deesse conspiciunt, quasi solos se remansisse intra Ecclesiam suspicantur. Unde dum se praeferunt, ei velut consulentes illudunt, dicentes: Depone magnitudinem tuam absque tribulatione, et omnes robustos fortitudine. Ac si apertis exprobrationibus dicant: Nequaquam te magnitudinem habere confidas, quia subductis prioribus, patribus jam non habes de quorum vita glorieris. Dicunt haec profecto, nescientes quia omnipotens Deus Ecclesiam suam digna sine administratione non deserit. Nam cum fortes ad praemium vocat, eorum vice debiles ad certamina roborat; cum illos suscipiendo remunerat, istis laborum vires, quas remuneret, subministrat. De quibus eidem sanctae Ecclesiae dicitur: Pro patribus tuis nati sunt tibi filii, constitues eos principes super omnem terram (Psal. XLIV, 17). In virtutem quippe antiquorum patrum, hi qui postmodum praelati sunt subrogantur, quia et cum annosa arbusta succiduntur, in eorum robur tenera virgulta succrescunt. Sed arrogantes viri convalescere non credunt quos infirmos aliquando noverunt; et permutatos venerari despiciunt, quos despicabiles fuisse meminerunt. [Vet. XXXV.] 76. In Ecclesia justi multo pauciores quam iniqui. Superbi pastores quae patres eorum moriendo severunt, hoec exsultando metunt. Quia vero in ea justiores paucos, iniquos autem numerosiores aspiciunt, sicut et in tritura frugum major est multitudo palearum, etiam justorum vitam ex iniquorum aestimatione contemnunt. Vident profecto quod nonnulli rectores illius, temporali potestate subnixi, ejusdem potestatis elatione pascuntur. Vident quod religionis reverentiam, quam huic mundo patres moriendo servaverunt, hi exsultando in terrenis gaudiis metunt; et perpendunt quidem quia robusti sunt, sed non fortitudine. Nam dum temporali potestate fulciuntur, quasi quadam debilitate roborantur. Quanto enim exterius fortes sunt, tanto a cunctis fortitudinis viribus intus inanescunt. Et idcirco ab arrogantibus ei dicitur: Depone robustos fortitudine. Ac si aperte dicatur: Illi tibi veraciter robusti inhaeserant, qui in te hoc quod docendo locuti sunt, vivendo tenuerunt; nunc vero hi qui tibi praesident visione robusti sunt, non fortitudine, quia honorabiles quidem se ostentare non desin unt, sed tanto imbecilliores et contemptibiliores sunt, quanto honoris sui gloriam despici pro veritate pertimescunt. Quod arrogantes quidem de plerisque veraciter sentiunt, sed eo in elationis vitium corruunt, quo omnes quos praeesse conspiciunt tales arbitrantur. 848 Neque enim debet plurimorum malum tendere in aestimationem cunctorum, quia etsi iniqui sunt quos cognoscentes dijudicant, nonnulli tamen sancti sunt quos ignorant. Triturae quippe tempus est, et adhuc grana sub paleis latent. Nullus ergo ex area fructus exspectabitur, si hoc solum in ea esse creditur, quod superficie tenus videtur. Igitur quia quos cernunt, despiciunt, et in antiquorum patrum ordinibus hos quos norunt subrogari contemnunt, apte subjungitur:

CAPUT XLII.

VERS. 20. Ne protrahas noctem, ut ascendant populi pro eis. 77. Nox Ecclesiae est, cum doctorum et fortium loca indocti ac debiles obtinent. Ac si aperte arrogantes dicant: Ignorantiae tuae obscuritate non agas, ut in loco fortium numerositatem subroges infirmorum. Populi quippe nomine designantur, qui quasi vulgari consuetudini dediti, in cunctis quae appetunt passim vivunt. Noctem vero protrahere est ut pro robustis populi ascendant, si per negligentiam agitur ut doctorum et fortium loca indocti ac debiles sortiantur. Populi pro robustis ascendunt quando hi qui vivere inique didicerunt pastorum loca percipiunt. Quod recte quidem dici poterat si humiliter diceretur. Arrogantes enim, etiam cum bona admonent, superstitionis suae vitium exercent. Nam plus, sicut et superius dictum est, increpando ferire appetunt quam consolando refovere. Unde mox subjungitur: VERS. 21.Ne declines ad iniquitatem; hanc enim coepisti sequi post miseriam. Hoc profecto arrogantes Ecclesiae miseriam vocant, quod despectam Deo ejus multitudinem suspicantur; et eo illam altiori elatione contemnunt, quo et despectam Deo funditus suspicantur. His igitur figurata expositione transcursis, jam nunc inferenda sunt quae moraliter sentiuntur, ut figura Ecclesiae cognita, quam expressam generaliter credimus, audiamus etiam quid ex his verbis in singulis specialiter colligamus. Ait itaque:

CAPUT XLIII [Vet. XXXVI].

CAP. XXXVI, VERS. 18. Non te ergo superet ira, ut aliquem opprimas. 78. SENSUS MORALIS. In facienda correctione, subesse debet ira, non praeesse. Omnis per quem necesse est aliena vitia corrigi semetipsum prius debet solerter intueri, ne dum aliorum culpas ulciscitur, ipse ulciscendi furore superetur. Plerumque enim mentem sub obtentu justitiae irae immanitas vastat, et dum quasi saevit zelo rectitudinis, rabiem explet furoris, justeque se facere aestimat, quidquid ira nequiter dictat. Unde et modum saepe ulciscendi transgreditur, quia mensura justitiae non frenatur. Dignum quippe est ut cum aliena corrigimus prius nostra metiamur, ut prius mens a sua accensione deferveat, prius intra semetipsam zeli sui impetum tranquilla aequitate componat, ne si ad animadvertenda vitia abrupto furore trahimur, peccatum corrigendo peccemus, et qui culpam dijudicando insequimur, immoderate feriendo faciamus. Non autem jam correctio delinquentis, sed magis oppressio sequitur, si in ultione ira ultra quam culpa meretur extenditur. In correptione quippe vitiorum subesse menti debet iracundia, non praeesse, ut exsecutionem justitiae non dominando praeveniat, sed famulando subsequatur, et notum judicium 849 possessa impleat, non possidens praecurrat. Bene itaque dicitur: Non te ergo superet ira, ut aliquem opprimas. Quia videlicet si is qui corrigere nititur ira superatur, opprimit antequam corrigat. Nam dum plus quam debet accenditur, sub justae ultionis obtentu ad immanitatem crudelitatis effrenatur. Quod plerumque idcirco evenit, quia corda rectorum minus amori sunt solius creatoris intenta. Nam dum multa in hac vita appetunt, innumeris cogitationibus disperguntur; et cum subito subditorum culpas reperiunt, digne cum Deo eas judicare nequeunt, quia corda sua in curis transitoriis sparsa ad districtionis culmen colligere repente non possunt. Commoti ergo tanto minus ad ulciscenda peccata libram aequitatis inveniunt, quanto eam tranquillitatis suae tempore non requirunt. Unde cum Eliu diceret: Non te superet ira, ut aliquem opprimas, quatenus easdem causas injustitiae et irae superantis exprimeret, illico adjunxit:

CAPUT XLIV.

IBID. Nec multitudo locorum inclinet te. 79. Ex originali peccato inquieta hominis mutabilitas oritur. Cum qualitate rerum non possit, varietate saltem quaerit satiari. In tot quippe locis inclinamur in quot supervacuis curis extendimur. Nam sicut locus est corporis spatium corporale, ita locus est mentis unaquaeque intentio cogitationis. Quae dum huc illucque impellitur, si delectatione aliqua cogitationis suae libenter occupatur, velut in quodam loco ponitur ut quiescat. Nam quoties victi taedio a cogitatione in cogitationem ducimur, quasi fessa mente de loco ad locum migramus. Tot itaque loca culmen mentis inclinant, quot subortae cogitationes unitatem bonae intentionis dissipant. Recta etenim mens staret, si uni cui debuerat cogitationi semper inhaereret. Recta mens staret, si non se innumeris motibus fluxa mutabilitate prosterneret. Sed dum nunc ista pertractat, nunc ad alia dilabitur, quasi per locorum multitudinem a statu suae rectitudinis inclinatur; et dum per plura se tendit, ab una, cui adhaerere debuit, intentione se dejicit. Qui tamen mutabilitatis usus ex primae praevaricationis vitio jam quasi in naturam venit. Nam cum stare animus in semetipso nititur, a semetipso aliquo modo etiam nesciendo derivatur. Humana namque anima ab unaquaque re cui intenditur fastidio impellente removetur. Sed dum inhianter cogitanda appetit, et repente cogitata fastidit, docet quod aliunde pendet, quae quolibet posita non requiescit. Ad illum quippe suspensa est a quo formata. Et quia ad Deum solum appetendum facta est, omne autem quod infra appetit minus est, jure ei non sufficit quod Deus non est. Hinc est quod huc illucque spargitur, et ab unaquaque re, ut diximus, fastidio impellente removetur. Delectationis videlicet avida, quaerit quo pauset, unum vero quem sufficienter habere poterat amisit. Unde nunc per multa ducitur, ut quia qualitate rerum non potest, saltem varietate satietur. [Vet. XXXVII.] 80. Sancti adhaerendo Deo, huic anxietati medentur.Sancti autem viri causa se observatione custodiunt, ne ab intentione sua mutabiliter dissolvantur, et quia idem esse appetunt, ad cogitationem qua Deum diligunt se solerter astringunt. In contemplatione namque creatoris hoc accepturi sunt, ut una semper mentis stabilitate perfruantur. 850 Nulla eos tunc mutabilitas dissipat, quia scilicet eorum cogitatio sibimetipsi semper indissimilis perseverat. Hoc ergo cum labore nunc conantes imitantur, quod post in munere gaudentes accipiunt. Cui se Propheta immutabilitati virtute amoris astrinxerat, cum dicebat: Unam petii a Domino, hanc requiram, ut inhabitem in domo Domini (Psal. XXVI, 4). Huic Paulus unitati intentione adhaeserat, dicens: Unum autem, quae retro sunt oblitus, ad ea quae ante sunt extentus, sequor ad palmam supernae vocationis Dei in Christo (Philip. III, 13). Nam si quid in eorum corde humanitus diffluit, mox hoc discussio severa restringit; et cum quasi pueriliter cogitatio labitur, juvenili mox coercitione refrenatur. Unde fit ut sparsam mentem continuo colligant, et in una quantum praevalent cogitatione componant. Quia igitur status mentis cogitationum mutabilitate curvatur, recte ab Eliu dicitur: Nec multitudo locorum inclinet te. 81. Deo ita vacantibus cavenda elatio. Sed saepe dum viri justi animus in ipsa intentionis suae arce consistit, dum ab omni mutabilitatis se sparsione colligit, dum quidquid in se superflue oboritur premit; ipsa suae rectitudinis gloria tangitur, et in tumore propriae praesumptionis elevatur. Qui enim magna agit, quamvis de se humilia sentiat, scit tamen magna esse quae agit. Nam si magna esse nescit, ea procul dubio minime custodit. Quae dum custodire negligit, aut in eis minus proficit, aut ea funditus amittit. Dum ergo bona nostra opera scire necesse est ut custodiamus, ex ipsa eorum scientia elationis aditus panditur, et ad operantis cor culpae manus admittitur, qua vastante rapiantur. Mira autem dispensatione agitur, ut conditor noster sublevatum prosperis animum subita concuti tentatione permittat, quatenus semetipsum in infirmitate verius videat, et ab eo quem de virtutibus sumpserat, jam seipso melior elationis fastu descendat. Unde et bene nunc subditur:

CAPUT XLV.

VERS. 19. Depone magnitudinem tuam absque tribulatione, et omnes robustos fortitudine. 82. Ne de nobis praesumamus, Deus tentatione nos pulsari permittit. Robusti quippe sunt motus cordis, cum nulla nisi quae virtutis sunt sentiunt. Sed magnitudinem et robustos motus deponimus, quando pulsante vitio cogimur pensare quid sumus. Robustos motus deponimus, quando jam non de virtute attollimur, sed in culpa consentiendo obrui de ipsa qua quatimur infirmitate formidamus. Multum namque de se animus confidit quando sibi ad votum vires suppetere conspicit. Jam sibi fiduciam sanctitatis arrogat, jam se idoneum etiam ad cuncta virtutum culmina quae sola cogitatione conceperit putat. Sed cum hunc tentatio subito oborta transverberat, eas quae natae de virtutibus fuerant, elatas cogitationes funditus turbat. Quasi securam quippe urbem inopinatus hostis ingreditur, et repentino gladio superborum civium colla feriuntur. Nihil ergo tunc nisi continuus luctus agitur, dum capta urbs animi a magnatum suorum gloria caede interveniente vacuatur. Unde nunc dicitur: Depone magnitudinem tuam absque tribulatione, et omnes robustos fortitudine. Ac si aperte diceretur: Omne quod intrinsecus de bona actione intumueras 851 reprime, et cordis motus quos ex recto opere robustos habueras depone, quia jam in ipsa adversitatis tentatione consideras quam frustra prius de te magna elatus aestimabas. Quae videlicet magnitudo idcirco absque tribulatione deponenda dicitur, quia nimirum cum per tentationem humilitas proficit, prospera est ipsa adversitas quae mentem ab elatione custodit. [Vet. XXXVIII]. Sed tamen sine magna tribulatione non agitur, cum tranquilla mens irruente tentatione quasi repentino hoste turbatur. Ipsa namque tentationis adversitas dum se menti inserit, quasdam in illa tenebras gignit, eamque obscuritate suae amaritudinis turbat, quae apud se dudum virtutum dulcedine irradiante claruerat. Unde et apte subjungitur:

CAPUT XLVI.

VERS. 20. Ne protrahas noctem ut ascendant populi pro eis. 83. Tentatio tenebras gignit, et procellas excitat. Nox quippe protrahitur cum suborta de tentatione tristitia consolatione concita non finitur. Nox protrahitur quia moeror animi confusis cogitationibus elongatur. Nam dum mens posita in tentatione considerat quod a virtutis suae pristina soliditate repellitur, superductis moeroribus, quasi quibusdam tenebris caecatur, atque ab omni luce gaudii ejus oculus clauditur, dum sollicita trepidat ne hoc quod esse dudum coeperat funditus amittat. Unde et bene dicitur quod in hac nocte pro robustis populi ascendunt, quia videlicet in hoc moerore tentationis pro robustis motibus indignae cogitationes et multiplices in corde prosiliunt. Nam dum se in perturbatione conspicit jam pene amisisse quod fuerat, fluctus in se innumeros tumultusque coacervat, modo tranquillitatem suam quia perdidit dolet; modo ne usque ad prava opera corruat pertimescit; modo in quo culmine steterat meminit; modo in quo vitiorum profundo per delectationem jaceat attendit; modo ad resumendas vires se reparat; modo se eas posse resumere quasi victus jam fractusque desperat. 84. Hac in nocte multiplices cogitationes quasi populi tumultuantes premunt.Cum ergo super addictam mentem tam multiplices cogitationes prodeunt, hanc quasi in nocte populi consurgentes premunt. Quos nimirum populos non per se, sed per divinae protectionis auxilium Propheta subigere se posse praesumpserat, cum dicebat: Protector meus, et in ipso sperabo, subjiciens populos sub me (Psal. CXLIII, 2). Sanctis quippe mentibus populi subiguntur, cum ab eis per districtae severitatis praesentiam cogitationes stultae dissiliunt, ut non per abrupta phantasmatum rapiant, sed rationi subditae a corde humiliter conquiescant. Quia ergo positus in tentatione animus, qui de se in prosperis majora praesumebat, tumultus spei desperationisque tolerat, recte nunc dicitur: Ne protrahas noctem, ut ascendant populi pro eis. Ac si aperte diceretur: In tentatione deprehensus, citius tenebras moeroris incide, ne qui in tranquillitate 852 de te alta senseras, in perturbatione quoque deterius cogitationum te caligine confundas. Quod recte Eliu diceret, si tamen cui diceret sciret. Nam haec beato Job tanto minus congruunt, quanto ab illo omnia altius sciuntur. Quia vero, ut saepe diximus, arrogantes, dum praesumunt docere quos non debent, usque ad contumeliosa increpationum verba dilabuntur, subditur.

CAPUT XLVII [Rec. XXIX].

VERS. 21. Cave ne declines ad iniquitatem; hanc enim coepisti sequi post miseriam. 85. Tunc cavenda est impatientia, quae in Job immerito impingitur. Iniquitatem post miseriam sequitur, qui post mala quae pro correptione sustinet ferventi corde impatientiae se facibus inflammat. Quod beatum Job perpetrasse Eliu credidit, qui eum inter flagella positum liberis effari vocibus audivit, videlicet nesciens, quia omne quod dixit, non hoc de iniquitate impatientiae, sed de virtute veritatis protulit, qui ab interni judicis sententia nec cum se justificaret erravit. [Vet. XXXIX.] Sed considerandum valde est quomodo cum diceret: Ne declines ad iniquitatem, de eadem iniquitate protinus subdidit: Hanc enim coepisti sequi post miseriam. 86. Superbi in arguendo modum servare nesciunt. Quid est hoc quod dum ad eam declinare vetat, de ea protinus quasi ad quam declinatum jam fuerit damnat, nisi quod arrogantes viri plus videri judices quam consolatores volunt? Unde et nonnunquam ea districtis sententiis feriunt, quae nata in corde suspicantur et priusquam certa sit culpa delinquentium, profertur invectio districta verborum; et ante per sententiam percutitur, quam prodeat quod feriatur. 87. Sanctorum discretio in corripiendo. Quamvis et justi viri plerumque pravis et occultis cogitationibus arguendo obviant; sed cum easdem cogitationes aliqua quae praeeunt opera demonstrant, plerumque ab auditorum suorum cordibus ea vitia quae necdum prolata sunt manu correptionis eradicant, sed jam illa subsequi conspiciunt ex aliis quae praecedunt. Sicut enim corporales medici quasdam aegritudines jam venisse inveniunt, quasdam vero ne veniant medentur, ita doctores sancti aliquando inventa vulnera saluti restituunt, aliquando vero agunt in mentibus ne vulnerentur. In quibus solerter intuendum est, quia sicut certa plerumque cum asperitate redarguunt, ita incertis vitiis et cum tranquillitate contradicunt; certa ferientes increpant, incerta praemunientes devitant. Quam quia arrogantes viri discretionis regulam nesciunt, sententiarum suarum jaculis sicut nota, sic incognita; sicut certa, sic etiam incerta configunt. Unde nunc ab Eliu dicitur: Cave ne declines ad iniquitatem; hanc enim coepisti sequi post miseriam. Quia vero ea quae subnexa sunt longiori allegatione protrahuntur, istum libellum hoc fine constringimus, ne immoderatius extendatur.

LIBER VIGESIMUS SEPTIMUS.

Duodecim ultimi versus capitis XXXVI exponuntur, cum integro capite XXXVII, ingeniose quaesitis ad astruendam, tum doctrinam, tum ethicen christianam sensibus.

CAPUT PRIMUM.

853 1. Ex superborum recte dictis sumendum quod prosit, respuendum quod noceat. Quisquis de magnis dictis arrogantium sumere scientiam nititur, providere solerter debet, ne hoc quod eorum scientia altum tumet, imitetur, ne cum virtutum verbis morum vitia colligat, et in eo quod loquendi notitiam assequitur, vivendi se imperitia transfigat. Hos namque cum fortia dicere audimus, sed tamen de dictis fortibus tumere conspicimus, quasi doctrinae hortum ingressi, de spinis rosas attingimus. Discreta ergo nobis sollicitudine opus est, et carpere quod redolet, et cavere quod pungit, ne si fortasse improvide dictorum flos legitur, incauta legentis manus morum spina laceretur. Eliu itaque doctus et arrogans profert aliquando quod redoleat, aliquando quod pungat. Sic igitur sumendum est de ejus doctrina quod fragrat, ut tamen sollicite cavendum sit de elatione quod vulnerat. Qui multa quidem superius moraliter intulit, sed in verbis sequentibus ad sola se prophetiae arcana sustulit. Ima enim moralitatis deserit, et ad prophetiae summa conscendit. 2. Superbi spiritu prophetiae aliquando repleti. Nec mirandum quod vir arrogans impleri prophetico spiritu potuit, cum Saul etiam in numero prophetarum fuit (I Reg. X, 6). Sed hoc de Saule cur dicimus, cum ex visione angeli accepisse verba rationabilia et asinam noverimus (Num. XXII, 28)? Sed sicut irrationale animal rationis verba edidit, nec tamen ad permutationem naturae rationalis accessit, ita saepe quilibet indignus sancta verba per prophetiae spiritum accipit, sed tamen ad promerendam sanctitatis gloriam non pertingit, ut et supra se loquendo emineat, et infra se vivendo torpescat. Unde nunc Eliu Redemptoris nostri adventum humilem non humilis conspicit, et eum prophetando praedicat, quem elatis moribus impugnat, dicens:

CAPUT II.

CAP. XXXVI, VERS. 22. Ecce Deus excelsus in fortitudine sua, et nullus ei similis in legislatoribus. 3. Christus simul humilis in infirmitate et excelsus in fortitudine caeteros legislatores longe antecellit. Ac si aperte dicat: Qui humilis videbitur in infirmitate, excelsus manet in fortitudine, Paulo hoc etiam attestante, qui ait: Quia et si crucifixus est ex infirmitate, sed vivit ex virtute Dei (II Cor. XIII, 4). De quo recte subjungitur: Nullus ei similis in legislatoribus. Legislator Moyses, legislator Josue, legislatores etiam prophetae; legislatores cunctos dicere possumus, quos ex lege admonuisse recta populum scimus. Sed huic Mediatori in legislatoribus similis nullus est, quia isti gratuito vocati ex peccatis ad innocentiam redeunt, et ab his quae in semetipsis experti sunt praedicando alios reducunt. Redemptor autem noster homo sine peccato est, filius sine adoptione, nec perpetravit unquam quod redarguit, et sic mundo ex humanitate loquitur, ut tamen 854 eidem mundo ante saecula ex divinitate dominetur. Hunc Mediatorem Dei et hominum quidam legislatoribus similem fuisse crediderunt. Nam requirenti: Quem dicunt homines esse filium hominis? responderunt discipuli, dicentes: Alii Joannem Baptistam, alii Eliam, alii Jeremiam, aut unum ex prophetis (Matth. XVI, 13). Sed nimirum Petro quam excelsus in fortitudine esset aperuit, cum eum veraciter intuens, a legislatorum aequalitate discrevit, dicens: Tu es Christus Filius Dei vivi (Ibid., 16). Unde recte de illo sponsa in Canticis canticorum dicit: In lectulo meo per noctes quaesivi quem diligit anima mea, quaesivi illum, et non inveni (Cant. III, 1). Et paulo post: Invenerunt me vigiles, qui custodiunt civitatem. De quibus rursum dicit: Vulneraverunt me, tulerunt pallium meum. Quos iterum percunctatur, dicens: Num quem diligit anima mea vidistis? Paululum cum pertransissem eos, inveni quem diligit anima mea (Cant. III, 3). 4. Qui in nocte quaeritur, sed non nisi transcensis prophetis et patriarchis invenitur. Dilectus namque per noctes in lectulo quaeritur, quia intra secreta cordis cubilia in tribulatione spiritus desideratur. Quem tamen quaerens sponsa non invenit, quia electa quaeque anima jam quidem amoris ejus facibus flagrat, sed adhuc quaesita negatur species, ut amantis desiderium crescat; et quasi in siti aqua subtrahitur, ut ejusdem sitis aestus augeatur, et quo hanc diutius sitiens desiderat, eo quandoque cum invenerit avidius sumat. Sed hanc quaerentem vigiles inveniunt, eamque vulnerant, et ejus pallium tollunt, quia unamquamque animam redemptoris sui jam speciem requirentem, cum solliciti doctores inveniunt, hanc per praedicationis verbum coelestis amoris spiculis vulnerant, et si quod ei adhuc de vetusta conversatione tegmen inest, subtrahunt, ut quo exuta ab hujus mundi onere redditur, eo is qui quaeritur, ab illa citius inveniatur. Bene autem subditur: Paululum cum pertransissem eos, inveni quem diligit anima mea. Quia visionis ejus mens avida, nisi prophetarum aestimationem, nisi patriarcharum celsitudinem, nisi cunctorum hominum mensuram transcenderet, eum qui est super homines non inveniret. Transire ergo est vigiles, etiam eos quos miratur anima in ejus comparatione postponere. Et tunc is qui quaerebatur, cernitur, si homo quidem, sed tamen extra mensuras hominum credatur. Unde bene nunc dicitur: Nullus ei similis in legislatoribus. Sed is videlicet per infirmitatem carnis nostris obtutibus apparens, dum alios reprobat, alios vocat, mira judicia exhibuit, quae a nobis et cogitari possint, et comprehendi non possint. Ait 855 namque: In judicium ego in hunc mundum veni, ut qui non vident videant, et qui vident caeci fiant (Joan. IX, 39). Et rursum: Confiteor tibi, Pater, Domine coeli et terrae, quia abscondisti haec a sapientibus et prudentibus, et revelasti ea parvulis (Matth. XI, 25). In quibus nimirum judiciis Judaea repellitur, gentilitas aggregatur. Quod videlicet factum mirari possumus, sed perscrutari nullatenus valemus. Unde et bene nunc ab Eliu subditur:

CAPUT III.

VERS. 23. Quis poterit scrutari vias ejus? aut quis audet ei dicere: Operatus es iniquitatem? 5. Judicia ejus scrutam, multo minus reprehendere non debemus. Ac si dicat: Cujus perscrutari actio non potest, quo pacto reprehendi potest? Nemo enim bene judicat quod ignorat. Tanto ergo debemus sub ejus judiciis silendo quiescere, quanto et rationem judiciorum illius nos cernimus non videre. Unde et bene subditur:

CAPUT IV [Vet.

et Rec. II]. VERS. 24. Memento quod ignores opus ejus, de quo cecinerunt viri. 6. Angeli et doctores ea, etsi laudent, minime tamen cognoscunt. In Scriptura sacra viri aliquando angeli, aliquando autem perfectae vitae homines memorantur. Nam quia aliquando vir angelus dicitur, Daniel propheta testatur, dicens: Ecce vir Gabriel (Dan. IX, 21). Rursum, quia virorum nomine perfectae vitae homines exprimuntur, in Proverbiis sapientia loquitur, dicens: O viri, ad vos clamito (Prov. VIII, 4). De Domino igitur viri canunt, cum ejus nobis potentiam vel superni spiritus, vel perfecti quique doctores innotescunt. Sed tamen opus ejus ignoratur, quia nimirum judicia illius ipsi etiam qui hunc praedicant impenetrata venerantur. Et sciunt ergo quem praedicant, et tamen ejus opera ignorant, quia cognoscunt per gratiam eum a quo facti sunt, sed ejus judicia comprehendere nequeunt, quae ab illo etiam super ipsos fiunt. Quod enim omnipotens Deus perspicue in sua actione non cernitur, Psalmista testatur, dicens: Qui posuit tenebras latibulum suum (Psal. XVII, 12). Et rursum: Judicia tua abyssus multa (Psal. XXXV, 7). Atque iterum: Abyssus sicut pallium amictus ejus (Psal, CIII, 6). Unde bene etiam per Salomonem dicitur: Sicut ignoras quae sit via spiritus, et qua ratione compingantur ossa in ventre praegnantis, sic nescis opera Dei, qui fabricator est omnium (Eccle. XI, 5). 7. Occultorum Dei judiciorum exemplum in parvulis sine baptismo, vel post baptismum morientibus. Ut enim unum e multis loquar, duo ad hanc lucem parvuli veniunt, sed uni datur ut ad redemptionem per baptisma redeat, alter ante subtrahitur quam hunc regenerans unda perfundat. Et saepe fidelium filius sine fide rapitur, saepe infidelium concesso fidei sacramento renovatur. Sed fortasse aliquis dicat quod hunc Deus acturum prave etiam post baptisma noverat, et idcirco eum ad baptismatis gratiam non perducat. Quod si ita est, peccata quorumdam proculdubio priusquam sint perpetrata puniuntur. Et quis ista recte sentiens dixerit quia omnipotens Deus, qui alios a perpetratis facinoribus liberat, haec in aliis etiam non perpetrata condemnet? Occulta itaque sunt ejus judicia; et quanta obscuritate nequeunt conspici, tanta debent humilitate venerari. Dicat ergo: Memento quod ignores opus ejus, de quo cecinerunt viri. Ac si aperte diceret: De quo fortes quique locuti sunt, ejus opera tuae mentis oculis absconduntur, quia mensuram tuae notitiae eo ipso quo humanitate circumscriberis transeunt. Sequitur:

CAPUT V [Rec. III].

856 VERS. 25. Omnes homines vident eum, unusquisque intuetur procul. 8. Deus nonnisi procul, etiam ab electis videtur. Omnis homo eo ipso quo rationalis est conditus, debet ex ratione colligere eum qui se condidit Deum esse. Quem nimirum jam videre est damnationem illius ratiocinando conspicere. Cum vero dictum sit: Omnes homines vident eum, recte subjungitur: Unusquisque intuetur procul. Procul quippe eum intueri est non jam illum per speciem cernere, sed adhuc ex sola operum suorum admiratione pensare. Procul illum hic etiam electi conspiciunt, quia necdum claritatem illius per acumen intimae visionis apprehendunt. Cui etsi jam per amorem juxta sunt, adhuc tamen ab illo terrenae inhabitationis pondere disjunguntur; et quamvis ei bene vivendo inhaereant, a contemplationis ejus specie longe se esse suspirant. Quem nimirum reprobi etiam cum ad judicium venientem viderint, procul intuentur, quia non eum in divinitatis forma, sed in sola qua et comprehendi potuit humanitate conspiciunt, quia videlicet eorum oculos reducta tunc ad memoriam sua male gesta reverberant, et dum ejus humanitatem vident, cujus divinitatis claritatem non vident, miro modo ab ejus visione quem conspiciunt longe fiunt. [Vet. III.] Sed cum dicitur: Memento quod ignores opus ejus, ac deinde subjungitur: Omnes homines vident eum, quem, sicut diximus, videre est transcendentem omnia ejus essentiam ex ratione colligere, valde mirandum est quod et ipsum cernimus, et ejus opus ignoramus. Dubii quippe de ejus essentia non sumus, et tamen in ejus judiciis incerti remanemus. Patet nobis quod summum est, absconditur quod minimum. Minus quippe sunt ejus opera quam ipse; et agentem cernimus, sed in actione caligamus: quia videlicet cur quid fiat incertum est, sed quis sit qui haec incerta faciat, incertum non est. Dicat ergo: Memento quod ignores opus ejus, de quo cecinerunt viri: Omnes homines vident eum, unusquisque intuetur procul, quia eum, cujus judicia minime comprehendimus, esse per rationem videmus; quem tamen adhuc procul cernimus, quia ab ejus fortitudine nubilo infirmitatis nostrae separamur. Sequitur:

CAPUT VI [Rec. IV].

VERS. 26. Ecce Deus magnus vincens scientiam nostram. 9. De Deo tunc tantum aliquid intelligere incipimus, cum eum nos digne cognoscere non posse sentimus. Superius dixerat: Ecce Deus excelsus: nunc iterum dicit: Ecce Deus magnus. Quid est quod de Deo loquens ecce dicit, et ecce repetit, nisi quod ecce dicimus de ea re quam in praesenti monstramus? et quia Deus ubique praesens est, cum de illo ecce dicitur, etiam non videntibus adesse memoratur. Bene autem eum vincere scientiam nostram narrat, quem videri ab omnibus dixerat, quia etsi ex ratione conspicitur, magnitudo tamen illius nulla nostri sensus subtilitate penetratur. Quidquid namque de claritate ejus magnitudinis scimus, infra ipsum est; et tanto ab ejus scientia longe repellimur, quanto ejus potentiam nos comprehendisse suspicamur. Nam quamvis in altum mens nostra rapiatur, ejus tamen magnitudinis immensitate transcenditur. Cujus tunc aliquid quasi ex parte cognoscimus, quando eum nos digne cognoscere non posse sentimus. Sequitur:

CAPUT VII.

Ibid. Numerus annorum ejus inaestimabilis. 857 10. Deus sine spatio immensus, sine initio aut fine aeternus. Dicere utcunque aeternitatem voluit, et ipsam aeternitatis longitudinem annos vocavit. Cum enim brevitatem temporis dilatare volumus, momenta per horas, horas per dies, dies per menses, menses autem per annos extendimus. Quia ergo peramplum quiddam dicere voluit, sed quid diceret latius non invenit, in Deo annos sine aestimatione numeri multiplicavit, dicens: Numerus annorum ejus inaestimabilis, ut dum ea quae apud se sunt prolixa multiplicat, aeternitatis longitudinem se metiri non posse infirmitas humana cognoscat. Tende itaque oculum in aeternitatem, ut videas Deum, vel quando est a principio, vel quousque; et nusquam finis superior, quia esse non incipit; nusquam finis inferior, quia esse non desinit. Intra ipsum omnia coangustantur, ipse vero circa omnia sine spatio extenditur, sine loco dilatatur. Ecce cuncta quae facta sunt, ea ipsa circumscriptione qua creata sunt, superiori et inferiori fine cinguntur. Lege enim sua, quia a non esse incipiunt, festinant non esse. 11. Quaedam aeterna futura sunt, sed non fuerunt. Sed quaedam mirabiliter acceperunt ut quamvis ea finis superior inchoat, finis tamen inferior non constringat; et licet esse incipiant, esse in perpetuum non desistant. Horum vero aeternitas idcirco summae est aeternitati dissimilis, quia aeterna esse coeperunt. Cum ad extrema prospicimus, horum finem, qui omnino deest, non comprehendimus; eorum tamen initia cernimus, cum mentem retro revocamus; et dum in eis infra supraque animum ducimus, non capimus omnino quousque sunt, sed videmus ex quo. Deus autem quia quasi quiddam in eo per aeternitatem longum est, quod nec initio oritur, nec fine terminatur, nec ex quo in semetipso recipit, nec quousque, dicatur ergo: Numerus annorum ejus inaestimabilis. Per hoc ergo quod annorum illius numerus dicitur, diutinum ejus esse ostenditur. Per hoc vero quod inaestimabilis memoratur, hoc ipsum esse infinitum et incomprehensibile demonstratur. Sed quia humanis mentibus innotescat agnovimus, dum omnes homines vident eum; et quia ejus magnitudinem admirantes cernimus, dum annorum ejus numerus inaestimabilis habetur, restat jam ut etiam quid agat audiamus. Sequitur:

CAPUT VIII [Vet.

IV, Rec. V]. VERS. 27. Qui aufert stellas pluviae , et effundit imbres ad instar gurgitum. 12. Sancti patriarchae et prophetae stellae fuerunt pluviam generantes. Duo in hac vita sunt genera justorum: unum videlicet bene viventium, sed nulla docentium; aliud vero recte viventium, et eadem recta docentium, sicut et in coeli facie aliae stellae prodeunt quas nullae pluviae subsequuntur, aliae prodeunt quae arentem terram magnis imbribus infundunt. Igitur quoties in sancta Ecclesia recte quidam vivunt, sed tamen praedicare eamdem rectitudinem nesciunt, stellae quidem sunt, sed in siccitate aeris natae; quia per exemplum bene vivendi lucere caeteris possunt, sed per praedicationis verbum pluere nequeunt. Cum vero in ea quidam et recte vivunt, et aliis eamdem rectitudinem verbis praedicationis influunt, quasi ad proferendas pluvias in coelo stellae producuntur, quae sic vitae suae meritis luceant, ut etiam sermone praedicationis pluant. An non in hoc coelo astrum pluviae Moyses exstitit, 858 qui cum de supernis emicuit, corda peccantium quasi arentem inferius terram sanctae exhortationis pluvia ad ubertatem germinis infudit? An non Isaias astrum pluviae ostensus est, qui in eo quod lucem veritatis praevidens tenuit, siccitatem infidelium prophetando annuntians rigavit? An non Jeremias et prophetae caeteri, velut in coelo positi astra pluviae fuerunt, qui in praedicationis culmine erecti, dum pravitatem peccantium libere increpare ausi sunt, quasi verborum guttis obcaecationis humanae pulverem rigando presserunt? Quorum videlicet animas ab hac corruptibili carne susceptas, quia ex praesenti vita superna judicia auferunt, quasi a coeli facie stellae pluviae subtrahuntur, et ad occultum astra redeunt, dum peractis suis cursibus sanctorum animae in thesauris dispositionis intimae reconduntur. 13. His subductis, missi apostoli, qui imbres tanquam gurgites effuderunt. Sed quia terra aresceret si subductis stellis pluviae superna funditus fluenta cessarent, recte dicitur: Qui aufert stellas pluviae, et effundit imbres ad instar gurgitum. Nam cum prophetas abstulit, eorum vice Dominus apostolus misit, qui in similitudinem gurgitum pluerent, postquam subductis antiquis Patribus exteriora legis praedicamenta tacuissent. Stellas ergo pluviae abscondit, et ad instar gurgitum imbres fudit, quia dum praedicatores legis ad secreta et intima retulit, per dicta sequentium uberior vis praedicationis emanavit. [Vet. V.] 14. Post apostolos, sancti Patres doctrinam sacram auxerunt. Possunt quoque per stellas pluviae, sancti apostoli designari, de quibus Judaeae reprobatae per Jeremiam dicitur: Prohibitae sunt stellae pluviarum imber non fuit (Jerem. III, 3). Stellas ergo pluviae Dominus abstraxit, atque ad instar gurgitum imbres fudit, quia cum de Judaea praedicantes apostolos abstulit, doctrina novae gratiae mundum rigavit. Quod utrumque factum in Ecclesia potest non inconvenienter intelligi, quia cum solutis corporibus ad secretos supernorum sinus apostolorum animas retulit, quasi a coeli facie stellas pluviae abscondit. Sed ablatis stellis pluviae, in morem gurgitum imbres dedit, quia etiam reductis ad superna apostolis, per expositorum sequentium linguas, divinae fluenta scientiae diu abscondita largiori effusione patefecit. Nam quod illi sub brevitate locuti sunt, hoc exponendo isti multipliciter auxerunt. Unde et non immerito ipsa expositorum praedicatio gurgitibus comparatur: quia dum multorum praecedentium dicta colligunt, ipsi in eo quod astruunt profundius dilatantur. Nam dum testimonia testimoniis jungunt, quasi ex guttis gurgites faciunt. Quorum verbis dum quotidie gentilitas docetur, quia peccatorum mens coelestem scientiam accipit, quasi stans in terra aqua gurgites ostendit. Sed nequaquam se eisdem apostolis expositores in scientia praeferant, cum exponendo latius loquuntur. Meminisse quippe incessanter debent, per quos ejusdem scientiae inventiones acceperunt. Unde et apte subjungitur:

CAPUT IX.

VERS. 28. Qui de nubibus fluunt. 15. Nec tamen apostolis hujus doctrinae primis traditoribus praeferendi. Hi quippe de nubibus gurgites fluunt, quia si ex sanctis apostolis vis intelligentiae non inciperet, nequaquam per doctorum ora largior manaret. In Scriptura enim sacra aliquando per nubes, 859 mobiles quique homines, aliquando prophetae, aliquando autem apostoli designantur. Per nubes quippe mobilitas humanae mentis exprimitur, sicut Salomon ait: Qui ventum observat, non seminat; et qui considerat nubes, nunquam metit (Eccle. XI, 4). Ventum procul dubio immundum spiritum, nubes vero subjectos ei homines appellat; quos toties huc illucque impellit et revocat, quoties tentationes ejus in eorum cordibus suggestionum flatibus alternant. Qui igitur ventum observat, non seminat, quia qui tentationes venturas metuit, cor ad bona opera non proponit. Et qui considerat nubes, non metit, quia is qui ante humanae mutabilitatis terrorem trepidat, mercedis aeternae retributione se privat. Per nubes prophetae figurantur, sicut per Psalmistam dicitur: Tenebrosa aqua in nubibus aeris (Psal. XVII, 12); id est, occulta scientia in prophetis. [Vet. VI.] Per nubes quoque apostoli designantur, sicut per Isaiam dicitur: Mandabo nubibus, ne pluant super eam imbrem (Isai. V, 6). Ipsi igitur stellae, quia vitae meritis lucent; ipsi nubes, quia arentem nostri pectoris terram coelestis intelligentiae fluentis rigant. Si enim nubes non essent, nequaquam eos intuens propheta dixisset: Qui sunt isti, qui ut nubes volant (Isai. LX, 8)? Imbrium itaque gurgites de nubibus fluunt, quia profundae praedicationes sequentium intelligentiae originem a sanctis apostolis acceperunt. De quibus adhuc nubibus apte subjungitur:

CAPUT X.

IBID. Quae praetexunt cuncta desuper. 16. Nubes cur apostoli dicantur. Nubes cum desuper aerem praetexunt, si in coelum oculos attollimus, non coelum, sed ipsas intuemur; nec visus noster aethereas plagas penetrat, quia ei illas ipsa sua infirmitas occultat; et cum de coelo sol rutilat, prius interfuso aere pascitur, ut post in coelo solis radios contempletur. Quia ergo carnales homines sumus, cum superna appetere nitimur, quasi in coelum oculos levamus, et velut in coelum aciem intendimus, quia, pressi usu rerum corporalium, docere spiritalia conamur. Sed quia transire intellectus noster ad divina non sinitur, nisi prius per sanctorum praecedentium exempla formetur, quasi jam coetum noster oculus suscipit, sed nubes videt, quia comprehendere ea quae Dei sunt appetit, sed vix mirari ea quae hominibus collata sunt potest. Unde et alias dicitur: Illuminans tu mirabiliter a montibus aeternis (Psal. LXXV, 5). Qui enim orientem solem contemplari non valet, irradiatos montes aspicit, et quia sol ortus sit deprehendit. Ex aeternis ergo montibus nos Deus illuminat, quia per admiratam vitam Patrum praecedentium, radio nos suae claritatis illustrat. Ecce in studio devotionis dominicae et charitatis accendimur, sed in hac devotione atque charitate melius harum nubium contemplatione formamur. Quid enim devotius Petro (Matth. XIV. 29)? Quid charius Joanne (Joan. XIII, 23)? Ille per devotionem fluida maris dorsa calcare non timuit, iste per amorem in ipso auctoris nostri pectore requievit; et qui ad corporalis coenae refectionem venerat, spiratale pabulum de sinu Redemptoris sumpsit. [Ver. VII.] 17. Cur prophetae et antiqui Patres nubes quoque dicantur. Abraham obedientiam nos docet; Isaac patientiam; Jacob laboriosam vitam; Joseph castitatem; Moyses mansuetudinem; Josue constantiam; Samuel benignitatem; David pietatem et humilitatem. Sed quia signari per nubes etiam prophetas diximus, necesse est ut adhuc ad medium superiorum Patrum exempla deducamus. Ecce cum praeceptis coelestibus subdi per obedientiam cupimus, 860 consideratis antiquorum patrum vestigiis juvamur. Quid enim Abraham obedientius, qui ad unam vocem dominicam cognatos ac patriam deserit, et pro adipiscenda aeterna haereditate ipsum ferire non trepidat quem senex jam et pene moriturus acceperat haeredem (Genes. XII, 4)? Cum patientiae virtutem apprehendere conamur, praecedentium exempla conspicimus. Quid enim Isaac patientius, qui ligna portat, de holocausto interrogat, atque post paululum ligatur, et non loquitur; arae superponitur et non reluctatur (Genes. XXII, 7)? Quid ergo isto viro dici patientius potest, qui quasi ad solatium ducitur, et requirit; ad feriendum ligatur, et conticescit; et oblaturus holocaustum interrogat, offerendus in holocaustum tacet? Cum accingi ad laborum tolerantiam nitimur, exemplis praecedentibus sublevamur. Quid enim Jacob laboriosius, qui apud Laban tam longo tempore propinquus jure cognationis, opera exercuit servitutis, et vice obsecutus est famuli, ut perfrueretur praemiis haeredis (Genes. XXX, 26)? Cum arcem continentiae et castitatis ascendere nitimur, exemplis praecedentium sublevamur. Quid enim Joseph castius, qui ad desiderium petulantis dominae, jugo luxuriae premi non potuit etiam captivus? Et quidem hominibus exstitit servus, sed contra dominantem nequitiam et in servitio liber fuit (Genes. XXXIX, 12). Cum mansuetudine repleri concupiscimus, praecedentium exemplis adjuvamur. Quid enim

Moyse mansuetius, qui commissi sibi populi seditionem tolerat, et tamen irascentem Dominum pro eisdem suis persecutoribus rogat, seque pro illis divino furori objicit, quia in sancto ejus pectore etiam ex persecutione charitas ignescit (Exod. XXXII, 32)? Cum contra adversa mundi formare mentis constantiam nitimur, praecedentium consideratione fulcimur. Quid enim Josue constantius, qui ad explorandam gentium qualitatem missus, nec proceritatis magnitudinem, nec numerositatis multitudinem expavit. Unde et easdem gentes, quas explorando non timuit, etiam praeliando prostravit (Josue X, 7). Cum benignitatis culmen apprehendere conamur, praecedentium exemplis instruimur. Quid enim Samuele benignius, qui de principatu regendi populi dejectus, successorem sibi humiliter requirit, inventumque ungit in regem, unctum mox patitur persecutorem (I Reg. X; XII, 1). A quo ne moriatur, trepidat; et tamen ne ei Dominus irascatur, rogat. Ipse quippe cum mitteretur, ait: Audiet Saul, et interficiet me (I Reg. XVI, 2). Et ei per semetipsam Veritas dicit: Quousque tu luges Saulem, cum ego abjecerim eum (Ibid., 1)? Quid ergo isto viro benignius dici potest, qui et hunc non vult divinitus percuti a quo formidat occidi? Cum ad pietatis atque humilitatis celsitudinem tendimus, praecedentium exemplis levamur. Quid enim David misericordius, quid humilius dici potest, qui a rege reprobo pro victoriis contumelias recepit, qui de manu hostili Israeliticam gentem fortis eripuit, et tamen ipse ne moriatur quasi debilis fugit (I Reg. XVII, 18, 19); qui et se electum divino judicio, et persecutorem suum reprobum agnoscit, et tamen eidem persecutori suo crebrae satisfactionis humilitate se subjicit, qui persecutoris lanceam tollit, oram chlamydis detruncat, atque ad cacumen montis protinus properat, et uno eodemque tempore quia 861 occidendi potestatem habuerit ostentat, et ne occidatur rogat? 18. More nubium extensa super nos illorum sanctorum vita legimur. Quia ergo in cunctis quae spiritaliter appetimus exemplis praecedentibus informamur, bene de his nubibus dicitur: Quae praetexunt cuncta desuper.

More enim nubium extensa super nos patrum vita tegimur, ut ad fructum fecundi germinis infundamur. Et quasi intuentes coelum prius nubes aspicimus, quia ante bonorum facta admirando cernimus, et post illa quae sunt coelestia experiendo penetramus. Sed quia nequaquam harum nubium, id est antiquorum patrum, vita nobis virtusque patesceret, nisi eam nubes aliae, id est sancti apostoli lumine suae praedicationis aperirent, ad has nubes quae praedicando mundum circumeunt sermo redeat, et quid per illas Dominus in mundo egerit ostendat. Sequitur:

CAPUT XI [Rec. VI].

VERS. 29, 30. Si voluerit extendere nubes quasi tentorium suum, et fulgurare lumine suo desuper, cardines quoque maris operiet. 19. Sancti Dei tentoria sunt, in quibus apud nos habitat et ambulat. Paulo Romam petente, latens in ejus pectore quasi sub tentorio ibat Deus. Extendit nubes Dominus, dum ministris suis viam praedicationis aperiens, eos in mundi latitudinem circumquaque diffundit. Bene autem dictum est: Quasi tentorium suum. Tentorium quippe in itinere poni solet. Et cum praedicatores sancti in mandum mittuntur, iter Deo faciunt. Unde scriptum est: Ecce mitto angelum meum ante faciem tuam, qui praeparabit viam tuam ante te (Malac. III 1). Et unde rursum per Psalmistam dicitur: Iter facite ei qui ascendit super occasum (Psal. LXVII, 5). Et rursum: Deus, cum egredereris coram populo tuo, dum transgredereris per desertum, terra mota est (Ibid., 8). Deus enim, qui per semetipsum non localiter ubique est, per praedicatores suos in mundi partes localiter ambulat. Unde etiam per prophetam dicitur: Et inambulabo in eis (Levit. XXVI, 12; II Cor. VI, 16). Iter quippe per eos agit, dum humanis cordibus eorum se eloquio infundit. Atque in hoc itinere tentoria Dei sunt haec eadem corda sanctorum, quibus quasi in via quiescendo tegitur, dum per haec ad mentes hominum veniens, agit quae disposuit, et non videtur. [Vet. VIII.] Hinc est quod simul omnis synagoga tentorium vocatur, cum cessasse a praedicatione sacerdotes Dominus per Jeremiam queritur, dicens: Non est qui extendat ultra tentorium meum, et erigat pelles meas (Jerem. X, 20). Hinc rursum de exterminatione ejus dicitur: Dissipavit quasi hortum tentorium suum, demolitus est tabernaculum suum (Thren. II, 6). Quia enim in unius populi cultu tunc Dominus inter homines latuit, eumdem sibi populum tentorium vocavit. Unde et recte nunc nubes istae ejus tentorium dicuntur, quia ad nos Deus per gratiam veniens, intra praedicatorum suorum mentes operitur. An Paulus ejus tentorium non erat, cum a Jerusalem per circuitum usque ad Illyricum ad corda mortalium veniens, in ejus mente Dominus quiescebat (Rom. XV, 19)? Nubes quippe erat hominibus, tentorium Deo, quia quem praedicando, infundebat audientibus, hunc invisibiliter in mente retinebat. Idem rursus dum catenis vinctus Romam peteret Paulus occupaturus mundum, latens in ejus pectore quasi sub tentorio ibat Deus (Act. XXVIII, 15), quia et occultus videri non poterat, et per verba praedicationis proditus iter inchoatae gratiae sine cessatione peragebat. Nubes ejus Moyses exstitit, cum priusquam plebi Israeliticae ducatum praeberet, quadraginta annis in deserto 862 permanens, et sublimia appetens, a conversatione populi segregatus vixit. Sed tentorium Dei factus est, cum ad revocandum populum in Aegyptum missus ibat (Exod. III, 10), portans invisibilem in corde veritatem, cum omnipotens Deus, qui patescebat in opere, latebat in corde. Et ubique praesens omnia continens, iter in suo famulo in Aegyptum veniens faciebat. Unde scriptum est: Ivit Deus in Aegyptum, ut redimeret sibi populum (Exod. XV, 13, sec. LXX). Ecce ire dicitur, per cujus incircumscriptam praesentiam cuncta continentur, quia is qui ubique ex majestate est quasi in via gressus ponit ex praedicatione. 20. Deus per sanctos fulgurat, cum edit miracula. Haec in praedicatoribus necessaria. Sed eisdem sanctis praedicatoribus nequaquam ad persuadendum verba sufficiunt, nisi etiam miracula addantur. Unde cum dictum sit: Si voluerit extendere nubes quasi tentorium suum, recte subjungitur: Et fulgurare lumine suo desuper. Quid enim sentire fulgura, nisi miracula debemus? de quibus per Psalmistam dicitur: Fulgura multiplicabis, et conturbabis eos (Psal. CXLIII, 6, sec. LXX). Per has ergo nubes lumine suo desuper fulgurat, quia per praedicatores sanctos insensibilitatis nostrae tenebras etiam miraculis illustrat. 21. Extremorum etiam terminorum mundi conversio. Britannia fidei subdita. Cumque nubes istae verbis pluunt, cumque miraculis vim coruscae lucis aperiunt, extremos etiam mundi terminos in divinum amorem convertunt. Unde recte subditur: Cardines quoque maris operiet. Quod faciendum quidem Eliu vocibus audivimus, sed auctore Deo jam factum cernimus. Omnipotens enim Dominus coruscantibus nubibus cardines maris operuit, quia emicantibus praedicatorum miraculis, ad fidem etiam terminos mundi perduxit. Ecce enim pene cunctarum jam gentium corda penetravit; ecce in una fide Orientis limitem Occidentisque conjunxit; ecce lingua Britanniae, quae nil aliud noverat, quam barbarum frendere, jam dudum in divinis laudibus Hebraeum coepit Alleluia resonare. Ecce quondam tumidus, jam substratus sanctorum pedibus servit Oceanus, ejusque barbaros motus, quos terreni principes edomare ferro nequiverant, hos pro divina formidine sacerdotum ora simplicibus verbis ligant; et qui catervas pugnantium infidelis nequaquam metuerat, jam nunc fidelis humilium linguas timet. Quia enim perceptis coelestibus verbis, clarescentibus quoque miraculis, virtus ei divinae cognitionis infunditur, ejusdem divinitatis terrore refrenatur, ut prava agere metuat, ac totis desideriis ad aeternitatis gratiam pervenire concupiscat. Unde hic quoque convenienter adjungitur:

CAPUT XII.

VERS. 31. Per haec enim judicat populos, et dat escas multis mortalibus. 22. Per eosdem praedicatores nubibus designatos, et terror infligitur, et esca

datur. Per haec nimirum verba praedicatorum, id est guttas nubium, per haec fulgura miraculorum Deus populos judicat, quia eorum corda territa ad poenitentiam vocat. Nam dum superna audiunt, dum mira opera attendunt, mox ad corda sua redeunt, et se de anteactis pravitatibus affligentes, aeterna tormenta pertimescunt. Sed per easdem nubes per quas terror infligitur, etiam esca datur, quia magna praedicatorum dispensatio est, ut sic sciant superbientium mentes affligere, ut etiam afflictas noverint consolationis eloquio nutrire, quatenus et peccantes de aeternis suppliciis terreant, et poenitentes de superni regni gaudiis pascant. Unde bene ipse 863 dispensationis ordo servatus est, ut ordinate Eliu diceret quod per has nubes prius judicat populos, et postmodum escas praebet, quia nimirum omnipotens Deus per praedicatores suos prius nos de prava actione corripiens concutit, et postmodum per spem consolans nutrit. Si enim divina dispensatio per has nubes judicium modo non ageret, nequaquam eisdem nubibus dixisset: Accipite Spiritum sanctum; quorum remiseritis peccata, remittuntur eis; et quorum retinueritis, retenta sunt (Joan. XX, 22). Et rursum, si per eas jejuna nostra corda non pasceret, nequaquam de esurientibus populis discipulis Dominus diceret: Date illis vos manducare (Matth. XIV, 16). Quod sic tunc eorum manibus factum credimus, ut hoc eorum verbis quotidie fieri sine cessatione videamus. Quid enim agit Petrus, cum per epistolas loquitur, nisi ut verbi pabulo corda nostra male jejuna satientur? Quid Paulus, quid Joannes per epistolas loquentes operantur, nisi ut mentes nostrae coelestia alimenta percipiant, et inediae suae fastidium quo moriebantur vincant? Dicatur ergo: Si voluerit extendere nubes quasi tentorium suum, et fulgurare lumine suo desuper, cardines quoque maris operiet. Per haec enim judicat populos, et dat escas multis mortalibus. Ac si aperte diceret: Si sanctos suos in ministerium praedicationis extendit, eorumque verba miraculis adjuvat, totius mundi limites ad fidem vocat, per quae et prius superbientes judicat, et post per verbum consolationis nutriens in spe humiles roborat. [Vet. IX.] 23. Non omnibus fides datur. Sed cum escas dare mortalibus diceret, notandum quod non ait, omnibus, sed multis, quia vid licet scriptum est: Non omnium est fides (II Thess. III, 2). Et quibusdam dicitur: Propterea vos non auditis, quia ex Deo non estis (Joan, VIII, 47). Et rursum: Nemo potest venire ad me, nisi Pater, qui misit me, traxerit eum (Joan. VI, 44). Et rursum: Novit Dominus qui sunt ejus (II Tim. II, 19). Unde in ipsa quoque sancta Ecclesia plurimi fidem tenent, et vitam fidei non tenent; humilitatis dominicae sacramenta percipiunt, sed humiliari dominica imitatione contemnunt; blanda divini eloquii praedicamenta communicant, sed apud se immanes in tumore perseverant. Unde hic quoque, postquam per cardines maris aggregatae Ecclesiae latitudo signata est, apte subjungitur:

CAPUT XIII [Rec. VII].

VERS. 32.Immanibus abscondit lucem. 24. Superbientibus veritatis cognitio denegatur. Immanes quippe sunt, qui se elatis cogitationibus extollunt. Quos contra per Isaiam dicitur: Vae qui sapientes estis in oculis vestris, et coram vobismetipsis prudentes (Isai. V, 21). Quos contra etiam Paulus ait: Nolite prudentes esse apud vosmetipsos (Rom. XII, 16). Sed his immanibus lux absconditur, quia nimirum superbientibus veritatis cognitio denegatur. Unde per semetipsam Veritas dicit: Confiteor tibi, Pater Domine coeli et terrae, quia abscondisti haec a sapientibus et prudentibus, et revelasti ea parvulis (Matth. XI, 25): sapientes et prudentes videlicet superbientes vocans. Qui enim non subjunxit: Revelasti ea stultis, sed parvulis, tumorem se damnasse innotuit, non acumen. Unde et alias dicitur: Custodiens parvulos Dominus (Psal. CXIV, 6). Atque ut ostendatur haec eadem parvitas quid vocatur, adjungitur: Humiliatus sum, et liberavit me (Ibid., 6). Quia ergo sunt multi in Ecclesia, qui 864 parvuli esse despiciunt, etiam in humilitatis loco immanes apud se esse minime desistunt. Hos plerumque videas honoribus extolli, voluptatibus perfrui, rerum multiplicitate dilatari. Hi saepe nil praecipue nisi praeesse caeteris appetunt, a multis timeri gratulantur; recte vivere negligunt, et rectae vitae famam habere concupiscunt; adulationes quaerunt, favoribus intumescunt. Et quia in rebus sibi copiose praesentibus prompti sunt, ventura gaudia non requirunt. Cumque eos multiplex actio occupat, etiam a semetipsis alienos demonstrat [Vet. X]. Et tamen si qua fidei tentatio exsurgat, quia in ea saltem specie tenus continentur, hanc verbis, hanc laboribus defendunt, et patriam coelestem vindicant, nec tamen amant. 25. Multi pro repromissionis terra pugnant, quam minime tamen diligunt. Exemplum Gaditarum et Rubenitarum. Quos bene apud Moysen filii Ruben et Gad, et dimidia tribus Manasse exprimunt, qui multa pecora et jumenta possidentes, dum extra Jordanem ea quae viderant campestria concupiscunt, in repromissionis terra haereditatem habere noluerunt, dicentes: Terra quam percussit Dominus in conspectu filiorum Israel, regionis uberrimae est ad pastum animalium; et nos servi tui habemus jumenta plurima precamurque, si invenimus gratiam coram te, ut des nobis famulis tuis eam in possessionem, nec facias nos transire Jordanem (Num. XXXII, 4). Qui igitur jumenta plurima possident, Jordanem transire refugiunt, quia quos multa mundi implicamenta occupant, habitationem coelestis patriae non requirunt. Sed ipsa eos quam specie tenus tenent, fides increpat, ne otii delectatione torpescant, atque exemplo suo alios a laboris tolerantia, et studio longanimitatis frangant. Unde eis per Moysen dicitur: Nunquid fratres vestri ibunt ad pugnam, et vos hic sedebitis? Cur subvertitis mentes filiorum Israel (Ibid., 7)? Sed quia erubescunt non defendere quod confitentur, pro eadem fide quam professi sunt, ad certamen properant, eamque non sibi, sed proximis vindicant. Unde et ad Moysen dicunt: Caulas ovium fabricabimus, et stabula jumentorum, parvulisque nostris urbes munitas; nos autem ipsi armati et accincti pergemus ad praelium ante filios Israel (Ibid., 16). Qui mox fortes pro aliis veniunt, et repromissionis terram ab hostibus liberant, et relinquunt; atque ad pascenda armenta extra Jordanem redeunt. Multi quippe quamvis fideles, curis praesentibus occupati, quasi armenta extra Jordanem pascunt, quia contra fidem baptismatis tota mente omnique desiderio rebus perituris inserviunt. Qui tamen ut, diximus, cum fidei tentatio oritur, defensionum armis accinguntur. Hostes fidei superando trucidant, et haereditatem terrae repromissionis, id est fructum fidei non amant; sicque pro illa pugnant, ut tamen sua pignora extra illam deponant. Quia enim parvulos foris habent, affectum in ejus habitatione non habent. Unde ad campestria redeunt, quia ab altis cacuminibus montium quasi a spe coelestium dilabuntur, ut extra repromissionis terram bruta animalia nutriant, quia ad pascendos variis desideriis irrationabiles animi motus elaborant, quia aeternae lucis quanta sit claritas nesciunt qui transitoriis occupationibus obcaecantur; et dum de terrenis rebus superbiunt, coelestis sibi luminis aditum 865 claudunt. [Vet. XI.] Unde recte nunc dicitur: Immanibus abscondit lucem. Sed tamen aliquando hos immanes superna gratia respicit, atque ipsis rerum abundantium occupationibus affligit, eorumque prosperitatibus adversas quidem, sed utiles tribulationes interserit, ut contristati ad cor redeant, atque in perituris rebus quam inaniter occupentur agnoscant. Unde hic quoque postquam subtracta lux dicitur, apte subjungitur:

CAPUT XIV.

IBID. Et praecipit ei ut rursus adveniat. 26. Veritatis lumen, quod elatis occupatisque mentibus absconditur, afflictis et humiliatis revelatur. Quia veritatis lumen, quod elatis occupatisque mentibus absconditur, afflictis humiliatisque revelatur. Lex quippe advenit, cum afflicta mens ipsas quas de perituris rebus tribulationum tenebras tolerat agnoscit, quia nisi aliquid ex lumine interno perciperet, nec hoc ipsum quia lumen perdiderat videret. Quod intelligi specialiter etiam de Judaeis potest, qui idcirco Redemptori nostro in carne venienti contradicere ausi sunt, quia apud semetipsos immanes exstiterunt. Sed his immanibus lux absconsa est, quia superbi lumen veritatis dum persequuntur, amiserunt. Sed quia in fine mundi ad fidem recipiendi sunt, recte subjungitur: Et praecipit ei ut rursus adveniat. Unde etiam per Isaiam dicitur: Si fuerit numerus filiorum Israel quasi arena maris, reliquiae salvae fient (Isai. X, 22). Tunc quippe ad eos lux revertitur, cum ipsi ad confitendam Redemptoris nostri potentiam revertuntur. 27. Deus, ut vult, lumen aut abscondit, aut revelat. Si autem in manibus, nequaquam per dativum casum unum nomen, sed duas partes orationis accipimus; potest intelligi, quia in manibus lux absconditur, cum apud rectum judicem iniqui quique in suis operibus caecantur. Cui tamen praecipitur ut rursus adveniat, quia dum peccatores se suis viribus salvari non posse cognoverint, gratiae lumen accipiunt, et protectionis intimae radiis illustrantur, ut majore ardore postmodum coelestem patriam diligant, quam prius in terrena delectatione flagrabant. Sed haec cum de coelesti patria loquimur, cui inesse mira claritate praedita angelorum agmina audimus, cui rerum omnium conditor praesidet, quam visione sua reficiens replet, cui vera haereditas lux est et defectus ejusdem luminis nullus est, ad nosmetipsos mentem reducimus, et quod terrena gestemus membra cogitamus, pensamus quod, nati in tenebris atque a radiis intimae lucis alieni, tanto nequius viximus quanto, rebus corporalibus dediti, a spiritualibus longius degebamus. Qua consideratione permotum cor ac male sibi conscium trepidat, et tantae illius quam audit patriae civem se fieri posse desperat. Unde hic quoque apte subjungitur, quo mens pavida ad fiduciam reducatur. Nam de hac luce mox subditur:

CAPUT XV [Rec. VIII].

VERS. 33. Annuntiat de ea amico suo quod possessio ejus sit, et ad eam possit ascendere. 28. Hominibus pene desperantibus coelestem gloriam

promittit Deus. Amicus veritatis est rectae amator actionis. Unde et ipsa Veritas discipulis dicit: Vos amici mei estis, si feceritis quae ego praecipio vobis (Joan. XV, 14). Amicus quippe animae custos dicitur. Unde non immerito qui custodire voluntatem Dei in praeceptis illius nititur, ejus amicus vocatur. Hinc est quod rursum eisdem discipulis Veritas dicit: Vos autem dixi amicos, quia omnia quaecunque audivi a Patre meo, nota feci vobis (Ibid., 15). De hac igitur luce aeternae patriae amico suo 866 Deus annuntiat quod possessio ejus sit, ut nequaquam se infirmitatis suae fragilitate desperet, nequaquam hoc quod creatus, sed quod recreatus est penset, sed tanto certius sciat quia illius lucis claritatem possideat, quanto nunc vitiorum pulsantium tenebras verius calcat. Bene autem in promissione subjungitur: Et ad eam possit ascendere. Quid enim difficilius quam homini in terra edito terrena et fragilia membra gestanti, coelorum alta conscendere, supernorum spirituum arcana penetrare? 29. Christus pacem inter angelos et homines composuit. Aequales nos angelis fecit. Sed eorumdem spirituum ad nos conditor venit, seque hominem etiam sub ipsis exhibuit, sicut de illo Patri per Prophetam dicitur: Minuisti eum paulo minus ab angelis (Psal. VIII, 6). Et quia inter nos et eosdem spiritus discordantis vitae scandalum reperit, mira potentia, mirabiliori etiam pietate summa creans, ima suscipiens, ima cum summis junxit. Hinc est quod eodem Rege nato, angelorum chori in ejus annuntiatione prodeunt, hymnum dicunt, et devicta pravae vitae discordia, hos quos dudum despexerant, cives agnoscunt, consono ore praedicantes: Gloria in excelsis Deo, et in terra pax hominibus bonae voluntatis (Luc. II, 14). Ac si aperte dicant: Quos a nobis malitia disjunxerat, jam nunc in terra nata bonitas jungat. Hinc est quod ante incarnationem ejus in Testamento veteri adorasse homo angelum legitur, nec tamen adorare prohibetur (Genes. XVIII, 2); sed post Mediatoris adventum, cum se Joannes adorando angelo prostravisset, audivit: Vide ne feceris, conservus tuus sum et fratrum tuorum (Apoc. XIX, 10; XXII, 9).

Quid est enim quod prius aequanimiter se concedebant adorari, post ab homine angeli recusant, nisi quod prius hominem carnalibus corruptionibus deditum, nec ab eisdem carnalibus corruptionibus redemptum, quo abjectiorem noverant, justius contemnebant; postmodum vero humanam naturam eo jam subjectam habere non poterant, quo hanc in auctore suo etiam super semetipsos ductam videbant? Neque enim jam debebat in membris subjecta despici, quae in ipso membrorum capite meruit praelata venerari. Is ergo qui propter nos minor angelis exstitit aequales non angelis virtute suae minorationis fecit. Unde et moriendo docuit mortem non metui, resurgendo de vita confidi, ascendendo de coelestis patriae haereditate gloriari, ut quo caput praeisse conspiciunt, illuc se subsequi et membra gratulentur. Unde bene ab eodem nostro capite dicitur: Ubicunque corpus fuerit, illuc congregabuntur et aquilae (Matth. XXIV, 28). Unde Petrus ait: In haereditatem incorruptibilem, et incontaminatam, et immarcescibilem, conservatam in coelis (I Pet. I, 4). Unde Paulus dicit: Scimus quoniam si terrestris domus nostra hujus habitationis dissolvatur, quod aedificationem ex Deo habemus domum non manufactam, aeternam in coelis (II Cor. V, 1). 30. Solus Christus coelum ascendit, quod solis ejus membris patet. Sed si nos quoque, qui editi in terra sumus, coelum conscendimus, ubi est quod rursum Veritas dicit: Nemo ascendit in coelum, nisi qui de coelo descendit, Filius hominis qui est in coelo (Joan. III, 13)? Cui nimirum sententiae statim obiviat quod haec eadem Veritas dicit: Pater, volo ut ubi ego sum, et illi sint mecum (Joan. XVII, 24). Quae sibi in verbis suis non discrepat, sed ad inquirenda haec quasi discordantia studium nostrae mentis inflammat. Omnes enim nos qui in ejus fide nati sumus, 867 ejus procul dubio corpus existimus. Quia igitur mira dispensatione pietatis membrorum suorum Dominus caput factus est, repulsa reproborum multitudine, solus est etiam nobiscum. Nemo igitur ascendit in coelum, nisi qui descendit de coelo, Filius hominis qui est in coelo (Joan. III, 13), quia dum nos unum cum illo jam facti sumus, unde solus venit in se, illuc solus redit etiam in nobis; et is qui in coelo semper est, ad coelum quotidie ascendit, quia qui divinitate super omnia permanet, humanitatis suae compage sese quotidie ad coelos trahit. Non ergo se desperet humana fragilitas, unigeniti sanguinem consideret, et in pretio suo conspiciat quam magna est quae tanti valet. Perpendat sollicite quo caput praecessit, et quae ad vivendum praeceptis astringitur, ad sperandum exemplo roboretur; confidat coelos, speret supernam patriam, angelorum se sociam sciat, atque in suo capite praelatam se etiam angelis gaudeat. Dicatur igitur recte de hac luce aeternae patriae: Annuntiat de ea amico suo quod possessio ejus sit, et ad eam possit ascendere. [Vet. XII.] Sed valde mira sunt ista, valde terribilia, quod homo in terra editus, atque a coelesti patria exigentibus meritis longe damnatus, non solum ad statum conditionis reducitur, sed etiam gloriosius exaltatur, ut qui paradisum perdidit coelum recipiat; et non solum hunc debiti sui reatus non teneat, sed huic post culpam dona cumulatius excrescant, ut ille contemptor Dei, ille imitator diaboli, si ad fructum poenitentiae redeat, usque ad celsitudinem contemplandae intimae lucis ascendat. Cujus itaque cor non in hujus pietatis admiratione exsiliat? Cujus torpor non in sublevatione tantae considerationis expavescat? Unde et apte subjungitur:

CAPUT XVI [Rec. IX].

CAP. XXXVII, VERS. 1. Super hoc expavit cor meum, et motum est de loco suo. 31. Considerata aeternae patriae luce, mens in ecstasim rapitur. Quia pavor dum mentem percutit, hanc a semetipsa alienam reddit, nonnunquam Latini interpretes cestasim pavorem vocant, sicut per Psalmistam dicitur: Ego dixi in pavore meo, projectus sum a vultu oculorum tuorum (Psal. XXX, 23). Ubi videlicet non pavor, sed excessus dici poterat; sed pavor illic pro excessu ponitur, quia sicut in excessu, ita in pavore alienatur animus. Unde hic quoque considerata luce aeternae patriae, recte subjungitur: Super hoc expavit cor meum. Ac si dicat: In admirationis excessu se transtulit, et quia novae spei spiritu mens afflata est, semetipsam qualis in vetusta cogitatione fuerat reliquit. 32. Cor, terrenis despectis, ad sola coelestia suspirat. Bene autem dicitur: Et motum est de loco suo. Locus quippe humani cordis est delectatio vitae praesentis. Sed cum divina aspiratione tangitur locus nostri cordis, fit amor aeternitatis. Consideratione igitur aeternae patriae de loco suo animus movetur, quia derelictis infimis, in supernis cogitationibus ponitur. Prius enim quae essent aeterna nesciebat, in praesentium delectatione torpuerat, simulque ipse transiens amore transeuntia tenebat. Sed postquam quae essent aeterna cognovit, postquam supernae lucis radios raptim contemplando contigit, admiratione summorum sese ab infimis suscitatus elevavit, ut nulla jam ei nisi quae aeterna sunt libeant, et, despectis transeuntibus, sola quae permanent, requirat. Bene ergo dicitur: Super hoc expavit 868 cor meum, et motum est de loco suo, quia pigrum cor, et terrenis dudum cogitationibus deditum, cum repente per excessum se ad summa suspendit, cogitationis infimae locum mutavit. Sed quia per semetipsam in amore praesentis saeculi prostrata mens dormitat, et nisi divinae gratiae aspiratione pulsetur, in suis delectationibus frigida insensibilisque torpescit, necesse est ut quomodo interna cogitatione tangatur, vel qualiter ad spiritalia sensificetur, adjungat. Sequitur:

CAPUT XVII [Vet.

XIII, Rec. X]. VERS. 2. Audiet auditionem in terrore vocis ejus, et sonum de ore illius procedentem. 33. Deus prius timore judicii nos castigat, postea coelestis dulcedinis consolatione reficit. Mos sacri eloquii est ut cum audire aliquid per auditum insinuat, audiri eumdem auditum dicat, sicut Habacuc ait: Domine, audivi auditum tuum, et timui (Habac. III, 1). Unde hic quoque dicitur: Audiet auditionem in terrore vocis ejus. Notandum vero est quod vox Dei non in gaudio, sed in terrore audiri perhibetur, quia nimirum peccator quisque dum sola quae terrena sunt cogitat, dum cor oppressum infimis cogitationibus gestat, si repente divinae gratiae aspiratione tangitur, hoc ante omnia intelligit, quod cuncta quae agit districta aeterni judicis animadversione puniantur. Auditio igitur vocis Dei prius in terrore fit, ut postea vertatur in dulcedinem, quia ante nos districti judicii timore castigat, ut jam castigatos supernae dulcedinis consolatione reficiat. Nam cum nos violenta rerum temporalium delectatio possidet, et mentis nostrae oculos in somno torporis premit, si manu subita superni respectus excitamur, diu clausos mox eosdem ad veritatis lucem oculos mentis aperimus, quae egimus mala meminimus, quam districtus judex contra haec veniat videmus: versatur mente quantus ille sit tanti judicis adventus, quae tunc illa sit hominum angelorumque frequentia, quanta vi contra reprobos et ardentia pugnent elementa, quam terribiliter aeterna prodeat de districti judicis ore sententia, qua reprobis dicitur: Discedite a me, maledicti, in ignem aeternum, qui praeparatus est diabolo et angelis ejus (Matth. XXV, 41). Eorumdem poena reproborum ante oculos volvitur, et quae sint gehennae tenebrae, cum gravi amaritudinis obscuritate pensatur. Quia ergo superbum cor prius terrore concutitur, ut concussum in amore solidetur, recte nunc dicitur: Audiet auditionem in terrore vocis ejus. Ubi et bene subjungitur: Et sonum de ore illius procedentem 34. Utrumque praestat spiritus sanctus de ore Domini procedens. Sonus de ore Dei est vis timoris de superna irruens aspiratione, quia cum nos de venturis Dominus aspirando replet, procul dubio de male gestis praeteritis terret. Potest autem per os Dei, unigenitus designari Filius, qui sicut brachium ejus dicitur, quia per eum cuncta Pater operatur, de quo propheta ait: Et brachium Domini cui revelatum est (Isai. LIII, 1)? de quo Joannes dicit: Omnia per ipsum facta sunt (Joan. I, 3); ita etiam os dicitur. Hinc est enim quod propheta ait: Os enim Domini locutum est haec (Isai. LVIII, 14). Per quem nobis omnia loquitur, ac si oris nomine patenter diceretur verbum, sicut nos quoque pro verbis linguam dicere solemus, ut cum Graecam, vel Latinam linguam dicimus, Latina vel Graeca verba monstramus. Os ergo Domini non immerito ipsum accipimus. 869 Unde et ei sponsa in Canticis canticorum dicit: Osculetur me osculo oris sui (Cant. I, 1). Ac si dicat: Tangat me dulcedine praesentiae unigeniti Filii redemptoris mei. [Vet. XIV.] Per sonum vero oris potest ejusdem Domini sanctus Spiritus designari. Unde et alias in ejusdem Spiritus significatione scriptum est: Factus est repente de coelo sonus tanquam advenientis spiritus vehementis (Act. II, 2). Sonus igitur de ore Domini procedit, cum consubstantialis ei Spiritus ad nos per Filium veniens, surditatem nostrae insensibilitatis rumpit, sicut de eodem sono incircumscripto atque incorporeo os Domini loquitur, dicens: De meo accipiet, et annuntiabit vobis (Joan. XVI, 15). Potest ergo et per terrorem vocis vis formidinis, et per sonum oris dulcedo consolationis intelligi, quia quos Spiritus sanctus replet, prius eos de terrena actione terrificat, et postmodum spe coelestium consolatur, ut tanto post confidendo de praemiis gaudeant quanto prius sola supplicia conspiciendo metuebant. Hinc est quod de unigeniti Spiritu quasi de hoc oris sono Paulus dicit: Non enim accepistis spiritum servitutis iterum in timorem, sed accepistis spiritum adoptionis filiorum, in quo clamamus, Abba pater (Rom. VIII, 15). Hinc per semetipsam Veritas dicit: Accipite Spiritum sanctum, quorum remiseritis peccata, remittuntur eis; et quorum retinueritis, retenta sunt (Joan. XX, 22). Ecce conversorum terror vertitur in potestatem, quia dum mala sua poenitendo puniunt, usque ad exercendum judicium ascendunt; ut hoc in Deo posse accipiant, quod prius de Deo ipsi metuebant. Judices quippe fiunt qui supernum judicium perfecte timuerunt, et aliena jam peccata incipiunt dimittere qui prius formidaverant ne retinerentur sua. Sed quia hoc ipsum judicium quod spiritaliter agitur modo a carnalibus non videtur, sunt nonnulli qui Deum res humanas curare non aestimant, et eas ferri fortuitis motibus putant. Contra quos recte subditur:

CAPUT XVIII [Rec. XI].

VERS. 3. Subter omnes coelos ipse considerat, et lumen illius super terminos terrae. 35. Dei erga summa et infirma providentia. Ac si aperte diceretur: Qui summa regit, etiam extrema non deserit, quia sic impenditur maximis, ut tamen haec eadem cura regiminis non praepediatur a parvis. Qui enim ubique praesens, et ubique aequalis est, etiam in dissimilibus sibi ipsi dissimilis non est. Aeque ergo omnia respicit, aeque cuncta disponit, qui in omnibus locis praesens, nec localiter tenetur, nec varia curando variatur. Si autem coelos sanctos praedicatores accipimus, Propheta attestante qui ait: Coeli enarrant gloriam Dei (Psal. XVIII, 1), postquam per sonum oris adventus Spiritus sancti designatur, recte subjungitur: Subter omnes coelos ipse considerat, et lumen illius super terminos terrae. 36. Miracula cur in Ecclesiae exordiis concessa. Sunt namque nonnulli qui cum mira apostolorum opera audiunt, quod accepto Spiritu sancto mortuos verbo suscitarent, ab obsessis daemonia pellerent, umbra infirmitates amoverent (Act. V, 12, seq.), ventura quaeque prophetando praedicerent, et unigenitum Verbum Dei, omnium gentium loquentes lingua, praedicarent (Act. II, 4), quia has virtutes nunc in Ecclesia non vident, subtractam jam ab Ecclesia supernam gratiam suspicantur, nescientes pensare quod scriptum est: Adjutor in opportunitatibus, in tribulatione (Psal. IX, 10). Tunc quippe sancta Ecclesia miraculorum 870 adjutoriis indiguit, cum eam tribulatio persecutionis pressit. Nam postquam superbiam infidelitatis edomuit, non jam virtutum signa, sed sola merita operum requirit, quamvis et illa per multos cum opportunitas exigit ostendat. Scriptum quippe est: Linguae in signum sunt non fidelibus, sed infidelibus (I Cor. XIV, 22). Ubi ergo omnes fideles sunt, quae causa exigit ut signa monstrentur? Unde citius fortasse satisfacimus, si quid de ipsa apostolica dispensatione memoremus. 37. Signa non fidelibus, sed infidelibus data. Paulus namque egregius praedicator Melitem veniens, et plenam infidelibus insulam sciens, patrem Publii dysenteria febribusque vexatum, orando salvavit (Act. XXVIII, 8), et tamen aegrotanti Timotheo praecepit, dicens: Modico vino utere propter stomachum tuum et frequentes tuas infirmitates (I Tim. V, 23). Quid est, Paule, quod aegrum infidelem orando ad salutem revocas, et tantum adjutorem Evangelii more medici per alimenta curas, nisi quod idcirco fiunt exteriora miracula ut mentes hominum ad interiora perducatur, quatenus per hoc quod mirum visibiliter ostenditur ea quae admirabiliora sunt invisibilia credantur? Signo quippe virtutis pater Publii sanandus fuerat, ut mente revivisceret, dum miraculo ad salutem rediret; Timotheo autem adhibendum foris miraculum non erat, quia jam totus intus vivebat. Quid est ergo mirum si, propagata fide, crebro miracula non fiunt, quando haec ipsi quoque apostoli in quibusdam jam fidelibus non fecerunt? [Vet. XV.] Elevatis ergo coelis, Dominus inferiora considerat, quia et ablatis summis praedicatoribus, incessanter etiam infima nostrae infirmitatis curat. Et quasi subter coelos lumen illius, terminos respicit, quia post sublimem vitam praecedentium etiam peccatorum mores actusque gratiae suae illustratione comprehendit. Qui etsi virtutum signa nunc per vitam fidelium crebro non exerit, ab eisdem tamen fidelibus per virtutem operum nunquam recedit. Potest etiam lumen illius super terminos terrae ita intelligi, quod praedicatio supernae gratiae dum gentes ad fidem colligit, intra semetipsam mundi limites clausit. 38. Divinae gratiae miraculum in conversione peccatorum in extremis positorum. Vel certe termini terrae. sunt fines hominum peccatorum. Et saepe contingit ut plerique Deum deserant, et vitae suae tempora in desideriis carnalibus expendant; sed tamen superna gratia respecti in extremis suis ad Deum redeunt, quae sint judicia aeterna cognoscunt, cunctaque quae se perverse egisse meminerint, fletibus puniunt, atque haec vere se insequi rectis operibus ostendunt. Quibus subsequente justitia, profecto totum dimittitur quod ante deliquerunt. Hinc enim per prophetiae spiritum Anna dicit: Dominus judicabit fines terrae (I Reg. II, 10), quia nimirum anteactam vitam Deus non judicat, quando posteriora peccatorum respectu supernae pietatis illustrat. Hinc Moyses ait: Primogenita asini mutabis ove (Exod. XIII, 13). Per asinum quippe immunditia, per ovem vero innocentia designatur. Asini ergo primogenita ove mutare, est immundae vitae primordia in innocentiae simplicitatem convertere, ut postquam illa peccator egit, quae ut immunda Dominus respuit, ea jam agendo proferat, quae Dei sacrificio imponat. Quia ergo post prava opera peccator convertitur, et ab actionum suarum tenebris juxta finem aliquando revocatur, recte nunc dicitur: 871 Et lumen illius super terminos terrae. Sed gravi luctu afficit eadem gratia, quae post facinora mentem replet. Nam male gesta ad memoriam reducit, sibique hominem quam sit juste damnandus ostendit. Unde fit ut peccatum omne quod se egisse reminiscitur, quotidianis fletibus insequatur; et quo magis valet jam quod justum est cernere, eo ardentius appetit injustum sese gemitibus punire. Unde apte subjungitur:

CAPUT XIX (Rec XII].

VERS. 4. Post eum rugiet sonitus. 39. Afflante et lucente gratia, poenitentiae gemitus et rugitus audiuntur. Quem enim Dominus illustrando repleverit, ejus vitam proculdubio in lamentum vertit; atque illuminatae menti quo magis aeterna supplicia insinuat, eo hanc durius de transacta nequitia gemitibus fatigat; et dolet homo quod fuit, quia bonum jam incipit videre quod non fuit; odit qualem se fuisse meminit, amat qualem se esse debuisse cognoscit, et solam jam poenitentiae amaritudinem diligit, quia caute considerat in quantis voluptatibus sua delectatione peccavit. Bene ergo dicitur: Post eum rugiet sonitus, quia cum mentem Deus ingreditur, constat proculdubio quod mox poenitentiae gemitus sequatur, ut ei jam salubriter flere libeat, quae prius de iniquitatibus flenda jucunditate gaudebat. [Vet. XVI.] Sed quo uberius culpa fletur, eo altius cognitio veritatis attingitur, quia ad videndum internum lumen polluta dudum conscientia lacrymis baptizata renovatur. Unde post poenitentiae rugitum apte subjungitur:

CAPUT XX [Rec. XIII].

IBID. Tonabit voce magnitudinis suae. 40. Vox Dei torpentem peccatorem excitans, tonitrui similis. Voce enim magnitudinis suae Deus tonat, cum se nobis bene jam per lamenta praeparatis quam sit magnus in supernis insinuat. Quasi enim de coelo tonitrusprocedit cum nos incuria negligentiaque torpentes respectus gratiae pavore subito percutit, atque in terra positi sonum de superioribus audimus, quia terrena cogitantes superni terroris sententiam repente pertimescimus, et mens bene jam de summis sollicita trepidat, quae prius in infimis male secura torpebat. Sed istius visitationis occultae quibus modis se nobis insinuet terror ignoratur; neque ipsius mentis acie comprehenditur, cujus ad melius intentio commutatur. Unde apte subjungitur:

CAPUT XXI.

IBID. Et non investigabitur, cum audita fuerit vox ejus. 41. Quibus modis haec vox se in aures cordis insinuet ignoratur. Vox Domini auditur cum gratiae ejus aspiratio mente concipitur, cum insensibilitas occultae surditatis rumpitur, et cor ad studium summi amoris excitarum virtutis intimae clamore penetratur. Sed istam vocem supervenientis Spiritus, quae se in aures cordis insinuat, nec ipsa mens quae per hanc illustrata fuerit investigat. Pensare enim non valet invisibilis virtus quibus sibi meatibus influat, quibus ad se modis veniat, quibus recedat. Unde et bene per Joannem dicitur: Spiritus ubi vult spirat; et vocem ejus audis, sed nescis unde veniat, et quo vadat (Joan. III, 8). Vocem enim spiritus audire, est vi compunctionis intimae in amorem invisibilis conditoris assurgere. Sed nemo scit unde veniat, quia ignoratur per ora praedicantium quibus se ad nos occasionibus fundat. Et nemo scit quo vadat, quia cum unam praedicationem multi audiunt, intelligi proculdubio 872 non potest quem deserens abjiciat, aut cujus ingrediens in corde requiescat. Una quippe res foris agitur, sed non per hanc uno modo intuentium corda penetrantur, quia qui invisibiliter visibilia modificat, in humanis cordibus causarum semina incomprehensibiliter plantat. Hinc est quod resuscitato Lazaro quidam crediderunt, sed tamen Judaeorum plurimi ad persecutionis zelum ex hac ipsa resuscitatione commoti sunt (Joan. XI, 45). Unum ergo idemque que miraculum quod aliis lumen fidei praebuit, alios per invidiae tenebras a lumine mentis excaecavit. Hinc est quod uterque latro et eamdem et suae morti similem mortem Redemptoris vidit (Luc. XXIII, 39); sed eum superbiendo alter contumeliis lacessere non timuit, quem timendo alter honoravit; atque in una re una utriusque cogitatio non fuit, quia hanc internus arbiter invisibiliter modificando distinxit. Sed hi occultae aspirationis modi, quia comprehendi nostra cogitatione nequeunt, nimirum divinae vocis vestigia nesciuntur. Bene ergo dicitur: Et non investigabitur, cum audita fuerit vox ejus. Unde et adhuc subjungitur:

CAPUT XXII.

VERS. 5. Tonabit Deus voce sua mirabiliter. 42. Mirabiliter sonat Deus, quia silenter et occulta vi coelesti simul cibo reficit. Voce sua Deus mirabiliter tonat, quia occulta vi corda nostra incomprehensibiliter penetrat. Quae dum latentibus motibus premit in timore, et format in amore, quanto ardore sequendus sit aliquo modo silenter clamat, et fit cujusdam impulsionis nimietas in mente, cum nihil sonet in voce. Quae tanto apud nos valentius perstrepit, quanto et ab omni exteriori strepitu aurem nostri surdescere cordis facit. [Vet. XVII.] Unde et anima ad semetipsam mox hoc intimo clamore collecta miratur quod audit, quia vim compunctionis incognitae percipit. Cujus ipsa admiratio bene apud Moysen manna desuper veniente signatur (Exod. XVI, 15). Dulcis enim cibus qui de supernis accipitur manhu vocatur. Manhu enim dicitur Quid est hoc? Et quid est hoc dicimus, quando hoc quod cernimus nescientes admiramur. Supernum igitur manna anima percipit, cum per vocem compunctionis elevata novam speciem internae refectionis obstupescit, ut divina dulcedine repleta jure respondeat, Quid est hoc? quia dum ab infima cogitatione suspenditur, ea quae de supernis conspicit insolite miratur. Et quia cum hac voce torporis nostri surditas rumpitur, vetustae vitae protinus usus mutatur, ut anima superno spiritu afflata, et in summis appetat quae contempserat, et contemnat in infimis quae appetebat, recte subjungitur:

CAPUT XXIII.

IBID. Qui facit magna et inscrutabilia. 43. Mira et stupenda in peccatoris conversione Deus operatur. Ut enim homo terrenis usibus deditus, iniquis desideriis pressus, subito ad nova efferveat, atque ad consueta frigescat, exterioribus curis renuntiet, in internis contemplationibus anhelet, quis hanc virtutem supernae vocis considerare sufficiat? quis considerando comprehendat? Magna sunt quae per vocem suam Dominus facit, sed minus magna essent si perscrutari potuissent. Facit ergo magna et inscrutabilia, quia ostendit foris perfectionem operis, sed latet intus ipsa qualitas operationis. Voce sua foris etiam per apostolos insonat, sed corda audientium per seipsum interius illustrat, 873 Paulo attestante qui ait: Ego plantavi, Apollo rigavit, Deus autem incrementum dedit. Neque qui plantat est aliquid, neque qui rigat, sed qui incrementum dat Deus (I Cor. III, 6). Quamvis ergo nostris mentibus supernae vocis auditum non ipsi praebeant, missi tamen sunt, ut verbis nobis exterioribus condescendant. Unde apte subjungitur.

CAPUT XXIV [Rec. XIV].

VERS. 6. Qui praecipit nivi ut descendat in terram, et hiemis pluviis, et imbri fortitudinis suae. 44. Sancti praedicatores quorum conversatio in coelis est, infirmis tamen fratribus condescendunt. Quia Psalmista ait: Lavabis me, et super nivem dealbabor (Psal. L, 8), quid hoc loco nivem, nisi per lucem justitiae candida accipimus corda sanctorum? Aquae autem ductae in superioribus constipantur, ut nives fiant. Sed cum hae ipsae nives ad terram veniunt, in aquarum iterum liquorum vertuntur. Aquae igitur sunt praedicatorum mentes: quae dum ad contemplanda superna se erigunt, altiori intellectu solidantur. Cumque in summa consideratione rapiuntur, virtutem confirmationis accipiunt. Sed quia adhuc in terris fraterna dilectione retinentur, semetipsas ab alto intellectu modificant, et infirmis humiliter praedicantes more nivium corda arentia liquatae rigant. Nives ergo ad terram de coelestibus veniunt, cum sublimia corda sanctorum quae jam solida contemplatione pascuntur pro fraterna charitate ad humilia praedicationis verba descendunt. [Vet. XVIII.] Sicut enim nix terram cum jacet operit, cum vero liquatur rigat, ita sanctorum virtus et per firmitatem suam apud Deum vitam peccatorum protegit, et per condescensionem suam quasi liquefacta arentem terram ut fructus proferat infundit. Et quia aqua prius ab infimis trahitur, ut post a superioribus sparsa reddatur, sancti quique etiam cum in virtutum arce consistunt, unde elevati sunt considerant, ne alienae infirmitatis abjecta contemnant. Quasi ergo aquae ad terras de quibus sublevatae sunt redeunt, dum condescendentes justi peccatoribus reminisci non desinunt quod fuerunt. Certe aqua in terris adhuc Paulus fuerat, cum legem carnaliter sapiebat; sed ductus ad coelestia, in nivem versus est; quia quod prius infirmum sapuit ad soliditatem verae intelligentiae commutavit; et tamen condescendens fratribus quasi nix ima repetiit, quia et post virtutum culmina quam fuerit indignus agnoscit, dicens: Qui prius fui blasphemus et persecutor (I Tim. I, 13), etc. Ecce quam clementer suae imbecillitatis reminiscitur, ut aliorum aequanimiter infirma patiatur. Quasi enim ad terram de qua sumpta fuerat post coelum aqua rediit, dum post tanta suae contemplationis arcana peccatorem se Paulus meminit, ut prodesse humiliter peccatoribus possit. Videamus itaque aqua haec in nivis soliditatem vertenda qualiter trahatur ad summa. Ait: Sive mente excedimus, Deo (II Cor. V, 13). Videamus qualiter ad ima nix redeat, ut dum liquatur infundat. Ait: Sive sobrii sumus, vobis (Ibid.). Videamus qua manu ducitur, ut et jacens elevari valeat, et sublevata revocari. Ait: Charitas enim Christi urget nos (Ibid., 14). Quia igitur charitas Christi, quae sanctorum mentes ad superna sublevat, eas pio moderamine pro fraterna dilectione etiam ad humilitatem condescensionis format, recte dicitur: Qui praecipit nivi ut descendat in terram. Ubi et apte subjungitur: Et hiemis pluviis 874 et imbri fortitudinis suae. 45. Hiems est vita praesens, in qua sanctorum praedicatorum abundant pluviae. Hiems quippe est vita praesens, in qua nos etsi jam spes ad superna erigit, adhuc tamen mortalitatis nostrae frigidus torpor astringit, quia scriptum est: Corpus quod corrumpitur aggravat animam, et deprimit terrena habitatio sensum multa cogitantem (Sap. IX, 15). Habet autem haec hiems pluvias, rectorum procul dubio praedicationes. De quibus videlicet pluviis per Moysen dicitur: Exspectetur sicut pluvia eloquium meum, et descendant sicut ros verba mea (Deut. XXXII, 2). Hae nimirum pluviae hiemi congruunt, aestate cessabunt, quia cum nunc carnalium oculis vita coelestis absconditur, necesse est ut sanctorum nobis praedicationibus irroretur. Cum vero aeterni judicii aestus incanduerit, nullus verba praedicantium necessaria tunc habebit, quia, veniente judice, ad cor suum quisque reducitur, ut sancta jam cum agere non valet sentiat, et rectum quod sequi debuit ex tortitudinis suae poena cognoscat. Unde bene per prophetam dicitur: Congrega eos quasi gregem ad victimam, et sanctifica eos in die occisionis (Jerem. XII, 3). In die enim occisionis sanctificantur reprobi, quia tunc sancta quae debuerunt agere sentiunt, cum digna pravitatis suae supplicia jam declinare non possunt.

Quia autem praedicationes sanctae cum vita praesenti, id est pluviae cum hieme cessabunt, recte exeunti animae, atque ad aeternae felicitatis aestiva properanti, sponsi voce suadentis dicitur: Surge, propera, amica mea, formosa mea, et veni; jam enim hiems transiit, imber abiit et recessit (Cant. II, 10). Transeunte quippe hieme, imber recedit, quia cum vita praesens peragitur, in qua nos ignorantiae nubilo carnis corruptibilis torpor astrinxerat, omne ministerium praedicationis cessat. Clarius quippe per nos tunc videbimus hoc quod sanctorum vocibus nunc obscurius audimus. Praecipit igitur Dominus nivi, et hiemis pluviis, ut in terram descendant, dum aspiratione sancti spiritus pro corrigendis peccatoribus corda sanctorum ad ministerium praedicationis humiliat. Ubi recte additur: Et imbri fortitudinis suae. [Rec. XV.] 46. Imber fortitudinis, praedicatio divinitatis; imber infirmitatis, praedicatio humanitatis Christi. Imber quippe fortitudinis Dei est praedicatio divinitatis. Nam imber infirmitatis est praedicatio ejus incarnationis, de qua per Paulum dicitur: Quod infirmum est Dei, fortius est hominibus (I Cor. I, 25). Et rursum: Si crucifixus est ex infirmitate, sed vivit ex virtute Dei (II Cor. XIII, 4). Sic autem sancti viri humanitatis ejus infirma praedicant, ut auditorum suorum cordibus etiam divinitatis fortia infundant. Audiamus per tonitruum nubis, imbrem fortitudinis: In principio erat Verbum, et Verbum erat apud Deum, et Deus erat Verbum (Joan. I, 1). Audiamus etiam imbrem infirmitatis: Verbum caro factum est, et habitavit in nobis (Ibid., 14). Audiamus imbrem fortitudinis: Omnia per ipsum facta sunt, et sine ipso factum est nihil. Quod factum est, in ipso vita erat (Ibid., 3). Audiamus etiam imbrem infirmitatis: In propria venit, et sui eum non receperunt (Ibid., 11). Imbri ergo fortitudinis suae praecipit ut in terram descendat, quia sanctorum suorum vocibus sic nobis humanitatis suae infirma praedicat, ut nobis etiam mira et fortia suae divinitatis innotescat. Sed cum virtutem nostri conditoris audimus, statim ad corda nostra formidine compellente reducimur, et tantum super nos judicem perpendentes, 875 quae digne, quaeve egimus indigne, pensamus. Unde et bene subjungitur:

CAPUT XXV [Rec. XVI].

VERS. 7. Qui in manu omnium hominum signat, ut noverint singuli opera sua. 47. Cognoscendo Deum nosmet agnoscimus, et severius judicamus. Mala enim quae agunt homines, pensare contemnunt. Sed cum virtutem supernae districtionis audiunt, pravorum operum hoc quod se deprimit pondus agnoscunt. Praedicationis quippe verbis pulsati evigilant, ut pensent ad quae supplicia sese antiquae actionis meritum trahat. Dum ergo imber fortitudinis in terram descendit, in manu uniuscujusque signatur, ut sua opera sciat, quia dum virtus incomprehensibilis majestatis agnoscitur, ab unoquoque subtilius sua vita pensatur 48. Naturali lumine, tanquam lege mentis, pravum et rectum innotescunt. Quod tamen intelligi et aliter potest. Creator namque omnipotens a cunctis insensibilibus irrationabilibusque distinctum rationabilem creaturam hominem condidit, quatenus quod egerit ignorare non possit. Naturae enim lege scire compellitur, seu pravum sive rectum sit quod operatur. Nam ad judicium pro actione cur venit, si potuit nescire quod egit? Et ipsi ergo qui praeceptis dominicis erudiri contemnunt, utrum bona an mala sint quae faciunt sciunt. Nam si bona se facere nesciunt, cur de aliquibus factis in ostentatione gloriantur? Rursum si mala se agere ignorant, cur in eisdem factis alienos oculos declinant? Ipsi enim sibi testes sunt, quia sciunt malum esse quod agunt, quod videri ab aliis verentur. Si enim veraciter malum esse non crederent, nequaquam hoc ab aliis videri formidarent. Unde et bene per quemdam sapientem dicitur: Cum sit timida nequitia, dat testimonium condemnationi (Sap. XVII, 10). Quia dum de facto suo conscientiam pulsans timor redarguit, ipsa sibi testimonium perhibet damnabile esse quod agit. Quo contra per Joannem dicitur: Si cor nostrum non reprehenderit nos, fiduciam habemus apud

Deum (I Joan. III, 21). Fugiant ergo iniqui humanos oculos, semetipsos certe fugere non possunt. Quia enim malum quod faciunt noverunt, habent testem conscientiam, habent judicem rationem suam. In peccato igitur quod committunt prius contra se judicium suae rationis inveniunt, et post ad districtionem aeterni examinis perducuntur. Et hoc est fortasse quod per Psalmistam dicitur: Abyssus abyssum invocat in voce cataractarum tuarum (Psal. XLI, 8). Quia dum miro ordine dispositionis occultae malum non permittitur nesciri quod agitur, et suo se jam judicio peccator in conscientia condemnat, et post condemnationem propriam ad aeterni judicis sententiam properat. Abyssum ergo abyssum invocare est de judicio ad judicium pervenire. Eant ergo praedicatores sancti, redarguant facta peccantium, auditores autem pravi contemnant verba justorum, defendant quantum voluerint pravitates suas, atque impudenter gestas impudentius defendendo multiplicent: certe ipsi sibi in conscientia testes sunt quia excusabiles non sunt. Eo enim ipso quo rationabilem creaturam Deus hominem condidit, in manu omnium hominum signat, ut noverint singuli opera sua. 876 Sed quia Eliu de pravitate singulorum sententiam protulit, illico ad ipsum pravitatis auctorem, per quem unumquodque malum oboritur, mentis oculos deflectit, ut quia uno hoc versu pravi capitis membra perstrinxerat, etiam hoc ipsum membrorum caput sub brevitate describat. Vel certe quia superius (Num. XIX), nubium Dei virtutes intulerat, agit nunc ut contra bonorum vitam etiam adversarii impugnationes innotescat. Nam sequitur:

CAPUT XXVI [Vet.

XIX, Rec. XVII]. VERS. 8. Ingredietur bestia latibulum suum, et in antro suo morabitur. 49. Diaboli antrum Antichristus, et reprobi omnes. Quis alius nomine bestiae, nisi antiquus hostis accipitur, qui deceptionem primi hominis saevus impetiit, et integritatem vitae illius male suadendo laniavit? Contra quem prophetae vocibus de sancta electorum Ecclesia in antiquum statum restauranda promittitur: Et mala bestia non transibit per eam (Isai. XXXV, 9). Sed haec bestia cum post Redemptoris adventum, post praedicatorum voces, quasi post tonitruum nubium in fine mundi illum damnatum hominem qui Antichristus vocatur invaserit, quid aliud quam latibulum suum ingreditur, ut in antro proprio demoretur? Vas quippe illud diaboli antrum ac latibulum bestiae est, ut insidians hominibus viam hujus vitae carpentibus, in illo et per signa lateat, et per malitiam occidat. Qui tamen omnium reproborum corda etiam nunc priusquam apertus appareat possidet, eaque per occultam malitiam quasi proprium antrum tenet, atque ad omne quod nocere bonis appetit in eorum se obscuris mentibus abscondit. An Judaeorum persequentium corda antrum hujus bestiae non fuerunt, in quorum diu consiliis latuit, sed repente vocibus erupit clamantium: Crucifige, crucifige (Joan. XIX, 6)? Et quia ad lacerationem mentis pertingere tentando non potuit in Redemptore nostro (Matth. IV, 3), ad mortem carnis anhelavit. Haec nimirum bestia multa electorum corda tenuit, sed hanc ab illis moriens Agnus excussit. Unde et in Evangelio dicit: Nunc princeps hujus mundi ejicietur foras (Joan. XII, 31). Qui miro rectoque judicio dum confessiones humilium illuminans suscepit, superborum oculos deserens clausit. Unde ei per Psalmistam dicitur: Posuisti tenebras, et facta est nox, in ipsa pertransibunt omnes bestiae silvarum; catuli leonum rugientes ut rapiant, et quaerant a Deo escam sibi (Psal. CIII, 20, 21). Tenebras quippe Dominus ponit, cum peccatis judicia rependens, lumen suae intelligentiae subtrahit. Et nox efficitur, quia pravorum mens ignorantiae suae erroribus caecatur. In qua omnes bestiae silvae pertranseunt, dum maligni spiritus sub opacitate fraudis latentes in reproborum corda pravitates suas explendo percurrunt. In qua et catuli leonum rugiunt, quia nequissimarum sed tamen eminentium potestatum ministri spiritus importunis tentationibus insurgunt. Qui tamen a Deo escam expetunt, quia nimirum capere animas nequeunt, nisi justo judicio praevalere divinitus permittantur. Ubi et apte subjungitur: Ortus est sol, et congregati sunt, et in cubilibus suis se collocaverunt (Psal. CIII, 20). Quia veritatis lumine per carnem apparente, a fidelium mentibus excussi, quasi ad cubilia sua reversi sunt, dum sola infidelium corda tenuerunt. 877 Quod igitur illic leonum cubile, hic antrum bestiae dicitur. 50. Bonorum mentes diabolus aliquando ingreditur, sed in eis non moratur. Notandum vero magnopere aestimo quod bestia haec non solum antrum suum ingredi, sed in eo etiam morari perhibetur. Aliquando namque etiam bonorum mentes ingreditur, illicita suggerit, tentationibus fatigat, rectitudinem spiritus ad delectationem carnis deflectere conatur, delectationem quoque ad consensum perducere nititur, sed tamen resistente superno adjutorio praevalere prohibetur. Intrare ergo in mentes bonorum potest, sed in eis morari non potest, quia cor justi hujus bestiae antrum non est. Quos enim quasi proprium antrum possidet, eorum mentes procul dubio immorans tenet, quia et prius in eis cogitationes usque ad iniqua desideria et post iniqua desideria usque ad nequissima opera perducit. Neque enim student reprobi suggestiones ejus recta judicii manu repellere, cujus voluntatibus appetunt subdita delectatione servire. Cumque in eorum cordibus pravum quid oritur, mox per studium delectationis enutritur; et cum sibi minime resistitur, protinus ex consensu roboratur, statimque consensus ad opus perducitur, opus vero etiam consuetudine gravatur. Recte ergo in antro suo morari haec bestia dicitur, quae tandiu cogitationes reproborum tenet, quousque eorum vitam etiam aculeo pravi operis perforet. Unde bene ad Judaeam Dominus per prophetam dicit: Quousque morabuntur in te cogitationes noxiae (Jerem. IV, 14)? Neque enim reprehendit cur veniant, sed cur morentur. Et in bona enim corda cogitationes illicitae veniunt, sed tamen morari prohibentur, quia recti quique ne captivandam domum conscientiae praebeant, ab ipso cordis limine hostem fugant. Qui et si quando repentinis suggestionibus usque ad primum vestibulum subripuerit, ad consensus tamen januam non pertingit. Huic nimirum bestiae, impulsu subitae formidinis victus, januam cordis Petrus negando aperuit, sed citius cognoscendo restitit, flendo clausit (Matth. XXVI, 70). [Vet. XX.] Quia vero antiquus hostis persecutorum corda non solum intrando tenuit, sed etiam tenendo possedit, dicatur recte: Ingredietur bestia latibulum suum, et in antro suo morabitur. Quantum namque in Judaeorum mentibus demorata sit discimus, cum illorum consilia attestatione evangelicae narrationis audimus. In illa namque describitur, cum Redemptorem nostrum vivificare mortuos cernerent, in mortem ejus quanta anxietate crudelitatis insanirent, quot explere contra illum prava desideria ardenter vellent, sed tamen populum timerent (Joan. XI, 24, 49); quot occasiones occidendi quaererent, et invenire non possent (Matth. XXVI, 3, 4); quot ad votum suae saevitiae alienigenarum manibus usi sunt, quia eum quem legaliter interimere ipsi non poterant feriendum gentibus tradiderunt, ut ex sola potestate Romanus praeses ageret quod ex sola malitia ut agi debuisset ipsi anhelarent (Joan. XVIII, 28). Unde et apte subjungitur.

CAPUT XXVII [Rec. XVIII].

VERS. 9. Ab interioribus egredietur tempestas, et ab Arcturo frigus. 51. Christus a Judaeis et gentilibus persecutionem passus. Scriptura sacra cum contra Arcturum interiora memorat, diversam Aquilonis partibus Austri plagam designat. Unde in hoc eodem libro scribitur: Qui facit Arcturum, et Orionas, et interiora 878 Austri (Job. IX, 9). Quia igitur interiora Austri sol ferventior tenet, in Arcturo vero cursum omnimodo non habet, interiorum nomine plebs Judaica, Arcturi autem vocabulo hoc in loco populus gentilis exprimitur. Hi enim qui unum atque invisibilem Deum noverant, ejusdemque legi saltem carnaliter serviebant, quasi sub meridiano sole ferventes in fidei calore tenebantur. Gentiles autem quia nullam scientiam supernae cognitionis attigerant, velut sine sole frigidi sub Aquilone remanebant. Quia vero tempestas impellit, frigus autem torpore opprimit, recte nunc dicitur: Ab interioribus egredietur tempestas, et ab Arcturo frigus. Ac si aperte diceretur: A Judaeis surgit malitia persequens, et a gentilibus potestas premens. Neque enim miracula fieri legis praecepta vetuerant, et tamen Judaei pro eisdem miraculis interimere humani generis Redemptorem quaerebant (Joan. XI, 48). Unde explere hoc quod coeperant non valentes, ad Pilati praetorium concurrerunt, ut ipse hunc perimeret quem injuste perimentem lex nulla cohiberet (Joan. XVIII, 28). Ab interioribus ergo tempestas atque ab Arcturo frigus prodiit, dum quod Judaea ex invidia petiit, hoc gentilis judex ex Romana auctoritate perpetravit. Unde bene contra hanc eamdem invidiam adhuc subditur:

CAPUT XXVIII [Vet. XXI].

VERS. 10. Flante Deo concrescit gelu. 52. Judaeorum corda invidiae gelu obduruerant. Quia quo fidelium cordibus Spiritus sanctus aspiravit, quo majora virtutum miracula contulit, eo in infidelium mentibus gravioribus invidiae torpor excrevit, atque inde contra Deum plebs infidelis obduruit, unde humilis populus anteactam duritiam, qua se astrinxerat emollivit. Deo enim flante in gelu versi fuerant, qui visis miraculis invidentes dicebant: Ecce totus mundus post eum abiit (Joan. XII, 19). Conspiciebant signa, cernebant per ministros ejus miracula, totum jam mundum secuturum fidei praedicamenta praevidebant; et tamen quo sanctus Spiritus mundum repleverat (Sap. I, 7), eo illorum mentes arctius invidiae malitia ligabat. Aqua ergo in gelu versa fuerat dum, eunte post Deum mundo, Judaea in invidia pigra remanebat. Sed quia supernae potestati suppetiit etiam tantae crudelitatis duritiam solvere atque ad amandum se corda infidelium liquare, post hoc gelu mox bene subditur:

CAPUT XXIX.

IBID. Et rursum latissimae funduntur aquae. 53. Quorumdam postea emollita, et in pluviam liquata. Post gelu quippe Dominus latissimas aquas fudit, quia postquam Judaeorum saevitiam usque ad mortem pertulit, eorum corda protinus ab infidelitatis duritia amoris sui aspiratione liquefecit; ut tanto post desiderabilius ad obediendum currerent, quanto praeceptis illius prius obstinatius restitissent. Unde bene per quemdam sapientem dicitur: Sicut glacies in sereno, sic resolventur peccata tua (Eccli. III, 17). Ab hoc frigidi torporis gelu solvi Propheta desideraverat, cum dicebat: Converte, Domine, captivitatem nostram, sicut torrens in Austro (Psal. CXXV, 4). De his aquis, id est ad Deum concurrentibus populis, rursum dicitur: Mittet verbum suum, et liquefaciet ea, flabit spiritus ejus, et fluent aquae (Psal. CXLVII, 18). Aquae de gelu currunt, quia plerique ex duris persecutoribus magni praedicatores fiunt. Gelu igitur in aqua liquatur, cum torpor interni frigoris ad irrigationem 879 vertitur praedicationis. An Paulus gelu non erat, qui acceptis epistolis Damascum pergens (Act. IX, 2), in corde fidelium quasi in terra jactata verbi Dei semina, ne ad perfectionem operum surgerent, restringere quaerebat? Sed gelu hoc in aquam rediit, quia quos persequendo prius premere studuit, hos postmodum fluentis sanctae exhortationis infudit; ut tanto uberior electorum messis exsurgeret, quanto hanc imber Dei etiam ab ore persecutoris irrigaret. Unde et bene subditur

CAPUT XXX [Vet.

XXII, Rec. XIX]. VERS. 11. Frumentum desiderat nubes. 54. Electi frumentum sunt, cui Verbi divini imber necessarius. Quid enim electi quique sunt, nisi frumenta Dei coelestibus horreis recondenda? Quae nunc in tritura areae paleas tolerant, quia in hac purgatione sanctae Ecclesiae mores contrarios reproborum portant, quousque haec internus agricola ventilabro judicii dirimat, et in superna habitacula electos suos, quasi munda jam grana suscipiens, aeternis paleas ignibus tradat. Unde bene per Joannem dicitur: Cujus ventilabrum in manu sua, et permundabit aream suam, et congregabit triticum in horreum suum, paleas autem comburet igni inexstinguibili (Matth. III, 12). Sed hoc frumentum quousque ad perfectionem fructuum veniat, nubium pluvias exspectat ut crescat, quia bonorum mens praedicantium verbis infunditur, ne ab humore charitatis desideriorum carnalium sole siccetur. Hoc frumentum supernus agricola in mundo surgere ac nubes desiderare conspexerat, cum dicebat: Messis quidem multa, operarii autem pauci. Rogate autem Dominum messis, ut mittat operarios in messem suam (Matth. IX, 37). Qui igitur hic frumentum, illic messis, qui vero hic nubes, illic operarii vocantur, quia praedicatores sancti et nubes sunt, et operarii; nubes videlicet per doctrinam, operarii per vitam; nubes quia verbis influunt, operarii quia non desinunt agere quod loquuntur. Unde et subditur;

CAPUT XXXI.

IBID., 6. Et nubes spargunt lumen suum. 55. Nubes sunt sancti praedicatores.Nubes enim lumen spargere est praedicatores sanctos exempla vitae et loquendo et agendo dilatare. Sed quamvis annuntiationis intimae lumen spargant, non tamen ad convertenda omnium quae appetunt corda perveniunt. Nam sequitur:

CAPUT XXXII.

VERS. 12. Quae lustrant cuncta per circuitum, quocunque eas voluntas gubernantis duxerit. 56. Universa lustrant, Deo eorum cursus gubernante. Saepe enim praedicatores sancti exhortari quosdam volunt, sed nequeunt. Saepe quosdam declinare appetunt, sed tamen internae instigationis impulsu exhortari eos instantissime compelluntur. Videamus nubem Dei quomodo gubernantis manu, et ad ea quae non appetit, ducitur, atque ab impulsu suo iterum gubernantis manu retinetur. Certe Paulus cum vestimenta sua excutiens a Corinthiis discedere vellet, audivit: Noli timere, sed loquere, et ne taceas, propter quod ego tecum sum, et nemo opponetur tibi ut noceat te, quoniam multus est mihi populus in hac civitate (Act. XVIII, 9). Rursum cum ad Thessalonicenses voluisset ire, retentus est, dicens: Volui venire ad vos ego quidem Paulus, et semel et iterum, sed impedivit me Satanas (I Thess. II, 18). Neque enim per semetipsum Satan praepedire tanti apostoli vias potuit, sed occultae dispensationis usibus, 880 dum adversatur, nesciens deservivit; ut nimirum Paulus dum ad alios vellet accedere, nec valeret, eis a quibus recedere non poterat aptius prodesset. Nubes igitur Dei cuncta per circuitum lustrant, quia praedicationis luce mundi fines illuminant. Sed quia divinis nutibus subditae nequeunt explere quod volunt, ire non possunt, nisi quo eas voluntas gubernantis duxerit. Unde et adhuc subjungitur:

CAPUT XXXIII.

IBID. Ad omne quod praeceperit eis super faciem orbis terrae. 57. Et internos motus moderante. Saepe enim cum gubernantis voluntate perducuntur; aliter agere appetunt, sed aliter disponuntur. Nam plerumque quosdam auditores suos student blande corrigere, et tamen eorum sermo in asperitatem ducitur. Plerumque quosdam resecare aspere appetunt, sed tamen eorum vigor per mansuetudinis spiritum refrenatur. Sicut ergo non possunt ire quo volunt, ita etiam nequeunt agere sicut volunt. Quia enim eos internus arbiter tenet cum mittit, ita illos etiam modificans suscipit cum perducit, ut aliquando in cogitatione alia disponant, sed alia in opere peragant; aliquando aliter inchoent, sed aliter consumment. Quia igitur juxta hoc quod sibi praecipitur serviunt, dicatur recte: Quocunque eas voluntas gubernantis duxerit, ad omne quod praeceperit illis super faciem orbis terrae. Eo enim apertiorem viam praedicationis inveniunt, quo ad hanc non suis, sed praeceptoris sui nutibus ducuntur. Unde adhuc subditur:

CAPUT XXXIV [Rec. XX].

VERS. 13. Sive in una tribu, sive in terra sua, sive in quocunque loco misericordiae suae eas jusserit inveniri. 58. Non Judaeis tantum, sed etiam gentilibus concessa Evangelii praedicatio. Una tribus profecto Juda intelligitur, quae in Scriptura sacra clara ac multiplex prae caeteris memoratur. Quae in hoc quod ex se Redemptoris nostri carnem protulit, speciale prae omnibus munus accepit. Terra autem Dei simul omnis Judaea nominatur, quia quae tunc ei fidei suae fructum protulit, cum totus sub idolorum cultu delapsis gentibus mundus erravit. Locus autem misericordiae Dei est ipsa gentilitas, cujus culpas districtus judex si juste animadverteret, ad reconciliationem gratiae nunquam veniret. Quae cum nulla apud Deum merita habuit, reconciliationis tamen gratiam ex sola misericordia accepit. Unde bene per Paulum dicitur: Gentes autem super misericordia honorare Deum (Rom. XV, 9). Unde rursus scriptum est: Qui quondam non consecuti misericordiam, nunc autem misericordiam consecuti (I Pet. II, 10). Nubes ergo suas Deus ducit, sive in una tribu, sive in terra sua, seu in quocunque loco misericordiae suae eas jusserit inveniri, quia praedicatores Veteris Novique Testamenti aliquando soli tribui Judae contulit, et Israel pene totum ex prava regum gubernatione reprobavit. Aliquando et in terra sua has pluere nubes facit, quia eumdem Israeliticum populum ad antiquam gratiam post correptionem captivitatemque revocavit. Aliquando de loco suae misericordiae eas clarescere voluit, quia per praedicatores sanctos etiam gentibus virtutum miracula ostendit, ut sola misericordia a jugo erroris absolveret, quos ingenitae perfidiae ira deprimebat. [Vet. XXIII.] Sed 881 ecce Eliu, quia futura per propheticum spiritum sensit, quia multa sublimiter protulit, vir arrogans elationis suae pondere lassatus non valet portare quae dicit. Nam per jactantiam protinus adjungit:

CAPUT XXXV.

VERS. 14. Ausculta haec, Job; sta, et considera miracula Dei. 59. Quid sit Dei miracula stando, quid jacendo considerare. Quasi in comparatione sui jacentem vidit, quem ad verba tantae praedicationis ut staret admonuit. Quamvis et per hoc quod dicit Ausculta, gravem beato Job contumeliam irrogat, quia, sicut jam de illo et superius diximus (Lib. XII, n. 38, et saepe deinceps), arrogantia minoris est auditum sibi velle extorquere majoris. Sed licet Eliu bona quae dicit nesciat pensare cui dicat, nos qui erudiri ab omnibus quaerimus, indagare verba doctrinae illius subtiliter debemus. Nam magna fortassis virtutis arte dicitur: Sta, et considera miracula Dei. Sunt nonnulli quippe qui Dei miracula jacentes considerant, quia operationis ejus potentiam non sequentes admirantur. Stare quippe est recte agere. Unde et per Paulum dicitur: Qui se existimat stare, videat ne cadat (I Cor. X, 12). Et saepe quidem superna judicia mirantur, praedicamenta coelestis patriae cum audiunt diligunt, mira opera internae dispositionis obstupescunt, sed tamen amando et vivendo ad haec eadem opera assurgere negligunt. Jacentes ergo Dei miracula considerant, qui ejus potentiam sciendo pensant, sed vivendo non amant. Per contemplationem quidem in consideratione oculos tendunt, sed tamen per intentionem sese a terra non erigunt. Unde bene in Balaam exprobrationem dicitur: Qui cadens apertos habet oculos (Num. XXII, 16). Multa namque de adventu Redemptoris dixerat, et quae in novissimis temporibus erant ventura praevidebat, sed tamen ei vivendo assurgere noluit, quem praevidendo praedicavit. Jacens ergo apertos oculos habuit, cum ejus mentem et prophetia ad coelestia tenderet, et avaritia in terra retineret. Jacens apertos oculos habuit, quia eum videre de superioribus potuit, quem prostratus in infimis non amavit. Eliu itaque, qui beatum Job nequaquam credidit vivendo tenuisse quod dixit, quasi admonens dicit: Sta, et considera miracula Dei. Quem adhuc de venturis discutit, et quasi de ignorantia humilians adjungit:

CAPUT XXXVI [Rec. XXI].

IBID. 15. Nunquid scis quando praeceperit Deus pluviis, ut ostenderent lucem nubium ejus? 60. Deo afflati praedicatores irrigant et lucent. Si nubes sancti praedicatores sunt, pluviae nubium sunt verba praedicationum. Sed nubes cum per aera transvolant, nisi pluviae deorsum veniant, nescitur quantam aquarum immensitatem portant. Nisi coruscus sol inter pluvias erumpat, intelligi non valet quid in eis etiam claritatis lateat, quia nimirum praedicatores sancti si taceant, et nequaquam loquentes ostendant, quanta sit coelestis spei claritas, quam in cordibus gestant, aut reliquis hominibus similes, aut longe his despectiores videntur. Cum autem aperire per praedicationem coeperint quae sit supernae patriae remuneratio quam intrinsecus tenent; cum persecutione pressi in qua virtutis arce profecerint innotescunt, cum visione despecti loquendo insinuant unde timeantur, ipsae quae de nubibus influunt pluviae lucem nobis earumdem nubium ostendunt. Per verba enim praedicatorum cognoscimus ut in eis claritatem vitae quam appetunt cum magna humilitate veneremur. 882 Hanc nimirum lucem Paulus discipulis ostendebat, cum diceret: Ut sciatis quae sit spes vocationis ejus, quae divitiae gloriae haereditatis ejus in sanctis, et quae sit supereminens magnitudo virtutis ejus in nos qui credimus (Ephes. I, 18). Hanc lucem Corinthii per scriptorum verba quasi per pluviae guttas agnoverant, cum dicebant: Epistolae graves sunt et fortes, praesentia autem corporis infirma, et sermo contemptibilis (II Cor. X, 10). Sed plerumque praedicatores sancti ostendere semetipsos ut prosint cupiunt, nec tamen possunt; plerumque latere ut quieti sint appetunt, nec tamen permittuntur. Nemo igitur scit quando lucem nubium pluviae ostendant, quia nemo comprehendit quando Deus virtutem praedicationis praebeat, ut praedicantium gloria clarescat. Dicit ergo: Nunquid scis quando praeceperit Deus pluviis ut ostenderent lucem nubium ejus? Ac si aperte dicat: Nunquid si venturos in mundo praedicatores jam conspicis, quando eos ad praedicandum Dominus repletione sancti Spiritus impellat, quibusve modis eorum vitae claritatem mundo innotescat apprehendis? Unde adhuc apte subjungitur.

CAPUT XXXVII [Rec. XIII].

VERS. 16. Nunquid nosti semitas nubium magnas, et perfectas scientias? 61. Arcta bene vivendi doctrina, non est ampla via, sed semita. Habent istae nubes semitas subtilissimas, scilicet sanctae praedicationis vias. Angusta quippe porta est, quae ducit ad vitam (Matth. VII, 14). Eos ergo per semitas astringunt, qui ab intentionis eorum tramite per lata mundi desideria evagando non exeunt. Arcta enim bene vivendi censura non est ampla via, sed semita, in qua praedicator quisque studiose constringitur, quia sub praeceptorum custodia sollicite coangustatur. An non quasi quaedam angustia est itineris, in hoc quidem mundo vivere, sed de hujus mundi concupiscentia nihil habere, aliena non appetere, propria non tenere, laudes mundi despicere, et pro Deo opprobria amare, gloriam fugere, despectum sequi, adulantes despicere, despicientes honorare, mala nocentium ex corde dimittere, et erga eos dilectionis gratiam immobilem in corde retinere? Quae videlicet omnia semitae sunt, sed magnae, quia quanto in praesenti vita pro ipsa vivendi custodia angustae sunt, tanto amplius in aeterna retributione dilatantur. Unde et bene subditur: Et perfectas scientias. 62. Perfecta scientia est, scire se nihil esse. Perfecta quippe scientia est, et cuncta haec sollicite agere, et se de suis meritis scire nihil esse. Unde et ipsae nubes de hac perfecta scientia docentur, cum eis voce Veritatis dicitur: Cum feceritis omnia quae praecepta sunt vobis, dicite: Servi inutiles sumus (Luc. XVII, 10). Perfecta scientia est scire omnia, et tamen juxta quemdam modum scientem se esse nescire, quia etsi jam Dei praecepta novimus, etsi jam virtutem verborum illius sollicita intentione pensamus, etsi jam quae intellexisse nos credimus agimus, adhuc tamen acta eadem qua districtione examinis sint discutienda nescimus, necdum Dei faciem cernimus, necdum occulta ejus consilia videmus. Quanta ergo est nostra scientia, quae quousque mortalitatis pondere premitur, ipso suae incertitudinis nubilo caecatur? De qua bene per Paulum dicitur: Qui se existimat scire aliquid, nondum cognovit quemadmodum oporteat eum scire (I Cor. VIII, 2). In hoc itaque mundo dum vivimus, tum perfecte quae scienda sunt scimus, cum proficientes per intelligentiam, nihil nos 883 perfecte scire cognoscimus. Dicit igitur: Nunquid nosti semitas nubium magnas, et perfectas scientias? Ac si aperte dicat: Nunquid jam summa acta praedicantium conspicis, qui postquam per scientiam ad alta se elevant, deorsum se humiliter per cognitionem suae ignorantiae inclinant? Quod quia solius sancti Spiritus dono agitur, ut humanum cor non solum de scientia, sed etiam de ipsa sua ignorantia perfecte doceatur, et calore amoris ad superna ferveat, dum minora esse quae cognovit in infimis pensat, recte subjungitur:

CAPUT XXXVIII [Rec. XXIII].

VERS. 17. Nonne vestimenta tua calida sunt, cum perflata fuerit terra Austro? 63. Qui Ecclesiae inhaerent, afflatu sancti Spiritus incalescunt. Saepe beatum Job figuram sanctae Ecclesiae tenere jam diximus. Vestimenta vero Ecclesiae sunt omnes qui ei fidei adunatione junguntur. De quibus eidem Ecclesiae per prophetam Dominus dicit: Vivo ego, quia omnibus his velut ornamento vestieris (Isai. XLIX, 18). Per Austrum vero, qui nimirum calidus ventus est, non immerito Spiritus sanctus designatur, quo quisque dum tangitur, ab iniquitatis suae torpore liberatur. Unde bene in Canticis canticorum dicitur: Surge, Aquilo, et veni, Auster, perfla hortum meum, et fluant aromata illius (Cant. IV, 16). Aquilo enim jubetur ut surgat, ut nimirum is qui mortalium corda restringit adversarius spiritus fugiat. Auster enim venit et hortum perflat, ut ejus aromata diffluant, quia per adventum sancti Spiritus, dum mens hominum repletur, ex ea mox opinio virtutum aspergitur, ut jure jam sanctorum lingua quasi hortus Austro perflatus dicat: Christi bonus odor sumus Deo (I Cor. II, 15). Vestimenta ergo sanctae Ecclesiae calida sunt, dum terra Austro perflatur, quia hi qui ei per fidem inhaerent, ferventibus charitatis studiis inardescunt, dum eorum mens sancti Spiritus afflatu perfunditur. Quod quidem et de eodem beato Job nihil obstat intelligi, quia sic haec generaliter in sancta Ecclesia dicimus, ut tamen per membra ejus singula specialiter teneamus. 64. Ex doctorum et auditorum concordia mutua in eis fervet charitas. Unusquisque enim qui recte vivit, atque hoc et alios docere consuevit, quasi tot vestimenta habet, quot auditores ei concorditer inhaerent. [Vet. XXV.] Natura namque vestimentorum est ut per semetipsa calere non possint, sed adjuncta viventi corpori, dum exhalantes membrorum poros contegunt, emanantem ab intimis calorem premunt, quo nimirum calore haec eadem vestimenta calefiunt, sed calefacta calorem quem acceperint retinendo ad corpus reddunt. Quid ergo per vestimenta viventi corpori adhaerentia nisi discipulorum vita magistris bene viventibus conjuncta signatur? Quae quasi per poros calorem accipit, quia ad amorem Dei et exemplo actionis et impulsu exhortationis ignescit. Quae velut frigus proprium expellit, dum a pristina iniquitate discedit; calorem quem accepit retinet, quia in eo quem praedicando sumpserit fervore convalescit. Doctores autem sancti dum auditores suos in amorem Dei proficere sentiunt, ipsi amplius in doctrinae virtute fervescunt; et quia eos ad summa inardescere et fervescere conspiciunt, ad praedicanda bona coelestis patriae validius succenduntur. Qui et si quando pro eo quod adhuc vitam corruptibilem humanae infirmitatis agunt de qualibet culpa saltem tenuiter in opere, in locutione, in cogitatione tentantur, discipulorum suorum profectum conspiciunt, 884 et ipsi vel in minimis esse reprehensibiles erubescunt, ne qua forte exempla tortitudinis praebeant eis quos praedicationis voce ad regulam intimae rectitudinis vocant. Dum ergo verbo doctorum accenduntur auditores, quasi ex viventi corpore vestimenta calefiunt. Sed dum ex profectu auditorum etiam vita docentium proficit, quasi ex calefactis vestimentis calor ad corpus redit. Sed nequaquam sibi doctores tribuant quod per exhortationem suam ad summa proficere auditores vident, quia nisi Spiritus sanctus eorum corda repleat, ad aures corporum vox docentium incassum sonat. Formare enim vocem magistri exterius possunt, sed hanc imprimere interius non possunt: Neque enim qui plantat est aliquid, neque qui rigat, sed qui incrementum dat Deus (I Cor. III, 7). Dicatur ergo: Nonne vestimenta tua calida sunt, cum perflata fuerit terra Austro? Quia nimirum tunc auditores qui jam bene viventibus doctoribus inhaerent calorem superni amoris accipiunt, cum per afflatum sancti Spiritus excitantur, ac si aperte beato Job diceret: Incassum tibi tribuis si quos per te profecisse in virtutibus contemplaris, quia hi quos per te incaluisse aestimas, nisi eos Spiritus sancti fervor attingeret, frigidi in sua insensibilitate remanerent. Postquam vero haec fortiter dixit, per arrogantiam leviter motus, irrisionis illico verba subjungit, dicens:

CAPUT XXXIX [Rec. XXIV].

VERS. 18. Tu forsitan cum eo fabricatus es coelos, qui solidissimi quasi aere fusi sunt. 65. Per coelos quasi aere fusos, sancti angeli, et electorum mentes signantur. Possunt per coelos hi qui in coelestibus sunt conditi angelici spiritus designari. Unde et in oratione nostra dicere voce Veritatis instruimur: Fiat voluntas tua sicut in coelo et in terra. Ut nimirum voluntas Dei, sicut a superiori creatura agitur, ita in omnibus etiam ab humana infirmitate servetur. De quibus bene dicitur: Qui solidissimi quasi aere fusi sunt (Matth. VI, 10). Naturae namque aeris est, rubigine difficile consumi. Et virtutes angelicae quae in divino amore fixae perstiterunt, lapsis superbientibus angelis, hoc in munere retributionis acceperunt, ut nulla jam rubigine subripientis culpae mordeantur, ut in contemplatione conditoris sine felicitatis fine permaneant, et in hoc quod sunt conditae aeterna stabilitate subsistant. Quod bene apud Moysen ipsa de mundi origine historiae verba testantur (Genes. I, 6), cum et prius factum coelum dicitur, et hoc idem postmodum firmamentum vocatur, quia videlicet natura angelica et prius subtilius est in superioribus condita, et post ne unquam potuisset cadere, mirabilius confirmata. Possunt etiam per coelos, ut saepe diximus, electorum mentes exprimi, a cunctis terrenis contagiis intimo amore suspensae. Qui quamvis corpore degant in infimis, quia tamen corde jam inhaerent summis, veraciter dicunt: Nostra conversatio in coelis est (Phil. III, 20). Qui solidissimi ut aere fusi sunt, quia ab integritate coeptae fortitudinis nulla mutabilitatis rubigine consumuntur. Quibus et fortiter contra adversa durantibus, auctoris voce dicitur: Vos estis amici mei, qui permansistis mecum in tentationibus meis. Sed quamvis doctus et arrogans cum irridere sanctum virum nititur, irrisioni suae fortia dicta permisceat, a dictis tamen fortibus semper ad supervacua verba relabitur. Nam iterum deridendo subjungit: VERS. 19. Ostende nobis quid dicamus illi, nos quippe involvimur tenebris. 885 66. Ac si dicat: Tu, qui jam magna intelligentiae luce perfrueris, docere nos qui ignorantiae tenebris involvimur debes. Qui mox ab irrisione resiliens, despiciendo subjungit: VERS. 20. Quis narrabit ei quoe loquor? Ac si aperte dicat: Quae ego ei de suis laudibus acute sentiens non audita loquor, quis haec narrare vel postquam audierit potest? Sed quia cum doctrina et arrogantia in unius mentis habitatione confligit, a loquentis ore non solum sonat vivendi levitas, sed etiam gravitas sentiendi, postquam Eliu per arrogantiam leviter intumuit, dicens: Quis narrabit ei quae loquor? mox per doctrinam subdidit:

CAPUT XL [Vet.

XXVI, Rec. XXV]. IBID. Etiam si locutus fuerit homo, devorabitur. 67. Hominem de Deo loqui, est caecum de lumine disserere. Omne quod aliquid devorat, hoc introrsus trahens, ab intuentium oculis occultat, et rem quae videri in superficie potuit in profundum rapit. Homo igitur cum de Deo tacet, per rationem in qua est conditus esse aliquid videtur. At si loqui de Deo coeperit, illico quam sit nihil ostenditur, quia magnitudinis illius immensitate devoratur, et quasi in profundum raptus absconditur, quia fari ineffabilem cupiens, ipsa suae ignorantiae angustia deglutitur. Loquitur enim caro de spiritu, circumscriptus spiritus de incircumscripto, creatura de creatore, temporalis de aeterno, mutabilis de immutabili, mortalis de vivificante; et cum in tenebris positus internum lumen sicut est nesciat, homo, de aeternitate disserere cupiens, caecus de luce loquitur. Si ergo locutus fuerit homo, devorabitur, quia si effari homo aeternitatem sicut est appetit, etiam hoc sibi subtrahit quod de illa vel tacitus sentit. Sed ecce aeternitas tunc hominibus vere innotuit, cum se eis humanitate suscepta monstravit. Quae quia necdum revelata fuerat, de eisdem hominibus recte subjungitur:

CAPUT XLI.

VERS. 21. At nunc non vident lucem. 68. Per Christum lux hominibus affulsit. De qua nimirum luce etiam per Prophetam dicitur: Populus qui sedebat in tenebris, vidit lucem magnam (Matth. IV, 16; Isai. IX, 2). Sed haec eadem lux qualiter ab hominibus videatur, insinuat, cum protinus subdit: IBID. Subito aer cogetur in nubes. Aer quippe ita ipsa sua tenuitate spargitur, ut nulla firmitate solidetur. Nubes autem tanto firmiores sunt quanto densiores. Quid ergo per aerem nisi mentes saecularium designantur, quae, innumeris hujus vitae desideriis deditae, huc illucque more aeris fluidae disperguntur? Sed aer in nubes cogitur, cum fluxae mentes per superni respectus gratiam virtutis soliditate roborantur, ut intra sinum cordis recta sentiendo se colligant, et in vanis cogitationibus non liquescant. 69. Petrus et caeteri apostoli per gratiam in nubes solidati. Aer Petrus fuerat, cum per terrena desideria sparsus, eum quasi aura transiens pro vita carnis cura piscationis agitabat (Matth. IV, 18). Aer etiam apostoli omnes exstiterant, qui jam per legem alta didicerant, sed necdum per fidem firma sapiebant (Ibid.). Subito autem aer in nubes coactus est, quia per respectum supernae gratiae fluxa corda piscantium in soliditatem versa sunt praedicatorum, ut eorum infirmae cogitationes fortia sentiendo densescerent, ac more nubium aquas scientiae caperent, et subter jacentem terram verbis praedicationis irrigarent, quo peracto ministerio, ad coeli secreta recurrerent, atque ad aeternam requiem finito labore pervenirent. Unde 886 et bene mox subditur:

CAPUT XLII.

IBID. Et ventus transiens fugabit eas. 70. Irrigato praedicatione Evangelii mundo, nubes illae a nostris oculis fugatae. Ventus quippe transiens est vita praesens. Ventus ergo transiens nubes fugat, quia mortalis vita percurrens praedicatores sanctos a nostris oculis corporaliter occultat. Ventus transiens nubes fugat, quia vitae temporalis excursus a carne apostolos subtrahit, et eos a terrae superficie in secreta requie quasi in coelorum cardine abscondit. Sed quia usque ad mortem praedicare non desinunt, et praesentis vitae spatium more nubium cum verborum pluvia excurrunt, quid eorum laboribus in sancta Ecclesia agatur adjungit, cum protinus subdit:

CAPUT XLIII [Rec. XXVI].

VERS. 22. Ab Aquilone aurum veniet. 71. A gentilibus Christiana religio potissimum propagata. Quid per Aquilonem, nisi peccati frigore constricta gentilitas designatur? quam ille sub jugo suae tyrannidis tenuit qui superbiens dixit: Sedebo in monte testamenti, in lateribus Aquilonis, ascendam super altitudinem nubium, similis ero Altissimo (Isai. XIV, 13, 14). Quid vero auri nomine, nisi animae fideles exprimuntur? De quibus per

Jeremiam dicitur: Quomodo obscuratum est aurum, mutatus est color optimus (Thren. IV, 1)? Aurum quippe obscuratum doluit, quia in quibusdam claritatem innocentiae versam in culpae nigredinem vidit. Ab Aquilone ergo aurum venire dicitur, quia per respectum gratiae Redemptoris a gentilitate dudum perfidiae torpore frigida intra sanctam Ecclesiam pretiosa Deo vita fidelium multiplicatur. Ab Aquilone etenim aurum venit cum ab ipsis idolorum cultoribus vera in Domino fides clarescit. Sed conversis ad fidem gentibus, Judaea contradicit, et ad praemiorum retributionem coelestium dedignatur suscipere eos qui dudum fuerant cultores idolorum. Unde post conversionem gentium Petro dicitur: Quare introisti ad viros praeputium habentes, et comedisti cum eis (Act. XI, 3)? Quo contra recte per Isaiam Dominus dicit: Dicam Aquiloni: Da; et Austro: Noli prohibere (Isai. XLIII, 6). Sicut enim per Aquilonem gentilitas, sic per Austrum Judaea signatur, quae quasi meridiano sole incaluit, quia, Redemptore in carne apparente, fervorem fidei prima suscepit. Aquiloni ergo da dicitur cum offerre Deo suae fidei munera gentilitas imperatur. Austro autem jubetur ne prohibeat, quia Hebraeis in fide consistentibus praecipitur ne vitam gentium repellendo condemnent. Unde hic quoque quia dictum est: Ad Aquilone aurum veniet, apte subjungitur: IBID. Et a Deo formidolosa laudatio. 72. De gentium conversione apostoli et alii ex circumcisione fideles Deum laudaverunt. Sic enim formidolosa laudatio a Deo venire dicitur, ac si ab his qui in parte Dei sunt id est a fidelibus venire diceretur. Auro igitur ab Aquilone veniente, a Deo formidolosa laudatio prodiit, quia dum claritatem suae fidei gentilitas obtulit, multitudo Hebraeorum fidelium divina judicia pertimescendo laudavit. Sed quomodo ab Aquilone veniat aurum, quomodo ab his qui sub Deo sunt formidolosa laudatio erumpat, ipsa nobis historia sacri eloquii ostendit. Scriptum quippe est: Cornelius centurio cohortis quae dicitur Italica, religiosus et timens Deum, cum omni domo sua, faciens eleemosynas multas plebi, et deprecans

Deum semper, vidit in visu manifeste, quasi hora diei nona, angelum Dei introeuntem ad se, et dicentem sibi: Corneli. At ille intuens eum, timore correptus dixit: Quis 887 es, Domine? Dixit autem illi: Orationes tuae et eleemosynae tuae ascenderunt in memoriam in conspectu Dei (Act. X, 1 seq.). Aurum ergo ab Aquilone venit, dum in conspectu Dei ex gentibus cum eleemosynis oratio ascendit. Quod cum Petrus fratribus retulisset (Ibid., 12), quomodo vel Cornelius angelum, vel ipse de coelo submitti ad se linteum cum bestiis reptilibus ac volatilibus vidisset, vel quomodo Spiritus sanctus etiam ante baptisma gentilium corda perfuderit, qui nunquam in Judaeorum mentibus nisi post aquam baptismatis venit, protinus scriptum est: His auditis tacuerunt, et glorificaverunt Deum, dicentes: Ergo et gentibus Deus poenitentiam ad vitam dedit (Act. XI, 18). Multitudo ergo fidelium formidolosam Deo laudem obtulit, quae, salvatis gentibus, a suo se murmure, dona coelestis gratiae admirando, compressit. Unde ipse quoque Petrus miratur, dicens: In veritate comperi quod non est personarum acceptor Deus (Act. X, 34). 73. Et de Judaeorum reprobatione timuerunt. Sed cum gentes fidem suscipiunt, cur ab eis qui jam fideles sunt formidolosa venire laudatio dicitur, cum laeta venire potius quam formidolosa debuisset? Sed idcirco conversis gentibus, ab Hebraeis jam fidelibus formidolosa laudatio prodiit, quia nimirum juste Judaea repulsa est, dum pie est gentilitas vocata; et damna suae repulsionis timuit, dum lucra alienae vocationis vidit. Unde nos quoque quotidie, dum iniquos quosque ad inopinatam vitae celsitudinem provehi repente conspicimus, sub occultis Dei judiciis timendo gaudemus, ne per occulta judicia quosdam Deus qui digni putantur deserat, qui per haec ad se eos qui indigni aestimantur vocat. Sequitur:

CAPUT XLV.

VERS. 23. Digne eum invenire non possumus. 74. De Deo qui magnus est fortitudine, judicio et justitia, digne sentire non possumus. Et si invenire jam eum possimus, non tamen digne, quia quidquid in illo sentimus ex fide est, et non ex specie. Hoc tamen quod jam se invenisse considerat adjungit, dicens: IBID. Magnus fortitudine et judicio et justitia, et enarrari non potest. Magnus quippe est fortitudine, quia fortem adversarium superat, et de domo illius vasa contumeliae auferens in misericordiae vasa permutat. Magnus judicio, quia etsi hic electos suos per adversa deprimit, eos quandoque in gloria aeternae prosperitatis extollit. Magnus justitia, quia etsi hic diu tolerat, quandoque tamen reprobos sine termino damnat. Bene autem subditur: Et enarrari non potest. Qui enim sentiri digne non valet, quanto minus dici? Sed melius hunc utcunque dicimus, si sub considerationis ejus formidine admirando taceamus. Sequitur:

CAPUT XLVI [Rec. XXVII].

VERS. 24. Ideo timebunt eum viri, et non audebunt contemplari omnes qui sibi videntur esse sapientes. 75. Qui recte praedicant, sed non vivunt, damnationis suae praecones fiunt. Hoc loco Eliu viros eos qui ad intelligentiam sunt fortes appellat. Et notandum quod non ait: Et non audebunt contemplari sapientes; sed, Qui sibi videntur esse sapientes. Quibus videlicet verbis peritos quidem, sed arrogantes insinuat. Eliu ergo dum multa fortiter sentit, in locutionis suae fine se tetigit. Viri namque arrogantes et docti cum recte non vivunt, sed tamen recta dicere doctrinae impulsionibus compelluntur, ipsi damnationis suae aliquomodo praecones fiunt, quia dum ea quae agere respuunt praedicantes insinuant, suis 888 se vocibus damnatos clamant. Contra quos bene per Psalmistam dicitur: Conversi sunt in arcum perversum (Psal. LXXVII, 57). Arcus quippe perversus ipsum a quo intenditur percutit. In dictis autem suis arrogantium linguae arcui perverso sunt similes, quia dum contra elationem verba faciunt in suis auctoribus sagittas figunt. Unde summa cura providendum est ne accepta sapientia, cum ignorantiae tenebras illuminat, lumen humilitatis tollat, et jam sapientia esse nequeat. Quae etsi virtute locutionis fulgeat, elationis tamen velamine cor loquentis obscurat. 76. Alia bona summa, alia media. Alia namque sunt bona summa, alia bona media. Bona enim summa sunt, fides, spes, charitas. Quae cum veraciter habentur, in malum inflecti non possunt. Bona autem sunt media, prophetia, doctrina, curationum virtus, et caetera (I Cor. XII, 10), quae ita inter utrumque sunt posita, ut aliquando per haec sola aeterna patria, aliquando vero gloria terrena requiratur. Medias ergo has virtutes dicimus, quas ad quodcunque mens appetit inclinamus. Quibus perceptis ita uti animus sicut terrenis divitiis potest. Per terrenas namque divitias alii in gloriae ostentatione superbiunt, alii erga proximorum indigentiam ministeria pietatis operantur. Cum per doctrinam igitur atque prophetiam laus exterior quaeritur, quasi per corporales divitias terrenae gloriae culmen ambitur. Cum vero doctrina atque prophetia lucrandis animabus impenditur, quasi acceptae divitiae egenis fratribus largiuntur. Quia ergo saepe per ipsa dona, quae se percipere exsultat, a manu dantis incautus animus elongat, vigilanti provisione curandum est ut et prius subigantur vitia, et post sub circumspectione dona teneantur. Nam si in eis mens incaute se deserit, non per haec adjuta subvehitur, sed quasi pro anteactis laboribus remunerata reprobatur. Unde fit etiam ut accepta virtus dum in usu transitoriae laudis assumitur, quia vitio militat, virtus non sit. Quia enim origo virtutis humilitas est, illa in nobis virtus veraciter pullulat, quae in radice propria, id est in humilitate perdurat. A qua nimirum si abscinditur arescit, quia vivificantem se in intimis humorem charitatis perdit. 77. Mira Davidis in summis humilitas. Pugnando hostes; humilitatem sectando semetipsum vicit. Sed quia per hoc quod ab Eliu dicitur, Non audebunt contemplari omnes qui sibi videntur esse sapientes, occulta cordis elatio reprobatur, intueri libet quanta virtutum munera David perceperat, atque in his omnibus quam forti se humilitate servabat (I Reg. XVII, 36; XVIII, 25). Quem enim non extolleret ora leonum frangere, ursorum brachia dissipare, despectis prioribus fratribus eligi, reprobato rege ad regni gubernacula ungi, timendum cunctis uno lapide Goliam sternere, a rege proposita, extinctis Allophylis, numerosa praeputia reportare, promissum tandem regnum percipere, cunctumque Israeliticum populum sine ulla contradictione possidere (II Reg. III, 18)? Et tamen cum arcam Dei in Jerusalem revocat (Ibid., VI, 14), quasi oblitus praelatum se omnibus, admistus populis ante arcam saltat. Et quia coram arca saltare, ut creditur, vulgi mos fuerat, rex se in divino obsequio per saltum rotat. Ecce quem Dominus cunctis singulariter praetulit, sese sub Domino et exaequando minimis, et abjecta exhibendo contemnit. Non potestas regni ad memoriam reducitur, non subjectorum 889 oculis saltando vilescere metuit, non se honore praelatum caeteris ante ejus arcam qui honorem dederat recognoscit. Coram Deo egit vilia vel extrema, ut illa ex humilitate solidaret quae coram hominibus gesserat fortia. Quid de ejus factis ab aliis sentiatur ignoro; ego David plus saltantem stupeo quam pugnantem. Pugnando quippe hostes subdidit, saltando autem coram Domino semetipsum vicit. Quem Michol filia Saul adhuc ex tumore regii generis insana, cum humiliatum despiceret, dicens: Quam gloriosus fuit hodie rex Israel discooperiens se ante ancillas servorum suorum, et nudatus est, quasi si nudetur unus de scurris (Ibid., 20), protinus audivit: Vivit Dominus, quia ludam ante Dominum, qui elegit me potius quam patrem tuum. Ac paulo post ait: Et ludam, et vilior fiam plus quam factus sum, eroque humilis in oculis meis (Ibid., 22). Ac si aperte dicat: Vilescere coram hominibus appeto, quia servare me coram Domino ingenuum per humilitatem quaero. 78. Alii humiliter de se sentiendo, despici metuunt; alii despici cupiendo de sua humilitate superbiunt. Sunt vero nonnulli qui de semetipsis humilia sentiunt, quia in honoribus positi nil se esse nisi pulverem favillamque perpendunt, sed tamen coram hominibus despecti apparere refugiunt, et contra hoc quod de se interius cogitant, quasi rigida exterius venustate palliantur. Et sunt nonnulli qui viles videri ab hominibus appetunt, atque omne quod sunt dejectos se exhibendo contemnunt: sed tamen apud se introrsus quasi ex ipso merito ostensae vilitatis intumescunt, et tanto magis in corde elati sunt quanto amplius in specie elationem premunt. Quae utraque unius elationis bella magna David circumspectione deprehendit, mira virtute superavit. Quia enim, de semetipso intus humilia sentiens, honorem exterius non quaerit insinuat, dicens: Ludam et vilior fiam (Ibid., 22). Et quia per hoc quod vilem se exterius praebuit, nequaquam interius intumescit, adjungit: Eroque humilis in oculis meis (Ibid., 22). Ac si dicat: Qualem me exterius despiciens exhibeo, talem me et interius attendo. Quid ergo acturi sunt quos doctrina elevat, si David ex carne sua venturum Redemptorem noverat, ejusque gaudia prophetando nuntiabat, et tamen in semetipso cervicem cordis valida discretionis calce deprimebat, dicens: Eroque humilis in oculis meis? 890 79. Dei sapientiam contemplari nequeunt qui sibi sapientes videntur. Sectanda laudabilis fatuitas. Bene ergo per Eliu dicitur: Ideo timebunt eum viri, et non audebunt contemplari omnes qui sibi videntur esse sapientes. Contemplari enim Dei sapientiam non possunt qui sibi sapientes videntur, quia tanto ab ejus luce longe sunt, quanto apud semetipsos humiles non sunt, quia in eorum mentibus dum tumor elationis crescit, aciem contemplationis claudit; et unde se lucere prae caeteris aestimant, inde se lumine veritatis privant. Si igitur veraciter sapientes esse atque ipsam sapientiam contemplari appetimus, stultos nos humiliter cognoscamus. Relinquamus noxiam sapientiam, discamus laudabilem fatuitatem. Hinc quippe scriptum est: Stulta mundi elegit Deus, ut confundat sapientes (I Cor. I, 27). Hinc rursum dicitur: Si quis videtur inter vos sapiens esse in hoc saeculo, stultus fiat, ut sit sapiens (Ibid., III, 18). Hinc evangelicae historiae verba testantur quia

Zachaeus cum videre prae turba nihil posset, sycomori arborem ascendit, ut transeuntem Dominum cerneret. Sycomorus quippe ficus fatua dicitur. Pusillus itaque Zachaeus sycomorum subiit, et Dominum vidit (Luc. XIX, 4 seq.), quia qui mundi stultitiam humiliter eligunt, ipsi Dei sapientiam subtiliter contemplantur. Pusillitatem namque nostram ad videndum Dominum turba praepedit, quia infirmitatem humanae mentis, ne lucem veritatis intendat, curarum saecularium tumultus premit. Sed prudenter sycomorum ascendimus, si provide eam quae divinitus praecipitur stultitiam mente tenemus. Quid enim in hoc mundo stultius quam amissa non quaerere, possessa rapientibus relaxare, nullam pro acceptis injuriis injuriam reddere, imo et adjunctis aliis patientiam praebere? Quasi enim sycomorum nos ascendere Dominus praecipit, cum dicit: Qui aufert quae tua sunt ne repetas (Luc. VI, 30). Et rursum: Si quis te percusserit in dextram maxillam, praebe illi et alteram (Matth. V, 39). Per sycomorum Dominus transiens cernitur, quia per hanc sapientem stultitiam etsi necdum ut est solide, jam tamen per contemplationis lumen Dei sapientia quasi in transitu videtur. Quam juxta Eliu verba videre nequeunt, qui sibi sapientes esse videntur, quia ad conspiciendum Dominum in elata cogitationum suarum turba deprehensi, adhuc sycomori arborem non invenerunt. Pars sexta, et ultima, OCTO LIBROS COMPLECTENS

LIBER VIGESIMUS OCTAVUS.

Explicantur undecim priores versus capitis XXXVIII, multiplici sensu, praesertim morali. 891 PRAEFATIO. Nihil gravius nocet animae quam conscia virtus, nisi correptionibus exerceatur. Job maximus, quia solo Deo minor. Post damna rerum, post funera pignorum, post vulnera corporis, post verba male suadentis uxoris, post contumeliosa dicta consolantium, post suscepta fortiter jacula tot dolorum, de tanta virtute constantiae laudandus a judice beatus Job fuerat, si jam de praesenti saeculo esset evocandus. At postquam hic adhuc duplicia recepturus est, postquam saluti pristinae restituitur, ut rebus redditis diutius utatur, ne per elationis gladium ipsa illum sua victoria sternat, debet omnipotens Deus increpare per districtam justitiam quem servat ad vitam. Quid enim pejus plerumque animam quam conscia virtus interficit? Quae illam dum consideratione sua inflat, a plenitudine veritatis evacuat; et dum se ad percipienda praemia sufficere suggerit, eam a meliorationis intentione distendit. Justus igitur Job ante flagella exstitit, sed justior post flagella permansit; et laudatus antea Dei voce, postmodum crevit ex verbere. Profecto velut tuba ductilis ex percussione producta in laudem Dei tanto altius elevatus est, quanto majori castigatione percussus. Sed humiliandus erat iste qui, prostratus ulceribus, sic virtutibus stabat. Humiliandus erat, ne tam robustissimum pectus elationis tela confoderent, quod constabat certe quia et illata vulnera non vicissent. Requirendus nimirum fuit homo cujus debuisset comparatione superari. Sed quid est quod de eo voce Domini dicitur: Vidisti servum meum Job, quod non sit ei similis vir super terram (Job. I, 8; II, 3)? Cujus ergo comparatione poterat vinci, de quo Deo attestante dicitur quia nullius hominis comparatione possit aequari? Quid itaque agendum est, nisi ut ex persona sua 892 ipse Dominus suas illi virtutes narret, et dicat ei: Nunquid producis luciferum in tempore suo, et vesperum super filios terrae consurgere facis? Et iterum: Nunquid apertae sunt tibi portae mortis, et ostia tenebrosa vidisti? Vel certe: Nunquid post ortum tuum praecepisti diluculo, et ostendisti aurorae locum suum (Job. XXXVIII, 32, 17, 12)? Quis vero ista, nisi Dominus potest? Et tamen interrogatur homo, ut cognoscat quia ista non potest, quatenus vir qui tam immensis virtutibus crevit, et nullius hominis exemplo vincitur, ne extolli debeat, Dei comparatione superetur. Sed o quam potenter erigitur qui tam sublimiter humiliatur! O quanta est hominis victoria, ex Dei comparatione perdidisse! O quanto hominibus major est qui testimoniis convincitur Deo minor! Multum quippe potens est qui tali interrogatione ostenditur quia potens non est. Sed quia ad obscura nimis disserenda ducimur, ad ejusdem textus jam verba veniamus:

CAPUT PRIMUM [Vet.

et Rec. II]. CAP. XXXVIII, VERS. 1. Respondens autem Dominus Job de turbine dixit. 1. Quot quibusve modis ad homines loquatur Deus. Notandum video quia si sano atque incolumi locutio facta diceretur, nequaquam de turbine Dominus locutus fuisse scriberetur. Sed quia flagellato loquitur, de turbine locutus fuisse describitur. Aliter enim Dominus servis suis loquitur, cum eos intrinsecus per compunctionem provehit, aliter cum per districtionem ne extollantur premit. Per blandam enim locutionem Domini amanda dulcedo ejus ostenditur; per terribilem vero potestas ejus metuenda monstratur. In illa persuadetur animae ut proficiat, in ista reprimitur quae proficit. In illa discit quod appetat, in ista quod metuat. Per illam dicit: Gaude et laetare, filia Sion, quia ecce venio, et habitabo in medio tui (Zach. II, 10); 893 per istam dicitur: Dominus in tempestate veniet, et in turbine viae ejus (Isai. LXVI, 15). Blandus quippe est qui ut in medio inhabitet venit. Cum vero se per tempestatem et turbinem insinuat, nimirum quae tangit corda perturbat; atque ad edomandam elationem se exerit, quando potens et terribilis innotescit. 2. Aut per angelos loquitur Deus, aut per semetipsum. Sciendum praeterea est quia duobus modis locutio divina distinguitur. Aut per semetipsum namque Dominus loquitur, aut per creaturam angelicam ejus ad nos verba formantur. Sed cum per semetipsum loquitur, sola nobis vi internae inspirationis aperitur. Cum per semetipsum loquitur, de verbo ejus sine verbis ac syllabis cor docetur, quia virtus ejus intima quadam sublevatione cognoscitur. Ad quam mens plena suspenditur, vacua gravatur. Pondus enim quoddam est quod omnem animam quam replet levet. Incorporeum lumen est quod et interiora repleat, et repleta exterius circumscribat. Sine strepitu sermo est, qui et auditum aperit, et habere sonitum nescit. Quod enim de adventu sancti Spiritus scriptum est: Factus est repente de coelo sonus, tanquam advenientis spiritus vehementis, et replevit totam domum ubi erant sedentes; et apparuerunt illis dispertitae linguae quasi ignis, seditque supra singulos eorum (Act. II, 2); per ignem quidem Dominus apparuit, sed per semetipsum locutionem interius fecit. Et neque ignis Deus, neque ille sonitus fuit, sed per hoc quod exterius exhibuit, expressit hoc quod interius gessit. Quia enim discipulos et zelo succensos, et verbo eruditos intus reddidit, foris linguas igneas ostendit. In significatione igitur admota sunt elementa, ut ignem et sonitum sentirent corpora, igne vero invisibili et voce sine sonitu docerentur corda. Foris ergo fuit ignis qui apparuit, sed intus qui scientiam dedit. Et cum reginae Candacis eunuchus currui praesidens iter caperet, atque Isaiam non intelligens in manibus haberet, in corde nimirum spiritus Philippo dixerat: Adjunge te ad currum (Act. VIII, 29). Et cum ad evocandum Petrum timentes Deum milites Cornelius direxisset, in mente procul dubio a spiritu Petrus audivit: Ecce tres viri quaerunt te, surge itaque, descende et vade cum eis (Act. X, 19). Spiritum enim Dei quasi quaedam nobis verba dicere est occulta vi ea quae agenda sunt intimare, et cor hominis ignarum, non adhibito strepitu et tarditate sermonis, peritum repente de absconditis reddere. Nam quia auditus ea quae ad se fiunt non simul omnia dicta comprehendit, quippe qui et causas per verba, et particulatim verba per syllabas percipit; visus autem noster in eo quod se dirigit, totum subito et simul apprehendit; Dei locutio ad nos intrinsecus facta videtur, potius quam audiatur, quia dum semetipsum sine mora sermonis insinuat, repentina luce nostrae ignorantiae tenebras illustrat. Unde et Baruch, Neriae filius, cum requisitus exponeret quemadmodum verba Jeremiae prophetantis audisset, ait: Ex ore suo loquebatur quasi legens, et ego scribebam (Jerem. XXXVI, 18). Qui enim legens loquitur, alio intendit, sed alio verbum facit, quia 894 quod videt dicit. Prophetae ergo Dei, quia ejus verba vident potius in corde quam audiunt, quasi legentes loquuntur. 3. Quomodo per angelos loqui soleat. Aliquando verbis utendo; aliquando rebus; aliquando simul verbis et rebus; aliquando imaginibus cordis aut corporis oculis ostensis. Cum vero per angelum voluntatem suam Dominus indicat, aliquando eam verbis, aliquando rebus demonstrat, aliquando simul verbis et rebus, aliquando imaginibus cordis oculis ostensis, aliquando imaginibus et ante corporeos oculos ad tempus ex aere assumptis, aliquando coelestibus substantiis, aliquando terrenis; aliquando simul terrerenis et coelestibus. Nonnunquam vero etiam per angelum humanis cordibus ita loquitur Deus, ut ipse quoque angelus mentis obtutibus praesentetur 4. Verbis namque per angelum loquitur Deus, cum nil in imagine ostenditur, sed supernae verba locutionis audiuntur, sicut dicente Domino: Pater, clarifica filium tuum, ut et filius tuus clarificet te, protinus respondetur: Clarificavi, et iterum clarificabo (Joan. XVII, 1). Neque enim Deus, qui sine tempore vi impulsionis intimae clamat, in tempore per suam substantiam illam vocem edidit, quam circumscriptam tempore per humana verba distinxit, sed nimirum, de coelestibus loquens, verba sua quae ab hominibus audiri voluit rationali creatura administrante formavit. 5. Aliquando rebus per angelos loquitur Deus, cum nil verbo dicitur, sed ea quae futura sunt, assumpta de elementis imagine, nuntiantur; sicut Ezechiel, nil verborum audiens, electri speciem in medio ignis vidit; ut videlicet dum solam speciem aspiceret, quae essent in novissimis ventura sentiret (Ezech. I, 4). Electrum quippe ex auri argentique metallo miscetur, in qua permistione argentum quidem clarius redditur, sed tamen fulgor auri temperatur. Quid ergo in electro nisi mediator Dei et hominum demonstratur? Qui dum semetipsum nobis ex divina atque humana natura composuit, et humanam per deitatem clariorem reddidit, et divinam per humanitatem nostris aspectibus temperavit. Quia enim virtute divinitatis ejus tot miraculis humanitas fulsit, ex auro crevit argentum; et quod per carnem Deus cognosci potuit, quodque per carnem tot adversa toleravit, quasi ex argento temperatum est aurum. Quod bene et in medio ignis ostenditur, quia incarnationis ejus mysterium subsequentis judicii flamma comitatur. Scriptum quippe est: Pater non judicat quemquam, sed omne judicium dedit Filio (Joan. V, 22). [Vet. III.] 6. Aliquando per angelos verbis simul et rebus loquitur Deus, cum quibusdam motibus insinuat hoc quod sermonibus narrat. Neque enim Adam post culpam in divinitatis substantia audire Dominum potuit, sed increpationis verba per angelum audivit, de quo scriptum est: Cum audisset vocem Domini Dei deambulantis in paradiso ad auram post meridiem, abscondit se inter ligna paradisi (Genes. III, 8). Quid est enim quod post peccatum hominis in paradiso Dominus jam non stat, sed deambulat, nisi quod irruente culpa se a cordis hominis motum demonstrat? Quid est quod ad auram post meridiem, nisi 895 quod lux ferventior veritatis abscesserat, et peccatricem animam culpae suae frigora constringebant? Increpavit ergo Adam deambulans, ut caecis mentibus nequitiam suam non solum sermonibus, sed etiam rebus aperiret, quatenus peccator homo et per verba quod fecerat audiret, et per deambulationem, amisso aeternitatis statu, mutabilitatis suae inconstantiam cerneret, et per auram, fervore charitatis expulso, torporem suum animadverteret, et per declinationem solis cognosceret quod ad tenebras propinquaret. [Vet. IV.] 7. Aliquando imaginibus cordis oculis ostensis per angelos loquitur Deus, sicut Jacob subnixam coelo scalam dormiens vidit

(Genes. XXVIII, 12); sicut Petrus linteum reptilibus ac quadrupedibus plenum in ecstasi raptus aspexit (Act. X, 11), qui nisi incorporeis oculis haec cerneret, in ecstasi non fuisset; sicut Paulo in visione noctis vir Macedo apparuit (Act. XVI, 9), qui transire eum in Macedoniam rogavit. Aliquando imaginibus et ante corporeos oculos ad tempus ex aere assumptis per angelos loquitur Deus, sicut Abraham non solum tres viros videre potuit, sed etiam habitaculo terreno suscipere, et non solum suscipere, sed eorum usibus etiam cibos adhibere (Genes. XVIII, 2, seq.). Nisi enim Angeli quaedam nobis interna nuntiantes ad tempus ex aere corpora sumerent, exterioribus profecto nostris obtutibus non apparerent; nec cibos cum Abraham caperent, nisi propter nos solidum aliquid ex coelesti elemento gestarent. Nec mirum quod illic ipsi qui suscepti sunt, modo angeli, modo Dominus vocantur, quia angelorum vocabulo exprimuntur qui exterius ministrabant, et appellatione Domini ostenditur qui eis interius praeerat, ut per hoc praesidentis imperium, et per illud claresceret officium ministrantium. [Vet. V.] 8. Varii alii modi quibus Deus loquitur hominibus. Aliquando coelestibus substantiis per angelos loquitur Deus, sicut, baptizato Domino, scriptum est quia de nube vox sonuit, dicens: Hic est Filius meus dilectus, in quo mihi bene complacui (Matth. III, 17). Aliquando terrenis substantiis per angelos loquitur Deus, sicut cum Balaam corripuit, in ore asinae humana verba formavit (Num. XXII, 28). Aliquando simul et terrenis et coelestibus substantiis per angelos loquitur Deus, sicut ad Moysen in monte cum jussionis suae verba edidit, ignem rubumque sociavit, atque aliud superius, aliud inferius junxit (Exod. III, 2). Quod tamen tunc solum agitur, cum ex ipsa aliquid conjunctione signatur. Nam per succensum rubum Moysen alloquens, quid aliud ostendit, nisi quod ejus populi ductor fieret qui et legis flammam perciperet, et tamen peccati spinam nequa quam vitaret; vel quod ex illo populo exiret qui in igne Deitatis carnis nostrae peccata quasi rubi spinas susciperet, et inconsumptam humanitatis nostrae

substantiam etiam in ipsa divinitatis flamma servaret? [Vet. VI.] 9. Inspirati quandoque prophetae per angelos. Nonnunquam vero humanis cordibus etiam per angelos Deus secreta eorum praesentia virtutem suae aspirationis infundit. Unde et Zacharias ait: Et dixit ad me angelus qui loquebatur in me (Zach. I, 14). Dum ad se quidem sed in se tamen loqui angelum dicit, liquido ostendit quod is qui ad 896 ipsum verba faceret per corpoream speciem extra non esset. Unde et paulo post subdidit: Et ecce angelus qui loquebatur in me egrediebatur (Ibid., II, 3). Saepe enim non exterius apparent, sed sicut sunt angelici spiritus voluntatem Dei prophetarum sensibus innotescunt, atque eos ad sublimia sublevant, et quaeque in rebus futura sunt in causis originalibus praesentia demonstrant. Humanum namque cor ipso carnis corruptibilis pondere gravatum hanc ipsam corpulentiam suam quasi obicem sustinens, interna non penetrat, et grave exterius jacet, quia levantem manum interius non habet. Unde fit, sicut dictum est, ut prophetarum sensibus ipsa ut est subtilitas angelicae virtutis appareat, eorumque mens quo subtili spiritu tangitur, levetur; et non jam pigra torpensque in imis jaceat, sed repleta intimis afflatibus, ad superna conscendat, atque inde quasi de quodam rerum vertice, quae infra se ventura sunt videat. Sed ne quis in praedictis Zachariae verbis angeli designatum nomine vel Patrem, vel Filium, vel Spiritum sanctum putet, si textum Scripturae sacrae considerat, quod sentit velociter emendat, quae nunquam Patrem, nunquam Spiritum sanctum, et non nisi per incarnationis suae praedicationem Filium angelum vocat. Unde et in ejusdem Zachariae verbis aperte ostenditur quod in illo vere angelus, id est creatura, loqueretur, cum dicitur: Et ecce angelus qui loquebatur in me, egrediebatur (Zach. II, 3). Statimque subjungitur: Et alius angelus egrediebatur in occursum ejus, et dixit ad eum: Loquere ad puerum istum, dicens: Absque muro habitabitur Jerusalem (Ibid., II, 3). Non est itaque Deus angelus qui mittitur, cui verba ab angelo quae dicere debeat jubentur. Sed quia in conspectu conditoris angelica ministeria ordinata graduum positione distincta sunt, ut et pro communi felicitate beatitudinis opificem suum simul videntes gaudeant, et tamen pro dispositione dignitatis aliis alii subministrent, ad prophetam angelus angelum mittit, et quem secum de Deo gaudere communiter conspicit, et docet, et dirigit, quia eum et per superiorem scientiam virtute cognitionis, et per praestantiorem gratiam culmine potestatis excedit. 10. Quomodo Deus Job responderit. Haec igitur dicta sunt ut quibus modis loquatur Deus hominibus demonstraretur. Cum vero beato Job respondisse Dominus de turbine dicitur, utrum per semetipsum, an ei per angelum sit locutus ambigitur. Potuerunt quippe per angelum commotiones aeris fieri, et haec ei quae subjuncta sunt per eum verba mandari. Rursumque potuit et exterius angelus in turbine aerem excutere, et tamen interius per semetipsum Dominus vim suae sententiae cordi ejus sine verbis insonare, ut credatur quod dicta dominica quae sequuntur ipse jam per verba protulit, qui, repletus Deo, haec sine verbis audivit. [Vet. VII, Rec. III.] Itaque dicitur:

CAPUT II.

VERS. 2. Quis est iste involvens sententias sermonibus imperitis? 11. Recte sentientes at superbe loquentes reprobantur. Prima angeli stultitia elatio fuit. Sicut et superiori parte jam diximus, prima exprobratio est talis interrogatio, qua dicitur: 897 Quis est iste? Eliu enim arroganter locutus fuerat. Et quis est iste? non dicimus nisi de eo utique quem nescimus. Scire autem Dei approbare est, nescire reprobare. Unde quibusdam quos reprobat dicit: Nescio vos unde sitis; discedite a me, omnes operarii iniquitatis (Luc. XIII, 25, 27). Quid est ergo de hoc arrogante requirere Quis est iste? nisi aperte dicere: Ego arrogantes nescio, id est eorum vitam in sapientiae meae arce non approbo? Quia dum laudibus humanis inflantur, a vera gloria aeternae retributionis inanescunt. In eo vero quod ait, Sententias, et non addidit quales, bonas utique accipimus, quas quidem imperitis asserit sermonibus involutas, quia cum verbis jactantiae fuerant prolatae. Imperitiae quippe vitium est rectum non recte sapere, id est coeleste donum ad appetitum terrenae laudis inclinare. Sicut enim saepe contingit ut et bona male et mala bene proferantur, ita Eliu arrogans recta non recte protulit, quia humiles in Dei defensione sententias non humiliter dixit. Unde et eorum qui intra catholicam Ecclesiam inani gloriae student, non immerito typum tenet: qui dum se prae caeteris peritos credunt, divino judicio de imperitia redarguuntur, quia sicut Apostolus ait: Si quis se existimat scire aliquid, nondum cognovit quemadmodum oporteat eum scire (I Cor. VIII, 2). Quia enim prima stultitia Angeli elatio cordis fuit, vera sapientia efficitur hominis humilitas suae aestimationis. Quam quisquis vel magna sapiendo deserit, eo ipso vehementer desipit, quo semetipsum nescit. Unde Eliu et sententias protulit et imperitis sermonibus involutas, quia et de Deo rectum quod diceret noverat, et tamen de semetipso dicta illius elatio stulta infatuabat. Hoc itaque despecto, ad erudiendum Job verba vertuntur:

CAPUT III [Rec.

IV.] VERS. 3. Accinge sicut vir lumbos tuos. 12. Coercenda est luxuria non solum carnis, sed etiam elati cordis. Scriptura sacra viros vocare consuevit qui nimirum vias Domini fortibus et non dissolutis gressibus sequuntur. Unde per Psalmistam dicitur: Viriliter agite, et confortetur cor vestrum (Psal. XXX, 25). Unde Paulus ait: Remissas manus et dissoluta genua erigite (Hebr. XII, 12). Unde et Sapientia in Proverbiis: O viri, ad vos clamito (Prov. VIII, 4). Ac si aperte diceret: Ego non feminis, sed viris loquor, quia hi qui fluxa mente sunt mea verba percipere nequaquam possunt. Lumbos vero accingere est vel in opere luxuriam vel in cogitatione refrenare. Delectatio namque carnis in lumbis est. Unde et sanctis praedicatoribus dicitur: Sint lumbi vestri praecincti, et lucernae ardentes

(Luc. XII, 35). Per lumbos enim luxuria, per lucernas autem bonorum operum claritas designatur. Jubentur ergo lumbos accingere, et lucernas tenere. Ac si aperte audiant: Prius in vobismetipsis luxuriam restringite, et tunc de vobis aliis bonorum operum exempla monstrate. Sede cum beatum Job tanta praeditum castitate noverimus, cur ei post tot flagella dicitur: Accinge sicut vir lumbos tuos, id est, sicut fortis restringe luxuriam, nisi quia alia est luxuria carnis qua castitatem corrumpimus, alia vero luxuria cordis est qua de castitate gloriamur? Dicitur ergo ei: Accinge sicut vir lumbos tuos, ut qui 898 prius luxuriam corruptionis vicerat, nunc luxuriam restringat elationis, ne de patientia vel castitate superbiens, tanto pejus intus ante Dei oculos luxuriosus existeret, quanto magis ante oculos hominum et patiens et castus appareret. Unde bene per Moysen dicitur: Circumcidite praeputia cordis vestri (Deut. X, 16), id est, postquam luxuriam a carne exstinguitis, etiam superflua cogitationum resecate. Sequitur:

CAPUT IV [Rec.

V.] IBID. Interrogabo te, et responde mihi. 13. Tribus modis nos interrogat Deus: flagellando; dura praecipiendo; aliqua nobis abscondendo. Tribus modis nos conditor noster interrogare consuevit, cum aut flagelli districtione nos percutit, et quanta nobis insit, vel desit patientia ostendit: aut quaedam quae nolumus praecipit, et nostram nobis obedientiam vel inobedientiam patefacit; aut aliqua nobis occulta aperit, et aliqua abscondit, et nobis mensuram humilitatis nostrae innotescit. Flagello namque interrogat cum mentem bene sibi per tranquillitatem subditam afflictionibus pulsat, sicut idem Job et laudatur attestatione judicis, et tamen ictibus conceditur percussoris (Job II, 3, 7), ut ejus patientia tanto verius claresceret quanto inquisita durius fuisset. Praecipiendo autem dura nos interrogat, sicut Abraham terram suam jubetur egredi et pergere quo nesciebat (Genes. XII, 1), in montem unicum filium ducere, et quem ad consolationem senex acceperat immolare (Genes. XXII, 2). Cui nimirum ad interrogationem bene respondenti, id est ad jussionem obedienti dicitur: Nunc cognovi quia times Deum (Ibid., 12). Vel sicut scriptum est: Tentat vos Dominus Deus vester, ut sciat si diligitis eum (Deut. XIII, 3). Tentare quippe Dei est magnis nos jussionibus interrogare. Scire quoque ejus est nostram obedientiam nosse nos facere. [Vet. VIII.] Aperiendo vero nobis quaedam, atque claudendo quaedam nos interrogat Deus, sicut per Psalmistam dicitur: Palpebrae ejus interrogant filios hominum (Psal. X, 6). Palpebris quippe apertis cernimus, clausis nihil videmus. Quid ergo palpebras Dei, nisi ejus judicia accipimus? Quae juxta aliquid clauduntur hominibus, et juxta aliquid reserantur, ut homines qui se nesciunt sibimetipsis innotescant, quatenus dum quaedam intelligendo comprehendunt, quaedam vero cognoscere omnino non possunt, eorum corda sese latenter inquirant, si illos divina judicia vel clausa non stimulant, vel aperta non inflant. Hac enim interrogatione Paulus probatus est, qui post perceptam internam sapientiam, post aperta claustra paradisi, post ascensum tertii coeli, post supernae locutionis mysteria, adhuc dicit: Ego me non arbitror comprehendisse (Philip. III, 13). Et rursum: Ego sum minimus apostolorum, qui non sum dignus vocari apostolus (I Cor. XV, 9). Et rursum: Non quia sufficientes sumus aliquid cogitare a nobis, quasi ex nobis; sed sufficientia nostra ex Deo est (II Cor. III, 5). Apertis ergo palpebris Dei interrogatus Paulus recte respondit, qui et superna secreta attigit, et tamen in humilitate cordis sublimiter stetit. Qui rursum cum secreta Dei judicia de repulsione Judaeorum et gentium vocatione discuteret, atque ad ea pervenire non posset, quasi clausis Dei palpebris interrogatus est. Sed rectum valde responsum 899 reddidit, qui Deo se in ipsa sua ignorantia scienter inclinavit, dicens: O altitudo divitiarum sapientiae et scientiae Dei, quam incomprehensibilia sunt judicia ejus, et investigabiles viae ejus! Quis enim cognovit sensum Domini, aut quis consiliarius ejus fuit (Rom. XI, 33)? Ecce enim absconsis mysteriis quasi clausis palpebris inquisitus placita ac recta respondit, qui secreti aditum pulsans, quia per cognitionem intromitti ad interiora non valuit, per confessionem ante januas humilis stetit; et quod intus comprehendere non potuit, foris timendo laudavit. Unde nunc quoque beatus Job post interrogationem verberis discutitur interrogatione sermonis, ut quae sint superna consideret; quae dum minime comprehendit, ad semetipsum redeat, et quam sit juxta nihilum in supernorum comparatione cognoscat. Audiat itaque: Interrogabo te, et responde mihi. Ac si apertius dicatur: Verbis meis ad sublimia consideranda te excito, et dum ea quae super te sunt nescire te perspicis, tibimetipsi te notiorem reddo. Tunc enim mihi vere respondes, si quae ignoras intelligis. Sequitur:

CAPUT V [Rec.

VI.] VERS. 4-6. Ubi eras quando ponebam fundamenta terrae? Indica mihi, si habes intelligentiam. Quis posuit mensuras ejus, si nosti, vel quis tetendit super eam lineam? Super quo bases illius solidatae sunt? 14. Per fundamenta Ecclesiae intelligi debent apostoli; per fundamentum, solus Christus. Ecce omnia quasi de mundi origine narratione historica contexuntur. Repente vero subjungitur quod non de mundi, sed de Ecclesiae dictum conditione videatur. Nam dicitur: Aut quis dimisit lapidem angularem ejus? Per hoc enim quod non in mundi origine factum est, et illud superius ostenditur, quia de mundi origine dictum non est. Idcirco namque rebus planis ac patentibus obscura quaedam ac dissona permiscentur, ut per hoc quod ab intellectu litterae discrepat et illud inquiratur mystice quod dictum juxta litteram sonat. Namque sicut aliis apertis rebus alia clausa cognoscimus, ita aliis clausis compellimur et illa altiori intellectu pulsare quae aperta credebamus. Dicat ergo: Ubi eras quando ponebam fundamenta terrae. [Vet. IX.] In Scriptura sacra quid aliud fundamenta quam praedicatores accipimus? Quos dum primos Dominus in sancta Ecclesia posuit, tota in eis sequentis fabricae structura surrexit. Unde et sacerdos cum tabernaculum ingreditur (Exod. XXVIII, 17) duodecim lapides portare in pectore jubetur, quia videlicet semetipsum pro nobis sacrificium offerens pontifex noster, dum fortes in ipso exordio praedicatores exhibuit, duodecim lapides sub capite in prima sui corporis parte portavit. Sancti itaque apostoli et pro prima ostensione ornamenti lapides sunt in pectore, et pro prima soliditate aedificii in solo fundamenta. Unde David propheta cum sanctam Ecclesiam in sublimibus apostolorum mentibus poni aedificarique conspiceret: Fundamenta ejus, inquit, in montibus sanctis (Psal. LXXXVI, 1). Cum vero in sacro eloquio non fundamenta, sed singulari numero fundamentum dicitur, nullus alius nisi ipse Dominus designatur, per cujus divinitatis potentiam, nutantia infirmitatis nostrae corda solidantur. De quo et Paulus ait: Fundamentum aliud nemo potest ponere, praeter id quod positum est, quod est Christus Jesus (I Cor. III, 11). Ipse quippe fundamentum fundamentorum est, quia et origo est inchoantium, et constantia 900 robustorum. Quia igitur fundamenta nostra sunt hi qui iniquitatum nostrarum pondera portaverunt, ne beatus Job in superbiam de virtutum suarum potentia sublevetur, in ipsa dominici prima parte sermonis de sanctorum praedicatorum commemoratione discutitur, ut quanto illos admirabiles venire conspiceret, tanto in eorum comparatione de se vilius aestimaret. Quod idcirco a Domino jam quasi praeteritum describitur, quia quidquid foris futurum est in opere, intus jam factum est in praedestinatione. Dicitur itaque ei: Ubi eras quando ponebam fundamenta terrae? Ac si aperte diceretur: Virtutem fortium considera, meque eorum ante saecula auctorem pensa; et cum eos quos in tempore condidi mirabiles suspicis, perpende quantum mihi subdi debeas, quem auctorem mirabilium sine tempore esse cognoscis. Sequitur:

CAPUT VI.

VERS. 4, 5. Indica mihi, si habes intelligentiam, quis posuit mensuras ejus, si nosti, vel quis tetendit super eam lineam? 15. Ejus nutu sancti praedicatores ad quasdam orbis partes missi, ab aliis repulsi. Mensurarum lineae in terrarum partitione tenduntur, ut dimensionis aequitas ex ipsa linearum tensione teneatur. In carne autem Dominus ad Ecclesiam veniens mensuras terrae lineis mensus est, quia fines Ecclesiae occulti judicii subtilitate distinxit. Hujus terrae occultae mensurae vel lineae tendebantur quando praedicatores sancti agente Spiritu in alias partes mundi vocabantur ut irent, ab aliis vero partibus arcebantur ne accederent. Paulus namque apostolus cum Macedoniae praedicare negligeret, per visum illi apparuit vir Macedo qui diceret: Transiens in Macedoniam adjuva nos (Act. XVI, 9). At contra, sicut scriptum est: Tentabant apostoli ire in Bithyniam, et non permisit eos Spiritus Jesu (Ibid., 7). Dum ergo praedicatores sancti et vocantur ad Macedoniam, et ab Asia prohibentur, ista occultarum mensurarum linea illic ducta est, hinc reducta. Illic tenditur, ut Macedonia intra sanctae Ecclesiae spatia colligatur; hinc attrahitur, ut extra fines fidei Asia relinquatur. Erant quippe tunc in ea qui colligendi non erant, quibus juxta meritum suum perditis, jam nunc Asia intra mensuras Ecclesiae Deo largiente suscepta est. 16. Intra mensuras a Christo positas electi, extra reprobi. In Dei non in hominis manu ejus dispositio. Intra has ergo mensuras sunt omnes electi, extra has omnes reprobi, etiam si intra fidei limitem esse videantur. Unde et in Apocalypsi scriptum est: Atrium quod foris templum est ejice foras, et ne metiaris illud (Apoc. XI, 2). Quid enim aliud atrium quam latitudinem significat vitae praesentis? Et recte foris templum sunt qui per atrium designantur, atque ideo metiendi non sunt, quia angusta est porta quae ducit ad vitam (Matth. VII, 14), et latitudo vitae pravorum non admittitur ad mensuras et regulas electorum. Istae spiritales lineae occulto judicio tendebantur quando cuidam dicenti: Magister, sequar te quocunque ieris (Matth. VIII, 19), ejusdem magistri voce responsum est:

Vulpes foveas habent, et volucres coeli nidos, Filius autem hominis non habet ubi caput suum reclinet (Ibid., 20). Istae mensurae et lineae tendebantur cum cuidam dicenti: Domine, permitte me primum ire sepelire patrem meum (Luc. IX, 59), ejusdem magistri voce responsum est: Sine ut mortui sepeliant mortuos suos; tu autem vade, annuntia regnum Dei (Ibid., 60). Ecce alius secuturum se promittit, et repellitur: alius relaxandum se postulat, et retinetur. Unde hoc, nisi quia super occulta cordis spatia 901 supernorum judiciorum lineae tendebantur, ut et hunc intus incomprehensibiles mensurae constringerent, et ille foris non injuste remaneret? Sed cum nullus nesciat quia Deus has occultorum judiciorum lineas tendat, cur ad Job dicitur: Indica mihi, si habes intelligentiam, quis posuit mensuras ejus, si nosti, vel quis tetendit super eam lineam? An idcirco requiritur, ut quod nosse, sed tamen praetermittere poterat, memoretur, quatenus pondus secretorum Dei sollicitius penset, dispositionem videlicet hominis non in humanis viribus, sed in manu consistere conditoris, ut dum considerat invisibiliter ista quis agat, suae virtuti nihil tribuat, nec jam de se audeat aliquid, cum Dei judicia occulta formidat; sed perpendens desuper mensuras et lineas incomprehensibiliter tensas, tanto magis in humilitate formidinis consistat, quanto pendere videt omnia in potestate mensoris. Sequitur

CAPUT VII.

VERS. 6. Super quo bases illius solidatae sunt? 17. Bases Ecclesiae sunt sancti doctores et prophetae. Quid aliud hujus terrae bases quam sanctae Ecclesiae doctores accipimus? In basibus quippe columnae, in columnis autem totius fabricae pondus erigitur. Non ergo immerito doctores sancti basium nomine designantur, quia dum recta praedicant, et praedicationi suae vivendo concordant, omne pondus Ecclesiae fixa morum suorum gravitate sustentant, asperas ab infidelibus tentationes ferunt; et quaeque in praeceptis Dei velut difficilia a fidelibus formidantur, exemplis operum facilia ostendunt. Unde et bene cum in typo Ecclesiae tabernaculum figeretur, ad Moysen dicitur: Facies columnas quatuor, et bases earum vesties argento (Exod. XXVI, 32). In argento enim quid aliud quam claritas divini sermonis accipitur? sicut scriptum est: Eloquia Domini eloquia casta, argentum igne examinatum, probatum terrae, purgatum septuplum (Psal. XI, 7). Bases ergo argento vestitae quatuor columnas tabernaculi sustinent, quia praedicatores Ecclesiae divino eloquio decorati, ut cunctis se exemplum praebeant, quatuor evangelistarum dicta et ore et operibus portant 18. Possunt per bases etiam prophetae signari, qui dum primi aperte de dominica incarnatione locuti sunt, quasi quasdam bases eos conspicimus a fundamento consurgere, et superpositae fabricae pondera sustinere. Unde ad Moysen rursum Dominus, cum tabernaculi tabulas erigi praecepit, fundi earum bases argenteas jubet (Exod. XXVI, 32). Quid enim per tabulas nisi apostoli extensa in mundum praedicatione dilatati, quid per bases argenteas nisi prophetae signantur? qui superimpositas tabulas ipsi firmi ac fusiles sustinent, quia apostolorum vita dum eorum praedicatione instruitur, eorum et auctoritate solidatur. Unde et conjunctae binae bases singulis tabulis supponuntur, quia dum prophetae sancti in verbis suis de Mediatoris incarnatione concordant, subsequentes praedicatores Ecclesiae indubitanter aedificant; et cum a semetipsis non discrepant, illos in se robustius figunt. Nec immerito bases quibus prophetae signantur, ut ex argento fundi debeant praecipitur. Argenti quippe claritas ex usu servatur, sine usu autem in nigredinem vertitur. Prophetarum quoque dicta ante Mediatoris adventum, quia in 902 usu spiritalis intelligentiae non erant, dum conspici prae obscuritate non poterant, quasi nigra remanebant. At postquam Mediator veniens ea ante oculos nostros incarnationis suae manu tersit, quidquid in eis lucis latebat inclaruit, sensusque patrum praecedentium in usum dedit, quia verba rebus exposuit. Sive itaque prophetas, seu doctores extremis temporibus subsequentes, basium appellatione significet, dicat: Super quo bases illius solidatae sunt? subaudis, nisi super me, qui cuncta mirabiliter teneo, et bonis exterioribus intus principaliter originem praesto. Qui enim sibi quod bonum est tribuit, solida basis non est, quia dum fundamento non innititur, ipso suo pondere in ima praecipitatur. Sed cum jam multa de sanctae Ecclesiae constructione referantur, audire mens appetit inimicae nationes qua virtute conjunctae sint, id est diversa hujus domus aedificia qua sibi arte concordent. Sequitur:

CAPUT VIII.

IBID. Aut quis dimisit lapidem angularem ejus? 19. Christus lapis angularis, in quo Judaei gentilesque convenerunt. Jam per divinam gratiam omnibus liquet, quem Scriptura sacra angularem lapidem vocet, illum profecto qui, dum in se hinc Judaicum illinc gentilem populum suscipit, in una Ecclesiae fabrica quasi duos parietes jungit, illum de quo scriptum est: Fecit utraque unum (Ephes. II, 14). Qui angularem se lapidem non solum in inferioribus, sed et in supernis exhibuit, quia et in terra plebi Israeliticae nationes gentium et utramque simul angelis in coelo sociavit. Eo quippe nato clamaverunt angeli: In terra pax hominibus bonae voluntatis (Luc. II, 14). In ortu enim Regis nequaquam pro magno offerrent hominibus pacis gaudia, si discordiam non haberent. De hoc lapide per Prophetam dicitur: Lapidem quem reprobaverunt aedificantes, hic factus est in caput anguli (Psal. CXVII, 22). Hujus lapidis typum Jechonias rex tenuit, quem Matthaeus dum quaterdenas generationes describeret, secundo numeravit (Matth. I, 11). Quem enim fini secundae, ipsum rursum initio tertiae generationis inseruit. Ipse namque in Babyloniam cum Israelitica plebe migratus est, qui dum ab aliis ad alia ducitur, pro utriusque parietis latere non immerito secundo numeratur. Cujus migrationis flexu angularem lapidem designat. Ubi enim ordo a rectitudine deflectitur, ut eat in diversum, tanquam angulum facit. Recte ergo numerari bis potuit, quia per utrumque parietem quasi duo in se latera ostendit, unde et ejus bene imaginem tenuit, qui in Judaea ortus, gentilitatem colligens, quasi a Jerosolymis Babyloniam venit, atque hanc in semetipso fidei fabricam prius discordiae studio scissam arte charitatis intexuit. Sed haec quae de significatione sanctae Ecclesiae dicta sunt placet ut breviata replicatione moraliter disserantur. Dignum namque est ut per ea quae beato Job dici cognoscimus ad corda nostra revocemur, quia verba Dei tunc mens verius intelligit cum in eis semetipsam quaerit. Ecce enim dicitur:

CAPUT IX.

VERS. 4. Ubi eras quando ponebam fundamenta terrae? SENSUS MORALIS. 20. Quid ex nobis fuerimus semper considerandum, ne quod sumus ex Dei munere, nobis tribuamus. Si peccatoris animus pulvis est, qui in superficie attollitur, et tentationis aura raptatur, unde scriptum est: Non sic impii, non sic, sed tamquam pulvis, quem projicit ventus a facie terrae (Psal. I, 5), 903 nil obstat terram intelligi animam justi, de qua scriptum est: Terra enim saepe venientem super se bibens imbrem, et generans herbam, opportunam illis a quibus colitur accipit benedictionem (Hebr. VI, 7). [Vet. X.] Sed hujus terrae fundamentum fides est. Hujus terrae fundamentum jacitur, quando in occultis cordis prima soliditatis causa divinus timor inspiratur. Iste necdum credit aeterna quae audit; huic cum fides datur, ad aedificium subsequentis operis jam fundamentum ponitur. Ille aeterna jam credit, nec tamen metuit, venturi judicii terrorem despicit, peccatis se carnis et spiritus audenter involvit; huic repente cum futurorum timor infunditur, ut bonae vitae surgat aedificium, jam fundamenta construuntur. Posito itaque prosperae formidinis fundamento, cum virtutum fabrica in altum ducitur, necesse est ut unusquisque proficiens vires suas caute metiatur, ut cum divina constructione magnus esse jam coeperit, semetipsum respiciat sine cessatione quod fuit, quatenus attendens humiliter quod per meritum inventus est, nequaquam sibi arroget quod per gratiam factus est. Unde et nunc beatus Job per supernam vocem ad semetipsum reducitur, et ne de virtutibus gloriari audeat, de anteacta vita memoratur, eique dicitur: Ubi eras quando ponebam fundamenta terrae? Ac si justificato peccatori aperte Veritas dicat: Virtutes a me acceptas tibi non tribuas, noli contra me de meo munere extolli. Recole ubi te inveni quando meo timore prima in te fundamenta virtutum posui. Recole ubi te inveni quando meo te timore solidavi. Ut ergo ego in te non destruam quod construxi, ipse non cesses considerare quod reperi. Quem enim Veritas nisi aut in flagitiis aut in excessibus invenit? Sed post haec bene possumus servare quod sumus, si nunquam negligimus pensare quod fuimus. Nonnunquam tamen clandestina elatio etiam sollicitis cordibus subrepere solet, ut bonorum cogitatio, licet subtilis sit ac pressa, cum valde in virtutibus crescit, oblita infirmitatis propriae, nequaquam ad memoriam revocet quid in vitiis fuerit. Unde et omnipotens Deus, quia augeri infirmitatem etiam de remediis salutis conspicit, mensuram ipsis nostris profectibus imponit, ut habeamus quaedam virtutum bona quae nunquam quaesivimus, et quaeramus quaedam, nec tamen habere valeamus, quatenus mens nostra dum haec non potest habere quae appetit, et illa se intelligat de semetipsa non habere quae habet, et per ea quae adsunt considerentur illa quae desunt, et per ea quae utiliter desunt serventur humiliter bona quae adsunt. Unde et recte pro hujus terrae, id est justae animae dispensatione subjungitur:

CAPUT X.

VERS. 4, 5. Indica mihi, si habes intelligentiam, quis posuit mensuras ejus, si nosti, vel quis tetendit super eam lineam? 21. Quam sapienter Deus dona sua, non omnia omnibus, sed singula singulis distribuat. Quis enim nisi conditor noster hujus terrae mensuras ponit (I Cor. XII, 8)? Qui, interni judicii secreto moderamine, alii sermonem sapientiae, alii sermonem scientiae, alii plenam fidem, alii gratiam sanitatum, alii operationem virtutum, alii prophetiam, alii discretionem spirituum, alii genera linguarum, alii 904 interpretationem sermonum tribuit, quatenus in uno eodemque spiritu iste verbo sapientiae polleat, nec tamen sermone scientiae, id est doctrinae, fulciatur, quia sentire atque invenire sufficit etiam quod per discendi studium non apprehendit; ille sermone scientiae fulgeat, nec tamen in verbo sapientiae convalescat, quia et explere sufficit quantum didicit, et tamen ad sentiendum ex semetipso subtile aliquid non assurgit. Iste per fidem elementis imperat, nec tamen per sanitatum gratiam infirmitates corporum curat; ille orationis ope morbos subtrahit, nec tamen arenti terrae verbo pluvias reddit. Iste operatione virtutum ad praesentem vitam etiam mortuos revocat, et tamen, prophetiae gratiam non habens, quae sibi ventura sunt ignorat; ille ventura quaeque velut praesentia attendit, et tamen in nulla signorum operatione se exerit. Iste per discretionem spirituum in factis subtiliter mentes conspicit, sed tamen diversi generis linguas nescit; ille diversi generis linguas examinat, sed tamen in rebus similibus dissimilia corda non pensat. Alius in una lingua quam novit sermonum pondera interpretando prudenter discutit, et tamen reliquis bonis quae non habet patienter caret. 22. Sic humilitati cavetur et charitati. Sic itaque creator noster atque dispositor cuncta moderatur, ut qui extolli poterat ex dono quod habet humilietur ex virtute quam non habet. Sic cuncta moderatur, ut cum per impensam gratiam unumquemque sublevat, etiam per disparem alteri alterum subdat, et meliorem quisque dono alio eum qui sibi subjicitur attendat, ac licet se praeire et aliis sentiat, eidem tamen quem superat se in aliis postponat. Sic cuncta moderatur, ut dum singula quaeque sunt omnium, interposita quadam charitatis necessitudine, fiant omnia singulorum, et unusquisque sic quod non accepit in altero possideat, ut ipse alteri possidendum quod accepit humiliter impendat. [Vet. XI.] Hinc enim per

Petrum dicitur: Unusquisque sicut accepit gratiam, in alterutrum illam administrantes, sicut boni dispensatores multiformis gratiae Dei (I Petr. IV, 10). Tunc namque bene multiformis Dei gratia dispensatur, quando acceptum donum et ejus qui hoc non habet creditur, quando propter eum cui impenditur sibi datum putatur. Hinc per Paulum dicitur: Per charitatem servite invicem (Galat. V, 13). Tunc enim nos charitas a jugo culpae liberos reddit, cum vicissim nos nostro per amorem servitio subjicit, cum et aliena bona nostra credimus, et nostra aliis quasi sua offerentes exhibemus. Hinc rursum per Paulum dicitur: Nam et corpus non est unum membrum, sed multa. Si dixerit pes: Quoniam non sum manus, non sum de corpore, num ideo non est de corpore? Et si dixerit auris: Quoniam non sum oculus, non sum de corpore, num ideo non est de corpore? Si totum corpus oculus, ubi auditus? si totum auditus, ubi odoratus (I Cor. XII, 14, seq.)? Et paulo post: Quod si essent omnia unum membrum, ubi corpus? Nunc autem multa quidem membra, unum vero corpus (Ibid., 19). 23. In corpore Ecclesiae alius est oculus, alius manus, alius pes, etc. Quid enim sancta Ecclesia, nisi superni sui capitis corpus est? In qua alius alta videndo oculus, 905 alius recta operando manus, alius ad injuncta discurrendo pes, alius praeceptorum vocem intelligendo auris, alius malorum fetorem bonorumque fragrantiam discernendo naris est. Qui, corporalium more membrorum, dum vicissim sibi accepta officia impendunt, unum de semetipsis omnibus corpus reddunt; et cum diversa in charitate peragunt, diversum esse prohibent ubi continentur. Si autem unum quid cuncti agerent, corpus utique quod ex multis continetur non essent, quia videlicet multipliciter compactum non existeret, si hoc concors membrorum diversitas non teneret. Quia ergo sanctis membris Ecclesiae virtutum dona Dominus dividit, terrae mensuras ponit. Unde iterum Paulus dicit: Unicuique sicut Deus divisit mensuram fidei (Rom. XII, 3). Et rursum: Ex quo totum corpus compactum et connexum per omnem juncturam subministrationis, secundum operationem in mensuram uniuscujusque membri, augmentum corporis facit in aedificationem sui in charitate (Ephes. IV, 16). 24. Singula membra assignatis sibi officiis fungantur, non aliena usurpent. Sed cum miro consilio auctor ac dispositor noster huic illa largitur quae alii denegat, alii haec denegat quae isti largitur, mensuras sibi positas egredi nititur quisquis posse plus quam acceperit conatur, ut si fortasse is cui tantummodo datum est praeceptorum occulta disserere tentet etiam miraculis coruscare, aut is quem supernae virtutis donum ad sola miracula roborat etiam divinae legis pandere occulta contendat. In praecipitio enim pedem porrigit qui mensurarum suarum limitem non attendit. Et plerumque amittit et quod poterat qui audacter ea ad quae pertingere non valet arripere festinat. Nam et membrorum nostrorum tunc bene ministeriis utimur cum sua eis officia distincte servamus. Lucem quippe oculis cernimus, vocem vero auribus audimus. Si quis autem mutato ordine voci oculos, luci aures accommodet, huic incassum utraque patent. Si quis odores velit ore discernere, sapores nare gustare, utriusque sensus sibi ministerium, quia pervertit. interimit. Dum enim propriis haec usibus non aptantur, et sua officia deserunt, et ad extranea non assurgunt. 25. Intra mensuras illas David sese continuit, et Paulus. Bene itaque David propheta intra acceptas ex divina largitate mensuras pedem cordis presserat, cum dicebat: Neque ambulavi in magnis, neque in mirabilibus super me (Psal. CXXX, 1). Super se quippe in mirabilibus ambularet, si apparere magnus ultra quam poterat quaereret. Super se namque in mirabilibus attollitur qui et in his ad quae non sufficit videri idoneus conatur. Bene intra has mensuras etiam in ipsa Paulus praedicationis suae se latitudine coarctabat, cum diceret: Non enim audeo aliquid loqui eorum quae per me non efficit Christus (Rom. XV, 18). Tunc autem recte accepta mensura servatur, cum anteposita oculis virorum spiritualium vita respicitur. Unde et sequitur:

CAPUT XI.

VERS. 5. Vel quis tetendit super eam lineam? 26. A sanctis sumenda est vivendi regula. Super hanc enim terram linea tenditur, quando electae unicuique animae ad sumendam vivendi regulam patrum praecedentium exempla monstrantur, ut ex illorum vita consideret quid in suis actibus servet, quatenus respecto justi limitis tramite, nec infra minima negligens deficiat, nec ultra maxima 906 superbiens tendat, nec minus conetur explere quam sufficit, nec plus arripiat quam accepit, ne aut ad mensuram quam debet non perveniat, aut eamdem mensuram deserens, extra limitem cadat. Angusta quippe porta est quae ducit ad vitam (Matth. VII, 14); et ille hanc ingreditur qui in cunctis quae agit discretionis subtilitate propter hanc sollicite coarctatur. Nam qui per voluntates proprias secura mente se dilatat, angustae sibi portae aditum damnat. Ut ergo hujus terrae mensura servetur, super eam divinitus linea tenditur, quia ut nostra opera, vel minora proficiant, vel majora moderentur, per sacra eloquia subtilis ante nos sanctorum vita expanditur, et quid nobis quantumque agendum sit ostensa illorum discretione definitur. [Vet. XII.] 27. In exemplis Petri proponitur mensura auctoritatis et humilitatis. Ecce aliquis vel damna rerum, vel afflictionem corporis metuens, minas terrenae potentiae pertimescit, et contra vim resistentium veritatem defendere non praesumit. Hunc Petrus, quia in timore angustum respicit, ostensa exemplorum suorum linea, ad virtutis latitudinem tendit. Ipse quippe flagellatus a principibus populi (Act. V, 40), cum idcirco se relaxari conspiceret, ut a praedicatione cessaret; cum prohiberetur loqui in posterum, nequaquam saltem in praesens cessit. Nam respondens protinus, dixit: Obedire oportet Deo magis quam hominibus (Ibid., IV, 29). Et rursum: Non enim possumus quae vidimus et audivimus non loqui. At ille dudum debilis, et praesentia damna formidans, dum exempla tantae fortitudinis contemplatur, in auctoritate verbi jam Petri lineam sequitur, jam nil adversitatis metuit, jam resistentes Deo potestates saeculi etiam cum corporis laceratione contemnit. Sed tamen quanto vires persequentium patiendo fortiter destruit, et quanto inter adversa nullis terroribus cedit, tanto plerumque et in his etiam quae inter fideles positus senserit se caeteris praeponit, sua magis consilia eligit, et sibi potius quam aliis credit. Hic nimirum dum, injustis objectionibus non cedens, in virtute se exerit, etiam recta aliorum consilia non recipiens, pedem extra limitem tendit. Hunc Petrus intra mensurae lineam revocat, qui postquam libertate vocis auctoritatem principum pressit, per humilitatem cordis de non circumcidendis gentibus Pauli consilium audivit (Act. XV, 7). Sic enim semetipsum contra adversarios ex auctoritate curabat erigere, ut tamen sibimetipsi non crederet in his quae non recte sentiret, ut et libertate fortitudinis tumentes potestates excederet, et humilitate mansuetudinis obedientiam in recto consilio etiam minoribus fratribus exhiberet, et modo per semetipsum aliis, modo sibimetipsi cum aliis obviaret. In factis igitur Petri quaedam ante oculos nostros auctoritatis et humilitatis linea tenditur, ne mens nostra aut per timorem ad mensuram non perveniat, aut per tumorem limitem excedat. 28. Ejusdem virtutis opera aliquando exercere, aliquando omittere suadet discretio. Dictum est quomodo linea tenditur, ne per alterius actionis fortitudinem ad alterius causae vitium transeatur; dicatur nunc quemadmodum in una eademque virtute discretionis lineam deserimus, si hanc et aliquando agere et aliquando postponere nesciamus. Non enim res eadem semper est virtus, quia per momenta temporum saepe 907 merita mutantur actionum. Unde fit ut cum quid bene agimus, plerumque melius ab ejus actione cessemus, et laudabilius ad tempus deserat quod in suo tempore laudabiliter mens tenebat. Nam si pro nostris bonis minimis, quibus actis proficimus, nec tamen intermissis interimus, majora laborum mala proximis, imminent, necessario nos virtutum augmenta seponimus, ne infirmioribus proximis fidei detrimenta generemus, ne tanto jam quod agimus virtus non sit, quanto per occasionem sui in alienis cordibus fundamenta virtutum destruit. 29. Discretionis hujus exemplum in sancto Paulo. Quam discretionis lineam bene ante intuentium oculos Paulus tetendit, qui et gentiles ad libertatem fidei venientes circumcidi prohibuit (Act. XV, 2), et tamen Lystris atque Iconium transiens, ipse Timotheum, qui gentili patre editus fucrat, circumcidit (Act. XVI, 3). Videns enim quod nisi se mandata litterae servare ostenderet, Judaeorum rabiem etiam in eos qui sibi tunc comites aderant excitaret, assertionis suae vim postposuit, et sine damno fidei se suosque comites a persecutionis immanitate custodivit. Fecit quod fieri fidei amore prohibuit, sed ad fidei retorsit ministerium quod quasi non fideliter fecit. Plerumque enim virtus cum indiscrete tenetur amittitur; cumque discrete intermittitur, plus tenetur. Nec mirum si in incorporeis intelligimus quod agi et in corporeis rebus videmus. Ex studio namque arcus distenditur, ut in suo tempore cum utilitate tendatur. Qui si otium relaxationis non accipit, feriendi virtutem ipso usu tensionis perdit. Sic aliquando in exercitatione virtus, cum per discretionem praetermittitur, reservatur, ut tanto post vitia valenter feriat, quanto a percussione interim prudenter cessat. Subtilis igitur discretionis super hanc terram linea tenditur, quando ostensis unicuique animae exemplis praecedentium patrum, et utiliter ad operationem virtus accenditur, et nonnunquam utilius temperatur [Vet. XIII.] 30. Cavendum ne discretionis nomine, propriis commodis serviatur. Sed cum parumper ab opere zeli fortitudo seponitur, alta consideratione opus est, ne fortasse nequaquam communis boni consilio, sed timore proprio vel cujuslibet ambitionis studio a virtutis exercitatione cessetur. Quod nimirum cum agitur, jam non dispensationi, sed culpae servitur. Unde curandum sollicite est ut cum quis susceptum negotium cum virtutis cessatione dispensat, semetipsum prius in radice cordis inspiciat, ne sibi per hoc aliquid avarus appetat, sibi per hoc soli timidus pareat; et eo fiat pravum quod in opere sequitur, quo non ex recta cogitationis intentione generatur. Unde bene in Evangelio Veritas dicit: Lucerna corporis tui est oculus tuus. Si oculus tuus simplex fuerit, totum corpus tuum lucidum erit. Si autem oculus tuus nequam fuerit, totum corpus tuum tenebrosum erit (Matth. VI, 22). Quid enim per oculum exprimitur, nisi opus suum praeveniens cordis intentio? quae priusquam se in actione exerceat, hoc jam quod appetit contemplatur. Et quid appellatione corporis designatur, nisi unaquaeque actio, quae intentionem suam quasi intuentem oculum sequitur? Lucerna itaque corporis est oculus, quia per bonae intentionis 908 radium merita illustrantur actionis. Et si oculus tuus simplex fuerit, totum corpus tuum lucidum erit, quia si recte intendimus per simplicitatem cogitationis, bonum opus efficitur, etiam si minus bonum esse videatur. Et si oculus tuus nequam fuerit, totum corpus tuum tenebrosum erit, quia cum perversa intentione quid vel rectum agitur, etsi splendere coram hominibus cernitur, apud examen tamen interni judicis obscuratur. Unde et recte subjungitur: Vide ergo ne lumen quod in te est tenebrae sint. Si lumen quod in te est tenebrae sunt, ipsae tenebrae quantae erunt (Ibid., 23)? quia si hoc quod bene nos agere credimus, ex mala intentione fuscamus, quanta ipsa mala sunt quae mala esse etiam cum agimus non ignoramus? Et si ibi nil cernimus, ubi quasi discretionis lumen tenemus, qua caecitate in illa offendimus quae sine discretione perpetramus? Vigilanti igitur cura per cuncta opera intentio nobis nostra pensanda est, ut nil temporale in his quae agit appetat, totam se in soliditate aeternitatis figat, ne si extra fundamentum actionis nostrae fabrica ponitur, terra dehiscente solvatur. Unde hic quoque apte subjungitur:

CAPUT XII.

VERS. 6. Super quo bases illius solidatae sunt? 31. Bases animae sunt intentiones. Bases quippe uniuscujusque sunt animae intentiones suae. Nam sicut fabrica columnis, columnae autem basibus innituntur, ita vita nostra in virtutibus, virtutes vero in intima intentione subsistunt. Et quia scriptum est: Fundamentum aliud nemo potest ponere, praeter id quod positum est, quod est Christus Jesus (I Cor. III, 11), tunc bases in fundamento sunt, cum intentiones nostrae in Christo roborantur. Incassum vero alta super se bases aedificia erigunt, si non ipsae in fundamenti soliditate consistunt, quia nimirum quamlibet summa opera inaniter faciunt, si intentiones cordium extra aeternitatis certitudinem deflectuntur, et vitae verae praemia non requirunt, tantoque graviora ruinae super se damna aedificant, quanto altiora aedificia extra fundamentum portant, quia cum aeternae vitae praemiis non intendunt, quo plus se quasi in virtutibus erigunt, eo in gloriae inanis foveam profundius cadunt. Non ergo pensandum est bases quid sustinent, sed ubi sustinentur, quia profecto humana corda divinitus perscrutantur, non solum quae faciunt, sed quod in operibus quaerunt. Unde cum districtum judicem Paulus describeret, atque actionum bona narraret, dicens: Qui reddet unicuique secundum opera ejus, his quidem, secundum patientiam boni operis, gloriam et corruptionem (Rom. II, 6); quia, nominata boni operis patientia quasi totam electae actionis fabricam dixerat, subtiliter illico ubi bases ejusdem fabricae consisterent exquisivit, dicens: Gloriam et honorem et incorruptionem quaerentibus, vitam aeternam (Ibid., 7). Ac si aperte diceret: Et si quidam patientiam boni operis ostendunt, gloriam et incorruptionem non recipiunt, si intentiones cordis, id est bases fabricae, in fundamento non figunt, quia videlicet Deus vel honestae vitae aedificium non inhabitat quod extra se positum non ipse sustentat. 32. Ad spem aeternitatis sunt dirigendae. Quia igitur intentiones electae uniuscujusque animae spei aeternitatis innituntur, recte voce 909 Dominica de hac terra dicitur: Super quo bases illius solidatae sunt? Ac si aperte diceret, Nisi super me. Cui dum justa quaeque anima intendit, omne quod temporaliter facit, in me procul dubio non temporaliter construit. Quia vero tunc robustius in fundamento solidamur, cum verba Dei et in exterioribus praeceptis sequimur, et in intimis sensibus subtilius intelligendo pensamus, recte subjungitur:

CAPUT XIII [Vet. XIV].

IBID. Vel quis dimisit lapidem angularem ejus? 33. Christus lapis angularis, quod vitam activam et contemplativam in se conjunxerit. Lapis quippe angularis est ad sacra eloquia intellectus duplex. Qui tunc divinitus dimittitur, quando nequaquam districto judicio ignorantiae suae tenebris illigatur; sed quadam libertate perfruitur, dum in praeceptis Dei sufficit vel exsequendo exteriora agere, vel contemplando interna sentire. Ad quod nunquam noster intellectus assurgeret, si ad suscipiendam naturam nostram ipse noster conditor non veniret. Qui aliter angularis lapis dicitur, quia duos in se populos junxit; atque aliter, quia conjunctae utriusque vitae, activae videlicet et contemplativae, in se exempla monstravit. Ab activa enim vita longe contemplativa distat; sed incarnatus Redemptor noster veniens, dum utramque exhibuit, in se utramque sociavit. Nam cum in urbe miracula faceret, in monte vero orando continue pernoctaret, exemplum suis fidelibus praebuit, ut nec contemplationis studio proximorum curam negligant, nec rursum cura proximorum immoderatius obligati contemplationis studia derelinquant; sed sic in utrisque mentem partiendo conjungant, quatenus nec amorem Dei praepediat amor proximi, nec amorem proximi, quia transcendit, abjiciat amor Dei. Quia igitur humano cordi quid ageret ignoranti Dei atque hominis Mediator apparuit, qui et agendo transitoria disponeret, et contemplando ostenderet unde cuncta penderent, recte dicitur: Vel quis dimisit lapidem angularem ejus? Ac si aperte Dominus diceret: Nisi ego, qui unicum quem sine tempore genui servandis hominibus cum tempore ostendi, in cujus vita discerent etiam diversa vivendi studia non discrepare. Et notandum quod eum non se emisisse, sed dimisisse asserit, quia profecto humanam naturam Filius suscipiens ad ima de sublimibus venit. Cujus incarnationis mysterium quia et electi angeli mirati sunt, qui eodem mysterio redempti non sunt, recte subjungitur:

CAPUT XIV [Rec. VII].

VERS. 7. Cum me laudarent simul astra matutina. 34. Angeli astra matutina cur appellati. Quia enim prima in tempore condita natura rationabilium spirituum creditur, non immerito matutina astra angeli vocantur. Quod si ita est, dum terra esset invisibilis et incomposita, dum tenebrae essent super abyssum (Genes. I, 2), venturum diem subsequentis saeculi per lucem sapientiae existendo praevenerunt. Nec negligenter audiendum est quod additur, Simul, quia nimirum astra matutina etiam cum vespertinis Redemptoris potentiam laudant, dum electi angeli etiam cum redemptis in mundi fine hominibus largitatem gratiae supernae glorificant. Ipse quippe ut nos ad laudem conditoris accenderent, hoc quod superius diximus, orta per carnem luce, clamaverunt: Gloria in excelsis Deo, et in terra pax hominibus bonae voluntatis (Luc. II, 14). Simul ergo 910 laudant, quia redemptioni nostrae voces suae exultationis accommodant. Simul laudant; quia dum nos conspiciunt recipi, suum numerum gaudent repleri. Qui et fortasse ideo matutina astra memorantur, quia saepe ad exhortandos homines missi sunt; et dum venturum mane nuntiant, ab humanis cordibus praesentis vitae tenebras fugant. Sed ecce angeli divinam potentiam laudant, quia ipsa eos tantae claritatis visio dilatat. Nos autem qui redimimur, sed tamen corruptione adhuc carnis gravamur, donum quod percipimus, qua virtute laudamus? Quomodo enim valebit lingua dicere, quod non sufficit mens nostra sentire? Sequitur:

CAPUT XV IBID.

Et jubilarent omnes filii Dei. 35. Quid sit jubilatio, et cur homines deceat, non angelos. Jubilatio quippe dicitur cum cordis laetitia oris efficacia non expletur; sed quibusdam modis gaudium prodit, quod ipse qui gaudet, nec tegere praevalet, nec explere. Laudent itaque angeli, qui jam tantae claritatis altitudinem in sublimibus vident. Jubilent vero homines, qui adhuc in inferioribus oris sui angustias sustinent. Quae quia certo futura Dominus noverat, non tam facienda insinuat, quam facta narrat. Sed quid agimus, quod cum boni de redemptionis suae mysterio jubilant, malos invidia inflammat; dum electi proficiunt, reprobi ad rabiem furoris excitantur, et bona nascentia, quia nolunt imitari, persequuntur? Sed tamen inter haec etiam qui redemit, non relinquit. Scriptum quippe est: Fidelis autem Deus, qui non patietur vos tentari supra quam potestis, sed faciet etiam cum tentatione proventum, ut possitis sustinere (I Cor. X, 13). Novit enim conditor noster, quando exsurgere persecutionis procellam sinat, quando exsurgentem reprimat. Novit pro custodia nostra restringere quod contra nos egredi pro nostra exercitatione permittit, ut saeviens nos diluat procella, et non mergat. Unde et sequitur:

CAPUT XVI [Vet.

XV, Rec. VIII]. VERS. 8. Quis conclusit ostiis mare, quando erumpebat, quasi de vulva procedens? 36. Saeculum contra sanctos saeviens a Deo conclusum. Humiliatis terrenis principibus, per eos Dominus Ecclesiam supra mundi culmen evexit. Quid enim mare nisi saeculum, quid vulvam, nisi conceptum carnalis cogitationis accipimus? Hoc enim loco vulvae nomine occulta et malitiosa carnalium cogitatio designatur. Quae vulva non ad proferendam prolem concipit substantiam corporis, sed ad explendam nequitiam causam doloris. De hac vulva cordis iniquorum alias dicitur: Concepit dolorem, et peperit iniquitatem (Psal. VII, 15). Per hanc vulvam pravi concipiunt, cum mala cogitant. Per hanc vulvam pariunt, cum mala quae cogitaverint operantur. Erumpebat ergo mare quasi de vulva procedens, cum minarum saecularium fluctus de carnalis cogitationis iniquitate concepti, in sanctae Ecclesiae interitum saevirent. Sed auctore Deo, ostiis hoc mare conclusum est, quia contra tumores persequentium sancti viri quasi quaedam ostia oppositi sunt, ut eorum miraculis atque reverentia irae persequentium frangerentur. Humiliatis quippe Dominus terrenis principibus, per eos sanctam Ecclesiam supra mundi culmen evexit, et saevientis maris impetus, crecta ejusdem Ecclesiae potestate, coercuit. Sed huic saevienti mari quid Dominus fecerit, audiamus. Sequitur:

CAPUT XVII [Rec.

IX.] VERS. 9. 911 Cum ponerem nubem vestimentum ejus, et caligine illud quasi pannis infantiae obvolverem. 37. Persecutorum malitiam Deus constrinxit puerilia sapientem. Mare saeviens nube induitur, quia crudelitas persequentium stultitiae suae velamento vestitur. Interposita enim caligine infidelitatis suae, perspicuam veritatis lucem videre non sufficit; et id quod agit per crudelitatis impulsum, per caecitatis suae meritum non agnoscit. Nam si cognovissent, ut ait Apostolus, nunquam Dominum gloriae crucifixissent (I Cor. II, 8). Haec nubes non solum solet infideles extra positos premere, sed quosdam etiam viventes carnaliter intra Ecclesiam tenebrare. Unde sancti viri, qui etiam alienae negligentiae compatiuntur, et se pati aestimant quod perpeti alios sentiunt, Deo orantes dicunt: Opposuisti nubem, ne transeat oratio (Thren. III, 44). Ac si aperte dicant: Menti nostrae terrenis voluptatibus assuetae curarum suarum phantasmata justo judicio objicis, quibus eam in ipsa orationis suae intentione confundis; et quam desideriis infimis deditam non ignoras, recte caecatam ab intuenda lucis tuae perspicuitate reverberas, ut cum in te intenditur, ipso a te cogitationum suarum nubilo reflectatur; et quae terrena haec assidue cogitat quia vult, haec etiam toleret in oratione cum non vult. Quia igitur ipsa persecutorum nequitia superna dispensatione constringitur, ne contra sanctos viros inquantum voluerit effrenetur, postquam dixit: Cum ponerem nubem vestimentum ejus; apte subdidit: Et caligine illud quasi pannis infantiae obvolverem. Pannis quippe infantiae pedes ac brachia constringuntur, ne huc atque illuc dissoluta libertate jactentur. Quia ergo persecutores sanctae Ecclesiae instabilitate cordis inquieti, atque huic saeculo dediti, non grandaeva, sed puerilia sapiunt, qui quidem obscuritate atque caligine, non intellectu superni judicii constringuntur, ne tantum persequi valeant quantum volunt, pannis infantiae referuntur obvoluti, quia, sicut dictum est, puerilia quidem sapiunt, sed divina dispensatione constricti, quo volunt brachia non extendunt, et si cuncta mala leviter perpetrare appetunt, nequaquam tamen implere cuncta quae appetunt permittuntur. Sequitur: VERS. 10. Circumdedi illud terminis meis. Terminis suis Dominus mare circumdat, quia iras persequentium, judiciorum suorum dispensatione modificat, ut insani tumida unda fervoris plano frangatur littore occultae dispensationis. Sequitur:

CAPUT XVIII [Vet. XVI].

VERS. 10, 11. Et posui vectem et ostia, et dixi: Hucusque venies, et non procedes amplius, et hic confringes tumentes fluctus tuos. 38. Sancti praedicatores tanquam ostia mari saecus saevienti opposita, tundi fluctibus, non effringi potuerunt, Christo eos roborante. Haec ostia humilibus aperta, et superbis clausa. Quid per ostia nisi praedicatores sancti, quid per vectem nisi incarnatus Dominus designatur? Qui haec videlicet ostia contra saevientis maris impetum tanto valentiora opposuit, quanto ea sua observatione roboravit. Quia enim ista sanctae Ecclesiae ostia vectis hujus oppositione solidata sunt, potuerunt quidem tundi fluctibus, sed effringi nequiverunt, ut ea exterius unda persecutionis illideret, sed nequaquam cordis eorum interna penetraret. Et quia doctores sancti praedicatione quidem sequentibus aperti sunt, auctoritate autem sua 912 resistentibus clausi, non immerito ostia vocantur, id est aperta conversationi humilium, et clausa terroribus superborum. Non immerito ostia vocantur, quia et ingressum fidelibus aperiunt, et rursum sese perfidis ne ingrediantur opponunt. Pensemus quale Ecclesiae ostium exstitit Petrus, qui investigantem fidem Cornelium recepit, pretio quaerentem miracula Simonem repulit. Illi dicens: In veritate comperi quoniam non est personarum acceptor Deus (Act. X, 34), secreta regni benigne aperuit. Huic inquiens: Pecunia tua tecum sit in perditionem (Act. VIII, 20), per districtae damnationis sententiam coelestis aulae aditum claudit. Quid cuncti apostoli nisi sanctae Ecclesiae ostia existunt, cum voce Redemptoris sui audiunt: Accipite Spiritum sanctum; quorum remiseritis peccata, remittuntur eis; et quorum retinueritis, retenta sunt (Joan. XX, 22)? Ac si illis aperte diceretur: Per vos ingredientur ad me hi quibus vosmetipsos panditis; et repellentur quibus obseratis. Igitur dum mare saevit, Dominus vectem et ostia opponit, quia ab amaris et perfidis cordibus dum persecutionis procella se dilatat in mundo, Deus unigeniti sui gloriam praedicatorumque ejus reverentiam exaltat; et dum innotescit mysteria divinae fortitudinis, frangit in impiis fluctus furoris. 39. Divina providentia persecutionis procella aut prosilit, aut conquiescit. Bene autem dicitur: Hucusque venies, et non procedes amplius. Quia nimirum judicii occulti mensura est, et quando persecutionis procella prosiliat, et quando conquiescat, ne aut non exagitata electos non exerceat, aut non moderata in profundum mergat. Cum vero notitia fidei usque ad persequentes extenditur, turbati maris tumor sedatur; ibique fluctus suos mare frangit, quia ad cognitionem veritatis veniens, omne quod nequiter egit erubescit. Fracta quippe unda in se reliditur, quia victa nequitia etiam per cogitationem sui cordis accusatur; et quasi ipsam vim quam intulerat recipit, quia de pravitate quam gesserat reatus sui stimulos sentit. Unde quibusdam per Paulum dicitur: Quem ergo fructum habuistis tunc in illis in quibus nunc erubescitis (Rom. VI, 21)? Ac si diceretur: Quid se in altum fluctus vestrae pravitatis extulerunt, qui nunc in semetipsis fracti, unde perversos vos inflaverant, conversos inde confundunt? Recte itaque dicitur: Et hic confringes tumentes fluctus tuos. Quod vero in hac conclusione maris secundo de ostiis dicitur, more sacri eloquii, res semel dicta pro confirmatione replicatur. 40. Per mare intelligi potest saeculum, cui Deus ostia opposuit, legis et Novi Testamenti praecepta. Si autem hoc in loco mare accipere non specialiter turbam persequentium, sed generaliter saeculum debemus, secundo contra hoc mare Dominus ostia opposuit, quia et prius humano generi praecepta legis, et postmodum novae gratiae testamentum dedit. Secundo objectis ostiis hujus maris impetum clausit, quia eos quos ad obsequium sui cultus assumpsit, et prius ab idolis data lege coercuit, et post ab intellectu carnali gratia revelata correxit. Secundo mare ostia accepit, quia humanum genus prius Deus ab operibus iniquitatis prohibuit, postmodum vero etiam a cogitationis culpa constrinxit. Videamus quemadmodum prima tumenti mari Dominus ostia imponat. Ecce enim per 913 Legem dicitur: Non occides, non moechaberis, non furtum facies, non falsum testimonium dices (Exod. XX, 13, 14). Videamus quemadmodum secundis hoc mare Dominus ostiis claudat. Ecce in Evangelio dicit: Audistis quia dictum est antiquis: Non moechaberis; ego autem dico vobis, quoniam omnis qui viderit mulierem ad concupiscendum eam, jam moechatus est eam in corde suo (Matth. V, 27). Rursumque dicitur: Audistis quia dictum est: Diliges proximum tuum, et odio habebis inimicum tuum; ego autem dico vobis, diligite inimicos vestros, et benefacite his qui oderunt vos (Ibid. V, 43, 44). Qui igitur prius nequitias operis prohibet, et postmodum culpas cordis exhaurit, nimirum tumenti mari, ne circumducta justitiae littora transeat, bis ostia imponit. [Vet. XVII.] 41. Mundo suae origini adhuc vicino, leges positae. Cui tamen Deus nondum illuxerat. Sub litterae caligine quasi pannis infantiae obvolutus mundus. Prius timore ligatus, postea libertatem consecutus. Lex vetus imperfecta et infirma. Bene autem cum diceret: Quis conclusit ostiis mare. Illico et tempus adjunxit, dicens: Quando erumpebat, quasi de vulva procedens. Quia videlicet tunc humano generi praeceptis legis obviavit, quando adhuc saeculum suae origini vicinum, quasi ab ortu proprio ad profectum vitae carnalis exibat. De vulva quippe procedere est in luce praesentis gloriae carnaliter apparere. Et recte subjungitur: Cum ponerem nubem vestimentum ejus. Quia nimirum Deus hominibus non tunc aperta ostensione se intulit, sed dum eos ab errore perfidiae eripuit, nec tamen illis claritatem sui luminis patefecit, quasi ex tenebris eos abstulit, sed adhuc nube vestivit, ut et pristina pravitatis acta relinquerent, et tamen ventura bona adhuc certius non viderent. Unde et apte subditur: Et caligine illud quasi pannis infantiae obvolverem. Dum enim rudes populos non aperta spiritus praedicatione edocuit, sed figurata locutione praeceptis litterae astrinxit, adhuc infirma sapientes verborum suorum caligine quasi pannis infantiae obvolvit, ut mandatis grossioribus ligati crescerent, ne male liberi in suis voluptatibus perirent. Quos ad viam justitiae dum non jam charitas, sed adhuc timor astringeret, divina dispensatio quasi pressit ut nutriret. Infirmus namque populus cum praeceptorum pannos nolens pertulit, ad firmiorem statum ex ipsa sua ligatione pervenit. Quia enim timor eum prius a culpa coercuit, competenter postmodum in libertatem spiritus exivit. Hos pannos infantiae, quos inchoantibus dedit, ipse per prophetam Dominus reprehendit, dicens: Dedi eis praecepta non bona (Ezech. XX, 25). Mala enim quasi mala esse desinunt comparatione pejorum, et bona quasi bona non sunt comparatione meliorum. Nam sicut pejus delinquenti Judaeae de Sodoma atque Samaria dicitur: Justificasti sorores tuas in omnibus abominationibus tuis, quas operata es (Ezech. XVI, 51), ita melioribus Novi Testamenti praeceptis subsequentibus praecepta bona quae rudibus data sunt non bona esse memorantur. Neque enim mentes usui vitae carnalis inhaerentes evehi ab infimis possent, nisi gradatim ducta praedicatione proficerent. Hinc quippe est quod, in Aegypto positis pio justoque moderamine latenti eorum concupiscentiae condescenditur, et vicinorum suorum vasis aureis argenteisque sublatis, discedere jubentur (Exod. III, 22). Qui ad Sina montem ducti, accepta lege, mox audiunt: Non concupisces rem proximi tui (Exod. XX, 17). Et hinc est 914 quod in eadem lege oculum pro oculo, dentem pro dente praecipiuntur exigere (Exod. XXI, 24), et quandoque tamen, revelata gratia, percussi maxillam alteram jubentur praebere (Matth. V, 3). Quia enim plus semper ira in vindicta exigit quam injuria accepit, dum discunt mala non multiplicius reddere, quandoque discerent ea et multiplicata sponte tolerare. Hinc est quod eumdem rudem populum a quibusdam prohibuit, quaedam vero ei in usum pristinum servavit, sed haec ipsa tamen in melioris vitae figura composuit. Bruta namque animalia idolis in Aegypto mactabant, eique in usum postmodum animalium mactationem retinuit, sed idolorum cultum vetavit, ut dum de usu suo aliquid amitteret, consolaretur ejus infirmitas per hoc quod de usu suo aliquid haberet. Mira autem dispensatione consilii, quod ei Dominus de consuetudine carnali retinuit, hoc in figuram spiritus potentius vertit. Quid enim sacrificia illorum animalium nisi unigeniti mortem designant? Quid sacrificia illorum animalium nisi exstinctionem carnalis nostrae vitae significant? Unde ergo imbecillitati populi rudis condescenditur, inde ei per obumbratas allegoriarum species major fortitudo spiritus nuntiatur. Recte itaque dicitur: Et caligine illud quasi pannis infantiae obvolverem, quia unde ejus teneritudinis infirma pertulit, inde altam significationum spiritalium nubem fecit. [Vet. XVIII.] 42. Immoderatis animi motibus opposita novae vitae praecepta exemplis Christi roborata. Quem quia praeceptorum limite ab immoderatis animi evagationibus cinxit, recte subjicit: Circumdedi illud terminis meis. Et quia hujus humani generis motus misso Mediatore coercuit, apte subjungit: Et posui vectem et ostia. Vectem quippe et ostia posuit, quia Redemptore nostro contra culpas delinquentium misso, novae vitae praedicamenta firmavit. Clausa namque ostia opposito vecte roborantur. Vectem ergo Deus opposuit, quia contra lascivos motus humani generis unigenitum misit, qui praecepta spiritalia, quae loquendo docuit, agendo solidavit. Bene autem subditur: Et dixi: Hucusque venies, et non procedes amplius, et hic confringes tumentes fluctus tuos. Hoc quippe mare ostia priora transcenderat, quia claustra legis oppositae humani tumoris unda transiliebat. At postquam mundus oppositum sibi unigenitum reperit, elationis suae impetum fregit, et transire non valuit, quia ejus fortitudine furoris sui terminum clausum invenit. Unde recte per Prophetam dicitur: Mare vidit, et fugit (Psal. CXIII, 3). Possunt etiam per ostia apertae passiones ejus non inconvenienter intelligi. Quibus ex occulto vectem posuit, quia eas ex invisibili divinitate roboravit. Contra quas mundi fluctus veniunt, sed fracti dissiliunt, quia superbi eas videndo despiciunt, sed earum vires experiendo pertimescunt. Nam dum passiones unigeniti humanum genus prius irrisit, postmodum expavit; quasi contra opposita ostia, more elidendi maris, et tumore elatum venit, et fractum virtute dissiluit. Sed quia idcirco hoc ad beatum Job dicitur, ut de tot virtutibus cordis ejus gloria premeretur, ne sibi fortasse tribuat quod se stare sublimiter non ignorat, cum quanta ejus aedificatione sint dicta perpendimus, 915 si haec etiam moraliter disseramus. Dicat itaque:

CAPUT XIX.

VERS. 8. Quis conclusit ostiis mare? 43. Cor humanum mare fervens, quod Deus solus valet coercere. Quid est mare, nisi cor nostrum furore turbidum, rixis amarum, elatione superbiae tumidum, fraude malitiae obscurum? Quod mare quantum saeviat, attendit quisquis in se occultas cogitationum tentationes intelligit. Ecce enim jam perversa relinquimus, jam desideriis rectis inhaeremus, jam prava opera foris abscindimus; sed tamen latenter intus ea cum qua huc venimus vitae veteris procella fatigamur, quam nisi respectu judicii et aeterni pavore tormenti immensi timoris claustra constringerent, cuncta in nobis penitus superaedificati operis fundamenta corruissent. Si enim quod per suggestionem saevit intrinsecus, per deliberationem foras erumperet, vitae nostrae fabrica funditus eversa jacuisset. In iniquitate namque concepti, et in delicto editi (Psal. L, 7), per insitae corruptionis molestias pugnam nobiscum huc deferimus, quam cum labore vincamus. Unde et recte de hoc mari dicitur: Quando erumpebat, quasi de vulva procedens. Vulva enim pravae cogitationis adolescentia est. De qua per Moysen Dominus dicit: Sensus enim et cogitatio humani cordis prona est in malum ab adolescentia sua (Genes. VIII, 21). Corruptionis namque malum, quod unusquisque nostrum ab ortu desideriorum carnalium sumpsit, in provectu aetatis exercet; et nisi hoc citius divinae formidinis manus reprimat, omne conditae naturae bonum repente culpa in profundum vorat. Nemo igitur sibi cogitationum suarum victoriam tribuat, cum Veritas dicat: Quis conclusit ostiis mare, quando erumpebat, quasi de vulva procedens? Quia nisi ab ipso cogitationis primordio cordis fluctus gratia divina retineret, tentationum procellis mare saeviens terram procul dubio humanae mentis obruisset, ut salsis fluctibus perfusa aresceret, id est perniciosis carnis voluptatibus delectata deperiret. Solus ergo Dominus ostiis mare concludit, qui pravis motibus cordis claustra inspiratae formidinis objicit. Quia vero ea quae cernimus sequi prohibemur, quia a corporearum rerum delectatione retundimur, libet etiam ad invisibilia oculos mentis attollere, atque haec ipsa quae sequi praecipimur videre. Sed quid agimus? Infirmis illa obtutibus necdum patent. Ecce ad eorum amorem vocamur, sed tamen a visione restringimur, quia et si quando aliquid furtim parumque aspicimus, sub incerto nimis adhuc visu caligamus. Unde apte subjungitur:

CAPUT XX [Vet. XIX].

VERS. 9. Cum ponerem nubem vestimentum ejus, et caligine illud quasi pannis infantiae obvolverem. 44. Hoc mare tenebris et caligine obvolvitur. Hoc mare tumultuosum, videlicet cogitationibus fluctuans cor nostrum nube vestitur, quia ne internam quietem pure conspiciat, inquietudinis suae confusione tenebratur. Hoc mare caligine quasi pannis infantiae obvolvitur, quia a contemplandis sublimibus adhuc teneris sensibus suae infirmitatis ligatur. Videamus Paulum quadam caligine quasi infantiae pannis obvolutum, dum ait: Videmus nunc per speculum in aenigmate, tunc autem facie ad faciem. Nunc cognosco ex parte, tunc autem cognoscam sicut et cognitus sum (I Cor. XIII, 12). Qui si se ad comprehendenda coelestia infantem non cerneret, aetatis suae 916 ad haec comparationem nullo modo praemisisset, dicens: Cum essem parvulus, loquebar ut parvulus, sapiebam ut parvulus, cogitabam ut parvulus. Tunc ergo ad robur juvenile conscendimus, cum forti sensu eam ad quam tendimus vitam videmus; nunc autem quia intentionis nostrae acies per infirmitatem suam ab interna luce retunditur, mens nostra ligata infantiae pannis tenetur. Ubi apte subjungitur:

CAPUT XXI.

VERS. 10. Circumdedi illud terminis meis. 45. Qui termini huic mari positi. Terminis enim suis Dominus hoc mare circumdat, quia cor nostrum adhuc corruptionis suae molestia et cura turbulentum sub mensura contemplationis humiliat, ut licet plus appetat, ultra tamen quam sibi conceditur non ascendat. Vel certe terminis suis Dominus hoc mare circumdat, quia cor nostrum tentationibus tumidum occultis donorum distributionibus mitigat, modo agens ne prava suggestio ad delectationem veniat, modo ne prava delectatio usque ad consensum prorumpat. Qui ergo illicitos motus cordis respicit, et in quibusdam eos usque ad consensum venire prohibet, in quibusdam vero illos etiam a delectatione restringit, nimirum furenti mari terminos imponit, ut nequaquam in opere exeat, sed intra sinum mentis tentationum submurmurans se unda collidat. Quae quia tunc valenter restringitur, cum ei delectatione Dei atque inspiratis virtutibus obviatur, recte subjungitur:

CAPUT XXII VERS.

10, 11. Et posui vectem et ostia, et dixi. Hucusque venies, et non procedes amplius; et hic confringes tumentes fluctus tuos. 46. Virtutes dissipat illud mare saeviens, nisi charitate firmentur. Quid enim moraliter per ostia, nisi virtutes; quid per vectem, nisi robur charitatis accipimus? Haec itaque ostia, scilicet operationum virtututes, mare saeviens dissipat, nisi eas ex occulto mentis opposita charitas astringat. Facile autem omne virtutum bonum tentatione cordis irruente destruitur, nisi ab intimis fixa charitate solidetur. Unde et Paulus in suis praedicationibus dum quaedam virtutum ostia mari tentationis opponeret, illico eisdem ostiis quasi robur vectis adjunxit, dicens: Super omnia autem haec charitatem habentes, quod est vinculum perfectionis (Coloss. III, 14). Perfectionis enim vinculum charitas dicitur, quia omne bonum quod agitur nimirum per illam ne pereat ligatur. A tentatore namque citius quodlibet opus evellitur, si solutum a vinculo charitatis invenitur; si autem mens Dei ac proximi dilectione constringitur, cum tentationum motus quaelibet ei injusta suggesserint, obicem se illis ipsa dilectio opponit, et pravae suasionis undas virtutum ostiis ac vecte intimi amoris frangit. [Vet. XX.] Quia ergo Dominus per inspiratae charitatis fortitudinem nascentia in corde vitia reprimit, insurgentis maris impetum per obserata claustra compescit. Ira fortasse in occulto exasperat; sed ne quies superna perdatur, perturbationi mentis officium linguae subtrahitur, ne usque ad vocem exeat, quod in sinu cordis tumultuosum sonat. Luxuria in occultis cogitationibus accenditur; sed ne supernam munditiam mens amittat, conceptae immunditiae ea quae famulari poterant membra castigat, ne usque ad corruptionem corporis exhalet fetor cordis. Avaritia stimulat; sed ne coelesti regno mens careat, 917 intra claustra se parcimoniae contenta propriis ligat, ne in pravo se opere dilatet, et usque ad exteriores actus internae concupiscentiae aestus exsudet. Superbia inflat; sed ne veram celsitudinem amittat, considerando quisque quia pulvis est ab altitudine se conceptae elationis humiliat, certans nimirum ne quod in suggestione cogitationis tolerat in exercitationem operis erumpat. Bene ergo dicitur: Posui vectem et ostia, et dixi: Hucusque venies, et non procedes amplius, et hic confringes tumentes fluctus tuos, quia dum electus quisque et tentatur vitiis, et tamen facere male suggesta renititur, quasi mare clausum tenetur. Quod 918 etsi intus tumultuosis cogitationum fluctibus mentem percutit, statuta tamen bene vivendi littora non excedit. Quod mare quidem in tumore se erigit, sed dum fixa deliberatione cordis illiditur, fractum redit. Beatus igitur Job ne sibi tribuat quod contra procellas cordis fortiter stat, voce divina audiat: Quis conclusit ostiis mare, quando erumpebat, quasi de vulva procedens, et caetera. Ac si ei aperte diceretur: Incassum te exterius in bonis operibus pensas, si non me interius, qui in te tentationis undas compesco, consideras. Ut enim tu fluctus ferre possis in opere, meae virtutis est, qui fluctus frango tentationis in corde.

CAPUT PRIMUM 1.

Dei Filius in aeterna nativitate nobis ignotus, nasci voluit in tempore, ut se imitandum praeberet. Dominus Deus noster Jesus Christus in eo quod virtus et sapientia Dei est, de Patre ante tempora natus est (I Cor. I, 24); vel potius quia nec coepit nasci, nec desiit, dicamus verius semper natus. Non autem possumus dicere semper nascitur, ne imperfectus videatur. At vero ut aeternus designari valeat et perfectus, semper dicamus et natus, quatenus et natus ad perfectionem pertineat, et semper ad aeternitatem, ut quocunque modo illa essentia sine tempore temporali valeat designari sermone; quamvis hoc ipso quod perfectum dicimus, multum ab illius veritatis expressione deviamus, quia quod factum non est non potest dici perfectum. Et tamen infirmitatis nostrae verbis Dominus condescendens, ait: Estote perfecti, sicut et Pater vester coelestis perfectus est (Matth. V, 48). In illa itaque nativitate divina ab humano genere cognosci non poterat; proinde in humanitate venit ut videretur, videri voluit ut imitaretur. Quae carnis nativitas despecta visa est sapientibus mundi; contempserunt namque infirma humanitatis ejus, Deo haec indigna judicantes. Cui tanto magis homo debitor fuit, quanto pro illo Deus etiam indigna suscepit. Quia enim non cognovit mundus per sapientiam Deum, placuit Deo per stultitiam praedicationis salvos facere credentes (I Cor. I, 21). Ac si diceret: Cum Deum, qui est sapientia, nequaquam per sapientiam suam mundus inveniret, placuit ut Deum hominem factum per humanitatis stultitiam cognosceret, quatenus ejus sapientia ad nostra stulta descenderet, et lucem supernae prudentiae luto suae carnis illuminata nostra caecitas videret. Natus igitur ex Patre sine tempore, ex matre nasci est dignatus in tempore, ut per hoc quod ortum suum inter initium finemque concluderet, humanae mentis oculis ortum, qui nec initio sumitur, nec fine angustatur, aperiret. Unde bene nunc ad beatum Job dicitur:

CAPUT II [Rec.

II.] VERS. 12. Nunquid post ortum tuum praecepisti diluculo, et ostendisti aurorae locum suum? 2. Orto Domino, Ecclesia tanquam aurora a tenebris in lucem versa. Subaudis ut ego. Ortus quippe divinitatis ejus ante et post non habet. Cui dum semper esse est per aeternitatem, dum omne quod labitur circumscribit, intra semetipsum temporum discursus claudit. Ortus vera humanitatis ejus, quia et coepit, et desiit, et ante et post habere a tempore accepit. Sed quia, dum ipse umbras nostrae temporalitatis suscepit, lumen nobis suae aeternitatis infudit, recte post hunc ortum quem creator sibi in tempore condidit locum suum sine tempore aurora cognovit. Quia enim diluculum vel aurora a tenebris in lucem vertitur, non immerito diluculi vel aurorae nomino omnis electorum Ecclesia designatur. Ipsa namque dum ab infidelitatis nocte ad lucem fidei ducitur, velut aurorae more in diem post tenebras splendore supernae claritatis aperitur. Unde et bene in Canticis canticorum dicitur: Quae est ista quae progreditur quasi aurora consurgens (Cant. VI, 9)? Sancta enim Ecclesia coelestis vitae praemia appetens, aurora vocata est, quia dum peccatorum tenebras deserit, justitiae luce fulgescit. [Vet. II.] 3. Quandiu vivimus, aurora est, non perfectus dies. Habemus tamen subtilius aliquid quod considerata qualitate diluculi vel aurorae pensemus. Aurora namque vel diluculum noctem quidem praeteriisse nuntiant, nec tamen diei claritatem integram ostentant; sed dum illam pellunt, hanc suscipiunt, lucem tenebris permistam tenent. Quid itaque in hac vita omnes qui veritatem sequimur, nisi aurora vel diluculum sumus? quia et quaedam jam quae lucis sunt agimus, et tamen in quibusdam adhuc tenebrarum reliquiis non caremus. Per Prophetam quippe Deo dicitur: Non justificabitur in conspectu tuo omnis vivens (Psal. CXLII, 2). Rursumque scriptum est: In multis offendimus omnes (Jac. III, 2). Paulus quoque ait: Video aliam legem in membris meis repugnantem legi mentis meae, et captivum me ducentem in lege peccati, quae est in membris meis (Rom. VII, 23). Ubi ergo lex peccati 919 cum lege mentis contendit, profecto adhuc aurora est, quia lux quae jam emicuit, necdum praetereuntes funditus tenebras pressit. Adhuc aurora est, quia dum lex carnis legem mentis, et lex mentis legem carnis percutit, inter se vicissim lux et umbra confligit. Unde rursum Paulus cum diceret: Nox praecessit (Rom. XIII, 12), nequaquam subdidit, Dies venit, sed Dies autem appropinquavit. Qui enim post discessum noctis jam non venisse sed appropinquasse diem insinuat, esse se procul dubio ante solem post tenebras adhuc in aurora demonstrat. 4. Dies erit, cum nullae peccati tenebrae supererunt. Tunc autem plene sancta electorum Ecclesia dies erit, cum ei admista peccati umbra jam non erit. Tunc plene dies erit, quando interni luminis perfecto fervore claruerit. Tunc plene dies erit, quando nullam malorum suorum tentantem memoriam tolerans, omnes a se tenebrarum etiam reliquias abscondet. Unde et bene haec aurora quasi adhuc in transitu demonstratur, cum dicitur: Et ostendisti aurorae locum suum. Cui enim locus suus ostenditur, profecto ex alio ad aliud vocatur. Quid est enim locus aurorae, nisi perfecta claritas visionis aeternae? Ad quem cum perducta venerit, jam de transactae noctis tenebris nihil habet. Nunc autem adhuc tentationum molestias sustinens, quia per intentionem cordis ad aliud festinat Ecclesia, ad locum suum tendit aurora. Quem locum si mente non cerneret, in hujus vitae nocte remaneret. Sed cum quotidie contendit perfici, et in lucem quotidie augeri, locum suum jam conspicit, et plene sibi clarescere solem quaerit. Locum suum aurora considerat, quando sancta anima ad contemplandam conditoris sui speciem flagrat. Ad locum suum pertingere aurora satagebat, cum David diceret: Sitivit anima mea ad Deum vivum, quando veniam et apparebo ante faciem Dei (Psal. XLI, 3)? Locum suum veritas aurorae monstrabat, cum per Salomonem diceret: Quid habet amplius sapiens a stulto; et quid pauper, nisi ut pergat illuc ubi est vita (Eccl. VI, 8)? Quem profecto locum etiam praecedentibus incarnationem suam patribus post ortum suum Dominus ostendit, quia nisi per prophetiae spiritum, incarnandum supernae patriae regem cognoscerent, bona ejusdem patriae quam essent desiderabilia non viderent. Locum suum veritas aurorae patefecit, cum Patrem coram discipulis petiit, dicens: Pater, quos dedisti mihi, volo ut ubi ego sum et illi sint mecum (Joan. XVII, 24). Locum suum aurorae monstravit, cum diceret: Ubicunque fuerit corpus, illic congregabuntur et aquilae (Matth. XXIV, 28). Ad hunc locum quem cognoverat pervenire aurora festinabat, cum Paulus desiderium habere se diceret dissolvi, et cum Christo esse.: Et rursum Mihi vivere Christus est, et mori lucrum (Philip. I, 21). Et rursum: Scimus quoniam si terrestris domus nostra hujus habitationis dissolvatur, quod aedificationem ex Deo habemus, domum non manufactam, aeternam in coelis (II Cor. V, 4). Bene autem post ortum suum locum proprium aurorae ostendisse se perhibet, quia futurae retributionis beatitudinem, priusquam per corpus ipse innotesceret, in paucorum intellectu continuit. Cum vero humanae nativitatis infirma suscepit, venturae claritatis notitiam 920 in multitudinis innumerae amore dilatavit. Sed cum divini operis mysterium sic misericordia peragat, ut tamen et ira comitetur, quatenus occultus arbiter alios respiciens redimat, alios deserens perdat, quia cognovimus quomodo per incarnationem suam electos illuminet, audiamus nunc quomodo reprobos damnet. Sequitur:

CAPUT III [Rec. III].

VERS. 13. Nunquid tenuisti concutiens extrema terrae, et excussisti impios ex ea? 5. Dominus abjectos et humiles elegit. Extrema terrae Dominus tenuit, quia in fine saeculorum ad destitutam jam et alienigenis regibus subditam synagogam venit; atque ex illa impios excussit, quia spiritalia fidei praedicamenta renuentes, etiam a carnalis sacrificii gloria repulit. Vel certe extrema terrae tenuit, quia ex Judaea paucos abjectos et humiles elegit (Matth. IV, 18, seq.). Extrema terrae tenuit, quia legis doctores deserens, piscatores assumpsit. Dumque ejus extrema tenet, ex ea impios excutit, quia dum infirmos fideles roborat, fortes in illa infideles damnat. Recte vero etiam concutiens addidit, quia per adventum suum immensa formidine etiam reproborum corda commovit. Concussi quippe fuerant qui dicebant: Nihil proficimus, ecce totus mundus post eum abiit (Joan. XII, 19). Res autem quae concutitur huc illucque ducta fatigatur. Concussa ergo Judaea fuerat, quae de Christo per alios dicebat: Quia bonus est (Joan. VII, 12). Et per alios resistebat, dicens: Non, sed seducit turbas (Ibid.). Per alios dicebat: Nisi hic esset a Deo, non poterat facere quidquam (Joan. IX, 33). Atque ad extremum per alios clamat; Si non esset hic malefactor, non tibi tradidissemus eum (Joan. XVIII, 30). Concussi quidem, sed non prostrati sunt reprobi, cum modo miracula obstupescentes cernerent, modo infirmitatis opprobria despicientes irriderent. An non concussi fuerant, qui dicebant: Quousque animam nostram tollis? si tu es Christus, dic nobis palam (Joan. X, 24). Vel certe extrema terrae concussit et tenuit, quia cum infirma corda humilium pio timore terruit, nequaquam ea judicio districto dereliquit. Inde enim multitudo credentium in Deum robustius stetit, unde in se humiliata trepidavit. Nam quia eum Deus quem concutit tenet, insinuat per prophetam, dicens: Super quem requiescet spiritus meus, nisi super humilem et quietum, et trementem sermones meos (Isai. LXVI, 2, sec. LXX)? Quia eum quem concutit tenet, Salomone attestante intimatur, quia ait: Beatus vir qui semper est pavidus; qui autem mentis est durae, corruit in malum (Prov. XXVIII, 14). Igitur quia extrema Judaeae Dominus in apostolis tenuit, atque ex illa Scribas et Pharisaeos ac pontifices impietatis suae merito exigente reprobavit, quid adhuc de eorum damnatione subdatur audiamus. Sequitur:

CAPUT IV.

VERS. 14. Restituetur ut lutum signaculum, et stabit sicut vestimentum. 6. Judaei ab lateritio opere prius liberati, dum terrena sapiunt, iterum ad lateres redierunt. Quid aliud Dominus plebem Israeliticam nisi lutum reperit, quam obsequiis gentilium deditam in Aegypto servientem lateribus invenit? Quam dum tot miraculis ad terram repromissionis duxit (Exod. V, seq.), dum perductam cognitionis suae scientia implevit, dum tot arcana secretorum ei per prophetiam contulit; quid eam aliud quam servandi mysterii signaculum fecit? Ipsa quippe divina prophetia clausum continuit quidquid de se Veritas 921 in fine revelavit. Sed dum post tot divina secreta, post tot percepta miracula in Redemptoris sui adventu, plus terram quam veritatem dilexit, per sacerdotes dicens: Si dimittimus eum sic, omnes credent in eum, et venient Romani, et tollent nostrum locum et gentem (Joan. XI, 48), quasi ad eos quos in Aegypto reliqueret lateres rediit; et quae facta jam Dei signaculum fuerat, ad hoc se iterum quod deseruerat inflexit; lutumque se post signaculum in oculis veritatis exhibuit, cum per impietatis malitiam accepti verbi mysteria perdidit, et sola terrena sapere quae inquinant elegit. 7. Soli litterae servientes Deo per charitatem adhaerere noluerunt. Ubi apte subjungitur: Et stabit sicut vestimentum. Impolita namque et grossiora vestimenta etiam cum induta fuerint, quia induentis membris bene applicata non inhaerent, stare feruntur. Judaea igitur circa veritatis notitiam etiam cum servire videretur, sicut vestimentum stetit, quia per exteriora mandata servire se Domino ostendit, sed adhaerere ei per charitatis intelligentiam noluit. Dum solam in praeceptis Dei litteram tenuit, et nequaquam se per spiritum sensibus intimis junxit, quasi ei qui se induerat non adhaesit. Ubi et apte subjungitur:

CAPUT V.

VERS. 15. Auferetur ab impiis lux sua. 8. Cognitionem legis amiserunt, quod credere veritati renuerint. Quia dum credere veritati renuunt, cognitionem legis in perpetuum amittunt; et dum de accepta lege superbiunt, nimirum de scientiae suae gloria caecantur. Scriptum quippe est: Obscurentur oculi eorum, ne videant (Psal. LXVIII, 24). Rursumque scriptum est: Excaeca cor populi hujus, et aures ejus aggrava (Isai. VI, 10). Et rursum scriptum est: In judicium ego in hunc mundum veni, ut qui non vident, videant; et qui vident, caeci fiant (Joan. IX, 39). Et quia semetipsos de legis operibus contra conditorem legis extulerunt, apte subditur:

CAPUT VI.

IBID. Et brachium excelsum conteretur. 9. Superba legis observatio reprobata. Excelsum quippe brachium conteritur, quando, praedicata fidei gratia, superba legis operatio reprobatur, cum dicitur: Ex operibus legis non justificabitur omnis caro (Rom. III, 20). 10. Extrema Ecclesiae qui Deus et teneat et concutiat. Cuncta tamen haec intelligi et aliter possunt. Terram quippe Scriptura sacra vocare consuevit Ecclesiam. Extrema igitur terrae Dominus tenet et concutit, quia Ecclesiae suae ultima per adventum Antichristi persecutione immanissima turbari permittit, nec tamen permittendo deserit. Hanc terram aliquando Dominus tenet, et non concutit; aliquando tenet et concutit, quia modo eam tranquilla pace fidei possidet, modo commoveri impetu persecutionis jubet. 11. In Ecclesiae persecutionibus falsi Christiani excutiuntur sicut paleae. Bene autem cum diceret: Nunquid tenuisti concutiens extrema terrae, illico adjunxit: Et excussisti impios ex ea? Attestante enim Paulo, plerique in ea sunt qui confitentur se nosse Deum, factis autem negant (Tit. I, 16). Impios ergo ex ea Dominus excutit, quia hi quos nunc intima vitia possident, tunc in voraginem apertae infidelitatis cadent; atque in acervum palearum transeunt, cum tentationis illius aura commoventur. Et quamvis se nunc sub specie fidei intra areae sinum tegant, tunc nimirum extra granorum cumulum districti examinis ventilabro resilient. [Rec. IV.] 922 12. In illis signaculum fidei vertitur in lutum. Unde et apte subjungitur: Restituetur ut lutum signaculum. Ac si aperte diceret: Hi qui nunc videntur in Ecclesiae sinu signaculum, tunc ante oculos omnium restituentur ut lutum, id est, nequaquam judicia hominum de professione religionis fallunt, sed quod terrena sapiant, demonstrantur. Solet enim Scriptura sacra pro fide appellare signaculum, pro iniquitate lutum. Nam filius junior qui, consumpta substantia, ad patrem rediit (Luc. XV, 22), in munere annulum accepit. Gentilis enim populus, qui, immortalitate perdita, ad Deum poenitendo revertitur, per fidei signaculum munitur. Unde et a sponso suo Ecclesiae dicitur: Pone me ut signaculum super cor tuum (Cant. VIII, 6). Idcirco namque signaculum rebus ponitur, ne qua diripientium praesumptione temerentur. Sponsus ergo in corde signaculum ponitur quando fidei ejus mysterium in custodia nostrae cogitationis imprimitur, ut ille infidelis servus, nimirum noster adversarius, cum signata fide corda considerat, tentando ea irrumpere non praesumat. Per lutum vero terrena contagia demonstrantur, attestante Psalmista qui ait: Eduxisti me de lacu miseriae, et de luto faecis (Psal. XXXIX, 3). Quia igitur multi in terrenis contagiis inventi, perducti ad Ecclesiam, coelestis fidei sacramento signantur, et tamen ab iniquis operibus non recedunt, seque nunc fidei velamine contegunt, sed cum tempus invenerint, quid sint veraciter ostendunt, recte dicitur: Restituetur ut lutum signaculum. Quos enim nunc fideles credimus, ipsos tunc fidei hostes inveniemus; et quamvis appareant non tentati signaculum, erunt procul dubio tentati lutum. Unde et recte dicitur, Restituetur, quia qualis eorum conscientia esse ante fidem potuit, tales eos post modum reproba vita convincit. De quibus apte subjungitur: Et stabit sicut vestimentum. 13. Multis nunc quasi vestimentis ornatur Ecclesia, quibus, flagrante persecutione, nudabitur. Tot nunc quasi vestibus sancta Ecclesia induitur, quot fidelium veneratione decoratur. Unde et ei ostensis gentilibus, a Domino per prophetam dicitur: Vivo ego, dicit Dominus, quia omnibus his velut ornamento vestieris (Isai. XLIX, 18). Multis tamen quasi fidelibus nunc specie tenus induitur, sed pulsante persecutionis impetu, tunc eis exuta nudabitur; de quorum sorte hic dicitur: Et stabit sicut vestimentum. Stare vero hoc loco ponitur in peccato persistere. Unde scriptum est: Et in via peccatorum non stetit (Psal. I, 1). Vel certe reprobus quisque sicut vestimentum stare dicitur, ut non posse stare monstretur, quia sicut induta vestis in visionis suae specie per corpus tenditur, exuta autem fracta complicatur, ita unusquisque qui a sanctae Ecclesiae tunc statu recesserit, tensus ac decorus quasi dum indueretur fuit, sed exutus postmodum, confractus atque abjectus jacebit. Si vero stare intelligimus perdurare, sicut vestimentum stat quisque reprobus qui in hac vita quam diligit breviter durat. Unde et per Prophetam dicitur: Omnia sicut vestimentum veterascent, et sicut opertorium mutabis ea, et mutabuntur (Psal. CI, 28). Haec itaque, quae allegoriarum nube recta intulit, nunc verbis apertioribus innotescit, subdens:

CAPUT VII.

VERS. 15. Auferetur ab impiis lux sua. 14. Credentibus et male viventibus fidei lumen auferetur, maxime persecutionis Antichristi tempore. Neque enim eos nunc Dei lumen illustrat, 923 qui iniquitatis suae malitiam fidei nomine palliant. [Vet. III, Rec. V.] Nam dum juxta praedicationem fidei vivere negligunt, et tamen eamdem fidem specie tenus venerantur, honorem vitae praesentis ex nomine religionis quaerunt, hocque eis ex fide lucet, quod eos fides coram hominibus refovet. Sunt vero nonnulli, qui aeterna quae audiunt veraciter credunt, et tamen eidem quam tenent fidei male vivendo contradicunt. Habent hi quoque in tenebris lucem suam, quia dum perversa agunt, et tamen de Deo recta sentiunt, ne tenebrescant funditus, ex quadam parte fulgore luminis illustrantur. Qui dum plus terrena quam coelestia, plus quae vident quam quae audiunt, diligunt, pulsante persecutionis articulo, quod rectum credere videbantur amittunt. Quod illo maxime tempore multiplicius agitur, quando, surgente ipso iniquorum capite, in sanctam Ecclesiam persecutione ultima, liberis suis viribus ejus fortitudo grassatur. Ibi tunc cor uniuscujusque ostenditur, ubi quidquid in occultis latebat aperitur; et qui nunc ore sunt pii, et corde sunt impii, publicata malitia corruunt, et lucem fidei quam specie tenus tenuerant perdunt. Sed inter haec necesse est ut unusquisque nostrum ad cordis sui secretum redeat, et actionis suae damna pertimescat, ne, exigentibus meritis, per districtam justitiam judiciorum Dei in talium hominum numerum incurrat. [Rec. VI.] 15. Jam in membris suis vivit et saevit Antichristus. Nemo autem sibi incaute blandiatur, et idcirco se a tali casu extraneum credat, quia ad illius tempestatis procellam pervenire se non existimat. O quanti illius tentationis tempora non viderunt, et tamen in ejus tentationis procella versantur. Cain tempus Antichristi non vidit, et tamen membrum Antichristi per meritum fuit (Genes. IV). Judas saevitiam persecutionis illius ignoravit, et tamen viribus crudelitatis ejus, avaritia suadente, succubuit (Matth. XXVI, 15). Simon divisus longe ab Antichristi temporibus exstitit, et tamen ejus se superbiae, miraculorum potentiam perverse appetendo, conjunxit (Act. VIII, 19). Sic iniquum corpus suo capiti, sic membris membra junguntur, cum et cognitione se nesciunt, et tamen prava sibi actione copulantur. Neque enim Pergamus Balaam libros aut verba cognoverat, et tamen ejus nequitiam sequens, voce supernae increpationis audiebat: Habes illic tenentes doctrinam Balaam, qui docebat

Balac mittere scandalum coram filiis Israel, edere et fornicari (Apoc. II, 14). Thyatirae quoque ecclesiam a Jezabel notitia et tempora et loca dividebant; sed quia eam par vitae reatus astrinxerat, inesse ei Jezabel dicitur, atque operibus perversis insistere, angelo attestante, qui ait: Habeo adversus te aliqua; quia permittis mulierem Jezabel, quae se dicit propheten, docere et seducere servos meos, fornicari et manducare de idolothytis (Ibid., 20). Ecce quia reperiri potuerunt, qui Jezabel vitam reproba actione secuti sunt, Jezabel illic inventa memoratur, quia videlicet pravum corpus conjuncti mores unum faciunt, etiam si hoc loca vel tempora scindunt. Unde fit ut in perversis suis imitatoribus et iniquus quisque maneat qui jam praeteriit, et in suis operatoribus ipse iniquorum auctor jam appareat, 924 qui necdum venit. Hinc Joannes ait: Nunc Antichristi multi facti sunt (I Joan. II, 18), quia iniqui omnes jam ejus membra sunt, quae scilicet perverse edita caput suum male vivendo praevenerunt. Hinc Paulus ait: Ut reveletur in suo tempore; nam mysterium jam operatur iniquitatis (II Thess. II, 6). Ac si diceret: Tunc Antichristus manifestus videbitur; nam in cordibus iniquorum secreta sua jam nunc occultus operatur. Ut enim de apertioribus criminibus taceam, ecce alius fratri in corde suo tacitus invidet, et si occasionem reperiat, eum supplantare contendit; cujus alterius membrum est, nisi ejus de quo scriptum est: Invidia diaboli mors intravit in orbem terrarum (Sap. II, 24)? Alius magni meriti esse se aestimans, per tumorem cordis cunctis se praeferens, omnes semetipso inferiores credit; cujus alterius membrum est, nisi ejus de quo scriptum est: Omne sublime videt, et ipse est rex super universos filios superbiae (Job. XLI, 25)? Alius mundi hujus potentiam quaerit, non quo aliis prosit, sed quo ipse alteri subditus non sit; cujus alterius membrum est, nisi ejus de quo scriptum est: Qui dixit: Sedebo in monte testamenti, in lateribus Aquilonis; ascendam super altitudinem nubium; similis ero Altissimo (Isai. XIV, 18)? Solus quippe Altissimus ita dominatur super omnia, ut alteri subesse non possit. Quem diabolus imitari perverse voluit, cum suum dominium quaerens, ei subesse recusavit. Imitatur ergo diabolum quisquis idcirco potestatem suam appetit, quia ei qui sibi est superna ordinatione praepositus subesse fastidit. [Vet. IV.] 16. Infidelitatis rei sunt, qui veritatem negant. Sunt praeterea plurima quae quosdam in ipsa pace Ecclesiae constitutos infideles esse renuntient. Video namque nonnullos ita personam potentis accipere, ut requisiti ab eo, pro favore ejus non dubitent in causa proximi veritatem negare. Et quis est veritas, nisi ille qui dixit: Ego sum via, veritas, et vita (Joan. XIV, 6)? Neque enim Joannes Baptista de confessione Christi, sed de justitiae veritate requisitus occubuit (Marc. VI, 28); sed quia Christus est veritas, ad mortem usque idcirco pro Christo, quia videlicet pro veritate, pervenit. Ponamus ergo ante oculos quod aliquis percunctatus personam potentis accepit, et ne verbi saltem injuriam pateretur, veritatem negavit. Quid rogo iste faceret in dolore poenarum, qui Christum erubuit inter flagella verborum? Ecce et post haec ante oculos hominum adhuc Christianus est, et tamen si eum Dominus districte disposuit judicare, jam non est. 17. Et qui corrigere, cum teneantur, negligunt. Non desunt in pace Ecclesiae Antichristi tentamenta. Video autem alios, quibus per locum magisterii exhortandi sunt officia arguendique commissa, qui vident aliquid illicitum admitti, et tamen dum quorumdam potentum offendere gratiam metuunt, arguere non praesumunt. Quisquis iste est, quid aliud facit, nisi videt lupum venientem, et fugit (Joan. X, 12)? Fugit, quia tacuit; tacuit, quia, despecta aeterna gratia, temporalem gloriam plus amavit. Ecce ante potentis faciem intra sui se latebras silentii abscondit, et sicut persecutioni publicae, sic occulto locum dedit timori. Bene de talibus dicitur: Dilexerunt gloriam hominum magis quam Dei (Joan. XII, 43). Quisquis igitur talis est, si haec districte judicantur, etsi persecutio publica defuit, tamen tacendo 925 Christum negavit. Non ergo desunt vel in pace Ecclesiae Antichristi tentamenta. Nemo itaque illa persecutionis extremae tempora quasi sola perhorrescat. Apud iniquos namque quotidie res Antichristi agitur, quia in eorum cordibus mysterium suum jam nunc, occultus operatur. Et si multi nunc specie tenus intra Ecclesiam constituti simulant se esse quod non sunt, in adventu tamen judicis prodentur quod sunt: de quibus bene Salomon ait: Vidi impios sepultos, qui etiam cum adhuc viverent, in loco sancto erant, et laudabantur in civitate, quasi justorum operum (Eccle. VIII, 10). Igitur postquam de iniquis dictum est, Restituetur ut lutum signaculum, et stabit sicut vestimentum, et auferetur ab impiis lux sua, quod utique in illa est Antichristi persecutione faciendum, mox, de ejusdem Antichristi perditione nos consolans, ait

CAPUT VIII.

VERS. 15. Et brachium excelsum conteretur. 18. Antichristi superbia et casus. Angelus et homo lapsi, quia Deo similes esse per potentiam, non per justitiam, voluerunt. Quid namque aliud excelsum brachium accipitur, nisi superba Antichristi celsitudo, quae super reprobas mentes hominum fastu gloriae saecularis erigitur, ita ut homo peccator, et tamen aestimari homo despiciens, Deum se super homines mentiatur? Unde et Paulus apostolus dicit: Ita ut in templo Dei sedeat, ostendens se tanquam sit Deus (II Thess. II, 4). Cujus ut tumorem plenius ostenderet, praemisit: Qui adversatur et extollitur super omne quod dicitur Deus, aut quod colitur (Ibid.). Deus enim dici aliquando et homo potest, juxta quod ad Moysen dicitur: Ecce constitui te Deum Pharaonis (Exod. VII, 1). Deus vero coli purus homo non potest. Quia vero se Antichristus et super sanctos quosque homines, et super ipsius potentiam divinitatis extollit, per exactum sibi nomen gloriae, et hoc quod Deus dicitur, et hoc quod Deus colitur, transire conatur. Notandum vero est in quantam superbiae foveam cecidit, qui in mensura ruinae qua lapsus est non permansit. Diabolus quippe vel homo a statu conditionis propriae elata mente corruerunt, ut vel ille diceret: Ascendam super altitudinem nubium, similis ero Altissimo (Isai. XIV, 13); vel iste audiens crederet: Aperientur oculi vestri, et eritis sicut dii (Genes. III, 5). Idcirco ergo uterque cecidit, quia esse Deo similis non per justitiam, sed per potentiam concupivit. Sed homo per gratiam liberatus, qui Dei similitudinem perverse appetendo ceciderat, in reatu criminis sui longe Deo imparem se esse cognoscens clamat: Domine, quis similis tibi (Psal. LXXXVIII, 8)? Diabolus vero in lapsu sui criminis justi dimissus, in mensura ruinae suae minime permansit; sed quanto diutius ab omnipotentis gratia defuit, tanto magis reatum criminis cumulavit. Nam qui ideo cecidit, quia perverso ordine Deo esse similis voluit, eo usque perductus est, ut in Antichristum veniens, videri Deo similis dedignetur, atque eum quem habere non potuit superbus aequalem, damnatus inferiorem putet. Nam cum de illo hoc quod jam praemisimus dicitur: Extollens se supra omne quod dicitur Deus, aut quod colitur (II Thess. II, 4), aperte monstratur quia appetendo dudum Dei similitudinem, quasi juxta Deum erigere se voluit, sed in superbiae culpa crescendo, jam se supra omne quod Deus dicitur et colitur extollit. Quia ergo haec ejus superbia districti judicis erit adventu ferienda, sicut scriptum est: Quem Dominus Jesus interficiet spiritu oris sui, 926 et destruet illustratione adventus sui (Ibid., 8), recte dicitur: Et brachium excelsum conteretur. 9. Verbi divini, quo plus teritur, virtus magis augetur. Cuncta tamen haec, quae bis discussa sunt, adhuc intelligi et aliter possunt. Verba enim Dei quasi pigmenta quaedam nostri sunt adjutorii. Et sicut pigmentum quanto plus teritur, tanto plus in poculo ejus virtus augetur, ita divina eloquia quo magis exponendo conterimus, eo audientes amplius quasi bibentes juvamus. [Vet. V.] Quia igitur misericors Deus diu peccata hominum tolerat, et cum jam vicinum finem respicit, plerumque mentes peccantium immutat, recte de se, vim tantae pietatis insinuans, ait:

CAPUT IX.

VERS. 13. Nunquid tenuisti concutiens extrema terrae, et excussisti impios ex ea? 20. Deus hominem non deserit, et in extremis electos sollicitius purgat. Per terram quippe homo infima sapiens designatur, cui peccanti dictum est: Terra es, et in terram ibis (Genes. III, 19). Sed quia pius conditor facturam suam non deserit, mala hominum et per suam sapientiam tolerat, et per eorum quandoque conversionem relaxat. Cum autem duras atque insensibiles mentes respicit, modo eas minis, modo verberibus, modo revelationibus terret, ut quae pessima securitate duruerant, salubri timore molescant, quatenus vel sero redeant, et hoc ipsum saltem, quod diu exspectati sunt erubescant. Sic enim Dominus quia extrema vitae nostrae plus judicat, et idcirco electos suos in fine sollicitius purgat. Scriptum quippe est: Deus judicabit fines terrae (I Reg. II, 10). Tanto ergo impensius ultimis nostris invigilat, quanto in ipsis pendere initia vitae sequentis pensat. Quod quia misericorditer facit, pietate sua in medium deducta, qua etiam sero conversos peccatores recipit, beati Job justitiam erudit, dicens: Nunquid tenuisti concutiens extrema terrae, et excussisti impios ex ea? Subaudis ut ergo, qui in suis ultimis saepe peccatores terrendo concutio, convertendo teneo, atque ab eorum cordibus impios cogitationum motus evello. Et recte beato Job Dominus quomodo juxta finem peccatores convertat insinuat. Ac si aperte dicat: Misericordiae meae potentiam respice, et tuae justitiae elationem preme. Quae extrema hominis quia, etiam cum convertitur per carnis mortem, illa antiquae culpae vindicta comitatur, protinus insinuat, cum dicit.

CAPUT X.

VERS. 14. Restituetur ut lutum signaculum, et stabit sicut vestimentum. 21. Homo Dei signaculum et imago, in poenam superbiae, per mortem fit terra et cinis. Hominem quippe Dominus, quem ad suam similitudinem condidit, quasi quoddam suae potentiae signaculum fecit. Quod tamen ut lutum restituetur, quia licet aeterna supplicia per conversionem fugiat, in ultione tamen perpetratae superbiae carnis morte damnatur. Ex luto quippe homo conditus, et mentis accepta ratione, similitudine divinae imaginis decoratus, elatione cordis intumescens, quod de infimis formatus esset oblitus est. Unde mira conditoris justitia actum est ut quia per sensum intumuit, quem rationabilem accepit, rursus terra per mortem fieret, quam esse se considerare humiliter noluit; et quia peccando Dei similitudinem perdidit, moriendo vero ad limi sui materiam redit, recte dicitur: Restituetur ut lutum signaculum. Et quia de corpore dum spiritus vocatur, quodam quasi involucro suae carnis exuitur, 927 apte de eodem luto subjungitur: Et stabit sicut vestimentum. Lutum namque nostrum sicut vestimentum stare est usque ad resurrectionis tempus inane exutumque perdurare. Sed quia hanc poenam superbiae nec illi transeunt, qui et eamdem superbiam vivendo humiliter vincunt; quae sit superbientium specialis poena, subjungit dicens:

CAPUT XI.

VERS. 15. Auferetur ab impiis lux sua, et brachium excelsum confringetur. 22. Mors quae electos luci restituit, reprobis lucem, nimirum praesentis vitae gloriam tollit. Mors enim carnis, quae electos luci suae restituit, lucem suam reprobis tollit. Lux namque superbientis est gloria vitae praesentis. Quae ei lux tunc subtrahitur, cum per carnis interitum ad retributionum suarum tenebras vocatur. Ibi tunc excelsum brachium confringitur, quia celsitudo cordis ultra naturae ordinem violenter arrepta opprimentis se divinae justitiae mole dissipatur, ut quia se perverse in brevi erexerat, per pondus judicii in aeternum fracta cognoscat. Nullus autem nostrum quid post mortem sequeretur agnosceret, nisi vitae nostrae conditor ad poenam usque mortis nostrae veniret. Nisi enim ipse misericorditer infima peteret, nequaquam nos post suam imaginem perditos juste ad summa revocaret. Unde et recte subjungitur:

CAPUT XII [Rec. VII].

VERS. 16. Nunquid ingressus es profundum maris, et in novissimis abyssi deambulasti? 23. Dominus non solum in mundum, sed etiam in infernum pro nobis descendit. Ac si dicat: Ut ego, qui non solum mare, id est saeculum, per assumptam humanam carnem atque animam petii, sed etiam per eam sponte in morte positam, usque ad ultima inferni, quasi ad maris profunda descendi. Si enim mare, more divini eloquii, saeculum debet intelligi, nihil prohibet profunda maris inferni claustra sentiri. Quod profundum maris Dominus petiit, cum inferni novissima, electorum suorum animas erepturus, intravit. Unde et per prophetam dicitur: Posuisti profundum maris viam, ut transirent liberati (Isai. LI, 10). Hoc namque profundum maris ante Redemptoris adventum non via, sed carcer fuit, quia in se etiam bonorum animas, quamvis non in locis poenalibus, clausit. Quod tamen profundum viam Dominus posuit, quia illuc veniens, electos suos a claustris inferni ad coelestia transire concessit. Unde et apte illic dicitur: Ut transirent libertati (Ibid., 10). Quod vero profundum maris dixerat, hoc, aliis verbis replicans, abyssi novissimum vocat, quia sicut aquarum abyssus nulla nostra visione comprehenditur, ita occulta inferni nullo a nobis cognitionis sensu penetrantur. Qui enim hinc subtrahantur cernimus, sed quae illos juxta meritum retributio suppliciorum maneat, non videmus. [Vet. VI.] 24. In inferno deambulavit, quia liber ad ligatos venit. Vigilanti vero est cura pensandum quod in novissimo abyssi deambulasse se perhibet. Deambulare quippe non constricti, sed liberi est. Quem enim vincula stringunt, ejus nihilominus gressus impediunt. Quia igitur Dominus nulla peccati vincula pertulit, in inferno deambulavit. Liber quippe ad ligatos venit. Unde scriptum est: Factus sum sicut homo sine adjutorio, inter mortuos liber (Psal. LXXXVII, 5). In novissimis ergo abyssi Domino deambulare est in loco damnationis nihil suae retentionis invenire, attestante Petro, qui ait: Solutis doloribus inferni, juxta quod impossibile erat teneri illum ab eo (Act. II, 24). Vel certe quia deambulando nos cum de loco 928 ad locum ducimur, hic illicque praesentes invenimur; deambulasse in inferno Dominus dicitur, ut electis animabus in locis singulis per divinitatis potentiam praesens fuisse monstraretur. Unde et spiritus sapientiae mobilis describitur (Sap. VII, 4), ut per hoc quod nusquam deest, ubique nobis occurrere designetur. Quam descensionem suam Dominus tanto mirabilem respicit, quanto eam redempto homini crebrius infundit. Eam namque adhuc replicans subdit:

CAPUT XIII.

VERS. 17. Nunquid apertae sunt tibi portae mortis, et ostia tenebrosa vidisti? 25. Portas mortis, hoc est potestates adversas superavit. Portae enim mortis sunt potestates adversae. Quas descendens Dominus aperuit, quia earum fortitudinem moriendo superavit. Quae appellatione quoque alia tenebrosa ostia vocantur, quia dum per occultationis suae insidias non videntur, deceptis mentibus viam mortis aperiunt. Quae tenebrosa ostia Dominus videt, quia immundorum spirituum fraudulentam malitiam et respicit et premit. Quos nisi ipse nobis nescientibus videndo prohiberet, et nil de insidiis eorum mens nostra cognosceret, et eisdem insidiis capta deperiret. Quae tenebrosa etiam nos ostia cernimus, quando supernae lucis radiis illustramur. Unde et per prophetam dicitur: Dominus mihi adjutor est, et ego videbo inimicos meos (Psal. CXVII, 7). Hostes igitur nostros ipse videt, qui suo eos munere nobis visibiles facit. Vel certe tenebrosa tunc ostia Dominus vidit, cum claustra inferni penetrans, crudeles spiritus perculit, et mortis praepositos moriendo damnavit. Quod idcirco hic non adhuc de futuro, sed jam de praeterito dicitur, quia hoc quod facturus erat in opere, nimirum jam fecerat in praedestinatione. Quia vero post mortem resurrectionemque ejus crevit Ecclesia, atque in cunctis est gentibus dilatata, apte subjungitur:

CAPUT XIV [Vet. VII].

VERS. 18. Nunquid considerasti latitudinem terrae? 26. Morte Christi crevit Ecclesia. Tanquam Samson, plures hostium moriens exstinxit quam vivens. Dum enim Dominus angustias mortis petiit, fidem suam in gentibus dilatavit, atque ad innumera corda credentium sanctam Ecclesiam extendit. Cui per prophetam dicitur: Dilata locum tentorii tui, et pelles tabernaculorum tuorum extende, ne parcas, longos fac funiculos tuos, et clavos tuos consolida; ad dexteram enim et ad laevam penetrabis, et semen tuum gentes haereditabit (Isai. LIV, 2). Quae latitudo terrae profecto non fieret, nisi ipse prius et vitam quam novimus moriendo despiceret, et vitam quam non novimus resurgendo monstraret. In morte quippe sua nostrae oculos mentis aperuit, et quae esset vita quae sequeretur ostendit. Unde et hunc in Evangelio ordinem tenens, discipulis dicit: Sic oportebat Christum pati, et resurgere a mortuis tertia die, et praedicari in nomine ejus poenitentiam, et remissionem peccatorum per omnes gentes (Luc. XXIV, 46). Pauci enim ex plebe Israelitica ipso praedicante crediderunt; innumeri vero gentium populi viam vitae moriente illo secuti sunt. Superbos namque dum adhuc passibilis viveret pertulit, a passibili vero vita mortuus stravit. Quod bene Samson in semetipso dudum figuraliter expressit (Judic. XVI, 30), qui paucos quidem dum viveret interemit; destructo autem templo, hostes innumeros cum moreretur occidit, quia nimirum Dominus ab elatione superbiae paucos cum viveret, plures vero cum templum 929 sui corporis solveretur exstinxit (Joan. II, 19); atque electos ex gentibus quos vivendo sustinuit, simul omnes moriendo prostravit. Recte itaque postquam inferna penetrasse se docuit, considerandam mox terrae latitudinem subjunxit: Nunquid considerasti latitudinem terrae? Ac si flagellato homini diceret: Perpende quid pertuli, et pensa quod emi; nec queraris ipse de verbere, dum nescis quae te praemia maneant in retributione. Inter haec itaque verba creatoris operae pretium puto, si a bono communi ac publico parumper oculos flectimus, et quid in singulis nobis latenter agat intuemur. Dicit enim:

CAPUT XV [Rec. VIII].

VERS. 16. Nunquid ingressus es profundum maris? 27. Maris profundum Deus ingreditur, cum peccatoris mentem visitat. Mare quippe est mens humana, cujus profunda Deus ingreditur quando per cognitionem suam ad lamenta poenitentiae ab intimis cogitationibus perturbatur, quando prioris vitae nequitias ad memoriam reducit, et fluctuantem in confusione sua animum concutit. Profundum maris Deus penetrat, quando etiam desperata corda permutat. Ipse enim mare intrat quando cor saeculare humiliat, profundum maris ingreditur quando visitare mentes etiam pressas sceleribus non dedignatur. Unde et recte percunctando subjungitur: Et in novissimis abyssi deambulasti? Quae enim est abyssus, nisi mens humana, quae dum semetipsam comprehendere non valet, sese in omne quod est, velut obscura abyssus, latet? Unde bene per prophetam dicitur: Dedit abyssus vocem suam, ab altitudine phantasiae suae (Habac. III, 10), quia dum semetipsam mens humana non penetrat, ex comparatione sui, divinae naturae potentiam quam comprehendere non sufficit humilius laudat. 28. In novissimis abyssi deambulat, cum nequissimorum corda convertit. In novissimis ergo abyssi Deo deambulare est etiam nequissimorum corda hominum convertere, et desperatas mentes visitationis suae vestigiis tangendo mirabiliter reformare. Cum enim post immensa scelera, unusquisque compungitur, quid aliud quam in novissimis abyssi Deus deambulans videtur? Quasi in abysso namque Deus deambulat, cum obscurum cor penetrans, fluctus invisibiles vitiorum calcat. Plerumque enim praeterita alia plangimus, et aliis praesentibus urgemur, ut modo superbia, modo ira, modo luxuria, modo avaritia tentante fatigemur. Sed cum cuncta haec in corde nostro Dominus occultae visitationis suae timore reprimit, quid aliud quam in abysso gressus ponit? Quos gressus mente conspicimus, quando contra insurgentia vitia quomodo timoris ejus obvient dona pensamus. Hos namque gressus Propheta conspexerat, cum dicebat: Visi sunt ingressus tui, Deus, ingressus Dei mei, regis mei, qui est in sancto ipsius (Psal. LXVII, 25). Qui enim inordinatos motus animi divinorum judiciorum memoria in se reprimi conspicit, quasi deambulantis in se gressus Domini videt. Dicatur ergo beato Job: Nunquid ingressus es profundum maris, et in novissimis abyssi deambulasti? Subaudis ut ego, qui mira misericordia in peccatorum cordibus modo iram, modo luxuriam, modo avaritiam, modo surgentem superbiam calco. 930 Ac si ei aperte diceretur: Si latentia cordis vitia me solum reprimere conspicis, tu extolli de propria justificatione cessabis. [Vet. VIII.] Et quia cum divinitus visitamur etiam de occultis et illicitis motibus mentis ad confessionem ducimur, recte subjungitur:

CAPUT XVI.

VERS. 17. Nunquid apertae sunt tibi portae mortis? 29. Portae mortis sunt cogitationes pravae, quas Deo per confessionem pandimus. Portae enim mortis sunt cogitationes pravae, quas Deo pandimus, quando eas in poenitentia flendo confitemur. Quas etiam non confessas intuetur, sed confessas ingreditur. Tunc quippe viam sibi in portis mortis aperit, quando, solutis pravis cogitationibus, ad nos post confessionem venit. Quae portae mortis idcirco vocatae sunt, quia profecto via ad interitum per iniquas semper cogitationes aperitur. Quod adhuc replicatur, cum subditur: IBID. Et ostia tenebrosa vidisti? 30. Tenebrosa namque ostia sunt latentia mentis mala. Tenebrosa namque ostia sunt latentia mentis mala, quae et haberi intrinsecus possunt, et tamen ab altero videri non possunt. Quae tamen Dominus cernit, quando ea occulto respectu gratiae destruit. Scriptum quippe est: Rex qui sedet in solio judicii, dissipat omne malum intuitu suo (Prov. XX, 8). Et quia omne vitium angustat, omnis vero virtus animum dilatat, post destructa vitia recte subjungitur: Nunquid considerasti latitudinem terrae? Nisi enim virtus animum dilataret, nequaquam Paulus Corinthiis diceret: Dilatamini et vos, et nolite jugum ducere cum infidelibus (II Cor. VI, 13). Solerter vero intuendum est quod dicitur:

CAPUT XVII.

VERS. 18. Considerasti latitudinem terrae? 31. Sancti dum exterius angustiis premuntur, intus dilatantur. Latitudo namque bonorum interiorum nequaquam comprehenditur, nisi caute consideretur. Nam plerumque eos exterius inopia humiliat, poenae cruciatus angustat; sed tamen inter haec semper interior fortitudo se usque ad speranda coelestia dilatat. Angustati apostoli exterius fuerant, quando flagella sustinebant; sed in magna stabant intus latitudine liberi, qui apud se haec eadem flagella in gaudium verterant. Scriptum namque est: Ibant apostoli gaudentes a conspectu concilii, quoniam digni habiti sunt pro nomine Jesu contumeliam pati (Act. V, 41). Hanc latitudinem inter angustias Paulus invenerat, qui dicebat: Scire autem vos volo, fratres, quia quae circa me sunt magis ad profectum venerunt Evangelii, ita ut vincula mea manifesta fierent in omni praetorio (Philip. I, 12). Hanc latitudinem David inter angustias obtinebat, dicens: In tribulatione dilatasti me (Psal. IV, 2). Tunc itaque haec terra, id est sanctorum conscientia, dilatatur, cum mundi hujus adversitatibus; exterius premitur. Nam cum a praesentis vitae securitate repellitur, intus ad se impingitur, ut ad speranda superna tendatur. Cumque evagari exterius non permittitur, quasi in sinum suum revocata dilatatur. Nos autem quae boni viri adversa tolerent cernimus, sed intus quantum gaudeant non videmus. Mentis eorum latitudinem modo in verbis, modo in operibus considerando cognoscimus, sed tamen quanta in eis amplitudo sit ejusdem latitudinis ignoramus. Audiat ergo 931 humana sapientia, et se insipientem discat: Nunquid considerasti latitudinem terrae? Ac si dicat: ut ego, qui flagellis cinctam, occultam justorum laetitiam solus plene considero, quia solus misericorder formo. Vel certe idcirco beatus Job utrum terrae latitudinem consideraverit inquiritur, ut exemplo alienae latitudinis humilietur. Ac si ei aperte diceretur: Eos quos innumera mala praesentis vitae nequeunt angustare considera, et de statu cordis tui inter verbera gloriari cessa. Sequitur:

CAPUT XVII [Vet.

et Rec. IX]. VERS. 18-20. Indica mihi, si nosti omnia, in qua via habitet lux, et tenebrarum quis locus sit, ut ducas unumquodque ad terminos suos, et intelligas semitas domus ejus. 32. Per lucem justitia, per tenebras iniquitas designatur. Qui in justitia perseveraturi sint, aut in peccato morituri, nos latet. Beatus Job gravi quaestione discutitur, ut et de via lucis, et tenebrarum loco requiratur; ut unumquodque ad suos terminos ducat, ac semitas domus ejus intelligat. Quid enim lucis nomine, nisi justitia accipitur? et quid per tenebras, nisi iniquitas designatur? Unde quibusdam conversis a peccatorum nequitia dicitur: Eratis aliquando tenebrae, nunc autem lux in Domino (Ephes. V, 8). Et de quibusdam in peccato manentibus memoratur: Qui dormiunt, nocte dormiunt (I Thess. V, 7). Beato itaque Job dicitur: Indica mihi si nosti omnia, in qua via habitet lux, et tenebrarum quis locus sit? Ac si dicatur ei: Si plenam te habere scientiam suspicaris, dic vel in cujus cor ea quae nunc deest, innocentia veniat, vel in cujus corde ea quae nunc est malitia perseveret. In qua via habitet lux, id est cujus mentem veniens justitia impleat: Et tenebrarum quis locus sit, id est, in quo iniquitas caeca perduret: Ut ducas unumquodque ad terminos suos, id est, ut dijudices si vel is qui nunc iniquus cernitur, in iniquitate vitam finiat; vel is qui justus cernitur extremitatem vitae suae cum justitiae perfectione concludat: Et intelligas semitas domus ejus, id est, consideres atque discernas, vel cui bona actio perseverans aeternam mansionem praestet in regno, vel quem usque ad terminum suum actio prava constringens in aeternum damnet supplicium. Domus quippe pro mansione ponitur, semita pro actione. Semita igitur ad domum ducit, quia actio ad mansionem pertrahit. Sed quis hominum ista discussus dicat? quis ista saltem imperterritus audiat? Multos enim videmus quotidie, qui justitiae luce resplendent, et tamen ad finem suum nequitiae obscuritate tenebrantur; et multos cernimus peccatorum tenebris obvolutos, et tamen juxta vitae suae terminum repente reddi luci justitiae liberos. Multos etiam novimus semel inventam viam justitiae illibate usque ad mortem tenuisse, et plerosque conspeximus usque ad exitum coepta semel crimina sine cessatione cumulasse. 33. Judiciorum Dei nubila, mentis nostrae radiis impervia. Quis vero inter ista occultorum judiciorum nubila mentis suae radium mittat, ut aliqua consideratione discernat, vel quis perduret in malo, vel quis perseveret in bono, vel quis ab infimis 932 convertatur ad summa, vel quis a summis revertatur ad infima? Latent haec sensus hominum, nec quidquam de cujuslibet fine cognoscitur, quia divinorum judiciorum abyssus humanae mentis oculo nullatenus penetratur. Videmus namque quod illa adversa Deo gentilitas justitiae luce perfusa est, et Judaea dudum dilecta perfidiae est nocte caecata. Scimus etiam quod latro de patibulo transivit ad regnum (Luc. XXIII, 43), Judas de apostolatus gloria est lapsus in tartarum (Matth. XXVII, 5). Rursumque quia aliquando sortes quae coeperint non mutantur, et latronem novimus alium pervenisse ad supplicium, et apostolos scimus percepisse propositum quod desideraverant regnum. Quis ergo discutiat in qua via habitet lux, et tenebrarum quis locus sit, ut ducat unumquodque ad terminos suos, et intelligat semitas domus ejus? Video Paulum ex illa persecutionis saevitia ad gratiam apostolatus vocatum (Act. IX, 1, seq.), et tamen sic inter judicia occulta formidat, ut reprobari se, etiam postquam vocatus est, timeat. Ait enim: Castigo corpus meum, et in servitutem redigo, ne forte aliis praedicans, ipse reprobus efficiar (I Cor. IX, 27). Et rursum:

Ego me non arbitror comprehendisse; unum autem, quae quidem retro sunt oblitus, ad ea quae sunt priora extendens meipsum, ad destinatum sequor, ad palmam supernae vocationis Dei, in Christo Jesu. Sequor autem si comprehendam, in quo et comprehensus sum (Philip. III, 13). Et certe jam de illo voce dominica dictum fuerat: Vas electionis mihi est (Act. IX, 15); et tamen adhuc castigans corpus suum metuit ne reprobetur. 34. Spem nostram potius comitetur timor quam securitas. Vae laudabili etiam vitae, si remota pietate judicetur. Vae miseris nobis, qui de electione nostra nullam adhuc Dei vocem cognovimus, et jam in otio quasi de securitate torpemus. Debet profecto, debet in spe esse non solum securitas, sed etiam timor in conversatione, ut et illa certantes foveat, et iste torpentes pungat. Unde recte per prophetam dicitur: Qui timent Dominum, sperent in Domino (Psal. CXIII, 11). Ac si aperte diceret: De spe incassum praesumit, qui timere Deum in suis operibus renuit. Sed cur beatus Job de tam valida quaestione requiritur, quae omnino ab hominibus ignoratur, ut justorum iniquorumque terminum comprehendat, nisi ut aliorum finem cognoscere non valens, ad suum recurrat, quia sicut aliorum, sic etiam suum nesciat, et nesciens timeat, timens humilietur, humiliatus jam de operibus suis extolli non debeat, et non elatus in gratiae arce persistat? Dicatur ergo ei: Indica mihi, si habes intelligentiam, in qua via habitet lux, et tenebrarum quis locus sit; ut ducas unumquodque ad terminos suos. Ac si diceretur: Sicut qui de malis convertantur ad bona, vel qui de bonis ad mala redeant, nescis, ita etiam nec de te quid tuis meritis exigentibus agatur intelligis. Et sicut alienum nullatenus comprehendis, ita etiam tuum terminum praenoscere non vales. Jam enim quantum ipse profeceris scis, sed quid adhuc de te ego in occulto sentiam nescis. Jam justitiae tuae acta consideras, sed quam districte apud me pensentur ignoras. Vae etiam laudabili vitae 933 hominum, si remota pietate judicetur, quia districte discussa inde ante oculos judicis unde se placere suspicatur obruitur. Unde recte Deo per Prophetam dicitur: Non intres in judicium cum servo tuo, quia non justificabitur in conspectu tuo omnis vivens (Psal. CXLII, 2). Unde bene per Salomonem dicitur: Sunt justi atque sapientes, et opera eorum in manu Dei, et tamen nescit homo utrum amore, an odio dignus sit, sed omnia in futurum servantur incerta (Eccle. IX, 1). Hinc rursum per eumdem Salomonem dicitur: Quis hominum intelligere poterit viam suam (Prov. XX, 24)? Et nimirum bona malave quis faciens conscientia attestante cognoscitur. Sed idcirco dicitur quod via sua ab hominibus nesciatur, quia etiam si recta se quisque opera agere intelligat, sub districto tamen examine quo tendat, ignorat. [Vet. et Rec. X.] Igitur postquam illum de ista finis sui consideratione perterruit, ad examinandum ejus exordium redit; ac ne conqueratur cur finem suum nesciat, commemoratur etiam quia nec quo huc initio accessit intelligat. Nam sequitur:

CAPUT XIX.

VERS. 21. Sciebas tunc quod nasciturus esses, et numerum dierum tuorum noveras? 35. Nullus hominum suum initium novit aut finem. Ac si aperte diceret: Quid mirum si terminum tuum non intelligis, qui nec initium comprehendis? Et qui ignoras quo huc initio veneris, quid mirum si nescias quo fine subtraharis? Si ergo meum fuit te per initium ex occultis ad prompta producere, meum quoque erit etiam te ex promptis ad occulta revocare. Cur de vitae tuae dispensatione aliquid quereris, qui in manu artificis temetipsum nesciens teneris? Extolli itaque tanto magis non debes in eo quod agis, quanto intra sinum aeternitatis clausus, nec quo huc ordine veneris, nec quando vel quomodo hinc educaris agnoscis. 36. Ab hac lege Christus eximitur. Haec tamen intelligi et aliter possunt: Sciebas tunc quod nasciturus esses, et numerum dierum tuorum noveras? Subaudis ut ego, qui me nasciturum novi, quia et ante humanitatis ortum in divinitate semper substantialiter vixi. Homines quippe tunc esse incipiunt, cum in matrum suarum ventre nascuntur. Nam ipsa quoque conceptio nativitas dicitur, juxta hoc quod scriptum est: Quod in ea natum est, de Spiritu sancto est (Matth. I, 20). Et idcirco se nascituros nesciunt, quia nec priusquam creentur existunt. Deus vero qui sine initio semper exstitit praescivit de se hoc quod in utero Virginis initium sumpsit; et quia praescivit, disposuit; quia disposuit, nihil profecto in humana forma sine sua voluntate toleravit. Convincatur ergo cur de flagellis suis homo queritur, qui ortum suum praescire non potuit, si ipse etiam qui ortum suum praesciendo disposuit se inter homines ad flagella praeparavit. Sequitur:

CAPUT XX [Rec. XI].

VERS. 22, 23. Nunquid ingressus es thesauros nivis, aut thesauros grandinis aspexisti, quae praeparavi in tempus hostis, in diem pugnae et belli? 37. Improbi ad justorum probationem servantur. Quid aliud nive vel grandine, nisi frigida ac dura intelligenda sunt corda pravorum? Sicut enim fervore charitas, sic solet in sacro eloquio frigore malitia designari. Scriptum namque est: Sicut frigidam facit cisterna aquam suam, sic frigidam facit animam malitia sua (Lerem. VI, 7). Et rursum: Abundabit iniquitas, et refrigescet charitas multorum (Matth. XXIV, 12). In 934 frigore ergo nivis, vel in duritia grandinis, quid accipi aptius potest quam vita pravorum, quae et per torporem frigescit, et per duritiae malitiam percutit? Quorum tamen vitam Dominus tolerat, quia eos ad justorum suorum probationem servat. Unde et recte subjunxit: Quae praeparavi in tempus hostis, in diem pugnae et belli. Ut cum adversarius noster diabolus tentare nos nititur, eorum moribus quasi suis contra nos armis utatur. Per ipsos quippe nos saeviens cruciat, sed nesciens purgat. Peccatis namque nostris ipsi flagella fiunt, de quorum tali vita dum percutimur, ab aeterna morte liberamur. Unde agitur ut electorum vitae proficiat etiam perdita vita reproborum, et utilitati nostrae dum illorum perditio militat, mira dispensatione fiat quatenus electis Dei non pereat etiam omne quod perit. [Vet. XI.] 38. Aliqui ex illis electi sunt, et ad maxima vocati. Intelligi hoc quoque aliter potest, ut quia verbis praecedentibus videtur annexum, a superioris versus expositione non discrepet. Nam quia indicaverat vel bonos ad malum, vel malos ad bonum posse converti, illico secutus adjunxit: Nunquid ingressus es thesauros nivis, aut thesauros grandinis aspexisti, quae praeparavi in tempus hostis, in diem pugnae et belli? In nive vel grandine frigida, vel dura, ut dictum est, accipimus corda pravorum. Sed quia omnipotens Deus sanctos suos de talibus elegit, et quam multos electos adhuc inter pravorum vitam repositos habeat novit, apte in nive, vel grandine thesauros habere se perhibet. Thesaurus quippe ἀπὸ τῆς θέσεως, id est a positione nominatur. Et plerosque in vita frigida diu latentes respicit, quos ad medium cum jubet producit, et justitiae nitore candidos per supernam gratiam ostendit. Scriptum quippe est: Lavabis me, et super nivem dealbabor (Psal. L, 9). Quos ad diem belli pugnaeque praeparatos diu intra suae praescientiae sinum tegit; sed cum repente eos eduxerit, resistentia adversariorum pectora illorum verbis ac redargutionibus quasi quibusdam grandinibus percutit. Unde alias scriptum est: Prae fulgore in conspectu ejus nubes transierunt, grando et carbones ignis (Psal. XVII, 13). Prae fulgore enim nubes transeunt, quia praedicatores sancti universa mundi spatia miraculorum claritate percurrunt. Qui etiam grando et carbones ignis vocati sunt, quia et per correptionem feriunt, et per flammam charitatis accendunt. Ipsa quoque libera sanctorum increpatio natura grandinis convenienter exprimitur. Grando enim veniens percutit, liquata rigat. Sancti autem viri corda audientium et terrentes feriunt, et blandientes infundunt. Nam quemadmodum feriant Propheta testatur, dicens: Virtutem terribilium tuorum dicent, et magnitudinem tuam narrabunt (Psal. CXLIV, 6). Et quemadmodum blandientes rigent secutus adjunxit: Memoriam abundantiae suavitatis tuae eructabunt, et justitia tua exsultabunt (Ibid., 7). In nive ergo vel grandine habentur thesauri, quia plerique iniquitatis torpore frigidi, ad supernam gratiam assumpti, in sancta Ecclesia justitiae luce fulgescunt, et pravam adversariorum scientiam doctrinae suae ictibus tundunt. Unde et apte subditum est: Quae praeparavi in tempus hostis, in diem pugnae et belli. [Vet. XII.] Nix quippe vel grando fuerat Saulus per frigidam insensibilitatem; sed nix et grando contra adversariorum 935 pectora factus est, vel candore justitiae, vel districti eloquii correptione. O qualem hunc thesaurum in nive et grandine habuit, quando illum inter pravorum vitam positum jam tunc electum suum Dominus latenter vidit! O ad quanta adversariorum pectora ferienda hanc in manu sua grandinem sumpsit, per quam tot sibi resistentia corda prostravit. 39. Nemo extollatur, nemo desperet. Nemo itaque de suis operibus extollatur, nemo desperet eos quos adhuc frigidos videt, quia thesauros Dei in nive et grandine non videt. Quis enim crederet quod per apostolatus gratiam lapidatum Stephanum ille praecederet qui in morte ejus omnium lapidantium vestimenta servavit (Act. VII, 57)? Si ergo ad ista dona vel judicia occulta recurrimus, nullos omnino desperantes, nec illis nos in corde nostro praeferimus, quibus pro tempore praelati sumus, quia etsi jam videmus quantum praecessimus, nescimus quantum cum currere coeperint praecedamur. Bene ergo ad beatum Job dicitur: Nunquid ingressus es thesauros nivis, aut thesauros grandinis aspexisti, quae praeparavi in tempus hostis, in diem pugnae et belli? Ac si aperte diceretur: Nulli te de operibus tuis praeferas, quia de his quos intueris adhuc per culpam frigidos, quantos operatores justitiae et defensores rectae fidei sim facturus ignoras. Quod quia per adventum Mediatoris agitur, recte subjungitur:

CAPUT XXI [Rec. XII].

VERS. 24. Per quam viam spargitur lux? 40. Per adventum Mediatoris lux sparsa. Ipse quippe via est, qui ait: Ego sum via, veritas et vita (Joan. XIV, 6). Per hanc ergo viam lux spargitur, quia per ejus praesentiam cuncta gentilitas illustratur. Spargitur autem convenienter dixit, quia per apostolorum voces non angustata atque coarctata, sed late fulgens lux praedicationis emicuit. Quia vero, accepta luce conversionis, inardescit intrinsecus vis amoris, ut vel transacta mala anxie lugeantur, vel ventura bona flagrantissime requirantur, competenter adjungitur:

CAPUT XXII.

IBID. Dividitur aestus super terram. 41. Ex hac luce flagrat ardor charitatis et persecutionis aestus. Sparsa enim luce aestus super terram dividitur, quia, per apertum justitia praedicata, ad requirendum Deum cordis anxietas in virtutem exercitatione dilatatur, ut iste in sermone sapientiae, ille in sermone scientiae fulgeat; hic in curationum gratia, ille in virtutum operatione convalescat; et dona sancti Spiritus dum dispariliter singuli accipiunt, necessario sibimet juncti omnes unanimiter accendantur (I Cor. XII, 8). [Vet. XIII.] Sed postquam spargi lux dicitur, potest convenienter intelligi quod per aestum persecutio designatur, quia ut lux praedicationis inclaruit, mox a perfidorum cordibus ardor persecutionis exarsit. Nam quod per aestum persecutio exprimitur, dominicus sermo testatur, de jactatis seminibus super petrosam terram dicens: Sole orto aestuaverunt omnia, et quia non habebant radicem, aruerunt (Matth. XIII, 6). Quod paulo post cum exposuit, aestum persecutionem vocavit. Sparsa igitur luce aestus super terram divisus est, quia clarescente vita fidelium, accensa est crudelitas perfidorum. Divisus namque aestus erat, quando nunc Jerosolymis, nunc Damasci, nunc in aliis longe regionibus persecutio saeviebat. Scriptum quippe est: Facta est in 936 illa die persecutio magna in Ecclesia, quae erat Jerosolymis, et omnes dispersi sunt per regionem Judaeae et Samariae (Act. VIII, 1). Rursumque scriptum est: Saulus adhuc spirans minarum et caedis in discipulos Domini, accessit ad principem sacerdotum, et petiit ab eo epistolas, quas deferret in Damascum ad synagogas, ut si quos invenisset hujus vitae viros ac mulieres, vinctos deduceret in Jerusalem (Act. IX, 1, seq.). Quia ergo nunc hic, nunc illic persecutio excreverat, hi qui lucem veritatis agnoverant, quasi sub ardore divisi aestus anhelabant. 42. Lux est justitia, quae non nisi successive spargitur. Sed quia beatum Job de occultis judiciis requisitum superioribus dictis audivimus, oportet ut hoc quod de sparsa luce vel diviso aestu dictum est subtilius perscrutemur. Adhuc enim alta interrogatione discutitur, ut saltem quia nesciat doceatur, eique dicatur: Per quam viam spargitur lux, dividitur aestus super terram? Quid enim lucis nomine, nisi justitia designatur? De qua scriptum est: Populus qui sedebat in tenebris, vidit lucem magnam (Isai. IX, 2). Omne autem quod spargitur, non continue, sed sub quadam intermissione jactatur. Et idcirco spargi lux dicitur, quia etsi jam quaedam ut sunt perspicimus, quaedam tamen ita ut videnda sunt non videmus. Cor namque Petri lux sparsa tenuerat, qui tanto fidei, tanto miraculorum fulgore claruerat, et tamen conversis gentibus dum circumcisionis pondus imponeret, quid rectum diceret nesciebat. Lux ergo in hac vita spargitur, quia ad omnis rei intelligentiam continua non habetur. Dum enim aliud sicut est comprehendimus, et aliud ignoramus, quasi sparsa luce et ex parte cernimus, et in obscuritate ex parte remanemus. Tunc vero lux nobis sparsa jam non erit, quando mens nostra ad Deum funditus rapta fulgescet. 43. Quibus modis humano cordi insinuetur, ignoramus. Et quia haec eadem lux quibus modis humano cordi insinuetur ignoratur, recte in percunctatione dicitur: Per quam viam spargitur lux? Ac si aperte diceretur: Dic quo ordine justitiam meam occultis sinibus cordium infundo, cum et per accessum non videor, et tamen visibilia opera hominum invisibiliter immuto, cum unam eamdemque mentem modo hac, modo illa virtute irradio, et tamen per sparsan, lucem adhuc ex parte aliqua eam in tentationis tenebris remanere permitto. Requiratur homo nesciens per quam viam spargitur lux, ac si patenter dicatur: Dum dura corda emollio, dum rigida inflecto, dum aspera mitigo, dum frigida accendo, dum debilia roboro, dum vaga stabilio, dum nutantia confirmo, intuere, si vales, incorporaliter veniens quibus ea meatibus illustro. Haec quippe omnia nos facta cernimus, nam qualiter intrinsecus efficiantur ignoramus. Hanc viam lucis esse nobis invisibilem, in Evangelio Veritas ostendit, dicens: Spiritus ubi vult spirat; et vocem ejus audis, et nescis unde veniat et quo vadat (Joan. III, 8). [Vet. XIV.] 44. Hac luce crescente, tentationes succrescunt. Sed quia cum lux spargitur mox ab occulto adversario contra fulgentem mentem tentamenta succrescunt, recte subjungitur: Dividitur aestus super terram. Hostis namque callidus quos justitiae luce enitescere conspicit, eorum mentes illicitis desideriis inflammare contendit, ut plerumque plus 937 se urgeri tentationibus sentiant, quam tunc cum lucis internae radios non videbant. Unde et Israelitae postquam vocati sunt, contra Moysen et Aaron de excrescente labore conqueruntur, dicentes: Videat Dominus et judicet, quoniam fetere fecistis odorem nostrum coram Pharaone et servis ejus, et praebuistis ei gladium, ut interficeret nos (Exod. V, 21). Volentibus quippe ex Aegypto discedere, Pharao paleas subtraxerat, et tamen ejusdem mensurae opera requirebat. Quasi ergo contra legem mens submurmurat, post cujus cognitionem tentationum stimulos acriores portat; et cum sibi labores crescere conspicit, in eo quod adversario displicet, quasi fetere se in oculis Pharaonis dolet. Post lucem ergo aestus sequitur, quia post illuminationem divini muneris tentationis certamen augetur. 45. Pro unius cujusque indole hostis ad malum nos sollicitat. Recte vero etiam dividi aestus dicitur, quia nimirum non singuli omnibus, sed quibusdam vicinis ac juxta positis vitiis fatigantur. Prius enim conspersionem uniuscujusque antiquus adversarius perspicit, et tunc tentationis laqueos apponit. Alius namque laetis, alius tristibus, alius timidis, alius elatis moribus existit. Quo ergo occultus adversarius facile capiat, vicinas conspersionibus deceptiones parat. Quia etenim laetitiae voluptas juxta est, laetis moribus luxuriam proponit. Et quia tristitia in iram facile labitur, tristibus poculum discordiae porrigit. Quia timidi supplicia formidant, paventibus terrores intentat. Et quia elatos extolli laudibus conspicit, eos ad quaeque voluerit blandis favoribus trahit. Singulis igitur hominibus vitiis convenientibus insidiatur. Neque enim facile captivaret, si aut luxuriosis praemia, aut avaris scorta proponeret, si aut voraces de abstinentiae gloria, aut abstinentes de gulae imbecillitate pulsaret, si mites per studium certaminis aut iracundos capere per pavorem formidinis quaereret. Quia ergo in tentationis ardore callide singulis insidians vicinos moribus laqueos abscondit, recte dicitur: Dividitur aestus super terram. 46. Deus tentationes moderatur, ne aut multae sint, aut nimiae. Sed cum praemittitur: Per quam viam spargitur lux. Statimque subjungitur: Dividitur aestus super terram. Nimirum per eamdem viam per quam lux spargitur etiam dividi aestus indicatur. Alta quippe atque incomprehensibilis Spiritus sancti gratia cum luce sua nostras mentes irradiat, etiam tentationes adversarii dispensando modificat, ut simul multae non veniant, aut ipsae tantummodo quae ferri possunt illustratam jam a Deo animam tangant, ut cum tactus sui ardore nos cruciant, perfectionis incendio non exurant; Paulo attestante qui ait: Fidelis autem Deus, qui non patietur vos tentari supra id quod potestis, sed faciet cum tentatione etiam exitum, ut possitis sustinere (II Cor. X, 13). Hunc ergo aestum aliter dividit callidus supplantator, aliter misericors conditor. Ille dividit ut per illum citius interimat, iste ut eum tolerabilem reddat. Et quia cum tentatione fatigamur, non solum interno Dei spiritu instruimur, sed etiam exterioribus praedicantium verbis adjuvamur, recte post divisum aestum subditur:

CAPUT XXIII.

[Vet. XV, Rec. XIII]. VERS. 25. 938 Quis dedit vehementissimo imbri cursum? 47. Crescente persecutione, crevit apostolorum et sanctorum praedicatorum ardor. Praedicatio, cessante gratia, ad cor non transit. Si vero, ut superius diximus (Num. 41), divisi aestus nomine illa in Judaeae regionibus persecutio designatur, quia ipsa persecutionis asperitas praedicatores sanctos superno munere adjutos a praedicationis suae ministerio nullo timore compescuit, apte subjungit: Quis dedit vehementissimo imbri cursum? Ac si diceret: nisi ego. Diviso enim aestu, cursum vehementissimo imbri dedisse est inter ipsas persecutionis angustias praedicationis impetum roborasse, ut tanto magis virtus praedicantium cresceret, quanto magis persequentium crudelitas obviaret, quatenus arentia corda audientium pluviae guttis infunderent, et siccitatem perfidiae uberius irrigarent, ut quamvis contra eos saevitiae aestus candesceret, per eos tamen vox gratiae non taceret. Hunc persecutionis aestum Paulus et tolerabat et irrigabat, cum diceret: Laboro usque ad vincula, quasi male operans, sed verbum Dei non est alligatum (II Tim. II, 9). De hoc imbre alias dicitur: Mandabo nubibus ne pluant super eam imbrem (Isai. V, 6). De hoc cursu imbris qui in electorum cordibus agitur Psalmista testatur, dicens: Velociter currit sermo ejus (Psal. CXLVII, 15). Plerumque vero imber est, et cursum non habet, quia praedicatio ad aures venit, sed, cessante interna gratia, ad corda audientium non pertransit. De cujus praedicationis verbis propter electos dicitur: Etenim sagittae tuae pertransierunt (Psal. LXXVI, 19). Sagittae quippe Dei pertranseunt quando verba praedicationis ejus ab auribus ad corda descendunt. Quod quia solo divino munere agitur, imbri cursum Dominus se dedisse testatur. 48. Verbi divini efficacia persuadentis omnia relinquere, omnia tolerare. Sed notandum video quod eumdem imbrem non vehementem, sed vehementissimum vocat. Imber vehemens est vis magna, imber vero vehementissimus vis immensa praedicationis. Vehemens namque imber erat cum praedicatores sancti credere gaudia aeterna suadebant. Imber autem vehementissimus, quando propter spem admonebant rem deseri, cuncta visibilia propter invisibilia contemni, et propter audita gaudia praesentis saeculi poenas cruciatusque tolerari. Sed cum, fide cognita, saeviente aestu persecutionis, tot electi possessa reliquerunt, carnalis affectus obliti sunt, et prae gaudio spiritus in cruciatibus membra posuerunt, quid aliud Dominus fecit, nisi etiam vehementissimo imbri cursum praebuit, qui usque ad exsequenda summa praecepta per verba corporis invisibilia cordis irrigavit? Ubi et apte subjungitur:

CAPUT XXIV [Vet. XVI].

IBID.Et viam sonanti tonitrui. 49. Tonitruo hinc simile dicitur. Solus Deus corda per gratiam aperit. Quid enim per tonitruum, nisi praedicatio superni terroris accipitur? Quem terrorem dum percipiunt humana corda quatiuntur. Aliquando vero in tonitruo ipse incarnatus Dominus figuratur, qui ex antiquorum patrum conveniente prophetia ad notitiam nostram quasi ex nubium concursione prolatus est. Qui inter nos visibiliter apparens, ea quae super nos erant terribiliter sonuit. Unde et ipsi sancti apostoli de ejus gratia generati, Boanerges, id est filii tonitrui sunt vocati (Marc. III, 17). Aliquando autem, sicut dictum est, tonitruus ipsa ejus praedicatio accipitur, 939 per quam supernorum judiciorum terror auditur. Sed quia quilibet praedicator verba dare auribus potest, corda vero aperire non potest; et nisi per internam gratiam solus omnipotens Deus praedicantium verbis ad corda audientium invisibiliter aditum praestet, incassum praedicatio aure audientis percipitur, quae pervenire ad intima corde surdo prohibetur, se Dominus viam sonanti tonitrui dare asserit, qui cum praedicationis verba tribuit, per terrorem corda compungit. Hanc viam Paulus praedicator egregius, dum superna mysteria terribiliter insonaret, se a se habere non posse conspiciens, discipulos admonebat, dicens: Orantes simul et pro nobis, ut Deus aperiat nobis ostium verbi, ad loquendum mysterium Christi (Colos. IV, 3). Qui ergo loquebatur mysteria, sed in corde audientium eisdem mysteriis a Domino aperiri ostium precabatur, habebat quidem jam tonitruum, sed dari ei desuper viam quaerebat. Hanc viam nequaquam se Joannes dare posse cognoverat, qui dicebat: Non necesse habetis ut aliquis doceat vos, sed sicut unctio ejus docet vos de omnibus (I Joan. II, 27). Hanc viam rursum Paulus quis daret intimabat, dicens: Neque qui plantat est aliquid, neque qui rigat, sed qui incrementum dat Deus (I Cor. III, 7). Accepta igitur via quid iste imber ac tonitruus agat audiamus. Sequitur:

CAPUT XXV [Rec. XIV].

VERS. 26. Ut plueret super terram absque homine in deserto, ubi nullus mortalium commoratur. 50. Gentilitas desertum est, coelesti gratia tanquam imbre irroratum. Super terram absque homine in deserto pluere est verbum Dei gentilitati praedicare. Quae dum nullum cultum Divinitatis tenuit, nullamque in se speciem boni operis ostendit, videlicet desertum fuit. In qua quia legislator non fuit, et qui rationabiliter Deum quaereret non fuit, quasi hominum nullus fuit, et velut solis bestiis occupata, vacua a mortalibus exstitit. De hac deserti terra alias dicitur: Posuit in deserto viam (Isai. XLIII, 19). De hac praedicatione gentilitati concessa Psalmista testatur, dicens: Posuit flumina in deserto (Ps. CVI, 33). [Vet. XVII.] Notandum vero est quod postquam aestus super terram divisus est, cursum vehementissimus imber accepit, ut in deserto plueret, quia postquam in Judaea asperitas persecutionis inhorruit, ut non solum fidem minime reciperet, sed etiam eam gladiis impugnaret, ad Israel missus quisque praedicator ad evocandas gentes deflexit. Unde sancti apostoli Hebraeis persequentibus, quos deserunt, dicunt: Vobis oportebat primum loqui verbum Dei; sed quia repellitis illud, et indignos vos judicatis aeternae vitae, ecce convertimur ad gentes (Act. XIII, 46). Diviso igitur aestu, deserta et absque homine terra compluitur, quia dispersa in Judaeae regionibus persecutione fidelium, derelicta dudum et quasi ab infusione rationis aliena, praedicationis guttis gentilitas irroratur. Quae gentilitas quasi adhuc a praedicatoribus sit inventa ostenditur, cum subditur: VERS. 27. Ut impleret inviam et desolatam. Quid vero compluta reddidit, monstratur, cum illico adjungitur:

CAPUT XXVI.

IBID. Et produceret herbas virentes. 51. Prius invia prophetiae, patuit gratiae. Invia namque dudum gentilitas fuit, ad quam via Dei verbo non patuit. Redemptore quippe nostro veniente, sic accepit vocationem gratiae, 940 ut non in ea prius fuerit via prophetiae. Desolata etiam recte vocata est, vel ratione videlicet consilii, vel fructu boni operis destituta. Dedit ergo Dominus vehementissimo imbri cursum, et viam sonanti tonitrui, ut in deserto plueret, et impleret inviam et desolatam, et produceret herbas virentes; id est, exteriori praedicationi internam aspirationem contulit, ut corda gentilium arentia virescerent, clausa patescerent, inania complerentur, infecunda germinarent. [Vet. XVIII.] 52. Aeternae vitae opera doctrinamque germinavit. In Scriptura enim sacra aliquando herba viror gloriae temporalis accipitur, aliquando refectio diaboli, aliquando sustentatio praedicatorum, aliquando bona operatio, aliquando aeternae vitae scientia atque doctrina. Viror namque gloria temporalis accipitur, sicut Propheta ait: Mane sicut herba transeat, mane floreat et pertranseat (Psal. LXXXIX, 6). Mane namque sicut herba florere atque transire est in prosperitate hujus saeculi temporalis gloriae decus velociter arescere. Herba refectio diaboli accipitur, sicut de illo a Domino dicitur: Huic montes herbas ferunt (Job. XL, 15). Ac si diceret: Superbi ac tumidi dum se illicitis cogitationibus atque actionibus efferunt, suis illum iniquitatibus pascunt. Herba sustentatio praedicantium demonstratur, cum dicitur: Producit in montibus fenum, et herbam servituti hominum (Psal. CXL, 8). In montibus quippe fenum et servituti hominum herba producitur, cum sublimes hujus saeculi, ad fidei cognitionem vocati, sanctis praedicatoribus in hujus vitae itinere transitoria alimenta largiuntur. Herba bona operatio ponitur, sicut scriptum est: Germinet terra herbam virentem (Genes. I, 11). Quod licet in conditione mundi ita historice factum teneamus, terram tamen Ecclesiam figurasse non inconvenienter accipimus, quae in eo germinavit herbam virentem, in quo ad verbum Dei fecunda misericordiae opera protulit. Herbam aliquando scientiam atque doctrinam aeternae viriditatis accipimus, sicut per Jeremiam dicitur: Onagri steterunt in rupibus, traxerunt ventos quasi dracones, defecerunt oculi eorum, quia non erat herba (Jerem. XIV, 5). Quo dicto superba ac nequissima Judaeorum est persecutio prophetata. Ipsi quippe onagri pro mentis elatione, ipsi dracones pro virulenta cogitatione vocati sunt. Qui steterunt in rupibus, quia non in Deo, sed in summis potestatibus hujus mundi confisi sunt dicentes: Regem non habemus nisi Caesarem (Joan. XIX, 15). Traxerunt ventos quasi dracones, quia spiritu elationis inflati superbia malitiosa tumuerunt. Defecerunt oculi eorum, quia scilicet spes eorum ab eo quod intendebat corruit. Quae temporalia diligens, praestolari aeterna neglexit, et terrena ideo quia Deo praeposuit amisit. Dixerunt enim: Si dimittimus eum sic, omnes credent in eum, et venient Romani, et tollent nostrum locum et gentem (Joan. XI, 48). Timuerunt ne locum non occiso Domino perderent, et tamen occiso perdiderunt. Sed cur ista miseris evenerint, subdit: Quia non erat herba; id est, quia eorum cordibus defuit aeternitatis scientia, et nullo eos refecit pabulo viriditatis internae doctrinae. Hoc igitur loco quid aliud virentes herbas nisi sanctae doctrinae scientiam vel congruas operationes accipimus? Deserta igitur terra 941 compluitur, ut ab ea virentes herbae producantur, quia dum sanctae praedicationis imbrem gentilitas percepit, et vitae opera et doctrinae herbam germinavit. Ista viriditas voce prophetica desertae terrae pollicetur, cum dicitur: In cubilibus in quibus prius dracones habitabant orietur viror calami et junci (Isai. XXXV, 7). Quid enim per calamum nisi praedicatores, quid per juncum qui juxta aquae humorem semper nascitur nisi pusilli ac teneri auditores sacri eloquii designantur? In draconum ergo cubilibus viror calami et junci oritur, quia in eis populis quos antiqui hostis malitia possidebat, et doctorum scientia, et auditorum obedientia coacervatur. [Vet. XIX.] 53. Singulorum corda sunt velut desertum, antequam imbre gratiae fecundentur. Haec tamen quae generaliter de gentilitate dicta sunt si solerter inspicimus, intra sinum sanctae Ecclesiae agi in singulis videmus. Sunt enim plerique ad verba Dei valde insensibiles, qui fidei quidem nomine censentur, verba vitae auribus audiunt, sed ea transire usque ad interna cordis minime permittunt. Hi quid aliud quam deserta terra sunt? Quae scilicet terra hominem non habet, quia eorum mens sensu rationis caret. Et nullus mortalium in hac terra commoratur, quia et si quando in eorum conscientia rationabilium sensuum cogitationes veniunt, non persistunt. Prava enim desideria in eorum cordibus sedem inveniunt, recta vero si quando venerint, ac si impellantur, decurrunt. Sed cum misericors Deus imbri suo cursum et sonanti tonitrui viam dare dignatur, compuncti per internam gratiam verbis vitae aures cordis aperiunt. Et impletur terra invia, quia dum praebet auditum verbo, cumulatur mysterio. Et producit herbas virentes, quia per gratiam compunctionis infusa, praedicationis verba non solum libenter recipit, sed etiam ubertim reddit, ut quod audire non poterat jam loqui concupiscat; et quae non audiendo etiam intrinsecus aruerat, jam loquendo quae sancta sunt viriditate sua quoslibet esurientes pascat. Unde bene per prophetam dicitur: Emitte spiritum tuum et creabuntur, et renovabis faciem terrae (Psal. CIII, 30). Sic enim sic facies terrae virtute renovationis immutatur, dum sicca dudum mens gratia veniente compluitur, et post ariditatem pristinam, quasi productis herbis, scientiae viriditate vestitur. Quae conditoris nostri gratia adhuc nobis altius commendatur, cum subditur:

CAPUT XXVII [Vet.

XX, Rec. XV]. VERS. 28. Quis est pulviae pater? vel quis genuit stillas roris? 54. Imber hic voluntarius, non pro nostris meritis datur. Aliquando tanquam ros stillat, aliquando ut pluvia ubertim manat. Ac si diceret nisi ego, qui siccam terram humani cordis guttis scientiae gratuito aspergo. De hac enim pluvia alias dicitur: Pluviam voluntariam segregabis, Deus, haereditati tuae (Psal. LXVII, 10). Voluntariam quippe pluviam haereditati suae Dominus segregat, quia non eam nobis pro nostris meritis, sed pro suae munere benignitatis praestat. Et idcirco hoc loco pater pluviae dicitur, quia superna nobis praedicatio non de nostro merito, sed de ejus gratia generatur. Stillae enim roris ipsi sancti praedicatores sunt, qui arva pectoris nostri inter mala vitae praesentis, quasi inter tenebras siccae noctis arentia, gratia supernae largitatis infundunt. De his stillis contumaci Judaeae dicitur: Propterea prohibitae sunt 942 stillae pluviarum, et serotinus imber non fuit (Jerem. III, 3). Ipsae quippe stillae roris sunt quae stillae pluviarum. Quando enim dispensatione aliqua praedicationem temperant, quasi rorem tenerum aspergunt. Quando vero ea quae de supernis sentiunt virtute qua praevalent loquuntur, quasi ubertim manantem pluviam fundunt. Rorem aspergebat Paulus, cum Corinthiis diceret: Non enim judicavi scire me aliquid inter vos, nisi Christum Jesum, et hunc crucifixum (I Cor. II, 2). Et rursum pluviam manabat, dicens: Os nostrum patet ad vos, o Corinrinthii, cor nostrum dilatum est (II Cor. VI, 11). Hinc est quod Moyses, qui et valida fortibus, et tenera infirmis dicturum se noverat, dicebat: Exspectetur sicut pluvia eloquium meum, et descendant sicut ros verba mea (Deut. XXXII, 2). Sed ecce audivimus quo munere gentilitas vocatur; audiamus nunc qua districtione Judaea repellitur. Audivimus quomodo deserta excolat, arentia infundat; audiamus nunc quomodo ea quae quasi videntur interna projiciat. Neque enim sic colligit electos, ut non etiam judicet reprobos; neque sic quibusdam culpas relaxat, ut non et in quibusdam feriat. Scriptum quippe est: Misericordia enim et ira ab illo (Eccli V, 7). Unde hic quoque postquam tot dona gratiae intulit, etiam irae suae judicia non abscondit. Nam sequitur:

CAPUT XXVIII [Vet. XXI].

VERS. 29. De cujus utero egressa est glacies, et gelu de coelo quis genuit? 55. Judaei reprobati, quasi ex misericordiae divinae utero ejecti, licet a sanctis patriarchis orti. Quid enim aliud in gelu vel glacie nisi frigida et perfidiae torpore constricta accipimus corda Judaeorum? Qui quondam per acceptionem legis, per custodiam mandatorum, per ministeria sacrificii, per mysteria prophetiae, sic intra sinum gratiae, quasi intra uterum creatoris, habebantur. Sed quia, veniente Domino, constricti frigore perfidiae, fervorem fidei et caritatis amiserunt, a secreto gratiae sinu projecti, quasi glacies, de utero creatoris egressi sunt: Et gelu de coelo quis genuit? Quid hic aliud coelum, nisi sublimis debet intelligi vita sanctorum? cui coelo dicitur: Attende coelum, et loquar (Deut. XXXII, 1). Non enim insensibili, sed rationabili creaturae loquebatur. De hoc coelo Dominus ait: Coelum mihi sedes est (Isai LXVI, 1). De qua sede alias scriptum est : Anima justi sedes sapientiae est. Quia ergo sapientia est Deus, si sedes Dei coelum est, et anima justi sedes est sapientiae, coelum est utique anima justi. Coelum fuit Abraham, coelum Isaac, coelum Jacob. Sed quia persecutores Domini pontifices Judaeorum perfidiae torpore frigidi de illorum patrum progenie processerunt, quasi de coelo gelu exiit, quia de sublimi prole sanctorum processit frigida plebs infidelium. Cum enim de Abraham natus est Caiphas, quid aliud nisi gelu de coelo processit? Quod tamen gelu idcirco Dominus genuisse se dicit, quia Judaeos, quos naturaliter ipse bonos condidit, justo judicio per eorum malitiam frigidos a se exire permisit. Dominus enim auctor est naturae, non culpae. Genuit ergo creando naturaliter quos iniquos permisit vivere tolerando patienter. Et quia illa quondam tenera ac fidei penetrabilia corda Judaeorum, in perfidiae postmodum obstinatione durata sunt, recte subjungitur:

CAPUT XXIX.

VERS. 30. In similitudinem lapidis aquae durantur. 943 56. Ex filiis Abrahae facti sunt lapides, ob cordis duritiam; et gentiles prius lapides in filios Abrahae converti sunt. Aquas enim populos accipi jam saepius edocuisse me memini. In lapide vero pro ipsa duritia aliquando gentiles populi designantur. Ipsi quippe lapides coluerunt. Et de his per prophetam dictum est: Similes illis fiant qui faciunt ea, et omnes qui confidunt in eis (Psal. XIII, 8). Unde Joannes Judaeos aspiciens se de stemmate generationis extollere, et gentiles praevidens ad Abrahae prolem fidei cognitione transire, ait: Ne velitis dicere intra vos, Patrem habemus Abraham. Dico enim vobis quia potens est Deus de lapidibus istis suscitare filios Abrahae (Matth. III, 9); lapides utique duros perfidia gentiles vocans. Quia ergo primum Judaea Deo credidit, gentilitate omni in perfidiae suae obstinatione remanente, postmodum vero ad fidem gentilium corda mollita sunt, et Judaeorum infidelitas obdurata, bene dictum est: In similitudinem lapidis aquae durantur. Ac si diceret: Illa mollia ac penetrabilia fidei corda Judaeorum in insensibilitatem vertuntur gentium. Cum enim misericors Deus gentes traxit, iratus Judaeam repulit. Actumque est ut sicut dudum ad percipiendam fidem gentilitas fuerat obdurata, ita postmodum ad fidem gentilitate suscepta, Judaeae populus perfidiae torpore duresceret. Unde Paulus apostolus eisdem gentibus dicit: Sicut aliquando vos non credidistis Deo, nunc autem misericordiam consecuti estis propter illorum incredulitatem; ita et isti non crediderunt in vestra misericordia, ut et ipsi misericordiam consequantur. Conclusit enim Deus omnia in incredulitate, ut omnium misereatur (Rom. XI, 30). Quam sententiam suam primum quidem de vocatione Judaeorum, et repulsione gentium, postmodum vero de vocatione gentium, et repulsione Judaeorum subtiliter pensans, seque occulta Dei judicia comprehendere non posse considerans, exclamando subjunxit: O altitudo divitiarum sapientiae et scientiae Dei, quam incomprehensibilia sunt judicia ejus, et investigabiles viae ejus (Ibid., 33)!

Unde hic quoque cum de Judaeorum perfidia Dominus diceret: In similitudinem lapidis aquae durantur, ut de repulsione eorum occulta esse sua judicia demonstraret, apte subdidit:

CAPUT XXX [Vet. XXII].

IBID. Et superficies abyssi constringitur. 57. Judicia Dei abyssus multa. Quia superjecto quodam ignorantiae nostrae velamine, incomprehensibilitatem divini judicii humanae mentis oculus nullatenus penetrat. Scriptum quippe est: Judicia tua abyssus multa (Psal. XXXV, 7). Nemo ergo perscrutari appetat cur cum alius repellitur, alius eligatur; vel cur cum alius eligitur, alius repellatur; quia superficies abyssi constringitur, et, attestante Paulo: Inscrutabilia sunt judicia ejus, et investigabiles viae ejus (Rom. XI, 33). 58. Dicta de Judaeorum duritia et reprobatione, de Satana possunt intelligi. Per hoc vero quod dictum est: De cujus utero egressa est glacies, et gelu de coelo quis genuit? etiam Satan in gelu et glacie nil obstat intelligi. Ipse quippe quasi de Dei utero glacies processit, quia a calore secretorum ejus, malitiae torpore frigidus, magister iniquitatis exivit. Ipse gelu de coelo est genitus, quia constricturus corda reproborum, a summis cadere est ad ima permissus. Qui bene in coelestibus conditus, in culpae frigore mentes sequacium quasi gelu dum cecidit astrinxit. 944 Qui ad terram veniens, quid in hominibus egerit, expletur cum subditur: In lapidis similitudinem aquae durantur. Per aquas namque populi, per lapidem vero ejusdem Satanae duritia designatur. Illo igitur ad ima veniente, in similitudinem lapidis aquae duratae sunt, quia ejus malitiam imitati homines, mollia viscera charitatis amiserunt. Cujus fraudulenta consilia quia a seductis hominibus deprehendi non possunt, recte subjungitur: Et superficies abyssi constringitur. Aliud quippe ei intrinsecus latet, atque aliud extrinsecus ostendit. Transfigurat enim se velut angelum lucis (II Cor. XI, 14), et callida deceptionis arte plerumque proponit laudabilia, ut ad illicita pertrahat. Abyssi ergo superficies constringitur, quia dum quasi bona persuasionis ejus species velut solida desuper glacies ostenditur, in profundo latens ejus malitia non videtur. 59. Et de superbis propter accepta dona insolescentibus. Cuncta tamen haec intelligere et aliter possumus, si moraliter exquiramus. [Vet. XXIII]. Mentes namque hominum omnipotens Deus dum in suo timore format, quasi concipit, easque ad apertas virtutes, dum provehit, gignit; sed si de acceptis virtutibus extolluntur, relinquit. Et saepe quosdam cognovimus malorum suorum consideratione compungi, divini terroris pavore fervescere, et per pavoris exordia usque ad virtutum summa pervenire; sed dum de eisdem virtutibus quas accipiunt extolluntur, inanis gloriae laqueo astricti, ad antiquum torporem redeunt. Recte ergo cum tales Dominus projicit dicit: De cujus utero egressa est glacies? Quasi enim de Dei utero glacies egreditur, quando hi qui jam intus incaluerant ex virtutum dono frigescunt; et inde exteriorem gloriam torpentes appetunt, unde ad interna diligenda ardentius flagrare debuerunt. Dumque iste signis, ille scientia, iste prophetia, ille magnis operibus pollet, atque per haec dona placere hominibus appetit, omne quod prius intimum caluerat, exteriorem laudem diligens, in torporem vertit. Quasi ergo glacies de utero egreditur, dum post donorum beneficia a visceribus pietatis supernae separatur. An non sunt glacies, qui in virtutibus quas accipiunt laudes ab hominibus quaerunt? Et tamen venienti judici dona sua ad ejus memoriam revocantes, dicunt: Domine, Domine, nonne in nomine tuo prophetavimus, et in nomine tuo daemonia ejecimus, et in nomine tuo virtutes multas fecimus (Matth. VII, 22)? Sed quomodo hanc glaciem Dominus projiciat ostendit, dicens: Nescio vos unde sitis, discedite a me, omnes operarii iniquitatis (Ibid.). Hanc glaciem nunc in utero Dominus portat, quia intra sinum Ecclesiae tolerat. Sed tunc aperte ejicit, cum tales a secretis coelestibus per extremum et publicum judicium repellit. His itaque verbis quid aperte agitur, nisi ut beatus Job de summis suis virtutibus humilietur, ne in hoc quod bene vivendo caluerat, superbiendo frigescat, et a Divinitatis utero repulsus exeat, si intra sinum sui cordis se tumidus extollat? [Vet. XXIV.] 60. Superbiae poena, induratio. Quo sensu Deus dicatur indurare. Et quia justo judicio superbas mentes ad culpam egredi ex accepta virtute permittit, recte adhuc subjungitur: Et gelu de coelo quis genuit? Plerumque enim sacri eloquii scientiam praestat, sed dum de eadem scientia is qui accipit extollitur, 945 ira districti judicis in ipso sacro eloquio caecatur, ut exteriores favores per illam sequens, ejus jam interna non videat; et qui intus manens calere poterat, exeundo frigescat, duratusque in ima corruat, qui ad cognitionem Dei prius tractabilis in summis liquidus stabat. An sacrum eloquium coelum non est, quod diem nobis intelligentiae aperiens, sole nos justitiae illustrat, quod dum nos vitae praesentis nox continet, stellis nobis mandatorum fulget? Sed quia oportet esse haereses, ut probati manifesti fiant (I Cor. XI, 19), cum ab intellectu sano mens superba repellitur, ultione districti judicis gelu de coelo generatur, ut cum ipsa Scriptura sacra in electorum cordibus caleat, eos qui se superbe scire appetunt a se frigidos emittat. Ibi quippe errant ubi corrigere errata debuerant; et dum a superna intelligentia resplendentis eloquii, et obdurati ipsi, et seducturi caeteros, corrunt, ad ima venientes ut gelu, et alios astringuat. Semetipsum tamen Dominus hoc gelu gignere perhibet, non quod pravorum mentes ipse ad culpam formet, sed quod a culpa non liberat, sicut scriptum est: Ego obdurabo cor Pharaonis (Exod. X, 27). Quod quia misericorditer emollire noluit, profecto districte se obdurasse nuntiavit. 61. Amissa virtutis, virtute imago saepe retinetur. Quia vero cum inchoata divini timoris virtus amittitur, propter humanas laudes virtutis imago retinetur, recte subjungitur: In similitudinem lapidis aquae durantur, et superficies abyssi constringitur. Aquae enim per glaciem in superficie durescunt, sed fluidae in intimis remanent. Et quid per aquas nisi fluxa accipimus corda reproborum? Quae cum ex proposito virtutem deserunt, fortes se in bonis operibus per hypocrisim ostendunt; dumque in intimis suis ad vitia defluunt, et foris se sanctorum ac fortium imitatores fingunt, Aquae in similitudinem lapidis durantur, et superficies abyssi constringitur, quia per superductam sanctitatis speciem fluxa ac instabilis eorum conscientia hominibus tegitur. Nam cum sibimetipsis intrinsecus turpes sint, ante alienos tamen oculos quadam vivendi vetustate vestiuntur. 63. Praeposteros virtutis fructus Deus sapienter premit. Sed ne quis haec verba Domini in bonam intelligi partem velit, debemus sic etiam quaerentibus astruere, dummodo minime judicemur quae perscrutanda fuerant neglexisse. Superiori enim versu dicitur: Quis est pluviae pater vel quis genuit stillas roris? Statimque additur: De cujus utero egressa est glacies, et gelu de coelo quis genuit? Si ergo dictis praecedentibus sequens sententia non dispari sensu conjungitur, profecto et in bonam partem nobis ejus intelligentia sine obstaculo difficultatis aperitur. [Vet. XXV.] Terra enim cum compluitur, jactata in eam semina feracius ligantur. Sed rursum si illam pluvia immoderatius irrigat, in culmo pinguedinem frumenti virtutemque mutat. Sin vero jactatum semen post pluviam gelu premitur, quo foris citius apparere repellitur, eo intus fecundius radicatur; et quo vetatur progredi, cogitur multiplicari, quia cum ab immaturo ortu restringitur, ex conceptionis suae 946 tarditate laxatum ad fructum uberius impletur. Quid est ergo quod Dominus prius quidem patrem se pluviae insinuat, postmodum vero de suo egredi utero glaciem narrat, seque gelu gignere de coelo pronuntiat, nisi quod miro modo nostri pectoris terram ad suscipienda verbi semina, et prius per occultae gratiae pluviam infundit, et postmodum, ne in conceptis virtutibus immoderatius profluat, disciplina intimae dispensationis premit, ut quam acceptae gratiae pluvia irrigat, etiam disciplinae rigor astringat, ne si aut antequam debet, aut plusquam necesse est conceptas virtutes proferat, fruges in herbam vertat? Plerumque enim ab inchoantibus opus bonum dum priusquam oportet ostenditur, a grano perfectionis inanitur, et plerumque virtutes dum plus quam necesse est exuberant exhalant. Unde et electorum suorum Dominus vel ante tempus desideria renuit, vel rursum in tempore ultra mensuram profectus premit, ne si aut antequam debent, aut plus quam debent, proficiant, per profectus sui magnitudinem in elationis defectum cadant. Nam cum cor post peccata compungitur, terra quae aruerat infusione pluviae rigatur; et cum relictis iniquitatibus bona exsequi opera proponit, quasi post infusionem semen accipit. Et plerique cum desideria sancta concipiunt, in summis jam exerceri virtutibus inardescunt ut non solum culpa operationem non inquinet, sed nec cogitationem pulset. Et adhuc quidem in corpore positi sunt, sed nil jam perpeti de communione praesentis vitae volunt; imitari per intentionem internam mentis stabilitatem appetunt, sed intervenientibus tentationibus reverberantur, ut videlicet infirmitatis suae meminerint, et elati de virtutibus quas accipiunt non sint. Quod dum mira disciplinae repressione agitur, quid aliud quam super infusam terram gelu de coelo generatur? Quid aliud quam de Dei utero glacies producitur, quando de interno secreto dispensatio egreditur, et voluntates nostrae etiam in bonis desideriis frenantur? 63. Quod exemplo S. Pauli confirmatur. Videamus, Paulus, infusa videlicet terra, quanta disciplinae glacie prematur, dum ait: Velle adjacet mihi, perficere autem bonum non invenio (Rom. VII, 18). Qui enim velle habere se asserit, jam per infusionem gratiae, quae in se lateant semina ostendit. Sed dum perficere bonum non invenit, profecto indicat quanta illum dispensationis supernae glacies premat. An ista glacies eorum corda non presserat, quibus dicebat, Ut non quaecunque vultis, illa faciatis (Gal. V, 17)? Ac si aperte diceret: Occulta cordis vestri semina jam prodire in frugem quaerunt, sed superni moderaminis gelu premuntur, ut tanto post fecundius exeant, quanto divini judicii prementia pondera patientius portant. [Vet. XXVI.] 64. Inde graves emergunt tentationes, quae bene vivendi consuetudine superantur. Et quia plerumque humana corda quoniam erumpere ad virtutes quas appetunt non valent, eo ipso quo ab intentionis suae perfectione resiliunt, tentationum stimulis fatigantur, sed tamen easdem tentationes cogitationum comprimunt, seque per 947 exercitationis usum in quodam vivendi rigore componunt, bene subditur: In similitudinem lapidis aquae durantur. Quia etsi fluxae cogitationes interius lacessunt, nequaquam tamen usque ad consensum pravi operis trahunt. Sed mens sub inolita bene vivendi consuetudine quasi sub quadam duritia exterius abscondit quidquid intus ex tentationis pulsatione mollescit. Unde et bene subjungitur: Et superficies abyssi constringitur. Quia prava cogitatio et si usque ad suggestionem venit, usque ad consensum non prosilit, quia fluctuantes motus animi superductus rigor sanctae deliberationis premit. 65. Adversitas valentiores efficit sanctos. Potest etiam in gelu vel glacie praesentis vitae adversitas designari, quae dum asperitate sua sanctos comprimit, valentiores reddit. Dum enim nos omnipotens Deus molestiis exerceri permittit, atque ad melioris vitae statum interveniente tristitia provehit, miro consilio super futuram frugem gelu et glaciem gignit, ut electus quisque in hac vita, tanquam in hieme, adversa ventorum et frigorum toleret, et velut in aestiva serenitate postmodum fructus quos hic conceperit demostret. Unde et sponsi voce unicuique animae post hujus mundi turbines ad illa aeternitatis amoena properanti dicitur: Surge, propera, amica mea, formosa mea, et veni; jam enim hiems transiit, imber abiit et recessit (Cant. II, 10). Et quia si sola nobis adsunt prospera solvimur, ad virtutes vero melius per adversa solidamur, recte subjungitur: [Vet. XXVII.] In similitudinem lapidis aquae durantur. Mentes enim quae per prospera molliter fluxerant constrictae adversitatibus durescunt; et ad similitudinem lapidis aqua perducitur, quando infirmus quisque per acceptam desuper tolerantiam passiones sui Redemptionis imitatur. In similitudinem quippe lapidis aqua duruerat, cum ille prius impatiens persecutor postmodum Paulus dicebat: Impleo ea quae desunt passionum Christi in carne mea (Coloss. I, 24). 66. Et ad interna dona custodienda magis sollicitos. Et quia cum deprimuntur adversis, solertius in terna dona custodiunt, recte additur: Et superficies abyssi constringitur. Solet enim laetitia arcana mentis aperire, atque aperiendo amittere; adversa vero cum nos exterius deprimunt, interius cautiores reddunt. Post gelu itaque vel glaciem superficies abyssi constringitur, quia mens nostra, ad conservanda profunda dona quae acceperit, adversitatibus munitur. Abyssi enim suae superficiem Isaias constrinxerat, cum dicebat: Secretum meum mihi, secretum meum mihi (Isai. XXIV, 16). Abyssi suae superficiem Paulus constrinxerat, qui tot periculis ac adversitatibus insudans, sub praetextu cujusdam de semetipso loquitur, dicens: Audivi arcana verba, quae non licet homini loqui (II Cor. XII, 4). Et rursum: Parco autem, ne quis me existimet supra id quod videt in me, aut audit aliquid ex me (Ibid., 6). Qui igitur foris adversa tolerans, ne fortasse in laudibus deflueret, arcana sua aperire metuebat, quid aliud quam secretorum suorum abyssum per constrictam superficiem presserat? Sequitur:

CAPUT XXXI [Rec. XVI].

VERS. 31. Nunquid conjungere valebis micantes stellas Pleiades, aut gyrum Arcturi poteris dissipare? 948 67. Quid Pleiades et Arcturus. Dei omnipotentiam pensates, infirmitatis nostrae admonemur. Pleiades stellae ἀπὸ τοῦ πλέιστου, id est a pluralitate vocatae sunt. Ita autem vicinae sibi et divisae sunt conditae, ut et simul sint, et tamen conjungi nequaquam possint, quatenus vicinitate quidem conjunctae sint, sed tactu disjunctae. Arcturus vero ita nocturna tempora illustrat, ut in coeli axe positus per diversa se vertat, nec tamen occidat. Neque enim extra se currens volvitur, sed in loco situs, in cunctis mundi partibus nequaquam casurus inclinatur. Quid ergo est quod homo ex terra factus, atque in terra positus (Genes. II, 7), de coelesti administratione discutitur, quia Pleiades conjungere non valet, quas vicinas sibimetipsis conditas et pene conjunctas videt, quia

Arcturi gyrum dissipare non potest, quem tamen cernere ipsa sua vertigine pene dissipatum potest? An ut in istis ministeriis auctoris potentiam pensans, infirmitatis suae meminerit, et eum quem adhuc in majestate sua videre non poterat quam sit inaestimabilis in ipsa ministeriorum coelestium gubernatione perpendat? SENSUS MYSTICUS. Pleiadum nomine sancti designantur. 68. Sed cur ista loquimur, qui stimulo rationis urgemur, ut haec verba mysticis sensibus gravida cognoscamus? [Vet. XXVIII.] Quid enim micantes Pleiades, quae et septem sunt, aliud quam sanctos omnes denuntiant, qui inter praesentis vitae tenebras septiformis Spiritus gratiae nos lumine illustrant, qui ab ipsa mundi origine usque ad ejus terminum diversis temporibus ad prophetandum missi, et juxta aliquid sibi conjuncti sunt, et juxta aliquid disjuncti? Stellae enim Pleiades, sicut supra dictum est, vicinitate sibi conjunctae sunt, et tactu disjunctae. Simul quidem sitae sunt, et tamen lucis suae Ita omnes sancti aliis atque aliis ad praedicandum temporibus apparentes, et disjuncti sunt per visionem suae imaginis, et conjuncti per intentionem mentis. Simul micant, quia unum praedicant; sed non semetipsos tangunt, quia in divisis temporibus partiuntur. 69. Omnes, etiam qui Christum praecesserunt, eum praedicant, et Trinitatis mysterium. Quam diversis temporibus Abel, Isaias, et Joannes apparuerunt! Divisi quidem fuerunt tempore, sed non praedicatione. Nam Abel Redemptoris nostri passionem significans, agnum in sacrificio obtulit (Genes. IV, 4), de cujus passione Isaias ait: Sicut agnus coram tondente se obmutescet, et non aperiet os suum (Isai, LIII, 7). De quo Joannes quoque ait: Ecce agnus Dei, ecce qui tollit peccata mundi (Joan. I, 29). Ecce divisis quidem temporibus missi, et tamen concorditer de Redemptoris nostri innocentia sentientes, eumdem agnum Joannes ostendendo, Isaias praevidendo, Abel offerendo locutus est; et quem Joannes in ostensione, quem Isaias in locutione, hunc Abel significando in manibus tenuit. 70. Quia igitur quomodo Pleiades stellae de humanitate Redemptoris sibi concinant diximus, nunc quomodo in ostendenda unitate Trinitatis concorditer luceant demonstremus. Diversis quippe temporibus huic mundo David, Isaias et Paulus apparuit; sed tamen nullus eorum alteri diversum sensit, quia etsi semetipsos non noverant facie, unum tamen didicerant ex divina cognitione. David quippe ut auctorem omnium Deum in Trinitate ostenderet, dixit: Benedicat nos Deus, Deus 949 noster, benedicat nos Deus (Psal. LXVI, 8). Ac ne tertio Deum nominans tres Deos dixisse putaretur, illico unitatem ejusdem Trinitatis insinuans addidit: Et metuant eum omnes fines terrae (Ibid.). Qui enim nos eos, sed eum subdidit, unum tria quae dixerat intimavit. Isaias quoque cum laudem de unitate Trinitatis aperiret, Seraphim voces exprimens, ait: Sanctus, sanctus, sanctus (Isai. VI, 3); ac ne tertio sanctum nominans unitatem divinae substantiae scindere videretur, adjunxit: Dominus Deus sabaoth. Quia ergo non domini dii, sed Dominus Deus addidit, unum existere quod tertio sanctum vocaverat indicavit. Paulus quoque ut operationem sanctae Trinitatis ostenderet, ait, Ex ipso, et per ipsum, et in ipso sunt omnia (Rom. XI, 36). Atque ut unitatem ejusdem Trinitatis intimaret, protinus addidit: Ipsi gloria in saecula saeculorum, amen (Ibid.). Qui igitur non ipsis, sed ipsi subdidit, unum naturaliter, tria secundum personas innotuit, quod superius tertio idipsum dixit. Quasi ergo et uno in loco Pleiades sitae sunt, quia de Deo concorditer sentiunt, et tamen semetipsas non tangunt, quia sicut dictum est per hujus mundi tempora diversa partiuntur. 71. Sancti omnes fidei ac virtutum unanimitate conjunguntur. Quod bene ac breviter Ezechiel propheta describit, qui cum diversi generis animalia videre se diceret, adjunxit: Junctaeque erant pennae eorum alterius ad alterum (Ezech. I, 9). Pennae quippe animalium alterius ad alterum junctae sunt, quia etsi dissimilia sunt quae agunt, uno tamen eodemque sensu sibi sanctorum voces virtutesque sociantur. Et quamvis alius rationabiliter cuncta agendo sit homo, alius in passionibus fortis adversa mundi non timendo sit leo, alius per abstinentiam semetipsum vivam hostiam offerendo sit vitulus, alius se in alta rapiendo contemplationis volatu sit aquila, pennis se tamen dum volant tangunt, quia et confessione vocum, et virtutum sibi unanimitate junguntur. Quod quia solius divinae virtutis est, et disjunctis temporibus missos in fidei praedicatione conjungere, et dissimilibus virtutibus praeditos fulgore intentionis unire, recte dicitur, Nunquid conjungere valebis micantes stellas Pleiades? Ac si dicat ut ego, qui unus omnia impleo, atque in unitatis sensu electorum mentes implendo conjungo. 72. Arcturus totam Ecclesiam significat. Docet fidei simul ac bonorum operum necessitatem. In Arcturo autem, qui per gyrum suum nocturna spatia non occasurus illustrat, nequaquam particulatim edita vita sanctorum, sed tota simul Ecclesia designatur, quae fatigationes quidem patitur, nec tamen ad defectum proprii status inclinatur: gyrum laborum tolerat, sed ad occasum cum temporibus non festinat. Neque enim ad ima poli Arcturus cum nocturno tempore ducitur, sed dum ipse volvitur, nox finitur, quia nimirum dum sancta Ecclesia innumeris tribulationibus quatitur, praesentis vitae umbra terminatur; eaque stante nox praeterit, quia illa in sua incolumitate perdurante, mortalitatis hujus vita percurrit. [Vet. XXIX.] Est in Arcturo quod consideratius possimus intueri. In septem quippe stellis volvitur, et modo quidem tres ad summa elevat, atque ad ima quatuor inclinat, modo 950 quatuor superius erigit, et tres inferius premit. Sancta quoque Ecclesia cum modo infidelibus Trinitatis notitiam, modo autem fidelibus virtutes quatuor, id est prudentiam, fortitudinem, temperantiam, justitiam praedicat, quasi rotatu praedicationis status sui speciem quodammodo immutat. Nam cum quibusdam de operibus suis gloriantibus confidentiam proprii laboris evacuat, et fidem Trinitatis exaltat, quid aliud facit nisi tres stellas Arcturus elevat, quatuor inclinat? Et dum quosdam bona opera non habentes de sola fide praesumere prohibet, sed operari enixius quae praecepta sunt jubet, quid aliud Arcturus facit, nisi quatuor stellas erigit, tres deponit? Videamus quomodo tres elevet, quatuor deponat. Ecce per Paulum contra fidem de opere superbientibus dicitur: Si Abraham ex operibus justificatus est, habet gloriam, sed non apud Deum (Rom. IV, 2). Quid enim Scriptura dicit? Credidit Abraham Deo, et reputatum est illi ad justitiam (Genes. XV, 6). Videamus quomodo quatuor elevet, tres deponat. Ecce per Jacobum de fide contra opera superbientibus dicitur: Sicut corpus sine spiritu mortuum est, ita fides sine operibus mortua est (Jac. II, 26). Arcturus itaque volvitur, quia sancta Ecclesia juxta auditorum suorum mentes in diverso latere praedicationis arte versatur. Arcturus volvitur, quia haec in noctis hujus tribulationibus rotatur. Sed hunc Arcturi gyrum quandoque Dominus dissipat, quia labores Ecclesiae ad requiem permutat. Tunc et Pleiades plenius jungit, cum gyrum Arcturi destruit, quia tunc nimirum sancti omnes etiam visionis sibi specie copulantur, quando in fine mundi sancta Ecclesia ab his quos nunc sustinet laboribus solvitur. Dicat ergo: Nunquid conjungere valebis micantes stellas Pleiades, aut gyrum Arcturi poteris dissipare? Subaudis ut ego, qui tunc sanctorum vitam etiam per speciem unio, cum gyrum universalis Ecclesiae corporaliter solvo. Et quis hominum solius divinae hoc esse virtutis ignorat? Sed ut cognoscat homo quid ipse sit, memoretur assidue quid solus Dominus possit. 73. Rursum per Arcturum lex vetus, per Pleiades Novi Testamenti gratia signatur. Habemus adhuc quod de stellis Pleiadibus atque Arcturo aliud sentiamus. Pleiades quippe ab Oriente, Arcturus vero ex parte Aquilonis surgit. Quocumque autem se per gyrum suum Arcturus verterit, Pleiades ostendit; et cum lux diei jam vicina efficitur, stellarum ejus ordo distenditur. Potest igitur per Arcturum, qui a plaga frigoris nascitur, lex; per Pleiades vero, quae ab Oriente surgunt Testamenti Novi gratia designari. Quasi enim ab Aquilone lex venerat, quae tanta subditos rigiditatis asperitate terrebat. Nam dum pro culpis suis alios praeciperet lapidibus obrui, alios gladii morte mulctari, plaga torpens, et velut a sole charitatis aliena, praeceptorum suorum semina plus premebat ex frigore quam ex calore nutriebat. Cujus oppressionis pondus Petrus horruerat, cum dicebat: Quid tentatis Deum, imponere jugum super cervicem discipulorum, quod neque patres nostri neque nos portare potuimus (Act. XV, 10)? Nec mirum quod per Arcturi septem stellas Testamentum Vetus exprimitur, quia et veneratione legis 951 dies septimus exstitit venerabilis, et per hebdomadam integram constituti sacrificii vota tendebantur. Pleiades vero quae ipsae quoque, sicut superius diximus, septem sunt, Testamenti Novi gratiam tanto apertius indicant, quanto cuncti liquido cernimus, quod per illam fideles suos Spiritus sanctus septiformis muneris lumine illustrat. Quaqua igitur se Arcturus vertit, Pleiades ostendit, quia per omne quod Testamentum Vetus loquitur Testamenti Novi opera nuntiantur. Sub textu enim litterae tegit mysterium prophetiae. Et quasi inclinat se Arcturus et demonstrat, quia ad dum spiritalem intellectum flectitur, significata per illud lux gratiae septiformis aperitur. Et propinquante diei luce, stellarum ejus ordo distenditur, quia postquam per semetipsam nobis Veritas innotuit, ab obsequiis carnalibus litterae praecepta laxavit. [Vet. XXX.] 74. Christus solus omnes sancti Spiritus operationes in se manentes habuit. Redemptor autem noster in carne veniens Pleiades junxit, quia operationes septiformis Spiritus simul in se et cunctas et manentes habuit. De quo per Isaiam dicitur: Egredietur virga de radice Jesse, et flos de radice ejus ascendet, et requiescet super eum Spiritus Domini, spiritus sapientiae et intellectus, spiritus consilii et fortitudinis, spiritus scientiae et pietatis, et replebit eum spiritus timoris Domini (Isai. XI, 1). De quo Zacharias ait: Super lapidem unum septem oculi sunt (Zach. III, 9). Atque iterum: Et in candelabro aureo lucernae septem (Ibid., IV, 2). Nullus vero hominum operationes sancti Spiritus simul omnes habuit, nisi solus Mediator Dei et hominum, cujus est idem Spiritus, qui de Patre ante saecula procedit. Bene ergo dicitur: Super lapidem unum septem oculi sunt. Huic enim lapidi septem oculos habere est simul omnem virtutem Spiritus septiformis gratiae in operatione retinere. Alius namque prophetiam, alius scientiam, alius virtutes, alius genera linguarum, alius interpretationes sermonum juxta distributionem sancti Spiritus accipit (I Cor. XII, 8); ad habenda vero cuncta ejusdem Spiritus munera nemo pertingit. At vero conditor noster infirma nostra suscipiens, quia per divinitatis suae potentiam simul se habere omnes sancti Spiritus virtutes edocuit, micantes procul dubio Pleiades junxit. Dum vero Pleiades jungit, Arcturi gyrum dissipat, quia dum semetipsum factum hominem habere cunctas sancti Spiritus operationes innotuit, in Testamento Veteri litterae laborem solvit, ut fidelis quisque jam cum libertate spiritus illud intelligat cui prius in formidine inter tot discrimina serviebat. Audiat itaque beatus Job: Nunquid conjungere valebis micantes stellas Pleiades? Ac si aperte diceretur: Habere quidem lumina quarumdam virtutum potes, sed nunquid exercere simul omnes operationes sancti Spiritus sufficis? Me ergo conjungentem Pleiades in cunctis virtutibus contemplare, et tu de paucis ab elatione compescere. Audi quod dicitur: Aut gyrum Arcturi poteris dissipare? Ac si ei aperte diceretur: Et si ipse jam quae recta sunt sentis, nunquid virtute tua etiam in alienis cordibus laborem grossioris intelligentiae destruis? 952 Me itaque considera, qui carnalium stulta corrigo, dum me per carnis stultitiam manifesto, ut tanto magis haec quae putas virtutum tuarum fortia humilies, quanto nec vestigia meae infirmitatis apprehendis. Quia vero in ipso dominicae incarnationis mysterio aliis lux veritatis ostenditur, aliorum vero per scandalum corda tenebrantur, recte subjungitur:

CAPUT XXXII [Rec. XVII].

VERS. 32. Nunquid producis luciferum in tempore suo, et vesperum super filios terrae consurgere facis? 75. Christus verus lucifer, maxime in resurrectione; vesper autem Antichristus. Huic juste subduntur homines terrae dediti. Pater quippe in tempore suo luciferum produxit, quia, sicut scriptum est: Cum venit plenitudo temporis, misit Deus Filium suum, natum

ex muliere, factum sub lege, ut eos qui sub lege erant, redimeret (Gal. IV, 4). Qui natus ex Virgine, velut lucifer inter tenebras nostrae noctis apparuit, quia fugata obscuritate peccati, aeternum nobis mane nuntiavit. Luciferum vero se innotuit, quia diluculo ex morte surrexit, et fulgore sui luminis mortalitatis nostrae terram caliginem pressit. Cui bene per Joannem dicitur: Stella splendida et matutina (Apoc. XXII, 16). Vivus quippe apparens post mortem, matutina nobis stellas factus est, quia dum in semetipso exemplum nobis resurrectionis praebuit, quae lux sequatur indicavit. Vesperum vero super terrae filios Dominus consurgere facit, quia infidelibus Judaeorum cordibus dominari Antichristum eorum merito exigente permittit. Qui idcirco a Domino huic vesperi juste subduntur, quia ipsi sponte sua filii terrae esse voluerunt. Terrena quippe et non coelestia requirentes, a perspicienda luciferi nostri claritate excaecati sunt; et dum praeesse sibi vesperum expetunt, subsequentis damnationis aeterna nocte merguntur. Hinc in Evangelio Dominus dicit: Ego veni in nomine Patris mei, et non accepistis me; alius veniet in nomine suo, et ipsum recipietis (Joan. V, 43). Hinc Paulus ait: Eo quod charitatem veritatis non receperunt, ut salvi fierent, ideo mittet illis Deus operationem erroris, ut credant mendacio, ut judicentur omnes qui non crediderunt veritati, sed consenserunt iniquitati (II Thess. II, 10). Nequaquam ergo super eos vesper consurgeret, si coeli filii esse voluissent. Sed dum visibilia appetunt, amisso cordis lumine, sub noctis duce tenebrescunt. [Vet. XXXI.] 76. Sermo Dei qui electis lucifer est, reprobis fit vesper. Quod tamen si moraliter discutimus, quomodo quotidie agatur invenimus, quia nimirum et electis lucifer oritur, et reprobis Deo permittente vesper dominatur. Unus enim atque idem sermo Dei est in ore praedicantis. Quem dum isti gaudendo, illi vero invidendo audiunt, claritatem sibi luciferi in vesperi tenebras vertunt. Dum isti humiliter vocem sanctae praedicationis accipiunt, quasi ad stellae lucem oculos cordis aperiunt; dum vero illi benedicenti invident, et non salutis causam, sed elationis gloriam quaerunt, prorumpente iniquitatis suae vespere in somnum mortis oculos claudunt. Per occultum ergo judicium is qui electis est lucifer reprobis auditoribus fit vesper, quia exhortatione sancta qua boni ad vitam redeunt pravi deterius in culpa moriuntur. Unde bene per Paulum dicitur: Christi 953 bonus odor sumus Deo in his qui salvi fiunt, et in his qui pereunt; aliis quidem odor mortis in mortem, aliis autem odor vitae in vitam (II Cor. II, 15). Verbum itaque suum auditoribus esse luciferum simul et vesperum vidit, per quod et alios ab iniquitate suscitari, et e contra alios sopiri in iniquitate conspexit. Quod quia occultis Dei judiciis agitur, quae in hac vita ab hominibus comprehendi non possunt, recto illic subdidit: Et ad haec quis tam idoneus (Ibid., 16)? Ac si diceret: Idonei quidem sumus ad haec consideranda quia fiunt, sed idonei non sumus ad haec investiganda cur fiant. Unde hic quoque Dominus, quia aliis produci luciferum, aliis vero consurgere vesperum dixerat, ne perscrutari homo occulta Dei judicia audeat, illico subjungit:

CAPUT XXXIII [Vet.

XXXII, Rec. XVIII]. VERS. 33. Nunquid nosti ordinem coeli, et pones rationem ejus in terra. 77. Judiciorum et praedestinationis Dei causas nemo scit; nemo scrutetur. Ordinem coeli nosse est supernarum dispositionum occultas praedestinationes videre. Rationem vero ejus in terra ponere, est ante humana corda talium secretorum causas aperire. Rationem videlicet coeli in terra ponere est supernorum judiciorum mysteria vel considerando discutere, vel loquendo manifestare. Quod utique facere in hac vita positus nullus potest. Ut enim a parvis ad majora veniamus, quis intelligat quae esse ratio secretorum potest, quod saepe vir justus a judicio non solum non vindicatus, sed etiam punitus redeat, et iniquus ejus adversarius non solum non punitus, sed etiam victor abscedat? Quis intelligat cur vivit alius insidians mortibus proximorum, et moritur alius qui profuturus esset vitae multorum? Alius culmen potestatis assequitur, qui non nisi laedere studet; alius tantummodo laesos defendere concupiscit, et tamen ipse oppressus jacet. Alius vacare appetit, et innumeris negotiis implicatur; alius negotiis 954 implicari desiderat, et coactus vacat. Alius male inchoans usque ad vitae suae terminum ad pejora protrahitur; alius bene incipiens per longitudinem temporum proficit ad augmenta meritorum. At contra, alius male vivens diu reservatur ut se corrigat, alius vero bene quidem videtur vivere, sed in hac vita eo usque durat quoad in perversa prorumpat. Alius in errore infidelitatis natus in errore deficit, alius in catholicae fidei rectitudine genitus in catholicae fidei rectitudine consummatur. E contra vero alius catholicae matris ventre editus juxta vitae terminum erroris voragine devoratur, alius autem vitam suam in catholica pietate consummat, qui ortus in perfidia cum lacte matris hauserat virus erroris. Alius celsitudinem bene vivendi appetere et vult, et valet; alius nec vult, nec valet. Alius vult, et non valet; alius valet, et non vult. Quis ergo ista judiciorum coelestium secreta discutiat? Quis intelligat secretam lancem aequitatis occultae? Ad cognoscendos quippe istos judiciorum secretorum sinus nullus ascendit. Dicatur ergo homini, ut se nescire cognoscat; nescientem vero se cognoscat ut timeat; timeat ut humilietur, humilietur ne praesumat in se; non praesumat in se, ut conditoris sui auxilium requirat; et qui in se fidens mortuus est, auctoris sui adjutorium appetens vivat. Audiat itaque vir justus jam quidem se sciens, sed adhuc quae supra se sunt nesciens: Nunquid nosti ordinem coeli, et pones rationes ejus in terra? id est, nunquid occultos ordines judiciorum coelestium comprehendis, aut aperire humanis auribus sufficis? Beatus igitur Job de judiciorum incomprehensibilium investigatione requiritur, ac si ei aperte diceretur: Cuncta quae pateris tanto tolerare patientius debes, quanto secretorum coelestium ignarus cur haec pateris nescis.

LIBER TRIGESIMUS.

Expositionem octo versuum ultimorum capitis XXXVIII, et totidem capitis XXXIX, complectitur. Ubi de Evangelii praedicatione praesertim plurima pie ac erudite sanctus Doctor edisserit. 955 [Vet. et Rec. I.] 1. Cur Job a Deo de tot tantisque interrogatus. Beatus Job talia utrumne fecerit, Domino interrogante, requiritur, qualia utique facere non potest homo, ut dum se ista facere non posse deprehendit, ad eum refugiat quem solum talia quia facere possit intelligit, atque ante oculos judicis sui magis potens appareat, si sua verius infirma cognoscat. Quod ergo mire a Domino fieri non ignoratur, de eo divina Job voce requiritur; diciturque ei:

CAPUT PRIMUM.

CAP. XXXVIII, VERS. 34. Nunquid elevabis in nebula vocem tuam, et impetus aquarum operiet te? 2. In nebula verbum Dei spargitur, dum infidelibus annuntiatur. Vocem quippe suam in nebula Dominus elevat, quando per praedicatorum suorum linguas ad caliginosa corda infidelium exhortationem format; eumque aquarum impetus operit, dum bene agentia membra ejus turba resistentium populorum premit. Hinc est enim quod scriptum est: Factum est verbum Domini ad Jeremiam dicens: Sta in atrio domus Domini, loquens ad omnes civitates Juda, de quibus veniunt, ut adorent in domo Domini, universos sermones quos ego mandavi tibi (Jerem. XXVI, 2). Et paulo post: Et audierunt sacerdotes et prophetae et omnis populus Jeremiam loquentem verba haec in domo Domini. Cumque complevisset Jeremias loquens, apprehenderunt eum sacerdotes et prophetae et omnis populus, dicens: Morte moriatur, quare prophetavit in nomine Domini (Ibid., 7)? Ecce in nebula Dominus vocem levavit, quia obscuras mentes superbientium directo propheta corripuit. Ecce aquarum impetus eum protinus operuit, quia ab insurgentibus populis, et causa suae correptionis instigatis, ipse in Jeremia cuncta pertulit, qui correptionis verba mandavit. Per semetipsum quoque Dominus in nebula vocem levavit, quando praesentem se etiam assumpto corpore exhibens, multa suis persecutoribus sed figuris aenigmatum velata praedicavit. In nebula vocem levavit, quia veritatem suam non secuturis infidelibus quasi per caliginem sonuit. Unde et bene in libris Regum scriptum est: Nebula implevit domum Domini, et non poterant sacerdotes ministrare propter nebulam (III Reg. VIII, 10, 11). Exigentibus enim meritis, dum superbi Judaeorum pontifices divina mysteria per parabolas audiunt, sacerdotes in domo Domini quasi propter nebulam ministrare nequiverunt. Qui et in Testamento Veteri dum sensus mysticos litterae velamine coopertos inter obscuras allegoriarum caligines investigare despiciunt, debitum fidei suae ministerium propter nebulam perdiderunt. Quibus et nunc in nebula doctrinae suae vocem Dominus protulit, cum de se etiam 956 aperta narravit. Quid est enim apertius quam: Ego et Pater unum sumus (Joan. X, 30)? Quid apertius dicere quam: Antequam Abraham fieret, ego sum (Joan. VIII, 58)? Sed quia auditorum mentes infidelitatis caligo repleverat, quasi emissum solis radium nebula interjacens abscondebat. [Vet. II.] 3. Verbi divini praedicatores impetus aquarum operit, cum in eos infideles saeviunt. Ad hanc namque elevationem vocis eum protinus aquarum impetus operuit, quia contra illum mox saeviens populorum turba surrexit. Scriptum quippe est: Propterea ergo quaerebant eum Judaei inter ficere, quia non solum solvebat sabbatum, sed et Patrem suum dicebat Deum, aequalem se faciens Deo (Joan. V, 18). De hoc aquarum impetu per Prophetam clamat: Circumdederunt sicut aqua tota die, circumdederunt me simul (Psal. LXXXVII, 18). Et rursum: Salvum me fac, Deus, quoniam intraverunt aquae usque ad animam meam (Psal. LXVIII, 2). Quas profecto aquas in semetipso ante mortem, in suis autem et post ascensionem pertulit. Hinc est enim quod et de superioribus clamat: Saule, Saule, quid me persequeris (Act. IX, 4)? Ecce jam coelum conscenderat, et tamen adhuc eum Saulus aquarum infidelium impetu persequens, et tumidior caeteris unda tangebat. Ipse quippe est qui per bonos recta loquitur, ipse qui in bonorum passione laceratur. Ut ergo mirifica Dominus charitatis unitate, monstraret se esse qui indignis auditoribus per sanctorum suorum ora praedicat, ait: Nunquid elevabis in nebula vocem tuam? Ut vero ostenderet se esse qui in sanctis suis omnia adversa pateretur, subdidit: Et impetus aquarum operiet te? subaudis ut me, quem iniqui omnes neque per praedicantes sanctos loquentem intelligunt, neque per morientes patientem vident. Narrat ergo Dominus quod ab hominibus patitur, ut dolor afflicti hominis mitigetur, ac si illi aperte dicat: Mea subtiliter pensa, et tua aequanimiter tempera. Multo enim minus est te vulnera quam me humana tolerare. 4. Ad arcanas inspirationes Dei etiam justorum corda caligant. Adhuc tamen verba haec subtilius perscrutari possumus, si inter dona coelestia nostra sollicite corda pensamus. Jam quidem fideles sumus, jam quae audimus superna credimus, jam quae credimus amamus. Sed dum quibusdam supervacuis curis premimur, obducta confusione caligamus; et cum nobis etiam talibus mira quaedam Dominus de se sentienda insinuat, quasi in nebula vocem levat. Dum caliginosis nostris mentibus semetipsum loquitur, velut in nebula is qui non cernitur auditur. Summa sunt namque quae de illo cognoscimus, sed tamen adhuc eum in secreta inspiratione qua instruimur non videmus. Qui igitur 957 cordibus nostris praebet quidem locutionem, sed occultat speciem, velut in nebula format vocem. Sed ecce jam verba Dei intrinsecus semetipsum loquentis audimus, jamque amori ejus qua continuatione, quo studio inhaerere debeamus agnoscimus, et tamen ab internae considerationis culmine ad consueta nostra ex ipsa mortalitatis hujus mutabilitate relabimur, et imminentium peccatorum male sedula importunitate tentamur. Cum ergo caecis nostris mentibus subtilia de semetipso insinuat, in nebula vocem levat. [Vet. III.] 5. Tentationibus intellectum de Deo obruentibus, ipse Deus quasi aquis operitur. Deus nos, ne quidem dum respuitur, non relinquit. Cum vero tentatione vitiorum ipse de Deo noster intellectus opprimitur, quasi aquarum impetu in voce sua Deus operitur. Tot enim super illum aquas mittimus, quot post inspirationem ejus gratiae, cogitationes illicitas in corde versamus. Nec tamen nos vel oppressos deserit, nam illico ad mentem redit, tentationum nebulas discutit, imbrem compunctionis infundit, et subtilis intelligentiae solem reducit; atque sic ostendit quantum nos diligit, qui nos nec cum respuitur relinquit, ut saltem sic erudita humana conscientia ad se tentationes erubescat admittere, quam Redemptor suus et vagantem non cessat amare. Hoc in nobis per semetipsum tolerat, hoc ab infidelibus per suos quotidie praedicatores portat. Ejus enim donum suborta in nobis tentatione repellitur, et tamen ab infundendo intrinsecus munere nequaquam nostra infirmitate revocatur. Ejus publice verba respuuntur, et tamen ab eroganda gratiae largitate nulla infidelium iniquitate compescitur. Nam cum pravi homines praedicamenta despiciunt, adjungit etiam miracula quae venerentur. Unde post editam vocem, post inundantium aquarum impetum, apte subjungitur:

CAPUT II [Rec. II].

VERS. 35. Nunquid mittes fulgura, et ibunt, et revertentia dicent tibi, Adsumus? 6. A Deo exeunt sancti praedicatores et ad eum revertuntur, miracula quibus coruscant, illi soli tribuendo. Fulgura quippe ex nubibus exeunt, sicut mira opera ex sanctis praedicatoribus ostenduntur. Qui, ut saepe diximus, idcirco nubes vocari solent, quia et coruscant miraculis, et verbis pluunt. Et quia humana corda, postquam per praedicationem mota non fuerint, istis miraculorum fulgoribus conturbantur, Propheta attestante didicimus, qui ait: Fulgura multiplicabis, et conturbabis eos (Psal. XVII, 15). Ac si diceret: Dum verba praedicationis tuae non audiuat, per praedicantium miracula conturbantur. Unde alias scriptum est: In lumine jacula tua ibunt, in splendore fulgoris armorum tuorum (Habac. III, 11). Jacula Dei in lumine ire est verba ejus aperta veritate resonare. Sed quia saepe homines verba vitae etiam intellecta despiciunt, adjunguntur etiam miracula. Unde illic subdidit: In splendore fulgoris armorum tuorum. Fulgor quippe armorum est claritas miraculorum. Armis namque nos tuemur, jaculis adversa destruimus. Arma ergo cum jaculis sunt miracula cum praedicamentis. Sancti enim praedicatores verbis suis quasi quibusdam jaculis adversarios feriunt; 958 armis vero, id est miraculis, semetipsos tuentur, ut et quantum sint audiendi sonent per impetum jaculorum, et quantum sint reverendi clarescant per arma miraculorum. [Vet. IV.] Dicitur ergo ad beatum Job: Nunquid mittes fulgura, et ibunt, et revertentia dicent tibi, Adsumus? subaudis ut mihi. Vadunt enim fulgura cum praedicatores miraculis coruscant et superna reverentia auditorum corda transfigunt. Revertentia vero dicunt, Adsumus, cum non sibi, sed Dei viribus tribuunt quidquid se fortiter egisse cognoscunt. Quid est ergo Deo dicere, Adsumus? Quoddam namque in hoc verbo obsequium declaratur. Revertentes itaque praedicatores sanctos dicere est, adsumus, illi laudem tribuere gratiae a quo se accepisse sentiunt victoriam pugnae, ne sibi tribuant quod operantur. Et ire quidem fulgura operando possunt, sed reverti superbiendo non possunt.

7. Id praestitit Petrus. Videamus itaque fulgur vadens; claudo cuidam ait Petrus: Argentum et aurum non est mihi, quod autem habeo, hoc tibi do: In nomine Jesu Christi Nazareni surge et ambula. Et apprehensa ejus manu dextera allevavit eum, et protinus consolidatae sunt bases ejus et plantae, et exiliens stetit, et ambulabat (Act. III, 6). Sed cum de hoc facto Judaeorum fuisset turba commota, videamus nunc fulgur rediens, quod ait: Viri Israelitae, quid admiramini in hoc, aut nos quid intuemini, quasi nostra virtute aut potestate fecerimus hunc ambulare? Deus Abraham, Deus Isaac, Deus Jacob, Deus patrum nostrorum glorificavit Filium suum Jesum (Ibid., 12). Et paulo post: Cujus nos testes sumus, et in fide nominis ejus hunc, quem vidistis et nostis, confirmavit nomen ejus, et fides quae per eum est dedit integram sanitatem istam in conspectu omnium vestrum. Ivit ergo fulgur cum Petrus miraculum fecit, rediit cum non sibi tribuit, sed auctori quod fecit. Vadunt fulgura cum praedicatores sancti mira opera ostendunt, sed revertendo dicunt adsumus, cum in eo quod faciunt ad potentiam auctoris recurrunt. 8. Praedicatores ad publicum operationis missi, ad secretum contemplationis redire curent. Quod tamen intelligi et aliter potest. Fulgura etenim, sicut superius dictum est, sancti viri mittuntur et eunt cum a secreto contemplationis ad publicum operationis exeunt. Mittuntur et vadunt cum ex abscondito speculationis intimae in activae vitae latitudinem diffunduntur. Sed revertentes dicunt Deo, adsumus, quia post opera exteriora quae peragunt semper ad sinum contemplationis recurrunt, ut illic ardoris sui flammam reficiant, et quasi ex tactu supernae claritatis ignescant. Citius enim inter ipsa licet bona exteriora opera frigescerent, nisi intentione sollicita ad contemplationis ignem incessanter redirent. Unde bene per Salomonem dicitur: Ad locum, de quo exeunt flumina revertuntur, ut iterum fluant (Eccle. I, 7). Ipsi quippe illic flumina qui hic fulgura sunt vocati. Quia enim corda audientium rigant, flumina; quia vero accendunt, fulgura memorantur. De quibus 959 alias scriptum est: Elevaverunt flumina, Domine; elevaverunt flumina voces suas (Psal. XCII, 3). Et rursum: Illuxerunt fulgura ejus orbi terrae (Psal. XCVI, 4). Ad locum ergo de quo exeunt flumina revertuntur, quia sancti viri etsi a conspectu creatoris sui, cujus claritatem mente conspicere conantur, foras propter nos ad activae vitae ministerium veniunt, incessanter tamen ad sanctum contemplationis studium recurrunt, et si in praedicatione sua exterius nostris auribus per corporalia verba se fundunt, mente tamen tacita ad considerandum semper ipsum fontem luminis revertuntur. De quibus et bene dicitur: Ut iterum fluant. Nisi enim ad contemplandum Deum sollicita semper mente recurrerent, nimirum interna siccitas etiam exteriora praedicationis eorum verba siccaret. Sed dum videre Deum indesinenter sitiunt, quasi decursura foras flumina intus semper oriuntur, quatenus illic amando sumant unde ad nos praedicando defluant. Dicatur igitur recte: Nunquid mittes fulgura, et ibunt, et revertentia dicent tibi, Adsumus? Subaudis ut ego, qui praedicatores meos cum voluero post contemplationis gratiam ad activae vitae ministerium compono; quos tamen semper a bonis exterioribus ad internum culmen contemplationis revoco, ut modo jussi ad exercenda opera exeant, modo revocati ad speculationis studium apud me familiarius vivant. Revertentes itaque dicunt Adsumus, quia quamvis per exteriora acta parum quid contemplationi deesse videantur, per ardorem tamen desiderii, quem in mente sua continue accendunt, obsequentes Deo suam praesentiam ostendunt. Adsumus namque dicere est praesentes se amando monstrare. Sequitur:

CAPUT III [Rec. III].

VERS. 36. Quis posuit in visceribus hominis sapientiam? vel quis dedit gallo intelligentiam? 9. Praedicatoribus per gallum diem cantu praenuntiantem figuratis, data a Deo intelligentia. Galli hujus cur lumbi succincti. Qui hoc loco alii galli nomine designantur, nisi modo alio repetiti iidem praedicatores sancti, qui inter tenebras vitae praesentis student venturam lucem praedicando, quasi cantando, nuntiare? Dicunt enim: Nox praecessit, dies autem appropinquavit (Rom. XIII, 12). Qui vocibus suis somnum nostri torporis excutiunt, clamantes: Hora est jam nos de somno surgere (Rom. XIII, 11). Et rursum: Evigilate, justi, nolite peccare (I Cor. XV, 34). [Vet. V.] De hoc gallo rursum scriptum est: Tria sunt quae bene gradiuntur, et quartum quod feliciter incedit: leo fortissimus bestiarum, ad nullius pavebit occursum; gallus succinctus lumbos, et aries, nec est rex qui resistat ei (Prov. XXX, 29). Ipse quippe hoc loco leo ponitur de quo scriptum est: Vicit leo de tribu Juda (Apoc. V, 5). Qui fortissimus bestiarum dicitur, quia in illo hoc quod infirmum est Dei, fortius est hominibus (I Cor. I, 25). Qui ad nullius pavet occursum. Dicit enim: Venit princeps mundi hujus, et in me non habet quidquam (Joan. XIV, 30). Gallus succinctus lumbos, id est praedicatores sancti inter hujus noctis tenebras verum mane nuntiantes. Qui succincti lumbos sunt, quia a membris suis luxuriae fluxia restringunt. In lumbis quippe luxuria est. Unde et eisdem a Domino dicitur: Sint lumbi vestri praecincti (Luc. XII, 35). Et aries, nec est rex qui resistat ei. Quem alium hoc loco arietem accipimus nisi primum intra Ecclesiam ordinem sacerdotum? De quibus scriptum est: Afferte Domino filios arietum (Psal. XXVIII, 1); qui per exempla sua gradientem 960 populum, quasi subsequentem ovium gregem trahunt. Quibus spiritaliter recteque viventibus nullus rex sufficit omnino resistere, quia quilibet persecutor obviet, intentionem eorum non valet praepedire. Sciunt enim ad eum quem desiderant, et anxie currere, et moriendo pervenire. Ponitur ergo primus leo, secundus gallus, tertius aries. Apparuit enim Christus, deinde sancti praedicatores apostoli, et tunc demum spiritales patres Ecclesiarum praepositi, videlicet duces gregum, quia doctores sequentium populorum. 10. Antichristus elevatus in sublime, stultus apparebit. In hac vita non omne quod bene, feliciter, nec omne quod feliciter, bene. Sed haec adhuc melius affirmamus, si ejusdem loci etiam reliqua exponendo subjiciamus. Nam quia post haec et Antichristus apparebit, hoc illic quartum subdidit, dicens: Et qui stultus apparuit, postquam elevatus est in sublime. Si enim intellexisset, ori imposuisset manum (Prov. XXX, 32). Ipse quippe in sublime elevabitur, cum Deum se esse mentietur. Sed elevatus in sublime stultus apparebit, quia in ipsa elevatione sua per adventum veri judicis deficiet. Quod si intellexisset, ori imposuisset manum; id est, si supplicium suum cum superbire exorsus est praevidisset, bene aliquando conditus in tantae jactationem superbiae non fuisset elatus. De quo nequaquam moveat quod superius dictum est: Quartum quod incedit feliciter (Ibid., 29). Tria quippe incedere bene dixit, et quartum feliciter. Non enim omne quod feliciter, bene; neque in hac vita omne quod bene, feliciter. Nam leo, gallus, et aries bene incedunt, sed non hic feliciter, quia persecutionem bella patiuntur. Quartum vero feliciter, et non bene incedit, quia in fallacia sua Antichristus gradietur, sed juxta breve tempus vitae praesentis ipsa illi fallacia prosperabitur, sicut de eo sub Antiochi specie per Danielem dictum est: Robur datum est ei contra juge sacrificium, propter peccata, et prosternetur veritas in terra, et faciet et prosperabitur (Dan. VIII, 12). Quod Salomon ait: Incedit feliciter, hoc Daniel dicit prosperabitur. Juxta hoc itaque testimonium quod per Salomonem dicitur: Gallus succinctus lumbos (Prov. XXX, 31), apte etiam hoc loco gallum sanctos praedicatores accipimus. Ad se ergo cuncta referens Dominus dicit: Quis posuit in visceribus hominis sapientiam? vel quis dedit gallo intelligentiam? Ac si diceret: In cor hominis humana sapientis supernae sapientiae gratiam quis infudit? vel ipsis sanctis praedicatoribus quis, nisi ego, intelligentiam dedit, ut sciant quando vel quibus debeant venturum mane nuntiare? Idcirco enim quando et quid agant sentiunt, quia hoc intrinsecus me revelante cognoscunt. Notandum vero est quod sapientia divinitus inspirata in visceribus hominis quia nimirum quantum ad electorum numerum spectat, non in solis vocibus, sed etiam in sensibus datur, ut juxta quod loquitur lingua vivat conscientia, et lux ejus tanto clarius resplendeat in superficie quanto verius inardescit in corde. [Rec. IV.] 11. Quantum animarum rectores discretione indigeant. Magni autem laboris est hoc quod additur: Vel quis dedit gallo intelligentiam, subtiliori adhuc expositione discutere. Intelligentia quippe doctorum tanto esse subtilior debet, quanto se ad penetranda invisibilia exercet, quanto nil materiale discutit, quanto et per vocem corporis loquens, 961 omne quod est corporis transit. Quae profecto nullatenus summis congrueret, nisi cantanti eam gallo, id est praedicanti doctori, ipse summorum conditor ministraret. Intelligentiam quoque gallus accepit, ut prius nocturni temporis horas discutiat, et tunc demum vocem excitationis emittat, quia videlicet sanctus quisque praedicator in auditoribus suis prius qualitatem vitae considerat, et tunc demum ad erudiendum congruam vocem praedicationis format. Quasi enim horas noctis discernere est peccatorum merita dijudicare, quasi horas noctis discernere est actionum tenebras apta increpationis voce corripere. Gallo itaque intelligentia desuper tribuitur, quia doctori veritatis, virtus discretionis, ut noverit, quibus, quid, quando, vel quomodo inferat, divinitus ministratur. [Vet. VI.] 12. Exhortatio quae quibusdam prodest aliis nocet. Non enim una eademque cunctis exhortatio convenit, quia nec cunctos par morum qualitas astringit. Saepe enim aliis officiunt quae aliis prosunt. Nam et plerumque herbae quae haec animalia reficiunt, alia occidunt; et lenis sibilus equos mitigat, catulos instigat; et medicamentum quod hunc morbum imminuit, alteri vires jungit; et panis qui vitam fortium roborat, parvulorum necat. Pro qualitate igitur audientium formari debet sermo doctorum, et ad sua singulis congruat, et tamen a communis aedificationis arte nunquam recedat. Quid enim sunt intentae mentes auditorum, nisi quasi quaedam in cithara tensiones stratae chordarum? quas tangendi artifex, ut non sibimetipsis dissimile canticum faciant, dissimiliter pulsat. Et idcirco chordae consonam modulationem reddunt, quia uno quidem plectro, sed non uno impulsu feriuntur. Unde et doctor quisque, ut in una cunctos virtute charitatis aedificet, ex una doctrina, sed non una eademque exhortatione tangere corda audientium debet. 13. Pro singulorum qualitate, varia monita dentur.Aliter namque viri, aliter admonendae sunt feminae; aliter juvenes, aliter senes; aliter inopes, aliter locupletes; aliter laeti, aliter tristes; aliter subditi, aliter praelati; aliter servi, aliter domini aliter hujus mundi sapientes, aliter hebetes; aliter impudentes, aliter verecundi; aliter protervi, aliter pusillanimes; aliter impatientes, aliter patientes; aliter benevoli, aliter invidi; aliter simplices, aliter impuri; aliter incolumes, aliter aegri; aliter qui flagella metuunt, et propterea innocenter vivunt; aliter qui sic in iniquitate duruerunt, ut nec per flagella corrigantur; aliter nimis taciti, aliter multiloquio vacantes; aliter timidi, aliter audaces; aliter pigri, aliter praecipites; aliter mansueti, aliter iracundi; aliter humiles, aliter elati; aliter pertinaces, aliter inconstantes; aliter gulae dediti, aliter abstinentes; aliter qui sua misericorditer tribuunt, aliter qui aliena rapere contendunt; aliter qui nec aliena rapiunt, nec sua largiuntur, aliter qui et ea quae habent sua tribuunt, et aliena rapere non desistunt; aliter discordes, aliter pacati; aliter seminantes jurgia, aliter pacifici; aliter admonendi sunt qui sacrae legis verba non recte intelligunt, aliter qui recte quidem intelligunt, sed haec humiliter 962 non loquuntur; aliter qui, cum praedicare digna valeant, prae nimia humilitate formidant, aliter quos a praedicatione imperfectio vel aetas prohibet, et tamen praecipitatio impellit; aliter qui in hoc quod temporaliter appetunt prosperantur, aliter qui quidem quae mundi sunt concupiscunt, sed tamen adversitatis labore fatigantur; aliter conjugiis obligati, aliter a conjugii nexibus liberi; aliter commistionem carnis experti, aliter ignorantes; aliter qui peccata deplorant operum, aliter qui cogitationum; aliter qui commissa plangunt, nec tamen deserunt; aliter qui deserunt, nec tamen plangunt; aliter qui illicita quae faciunt etiam laudant, aliter qui accusant prava nec tamen devitant; aliter qui repentina concupiscentia superantur, aliter qui in culpa ex consilio ligantur; aliter qui licet minima, crebro tamen illicita faciunt, atque aliter qui se a parvis custodiunt, sed aliquando in gravibus demerguntur; aliter qui bona nec inchoant, aliter qui inchoata minime consummant; aliter qui mala occulte agunt, et bona publice, aliter qui bona quae faciunt abscondunt, et tamen quibusdam factis publice mala de se opinari permittunt. Et quidem de singulis quis sit admonitionis ordo subtiliter insinuare debuimus, sed formidata locutionis prolixitate praepedimur. Auctore autem Deo in alio opere id explere appetit animus, si tamen laboriosae hujus vitae adhuc aliquantulum tempus restaverit. [Vet. VII.] 14. Iniqui altis et magnis vocibus increpandi, lenibus et blandis admonendi qui ab iniquitate recesserunt. Habemus vero aliud quod de galli hujus intelligentia considerare debeamus, quia profundioribus horis noctis valentiores ac productiores edere cantus solet, cum vero matutinum jam tempus appropinquat, leniores et minutiores omnimodo voces format. In quibus galli hujus intelligentia quid nobis innuat considerata praedicatorum discretio demonstrat. Qui cum iniquis adhuc mentibus praedicant, altis et magnis vocibus aeterni judicii terrores intimant, quia videlicet quasi in profundae noctis tenebris clamant. Cum vero jam auditorum suorum cordibus veritatis lucem adesse cognoscunt, clamoris sui magnitudinem in lenitatem dulcedinis vertunt, et non tam illa quae sunt de poenis terribilia quam ea quae sunt blanda de praemiis proferunt. Qui etiam minutis tunc vocibus cantant, quia appropinquante mane subtilia quaeque de mysteriis praedicant, ut sequaces sui eo minutiora quaeque de coelestibus audiant, quo luci veritatis appropinquant, et quos dormientes longus galli clamor excitaverat, succisior vigilantes delectet; quatenus correcto cuilibet de regno cognoscere subtiliter dulcia libeat, qui prius adversa de judicio formidabat. Quod bene per Moysen exprimitur, cum ad producendum exercitum tubae clangere concisius jubentur. Scriptum namque est: Fac tibi duas tubas argenteas ductiles (Num. X, 2). Et paulo post: Cum concisus clangor increpuerit, movebuntur castra (Ibid, 5). Per duas enim tubas exercitus ducitur, quia per duo praecepta charitatis ad procinctum fidei populus vocatur. Quae idcirco argenteae fieri praecipiuntur, ut praedicatorum verba lucis nitore pateant, 963 et auditorum mentem nulla sui obscuritate confundant. Idcirco autem ductiles, quia necesse est ut hi qui venturam vitam praedicant tribulationum praesentium tunsionibus crescant. Bene autem dicitur: Cum concisus clangor increpuerit, movebuntur castra (Num. X, 5), quia nimirum praedicationis sermo cum subtilius ac minutius agitur, auditorum corda contra tentationum certamina ardentius excitantur. 15. Qui alios ex officio adhortantur, prius se in bonis operibus exerceant. Est adhuc aliud in gallo solerter intuendum, quia cum jam edere cantus parat, prius alas excutit, et semetipsum feriens, vigilantiorem reddit. Quod patenter cernimus, si sanctorum praedicatorum vitam vigilanter videamus. Ipsi quippe cum verba praedicationis movent, prius se in sanctis actionibus exercent, ne in semetipsis torpentes opere, alios excitent voce; sed ante se per sublimia facta excutiunt, et tunc ad bene agendum alios sollicitos reddunt. Prius cogitationum alis semetipsos feriunt, quia quidquid in se inutiliter torpet, sollicita investigatione deprehendunt, districta animadversione corrigunt. Prius sua punire fletibus curant, et tunc quae aliorum sunt punienda denuntiant. Prius ergo alis insonant quam cantus emittant, quia antequam verba exhortationis proferant omne quod locuturi sunt operibus clamant; et cum perfecte in semetipsis vigilant, tunc dormientes alios ad vigilias vocant. 16. Ut recte suo munere defungantur praedicatores et doctores, habent a Deo. Sed unde tanta haec doctori intelligentia, ut et sibi perfecte vigilet, et dormientes ad vigilias sub quibusdam clamoris provectibus vocet, ut et peccatorum tenebras prius caute discutiat, et discrete postmodum lucem praedicationis ostendat, ut singulis juxta modum et tempora congruat, et simul omnibus quae illos sequantur ostendat? Unde ad tanta et tam subtiliter tenditur, nisi intrinsecus ab eo a quo est conditus doceatur? Quia ergo laus tantae intelligentiae non praedicatoris virtus est, sed auctoris, recte per eumdem auctorem dicitur: Vel quis dedit gallo intelligentiam? Ac si diceret: Nisi ego, qui doctorum mentes quas mire ex nihilo condidi ad intelligenda quae occulta sunt mirabilius instruxi. Unde bene ut in dictis praedicantium non solum inspiratorem se intelligentiae, sed etiam auctorem locutionis ostendat, adjungit: VERS. 37. Quis enarrabit coelorum rationem? [Rec. V.] Quorum tamen verba quia cum sese nobis per speciem ostenderit subtrahit, protinus subdidit:

CAPUT IV.

IBID. Et concentum coeli quis dormire faciet? 17. Deo in majestate sua revelato, praedicatio cessabit. Spiritus sanctus Patris et Filii est, utrique coaeternus. In hac enim vita infirmitati nostrae Dominus non aperta specie majestatis suae, sed praedicatorum suorum voce locutus est, ut corda adhuc carnalia carnalis lingua pulsaret, et tanto facilius insueta perciperent, quanto ea per sonitum consuetae vocis audirent. At postquam per mortem in pulverem caro resolvitur, et per resurrectionem pulvis animatur, tunc de Deo audire verba non quaerimus, quia unum ipsum quod implet omnia jam per speciem Dei verbum videmus. Quod nobis 964 tanto altius sonat quanto et mentes nostras vi intimae illustrationis penetrat. Sublatis namque fortis et occidentibus verbis, quasi quidam sonus aeternae praedicationis fit ipsa imago internae visionis. Unde et recte nunc ad beatum Job Dominus dicit: Quis enarrabit coelorum rationem, et concentum coeli quis dormire faciet? Quid enim coelorum ratio accipitur, nisi vis superna secretorum? Quid per coeli concentum nisi concors praedicantium sermo signatur? Conditor igitur noster cum coelorum rationem narrare coeperit, dormire coeli concentum facit, quia cum jam nobis per speciem ostenditur, nimirum praedicantium verba subtrahuntur. Hinc enim per Jeremiam Dominus dicit: Non docebit ultra vir proximum suum, et fratrem suum, dicens: Cognosce Dominum. Omnes enim cognoscent me a minimo eorum usque ad maximum, dicit Dominus (Jerem. XXXI, 34). Hinc Paulus ait: Sive prophetiae evacuabuntur, sive linguae cessabunt, sive scientia destruetur (I Cor. XIII, 8). [Vet. VIII.] Vel certe coelorum ratio est ipsa vivificatrix virtus, quae spiritus format angelorum. Deus enim sicut est causa causarum, sicut vita viventium, ita etiam ratio rationabilium creaturarum. Tunc ergo coelorum rationem Dominus narrat, cum semetipsum nobis quomodo electis spiritibus praesit insinuat. Tunc coelorum rationem narrat, cum, detersa mentis nostrae caligine, clara se visione manifestat. Unde et in Evangelio Dominus dicit: Venit hora cum jam non in proverbiis loquar vobis, sed palam de Patre annuntiabo vobis (Joan. XVI, 25). Palam quippe de Patre annuntiare se asserit, quia per patefactam tunc majestatis suae speciem, et quomodo ipsi gignenti non impar oriatur. et quomodo utrorumque Spiritus utrique coaeternus procedat ostendit. Aperte namque tunc videbimus quomodo hoc quod oriendo est ei de quo oritur subsequens non est, quomodo is qui per processionem producitur a proferentibus non praeitur. Aperte tunc videbimus quomodo et unum divisibiliter tria sint, et indivisibiliter tria unum. Lingua ergo tunc narrantis Dei est visa claritas sublevantis. Et concentus coeli tunc dormiet, quia apparente in judicio retributore operum, exhortationum jam verba cessabunt. Unde et aperte ipsum resurrectionis tempus adjungitur, cum illico profertur:

CAPUT V.

VERS. 38. Quando fundabatur pulvis in terram, et glebae compingebantur. 18. Resurrectionis tempus a Job praevisum et praenuntiatum. More enim suo quae adhuc futura sunt quasi jam praeterita divinus sermo describit, hoc in se videlicet servans quod per eum dicitur: Qui fecit quae futura sunt (Isai. XLV, 11, sec. LXX). Pulvis itaque tunc in terram fundatur, quia in solida membra reducitur. Et glebae compinguntur, quia nimirum firma corpora ex pulvere collecta consurgunt. Sed postquam verba haec dominica quomodo de futuro intelligenda sint diximus, nunc etiam quid de praesenti insinuent indicemus. [Vet. IX.] 19. Reprobis absconduntur coelestia, revelantur electis. Quis enarrabit coelorum rationem, et concentum coeli quis dormire faciet? Coelorum rationem Dominus narrat, dum nunc insinuando superna 965 secreta electorum suorum mentes illuminat. Concentum vero coeli dormire facit, dum concordes angelorum hymnos atque illa coelestium virtutum gaudia reproborum cordibus justo judicio abscondit. Qui concentus coeli, quamvis in se intrinsecus vigilet, in ipsa tamen reproborum ignorantia extrinsecus dormit. Enarratur ergo secreti coelestis ratio, et tamen concentus coeli dormire permittitur, quia et aliis per inspirationem supernae retributionis scientia panditur, et aliis quae sit internae laudis suavitas occultatur. 20. Visibilia reprobos hic morantur, sanctos autem ad meliora compellunt. Narratur coelorum ratio, quia electorum mentibus quae sit supernorum retributio indesinenter aperitur, ut nimirum sine cessatione proficiant, et transcurrentes visibilia sese ad invisibilia extendant. Omne enim visibile quod in hac vita reprobos figit, hoc electos ad alia impellit, quia dum bona quae facta sunt respiciunt, in eum a quo facta sunt inardescunt; tantoque eum praestantius amant, quanto illum hoc quod ipse bonum condidit praeire considerant. Loquitur quippe hoc eis intrinsecus silenter sonans invisibilis lingua compunctionis. Quam tanto plenius intus audiunt, quanto ab exteriorum desideriorum strepitu perfectius avertuntur. His itaque concentus coeli non dormit, quia eorum mens quae sit laudis supernae suavitas, apposita amoris aure, cognoscit. Intus enim quod appetunt audiunt, et de coelestium bonorum praemiis ipso desiderio Divinitatis instruuntur. Unde et praesentem vitam non solum adversantem, sed etiam faventem graviter tolerant, quia eis onerosum est omne quod cernitur, dum ab eo quod intus audiunt differuntur. Omne quod sibi praesto est grave aestimant, quia illud non est ad quod anhelant; indesinenter autem eorum mens ipsis temporalitatis laboribus fessa in illud coeleste gaudium resumenda suspenditur, dum, in aure cordis intro erumpente concentu coeli, societatem sibi quotidie supernorum civium praestolantur. Iste concentus supernae laudis in illius aure eruperat, qui dicebat: Ingrediar in locum tabernaculi admirabilis, usque ad domum Dei in voce exsultationis et confessionis, sonus civitatis epulantis (Psal. XLI, 5). Qui igitur intus vocem exsultationis et confessionis ac sonum civitatis epulantis audierat, quid illum aliud nisi coeli concentus excitabat? 21. Concentus coelorum a pravis non auditur. Qui tamen concentus reprobis dormit, quia eorum cordibus nequaquam per vocem compunctionis innotescit. Non enim considerare illam desiderabilem supernorum civium frequentiam student, nullo ardoris radio illa solemnitatis internae festa conspiciunt, nulla in intimis contemplationis penna sublevantur. Solis namque visibilibus serviunt, et idcirco nihil supernae suavitatis intrinsecus audiunt, quia eos, sicut superius diximus, in aure cordis curarum saecularium surdi tumultus premunt. Quia igitur occulti dispensatione judicii quod aliis aperitur aliis clauditur, quod aliis detegitur aliis occultatur, dicatur recte: Quis enarrabit coelorum rationem, et concentum coeli quis dormire faciet? Quod tamen tunc nobis latius innotuit, cum Redemptor noster per dispensationis 966 mysterium apparens, et indignis misericordiam praebuit, et eos a se qui digni videbantur exclusit. Unde hic quoque apte subjungitur:

CAPUT VI [Vet.

X, Rec. VI]. VERS. 38. Quando fundabatur pulvis in terram, et glebae compingebantur. 22. Peccatores pulveri similes, quolibet tentationis flatu rapiuntur. Spiritus sancti gratia solidantur, et charitate compinguntur. Quis in pulvere nisi peccatores accipimus, qui nullo rationis pondere solidati cujuslibet tentationis flatu rapiuntur? De quibus scriptum est: Non sic impii non sic, sed tanquam pulvis quem projicit ventus a facie terrae (Psal. I, 5). Pulvis ergo in terram fundatus est, cum peccatores vocati in Ecclesia traditae fidei sunt ratione solidati, ut qui prius inconstantia mobiles tentationis aura levabantur, immobiles postmodum contra tentamenta consisterent, et Deo perseveranter inhaerentes, fixum bene vivendi pondus tenerent. Glebae vero ex humore coagulantur et pulvere. In hac itaque terra glebae compactae sunt, quia vocati peccatores et per Spiritus sancti gratiam infusi In collectione sunt charitatis uniti. Istae glebae in terra compactae sunt, quando populi qui prius quasi in dispersione pulveris diversa sentiebant, postmodum, sancti Spiritus gratia accepta, in illa pacatissima unanimitatis concordia convenerunt, ut cum essent tria millia, vel rursum quinque millia, Scriptura testante, diceretur quia erat in eis cor unum et anima una (Act. IV, 32). Has glebas ex uno quidem pulvere, sed quasi diversa mole distinctas quotidie Dominus in terra compingit, quia, servata unitate sacramenti, juxta varietatem morum atque linguarum fideles in Ecclesia populos colligit. Has glebas jam tunc Dominus designavit, quando ad esum panis et piscium quinquagenos discumbere vel centenos jussit (Matth. XIV, 19, 20). 23. In Ecclesia diversi sunt ordines. Quas tamen glebas si in Ecclesia ex diversitate meritorum attendimus, fortasse adhuc distinguere subtilius valemus. Nam dum alius est ordo praedicantium, alius auditorum; alius regentium, atque alius subditorum; alius conjugum, alius continentium, alius poenitentium, alius virginum; quasi ex una terra est diversa glebarum forma distincta, dum in una fide, in una charitate disparia demonstrantur bene operantium merita. Has glebas populus ille significavit, qui ad constructionem tabernaculi sub uno studio diversa donaria obtulit, de quo scriptum est: Quidquid in cultum tabernaculi et ad vestes sanctas necessarium erat, viri cum mulieribus praebuerunt, armillas et inaures, annulos et dextralia, omne vas aureum in donaria Domini separatum est. Si quis habuit hyacinthum, purpuram, coccumque bis tinctum, byssum et pilos caprarum (Exod. XXXV, 22), etc. 24. Singuli, ad Ecclesiae cultum implendum, dona offerunt. In ornamento ergo tabernaculi viri dona cum mulieribus offerunt, quia in explendo cultu sanctae Ecclesiae, et fortium facta sublimia, et infirmorum opera extrema numerantur. Quid autem per armillas quae lacertos astringunt nisi praepositorum valide laborantium opera demonstrantur? Et quid per inaures nisi subditorum obedientia exprimitur? Quid per annulos nisi signaculum secretorum? Plerumque enim magistri signant quod ab auditoribus capi non posse considerant. Et quid per dextralia nisi primae operationis ornamenta 967 memorantur? Quid per vas aureum in donaria Domini separatum nisi divinitatis intelligentia accipitur, quae tanto ab inferiorum amore disjungitur, quanto ad sola quae aeterna sunt amanda sublevantur? Quid per hyacinthum nisi spes coelestium? Quid per purpuram nisi cruor ac tolerantia passionum amore regni perpetui exhibita? Et quid per bis tinctum coccum nisi charitas demonstratur, quae pro perfectione bis tingitur, quia Dei et proximi dilectione decoratur? Quid per byssum nisi immaculata carnis incorruptio? Et quid per pilos caprarum, ex quibus ciliciorum asperitas texitur, nisi dura poenitentium afflictio designatur? Dum igitur alii per armillas et annulos forte magisterium exercent, alii per inaures et dextralia devotam obedientiam rectamque operationem exhibent, alii per separatum vas aureum praeclaram subtilioremque Dei intelligentiam tenent; alii per hyacinthum, purpuram et coccum, audita coelestia sperare, credere, amare non desinunt, etiam quae adhuc subtiliori intellectu minime cognoscunt, alii per byssum incorruptionem carnis offerunt; alii per caprarum pilos deplorant aspere quod libenter commiserunt; quasi ex una terra innumerae glebae proferuntur, quia ex uno et pari obsequio facta fidelium disparia procedunt. Quae nimirum glebae nequaquam concretae ex pulvere surgerent, nisi aquam prius pulvis acciperet, et concepto se humore solidaret, quia nisi peccatores quosque sancti Spiritus gratia infunderet, constrictos eos ad fidei opera charitatis unitas non teneret. Quando igitur Dominus enarrabit coelorum rationem, vel concentum coeli dormire faciet, aperiat. Ait enim: Quando fundabatur pulvis in terram, et glebae compingebantur. Ac si diceret: Tunc primum vocatione et discretione manifesta, secreta spiritalia et non sine misericordia aliis aperui, et non sine justitia aliis clausi, cum alios respuerem, et alios intra Ecclesiam concordia charitatis adunarem. Quae sancta Ecclesia quia a perfidia Judaeorum repulsa, ad rapiendas gentes se contulit, atque in suo corpore convertendas, quod quidem non suis, sed Domini viribus fecit, apte subjungitur:

CAPUT VII [Vet.

XI, Rec. VII]. VERS. 39. Nunquid capies leaenae praedam, et animam catulorum ejus implebis? 25. Ecclesia leaena est, cujus catuli fuerunt apostoli. Ista nimirum illa leaena est de qua Job dicebat, cum superbientem Judaeam cerneret praedicante Ecclesia praetermissam: Non calcaverunt eam filii institorum, nec pertransivit per eam leaena (Job. XXVIII, 8). Huic ergo leaenae Dominus praedam capit, ut animam catulorum ejus impleat, quia ad augmentum hujus Ecclesiae innumeros de gentilitate diripuit, et per animarum lucrum esurientia apostolorum vota satiavit. Ipsi quippe catuli pro mentis teneritudine et formidinis infirmitate vocati sunt, quia, passo Domino, clausis foribus residebant, sicut de illis scriptum est: Cum esset sero die illo una Sabbatorum, et fores essent clausae ubi erant discipuli congregati propter metum Judaeorum, venit Jesus, et stetit in medio eorum (Joan. XX, 19). Unde hic quoque de eisdem catulis apte subjungitur:

CAPUT VIII.

VERS. XL. Quando cubant in antris, et in specubus insidiantur. 26. In antris prius cubarunt, unde in mundum praedas acturi exsilierunt. Cum enim nequaquam sancti apostoli contra membra diaboli in voce liberae praedicationis exsurgerent, et necdum post passionem Domini 968 sancti Spiritus effusione solidati Redemptorem suum firma auctoritate praedicarent, adhuc contra adversarios suos quasi in antris insidiabantur. Clausis quippe foribus quasi in quibusdam abditis specubus suis catuli rapturi mundum cubabant, ut animarum praedam postmodum praesumentes diriperent, de quibus tunc certum est quod mundi impetum etiam sibimetipsis latendo formidarent. Illis foribus clausis isti catuli mortem mortis nostrae insidiati quaesierunt, ut culpam nostram interficerent, omnemque in nobis peccati vitam necarent. Horum primo illi esurienti catulo, sed jam valenti, ostensa per linteum gentilitate, quasi monstrata praeda, dicitur: Macta et manduca (Act. X, 13). His catulis velut adhuc infirmis ut cubare in antris debeant jubetur, cum eis dominica voce dicitur: Sedete hic in civitate quoadusque induamini virtute ex alto (Luc. XXIV, 49). An non recte leaenae catuli vocantur, qui in Ecclesia editi adversantem mundum ore rapuerunt? 27. Illos imitantur perfecti doctores. Ille scit recte dicere, qui novit ordinate tacere. Et haec quidem facta a sanctis apostolis novimus, haec nunc etiam fieri a perfectis doctoribus videmus. Ipsi enim etsi subsequentium populorum patres sunt, tamen sunt praecedentium filii; unde et non immerito catuli dicuntur. Vel certe quia etsi quorumdam fidelium magistri sunt, universalis tamen Ecclesiae discipulos se esse gloriantur. Leaenae itaque praedam Dominus capit, quia virtute suae inspirationis ab errore vitam delinquentium diripit; et animas catulorum illius replet, quia conversione multorum piis doctorum desideriis satisfacit. De quibus catulis bene subjungitur: Quando cubant in antris, et in specubus insidiantur. Neque enim cuncta tempora doctrinae sunt congrua. Nam plerumque dictorum virtus perditur, si intempestive proferantur. Saepe vero et quod lenius dicitur conventu temporis congruentis animatur. Ille ergo scit recte dicere, qui et ordinate novit tacere. Quid enim prodest eo tempore irascentem corripere, quo alienata mente non solum non aliena verba percipere, sed semetipsum vix valet tolerare? Furentem quippe qui per invectionem corripit, quasi ei qui non sentiat, plagas ebrio imponit. Doctrina itaque ut pervenire ad cor audientis valeat, quae sibi congrua sint temporum momenta perpendat. Bene ergo de his catulis dicitur: Quando cubant in antris, et in specubus insidiantur. Doctores enim sancti quando et arguenda conspiciunt et tamen se per silentium in cogitationibus retinent, quasi in specubus latent, et velut in antris se contegunt quia in suis cordibus occultantur. Sed cum opportunum tempus invenerint, repente prosiliunt, nulla quae dicenda sunt reticent, et cervicem superbientium morsu asperae increpationis tenent. Sive itaque per apostolos, sive per doctores, quos in apostolorum locum subrogavit, huic leaenae Dominus quotidie praedam capit, et per eos quos cepit alios etiam capere non desistit. Ad hoc quippe justi hujus mundi peccatores rapiunt, ut per conversos eos etiam alii ex mundo rapiantur. Unde et ipsa geminitas, quae pio apostolorum ore rapta est, tanta nunc fame alios esurit quanta se ab apostolis concupitam fuisse cognoscit. Proinde et apte subjungitur:

CAPUT IX [Vet.

XII, Rec. VIII]. VERS. 41. Quis praeparat corvo escam suam, quando pulli 969 ejus clamant ad Deum, vagantes eo quod non habeant cibos? 28. Gentilitas conversa corvus est, cujus pulli sunt sancti praedicatores. Quid enim corvi pullorumque ejus nomine nisi peccatis nigra gentilitas designatur? De qua per Prophetam dicitur: Qui dat jumentis escam ipsorum, et pullis corvorum invocantibus eum (Psal. CXLVI, 9). Jumenta quippe escam accipiunt, dum sacrae Scripturae pabulo mentes dudum brutae satiantur. Pullis vero cervorum, filiis scilicet gentium esca datur, cum eorum desiderium nostra conversatione reficitur. Iste corvus esca fuit dum ipsum sancta Ecclesia quaereret. Sed nunc escam accipit, quia ipse ad conversionem alios exquirit. 29. Hi sua virtute nihil se posse sciunt. Cujus videlicet pulli, id est praedicatores ex eo editi, non in se praesumunt, sed in viribus Redemptoris sui. Unde bene dicitur: Quando pulli ejus clamant ad Deum. Nihil enim sua virtute posse se sciunt. Et quamvis animarum lucra piis votis esuriant, ab illo tamen qui cuncta intrinsecus operatur haec fieri exoptant. Vera enim fide comprehendunt, quia neque qui plantat est aliquid, neque qui rigat, sed qui incrementum dat Deus (I Cor. III, 7). 30. Zelo lucrandarum animarum aestuant. Quod vero dictum est: vagantes eo quod non habeant cibos, in hac vagatione nihil aliud quam aestuantium praedicatorum vota signantur. Qui dum in Ecclesiae sinum recipere populos ambiunt, magno ardore succensi, nunc ad hos, nunc ad illos colligendos desiderium mittunt. Quasi quaedam quippe vagatio est ipsa cogitationis aestuatio; et velut ad loca varia mutatis nutibus transeunt, dum pro adunandis animabus in modos innumeros ac in partes diversas esurienti mente discurrunt. [Vet. XIII.] 31. Pauli pro omnibus pene ecclesiis sollicitudo. Charitas, quae divisa unit, cor Pauli per multa dividebat. Hanc vagationem pulli corvorum, id est filii gentilium, ab ipso gentium magistro didicerunt. Ipse quippe quam valida charitate flagrat, tam nimia ex locis ad loca se vagatione permutat; transire ad alia ex aliis appetit, quia ipsa eum quae implet charitas impellit. Longe namque a Romanis positus scribit: Memoriam vestri facio semper in orationibus meis, obsecrans si quo modo tandem aliquando prosperum iter habeam in voluntate Dei veniendi ad vos; desidero enim videre vos (Rom. I, 9, 10). Retentus Ephesi Corinthiis scribit: Ecce tertio hoc paratus sum venire ad vos (II Cor. XII, 14). Rursum Ephesi commorans, Galatis loquitur, dicens: Vellem modo esse apud vos, et mutare vocem meam (Gal. IV, 20). Romae quoque custodia carceris clausus, quia ire ad Philippenses per semetipsum non permittitur, transmittere se discipulum pollicetur, dicens: Spero in Domino Jesu, Timotheum me cito mittere ad vos, ut et ego bono animo sim, cognitis quae circa vos sunt (Philip. II, 10). Constrictus etiam vinculis atque Ephesi retentus, Colossensibus scribit: Nam si corpore absens sum, sed spiritu vobiscum sum (Coloss. II, 5). Ecce quomodo sancto desiderio quasi vagatur: hic corpore tenetur, illuc spiritu ducitur; et paterni amoris affectum istis praesentibus exhibet, illis absentibus ostendit; coram positis impendit opera, audientibus exprimit vota, efficaciter praesens eis cum quibus erat, nec tamen 970 illis absens cum quibus non erat. Cujus vagationem melius cognoscimus, si ejus adhuc ad Corinthios verba pensamus. Ait enim: Veniam ad vos, cum Macedoniam pertransiero. Nam Macedoniam pertransibo; apud vos autem forsitan manebo, vel etiam hiemabo (I Cor. XVI, 5). Perpendamus, quaeso, quae sit ista vagatio. Ecce alio interim manet, alio se iturum perhibet, atque alio deflexurum promittit. Quid est quod tam anxie per tot loca partitur, nisi quod circa omnes una charitate constringitur? Charitas enim quae divisa unire consuevit, unum cor Pauli per multa dividi compellit. Quod tamen tanto arctius in Deo colligit, quanto latius per sancta desideria spargit. Praedicando igitur Paulus vult simul omnia dicere, amando vult simul omnes videre, quia et in carne permanendo vult omnibus vivere, et de carne transeundo per sacrificium fidei vult omnibus prodesse. Vagentur itaque pulli corvorum, id est magistrum suum imitentur filii gentium, torporem mentis excutiant, et cum animarum lucrum, id est cibum suum minime reperiunt, non quiescant; ad profectum se ex provectibus extendant, et, aestuantes in utilitate multorum, refectionem suam quasi vagantes esuriant. Quia vero per praedicationum opera discurrendo, refectione fidei gentilitatem satiare non cessant, dicatur recte: Quis praeparat corvo escam suam, quando pulli ejus clamant ad Deum, vagantes eo quod non habeant cibos. [Vet. XIV.] 32. Corvi quoque nomine plebs Judaica significatur. Visa gentilium conversione, olim resipiscet ac de sua stultitia erubescet. Potest etiam corvi nomine nigra per infidelitatis meritum plebs Judaica designari. Nam pulli ejus ad Deum clamare referuntur, ut eidem corvo a Domino esca praeparetur, quia nimirum sancti apostoli, plebis Israeliticae carne generati, dum pro gente sua preces ad Dominum funderent, quasi pulli corvorum, eum de quo carnaliter editi sunt spiritali intelligentia parentem populum paverunt. Igitur dum pulli ejus clamant, corvo esca praeparatur, quia dum apostoli exorant, plebs dudum perfida ad cognitionem fidei ducitur, et ex praedicatione filiorum quasi ex pullorum voce satiatur. Illud tamen in hoc versu debemus solerter intueri, quod huic corvo esca dicitur primum pullis clamantibus et postmodum vagantibus praeparari. Clamantibus namque pullis corvo esca praeparata est, cum praedicantibus apostolis verbum Dei Judaea audiens, modo in tribus millibus, modo in quinque millibus spirituali est intelligentia satiata. Sed cum per reproborum multitudinem crudelitatem suam contra praedicantes exerceret, et quasi pullorum vitam necaret, iidem pulli in universa mundi spatia dispersi sunt. Unde et eisdem carnalibus patribus spiritali praedicationi resistentibus dicunt: Vobis oportebat primum loqui verbum Dei; sed quia repellitis illud, et indignos vos judicatis aeternae vitae, ecce convertimur ad gentes (Act. XIII, 46); scientes profecto quod postquam gentilitas crederet, etiam Judaea ad fidem veniret. Unde et scriptum est: Donec plenitudo gentium introiret, et sic omnis Israel salvus fieret (Rom. XI, 25). Quia igitur summopere sancti apostoli et studuerunt prius 971 audientibus praedicare, et postmodum resistentibus exempla conversae gentilitatis ostendere, quasi esurientes pulli huic corvo escam suam prius clamando et postmodum vagando quaesierunt. Unde enim vagantur pulli, inde escam corvus invenit, quia dum per laborem praedicantium conversam ad Deum gentilitatem Judaicus populus respicit, ad extremum quandoque stultitiam suae infidelitatis erubescit; et tunc Scripturae sacrae sententias intelligit, cum prius quam sibi eas gentibus innotuisse cognoscit, atque, expleta vagatione pullorum, ad percipienda sacra eloquia os cordis aperit; quia peractis in mundum cursibus apostolorum, sero ea spiritaliter percipit: quibus diu se perfidia astringente jejunavit. Quae quia omnia solius divinae potentiae virtus operatur, recte dicitur: Quis praeparat corvo escam suam, quando pulli ejus clamant ad Deum, vagantes eo quod non habeant cibos? Subandis nisi ego, qui infidelem populum filiis suis et exorantibus tolero, et praedicantibus pasco, atque ad alia vagantibus convertendum quandoque in fine sustineo. [Vet. XV.] 33. Periti magistri, discipulis non satis humiliter de se sentientibus, sublimioris doctrinae cibum subtrahunt. Est adhuc aliud quod de corvo moraliter possit intelligi. Editis namque pullis, ut fertur, escam plene praebere dissimulat, priusquam plumescendo nigrescant, eosque inedia affici patitur, quoadusque in illis per pennarum nigredinem sua similitudo videatur. Qui huc illucque vagantur in nido, et ciborum expetunt aperto ore subsidium. At cum nigrescere coeperint, tanto eis praebenda alimenta ardentius requirit, quanto illos alere diutius distulit. Corvus profecto est doctus quisque praedicator, qui magna voce clamat, dum peccatorum suorum memoriam atque cognitionem infirmitatis propriae quasi quamdam coloris nigredinem portat. Cui quidam nascuntur in fide discipuli, sed fortasse adhuc considerare infirmitatem propriam nesciunt, fortasse a peccatis praeteritis memoriam avertunt, et per hoc eam quam assumi oportet contra hujus mundi gloriam humilitatis nigredinem non ostendunt. Hi velut ad accipiendas escas os aperiunt, cum doceri de secretis sublimibus quaerunt. Sed eis doctor suus alimenta praedicamentorum sublimium tanto minus tribuit, quanto illos peccata praeterita minus digne deflere cognoscit. Exspectat quippe atque admonet ut a nitore vitae praesentis prius per poenitentiae lamenta nigrescant, et tunc demum congrua praedicationis subtilissimae nutrimenta percipiant. Corvus in pullis ora inhiantia respicit, sed ante in eis pennarum nigredine indui corpora quaerit. Sic et discretus doctor interna mysteria eorum sensibus non ministrat, quos adhuc ab hoc saeculo nequaquam se abjecisse considerat. Quanto igitur discipuli exterius per cultum vitae praesentis minus quasi nigri sunt, tanto per cibum verbi interius minus replentur; et quo se a corporali gloria non evacuant, eo a spiritali refectione jejunant. 34. Secus si in confessione peccatorum humilientur.Si vero in confessione vitae praeteritae lamenti sui gemitus velut nigrescentes plumas proferant, illico in contemplatione doctor ad escam de sublimibus deferendam, quasi pullorum refectionem cogitans corvus, volat, eisque hiantibus in ore 972 cibum revocat, dum ex ea intelligentia quam coeperit esurientibus discipulis alimenta vitae loquendo subministrat. Quos tanto ardentius de supernis reficit, quanto verius a mundi nitore nigrescere poenitentiae lamentatione cognoscit. 35. Quo major est humilitas, major etiam spes provectus. Pulli autem dum nigro se pennarum colore vestiunt, de se etiam volatum promittunt, quia quo magis discipuli abjecta de se sentiunt, quo magis sese despicientes affligunt, eo amplius spem provectus sui in altiora pollicentur. Unde et curat doctor festinantius alere quos jam per quaedam indicia providet posse et aliis prodesse. Hinc enim Timotheum Paulus admonet, velut plumescentes pullos sollicitius nutrire, dum dicit: Quae audisti a me per multos testes, haec commenda fidelibus hominibus, qui idonei erunt et alios docere (II Tim. II, 2). Quae doctrinae discretio dum caute a praedicatore custoditur, ei divinitus largior copia praedicationis datur. Dum enim per charitatem compati afflictis discipulis novit, dum per discretionem congruum doctrinae tempus intelligit, ipse non solum pro se, sed etiam pro eis, quibus laboris sui studia impendit, majora intelligentiae suae munera percipit. Unde hic quoque apte dicitur: Quis praeparat corvo escam suam, quando pulli ejus clamant ad Deum, vagantes eo quod non habeant cibos? Cum enim pulli ut satientur clamant, corvo esca praeparatur, quia dum verbum Dei boni auditores esuriunt, pro reficiendis eis majora doctoribus intelligentiae dona tribuuntur. Sequitur:

CAPUT X [Vet.

XVI, Rec. IX]. CAP. XXXIX, VERS. 1. Nunquid nosti tempus partus ibicum in petris, vel parturientes cervas observasti? 36. Cur magistri spirituales in ibicibus et cervis signati. Ibicum descriptio. Qui cervi flumina transmittant. Quae agimus apud Deum eo magis crescunt quo apud nos per humilitatem decrescunt. Meridiana pars ibices aves vocat, quae Nili fluentis inhabitant. Orientalis vero Occidentalisque plaga parva quadrupedia ibices nominat quibus et moris est in petris parere, quia neque sciunt nisi in petris habitare. Quae si quando etiam de altis saxorum cacuminibus ruunt, in suis se cornibus illaesa suscipiunt. Caput quippe ruentes feriunt, cujus dum prima cornua opponunt fit omne corpus a jactura casus alienum. Cervarum vero moris est inventos serpentes exstinguere, eorumque membra morsibus dilaniare. Fertur autem quia si quando flumina transeunt, capitum suorum onera dorsis praecedentium superponunt, sibique invicem succedentes laborem ponderis omnino non sentiunt. Quid est ergo quod beatus Job de partu ibicum cervarumque discutitur, nisi quia in cervis vel ibicibus magistrorum spiritalium persona signatur? Ipsi quippe velut ibices in petris pariunt, quia in doctrina patrum, qui petrae pro soliditate vocati sunt, ad conversionem animas gignunt. Ipsi velut ibices nullius casus damna sentiunt, dum in suis cornibus excipiuntur, quia quidquid eis ruinae temporalis accesserit, in testamentis sacrae Scripturae se suscipiunt, et quasi cornuum exceptione salvantur. De his enim testamentis dictum est: Cornua sunt in manibus ejus (Habac. III, 4). Ad Scripturarum ergo consolationem refugiunt, dum aliqua temporalis casus jactura feriuntur. An non more ibicum, hujus mundi adversitatibus cadens, quasi in suis se cornibus excipiebat Paulus, cum diceret: Quaecunque scripta sunt, ad nostram doctrinam 973 scripta sunt, ut per patientiam et consolationem scripturarum spem habeamus (Rom. XV, 4)? Ipsi etiam cervae vocati sunt, sicut per Jeremiam de doctoribus genitos filios incaute deserentibus dicitur: Cerva in agro peperit, et reliquit (Jerem. 14, 5). Ipsi, more cervarum, interemptis vitiis, quasi exstinctis serpentibus vivunt, et de ipsa exstinctione vitiorum, ad fontem vitae acrius inardescunt. Unde Psalmista ait: Sicut cervus desiderat ad fontes aquarum, ita desiderat anima mea ad te, Deus (Psal. XLI, 1). Ipsi etiam dum labentia hujus temporalitatis momenta quasi quaedam flumina transeunt, compatientes charitate, onera sua sibi invicem superponunt, quia cauta observatione custodiunt id quod scriptum est: Invicem onera vestra portate, et sic adimplebitis legem Christi (Galat. VI, 2). Quia vero post adventum Domini spiritales magistri per mundum sparsi sunt, qui auditorum animas in conversione parere praedicando potuissent, et quia hoc idem tempus incarnationis Domini ante prophetarum voces cognitum non fuit, quamvis futura ipsa incarnatio praecognita omnibus electis fuit, bene beatus Job de tempore partus ibicum cervarumque discutitur, eique dicitur: Nunquid nosti tempus partus ibicum in petris, vel parturientes cervas observasti? Ac si dicatur ei: Idcirco te egisse aliquid sublimiter credis, quia illud tempus necdum praevides quo spiritales magistri in mundum missi per doctrinam antiquorum patrum filios generant, suisque laboribus animarum mihi lucra comportant. Nam si illorum fructum quasi ibicum cervarumque partus aspiceres, valde humiliter de tua virtute sentires. Magna quippe quae agimus quasi minima ducimus, cum haec per fortiora exempla pensamus. Sed tunc apud Deum crescunt per meritum, cum apud nosmetipsos per humilitatem decrescunt. [Vet. XVII.] 37. Per cervas, doctores; per ibices, auditores possunt intelligi. Exempla sanctorum inspicienda. Regis David humilitas et patientia. Contumeliosa verba non convicia, sed adjutoria credidit. Iis gratia magis quam ira debetur. Possunt vero cervarum significatione doctores, appellatione autem ibicum, qui animalia sunt minima, auditores intelligi. In petris vero ibices pariunt, quia ad exercenda sancta opera per exempla patrum praecedentium fecundantur, ut cum fortasse praecepta sublimia audiunt, et, infirmitatis propriae conscii, ea se implere posse diffidunt, majorum vitam conspiciant, atque in eorum considerata fortitudine bonorum operum fetus ponant. Ut enim pauca de multis loquar, quatenus studiosus lector multa in paucis intelligat, iste, verborum contumeliis pressus, cum virtutem patientiae servare non sufficit, David factum ad memoriam reducat, quem cum tot Semei conviciis urgeret, et armati proceres ulcisci contenderent, ait: Quid mihi et vobis filii Sarviae? Dimittite eum ut maledicat; Dominus enim praecepit ei ut malediceret David; et quis est qui audeat dicere, quare sic fecerit (II Reg. XVI, 10)? Et paulo post: Dimittite eum ut maledicat juxta praeceptum Domini, si forte respiciat Dominus afflictionem meam, et reddat mihi bonum pro maledictione hac hodierna (Ibid., 12). Quibus profecto verbis indicat quia pro perpetrato Bethsabee scelere, exsurgentem contra se filium fugiens, reduxit ad animum malum quod perpetravit, et aequanimiter pertulit quod audivit; et contumeliosa verba non tam convicia quam adjutoria credidit, quibus se 974 purgari sibique misereri posse judicavit. Tunc enim illata convicia bene toleramus, cum in secreto mentis ad male perpetrata recurrimus. Leve quippe videbitur quod injuria percutimur, dum in actione nostra conspicimus quia pejus est quod mereremur; sicque fit ut contumeliis gratia magis quam ira debeatur, quarum interventu Deo judice poena gravior declinari posse confiditur. [Vet. XVIII.] 38. Qua arte Joseph luxuriam vicerit. Illatam gratiam exteriorum Dei munerum, in arma virtutum convertamus. Contra Deum ex ejus beneficiis pugnare nos pudeat. Ecce alius dum mundi hujus successibus proficit, lenocinante cordis laetitia, tentari se luxuriae stimulis sentit; sed Joseph factum ad memoriam revocat, et in arce se castitatis servat. Qui dum sibi a domina conspiceret pudicitiae damna suaderi, ait: Ecce dominus meus, omnibus mihi traditis, ignorat quid habeat in domo sua, nec quidquam est quod non in mea sit potestate, vel non tradiderit mihi praeter te, quae uxor ejus es; quomodo ergo possum hoc malum facere, et peccare in dominum meum (Genes. XXXIX, 8)? Quibus verbis ostenditur quia bona quae assecutus fuerat repente memoriae intulit, et malum quod se pulsabat evicit; et quia perceptae gratiae meminit, vim culpae imminentis fregit. Cum enim voluptas lubrica tentat in prosperis, haec ipsa sunt prospera aculeo tentationis opponenda, ut eo erubescamus prava committere, quo nos a Deo meminimus gratuito bona percepisse, et illatam gratiam exteriorum munerum vertamus in arma virtutum, ut sint ante oculos quae percepimus, et quae nos alliciunt subigamus. Quia enim voluptas ipsa ex prosperitate nascitur, ejusdem prosperitatis est consideratione ferienda, quatenus hostis noster unde oritur, inde moriatur. Considerandum quippe est ne acceptum munus vertamus in vitium, ne per favorem vitae nos absorbeat vorago nequitiae. Iram namque contra nos superni judicis inexstinguibiliter accendimus, si contra benignitatem illius etiam ex ipsa sua largitate pugnamus. 39. Ad contemplationem anhelanti Daniel imitandus. Sapor carnalium reprimendus. Exteriorum evagationem cohibenti, secessus interior aperitur. Alius internae scientiae dulcedinem quaerens, nec tamen secreta ejus contingere praevalens, Danielis vitam ad imitandum conspicit, et desideratum scientiae culmen apprehendit. Ille quippe qui postmodum voce angelica pro cognitionis internae concupiscentia vir desiriorum dicitur (Dan. X, 11), prius in aula regia carnis in se desideria edomuisse memoratur, ut nil ex delectabilibus cibis attingeret, sed lautis ac mollioribus duriora atque asperiora cibaria praeferret (Dan. I, 12), ut dum sibi exterioris cibi blandimenta subtraheret, ad interni pabuli delectamenta perveniret; et tanto avidius gustum sapientiae intus acciperet, quanto saporem carnis pro eadem sapientia foris robustius repressisset. Si enim a carne hoc quod libet abscindimus, mox in spiritu quod delectet invenimus. Intentioni quippe animae, si exterior evagatio clauditur, interior secessus aperitur. Nam quo extra se spargi propter disciplinam mens non potest, eo super se intendere per profectum potest, quia et in altum crescere arbor cogitur, quae per ramos diffundi prohibetur; et cum rivos fontis obstruimus, fluenta surgere ad superiora provocamus. Igitur dum studiosi quique sanctorum vitam imitando conspiciunt, in petris ibices fetus ponunt. Hinc est quod auditores suos quasi ibices in petris parere Paulus admonebat, 975 cum enumeratis majorum virtutibus diceret: Habentes tantam impositam nubem testium, deponentes omne pondus, et circumstans nos peccatum, per patientiam curramus ad propositum nobis certamen (Hebr. XII, 1). Et rursum: Quorum intuentes exitum conversationis, imitamini fidem (Hebr. XIII, 7). [Vet. XIX.] 40. Cum divina praecepta concipimus, non statim parturimus. Sed cum divina praecepta corde concipimus, non statim quasi jam solide cogitata parturimus. Unde et beatus Job non de partu ibicum, sed de tempore partus inquiritur. Quod videlicet tempus si in nobismetipsis vix comprehendimus, multo magis in aliena mente nescimus. Prius enim superni timoris semina utero cordis suscepta per meditationem studii coagulantur ut maneant, postmodum, stricta intentione cogitationis affixa, dum ad discretionis rationem tendunt, quasi in membrorum distinctionem formantur; dehinc, usu perseverantiae confirmata velut in soliditatem ossium veniunt; ad extremum vero, perfecta auctoritate roborata, quasi in partum procedunt; quae incrementa divinorum seminum nullus in aliena mente considerat, nisi ipse qui creat. Nam etsi quemlibet jam vim supernae concupiscentiae concepisse quarumdam rerum attestatione cognoscimus, quando tamen in partu erumpat ignoramus. 41. Quidam fetus abortivi sunt, quia praematuri. Bona tenera humana laus exstinguit. Saepe autem concepta mente semina pervenire ad perfectionem nequeunt, quia oriendo tempus partus antecedunt. Et quia necdum plene in cogitatione formata ante humanos oculos prodeunt, velut abortiva moriuntur. Bona quippe adhuc tenera, plerumque humana lingua, dum jam quasi fortia laudat, exstinguit. Tanto enim celerius occidunt, quanto ad favoris notitiam intempestive prorumpunt. Nonnunquam vero imperfecta nostra cogitatio necdum roborata, dum citius hominibus ostenditur, resistentium adversitate dissipatur; et cum conatur ante tempus videri quia sit, agit ut non sit. Sancti autem viri, quia cuncta quae bene cogitant student ut occulte convalescant, et quasi processuros fetus prius intra uterum mentis formant, recte beatus Job de partus tempore discutitur, quod videlicet unicuique quando sit congruum nisi a creatore nescitur. Qui dum penetralia cordis aspicit, quando ad humanam notitiam bona nostra congrue nascantur, apprehendit. Bene itaque dicitur: Nunquid nosti tempus partus ibicum in petris? Ac si aperte dicat. Ut ego, qui idcirco electorum fetus vivaces facio, quia praescito in tempore produco. Bene autem expleto fetu auditorum subditur: Vel parturientes cervas observasti? Parturientes enim cervas observare est illos labores patrum qui spiritales filios generant cauta consideratione pensare. 42. Praedicatorum animas parturientium qui dolores, quae dotes. Solerter quippe intuendum est quod hic sermo tam vigilanter imprimitur, ut dicatur, observasti, quia utique perpaucorum est pensare quis labor sit in praedicationibus patrum; quantis doloribus, quasi quibusdam conatibus animas in fide et conversatione parturiunt; quam cauta se observatione circumspiciunt, ut sint fortes in praeceptis, 976 compatientes in infirmitatibus, in minis terribiles, in exhortationibus blandi, in ostendendo magisterio humiles, in rerum temporalium contemptu dominantes, in tolerandis adversitatibus rigidi, et tamen dum vires suas sibimet non tribuunt, infirmi; quantus sit eis dolor de cadentibus, quantus de stantibus timor; quo fervore alia adipisti appetunt, quo pavore alia adepta conservant. Quia igitur perpaucorum est ista pensare, bene ei dicitur: Vel parturientes cervas observasti? [Vet. XX.] 43. Qui per vigorem disciplinae patres sunt, per pietatis viscera sint matres. Nil vero obstat quod verba Deus de doctoribus faciens, non cervorum, sed cervarum eos specie designat, quia nimirum illi veri doctores sunt, qui cum per vigorem disciplinae patres sunt, per pietatis viscera esse matres noverunt. Qui labores sanctae conceptionis tolerant, et proferendos Deo filios intra uterum charitatis portant. In edenda enim prole amplius matres laborant, quae crescentem intra uterum conceptionem, longo mensium tempore sustinent, et quae ex utero procedentem non sine magnis doloribus deponunt. Unde et hic apta consideratione subjungitur:

CAPUT XI [Rec. X].

VERS. 2. Dinumerasti menses conceptus eorum? 44. Per congruum tempus concepta soboles in cordis utero gestanda ut vivat. Sancti enim viri cum de profectu auditorum cogitant, quasi jam in utero conceptionem portant. Sed cum nonnulla quae dicenda sunt differunt, et aptum suis exhortationibus tempus quaerunt, velut a partu quem fieri appetunt in mensium prolixitate dilatantur. Et saepe dum quaedam quae sentiunt, intempestive dicere audientibus nolunt, in ipsa tarditate proferendae sententiae, sive ad haec quae suadenda sunt, seu ad illa quae increpanda, consilio altiori firmantur. Et dum cogitatur vita filiorum, nec tamen ante tempus lingua consilium mentis ejicit, quasi jam concepta soboles intra uterum crescit, ut ad auditorum notitiam tunc sententia cordis exeat, quando prolata utiliter quasi per congruum tempus partus vivat. Et quia haec homines in magistrorum mente quando vel quomodo agantur ignorant, Deus vero ad retributionis gloriam non solum effectum considerat, sed etiam momenta cogitationum signat, recte ad beatum Job dicitur: Dinumerasti menses conceptus earum? Subaudis ut ego, qui in sanctis praedicatoribus non solum fructus exteriorum operum, sed ipsas diutinas cogitationes numero, qui et eas ad retributionem servo. [Vet. XXI.] 45. Qui se ad praedicandum parant, prius se interius virtutibus innovent. Possunt per menses, quia congesti dies sunt, etiam multiplicatae virtutes intelligi. In mensibus quoque luna renascitur; nilque obstat si per menses nova regenerationis creatura signetur. De qua Paulus apostolus dicit: In Christo Jesu neque circumcisio aliquid valet, neque praeputium, sed nova creatura (Galat. V, 6; VI, 15). Sancti igitur viri, cum se ad praedicandum parant, prius se interius virtutibus innovant, ut ad hoc quod loquendo docent, vivendo concordent. Prius sua interna considerant, atque a cunctis se vitiorum sordibus emundant, curantes summopere ut contra iram patientiae luce resplendeant, contra carnis luxuriam etiam cordis munditia fulgescant, 977 contra torporem zelo candeant, contra confusos praecipitationis motus serena gravitate rutilent, contra superbiam vera humilitate luceant, contra timorem radiis auctoritatis clarescant. Quia ergo tanta in se prius studia congerunt, quasi in conceptu sanctae praedicationis menses virtutum fiunt. Quos menses Dominus solus dinumerat, quia eadem bona in eorum cordibus non nisi qui dedit pensat. Et quia juxta mensuram virtutum effectus etiam subsequitur fructuum, recte subjungitur:

CAPUT XII.

IBID. Et scisti tempus partus earum? 46. Virtutum mensuram fructus ratio sequitur. Subaudis, Ut ego, qui dum in cogitatione virtutum menses dinumero, quando hoc quod implere appelunt parere valeant scio, quia nimirum dum cordis occulta conspicio, futurum foris effectum operis intus in pondere cogitationis penso. Sequitur:

CAPUT XIII.

VERS. 3. Incurvantur ad fetum, et pariunt, et rugitus emittunt. 47. Praedicatores nisi flendo spiritualiter gignere non possunt. Rugiunt quippe, dum per incurvationem suam in conversatione lucis auditorum animas gignunt, quia ab aeternis nos suppliciis removere nisi flendo et dolendo non possunt. Praedicatores enim sancti nunc in lacrymis seminant, ut segetem postmodum gaudiorum metant. Nunc quasi cervae in dolore partus sunt, ut spiritali prole postmodum sint fecundi. Ut enim unum de multis loquar, video Paulum quasi quamdam cervam in partu suo magni doloris rugitus emittentem. Ait enim: Filioli mei, quos iterum parturio, donec formetur Christus in vobis, vellem esse apud vos modo, et mutare vocem meam, quoniam confundor in vobis (Galat. IV, 19). Ecce mutare vult vocem in partu suo, ut praedicationis sermo in rugitum vertatur doloris. Vult mutare vocem suam, quia quos jam praedicando pepererat, reformando gemens iterum parturiebat. Qualem rugitum haec cerva pariens emittebat, quando eisdem post se redeuntibus exclamare cogebatur, dicens: O insensati Galatae, quis vos fascinavit; et sic stulti estis, ut cum spiritu coeperitis, nunc carne consummemini (Galat. III, 1)? vel certe: Currebatis bene, qui vos impedivit veritati non obedire (Galat. V, 7)? Qualis in hujus cervae partu rugitus fuit, quae diu conceptos filios cum tot difficultatibus peperit, et quandoque partos ad malitiae uterum redisse cognovit? Consideremus quid doloris habuerit, quid laboris, quae et postquam potuit concepta edere, rursum compulsa est exstincta suscitare. [Vet. XXII.] 48. Nisi ad infirmitatem nostram descenderent et incurvarentur, filios in fide non procrearent. Sapere ad sobrietatem debent. Notandum vero summopere est quod istae cervae incurvantur ut pariant, quia nimirum si erectae starent, parere non valerent. Nisi enim praedicatores sancti ab illa immensitate contemplationis internae quam capiunt, ad infirmitatem nostram humillima praedicatione quasi quadam incurvatione descenderent, nunquam utique in fide filios procrearent. Nobis quippe prodesse non possent, si in suae altitudinis erectione persisterent. Sed videamus cervam sese ut pariat incurvantem: Ego, inquit, non potui vobis loqui quasi spiritalibus, sed quasi carnalibus, tanquam parvulis in Christo lac vobis potum dedi, non escam (I Cor. III, 1). Atque mox ejusdem incurvationis causas exsequitur, dicens: Nondum enim poteratis, sed nec adhuc quidem potestis (Ibid., 2). Sed hanc cervam, quae propter nos incurvata est, quaeso videamus 978 erectam. Ait: Sapientiam loquimur inter perfectos (I Cor. II, 6). Et rursum: Sive mente excedimus, Deo (II Cor. V, 13). Cum vero mente excedit Deo, excessum ejus nos omnino non capimus. Ut ergo nos lucretur, incurvatur ad nos. Unde illic apte subjungit: Sive sobrii sumus vobis (Ibid.). Si enim sancti viri ea nobis praedicare vellent quae capiunt, cum in superna contemplatione debriantur, et non magis scientiam suam quodam moderamine et sobrietate temperarent, adhuc angusto intelligentiae sinu illa superni fontis fluenta quis caperet? Incurvatae autem istae cervae, alias coeli vocatae sunt, de quibus dicitur: Domine, inclina coelos tuos, et descende (Psal. CXLIII, 5). Cum enim inclinantur coeli, descendit Dominus, quia cum se in praedicatione sua sancti doctores attrahunt, divinitatis notitiam nostris cordibus infundunt. Nequaquam quippe ad nos Dominus descenderet, si praedicatores ejus in contemplationis rigore inflexibiles permanerent. Inclinantur ergo coeli ut descendat Dominus, incurvantur cervae ut nos in nova fidei luce nascamur. Istae incurvatae cervae in Canticis canticorum sponsae ubera sunt vocatae, sicut scriptum est: Meliora sunt ubera tua vino (Cant. I, 1). Ista enim sunt ubera quae in arca pectoris fixa lacte nos potant, quia ipsi arcanis summae contemplationis inhaerentes, subtili nos praedicatione nutriunt. Ut igitur ab aeterno gemitu et dolore nos retrahant, nunc incurvantur cervae, atque in partu rugitus emittunt. Quia vero ipsi, qui sancta Patrum praedicatione nascuntur, aliquando doctores suos patiendo praeveniunt, ut eis adhuc in hac vita durantibus ipsi jam martyrio consummentur, apte sequitur:

CAPUT XIV [Rec. XI].

VERS. 4. Separantur filii earum, et pergunt ad pastum; egrediuntur, et non revertuntur ad eas. 49. Eorum filii ad sacrae Scripturae pastum pergunt. Eos Verbum ex natura divinitatis illustrat. Pastum Scriptura sacra illud viriditatis aeternae pabulum vocat, ubi jam nostra refectio nullius defectus ariditate marcescet. De quo pastu per Psalmistam dicitur: Dominus regit me, et nihil mihi deerit, in loco pascuae ibi me collocavit (Psal. XXII, 2). Et rursum: Nos autem populus ejus, et oves pascuae ejus (Psal. XCIV, 7). De quibus nimirum pascuis Veritas per semetipsam dicit: Per me si quis introierit, salvabitur; et ingredietur, et egredietur, et pascua inveniet (Joan. X, 9). Pergunt ergo ad pastum, quia de corporibus exeuntes illa pabula internae viriditatis inveniunt. Egrediuntur, et non revertuntur ad eas, quia in illa suscepti contemplatione gaudiorum, jam nullatenus indigent verba audire docentium. Egressi itaque ad eas jam non redeunt, quia angustias vitae praesentis evadentes, ultra a doctoribus praedicationem vitae accipere non requirunt. Tunc quippe impletur quod scriptum est: Non docebit ultra vir proximum suum, et vir fratrem suum, dicens: Cognosce Dominum; omnes enim cognoscent me a minimo eorum usque ad maximum, dicit Dominus (Jerem. XXXI, 34). Tunc impletur quod in Evangelio Veritas dicit: Palam de Patre meo annuntiabo vobis (Joan. XVI, 25). Filius quippe de Patre palam annuntiat, quia sicut superius diximus, per hoc quod Verbum est, ex natura nos divinitatis illustrat. Verba enim tunc docentium quasi quosdam humanae linguae rivulos non quaerunt, quando de ipso jam veritatis fonte derivantur. Igitur postquam figurata incurvatione cervarum, multa de magistrorum virtute narrata sunt, 979 nunc ad eorum vitam, qui remotae conversationis secreta appetunt, verba vertuntur: qui et ipsa cessandi otia, quia divino adjutorio et non suis viribus assequuntur, de eis a Domino dicitur:

CAPUT XV [Vet.

XXIII, Rec. XII]. VERS. 5. Quis dimisit onagrum liberum, et vincula ejus quis solvit? 50. Onagri liberi nomine intelliguntur, qui a servitute secularium rerum expediti, solitudini vacant. Subaudis nisi ego. Onager enim, qui in solitudine commoratur, non incongrue vitam eorum significat, qui remoti a turbis popularibus conversantur. Qui apte etiam liber dicitur: quia magna est servitus saecularium negotiorum, quibus mens vehementer atteritur, quamvis in eis sponte desudet. Cujus servitutis conditione carere est in mundo jam nil concupiscere. Quasi enim quodam jugo servitutis premunt prospera dum appetuntur, premunt adversa dum formidantur. At si quis semel a dominatione desideriorum temporalium colla mentis excusserit, quadam jam etiam in hac vita libertate perfruitur, dum nullo desiderio felicitatis afficitur, nullo adversitatis terrore coarctatur. Hoc grave servitutis jugum Dominus vidit saecularium cervicibus impressum, cum diceret: Venite ad me omnes, qui laboratis et onerati estis, et ego reficiam vos. Tollite jugum meum super vos, et discite a me quia mitissum, et humilis corde, et invenietis requiem animabus vestris. Jugum enim meum suave est, et onus meum leve (Matth. XI, 28). Asperum quippe jugum, et durae, sicut diximus, servitutis pondus est, subesse temporalibus, ambire terrena, retinere labentia, velle stare in non stantibus, appetere quidem transeuntia, sed cum transeuntibus nolle transire. Dum enim contra votum cuncta fugiunt, quae prius mentem ex desiderio adeptionis afflixerant, post ex pavore amissionis premunt. Liber ergo dimittitur qui, calcatis terrenis desideriis, ab appetitione rerum temporalium securitate mentis exoneratur. Et vincula ejus, quis solvit? Subaudis nisi ego. 51. Divino adjutorio desideriorum carnalium retinacula rumpuntur. Solvuntur vero uniuscujusque vincula, dum divino adjutorio interna desideriorum carnalium retinacula dirumpuntur. Cum enim pia intentio ad conversionem vocat, sed adhuc ab hac intentione carnis infirmitas revocat, quasi quibusdam vinculis anima ligata praepeditur. Multos enim saepe videmus vitam quidem sanctae conversationis appetere; sed ne hanc assequi valeant, modo irruentes casus, modo futura adversa formidare. Qui in certa mala dum quasi cauti prospiciunt, in peccatorum suorum vinculis incauti retinentur. Multa enim ante oculos ponunt, quae si eis in conversatione eveniant, subsistere se non posse formidant. De quibus bene Salomon ait: Iter pigrorum, quasi sepes spinarum (Prov. XV, 19). Nam cum viam Dei appetunt, eos velut spinae obstantium sepium sic formidinum suarum oppositae suspiciones pungunt. Quod quia electos praepedire non solet, bene illic secutus adjungit: Via justorum absque offendiculo (Ibid.). Justi quippe in conversatione sua quodlibet eis adversitatis obviaverit, non impingunt, quia temporalis adversitatis obstacula aeternae spei et internae contemplationis saltu transcendunt. Solvit itaque 980 Deus onagri vincula, quando ab electi uniuscujusque animo infirmarum cogitationum nodos rumpit, et propitius dissipat omne quod illectam mentem ligabat. Sequitur:

CAPUT XVI.

VERS. 6. Cui dedi in solitudine domum, et tabernacula ejus in terra salsuginis. 52. Duplex solitudo, cordis et corporis. Haec sine alia non prodest. Hoc loco solitudinem debemus intelligere corporis, an solitudinem cordis? Sed quid prodest solitudo corporis, si solitudo defuerit cordis? Qui enim corpore remotus vivit, sed tumultibus conversationis humanae terrenorum desideriorum cogitationibus se inserit, non est in solitudine. Si vero prematur aliquis corporaliter popularibus turbis, et tamen nullos curarum saecularium tumultus in corde patiatur, non est in urbe. Itaque bene conversantibus primum solitudo mentis tribuitur, ut exsurgentem intrinsecus strepitum terrenorum desideriorum premant, ut ebullientes ab infimis curas cordis per superni gratiam restringant amoris, omnesque motus importune se offerentium levium cogitationum, quasi quasdam circumvolantes muscas ab oculis mentis abigant manu gravitatis, et quoddam sibi cum Domino intra se secretum quaerant, ubi cum illo exteriori cessante strepitu per interna desideria silenter loquantur. [Vet. XXIV.] 53. Silentium contemplationis, hac in vita non potest esse perfectum. De hoc secreto cordis alias dictum est: Factum est silentium in coelo, quasi dimidia hora (Apoc. VIII, 1). Coelum quippe ecclesia vocatur electorum, quae ad aeterna et sublimia dum per sublevationem contemplationis intendit, surgentes ab infimis cogitationum tumultus premit, atque intra se Deo quoddam silentium facit. Quod quidem silentium contemplationis, quia in hac vita non potest esse perfectum, factum dimidia hora dicitur. Nolenti quippe animo dum cogitationum tumultuosi se strepitus ingerunt, etiam sublimibus intendentem, rursum ad respicienda terrena cordis oculum violenter trahunt. Unde scriptum est: Corpus quod corrumpitur, aggravat animam, et deprimit terrena inhabitatio sensum multa cogitantem (Sap. IX, 15). Bene ergo factum hoc silentium non integra, sed dimidia hora describitur, quia hic contemplatio nequaquam perficitur, quamvis ardenter inchoetur. Quod etiam per Ezechielem prophetam congruenter exprimitur (Ezech. XL, 5), qui pro mensura civitatis in monte conditae, in manu viri calamum sex cubitorum et palmi, se vidisse testatur. In monte quippe electorum ecclesia

sita est, quia fundata in infimis desideriis non est. Quid autem per cubitum, nisi operatio; quid per senarium numerum, nisi perfectio operationis ostenditur, quia et sexto die cuncta opera Dominus explesse memoratur? Quid ergo super sex cubitos palmus insinuat (Genes. II, 1), nisi contemplationis vim, quae jam initia aeternae et septimae quietis demonstrat? Quia enim aeternorum contemplatio hic minime perficitur, mensura septimi cubiti non expletur. Electorum itaque ecclesia, quia cuncta quae operanda sunt perficit, in sex cubitis sese in monte posita civitas ostendit. Quia vero hic adhuc sola initia contemplationis 981 inspicit, de septimo cubito non nisi palmum tangit. 54. Culmen contemplationis non attingitur, nisi ab exteriorum curarum oppressione liberemur. Sciendum vero est quia nequaquam culmen contemplationis attingimus, si non ab exterioris curae oppressione cessemus. Nequaquam nosmetipsos intuemur, ut sciamus aliud in nobis esse rationale quod regit, aliud animale quod regitur, nisi ad secretum hujus silentii recurrentes, ab omni exterius perturbatione sopiamur. Quod silentium nostrum bene etiam Adam dormiens figuravit (Ibid.), de cujus mox latere mulier processit, quia quisquis ad interiora intelligenda rapitur, a rebus visibilibus oculos claudit; et tunc in semetipso vel quae praeesse viriliter debeant, vel quae subesse possint infirma distinguit, ut aliud in illo sit quod regere valeat tanquam vir, aliud tanquam femina quod regatur. In hoc itaque silentio cordis, dum per contemplationem interius vigilamus, exterius quasi obdormiscimus. Quia ergo remoti viri, id est a desideriis carnalibus alieni, hoc silentium mentis inhabitant, huic onagro Dominus in solitudine domum dedit, ut turba desideriorum temporalium non prematur. [Vet. XXV.] 55. Sancti quandiu vivunt, desiderio supernae patriae aestuant. Sequitur: Et tabernacula ejus in terra salsuginis. Salsugo accendere sitim solet. Et quia sancti viri quandiu in hujus vitae tabernaculis degunt, ad supernam patriam desiderii sui quotidianis aestibus accenduntur, in terra salsuginis tabernacula habere perhibentur. Incessanter quippe accenduntur ut sitiant, sitiunt ut satientur; sicut scriptum est: Beati qui esuriunt et sitiunt justitiam, quoniam ipsi saturabuntur (Matth. V, 6). Sequitur:

CAPUT XVII.

VERS. 7. Contemnit multitudinem civitatis. 56. Terrenorum hominum multitudinem sequi dedignantur. Multitudinem civitatis contemnere est humanae conversationis prava studia devitare, ut jam non libeat terrenorum hominum, qui prae abundantia iniquitatis multi sunt, perditos mores imitari. Cum paucis namque ingredi angustam portam desiderant, et non cum multis lata itinera ingredi appetunt, quae ad interitum ducunt (Matth. VII, 13). Solerter quippe a quo et ad quid sunt creati conspiciunt, et recta consideratione acceptae imaginis sequi vulgi multitudinem dedignantur. Unde et sponsi voce sponsae in Canticis canticorum dicitur: Nisi cognoveris te, o pulchra inter mulieres, egredere, et abi post vestigia gregum, et pasce haedos tuos (Cant. I, 7). Semetipsam namque ea quae est pulchra inter mulieres cognoscit, quando electa quaeque anima etiam inter peccantes posita quia ad auctoris sui imaginem ac similitudinem sit condita meminit (Genes. I, 26), et juxta perceptae similitudinis ordinem incedit. Quae si se non cognoscit, egreditur, quia a secreto sui cordis expulsa, in exterioribus concupiscentiis dissipatur. Egressa vero abit post vestigia gregum, quia sua interna deserens, ad latam videlicet viam ducitur, et sequitur exempla populorum. Nec jam agnos, sed haedos pascit, quia non innoxias cogitationes mentis, sed nutrire pravos motus carnis intendit. Quia ergo electus quisque ac continens abire post gregum vestigia despicit, dicatur recte: Contemnit multitudinem civitatis. Ubi et apte subjungitur:

CAPUT XVIII [Rec. XIII].

IBID. Clamorem exactoris non audit. 57. Vehementioribus diaboli tentationibus aures claudunt, et ventris clamoribus. Quis intelligi exactor alius, nisi diabolus potest, 982 qui semel in paradiso homini malae persuasionis nummum contulit (Genes. III, 6, seq.), et quotidie ab eo hujus debiti exigere reatum quaerit? Hujus exactoris sermo est malae suggestionis inchoatio. Hujus exactoris clamor est jam non lenis, sed violenta tentatio. Hic exactor clamat, cum fortiter tentat. Clamorem ergo exactoris non audire est violentis tentationum motibus minime consentire. Audiret enim si ea quae suggerit faceret. Sed cum perversa agere despicit, recte dicitur: Clamorem exactoris non audit. [Vet. XXVI.] 58. Nonnulli vero hoc loco per exactorem intelligi ventrem volunt. Ipse namque a nobis quoddam debitum exigit, quia quotidianum fructum sibi humani laboris impendi etiam per naturam quaerit. Abstinentes igitur viri, qui hoc loco onagri vocabulo figurantur, dum violenter gulae desideria reprimunt, quasi clamantis exactoris verba contemnunt. Sed cum continenti viro contra innumera vitia multa virtutum certamina suppetant, cur sub exactoris clamore contempto, de solo hic ventre dicitur quod ejus impetum impulsumque restringat, nisi quod nullus palmam spiritualis certaminis apprehendit, qui non in semetipso prius per afflictam ventris concupiscentiam carnis incentiva devicerit? Neque enim ad conflictum spiritalis agonis assurgitur, si non prius intra nosmetipsos hostis positus, gulae videlicet appetitus, edomatur, quia si non ea quae nobis sunt viciniora prosternimus, nimirum inaniter ad ea quae longius sunt impugnanda transimus. Incassum namque contra exteriores inimicos in campo bellum geritur, si intra ipsa urbis moenia civis insidians habetur. Mens quoque ipsa certantis sub gravi confusionis dedecore a spiritalis certaminis congressione repellitur, quando infirma in carnis praelio gulae gladiis confossa superatur. Nam cum se parvis prosterni conspicit, confligere majoribus erubescit. 59. Qui gulam edomare non curant, incaute ad spiritalia bella consurgunt. Nonnulli vero ordinem certaminis ignorantes, edomare gulam negligunt, et jam ad spiritalia bella consurgunt. Qui aliquando multa etiam quae magnae sunt fortitudinis faciunt, sed, dominante gulae vitio, per carnis illecebram omne quod fortiter egerint perdunt; et dum venter non restringitur, per carnis concupiscentiam simul cunctae virtutes obruuntur. Unde et de Nabuchodonosor vincente scribitur : Princeps coquorum destruxit muros Jerusalem. Quid enim per muros Jerusalem significans Scriptura exprimit, nisi virtutes animae, quae ad pacis visionem tendit? Aut quis coquorum princeps, nisi venter accipitur, cui diligentissima a coquentibus cura servitur? Muros igitur Jerusalem princeps coquorum destruit, quia virtutes animae dum non restringitur venter, perdit. Hinc est quod Paulus contra Jerusalem moenia decertanti vires coquorum principi subtrahebat, cum diceret: Castigo corpus meum, et servituti subjicio, ne forte aliis praedicans, ipse reprobus efficiar (I Cor. IX, 27). Hinc etiam praemisit, dicens: Sic curro, non quasi in incertum; sic pugno, non quasi aerem verberans (Ibid., 26). Quia cum carnem restringimus, ipsis abstinentiae nostrae ictibus non aerem, sed immundos spiritus verberamus; et cum hoc quod est intra nos subjicimus; extra positis adversariis pugnos damus. Hinc est 983 quod cum rex Babylonis succendi fornacem jubet (Dan. III), naphthae, stuppae, picis et malleoli ministrari congeriem praecepit; sed tamen abstinentes pueros hoc igne minime consumit, quia antiquus hostis licet innumeras ciborum concupiscentias nostris obtutibus opponat, quibus libidinis ignis crescat, bonis tamen mentibus superni Spiritus gratia insibilat, ut a carnalis concupiscentiae aestibus illaesae perdurent, ut etsi usque ad tentationem cordis flamma ardeat, usque ad consensum tamen tentatio non exurat. [Vet. XXVII.] 60. Quinque modis gula nos tentat. Non cibus, sed appetitus in vitio est. Sciendum praeterea est quia quinque nos modis gulae vitium tentat (De consecr., d. 5, c. Quinque modis). Aliquando namque indigentiae tempora praevenit; aliquando vero tempus non praevenit, sed cibos lautiores quaerit; aliquando quaelibet quae sumenda sint praeparari accuratius expetit, aliquando autem et qualitati ciborum et tempori congruit, sed in ipsa quantitate sumendi mensuram moderatae refectionis excedit. Nonnunquam vero et abjectius est quod desiderat, et tamen ipso aestu immensi desiderii deterius peccat. Mortis quippe sententiam patris ore Jonathas meruit, quia in gustu mellis constitutum edendi tempus antecessit (I Reg. XIV, 27). Et ex Aegypto populus eductus, in eremo occubuit, quia, despecto manna, cibos carnium petiit, quos lautiores putavit (Num. XXI, 5). Et prima filiorum Heli culpa suborta est, quod ex eorum voto sacerdotis puer, non antiquo more coctas vellet de sacrificio carnes accipere, sed crudas quaereret, quas accuratius exhiberet (I Reg. II, 12, seq.). Et cum ad Jerusalem dicitur: Haec fuit iniquitas Sodomae sororis tuae, superbia, saturitas panis, et abundantia (Ezech. XVI, 49), aperte ostenditur quod idcirco salutem perdidit, quia cum superbiae vitio mensuram moderatae refectionis excessit. Et primogenitorum gloriam Esau amisit, quia magno aestu desiderii vilem cibum, scilicet lenticulam, concupivit (Genes. XXV, 33); quam dum vendendis etiam primogenitis praetulit, quo in illam appetitu anhelaret indicavit. Neque enim cibus, sed appetitus in vitio est. Unde et lautiores cibos plerumque sine culpa sumimus, et abjectiores non sine reatu conscientiae degustamus. Hic quippe quem diximus, Esau, primatum per lenticulam perdidit, et Elias in eremo virtutem corporis carnes edendo servavit (III Reg. XVII, 6). Unde et antiquus hostis quia non cibum, sed cibi concupiscentiam esse causam damnationis intelligit, et primum sibi hominem non carne, sed pomo subdidit (Genes. III, 6), et secundum non carne, sed pane tentavit (Matth. IV, 3). Hinc est quod plerumque Adam culpa committitur, etiam cum abjecta et vilia sumuntur. Neque enim Adam solus ut a vetito se pomo suspenderet praeceptum prohibitionis accepit. Nam cum alimenta quaedam saluti nostrae Deus contraria indicat, ab his nos quasi per sententiam vetat. Et dum concupiscentes noxia attingimus, profecto quid aliud quam vetita degustamus? 61. Edenda quae necessitas quaerit, non quae libido suggerit. Quanta ad hoc discretio necessaria. Ea itaque sumenda sunt quae naturae necessitas quaerit, et non quae edendi libido suggerit. Sed magnus discretionis labor est huic exactori et aliquid impendere, et aliquid denegare; et non dando gulam restringere, et dando naturam nutrire. [Rec. XIV.] Quae fortasse discretio subinfertur, cum dicitur: Clamorem exactoris non audit. Sermo namque 984 hujus exactoris est necessaria postulatio naturae. Clamor vero ejus est mensuram necessitatis transiens appetitus gulae. Hic itaque onager exactoris hujus sermonem audit, clamorem non audit, quia discretus vir ac continens et usque ad temperandam necessitatem ventrem reficit, et a voluptate restringit. [Vet. XXVIII.] 62. Voluptas sub necessitatis specie se palliat. Sciendum vero est quia sic voluptas sub necessitate se palliat, ut vix eam perfectus quisque discernat. Nam dum solvi debitum necessitas petit, voluptas expleri desiderium suppetit; et tanto gulam securius in praeceps rapit, quanto sub honesto nomine necessitatis explendae se contegit. Saepe autem in ipsa edendi via furtive adjuncta voluptas subsequitur; nonnunquam vero impudenter libera etiam praeire conatur. Facile autem est deprehendere cum voluptas ejus necessitatem praevenit, sed valde est difficile discernere cum in ipso esu necessario se occulta subjungit. Nam quia praeeuntem naturae appetitum sequitur, quasi a tergo veniens tardius videtur. Eo enim tempore quo necessitati debitum solvitur, quia per esum voluptas necessitati miscetur, quid necessitas petat, et quid, sicut dictum est, voluptas suppetat, ignoratur. Saepe vero et discernimus; et quia utramque sibi conjunctam novimus, in hoc quod extra metas rapimur, libet ut sciendo fallamur; et dum sibi mens ex necessitate blanditur, ex voluptate decipitur. Scriptum quippe est: Carnis curam ne feceritis in desideriis (Rom. XIII, 14). Quae igitur fieri in desiderio prohibetur, in necessitate conceditur. 63. Carnis desideria, non caro occidenda. Cavendum ne, dum hostem insequimur, civem quem diligimus, trucidemus. Sed saepe dum incaute necessitati condescendimus, desideriis deservimus. Nonnunquam vero dum desideriis immoderatius obviare nitimur, necessitatis miserias augemus. Sic enim necesse est ut arcem quisque continentiae teneat, quatenus non carnem, sed vitia carnis occidat. Nam plerumque dum plus justo caro restringitur, etiam ab exercitatione boni operis enervatur, ut ad orationem quoque vel praedicationem non sufficiat, dum incentiva vitiorum in se funditus suffocare festinat. Adjutorem quippe habemus intentionis internae hunc hominem quem exterius gestamus, et ipsi insunt motus lasciviae, ipsi effectus suppetunt operationis bonae. Saepe vero dum in illo hostem insequimur, etiam civem quem diligimus trucidamus; et saepe dum quasi concivi parcimus, ad praelium hostem nutrimus. Eisdem namque alimentis vitia superbiunt, quibus nutritae virtutes vivunt. Et cum virtus alitur, plerumque vires vitiis augentur. Cum vero immensa continentia vitiorum vires extenuat, etiam virtus deficiens anhelat. Unde necesse est ut interior homo, noster aequus quidam arbiter praesideat inter se, et eum quem exterius gestat, quatenus ei homo suus exterior et semper ad debitum ministerium servire sufficiat, et nunquam superbe libera cervice contradicat; nec moveat si quid suggerendo submurmurat, dummodo eum semper superposita calce dominationis premat. Sicque fit ut dum repressa vitia reniti quidem nobis patimur, et tamen haec nobiscum congredi ex aequo prohibemus, nec vitia contra virtutem praevaleant, nec rursum virtus cum vitiorum 985 omnimoda exstinctione succumbat. Qua in re sola elatio funditus exstinguitur, quia quamvis victoriae serviat, ad edomandam tamen cogitationum superbiam continua nobis pugna servatur. Unde bene hic, quia unusquisque vir continens et debitae necessitati congruit, et violentae voluptati contradicit, voce dominica dicitur: Clamorem exactoris non audit. Quia autem discretus vir eo ad intelligenda superiora se elevat, quo in se carnis incentiva castigat, recte post contemptum exactoris clamorem subditur.

CAPUT XIX [Rec. XV].

VERS. 8. Circumspicit montes pascuae suae. 64. Ad intelligenda sublimia valet ascendere, qui carnis incentiva castigavit. Montes pascuae sunt altae contemplationes internae refectionis. Sancti enim viri quanto magis se exterius despiciendo dejiciunt, tanto amplius interius revelationum contemplatione pascuntur. Unde scriptum est: Ascensus in corde ejus disposuit in convalle lacrymarum (Psal. LXXXIII, 6, 7), quia quos exterius in fletu continet convallis humilitatis, eos interius sublevat ascensus contemplationis. [Vet. XXIX.] Montes etiam pascuae sunt sublimes virtutes angelorum. Quae idcirco hic nos ministrando et adjuvando reficiunt, quia illic interno contemplationis rore pinguescunt. Quae quia largiente Deo in omni nos certamine protegunt, recte circumspici dicuntur. Undique enim nobis adesse circumspicimus, quorum defensione contra adversarios ex omni latere munimur. Possunt adhuc montes pascuae accipi altae sententiae Scripturae sacrae, de quibus per Psalmistam dicitur: Montes excelsi cervis (Psal. CIII, 18), quia hi qui jam dare contemplationis saltus noverunt, altos sententiarum divinarum vertices quasi cacumina montium ascendunt, ad quae profecto cacumina quia infirmi pervenire non valent, recte illic subditur: Petra refugium erinaciis (Ibid.), quia videlicet invalidos non sublimiter intelligentia exercet, sed sola in Christo fides humiliter continet. Sequitur:

CAPUT XX.

IBID. Virentia quaeque perquirit. 65. Despectis transitoriis, in aeternum mansura desiderantur. Arentia quippe sunt omnia quae temporaliter condita venturo fine a jucunditate vitae praesentis quasi aestivo sole siccantur.

Virentia autem sunt vocata, quae nulla temporalitate marcescunt. Huic ergo onagro virentia perquirere, est sancto unicuique viro, despectis rebus transitoriis, in aeternum mansura desiderare. Cuncta vero haec quae de onagro dicta sunt intelligi etiam et aliter possunt. Quae repetito superiori versu exponimus, ut lectoris judicio quod eligendum crediderit relinquamus. Igitur postquam praedicatorum dispensatio sub cervarum praetextu descripta est, ut ostenderetur per quem haec eadem virtus praedicationis datur, illico commemoratio de dominica incarnatione subnectitur, ut dicatur:

CAPUT XXI.

VERS. 5. Quis dimisit onagrum liberum? ALLEGORICUS SENSUS. 66. Christus onagro merito comparatur. Nec indignum quis judicet per tale animal incarnatum Dominum posse figurari, dum constat omnibus quia per significationem quamdam in Scriptura sacra et vermis et scarabaeus ponatur, sicut scriptum est: Ego autem sum vermis, et non homo (Psal. XXI, 7). Et sicut apud Septuaginta interpretes per 986 prophetam dicitur: Scarabaeus de ligno clamavit (Habac. II, 2). Cum ergo nominatis rebus tam abjectis et vilibus figuratur, quid de illo contumeliose dicitur, de quo constat quod proprie nihil dicatur? Vocatur etenim agnus, sed propter innocentiam. Vocatur leo, sed propter potentiam. Aliquando etiam serpenti comparatur, sed propter mortem vel sapientiam. Atque ideo per haec omnia dici figuraliter potest, quia de his omnibus credi aliquid essentialiter non potest. Si enim unum horum quodlibet essentialiter existeret, alterum jam dici non posset. Nam si agnus proprie diceretur, leo jam vocari non poterat. Si leo proprie diceretur, per serpentem signari non posset. Sed haec in illo omnia dicimus tanto latius in figura, quanto longius ab essentia. Potest ergo onager incarnatum Dominum designare. Agreste quippe animal est onager. Et quia incarnatus Dominus gentilitati magis, quam Judaeae profuit, animale corpus assumens, quasi non in domum, sed potius in agrum venit. De quo agro gentilitatis per Psalmistam dicitur: Species agri mecum est (Ps. XLIX, 11). Incarnatus itaque Dominus qui in forma Dei aequalis est Patri, in forma servi minor est Patre, qua minor est etiam seipso (Philip. II). [Vet. XXX.] Dicatur ergo a Patre de Filio secundum formam servi: Quis dimisit onagrum liberum, et vincula ejus quis solvit? Omnis quippe qui peccat, servus est peccati (Joan. VIII, 35). Et quia incarnatus Dominus particeps nostrae factus est naturae, non culpae, liber dimissus dicitur, quia sub peccati dominio non tenetur. De quo alias scriptum est: Inter mortuos liber (Psal. XXXVII, 5). Liber dimissus dicitur, quia naturam nostram suscipiens, iniquitatis jugo nullo modo tenetur. Quem quamvis macula culpae nostrae non attigit, passio tamen nostrae mortalitatis astrinxit. Unde et postquam liber dimissus dicitur, recte de illo adjungitur:

CAPUT XXII.

IBID. Et vincula ejus quis solvit? 67. Hujus onagri vincula soluta sunt, cum infirmitates passionis, in resurrectionis gloriam sunt commutatae. Vincula quippe ejus tunc soluta sunt cum infirmitates passionis illius in resurrectionis sunt gloriam commutatae. Quasi quaedam vincula Dominus habuit ea quae nos nequitiae merito patimur, nostrae mortalitatis infirma, quibus et usque ad mortem sponte ligari se voluit, et quae per resurrectionem mirabiliter solvit. Esurire enim, sitire, lassescere, teneri, flagellari, crucifigi, nostrae mortalitatis vinculum fuit. Sed cum expleta morte velum templi rumperetur, scinderentur petrae, monumenta panderentur, inferni claustra patescerent; quid aliud tot argumentis tantae virtutis ostenditur, nisi quod illa infirmitatis nostrae vincula solvebantur, ut is qui ad suscipiendam servi formam venerat, in ipsa servi forma ab inferni vinculis absolutus, ad coelum etiam cum membris liber rediret? De quibus ejus vinculis Petrus apostolus attestatur dicens: Quem Deus suscitavit solutis doloribus inferni, juxta quod impossibile erat illum teneri ab eo (Act.

II, 24). Et quia post mortem suam atque resurrectionem ad gratiam fidei gentilitatem vocare dignatus est, postquam dicta sunt soluta ejus vincula, apte subjungitur:

CAPUT XXIII.

987 VERS. 6. Cui dedi in solitudine domum, et tabernaculum ejus in terra salsuginis. 68. Cui datus in solitudine locus et in terra salsuginis, cum gentilitas eum recepit. In gentilitate enim in qua patriarcha non fuit, propheta non fuit; ad intelligendum Deum, qui ratione uteretur, homo pene non fuit. De hac solitudine per Isaiam dicitur: Laetabitur deserta et invia, et exsultabit solitudo, et florebit quasi lilium (Isai. XXXV, 1). Et rursum de Ecclesia dicitur: Ponet desertum ejus quasi delicias, et solitudinem ejus quasi hortum Domini (Isai. LI, 3). Terra vero salsuginis haec eadem solitudo repetita est, quae priusquam veram Dei sapientiam cognosceret, salsuginem protulerat, quia nullam viriditatem boni intellectus proferens, perversa sapiebat. Domum ergo in solitudine et tabernaculum in terra salsuginis accepit, quia incarnatus pro hominibus Deus, derelicta Judaea, gentilitatis corda possedit. Unde ei Patris voce per prophetam dicitur: Postula a me, et dabo tibi gentes haereditatem tuam, et possessionem tuam terminos terrae (Psal. II, 8). Qui juxta hoc quod Deus est, cum Patre dat omnia, juxta hoc vero quod homo est, a Patre accipit inter omnia, sicut scriptum est: Potestatem dedit ei et judicium facere, quia filius hominis est (Joan. V, 27). Et rursum scriptum est: Sciens quia omnia dedit ei Pater in manus (Joan. XIII, 1). Vel sicut ipse dicit: Omne quod dat mihi Pater, ad me veniet (Joan. VI, 37). Jam vero si quaeritur quid inter domum ac tabernaculum distet, domus in habitatione est, tabernaculum in itinere. Corda itaque gentilium quasi quaedam tabernacula habuit veniendo. sed ea per justitiam firmans, domum fecit habitando. Et quia eorum vitam ad quos venerat imitari despexit, recte subjungitur:

CAPUT XXIV.

VERS. 7. Contemnit multitudinem civitatis. 69. Multitudinis exempla non est secutus, sed sua sequenda proposuit. Vita praesens non propter se amanda est, sed propter futuram toleranda. Id est, mores despicit humanae conversationis. Homo quippe inter homines factus, usum tenere hominum noluit. Idcirco namque inter nos homo factus est, ut non solum nos sanguine fuso redimeret, sed etiam ostenso exemplo commutaret. In conversatione igitur nostra et veniendo alia invenit, et vivendo alia docuit. Studebant enim omnes superba Adam stirpe progeniti, prospera vitae praesentis appetere, adversa devitare, opprobria fugere, gloriam sequi. Venit inter eos Dominus incarnatus adversa appetens, prospera spernens, opprobria amplectens, gloriam fugiens. Nam cum Judaei illum regem sibi constituere voluissent, fieri rex refugit (Joan. VI, 15). Cum vero eum interficere molirentur, sponte ad crucis patibulum venit (Ibid., XVIII, 4). Fugit ergo quod omnes appetunt, appetiit quod omnes fugiunt. Sed cum fugit quod omnes appetunt, appetiit quod omnes fugiunt, fecit quod omnes mirarentur, ut et mortuus ipse resurgeret, et morte sua alios de morte resuscitaret. [Vet. XXXI.] Duae quippe vitae sunt hominis in corpore consistentis, una ante mortem, alia post resurrectionem: quarum unam omnes agendo noverant, alteram nesciebant; et humanum genus soli huic quam noverat intendebat. Venit per carnem Dominus, et dum suscepit unam; alteram demonstravit. Dum hanc nobis cognitam suscepit, illam quae nobis est incognita ostendit. Moriendo quippe vitam exercuit quam tenemus, resurgendo aperuit quam quaeramus, 988 exemplo suo nos docens quod haec vita quam ante mortem ducimus non propter se amanda sit, sed propter alteram toleranda. Quia ergo nova conversatione usus inter homines, mores Babyloniae secutus non est, bene de eo scriptum est: Contemnit multitudinem civitatis. 70. Christus multitudinem per spatiosa vagantem deseruit. Vel certe quod multos per spatiosam viam vagantes deseruit, et per angusta gradientes paucos elegit.

Multitudinem namque civitatis contemnere est humani generis partem quae latam viam ingreditur (Matth. VII, 13), quae et pro abundantia iniquitatis multa est, a regni sui sorte reprobare. Sequitur:

CAPUT XXV.

IBID. Clamorem exactoris non audit. 71. Exactoris, scilicet diaboli clamorem non audivit. Sicut supra dictum est, quis hoc loco exactor accipi nisi diabolus potest? Qui male suadendo spem contulit immortalitatis, sed decipiendo exigit tributum mortis; qui suadendo intulit culpam, saeviendo exigit poenam. Hujus exactoris sermo est ante mortem hominis astuta persuasio, clamor vero ejus est violenta jam rapina post mortem. Quos enim ante mortem latenter intercipit, hos ad supplicii sui consortium post mortem violenter rapit. Sed quia ad mortem veniens Dominus, hujus exactoris violentos impetus non expavit, sicut ipse ait: Venit enim princeps hujus mundi et in me non habet quidquam (Joan. XIV, 30), bene dicitur: Clamorem exactoris non audit. Venit quippe ad eum exactor humani generis, quia illum hominem vidit. Sed quem infirmitate despectum hominem credidit, virtute supra hominem sensit. [Rec. XVI.] 72. Hujus exactoris typus, Laban; Christi, Jacob; Ecclesiae, Rachel fuit. Hujus nimirum exactoris typum Laban tenuit, quando cum furore veniens sua apud Jacob idola requisivit (Genes. XXXI, 1, seq.). Laban quippe interpretatur dealbatio. Dealbatio autem non inconvenienter diabolus accipitur; qui cum sit tenebrosus ex merito, transfigurat se in angelum lucis (II Cor. XI, 14). Huic servivit Jacob, id est ex parte reproborum Judaicus populus, cujus ex carne incarnatus Dominus venit. Potest etiam per Laban mundus hic exprimi, qui cum furore Jacob persequitur, quia electos quosque qui Redemptoris nostri membra sunt, persequendo opprimere conatur. Hujus filiam, id est sive mundi, sive diaboli, Jacob abstulit, cum sibi Christus Ecclesiam ex gentilitate conjunxit. Quam et de domo patris abstrahit, quia ei per Prophetam dicit: Obliviscere populum tuum, et domum patris tui (Psal. XLIV, 11). Quid vero in idolis, nisi avaritia designatur? Unde per Paulum dicitur: Et avaritia, quae est idolorum servitus (Coloss. III, 5). Laban ergo veniens apud Jacob idola non invenit, quia ostensis mundi thesauris, diabolus in Redemptore nostro vestigia concupiscentiae terrenae non reperit. Sed quae Jacob non habuit, ea Rachel sedendo cooperuit. Per Rachel quippe, quae et ovis dicitur, Ecclesia figuratur. Sedere autem, est humilitatem poenitentiae appetere, sicut scriptum est: Surgite postquam sederitis (Psal. CXXVI, 2). Rachel ergo idola sedendo operuit, quia sancta Ecclesia Christum sequens terrenae concupiscentiae vitia poenitendo texit. De hac coopertione vitiorum per Psalmistam dicitur: Beati quorum remissae sunt iniquitates, et quorum tecta sunt peccata (Psal. XXXI, 1). Nos igitur Rachel illa 989 signavit, qui idola sedendo premimus, si culpas avaritiae poenitendo damnamus. Quae utique avaritia illis non solet evenire, qui in via Domini viriliter currunt, quibus dicitur: Viriliter agite, et confortetur cor vestrum (Psal. XXX, 25), sed his maxime qui quasi effeminato gressu gradientes per blandimenta saeculi resolvuntur. Unde et illic ejusdem Rachelis haec verba sunt: Juxta consuetudinem feminarum nunc accidit mihi (Genes. XXXI, 35). Apud Jacob ergo idola Laban non reperit, quia exactor callidus quid in Redemptore nostro reprehenderet, non invenit. De quo exactore Redemptori nostro gentilitatem ab ejus dominio liberanti per prophetam dicitur: Jugum enim oneris ejus, et virgam humeri ejus, et sceptrum exactoris ejus superasti, sicut in die Madian (Isai. IX, 4). Eripiens quippe gentilitatem Dominus, superavit jugum oneris ejus, cum eam adventu suo ab illa daemoniacae tyrannidis servitute liberavit. Superavit virgam humeri ejus, cum percussionem illius, quae ex perverso opere graviter deprimebat, ab humano genere redempto compescuit. Superavit sceptrum exactoris ejus, cum regnum ejusdem diaboli, qui pro pestifera perpetratione vitiorum exigere consueverat debita tributa poenarum, de fidelium corde destruxit. [Vet. XXXII, Rec. XVII.] 73. Gedeonis contra Madianitas insolens pugna, Christi certamen praesignavit. Sed quomodo haec acta sunt audiamus. Subjunctum est illico: Sicut in die Madian. Non abs re arbitror si hoc Madianitarum bellum quod in comparatione adventus Dominici a propheta vigilanter illatum est aliquando latius disseramus. In libro quippe Judicum (Judic. VII, 1 seq.), Gedeon contra Madianitas dimicasse describitur. Is cum exercitus multitudinem ad bella produceret, divina illi admonitione praeceptum est ut ad fluvium veniens, omnes quos flexis genibus aquas haurire conspiceret, a bellorum conflictu removeret. Actumque est ut trecenti viri tantummodo, qui stantes manibus aquas hauserant, remanerent. Cum his ad praelium pergit, eosque non armis, sed tubis, lampadibus et lagenis armavit (Ibid., 19, seq.). Nam, sicut illic scriptum est, accensas lampades miserunt intra lagunculas, et tubas in dextra, lagenas autem in sinistra tenuerunt; et ad hostes suos cominus venientes, cecinerunt tubis, confregerunt lagunculas, lampades apparuerunt; et hinc tubarum sonitu, illinc lampadum coruscatione territi hostes, sunt in fugam conversi. Quid hoc est, quod tale bellum per prophetam ad medium adducitur, et adventui Redemptoris nostri istius pugnae victoria comparatur? An indicare propheta nobis studuit, quod adventum Redemptoris nostri contra diabolum illa sub Gedeon duce pugnae victoria designavit? Talia illic nimirum acta sunt, quae quanto magis usum pugnandi transeunt, tanto amplius a prophetandi mysterio non recedunt. Quis enim unquam cum lagenis et lampadibus ad praelium venit? Quia contra arma veniens, arma deseruit? Ridicula nobis haec profecto fuerant, si terribilia hostibus non fuissent. Sed victoria ipsa testante didicimus, ne parvi haec quae facta sunt perpendamus. Gedeon itaque ad praelium veniens, Redemptoris nostri signat adventum, 990 de quo scriptum est: Tollite portas principes vestras, et elevamini portae aeternales, et introibit rex gloriae. Quis est iste rex gloriae? Dominus fortis et potens, Dominus potens in praelio (Psal. XXIII, 7). Hic Redemptorem nostrum non solum opere, sed etiam nomine prophetavit. Gedeon namque interpretatur, circumiens in utero. Dominus enim noster per majestatis potentiam omnia complectitur, et tamen per dispensationis gratiam intra uterum Virginis humanitatem sumens venit. Quis est ergo circumiens in utero, nisi omnipotens Deus sua dispensatione nos redimens, divinitate cuncta complectens, et humanitatem intra uterum sumens? In quo utero et incarnatus est, et clausus non est, quia et intra uterum fuit per infirmitatis substantiam, et extra mundum per potentiam majestatis. Madian vero interpretatur, de judicio. Ut enim hostes ejus repellendi destruendique essent, non de vitio repellentis, sed de judicio juste judicantis fuit. Et idcirco de judicio vocantur, quia alieni a gratia Redemptoris, justae damnationis meritum etiam in vocabulo nominis trahunt. [Vet. XXXIII.]. 74. Quid significent trecenti milites cum Gedeone pugnantes. Contra hos Gedeon cum trecentis pergit ad praelium. Solet in centenario numero plenitudo perfectionis intelligi. Quid ergo per ter ductum centenarium numerum designatur, nisi perfecta cognitio Trinitatis? Cum his quippe Dominus noster adversarios fidei destruit, cum his ad praedicationis bella descendit, qui possunt divina cognoscere, qui sciunt de Trinitate, quae Deus est, perfecta sentire. Notandum vero est quia iste trecentorum numerus in tau littera continetur, quae crucis speciem tenet. Cui si super transversam lineam id quod in cruce eminet adderetur, non jam crucis species, sed ipsa crux esset. Quia ergo iste trecentorum numerus in tau littera continetur, et per tau litteram, sicut diximus, species crucis ostenditur, non immerito in his trecentis Gedeonem sequentibus illi designati sunt, quibus dictum est: Si quis vult post me venire, abneget semetipsum, et tollat crucem suam, et sequatur me (Luc. IX, 23). Qui sequentes Dominum tanto verius crucem tollunt, quanto acrius et se edomant, et erga proximos suos charitatis compassione cruciantur. Unde et per Ezechielem prophetam dicitur: Signa tau super frontes virorum gementium et dolentium (Ezech. IX, 4). Vel certe in his trecentis, qui in tau littera continentur, hoc exprimitur, quod ferrum hostium crucis ligno superetur. Ductique sunt ad fluvium, ut aquas biberent, et quicunque aquas flexis genibus hauserunt, a bellica intentione remoti sunt. Aquis namque, doctrina sapientiae; stante autem genu, recta operatio designatur. Qui ergo dum aquas bibunt, genuflexisse perhibentur, a bellorum certamine prohibiti recesserunt, quia cum illis Christus contra hostes fidei pergit ad praelium, qui cum doctrinae fluenta hauriunt, rectitudinem operum non inflectunt. Omnes quippe tunc bibisse aquam, sed non omnes recto genu stetisse narrati sunt. Reprobatique sunt, qui genua, dum aquas biberent, inflexerunt; quia attestante Apostolo: Non auditores legis justi sunt apud Deum, sed 991 factores legis justificabuntur (Rom. II, 13). Quia enim, ut diximus, dissolutio operum in ipsa genuum incurvatione signatur, recte rursum per Paulum dicitur: Remissas manus et dissoluta genua erigite, et gressus rectos facite pedibus vestris (Hebr. XII, 12). Hi ergo Christo duce ad bellum procedunt, qui hoc quod ore annuntiant opere ostendunt, qui fluenta doctrinae spiritualiter hauriunt, nec tamen in pravis operibus inflectuntur carnaliter, quia sicut scriptum est: Non est speciosa laus in ore peccatoris (Eccli. XV, 9). 75. Quid tubae, lampades et lagenae, cum quibus ad praelium perrexerunt, et hostes debellarunt. Itum ergo est ad praelium cum tubis, cum lampadibus, cum lagenis. Inusitatus iste, ut diximus, fuit ordo praeliandi. Cecinerunt tubis, et sinistris lagenae tenebantur: intra lagenas autem sunt missae lampades; confractis vero lagenis lampades ostensae sunt, quarum coruscante luce, hostes territi in fugam vertuntur. Designatur itaque in tubis clamor praedicantium, in lampadibus, claritas miraculorum, in lagenis fragilitas corporum. Tales quippe secum dux noster ad praedicationis praelium duxit, qui despecta salute corporum, hostes suos moriendo prosternerent, eorumque gladios non armis, non gladiis, sed patientia superarent. Armati enim venerunt sub duce suo ad praelium martyres nostri; sed tubis, sed lagenis, sed lampadibus. Qui sonuerunt tubis, dum praedicant; confregerunt lagenas, dum solvenda in passione sua corpora hostilibus gladiis opponunt; resplenduerunt lampadibus, dum post solutionem corporum miraculis coruscaverunt. Moxque hostes in fugam conversi sunt; quia dum mortuorum martyrum corpora miraculis coruscare conspiciunt, luce veritatis fracti, quod impugnaverunt, crediderunt. Cecinerunt ergo tubis, ut lagenae frangerentur; lagenae fractae sunt, ut lampades apparerent; apparuerunt lampades, ut hostes in fugam verterentur; id est, praedicaverunt martyres, donec eorum corpora in morte solverentur; corpora eorum in morte soluta sunt, ut miraculis coruscarent; coruscaverunt miraculis, ut hostes suos ex divina luce prosternerent, quatenus nequaquam Deo erecti resisterent, sed eum subditi formidarent. 76. Fidei praedicatores plus morte sua, quam praedicatione profecerunt. Et notandum quod steterunt hostes ante lagenas, fugerunt ante lampades, quia nimirum persecutores sanctae Ecclesiae, fidei praedicatoribus adhuc in corpore positis restiterunt; post solutionem vero corporum apparentibus miraculis in fugam versi sunt, quia, pavore conterriti, a persecutione fidelium cessaverunt. Praedicatione scilicet tubarum, fractis lagenis corporum, visis timuerunt lampadibus miraculorum. [Vet. XXXIV.] 77. Cui major est cura corporis quam praedicationis, metuenda reprobatio. Intuendum est etiam id quod illic scriptum est, quia in dextera tubas, lagenas autem in sinistra tenuerunt. Pro dextero enim habere dicimur quidquid pro magno pensamus; pro sinistro vero quod pro nihilo ducimus. Bene ergo illic scriptum est quod in dextera tubas, lagenas autem in sinistra tenuerunt, quia Christi martyres pro magno habent praedicationis gratiam, corporum vero utilitatem pro minimo. Quisquis enim plus facit utilitatem corporis, quam gratiam praedicationis, in sinistra tubam, atque in dextera lagenam tenet. Si enim priori loco gratia praedicationis attenditur, 992 et posteriori utilitas corporis, certum est quia in dextris tubae, et sinistris lagenae teneantur. Hinc Dominus in Evangelio ait: Neque accendunt lucernam, et ponunt eam sub modio, sed super candelabrum (Matth. V, 15). In modio enim commodum temporale, in lucerna autem lux praedicationis accipitur. Lucernam ergo sub modio ponere est propter temporale commodum, gratiam praedicationis abscondere, quod nemo utique electorum facit. Et bene illic additur: Sed super candelabrum. In candelabro enim status corporis designatur, cui lucerna superponitur, dum eidem corpori cura praedicationis antefertur. Bene itaque per Prophetam dictum est: Sceptrum exactoris ejus superasti, sicut in die Madian (Isai. IX, 4). Sed quia exponendi prophetici testimonii gratia longe digressi sumus, ad operis nostri ordinem revertamur. Igitur postquam dictum est: Clamorem exactoris non audiit, quia videlicet antiqui hostis insidias Dominus in carne manifestatus despexit, quid etiam de electis suis fecerit recte subjungit, dicens:

CAPUT XXVI.

VERS. 8. Circumspicit montes pascuae suae. 78. Etiam superbos in sua membra transformavit Christus. Convertit eos quos aspicit. Montes accipimus omnes elatos hujus saeculi, qui in corde suo altitudine terrena tumuerunt. Sed quia etiam tales Dominus Ecclesiae suae corpori conversos inviscerat, eosque a priori elatione commutans, in sua membra transformat, isti montes pascuae ejus sunt, quia nimirum de conversione errantium, et de superborum humilitate satiatur, sicut ipse ait: Meus cibus est, ut faciam voluntatem ejus qui me misit (Joan. IV, 34). Et sicut apostolis ad praedicationem missis praecepit, dicens: Operamini non cibum qui perit, sed qui permanet in vitam aeternam (Joan. VI, 27). De his montibus per Prophetam dicitur: Non repellet Dominus plebem suam, quoniam in manu ejus sunt omnes fines terrae, et altitudines montium ipse conspicit (Psal. XCXIV, 4). Altitudines enim montium elationes sunt utique superborum. Quas Dominus conspicere dicitur, id est ab iniquitate sua in melius commutare. Convertit namque Dominus eum quem conspicit. Unde scriptum est: Conversus Dominus respexit Petrum, et recordatus est Petrus verbi Domini sicut dixerat: Quia priusquam gallus cantet, ter me negabis; et egressus foras flevit amare (Luc. XXII, 61). Et sicut Salomon ait: Rex qui sedet in solio judicii, dissipat omne malum intuitu suo (Prov. XX, 8). De hoc respectu montium rursum per prophetam dicitur: Montes sicut cera fluxerunt a facie Domini (Psal. XCXVI, 5), quia post perversitatis suae duritiam, divina formidine liquefacti, ab illo prius rigido tumore substrati sunt. 79. Bonis operibus conversorum pascitur. Magnum Christo convivium fecit Matthaeus, imo fuit. Intuendum etiam quod non ait inspicit, sed circumspicit montes pascuae suae. In Judaea quippe incarnatus est Dominus, quae posita in medio gentium fuit. Atque ideo circumspexit montes, quia elatos hujus saeculi circumquaque positos ex gentilitatis universitate collegit. In his itaque montibus pascitur, quia bonis operibus conversorum quasi herbis virentibus satiatur. Hinc est quod ei sponsae voce in Canticis canticorum dicitur: Indica mihi ubi pascas, ubi cubes in meridie (Cant. I, 6). Pascitur quippe Dominus, cum bonis nostris actibus delectatur. Cubat vero in meridie, cum ex desideriis carnalibus ardenti corde reproborum apud 993 electorum suorum pectora refrigerium invenit cogitationis bonae. Mons enim quidam Matthaeus fuerat, quando in telonii lucris tumebat; de quo et scriptum est quia postquam credidit, invitato in domum suam Domino, convivium magnum fecit (Luc. V, 29). Mons itaque iste huic onagro virentis pascuae herbas protulit, quia et foris eum convivio, et intus epulis virtutum pavit. Quod adhuc plenissime expletur, cum subditur:

CAPUT XXVII.

IBID.Virentia quaeque perquirit. 80. Arentia corda Christus deserit; fide ac spe virentia requirit. Arentia enim deserit, et virentia quaeque perquirit.

Arentia namque corda sunt hominum, quae in hujus saeculi spe peritura plantata, aeternitatis fiduciam non habent. Virent autem quae illi haereditati inhaerent, de qua Petrus apostolus dicit: In haereditatem incorruptibilem, et incontaminatam, et immarcescibilem (I Pet. I, 4). Tanto enim verius quique virentes sunt, quanto in haereditatis immarcescibilis sorte cogitationis radicem figunt. Quisquis itaque intrinsecus arere formidat, arentia extrinsecus mundi hujus desideria fugiat. Quisquis a Domino perquiri desiderat, aeternam patriam appetens, in interna cordis plantatione viridescat. 81. S. Gregorii modestia et humilitas. Haec autem de onagro exposita sub duplici intellectu sufficiant. Lectoris vero judicio relinquendum est quid magis duxerit eligendum. Et si utriusque expositionis intelligentiam fortasse despexerit, libenter ipse lectorem meum subtilius veriusque sentientem, velut magistrum discipulus sequar, quia mihi proprie donatum credo, quidquid illum me melius sentire cognosco. [Vet. XXXV.] Omnes enim qui fide pleni de Deo aliquid sonare nitimur, organa veritatis sumus; et in ejusdem veritatis potestate est, utrum per me sonet alteri, an per alterum mihi. Ipsa quippe in medio nostri, etiam non aeque viventibus omnibus aequa est, et saepe alium tangit, ut bene audiat quod per alium ipsa sonuerit; saepe vero alium tangit, ut bene quod ab aliis audiatur sonet. 82. Saepe doctori verbum aut propter auditoris meritum tribuitur, aut propter cuipam subtrahitur. Saepe doctori verbum pro gratia tribuitur auditoris, et saepe propter auditoris culpam subtrahitur sermo doctori. In his ergo quae ubertim praedicat doctor, nulla elatione se efferat, ne fortasse 994 non pro sua, sed pro auditoris gratia ejus repleatur lingua; et in his quae doctor steriliter dicit, auditor non succenseat, ne fortasse doctoris lingua non pro sua, sed pro auditoris reprobatione torpescat. Pro auditoris namque gratia boni, datur etiam malis sermo doctoribus, sicut potuerunt Pharisaeis suppetere verba praedicationis, de quibus scriptum est: Omnia ergo quaecunque dixerint vobis, servate et facite; secundum vero opera eorum nolite facere (Matth. XXIII, 3). Propter auditorum vero reprobationem bonis etiam doctoribus sermo subtrahitur, sicut ad Ezechielem contra Israel dicitur: Linguam tuam adhaerere faciam palato tuo, et eris mutus, nec quasi vir objurgans, quia domus exasperans est (Ezech. III, 26). 83. Aliquando pro doctoris et auditorum merito vel culpa, datur aut negatur. De accepto nemo extollatur. Spem comitetur timor. Aliquando autem sermo praedicationis propter utrosque datur, aliquando propter utrosque subtrahitur. Propter utrosque enim datur, sicut divina voce Paulo apud Corinthios dicitur: Noli timere, sed loquere (Act. XVIII, 9). Et paulo post: Quia populus multus est mihi in hac civitate (Ibid. 10). Propter utrosque vero subtrahitur, sicut Heli sacerdos et pravam filiorum cognovit actionem, et dignam increpationis non exercuit vocem; cum profecto futurum esset ut in mortis supplicio et istos reatus flagitii, et illum silentii poena multaret (I Reg. III, 12, seq.). Inter haec igitur cum vel pro quo sermo detur, vel propter quem subtrahatur, ignoramus, unum est salubre remedium, nec de his quae aliis magis accepimus, nosmetipsos extollere, nec de eo alterum quod minus acceperit irridere; sed fixo humilitatis pede, graviter et constanter incedere, quia in hac vita tanto veracius docti sumus, quanto doctrinam nobis a nobismetipsis suppetere non posse cognoscimus. Cur ergo quilibet de doctrina superbiat, qui occulto judicio vel cui quando detur, vel quando cui subtrahatur ignorat? Quamvis enim securitati timor semper longe videatur abesse, nobis tamen nihil est securius quam sub spe semper timere, ne incauta mens aut desperando se in vitiis dejiciat, aut extollendo de donis ruat. Ante districti enim ac pii judicis oculos quanto de se sub spe humilius trepidat, tanto in illo robustius stat.

LIBER TRIGESIMUS PRIMUS.

Explicatur versus nonus cum reliquis capitis XXXIX, omissis tantum tribus ultimis; et divinae gratiae, in Evangelii praedicatione peccatorumque conversione, efficacia praesertim demonstratur.

CAPUT PRIMUM.

995 1. Inflictum homini a superbo diabolo vulnus, Dei humilitate sanatum In paradiso sano homini diabolus invidens superbiae vulnus inflixit, ut qui mortem non acceperat conditus, mereretur elatus (Genes. III). Sed quia divinae potentiae suppetit, non solum bona de nihilo facere, sed ea etiam ex malis quae diabolus perpetraverat, reformare, contra hoc inflictum vulnus superbientis diaboli medicina apparuit inter homines humilitas Dei, ut auctoris exemplo humiliati surgerent, qui imitatione hostis elati ceciderant. Contra ergo superbientem diabolum apparuit inter homines homo factus humilis Deus. Hunc potentes hujus saeculi, id est membra diaboli superbientis, eo despicabilem crediderunt, quo humilem conspexerunt. Vulnus enim cordis eorum quanto magis tumuit, tanto amplius medicamentum mite despexit. Repulsa igitur a vulnere superborum medicina nostra pervenit ad vulnus humilium: Infirma quippe mundi elegit Deus, ut confundat fortia (I Cor. I, 27); actumque est cum pauperibus quod post etiam divites erati mirarentur. Nam dum novas in illis virtutes aspiciunt, eorum quorum prius contempsere vitam postmodum obstupuere miracula. Unde mox pavidi ad sua corda redeuntes, extimuerunt sanctitatem in miraculis, quam despexerant in praeceptis. Per infirma ergo confusa sunt fortia, quia dum in venerationem vita surgit humilium, elatio cecidit superborum. Igitur quia beatus Job sanctae Ecclesiae typum tenet, et omnipotens Deus praevidit quod in primordiis nascentis Ecclesiae, potentes hujus saeculi leve ejus jugum suscipere crassa cordis cervice recusarent, dicat:

CAPUT IX.

CAP. XXXIX, vers. 9. Numquid volet rhinoceros servire tibi? 2. Per rhinocerotem intelligendi elati et potentes a Christo domiti, et Ecclesiae servire coacti. Eorum superbiam miraculis fregit. Rhinoceros enim indomitae omnino naturae est; ita ut si quando captus fuerit, teneri nullatenus possit. Impatiens quippe, ut fertur, illico moritur. Ejus vero nomen Latina lingua interpretatum sonat, in nare cornu. Et quid aliud in nare nisi fatuitas, quid in cornu nisi elatio designatur? Nam quia in nare fatuitas solet intelligi, Salomone attestante didicimus, qui ait: Circulus aureus in naribus suis, mulier pulchra et fatua (Prov. XI, 22). Haereticam namque doctrinam nitore vidit eloquii resplendere, nec tamen sapientiae apto intellectu congruere, et ait: Circulus aureus in naribus suis, id est pulchra et circumflexa locutio in sensibus mentis stultae, cui ex eloquio aurum pendet, sed tamen ex terrenae intentionis pondere, more suis, ad superiora non respicit. Quod secutus exposuit, dicens: Mulier pulchra et fatua; id est, doctrina haeretica: pulchra per verbum, fatua per intellectum. In cornu vero, quia elatio frequenter accipitur, 996 Propheta attestante didicimus, qui ait: Dixi iniquis, nolite inique agere, et delinquentibus, nolite exaltare cornu (Psal. LXXIV, 5). Quid ergo in rhinocerote hoc nisi potentes hujus saeculi designantur, vel ipsae in eo summae principatuum potestates, qui typho fatuae jactationis elati, dum falsis exterius inflantur honoribus, veris miseriis intus inanescunt? Quibus bene dicitur: Quid superbis, terra et cinis (Eccli. X, 9)? In ipsis vero initiis nascentis Ecclesiae, dum contra illam divitum se potestas extolleret, atque in ejus necem immensitate tantae crudelitatis anhelaret, dum tot cruciatibus anxia, tot persecutionibus pressa succumberet, quis tunc credere potuit quod illa recta et aspera superborum colla sibi subjiceret, et jugo sancti timoris edomita, mitibus fidei loris ligaret? Diu quippe in exordiis suis rhinocerotis hujus cornu ventilata, et quasi funditus interimenda percussa est. Sed divina gratia dispensante, et illa moriendo vivificata convaluit, et cornu suum rhinoceros iste feriendo lassatus inclinavit; quodque impossibile hominibus fuit, Deo difficile non fuit, qui potestates hujus mundi rigidas non verbis, sed miraculis fregit. Ecce enim quotidie servire rhinocerotes agnoscimus, dum potentes mundi hujus, qui in viribus suis fatua dudum fuerant elatione confisi, Deo subditos jam videmus. Quasi de quodam indomito rhinocerote Dominus loquebatur, cum diceret: Dives difficile intrabit in regnum coelorum (Matth. XIX, 23). Cui cum responsum esset: Et quis poterit salvus fieri? Illico adjunxit: Apud homines hoc impossibile est, apud Deum autem omnia possibilia sunt (Ibid., 26). Ac si diceret: Rhinoceros iste humanis viribus mansuescere non potest, sed tamen divinis subdi miraculis potest. Unde hic quoque apte beato Job sanctae Ecclesiae typum tenenti dicitur: Nunquid volet rhinoceros servire tibi? [Rec. II.] Subaudis: Ut mihi, qui eum praedicamentis quidem hominum diu resistere pertuli, sed tamen repente, cum volui, miraculis stravi. Ac si apertius dicat: Nunquid hi qui fatua elatione superbiunt sine meis adjutoriis tuae praedicationi subduntur? Per quem itaque praevaleas considera, et in omne quod praevales elationis sensum inclina. Vel certe ad beati Job notitiam pro humilianda ejus virtute deducitur, quam mira quandoque per apostolos agantur, qui mundum Deo subjiciunt, eique edomitam potentum hujus saeculi superbiam flectunt, ut tanto de se beatus Job minus aestimet, quanto aggregari Deo tam difficiles animas per alios videt. Dicat ergo: Nunquid volet rhinoceros tibi? Subaudis: Sicut per eos quos misero serviet mihi. Sequitur:

CAPUT III [Vet. II].

997 IBID. Aut morabitur ad praesepe tuum? 3. Scripturae sanctae pabulo Christus hos rhinocerotes nutrit. Praesepe hoc loco ipsa Scriptura sacra non inconvenienter accipitur, in qua verbi pabulo animalia sancta satiantur, de quibus per Prophetam dicitur: Animalia tua habitabunt in ea (Psal. LXVII, 11). Hinc etiam natus Dominus a pastoribus in praesepi reperitur (Luc. II, 16), quia ejus incarnatio, in ea quae nos reficit Prophetarum scriptura cognoscitur. Rhinoceros itaque iste, videlicet omnis elatus in primordiis nascentis Ecclesiae, cum patriarcharum dicta, cum prophetarum mysteria, cum Evangelii arcana audiret, irridebat, quia tanto in praedicatorum praesepi claudi satiarique contempserat, quanto in voluptatibus propriis dimissus, desperationis suae campum tenebat. Quem superborum campum bene Paulus insinuat, dicens: Qui desperantes semetipsos tradiderunt impudicitiae in operationem immunditiae omnis, in avaritiam (Ephes. IV, 19). Tanto enim se quisque in malis praesentibus latius relaxat, quanto post hanc vitam se assequi bona aeterna desperat. Sed omnipotens Deus diu quidem rhinocerotem hunc per pravae voluptatis campum vagantem pertulit, et tamen cum voluit, repente ad suum praesepe religavit, ut vitae pabulum bene clausus accipiat, ne vitam funditus male liber amittat. Ecce enim jam cernimus quod potentes hujus saeculi, ejusque principes praedicamenta dominica libenter audiunt, constanter legunt, passimque a praesepi non exeunt, quia praecepta Dei, quae aut legendo, aut audiendo cogoscunt, nequaquam vivendo transcendunt; sed ad verbi pabulum quasi clausi stare aequanimiter tolerant, ut edendo et permanendo pinguescant. Quod cum Deo agente conspicimus, quid aliud quam rhinocerotem hunc ad praesepe morantem videmus? Quia vero post acceptum pabulum praedicationis rhinoceros iste fructum debet ostendere operis, recte subjungitur:

CAPUT IV [Vet.

et Rec. III]. VERS. 10. Nunquid alligabis rhinocerotem ad arandum loro tuo? 4. Saeculi principes divina praecepta quibus alligantur, praedicant et servari curant. Lora sunt Ecclesiae praecepta disciplinae. Arare vero est per praedicationis studium humani pectoris terram vomere linguae proscindere. Hic igitur rhinoceros quondam superbus ac rigidus jam nunc loris fidei tenetur ligatus; atque a praesepi ad arandum ducitur, quia eam praedicationem qua ipse refectus est innotescere. et aliis conatur. Scimus enim rhinoceros iste, terrenus videlicet princeps, quanta prius contra Dominum crudelitate saevierit, et nunc agente Domino cernimus quanta se ei humilitate substernit. Hic rhinoceros non solum ligatus, sed etiam ad arandum ligatus est, quia videlicet disciplinae loris astrictus, non solum se a pravis operibus retinet, sed etiam in sanctae fidei praedicationibus exercet. Ecce enim, sicut superius dictum est, ipsos humanarum rerum rectores ac principes dum metuere Deum in suis actionibus cernimus, quid aliud quam loris ligatos videmus? Cum vero eam fidem, quam dudum persequendo impugnaverant, nunc prolatis legibus praedicare non cessant, quid aliud faciunt, nisi aratri laboribus insudant? 5. Saecularis potestatis et humilitatis christianae mirus consensus. Libet videre hunc rhinocerotem, id est terrae principem fidei loris ligatum, quemadmodum 998 et cornu portat per potentiam saeculi, et jugum fidei sustinet per amorem Dei. Timeri iste rhinoceros valde poterat, nisi ligatus esset. Cornu quippe habet, sed ligatus est. Habent ergo in loris ejus quod humiles diligant, habent in cornu ejus quod elati pertimescant. Strictus enim loris, servat pietatem mansuetudinis, sed fultus cornu terrenae gloriae exercet dominium potestatis. Plerumque autem cum exigente ira ad feriendum rapitur, divino timore revocatur. Et quidem per exasperatam potentiam in furorem se elevat; sed quia aeterni judicis reminiscitur, cornu ligatus se inclinat. Saepe ipse vidisse me memini, quod cum se ad feriendum graviter hic rhinoceros accenderet, et quasi elevato cornu bestiolis minimis mortes, exsilia, damnationesque subjectis immensis terroribus intentaret, repente fronti signo crucis impresso, omne in se incendium furoris exstinxit, conversus minas deposuit; et quia ad deliberata progredi non posset, ligatus agnovit. Et non solum in se iras edomat, sed in subjectorum etiam sensibus omne quod rectum est inserere festinat, ut quia omnes sanctam Ecclesiam ex intima cogitatione venerentur, exemplo ipse suae humilitatis demonstret. Dicatur igitur beato Job: Nunquid alligabis rhinocerotem ad arandum loro tuo? Ac si aperte dicat: Nunquid potentes hujus saeculi in sua fatua elatione confidentes, ad laborem praedicationis dirigis, et sub disciplinae vincula restringis? Subaudis: Ut ego, qui id egi cum volui, qui persecutores meos, quos prius hostes pertuli, ipsos postmodum rectae fidei defensores feci. Sequitur:

CAPUT V [Vet. IV].

IBID. Aut confringet glebas vallium post te? 6. Qui prius fidei persecutores, postmodum praedicatores et assertores facti. Solent excultae terrae superjacentes glebae jactata semina premere, et nascentia suffocare. Quibus glebis hoc loco illi signantur, qui per duritiam suam atque pestiferam vitam, nec ipsi semina verbi recipiunt, nec receptorum seminum fructus alios ferre permittunt. Sanctus enim quisque praedicator in mundum veniens, evangelizando pauperibus, quasi molles vallium terras araverat; sed quorumdam duritiam elatorum Ecclesia rumpere non valens, eos quasi superjectas labori suo glebas oppressa tolerabat. Multi enim perversae mentis ipsa terrenorum principum infidelitate confisi, surgentem Ecclesiam male vivendi pondere premebant, cum diu quos possent modo damnabilibus exemplis, modo minis, modo blandimentis destruerent, ne terra cordis auditorum ad spiritalis seminis fructum exculta perveniret. At cum omnipotens Deus hunc rhinocerotem loris suis subdidit, per eum illico glebarum duritiam fregit. Mox quippe terrenum principatum suae fidei subjugavit, dura persequentium corda contrivit, ut quasi confractae glebae non jam obduratae premerent, sed ad percepta verbi semina resolutae germinarent. Unde recte nunc ait: Aut confringet glebas vallium post te? Ac si diceret sicut post me, qui postquam mentem cujuslibet elatae potestatis ingredior, non solum eam mihi subditam reddo, sed etiam ad conterendos fidei hostes exerceo, ut potentes hujus saeculi meae formidinis loris ligati, non solum in me credentes permaneant, sed et pro me 999 alieni cordis duritiam zelantes frangant. 7. In suo sinu multos hostes habet Ecclesia, contra quos terrenorum principum opem quaerit. Hoc autem quod de infidelibus diximus, in plerisque etiam qui fidei nomine censentur videmus. Multi namque in medio humilium fratrum positi fidem verbo tenus tenent, sed dum elationis typhum non deserunt, dum quos possunt illatis violentiis premunt, dum fructificantibus aliis ipsi nequaquam semina verbi recipiunt, sed ab exhortantis voce aurem cordis avertunt, isti quid aliud, quam obduratae glebae in exaratis vallibus jacent? Qui eo nequiores sunt, quo nec ipsi humilitatis fructum proferunt, et quod est deterius, proferentes humiles premunt. Ad horum duritiam dissolvendam nonnunquam sancta Ecclesia, quia propria virtute non sufficit, rhinocerotis hujus, id est terreni principis opitulationem quaerit, ut ipse superjacentes glebas conterat, quas Ecclesiarum humilitas quasi planities vallium portat. Has itaque glebas rhinoceros pede premit ac comminuit, quia pravorum potentiumque duritiam, cui ecclesiastica humilitas resistere non valet, principalis religio ex potestate dissolvit. Quod quia sola divina virtute agitur, ut terreni regni culmina ad provectum regni coelestis inclinentur, recte nunc dicitur: Aut confringet glebas vallium post te? Ut vero de suis virtutibus beatus Job humilia sentiat, et adhuc de hujus mundi potestatibus sub rhinocerotis nomine sublimia cognoscat, sequitur:

CAPUT VI.

VERS. 11.Nunquid fiduciam habebis in magna fortitudine ejus, et derelinques ei labores tuos? 8. Temporalis principis potestatem sibi servire cogit Christus, eique suam Ecclesiam credidit ac commendavit. In rhinocerotis fortitudine fiduciam Dominus habere se asserit, quia vires quas temporaliter terreno principi contulit, ad cultum suae venerationis inclinavit, ut ex accepta potestate, per quam dudum contra Deum tumuerat, religiosum nunc Deo obsequium impendat. Quo enim in mundum plus potest, eo pro mundi auctore plus praevalet. Nam quia a subjectis ipse metuitur, tanto facilius persuadet, quanto et cum potestate indicat qui vere metuatur. Dicatur ergo: Nunquid fiduciam habebis in magna fortitudine ejus? Ac si diceretur: Ut ego, qui vires terrenorum principum meo cultui servituras aspicio. Tanto enim ea quae nunc agis, minora aestimo, quanto jam praevideo, quia et majores hujus mundi mihi potestates inclinabo. Bene autem subditur: Et derelinques ei labores tuos? Labores enim suos huic rhinoceroti Dominus reliquit, quia converso terreno principi eam quam sua morte mercatus est, Ecclesiam credidit: quia videlicet in ejus manu quanta sollicitudine pax fidei sit tuenda commisit. Sequitur:

CAPUT VII [Vet.

V, Rec. IV]. VERS. 12. Nunquid credes ei quod reddat sementem tibi, et aream tuam congreget? 9. Pro Ecclesia leges promulgat; qui dudum contra eam saeviebat. Qui aliud semen, nisi verbum praedicationis accipitur? sicut in Evangelio Veritas dicit: Exiit qui seminat, seminare (Matth. XIII, 3); et sicut propheta ait: Beati qui seminatis super omnes aquas (Isai. XXXII, 20). Quid aliud area nisi Ecclesia debet intelligi? de qua Praecursoris voce dicitur: Et permundabit aream suam (Matth. III, 12). Quis ergo in initio nascentis Ecclesiae crederet, dum contra eam ille indomitus principatus terrae tot minis et cruciatibus saeviret, quia rhinoceros iste Deo sementem redderet, id est acceptum praedicationis verbum operibus repensaret? Quis

1000 posset tunc infirmorum credere quod ejus aream congregaret? Ecce enim modo pro Ecclesia leges promulgat, qui dudum contra eam per varia tormenta saeviebat. Ecce quaslibet gentes capere potuerit ad fidei illas gratiam suadendo perducit; eisque aeternam vitam indicat, quibus captis praesentem servat. Cur hoc? Quia videlicet aream nunc congregat, quam aliquando superbo cornu dispergendo ventilabat. Audiat igitur beatus Job quid gentilitatis principes faciant, et nequaquam se apud semetipsum de gloria tantae suae virtutis extollat. Audiat et rex potens, potentiores hujus mundi reges quanta Deo devotione famulentur, et virtutem suam quasi pro singularitate non trahat in elationis vitium, qui habet in aliis exemplum, quia etsi tunc ei similem Dominus non vidit, multos tamen per quos ejus gloriam retunderet praevidit. 10. Qui terrenorum principum metu, Ecclesiam aperta vi vexare non audent, ad varia fraudis argumenta convertuntur. Sine hoste esse non potest Ecclesia. Igitur quia terreni principes magna se Deo humilitate substernunt, pravi homines qui dudum contra Ecclesiam in infidelitate positi aperta adversitate saeviebant, nunc ad alia fraudis argumenta vertuntur. Quia enim illos religionem venerari conspiciunt, ipsi cultum religionis assumunt, et bonorum vitam sub despectis vestibus iniquis moribus premunt. Mundi quippe dilectores sunt, hocque in se quod homines venerentur ostendunt, atque eis qui vere semetipsos despiciunt, non mente, sed veste copulantur. Quia enim praesentem gloriam amantes assequi non possunt, quasi despicientes sequuntur. Qui quid sentiunt contra bonos ostenderent, si aptum nequitiae tempus invenirent. [Vet. VI.] Sed haec etiam argumenta pravorum ad electorum purgamenta proficiunt. Sancta enim Ecclesia transire sine labore tentationis non potest tempora peregrinationis, quae etsi foris apertos hostes non habet, intus tamen tolerat fictos fratres. Nam contra vitia semper in acie est, et habet etiam pacis tempore bellum suum; et fortasse gravius affligitur cum non extraneorum ictibus, sed suorum moribus impugnatur. Sive itaque illo, seu isto tempore, est tamen semper in labore. Nam et in persecutione principum timet ne amittant boni quod sunt, et in conversione principum tolerat, quia mali simulant bonos se esse, quod non sunt. Unde omnipotens Deus, quia rhinocerotem hunc loris ligatum dixit, illico pravorum hypocrisim subdidit, dicens:

CAPUT VIII [Rec. V].

VERS. 13. Penna struthionis similis est pennis herodii et accipitris. 11. Struthioni pennas habenti, sed non volatum, similes sunt hypocritae. Quis herodium et accipitrem nesciat aves reliquas quanta volatus sui velocitate transcendant? Struthio vero pennae eorum similitudinem habet, sed volatus eorum celeritatem non habet. A terra quippe elevari non valet, et alas quasi ad volatum specie tenus erigit, sed tamen nunquam se a terra volando suspendit. Ita sunt nimirum omnes hypocritae, qui dum bonorum vitam simulant, imitationem sanctae visionis habent, sed veritatem sanctae actionis non habent. Habent quippe volandi pennas per speciem, sed in terra repunt per actionem, quia alas per figuram sanctitatis extendunt, sed curarum saecularium pondere praegravati, nullatenus a terra sublevantur. Speciem namque Pharisaeorum reprobans Dominus, quasi struthionis pennam 1001 redarguit, quae in opere aliud exercuit, et in colore aliud ostendit, dicens: Vae vobis, Scribae et Pharisaei hypocritae, quia similes estis sepulcris dealbatis, quae foris quidem apparent hominibus speciosa, intus vero sunt plena ossibus mortuorum; ita et vos foris apparetis hominibus justi, intus vero pleni estis avaritia et iniquitate (Matth. XXIII, 27). Ac si diceret: Sublevare vos videtur species pennae, sed in infimis vos deprimit pondus vitae. De hoc pondere per Prophetam dicitur: Filii hominum, usquequo graves corde (Psal. IV, 3)? Hujus struthionis conversurum se hypocrisim Dominus pollicetur, cum per prophetam dicit: Glorificabunt me bestiae agri, dracones et struthiones (Isai. XLIII, 20). Quid enim draconum nomine, nisi in aperto malitiosae mentes exprimuntur, quae per terram semper in infimis cogitationibus repunt? Quid vero per struthionum vocabulum nisi hi qui se bonos simulant designantur, qui sanctitatis vitam quasi volatus pennam per speciem retinent, sed per opera non exercent? Glorificari itaque se Dominus a dracone vel struthione asserit, quia et aperte malos, et ficte bonos plerumque ad sua obsequia ex intima cogitatione convertit. Vel certe agri bestiae, id est dracones struthionesque Dominum glorificant, cum fidem quae in illo est ea quae in hoc mundo dudum membrum diaboli fuerat gentilitas exaltat. Quam et propter malitiam draconum nomine exprobrat, et propter hypocrisim vocabulo struthionum notat. Quasi enim pennas accepit gentilitas, sed volare non potuit, quae et naturam rationis habuit, et actionem rationis ignoravit. 12. Electi pauca habent hic quae eos deprimant, multa quae sursum tollant; secus reprobi. Habemus adhuc quod in consideratione struthionis hujus de accipitre et herodio attentius perpendamus. Accipitris quippe et herodii parva sunt corpora, sed pennis densioribus fulta, et idcirco cum celeritate transvolant, quia eis parum inest quod aggravat, multum quod levat. At contra struthio raris pennis induitur, et immani corpore gravatur, ut etsi volare appetat, ipsa pennarum paucitas molem tanti corporis in aera non suspendat. Bene ergo in herodio et accipitre electorum persona signatur, qui quandiu in hac vita sunt, sine quantulocunque culpae contagio esse non possunt. Sed cum eis parum quid inest quod deprimit, multa virtus bonae actionis suppetit quae illos in superna sustollit. At contra hypocrita, etsi facit pauca quae elevent, perpetrat multa quae gravent. Neque enim nulla bona agit hypocrita, sed quibus ea ipsa deprimat, multa perversa committit. Paucae igitur pennae corpus struthionis non sublevant, quia parvum bonum hypocritae multitudo pravae actionis gravat. Haec quoque ipsa struthionis penna ad pennas herodii et accipitris similitudinem coloris habet, virtutis vero similitudinem non habet. Illorum namque conclusae et firmiores sunt, et volatu aerem premere virtute suae soliditatis possunt. At contra struthionis pennae dissolutae, eo volatum sumere nequeunt, quo ab ipso quem premere debuerant aere transcenduntur. Quid ergo in his aspicimus nisi quod electorum virtutes solidae evolant, ut ventos humani favoris premant? Hypocritarum vero actio quamlibet recta videatur, volare non sufficit, quia videlicet fluxae virtutis pennam humanae laudis aura pertransit. 1002 [Vet. VII.] 13. Veri Christiani a falsis, ex fructibus discernendi. Sed ecce cum unum eumdemque bonorum malorumque habitum cernimus, cum ipsam in electis ac reprobis professionis speciem videmus, unde nostrae intelligentiae suppetat ut electos a reprobis, a falsis veros comprehendendo discernat? Quod tamen citius agnoscimus, si intimata in memoriam praeceptoris nostri verba signamus, qui ait: Ex fructibus eorum cognoscetis eos (Matth. VII, 20). Neque enim pensanda sunt quae ostendunt in imagine, sed quae servant in actione. Unde hic postquam speciem struthionis hujus intulit, mox facta subjungit, dicens:

CAPUT IX.

VERS. 14. Quae derelinquit in terra ova sua. 14. Hypocritae quos gignunt, bonis exemplis fovere et nutrire negligunt. Quid enim per ova, nisi tenera adhuc proles exprimitur, quae diu fovenda est, ut ad vivum volatile perducatur? Ova quippe insensibilia in semetipsis sunt, sed tamen calefacta, in viva volatilia convertuntur. Ita nimirum parvuli auditores ac filii certum est, quod frigidi insensibilesque remaneant, nisi doctoris sui sollicita exhortatione calefiant. Ne igitur derelicti in sua insensibilitate torpescant, assidua doctorum voce fovendi sunt, quousque valeant et per intelligentiam vivere, et per contemplationem volare. Quia vero hypocritae quamvis perversa semper operentur, loqui tamen recta non desinunt; bene autem loquendo in fide vel conversatione filios pariunt, sed eos bene vivendo nutrire non possunt, recte de hac struthione dicitur: Quae derelinquit in terra ova sua. Curam namque filiorum hypocrita negligit, quia ex amore intimo rebus se exterioribus subdit, in quibus quanto magis extollitur, tanto minus de prolis suae defectu cruciatur. Ova ergo in terra dereliquisse est natos per conversionem filios nequaquam a terrenis actibus interposito exhortationis nido suspendere. Ova in terra dereliquisse est nullum coelestis vitae filiis exemplum praebere. Quia enim hypocritae per charitatis viscera non calent, de torpore prolis editae, id est de ovorum suorum frigore nequaquam dolent; et quanto se libentius terrenis actibus inserunt, tanto negligentius eos quos generant agere terrena permittunt. Sed quia derelictos hypocritarum filios superna cura non deserit, nonnullos namque etiam ex talibus intima electione praescitos, largitae gratiae respectu calefacit, recte subjungitur:

CAPUT X [Rec. VI].

IBID. Tu forsitan in pulvere calefacies ea? 15. Pravorum et bonorum doctorum filios Dei gratia calefacit. Ac si dicat: Ut ego, qui illa in pulvere calefacio, quia scilicet parvulorum animas, et in medio peccantium sitas, amoris mei igne succendo. Quid pulvis, nisi peccator accipitur? Unde et ille hostis hujus peccatoris perditione satiatur, de quo per prophetam dicitur: Serpenti pulvis panis ejus (Isai. LXV, 25). Quid per pulverem, nisi ipsa iniquorum instabilitas demonstratur? De qua David ait: Non sic impii non sic, sed tanquam pulvis quem projicit ventus a facie terrae (Psal. I, 4). Ova ergo Dominus in pulvere derelicta calefacit, quia parvulorum animas praedicatorum suorum sollicitudine destitutas, etiam in medio peccantium positas amoris sui igne succendit. Hinc est quod plerosque cernimus et in medio populorum vivere, et tamen vitam torpentis populi non tenere. Hinc est quod plerosque cernimus, et malorum turbas non fugere, et tamen superno ardore flagrare. Hinc est quod plerosque cernimus, 1003 ut ita dixerim, in frigore calere. Unde enim nonnulli in terrenorum hominum torpore positi supernae spei desideriis inardescunt, unde et inter frigida corda succensi sunt, nisi quia omnipotens Deus derelicta ova scit etiam in pulvere calefacere, et frigoris pristini insensibilitate discussa, per sensum spiritus vitalis animare, ut nequaquam jacentia in infimis torpeant; sed in viva volatilia versa sese ad coelestia contemplando, id est volando, suspendant? Notandum vero est quod in his verbis non solum hypocritarum actio perversa reprobatur, sed bonorum etiam magistrorum, si qua fortasse subrepserit elatio premitur. Nam cum de se Dominus dicit quod derelicta ova in pulvere ipse calefaciat, profecto aperte indicat quia ipse operatur intrinsecus per verba doctoris, qui et sine verbis ullius hominis calefacit quos voluerit in frigore pulveris. Ac si aperte doctoribus dicat: Ut sciatis quia ego sum qui per vos loquentes operor, ecce cum voluero cordibus hominum etiam sine vobis loquor. [Vet. VIII.] Humiliata igitur cogitatione doctorum, ad exprimendum hypocritam sermo convertitur, et qua fatuitate torpeat, adhuc sub struthionis facto plenius indicatur. Nam sequitur:

CAPUT XI [Rec. VII].

VERS. 15. Obliviscitur quod pes conculcet ea, aut bestia agri conterat. 16. Pravi doctores de sua prole non sunt solliciti, secus boni. Quid in pede, nisi transitus operationis accipitur? Quid in agro, nisi mundus iste signatur? De quo in Evangelio Dominus dicit: Ager autem est mundus (Matth. XIII, 38). Quid in bestia nisi antiquus hostis exprimitur, qui hujus mundi rapinis insidians, humana quotidie morte satiatur? De qua per Prophetam, pollicente Domino, dicitur: Et mala bestia non transibit per eam (Isai. XXXV, 9). Struthio itaque ova sua deserens obliviscitur quod pes conculcet ea, quia videlicet hypocritae eos quos in conversatione filios generant derelinquunt, et omnino non curant, ne aut exhortationis sollicitudine, aut disciplinae custodia destitutos, pravorum operum exempla pervertant. Si enim ova quae gignunt diligerent, nimirum metuerent ne quis ea, perversa opera demonstrando, calcaret. Hunc Paulus pedem infirmis discipulis, quasi ovis quae posuerat, metuebat, cum diceret: Multi ambulant, quos saepe dicebam vobis, nunc autem et flens dico, inimicos crucis Christi (Phil. III, 18). Et rursum: Videte canes, videte malos operarios (Ibid., 2). Et rursum: Denuntiamus vobis, fratres, in nomine Domini nostri Jesu Christi, ut subtrahatis vos ab omni fratre ambulante inordinate, et non secundum traditionem quam acceperunt a nobis (II Thess. III, 6). Hunc pedem Joannes Caio formidabat, qui cum multa Diotrephis mala praemisisset, adjunxit: Charissime, noli imitari malum, sed quod bonum est (III Joan. 11). Hunc ipse Synagogae dux infirmo suo gregi metuebat, dicens: Quando ingressus fueris terram quam Dominus Deus dabit tibi, cave ne imitari velis abominationes illarum gentium (Deut. XVIII, 9). Obliviscitur etiam quod bestia agri conterat, quia nimirum si diabolus in hoc mundo saeviens editos in bona conversatione filios rapiat, hypocrita omnino non curat. Hanc autem agri bestiam Paulus ovis quae posuerat metuebat dicens: Timeo, ne sicut serpens Evam seduxit astutia sua, ita corrumpantur sensus vestri a charitate, quae est 1004 in Christo Jesu (II Cor. XI, 3). Hanc agri bestiam discipulis metuebat Petrus, cum diceret: Adversarius vester diabolus, quasi leo rugiens circuit, quaerens quem devoret, cui resistite fortes in fide (I Pet. V, 8). Habent ergo veraces magistri super discipulos suos timoris viscera ex virtute charitatis: hypocritae autem tanto minus commissis sibi metuunt, quanto nec sibimetipsis quid timere debeant deprehendunt. Et quia obduratis cordibus vivunt, ipsos etiam quos generant filios nulla pietate debiti amoris agnoscunt. Unde adhuc sub struthionis specie subditur:

CAPUT XII.

VERS. 16. Duratur ad filios suos, quasi non sint sui. 17. Hi charitate flagrant erga filios, non illi. Quem enim charitatis gratia non infundit, proximum suum etiam si ipse hunc Deo genuit, extraneum respicit, ut profecto sunt omnes hypocritae, quorum videlicet mentes dum semper exteriora appetunt, intus insensibiles fiunt; et in cunctis quae agunt, dum sua semper expetunt, erga affectum proximi nulla charitatis compassione mollescunt. O quam mollia viscera gestabat Paulus, quando circa filios suos tanto aestu amoris inhiabat, dicens: Nos vivimus, si vos statis in Domino (I Thess. III, 8). Et, Testis mihi est Deus, quomodo cupiam omnes vos in visceribus Christi Jesu (Phil. I, 8). Romanis quoque ait: Testis est mihi Deus, cui servio in spiritu meo, in Evangelio Filii ejus, quod sine intermissione memoriam vestri semper facio in orationibus meis, obsecrans si quo modo tandem aliquando prosperum iter habeam in voluntate Dei veniendi ad vos; desidero enim videre vos (Rom. I, 9, seq.). Timotheo quoque ait: Gratias ago Deo meo, cui servio a progenitoribus meis in conscientia pura, quia sine intermissione habeam tui memoriam in orationibus meis, nocte ac die desiderans te videre (II Tim. I, 3). Thessalonicensibus quoque amorem suum indicans, dicit: Nos autem, fratres, desolati a vobis ad tempus horae, aspectu, non corde, abundantius festinavimus faciem vestram videre cum multo desiderio (I Thess. II, 17). Qui duris persecutionibus pressus, et tamen de filiorum salute sollicitus, adjunxit: Misimus Timotheum fratrem nostrum, et ministrum Dei in Evangelio Christi, ad confortandos vos; et exhortandos pro fide vestra, ut nemo moveatur in tribulationibus istis. Ipsi enim scitis quod in hoc positi sumus (I Thess. III, 2). Ephesiis quoque ait: Peto ne deficiatis in tribulationibus meis pro vobis quae est gloria vestra (Ephes. III, 13). Ecce in tribulatione positus alios exhortatur, et in hoc quod ipse sustinet alios roborat. Non enim filiorum suorum fuerat more struthionis oblitus, sed metuebat nimis ne ejus discipuli in praedicatore suo tot persecutionum probra cernentes, fidem in eo despicerent, contra quam innumerae passionum contumeliae praevalerent. Et idcirco minus dolebat in tormentis, sed magis filiis de tormentorum suorum tentatione metuebat. Parvipendebat in se plagas corporis, dum formidaret in filiis plagas cordis. Ipse patiendo suscipiebat vulnera tormentorum, sed filios consolando, curabat vulnera cordium. Pensemus ergo cujus charitatis fuerit, inter dolores proprios aliis timuisse, pensemus cujus charitatis fuerit, filiorum salutem inter sua detrimenta requirere, et statum mentis in proximis etiam ex sua dejectione custodire. 1005 [Vet. IX.] 18. Quia per concupiscentiam in exteriora bona feruntur. Quae apud se tota non est mens, cogitare se non potest. Sed haec hypocritae charitatis viscera nesciunt, quia eorum mens quanto per mundi concupiscentiam in exteriora resolvitur, tanto per inaffectionem suam interius obduratur; et torpore insensibili frigescit intrinsecus, quia amore damnabili mollescit foris; seque ipsam considerare non valet, quia cogitare se minime studet. Cogitare vero se mens non potest, quae tota apud semetipsam non est. Tota vero esse apud semetipsam non sufficit, quia per quot concupiscentias rapitur, per tot a semetipsa species dissipatur, et sparsa in infimis jacet, quae collecta, si vellet, ad summa consurgeret. 19. Mira justorum intra se collectorum perspicacia.Unde justorum mens, quia per custodiam disciplinae a cunctorum visibilium fluxo appetitu constringitur, collecta apud semetipsam intrinsecus integratur; qualisque Deo vel proximo esse debeat, plene conspicit, quia nihil suum exterius derelinquit; et quanto ab exterioribus abstracta compescitur, tanto aucta in intimis inflammatur; et quo magis ardet, eo ad deprehendenda vitia amplius lucet. Hinc est enim quod sancti viri dum se intra semetipsos colligunt, mira ac penetrabili acie occulta etiam aliena delicta deprehendunt. Unde bene per Ezechielem prophetam dicitur: Emissa similitudo manus apprehendit me in cincinno capitis mei, et elevavit me spiritus inter terram et coelum, et adduxit me in Jerusalem in visione Dei juxta ostium interius, quod respiciebat ad Aquilonem, ubi erat statutum idolum zeli, ad provocandam aemulationem (Ezech. VIII, 3). Quid est enim cincinnus capitis, nisi collectae cogitationes mentis, ut non sparsae diffluant, sed per disciplinam constrictae subsistant? Manus ergo desuper mittitur, et propheta per cincinnum capitis elevatur, quia cum nostra mens sese per custodiam colligit, vis superna sursum nos ab infimis trahit. Bene vero inter terram et coelum sublatum se asserit, quia quilibet sanctus in carne mortali positus, plene quidem adhuc ad superna non pervenit, sed jam tamen ima derelinquit. In visione vero Dei in Jerusalem ducitur, quia videlicet unusquisque proficiens per charitatis zelum, qualis esse Ecclesia debeat contemplatur. Bene quoque additur. Juxta ostium interius, quod respiciebat ad Aquilonem, quia nimirum sancti viri dum per aditum internae contemplationis aspiciunt, plus prava intra Ecclesiam fieri quam recta deprehendunt; et quasi in Aquilonis parte oculos, id est ad solis sinistram flectunt, quia contra vitiorum frigora charitatis se stimulis accendunt. Ubi et recte subjungitur: Quia illic erat statutum idolum zeli ad provocandam aemulationem. Dum enim intra sanctam Ecclesiam a nonnullis specie sola fidelibus, rapinas et vitia perpetrari considerant, quid aliud quam in Jerusalem idolum vident? Quod idolum zeli dicitur, quia per hoc contra nos aemulatio superna provocatur: et tanto districtius delinquentes ferit, quanto nos charius Redemptor amat. [Vet. X.] 20. Hypocritarum ad coelestia torpor, ardor ad terrena. Hypocritae igitur, quia cogitationes mentis non colligunt, per cincinnum capitis minime tenentur. Et qui sua nesciunt, commissorum sibi quando delicta deprehendunt? Hi itaque torpent 1006 a coelestibus, ad quae flagrare debuerant; et flagrant terrenis rebus anxie, a quibus laudabiliter torpuissent. Postposita quippe filiorum cura, saepe eos videas se contra pericula immensi laboris accingere, maria transmeare, adire judicia, pulsare principatus, palatia irrumpere, jurgantibus populorum cuneis interesse, et terrena patrimonia laboriosa observatione defendere. Quibus si fortasse dicatur: Cur ista vos agitis, qui saeculum reliquistis? respondent illico Deum se metuere, et idcirco tanto studio defendendis patrimoniis insudare. Unde bene adhuc de struthionis hujus stulto labore subjungitur:

CAPUT XIII [Rec. VIII].

VERS. 16. Frustra laboravit, nullo timore cogente. 21. Neglecta filiorum custodia, temporalia damna vel leviora jurgiis propulsat. Erga ea quae possidemus qua mente simus, nisi cum amittuntur, ignoramus. Illic namque trepidaverunt timore, ubi non erat timor (Psal. XIII, 5). Ecce enim divina voce praecipitur: Si quis tibi tulerit tunicam, et voluerit tecum judicio contendere, dimitte illi et pallium (Matth. V, 40). Et rursum: Si quis quod tuum est tulerit, ne repetas (Luc. VI, 30). Paulus quoque apostolus discipulos suos cupiens exteriora despicere, ut valeant interna servare, admonet, dicens: Jam quidem omnino delictum est in vobis, quod judicia habetis inter vos, quare non magis injuriam accipitis, quare non magis fraudem patimini (I Cor. VI, 7)? Et tamen hypocrita, assumpto sanctae conversationis habitu, filiorum custodiam deserit, et temporalia quaeque defendere etiam jurgiis quaerit. Exemplo suo eorum perdere corda non trepidat, et quasi per negligentiam amittere patrimonia terrena formidat. In errorem discipulus labitur, et tamen cor hypocritae nullo dolore sauciatur. Ire in iniquitatis voraginem commissos sibi conspicit, et haec quasi inaudita pertransit; at si quod sibi leviter inferri temporale damnum senserit, in ultionis iram repente ab intimis inardescit. Mox patientia rumpitur, mox dolor cordis in vocibus effrenatur, quia dum animarum damna aequanimiter tolerat, jacturam vero rerum temporalium repellere etiam cum spiritus commotione festinat, cunctis veraciter indicat teste mentis perturbatione quid amat. Ibi quippe est grande studium defensionis, ubi et gravior vis amoris. Nam quanto magis terrena diligit, tanto privari eis vehementius pertimescit. Qua enim mente aliquid in hoc mundo possidemus, non docemur, nisi cum amittimus. Sine dolore namque amittitur, quidquid sine amore possidetur. Quae vero ardenter diligimus habita, graviter suspiramus ablata. Quis autem nesciat quia nostris usibus res terrenas Dominus condidit, suis autem animas hominum creavit? Plus ergo Deo se amare convincitur, qui, neglectis his quae ejus sunt, propria tuetur. Perdere namque hypocritae ea quae Dei sunt, id est animas hominum, non timent, et quae sua sunt amittere, videlicet res cum mundo transeuntes, quasi districto judici posituri rationes timent, ac si placatum inveniant, cui, desideratis rebus, id est rationabilibus, perditis, insensibilia et non quaesita conservant. Possidere aliquid in hoc mundo volumus, et ecce Veritas clamat: Nisi quis renuntiaverit omnibus quae possidet, non potest meus esse discipulus (Luc. XIV, 33). 22. Quo animo, cum necessitas et charitas cogunt litigandum. Perfectus igitur Christianus quomodo debet res terrenas jurgando defendere, quas non praecipitur 1007 possidere? Itaque cum res proprias amittimus, si perfecte Deum sequimur, in hujus vitae itinere a magno onere levigati sumus. Cum vero curam rerum ejusdem nobis itineris necessitas imponit, quidam dum eas rapiunt, solummodo tolerandi sunt; quidam vero conservata charitate prohibendi, non tamen sola cura ne nostra subtrahant, sed ne rapientes non sua, semetipsos perdant. Plus quippe ipsis raptoribus debemus metuere, quam rebus irrationabilibus defendendis inhiare. Ista namque etiam non rapta morientes amittimus, cum illis vero et nunc conditionis ordine, etsi corrigi studeant, post perceptionem muneris, unum sumus. Quis autem nesciat quia minus ea quibus utimur, et plus debemus amare quod sumus? Si ergo et pro sua utilitate raptoribus loquimur, non jam solum nobis quae temporalia, sed ipsis etiam quae sunt aeterna vindicamus. 23. Qua moderatione litigandum. Qua in re illud est solerter intuendum, ne per necessitatis metum cupiditas subrepat rerum, et zelo succensa prohibitio, impetus immoderatione distensa, usque ad odiosae turpitudinem contentionis erumpat. Dumque pro terrena re pax a corde cum proximo scinditur, liquido apparet quia plus res quam proximus amatur. Si enim charitatis viscera etiam circa raptorem proximum non habemus, nosmetipsos pejus ipso raptore persequimur, graviusque nos quam alter poterat devastamus, quia dilectionis bonum sponte deserentes, a nobis ipsis intus est quod amittimus, qui ab illo sola exteriora perdebamus. Sed hanc hypocrita formam charitatis ignorat, quia plus terrena quam coelestia diligens, contra eum qui temporalia diripit sese in intimis immani odio inflammat. [Vet. XI.] 24. Qui discrepent ab hypocritis nonnulli acrius bona temporalia tuentes. Hi qua cautela reprehendendi. Sciendum vero est quia sunt nonnulli quos charitatis gremio nutriens mater Ecclesia tolerat, quousque ad spiritalis aetatis incrementa perducat, qui nonnunquam et sanctitatis habitum tenent, et perfectionis meritum exsequi non valent. Ad dona namque spiritalia minime assurgunt, et idcirco his qui sibi conjuncti sunt ad tuenda ea quae terrena sunt serviunt, et nonnunquam in defensionis ejusdem iracundia excedunt. Hos nequaquam credendum est in hypocritarum numerum incurrere, quia aliud est infirmitate, aliud malitia peccare. Hoc itaque inter hos et hypocritas distat, quod isti infirmitatis suae conscii malunt a cunctis de culpa sua redargui, quam de ficta sanctitate laudari; illi vero et iniqua se agere certi sunt, et tamen apud humana judicia de nomine sanctitatis intumescunt. Isti non metuunt pravis hominibus etiam de bona actione displicere, dum supernis tantummodo judiciis placeant; illi vero nunquam quid agant, sed quomodo de actione qualibet hominibus possint placere considerant. Isti juxta modum suae intelligentiae etiam in rebus saeculi militant caucausis Dei; illi vero per causas Dei intentioni deserviunt saeculi, quia inter ipsa quoque quae se agere sancta opera ostendunt, non conversionem 1008 quaerunt hominum, sed auras favorum. 25. Igitur dum quosdam non despectae conversationis viros iracunde vel nimie defendere terrena conspicimus, debemus hoc in illis per charitatem reprehendere, nec tamen eos reprehendendo desperare, quia plerumque uni eidemque homini et insunt quaedam judicabilia quae apparent, et magna quae latent. In nobis autem saepe magna in facie prodeunt, et nonnunquam quae reprehendenda sunt occultantur. Hinc ergo humilianda est nostrae mentis elatio, quod et illorum infirma sunt publica, et nostra secreta; et rursum fortia illorum secreta sunt, et in publico nostra vulgantur. Quos ergo de aperta infirmitate reprehendimus, superest ut de occultae fortitudinis aestimatione veneremur; et si de aperta se infirmitate nostra mens elevat, occulta sua infirma considerans, sese in humilitate premat. Saepe enim nonnulli multis praeceptis obsequuntur, et quaedam pauca praetereunt, et nos multa praetermittimus cum pauca servamus. Unde fit plerumque ut quia quod servare nos novimus, hoc praeterire alios videmus, illico nostra se in elatione mens elevet, obliviscens quam multa praetereat, cum valde sint pauca quae servat. Necesse est igitur ut in quibus alios reprehendimus, elationem sollicitae nostrae cogitationis inclinemus, quia si sublimiorem se caeteris noster animus conspicit, quasi in praecipitia singularitatis ductus, eo pejus ruit. Sed cur hypocrita coelestia lucra deserens terrenis elaboret, sub struthionis adhuc nomine subjungit, dicens:

CAPUT XIV [Rec. IX].

VERS. 17. Privavit eam Deus sapientia, nec dedit illi intelligentiam. 26. Deus obdurat cor, non quia duritiam confert, sed quia exigentibus peccatis, non emollit. Quamvis aliud sit privare, aliud non dare, hoc tamen repetiit subdendo, Non dedit, quod praemisit, Privavit. Ac si diceret: Quod dixi, Privavit, non injuste sapientiam abstulit, sed juste non dedit. Unde et Pharaonis cor Dominus obdurasse describitur, non quod ipse duritiam contulit, sed quod, exigentibus ejus meritis, nulla illud desuper infusi timoris sensibilitate mollivit. Sed nunc hypocrita (Exod. VII, 3), quod sanctum se simulat, quod sub imagine boni operis occultat, sanctae Ecclesiae pace premitur, et idcirco ante nestros oculos religionis visione vestitur. Si qua vero tentatio fidei erumpat, statim lupi mens rabida habitu se ovinae pellis exspoliat; quantumque contra bonos saeviat, persequens demonstrat. Unde et recte subditur:

CAPUT XV.

VERS. 18. Cum tempus fuerit, in altum alas erigit; deridet equitem et ascensorem ejus. 27. Hypocrita non solum sanctos deridet, sed Deum ipsum. Quid enim alas hujus struthionis accipimus, nisi pressas hoc tempore quasi complicatas hypocritae cogitationes? Quas cum tempus fuerit, in altum elevat? quia opportunitate comperta, eas superbiendo manifestat. Alas in altum erigere est per effrenatam superbiam cogitationes aperire. Nunc autem quia sanctum se simulat, quia in semetipso stringit quae cogitat, quasi alas in corpore 1009 per humilitatem plicat. [Vet. XII.] Notandum vero est quod non ait: Deridet equum et ascensorem, sed equitem et ascensorem ejus. Equus quippe est unicuique sanctae animae corpus suum, quod videlicet novit et ab illicitis continentiae freno restringere, et rursum charitatis impulsu in exercitatione boni operis relaxare. Equitis ergo nomine anima sancti viri exprimitur, quae jumentum corporis bene subditum regit. Unde et Joannes apostolus in Apocalypsi Dominum contemplatus ait: Et exercitus qui sunt in coelo, sequebantur eum in equis albis (Apoc. XIX, 14). Multitudinem quippe sanctorum quae in hoc martyrii bello sudaverat, recte exercitum vocat: qui idcirco in equis albis sedere referuntur, quia nimirum eorum corpora et luce justitiae et castimoniae candore claruerunt. Deridet ergo hypocrita equitem, quia cum ipse in aperto iniquitatis eruperit, electorum despicit sanctitatem, et elatus fatuos appellat, quos, pace pressus fidei, callida arte simulabat. Quis vero alius hujus ascensor est equitis, nisi Omnipotens Deus, qui et ea quae non erant praevidens condidit, et ea quae sunt possidens regit? Ascendit quippe equitem, quia justi uniuscujusque viri animum possidet, sua bene membra possidentem. Huic ergo hypocritae deridere equitem est santos despicere; deridere vero ascensorem equitis est prosilire usque ad injuriam creatoris. 28. In lapsibus a minimo incipitur, et ad graviora pervenitur. Multos malos occultos Ecclesia tolerat. Cur in Ecclesia mali bonis immisti. Rhinocerotis aut unicornis nomine judaicus populus intelligendus. Rhinoceros qua arte mitigetur. Quia enim in unoquoque lapsu a minimis semper incipitur, et succrescentibus defectibus ad graviora pervenitur, recte hypocritae hujus iniquitas per supposita detrimenta distinguitur, ut dicatur prius bonum se quod non sit ostendere, postmodum vero bonos aperte despicere, ad extremum quoque usque ad injuriam conditoris exilire. Nunquam quippe illic anima quo ceciderit jacet, quia voluntarie semel lapsa, ad pejora pondere suae iniquitatis impellitur, ut in profundum corruens, semper adhuc profundius obruatur. Eat ergo hypocrita, et nunc suas laudes appetat; postmodum vitam proximorum premat, et quandoque se in irrisione sui conditoris exerceat, ut quo elatiora semper excogitat, eo se suppliciis atrocioribus immergat. O quam multos tales nunc sancta Ecclesia tolerat, quos cum tempus eruperit, tentatio aperta manifestat. Qui voluntates suas, quia contra eam modo non exerunt, quasi complicatas interim alas cogitationum premunt. Quia enim a bonis malisque haec vita communiter ducitur, nunc Ecclesia ex utrorumque numero visibiliter congregatur, sed Deo invisibiliter judicante discernitur, atque in exitu suo a reproborum societate separatur. Modo vero esse in ea nec boni sine malis, nec mali sine bonis possunt. Hoc enim tempore conjuncta utraque pars sibi necessario congruit, ut et mali mutentur per exempla bonorum, et boni purgentur per tentamenta malorum. Atque ideo Dominus postquam sub struthionis specie multa de hypocritarum reprobatione intulit, mox ad electorum sortem verba convertit, ut qui in illis audierant quod fugientes tolerent, in istis audiant quod imitantes ament. Sequitur [Rec. X]. Nunquid praebebis equo fortitudinem, aut circumdabis collo ejus hinnitum? 29. Sed fortasse prius quam hujus equi fortitudinem 1010 hinnitumque disseramus, ab aliquibus quaeritur ut aliter etiam moralitate postposita, et rhinocerotis virtus, et struthionis hujus fatuitas exponatur. Manna quippe est verbum Dei, et quidquid bene voluntas suscipientis appetit, hoc profecto in ore comedentis sapit. (Exod. XVI). Terra est verbum Dei, quam quanto labor inquirentis exigit, tanto largius fructum reddit. Debet ergo intellectus sacri eloquii multiplici inquisitione ventilari, quia et terra, quae saepius arando vertitur, ad frugem uberius aptatur. Quae igitur et aliter de rhinocerothe ac struthione sentimus, sub brevitate perstringimus, quia ad ea quae obligatiora sunt, enodanda properamus [Vet. XIII]. Rhinoceros iste, qui etiam monoceros in Graecis exemplaribus nominatur, tantae esse fortitudinis dicitur, ut nulla venantium virtute capiatur; sed sicut hi asserunt, qui describendis naturis animalium laboriosa investigatione sudaverunt, virgo ei puella proponitur, quae ad se venienti sinum aperit, in quo ille omni ferocitate postposita caput deponit, sicque ab eis a quibus capi quaeritur, repente velut inermis [Al., enervus] invenitur. Buxei quoque coloris esse describitur, qui etiam cum elephantis quando certamen aggreditur, eo cornu quod in nare singulariter gestat, ventrem adversantium ferire perhibetur, ut cum ea quae molliora sunt vulnerat, impugnantes se facile sternat. Potest ergo per hunc rhinocerotem, vel certe monocerotem, scilicet unicornem, ille populus intelligi qui dum de accepta lege non opera, sed solam inter cunctos homines elationem sumpsit, quasi inter caeteras bestias cornu singulare gestavit. Unde passionem suam Dominus, Propheta canente, pronuntians, ait: Libera me de ore leonis, et de cornibus unicornium humilitatem meam (Psal. XXI, 22). Tot quippe in illa gente unicornes, vel certe rhinocerotes exstiterunt, quod contra praedicamenta veritatis de legis operibus, singulari et fatua elatione confisi sunt, Beato igitur Job sanctae Ecclesiae typum tenenti dicitur:

CAPUT XVI.

CAP. XXXIX, VERS. 9. Nunquid votet rhinoceros servire tibi? 30. Ex Judaeis ferox, Saulus a Christo domitus. Ac si apertius dicatur: Nunquid illum populum, quem superbire in nece fidelium stulta sua elatione consideras, sub jure tuae praedicationis inclinas? subaudis ut ego, qui et contra me illum singulari cornu extolli conspicio, et tamen mihi cum voluero protinus subdo. Sed hoc melius ostendimus, si de genere ad speciem transeamus. Ille ergo ex hoc populo et prius in superbia, et postmodum praecipuus testis in humilitate nobis ad medium Paulus ducatur, qui dum contra Deum se quasi de custodia legis nesciens extulit, cornu in nare gestavit. Unde et hoc ipsum naris cornu per humilitatem postmodum inclinans, dicit: Qui prius fui blasphemus, et persecutor, et contumeliosus; sed misericordiam consecutus sum, quia ignorans feci (I Tim. I, 13). In nare cornu gestabat, qui placiturum se Deo de crudelitate confidebat, sicut ipse postmodum semetipsum redarguens dicit: Et proficiebam in Judaismo supra multos coaetaneos meos in genere meo, abundantius aemulator existens paternarum mearum traditionum (Galat. I, 14). Hujus autem rhinocerotis fortitudinem omnis venator extimuit, quia Saulis saevitiam unusquisque praedicator expavit. Scriptum namque est: Saulus adhuc spirans minarum 1011 et coedis in discipulos Domini, accessit ad principem sacerdotum, et petiit ab eo epistolas in Damascum ad synagogas, ut si quos invenisset hujus viae viros ac mulieres, vinctos perduceret in Jerusalem (Act. IX, 1). Cum flatus nare reddendus trahitur, spiratio vocatur, et illud saepe per odorem nare deprehendimus, quod oculis non videmus. Rhinoceros ergo iste nare gestabat cornu quo percuteret, quia minarum et caedis in Domini discipulos spirans, postquam praesentes interfecerat, absentes quaerebat. Sed ecce omnis ante illum venator absconditur, id est omnis homo rationale sapiens opinione timoris ejus effugatur. Ut ergo hunc rhinocerotem capiat, sinum suum virgo, id est secretum suum ipsa per se inviolata in carne Dei sapientia expandat. Scriptum quippe est quod cum Damascum pergeret; subito circumfulsit illum die media lux de coelo, et vox facta est, dicens: Saule, Saule, quid me persequeris? Qui prostratus in terra respondit: Quis es, Domine? Cui illico dicitur: Ego sum Jesus Nazarenus, quem tu persequeris (Act. IX, 4, 5, seq.). Virgo nimirum rhinoceroti sinum suum aperuit, cum Saulo incorrupta Dei sapientia incarnationis suae mysterium de coelo loquendo patefecit; et fortitudinem suam rhinoceros perdidit, quia prostratus humi, omne quod superbum tumebat amisit. Qui dum, sublato oculorum lumine, manu ad Ananiam ducitur, patet jam rhinoceros iste, quibus Dei loris astringitur, quia videlicet uno in tempore caecitate, praedicatione, baptismate ligatur. Qui etiam ad Dei praesaepe moratus est, quia ruminare verba Evangelii dedignatus non est. Ait enim: Ascendi Jerosolymam cum Barnaba, assumpto et Tito. Ascendi autem secundum revelationem, et contuli cum illis Evangelium (Galat. II, 1, 2). Et qui prius jejunus audierat: Durum est tibi contra stimulum calcitrare (Act. IX, 9, 5): mira postmodum virtute praesidentis pressus, ex verbi pabulo vires obtinuit, et calcem superbiae amisit. 31. Iste rhinoceros ad agrum dominicum arandum ligatus Loris quoque Dei non tantum a feritate restringitur, sed quod magis sit mirabile, ad arandum ligatur, ut non solum homines crudelitatis cornu non impetat, sed eorum etiam refectioni serviens, aratrum praedicationis trahat. Ipse quippe de evangelizantibus quasi de arantibus dicit: Debet enim in spe qui arat arare; et qui triturat, in spe fructus percipiendi (I Cor. IX, 10). Qui igitur tormenta prius fidelibus irrogaverat, et pro fide postmodum flagella libenter portat, qui scriptis etiam epistolis humilis ac despectus praedicat, quod dudum terribilis impugnabat; profecto bene ligatus sub aratro desudat ad segetem, qui vivebat in campo male liber a timore. De quo recte dicitur:

CAPUT XVII [Vet. XIV].

VERS. 10. Aut confringet glebas vallium post te? 32. Glebas hoc est mentium duritiam fregit. Jam scilicet Dominus quorumdam mentes intraverat, qui illum veraciter humani generis redemptorem credebant. Qui tamen cum nequaquam a pristina observatione recederent, cum dura litterae praedicamenta custodirent, eis praedicator egregius dicit: Si circumcidamini, Christus vobis nihil proderit (Gal. V, 2). Qui ergo in humili mente fidelium legis duritiam redarguendo contrivit, quid aliud quam in valle post Dominum glebas fregit? ne videlicet grana seminum quae excisus aratro fidei sulcus cordis exciperet per custodiam litterae 1012 pressa deperirent. De quo bene adhuc subditur:

CAPUT XVIII.

VERS. 11. Nunquid fiduciam habebis in magna fortitudine ejus, et derelinques ei labores tuos? 33. In ejus fortitudine quam Deus fiduciam habuerit. In rhinocerotis hujus fortitudine fiduciam Deus habuit, quia quanto illum crudelius sibi dura inferentem pertulit, tanto pro se constantius tolerantem adversa praescivit. Cui labores etiam quos ipse in carne pertulerat dereliquit, quia conversum illum usque ad imitationem propriae passionis traxit. Unde et per eumdem rhinocerotem dicitur: Suppleo ea quae desunt passionum Christi in carne mea (Coloss. I, 24). De quo adhuc subditur:

CAPUT XIX.

VERS. 12. Nunquid credes illi quod reddat sementem tibi, et aream tuam congreget? 34. Arcam Dei prius ventilavit, postea congregavit. Consideremus Saulum quis fuerit, cum ab ipsa adolescentia lapidantium adjutor existeret, cum alia Ecclesiae loca vastaret, et acceptis epistolis vastanda alia peteret, cum mors ei fidelium nulla sufficeret, sed semper ad aliorum interitum aliis exstinctis anhelaret (Act. VII); et profecto cognoscimus quia nullus tunc fidelium crederet, quod ad jugum Deus suae formidinis vim tantae elationis inclinaret. Unde et Ananias voce dominica hunc et postquam conversum audivit, extimuit, dicens: Domine, audivi a multis de viro hoc quanta mala sanctis tuis fecerit in Jerusalem (Act. IX, 13). Qui tamen repente commutatus, ab hoste praedicator efficitur, et in cunctis mundi partibus Redemptoris sui nomen insinuat, supplicia pro veritate tolerat, pati se quae irrogaverat exsultat; alios blandimentis vocat, alios ad fidem terroribus revocat. Istis regnum pollicetur coelestis patriae, illis minatur ignem gehennae. Hos per auctoritatem corrigit, illos ad viam rectitudinis per humilitatem trahit, atque in omni latere ad manum se sui rectoris inclinat, et tanta arte Dei aream congregat, quanta illam prius elatione ventilabat. [Vet. XV] 35. Paulus abstinentia corpus castigans, ventri deditos ferit. Sed neque hoc abhorret a Paulo, quod rhinoceros buxei coloris dicitur, et elephantorum ventres cornu ferire perhibetur. Quia enim vivere sub rigore legis assuevit, arctius caeteris in illo custodia uniuscujusque virtutis inolevit Quid enim per colorem buxeum, nisi abstinentiae pallor exprimitur? Cui ipse se tenaciter adhaerere testatur, dicens: Castigo corpus meum, et servituti subjicio, ne forte aliis praedicans ipse reprobus efficiar (I Cor. IX, 27). Qui divinae legis eruditione praeditus, dum aliorum ingluviem redarguit, cornu elephantes in ventrem ferit. In ventrem quippe elephantes percusserat, cum dicebat: Multi ambulant, quos saepe dicebam vobis; nunc autem et flens dico, inimicos crucis Christi, quorum finis interitus, quorum deus venter est, et gloria in confusione ipsorum (Philip. III, 18). Et rursum: Hujusmodi Christo Domino non serviunt, sed suo ventri (Rom. XVI, 18). Cornu suo igitur rhinoceros iste non jam homines, sed bestias percutit, quando illa Paulus doctrinae suae fortitudine nequaquam perimendos humiles impetit, sed superbos ventris cultores occidit. Quae ergo in Paulo scripta cognovimus, superest ut facta et in aliis credamus. Multi quippe ad humilitatis gratiam ex illius populi elatione conversi sunt, quorum saevitiam Dominus dum sub jugo inspirati timoris edomuit, nimirum rhinocerotis sibi fortitudinem subegit. Sed quia mira Dei 1013 potentia quid de electis egerit audivimus, nunc mira ejus patientia in his quos reprobat quid toleraverit audiamus:

CAPUT XX.

VERS. 13. Penna struthionis similis est pennis herodii et accipitris. 36. Synagoga struthioni similis, alas habens humi repit. Quid struthionis nomine, nisi synagoga signatur? quae alas Legis habuit, sed corde in infimis repens, nunquam se a terra sublevavit. Quid vero per herodium et accipitrem, nisi antiqui patres exprimuntur, qui ad ea quae potuerunt intelligendo perspicere, valuerunt etiam vivendo pervolare? Penna igitur struthionis, herodii et accipitris pennis est similis, quia Synagogae vox priorum doctrinam loquendo tenuit, sed vivendo nescivit. Unde et ejusdem Synagogae populos de Pharisaeis atque Scribis Veritas admonet, dicens: Super cathedram Moysi sederunt Scribae et Pharisaei. Omnia ergo quaecunque dixerint vobis, servate et facite, secundum opera vero eorum nolite facere (Matth. XXIII, 2). Multa autem dicere de herodii vita potuimus; sed quia penna ejus tantummodo ad memoriam deducitur, de vita loqui prohibemur.

CAPUT XXI [Vet. XVI].

VERS. 14.Quando derelinquit in terra ova sua, tu forsitan in pulvere calefacies ea? 37. Quos genuit apostolos dereliquit, Christi gratia postea vivificatos. In ovis aliud est quod cernitur, aliud quod speratur; et videri spes non potest, Paulo attestante qui ait: Quod enim videt quis, quid sperat (Rom. VIII, 24)? Quid ergo per struthionis ova nisi de Synagogae carne editi apostoli designantur, qui dum se in mundo despectos atque humiles exhibent, sperare gloriam in supernis docent? Abjecti namque et quasi nullius momenti apud elatos habiti, in terra velut ova jacuerunt; sed intus in eis latebat unde viverent, et sublevati spei pennis ad coelestia volarent. Quae ova struthio in terra derelinquit, quia eos quos carne genuerat Synagoga apostolos audire contemnens, vocandae gentilitati deseruit. Mira autem potentia Dominus haec eadem in pulvere ova calefacit, quia vivos apostolorum fetus in illa abjecta dudum gentilitate suscitavit; et quos synagoga velut insensatos invivificatosque despexerat, ipsi nunc in veneratione gentium per doctrinae magisterium viventes volant. Ova sua struthio in pulvere derelinquit, quia omnes quos praedicando Synagoga genuit, a terrenis desideriis minime suspendit. Quae nimirum desideria quia antiquus hostis concepta in corde invenit, obsessas mentes etiam in scelera rapit. Unde et subditur:

CAPUT XXII.

VERS. 15. Obliviscitur quod pes conculcet ea, et bestia agri conterat. 38. Humana corda, dum terrena cogitant et appetunt, diabolo conterenda se sternunt. Tunc ova pes calcat, et bestia agri conterit, cum in terra deseruntur, quia videlicet humana corda dum semper terrena cogitare, semper quae ima sunt agere appetunt, ad conterendum se agri bestiae, id est diabolo, sternunt. ut cum diu in infima cogitatione abjecta sunt, quandoque etiam majorum criminum perpetratione frangantur. Synagoga ergo ova quae genuit, a terra suspendere bene vivendo neglexit. Sed omnipotens Deus multos ejus filios, quamvis in terrenis desideriis mortuos ac frigidos reperit, calore tamen sui amoris animavit. Sed vitam, quam filiis synagoga non dedit, 1014 hanc postmodum invidit, dum moliretur persequendo exstinguere quos se ad bona opera non meminerat fovendo genuisse. Unde et apte de hoc struthione subditur: VERS. 16. Duratur ad filios suos quasi non sint sui. 39. Synagogae in filios crudelitas. Quasi non suos despicit quos aliter vivere quam docuit ipsa deprehendit, et durescente saevitia terrores admovet, seque in eorum cruciatibus exercet, atque invidiae facibus inflammata, in quibus non laboravit ut possint vivere, laborat ut debeant interire; et cum Domini membra persequitur, placere se per hoc Domino suspicatur. Unde et eisdem struthionis ovis Veritas dicit: Venit hora ut omnis qui interficit vos arbitretur obsequium se praesture Deo (Joan. XVI, 2). Quia ergo dum crudelitate ad persequendum Synagoga ducitur, hoc se agere impulsu divini timoris arbitratur, recte subjungitur: IBID. Frustra laboravit, nullo timore cogente. 40. Sic saeviens obsequium praestare Deo credit. In labore quippe illam persecutionis anhelare non timor, sed crudelitas coegit. Sed quia plerumque vitia, colore virtutum tincta, tanto nequiora sunt, quanto et esse vitia minime cognoscuntur, eo in persecutione synagoga durior exstitit, quo religiosiorem se fieri fidelium mortibus aestimavit; et idcirco quae ageret discernere omnino non potuit, quia lumen sibi intelligentiae per superbiae objectionem clausit. Unde et bene subditur: VERS. 17. Privavit eam Deus sapientia, nec dedit illi intelligentiam. 41. Intelligentiae lumen per superbiam amisit. Districtum quippe est occultae retributionis examen, et quia sciens humilitatem perdidit, etiam veritatis intelligentiam nesciens amisit. Valde autem minora sunt vulnera quae in Redemptoris adventu fidelibus intulit, quam ea quibus sanctam Ecclesiam adhuc per adventum Antichristi ferire contendit. Ad illud namque se tempus praeparat, ut vitam fidelium coacervatis viribus premat. Unde et apte subditur:

CAPUT XXIII [Vet. XVII].

VERS. 18. Cum tempus fuerit, in altum alas erigit; deridet equitem et ascensorem ejus. 42. Synagoga prius contra Deum clam, postea palam erecta. In altum struthio alas erigit, quando suo conditori Synagoga non ut antea formidando, sed aperte jam repugnando contradicit. In membra quippe diaboli transiens, et mendacii hominem Deum credens, contra fideles tanto in altum extollitur, quanto et Dei corpus se esse gloriatur. Quae quia non solum humanitatem Domini, sed ipsam etiam divinitatem despicit, non tantum equitem, sed ascensorem etiam equitis irridet. Nam custodita unitate personae valet intelligi, quia Verbum Dei tunc equitem ascendit, quando animatam carnem sibi intra uterum Virginis condidit. Tunc equitem ascendit, quando humanam animam propriae carni praesidentem, divino cultui semetipsum creando subjugavit. Carnem quippe divinitas anima mediante suscepit, et per hoc totum simul equitem tenuit, quia in semetipso non solum illam quae regebatur, sed hanc etiam quae regebat astrinxit. Judaea igitur, per adventum superbientis Antichristi laqueo seductionis capta, quia Redemptorem nostrum humilem fuisse inter homines despicit, 1015 deridet equitem, quia vero ejus in omnibus divinitati contradicit, deridet nihilominus et ascensorem. Sed Redemptor noster unus idemque et eques, et equitis est ascensor; et cum in mundum venit, fortes contra mundum praedicatores exhibuit; et cum in mundi termino Antichristi fallaciam tolerat, virtutem pro se certantibus subministrat; ut cum antiquus hostis in illa sua citius finienda libertate laxatur, fideles nostri tanto majores vires accipiant, quanto contra adversarium solutum pugnant. Unde hic cum struthio alas elevare, ascensorem et equitem deridere describitur, illico fortium praedicatorum memoria subrogatur, et dicitur:

CAPUT XXIV [Vet XVIII].

VERS. 19. Nunquid praebebis equo fortitudinem, aut circumdabis collo ejus hinnitum? 43. Equi nomine multa in Scriptura sacra significantur: lubrici; dignitas temporalis; praesens saeculum, cujus extrema premit coluber Antichristus. Praeparatio rectae intentionis; sancti praedicatores. In Scriptura sacra equi nomine aliquando lubrica vita pravorum, aliquando dignitas temporalis, aliquando hoc ipsum praesens saeculum, aliquando praeparatio rectae intentionis, aliquando sanctus praedicator exprimitur. Equi enim nomine lubrica pravorum vita signatur, sicut scriptum est: Nolite fieri sicut equus et mulus (Psal. XXXI, 9). Et sicut per prophetam alium dicitur: Equi amatores, et emissarii facti sunt, unusquisque ad uxorem proximi sui hinniebat (Jerem. V, 8). Equi nomine dignitas temporalis accipitur, Salomone attestante, qui ait: Vidi servos in equis, et principes ambulantes quasi servos super terram (Eccle. X, 7). Omnis quippe qui peccat servus est peccati, et servi in equis sunt cum peccatores praesentis vitae dignitatibus efferuntur. Principes vero quasi servi ambulant, cum multos dignitate virtutum plenos nullus honor erigit, sed summa hic adversitas velut indignos deorsum premit. Hinc rursum dicitur: Dormitaverunt qui ascenderunt equos (Psal. LXXV, 7); id est, in morte animae mentis oculos a veritatis luce clauserunt, qui in praesentis vitae honore confisi sunt. Equi nomine hoc ipsum praesens saeculum designatur, sicut Jacob voce dicitur: Fiat Dan coluber in via cerastes in semita, mordens ungulas equi, ut cadat ascensor ejus retro (Genes. XLIX, 17). Quo in testimonio quid equus significet melius ostendimus, si et ea quae circumstant paulo subtilius exponamus. Nonnulli enim de tribu Dan venire Antichristum ferunt, pro eo quod hoc loco Dan et coluber asseritur et mordens. Unde et non immerito dum Israeliticus populus terras in castrorum partitione susciperet, primus Dan ad Aquilonem castrametatus est (Num. II, 25); illum scilicet signans, qui in corde suo dixerat: Sedebo in monte testamenti, in lateribus Aquilonis; ascendam super altitudinem nubium, similis ero Altissimo (Isai. XIV, 13). De quo et per prophetam dicitur: A Dan auditus est fremitus equorum ejus (Jerem. VIII, 16). Qui non solum coluber, sed etiam cerastes vocatur. Κέρατα enim Graece cornua Latine dicuntur, serpensque hic cornutus esse perhibetur, per quem digne Antichristi adventus asseritur, quia contra fidelium vitam cum morsu pestiferae praedicationis armatur etiam cornibus potestatis. Quis autem nesciat semitam angustiorem esse quam viam? Fit ergo Dan coluber in via, quia in praesentis vitae latitudine eos ambulare provocat, quibus quasi parcendo blanditur; 1016 sed in via mordet, quia eos quibus libertatem tribuit, erroris sui veneno consumit. Fit cerastes in semita, quia quos fideles reperit, et sese ad praecepti coelestis angusta itinera constringentes, non solum nequitia callidae persuasionis impetit, sed etiam terrore potestatis premit, et in persecutionis angore, post beneficia fictae dulcedinis, exercet cornua potestatis. Quo in loco equus hunc mundum insinuat, qui per elationem suam in cursu labentium temporum spumat. Et quia Antichristus extrema mundi apprehendere nititur, cerastes iste equi ungulas mordere perhibetur. Ungulas quippe equi mordere est extrema saeculi feriendo contingere. Ut cadat ascensor ejus retro (Genes. XLIX, 17). Ascensor equi est quisquis extollitur in dignitatibus mundi. Qui retro cadere dicitur, et non in faciem, sicut Saulus cecidisse memoratur (Act. IX, 4). In faciem enim cadere est in hac vita suas unumquemque culpas agnoscere, easque poenitendo deflere. Retro vero quo non videtur, cadere, est ex hac vita repente decedere, et ad quae supplicia ducatur ignorare. Et quia Judaea erroris sui laqueis capta, pro Christo Antichristum expectat, bene Jacob eodem loco repente in electorum voce conversus est, dicens: Salutare tuum exspectabo, Domine (Genes. XLIX, 18); id est, non sicut infideles Antichristum, sed eum qui in redemptionem nostram venturus est, verum credo fideliter Christum. Equi nomine praeparatio rectae intentionis accipitur, sicut scriptum est: Equus paratur in diem belli, sed Dominus salutem tribuit (Prov. XXI, 31), quia contra tentationem quidem se animus praeparat, sed nisi adjuvetur, salubriter non decertat. Equi nomine sanctus quisque praedicator accipitur, propheta attestante, qui ait: Misisti in mare equos tuos, turbantes aquas multas (Habac. III, 15). Quietae quippe aquae jacuerunt, quia humanae mentes diu vitiorum suorum torpore sopitae sunt. Sed equis Dei mare turbatum est, quia missis sanctis praedicatoribus, omne cor quod pestifera securitate torpuit, impulsu salutiferi timoris expavit. Hoc itaque loco equi nomine sanctus praedicator accipitur, cum beato Job dicitur: [Vet. XIX, Rec. XI.] Nunquid praebebis equo fortitudinem, aut circumdabis collo ejus hinnitum? 44. Praedicator tanquam equus habeat a Deo fortitudinem, ut recte agat; et hinnitum, ut optime doceat.Sed quid est quod huic equo Dominus se prius dare fortitudinem, et postmodum collo ejus hinnitum circumdare asserit? Hinnitu enim vox praedicationis exprimitur. Verus autem quisque praedicator ante fortitudinem, et postmodum hinnitum accipit, quia cum in se prius vitia exstinxerit, tunc pro erundiendis aliis ad vocem praedicationis venit. Equus iste habet fortitudinem, quia adversa constanter tolerat. Habet hinnitum, quia ad superna blandiens vocat. Huic equo Dominus et fortitudinem et hinnitum se dare testatur, quia in praedicatore ejus nisi et vita et sermo convenerint, nequaquam virtus perfectionis apparebit. Non enim multum prodest si sublimis vitae operatione suffultus sit, si tamen loquendo non valet ad hoc alios excitare quod sentit. Vel quid prodest bene loquendo alios accendere, si semetipsum indicat male vivendo torpuisse? Quia ergo in praedicatore necesse est ut ad perfectionem 1017 utraque conveniant, equo suo Dominus et cum actionis fortitudine hinnitum vocis et cum hinnitu vocis fortitudinem ministrat actionis. Et notandum cur hinnitus, qui interius nimirum per guttur ducitur, equi collo circumdari, id est quasi per gyrum trahi exterius, dicatur, quia videlicet praedicationis vox de internis emanat, sed extra circumdat. Nam quo alios ad bene vivendum suscitat, eo ad bene agendum et opera praedicantis ligat, ne extra sermonem actio transeat, ne voci vita contradicat. Collo ergo equi hinnitus circumducitur, quia ne ad perversa opera prodeat, suis vocibus etiam vita praedicantis obsidetur. Hinc est enim quod potenter dimicantibus in munere torques datur, ut quia signa virtutum gestant, majora semper exerceant, et debilitatis crimen incurrere metuant, dum in semetipsis jam fortitudinis est praemium, quod ostentant. Unde recte in laude sapientiae auditori cuilibet per Salomonem dicitur: Coronam gratiarum accipies capiti tuo, et torquem auream collo tuo (Prov. I, 9). Sequitur:

CAPUT XXV [Rec. XII].

VERS. 20. Nunquid suscitabis eum quasi locustas? 45. Per locustas quae debeant intelligi. Judaicus populus. Saltus quosdam dedit, et in terram statim cecidit. Locustarum nomine aliquando Judaicus populus, aliquando conversa gentilitas, aliquando adulantium lingua, aliquando vero per comparationem resurrectio dominica, vel praedicatorum vita signatur. Quia enim Judaeorum populum locustae exprimant, vita Joannis signat, de quo scriptum est: Locustas et mel silvestre edebat (Matth. III, 4). Joannes quippe eum quem prophetiae auctoritate pronuntiat, etiam specie ciborum clamat. In semetipso enim designavit Dominum, quem praevenit. Qui nimirum in redemptionem nostram veniens, quia infructuosae gentilitatis dulcedinem sumpsit, mel silvestre edit. Quia vero Judaeorum plebem in suo corpore ex parte convertit, in cibo locustas accepit. Ipsos namque locustae significant subitos saltus dantes, sed protinus ad terram cadentes. Saltus enim dabant cum praecepta Domini se implere promitterent; sed citius ad terram cadebant, cum per prava opera haec se audisse denegarent. Videamus in eis quasi quemdam locustarum saltum: Omnia verba quae locutus est Dominus, et faciemus et audiemus (Exod. XXIV, 3). Videamus autem quomodo citius ad terram ruunt: Utinam mortui essemus in Aegypto, et non in hac vasta solitudine. Utinam pereamus, et non inducat nos Dominus in terram istam (Num. XIV, 3). Locustae ergo erant, quia habebant saltum per vocem, et casum per actionem. [Vet. XX.] 46. Gentiles locustis significati, et adulantium linguae quae bonorum operum fructus devastant.Locustarum quoque nomine gentilitas designatur, Salomone attestante, qui ait: Florebit amygdalus, impinguabitur locusta, dissipabitur capparis (Eccle. XII, 5). Amygdalus quippe florem prius cunctis arboribus ostendit. Et quid in flore amygdali nisi sanctae Ecclesiae primordia designantur? quae in praedicatoribus suis primitivos virtutum flores aperuit, et ad inferenda poma bonorum operum, venturos sanctos, quasi arbusta sequentia praevenit. In qua mox locusta impinguata est, quia sicca gentilitatis sterilitas pinguedine est gratiae coelestis infusa. Capparis dissipatur, quia cum gratiam fidei vocata gentilitas attigit, Judaea, in sua sterilitate remanens, bene vivendi ordinem amisit. Hinc rursum per eumdem Salomonem dicitur: Regem 1018 locusta non habet, et egreditur universa per turmas suas (Prov. XXX, 27), quia videlicet derelicta gentilitas aliena dudum a divino regimine exstitit, sed tamen ordinata postmodum contra adversantes spiritus ad fidei bellum processit. 47. Locustae vocabulo lingua adulantis exprimitur: quod exhibitae coelitus Aegyptiae plagae testantur, quae exigentibus meritis corporaliter semel illatae sunt; sed quae mala pravas mentes quotidie feriant, spiritaliter signaverunt. Scriptum namque est: Ventus urens levabat locustas, quae ascenderunt super universam terram Aegypti, operueruntque universam faciem terrae, vastantes omnia. Devorata est igitur herba terrae, et quidquid pomorum in arboribus fuit (Exod. X, 13, 14). His enim Aegyptus plagis affecta est, in quibus, exteriori percussione commota, dolensque, perpenderet quae devastationis damna interius negligens toleraret, ut dum foris perire minima, sed amplius dilecta cerneret, per eorum speciem quae intus pertulerat graviora sentiret. Quid autem per significationem locustae portendunt, quae plus quam caetera minima quaeque animantia humanis frugibus nocent, nisi linguas adulantium, quae terrenorum hominum mentes, si quando bona aliqua proferre conspiciunt, haec immoderatius laudando corrumpunt? Fructus quippe Aegyptiorum est operatio cenodoxorum ; quam locustae exterminant, dum adulantes linguae ad appetendas laudes transitorias cor operantis inclinant. Herbam vero locustae comedunt, quando adulatores quique verba loquentium favoribus extollunt. Poma quoque arborum devorant, quando vanis laudibus quorumdam jam quasi fortium et opera enervant. 48. Locusta significat etiam Christi resurrectionem, et praedicatores, qui modo ad contemplativam vitam saliunt, modo resiliunt. Locustae nomine per comparationem Redemptoris nostri resurrectio designatur. [Vet. XXI.] Unde et voce ejus per Prophetam dicitur: Excussus sum sicut locusta (Psal. CVIII, 23). Teneri enim se a persecutoribus usque ad mortem pertulit; sed sicut locusta excussus est, quia ab eorum manibus saltu subitae resurrectionis evolavit.

49. Quod referri quoque ad praedicatorum numerum potest. In ipsis quippe sicut locusta excussus est, quia Judaea in sua persecutione saeviente, dum per diversa fugiunt, quasi quosdam recessionis suae saltus dederunt. Quia vero ille praedicator ad perfectionis culmen erigitur, qui non activa solummodo, sed etiam contemplativa vita solidatur, recte ipsa praedicatorum perfectio locustis exprimitur, quae quoties se in aera attollere conantur, primum se cruribus impellentes sublevant, et postmodum alis volant. Ita nimirum sunt sancti viri, qui dum superna appetunt, primum quidem activae vitae bonis operibus innituntur, et tunc demum se ad sublimia per contemplationis saltum volando suspendunt. Crura figunt, et alas exerunt, quia recte agendo se stabiliunt, et ad alta vivendo sublevantur. Qui in hac vita positi, diu in divina contemplatione manere non possunt, sed, quasi locustarum more, a saltu quem dederant in pedibus suis se excipiunt, dum post contemplationum sublimia ad necessaria activae vitae opera revertuntur, nec tamen in eadem vita activa remanere contenti sunt. Sed dum ad contemplationem desideranter exsiliunt, quasi rursus aera volantes 1019 petunt; vitamque suam quasi locustae ascendentes descendentesque peragunt, dum sine cessatione semper et summa videre ambiunt, et ad semetipsos naturae corruptibilis pondere revolvuntur. 50. In pace Ecclesiae humiles, in persecutione fortes et erecti. Est adhuc aliud quod locustae simile sanctis praedicatoribus gerunt. Matutinis namque horis, id est teporis tempore vix a terra se sublevant; cum vero aestus exarserit, tanto altius, quanto alacrius volant. Sanctus autem quisque praedicator dum quieta fidei tempora conspicit, humilis ac despectus aspicitur, et locustae more quasi vix a terra sublevatur. Si autem persecutionis ardor incaleat, corde coelestibus inhaerens, mox quantae sit sublimitatis ostendit; et pulsatus alis in altum rapitur, qui quietus in imis torpuisse videbatur. De hoc ergo equo, id est praedicatore suo, beato Job Dominus dicit: Nunquid suscitabis eum quasi locustas? Subaudis ut ego, qui eo illum ad altiora excitando sublevo, quo graviore persecutionis aestu excruciari permitto, ut tunc in illo robustior virtus evigilet, cum se ei ardentior infidelium crudelitas illidit. Sed cum multa exterius sanctus praedicator patitur, cum dira persequentium vexatione cruciatur, quis intueri valet quid est quod intus conspicit, qui tot sua exterius damna non sentit? Nisi enim essent mira quae salubriter intus pascerent, ea procul dubio quae admoventur exterius usque ad cor tormenta pervenirent. Sed in arce spei se animus sublevat, et idcirco objectae obsidionis jacula minime formidat. Unde et hoc loco Dominus, ut ostendat equus iste quam suavia jam de internis odoretur, cum tot adversa in exterioribus patitur, recte subjungit:

CAPUT XXVI.

IBID. Gloria narium ejus terror. 51. Cum tot exterius adversa patiuntur, mira interius de aeterna beatitudine odorantur. In Scriptura sacra vocabulo narium aliquando fatuitas, aliquando antiqui hostis instigatio, aliquando vero praescientia solet intelligi. Naribus namque fatuitas designatur, sicut jam superius Salomone attestante docuimus qui ait: Circulus aureus in naribus suis mulier pulchra et fatua (Prov. XI, 22). Narium nomine exhalantes insidiae atque instigatio antiqui hostis accipitur, quod in hoc eodem libro de illo Dominus attestatur, dicens: De naribus ejus procedit fumus (Job. XLI, 11). Ac si dicat: De perversa instigatione illius in humanis cordibus caligo nequissimae cogitationis surgit, per quam videntium oculi tenebrescunt. Naribus quoque praescientia designatur, sicut per prophetam dicitur: Quiescite ab homine, cujus spiritus est in naribus ejus, quia excelsus reputatus est ipse (Isai. II, 22). Saepe enim id quod non videmus odore comprehendimus, ita ut nonnullae res etiam cum longe jaceant fragrantia nobis suae qualitatis innotescant, dumque per nares spiritum ducimus, plerumque aliqua et invisa praescimus. Redemptoris ergo nostri spiritus esse in ejus naribus dicitur, ut videlicet scientia illius esse in praescientia designetur, quia quaecunque se scire in natura humanitatis innotuit, haec nimirum ante saecula ex divinitate praescivit. Qui unde spiritum in naribus 1020 habuerit, mox per prophetam subjunxit, dicens: Quia excelsus reputatus est ipse (Isai. II, 22). Ac si diceret: In inferioribus ventura desuper praescivit, quia ad ima de coelestibus venit. Sancti etiam viri, quia ab illo audita crediderunt, ipsi quoque jam ventura praesciunt; dumque ejus fideliter praeceptis inserviunt, adventum illius spe certa praestolantur. Unde et hoc loco equi hujus naribus, praedicatoris sancti praescientia ac praestolatio designatur. Dum enim venire extremum judicium, ostendi coelestem patriam, persolvi justis praemia appetit, quasi per nares spiritum de futuris trahit. 52. Unde gloriatur justus, terretur peccator. Sed gloria narium ejus terror est, quia visionem districti judicis, quam justus vehementer exspectat, injustus venire formidat. Iste namque labores suos considerans, mercedem retributionis quaerit; et causae suae meritum sciens, praesentiam judicis expetit, eumque ut veniat in flamma ignis, dans vindictam impiis, et contemplationis suae speciem in retributionem deferens piis, summo ardore concupiscit. Ille vero qui injustitiae suae meminit, venire in judicium perhorrescit, actusque suos examinari metuit, quia damnari se, si examinentur, novit. Gloria ergo narium ejus terror est, quia justus inde gloriatur, unde peccator addicitur. Videamus equum quomodo de his quae adhuc non videt jam per nares spiritum trahit, videamus quanta gloria attollitur cum jam ventura praestolatur. Ecce labores suos intuens praedicator egregius dicit: Ego jam delibor, et tempus meae resolutionis instat. Bonum certamen certavi, cursum consummavi, fidem servavi. De reliquo reposita est mihi corona justitiae quam reddet mihi Dominus in illa die justus judex (II Tim. IV, 6, 7, 8). Ubi et apte subjungit: Non solum autem mihi, sed et his qui diligunt adventum ejus (Ibid., 8). Ac si dicat: Sed et omnibus qui sibi de bona operatione sunt conscii. Adventum enim judicis non diligunt, nisi qui in causa sua se habere justitiae meritum sciunt. Quia igitur unde gloriatur justus, inde terretur injustus, dicatur recte Gloria narium ejus terror. Sed sanctus iste praedicator, dum venturam gloriam praestolatur, dum venire ante faciem judicis nititur, dumque a laboris sui adhuc mercede differtur, in hac vita interim positus quid agat audiamus. Sequitur:

CAPUT XXVII [Rec. XIII].

VERS. 21. Terram ungula fodit. 53. Praedicatoris officium est, in auditoribus et in scripto terrenas cogitationes effodere. Solet in equi ungula laboris fortitudo cognosci. Quid ergo per ungulam nisi in praedicatore sancto virtutum perfectio designatur? Qua videlicet ungula terram fodit, cum de corde audientium exemplo suorum operum terrenas cogitationes ejicit. Ungula terram fodit, quia auditorum corda a saecularibus curis evacuat, cum doctor bonus contemni saeculum opere ostentat. Videamus Paulum terram cordis audientium qua ostensae virtutis ungula fodiat. Ipse namque discipulis dicit: Haec cogitate, quae et didicistis et accepistis et audistis et vidistis in me, haec agite, et Deus pacis erit vobiscum (Philip. IV, 8, 9, 10). Et rursum: Imitatores mei estote, fratres, sicut et ego Christi (Ibid., III, 17). Qui igitur exemplo sui operis alios corrigit, nimirum ungula 1021 terram fodit. [Vet. XXII.] Habemus aliud quod adhuc subtilius de hujus ungulae effossione tractemus. Sancti enim viri quamvis intento mentis oculo in superna evigilent, quamvis cuncta quae in ima praeterfluunt pede rigidi contemptus calcent; ex corruptione tamen terrenae carnis, cui adhuc illigati sunt, plerumque cogitationum pulverem in corde patiuntur. Cumque foris aliis ad appetenda coelestia persuadent, semetipsos semper intrinsecus subtili inquisitione discutiunt, ne qua immorante in se diu infima cogitatione polluantur. Equus ergo iste ungula terram fodit cum praedicator quisque inquisitione forti terrenas in se cogitationes discutit. Equus ungula terram fodit quando is cui jam Dominus praesidet quae sibi moles congeritur ex vetusta cogitatione considerat, seque ab illa flendo evacuare non cessat. Unde bene et Isaac apud alienam gentem puteos fodisse describitur (Genes. XXVI). Quo videlicet exemplo discimus ut in hac peregrinationis aerumna positi, cogitationum nostrarum profunda penetremus; et quousque nobis verae intelligentiae aqua respondeat, nequaquam nostrae inquisitionis manus ab exhaurienda cordis terra torpescat. Quos tamen puteos allophyli insidiantes replent (Ibid.), quia nimirum immundi spiritus cum nos studiose cor fodere conspiciunt, congestas nobis tentationum cogitationes ingerunt. Unde semper meus evacuanda est, incessanterque fodienda: ne si indiscussa relinquitur, usque ad tumorem perversorum operum, cogitationum super nos terra cumuletur. Hinc ad Ezechielem dicitur: Fili hominis, fode parietem (Ezech. VIII, 8); id est, cordis duritiam crebris perscrutationum ictibus rumpe. Hinc ad Isaiam Dominus dicit: Ingredere in petram, abscondere fossa humo, a facie timoris Domini, et a gloria majestatis ejus (Isai. II, 10). Petram quippe ingredimur, cum cordis nostri duritiam penetramus; atque a facie timoris Domini fossa humo abscondimur, si terrenas cogitationes egerentes ab ira districti judicis in humilitate nostrae mentis celamur. Quo enim plus terra fodiendo projicitur, eo pavimentum semper inferius demonstratur. Unde et nos si a nobis studiosius terrenas cogitationes ejicimus, quo apud nosmetipsos abscondamur, humilius invenimus. 54. De imminente judicii die S. Gregorii sententia.Ecce enim quia divini judicii dies imminet, quasi ipsa jam timoris ejus facies apparet; tantoque magis necesse est ut unusquisque illum terribilius timeat, quanto jam gloria majestatis ejus appropinquat. Quid ergo agendum est, quove fugiendum? Quo enim quis latere potest eum qui ubique est? Sed ecce petram ingredi, fossa humo occultari praecipimur, ut videlicet cordis nostri duritiam dirumpentes, eo iram invisibilem declinemus, quo ab amore rerum visibilium apud nosmetipsos in corde subtrahimur, ut cum pravae cogitationis terra ejicitur, mens apud semetipsam tanto tutius quanto et humilius abscondatur (Deut. XXIII, 12). Hinc Israelitico populo per Moysen a Domino jubetur, ut cum egreditur ad requisita naturae, mittat paxillum in balteo, et fossa humo abscondat quae egesta fuerint. Naturae enim corruptibilis pondere gravati, a mentis nostrae utero quaedam cogitationum superflua quasi ventris gravamina erumpunt. Sed portare paxillum sub balteo debemus, ut videlicet ad reprehendendos nosmetipsos semper accincti, 1022 acutum circa nos stimulum compunctionis habeamus, qui incessanter terram mentis nostrae poenitentiae dolore confodiat, et hoc quod a nobis fetidum erumpit abscondat. Ventris quippe egestio fossa humo per paxillum tegitur, cum mentis nostrae superfluitas subtili redargutione discussa, ante Dei oculos, per compunctionis suae stimulum celatur. Quia igitur sancti viri quaecunque inutilia cogitant reprehendere ac dijudicare non cessant, de equo suo Dominus dicat: Terram ungula fodit, id est quidquid in mente sua terrenum versari conspicit, hoc nimirum superductae poenitentiae duris percussionibus rumpit. Cum vero se interius districta subtilitate dijudicant, jam nihil est quod exterius pertimescant. Tanto enim minus ad mala praesentia trepidant, quanto semetipsos plenius bonis venturis parant. Unde et subditur:

CAPUT XXVIII [Vet.

XXIII, Rec. XIV]. Ibid. Exsultat audacter, in occursum pergit armatis. 55. Sanctum virum nec adversa dejiciunt, nec prospera corrumpunt. Apostolorum inter flagella exsultatio, in primis Pauli. Haeretici potestatum saecularium patrocinium ambiunt. Infractae virtutis est rerum terrenarum contemptus. Exsultat audacter, quia sic adversis non frangitur, sicut nec prosperis elevatur. Adversa namque non dejiciunt, quem prospera nulla corrumpunt. Equus itaque iste et fortis et sub freno est. Ne ergo prematur adversis, habet vim fortitudinis; ne elevetur prosperis, habet pondus desuper insidentis. Decurrunt quippe tempora, sed idcirco justum trahere non valent, quia levare non possunt. Illos nimirum trahunt, quos levant; irata dejiciunt, quos blanda sustollunt. Vir autem bene Deo subditus scit inter transeuntia stare, scit inter lapsus decurrentium temporum mentis gressum figere, scit nec ad subjecta se erigere, nec ad objecta trepidare. Plerumque autem quia exerceri se utilius contritionis suae laboribus novit, in adversis hilarescit, quae dum constanter pro veritate patitur, augeri sibi virtutis meritum laetatur. Hinc est quod tunc apostolos exsultasse legimus, cum pro Christo illos contigit flagella tolerasse, sicut scriptum est: Ibant gaudentes a conspectu concilii, quoniam digni habiti sunt pro nomine Jesu contumeliam pali (Act. V, 41). Hinc Paulus cum duris in Macedonia fuisset persecutionibus pressus, in eo quod se afflictum insinuat, etiam jucundatum demonstrat, dicens: Nam cum venissemus Macedoniam, nullam requiem habuit caro nostra (II Cor. VII, 5). Ac si aperte diceret quia spiritus requiem habuit dum per profectum animae persecutionum supplicia caro toleravit. Contra hunc itaque equum ab adversariis sanctae Ecclesiae parantur gladii de dolore poenarum, parantur arma de patrociniis saecularium potestatum. Solent namque haeretici potentum mundi defensionibus, quasi quibusdam armis, se tegere; solent omnes infideles praedicationem fidei excitatis etiam saeculi potestatibus impugnare. Sed equus Dei exsultat audacter, et exteriora tormenta non metuit, quia internam delectationem quaerit, potestatum mundi iracundiam non formidat, quia ipsius quoque vitae praesentis desiderium per mentis excessum calcat. Hinc per Salomonem dicitur: Non contristabit justum quidquid ei acciderit (Prov. XII, 21). Hinc in eo rursum scriptum est: Justus quasi leo confidens absque terrore erit (Prov. XXVIII, 1). In occursu bestiarum idcirco leo non trepidat, quia praevalere se omnibus non ignorat. Unde justi viri securitas recte leoni comparatur, quia contra se cum quoslibet insurgere conspicit, ad mentis suae confidentiam redit; 1023 et scit quia cunctos adversantes superat, quia illum solum diligit, quem invitus nullo modo amittat. Quisquis enim exteriora, quae et nolenti subtrahuntur, appetit sua se sponte extraneo timori substernit. Infracta autem virtus est concupiscentiae terrenae contemptus, quia et in alto mens ponitur, cum a rebus infimis spei suae judicio sublevatur, atque a cunctis adversantibus tanto minus attingitur quanto in supernis sita tutius munitur. 56. Justus adversantibus intrepidus occurrit. Equus itaque iste non solum contra se venientes minime metuit, sed eis etiam in occursum pergit. Unde bene hic additur: In occursum pergit armatis. Plerumque enim quieti atque inconcussi relinquimur, si obviare pravis pro justitia non curamus. Sed si ad aeternae vitae desiderium animus exarsit, si jam verum lumen intrinsecus respicit, si in se flammam sancti fervoris accendit, in quantum locus admittit, in quantum causa exigit, debemus pro defensione justitiae nosmetipsos objicere, et perversis ad injusta erumpentibus, etiam cum ab eis non quaerimur, obviare. Nam cum justitiam, quam nos amamus, in aliis feriunt, nos nihilominus sua percussione confodiunt, etiam si venerari videantur. Quia ergo vir sanctus pravis ac male agentibus sese etiam cum non quaeritur opponit, recte de equo Dei dicitur: In occursum pergit armatis. 57. S. Pauli exemplum. Intueri libet illum sessoris sui calcaribus excitatum contra armatos hostes, quantus Paulum fervor accenderat, quando eum Ephesi ad irrumpendas theatri turbas zeli flamma rap ebat. Scriptum quippe est: Repleti sunt ira, et exclamaverunt dicentes: Magna Diana Ephesiorum; et impleta est civitas confusione, et impetum fecerunt uno animo in theatrum, rapto Caio et Aristarcho Macedonibus, comitibus Pauli (Act. XIX, 28, 29). Atque mox subditur: Paulo autem volente intrare in populum, non permiserunt discipuli. Quidam autem et de Asiae principibus, qui erant amici ejus, miserunt ad eum, rogantes ne se daret in theatrum (Ibid., 30, 31). In quibus profecto verbis agnoscimus quo impetu contra cuneos adversantes irrueret, nisi eum per amicos et discipulos charitatis frena tenuissent. 58.

Declinandum tamen aliquando prudenter periculum, si ex illo periculo modicus tantum fructus speretur. Hoc Paulus exemplo docuit. Sed si obviare hostibus, si ultro pugnam petere, si nosmetipsos semper relinquere in cursu nostri fervoris debemus, quid est quod idem praedicator egregius de semetipso fatetur, dicens: Damasci praepositus gentis Aretae regis custodiebat civitatem Damascenorum, ut me comprehenderet, et per fenestram in sporta demissus sum per murum, et sic effugi manus ejus (II Cor. XI, 32, 33)? Quid est quod equus iste modo sponte armatorum cuneos impetit, et modo se ab armatis hostibus quasi trepidus abscondit, nisi hoc, quod necesse est ut in ejus artificiosa virtute discamus adversariorum pugnam et constanter aliquando appetere, et prudenter aliquando declinare? [Vet. XXIV.] Necesse quippe est ut per omne quod agimus in mentis trutina positum hinc pondus, illinc fructum nostri laboris aestimemus; et cum pondus fructum superat, laborem quisque innoxie declinet, dummodo se in aliis exerceat, in quibus lucro fructuum pondus laboris vincat. Cum vero sub 1024 sequenti quantitate fructuum mensura laboris aut aequatur, aut vincitur, labor non sine gravi culpa declinatur. Unde praedicator sanctus, cum Damasci valde obstinatas mentes persequentium cerneret, eorum noluit adversitati confligere, quia et semetipsum, quem profuturum multis noverat, vidit posse deficere, et aut nullis se ibi aut paucis prodesse. Secessum ergo a certamine petiit, et pugnaturum felicius ad alia se bella servavit. Non enim loco virtus, sed locus virtuti defuit; et idcirco fortissimus miles ab obsidionis angustia certaminis campum quaesivit. Ubi autem subjuganda regi proprio multa adversariorum colla conspexit, subire bellum vel cum morte non timuit; sicut ipse cum Jerosolymam pergeret, eumque discipuli, passione illius per prophetiam praescita, prohiberent, sibimetipsi attestatur, dicens: Ego non solum alligari, sed et mori in Jerusalem paratus sum pro nomine Domini Jesu (Act. XXI, 13). Neque enim facio animam meam pretiosiorem quam me (Ibid., XX, 24). Qui igitur hic hostiles cuneos etiam praescita passione sua imperterritus petiit, illic de dispensatione fuisse edocuit, non de timore quod fugit. 59. Cavendum ne timore potius quam cauta dispensatione fugiamus. Qua in re pensandum est quia ille labores quosdam per dispensationis judicium laudabiliter declinat, qui pro Deo majores alios fortiter tolerat. Nam saepe ab hominibus timor debilis cauta dispensatio vocatur; et quasi prudenter impetum declinasse se asserunt, cum fugientes turpiter in terga feriuntur. Unde necesse est ut in causa Dei, cum res dispensationis agitur, metus cordis subtilissima libratione pensetur, ne per infirmitatem timor subrepat, et sese per dispensationis imaginem rationem confingat, ne culpa se prudentiam nominet; jamque nec ad poenitentiam animus redeat, quando hoc quod inique perpetrat virtutem vocat. Restat igitur ut in dubiis quisque deprehensus, cum quaelibet sibi adversitas imminet, prius intra semetipsum contra formidinem et praecipitationem pugnet, quatenus nec formidolose se subtrahat, nec praecipitanter opponat. Valde enim praeceps est qui semper se adversis objicit, et valde pavidus qui semper abscondit. 60. Peritus dux hosti exercitum nec semper admovet, nec semper subducit. Sed haec melius in bellis spiritalibus discimus, si formam exercitii a corporalibus bellis trahamus. Non enim ille dux sapiens est, qui semper contra hostiles cuneos exercitum praeceps admovet; neque ille dux fortis, qui semper hunc ab hostis facie cavendo subducit. Scire namque dux debet modo ab hostili impetu exercitum caute subtrahere, modo hostem circumfusis cornibus coarctare. Quod nimirum sollicite perfecti praedicatores exhibent, cum modo persecutionis rabiem declinantes, noverunt sapienter sed non enerviter cedere; modo autem persecutionis impetum contemnentes, noverunt ei fortiter, sed non praecipitanter obviare. Quia autem sanctus vir, cum congruum cernit, ictibus pectus objicit, et venientia jacula vel moriens retundit, recte dicitur: In occursum pergit armatis. De quo adhuc bene subditur:

CAPUT XXIX.

VERS. 22. Contemnit pavorem, nec cedit gladio. 1025 61. Paulus pavorem omnem, omnem hostilem impetum despexit. Videamus quomodo pavorem despiciat, qui ipsos adversariorum gladios enumerans calcat. Ait enim: Quis nos separabit a charitate Dei? tribulatio an angustia, an fames, an persecutio (Rom. VIII, 35)? In pavore autem ventura poena metuitur, in gladio vero jam dolor de praesenti percussione sentitur. Quia ergo vir sanctus ventura adversa non metuit, pavorem despicit; quia vero nec superveniente percussione vincitur, nequaquam gladiis cedit. Contra hunc itaque equum tot sunt gladii hostium, quot genera persecutionum; quae cuncta obvians superat, quia amore vitae sese ad interitum parat. Sed quia tam robustissimum pectus quomodo se jaculis opponat audivimus, nunc quid ab adversariis agatur audiamus. Sequitur:

CAPUT XXX.

VERS. 23. Super ipsum sonabit pharetra. 62. Victi hostes ad dolos, sed incassum confugiunt.In Scriptura sacra pharetrae nomine aliquando justum Dei occultumque consilium, aliquando vero clandestina pravorum machinatio designatur. Per pharetram justum Dei occultumque consilium exprimitur, sicut idem beatus Job superiore parte testatur, dicens: Pharetram enim suam aperuit, et afflixit me (Job. XXX, 11). Id est, occultum suum consilium detexit, et publica me percussione vulneravit. Sicut enim in pharetra sagittae, sic in occulto Dei consilio latent sententiae; et quasi ex pharetra sagitta educitur, quando ex occulto consilio apertam Deus sententiam jaculatur. Pharetrae quoque nomine pravorum machinatio designatur, sicut per prophetam dicitur: Paraverunt sagittas suas in pharetra, ut sagittent in obscuro rectos corde (Psal. X, 3). [Vet. XXV.] Iniqui enim cum dolos quos bonis excogitant secretis machinationibus occultant, quasi in pharetra sagittas parant, et in hac praesentis vitae caligine, velut in obscuro, rectos corde feriunt, quia malitiosa eorum jacula et sentiri per vulnus possunt, et tamen venientia deprehendi non possunt. Igitur quia equus Dei nulla adversitate terretur, eique quo magis obviatur, eo vi intentionis suae super armatos hostes ferventior ducitur, persecutores ejus, qui se etiam ferientes vinci sentiunt, turbati ad consilium revertuntur, dolos praeparant, et velut ex longinquo mittendo vulnera occultant. Unde nunc recte dicitur: (Rec. XV.] Super ipsum sonabit pharetra; ut eum ex absconsa machinatione longe feriant, cui apertis congressionibus inaniter appropinquant. Haec tunc super equum Dei pharetra sonuerat, cum quadraginta viri qui in ejus mortem conjuraverant educi de carcere Paulum quaerebant (Act. XXIII, 16), ut consiliorum suorum ictibus quasi clam sagittarum dolo interficerent quem congressione persecutionis publicae superare nequaquam possent. Pharetra ergo sonuit, quia occultae machinationis ad Paulum causa pervenit. 63. Artes suas aliquando occultant, aliquando, ut incutiant terrorem, ostentant. Quamvis si vigilanter quaerimus, adhuc in pharetrae sonitu aliquid subtilius invenimus. Saepe enim adversarii consilia contra bonos ineunt, pravis inventionibus innituntur, ad excogitandos dolos se conferunt, sed tamen qui eosdem dolos prodere bonis debeant, ipsi instituunt, latenter ipsi transmittunt, ut credulis suppliciorum praeparatio dum quasi furtim innotescitur, amplius timeatur, et audientis animum plus suspecta vulnera quam percepta perturbent. In pharetra enim sagittae 1026 dum latent et sonant mortem etiam non visae denuntiant. Pharetra ergo contra equum sonitum reddit, cum contra praedicatorem sanctum occulta pravorum machinatio consilium suum, quod fraudulenter operit, fraudulentius innotescit, ut praemissis minis quasi ex sonitu pharetrae terreat, cum praedicator Dei apertas contumelias velut cominus ferientia jacula non formidat. Cum vero eisdem minis minime terretur, mox persecutorum crudelitas ad supplicia manifesta perducitur.

CAPUT XXXI.

IBID.Vibrabit hasta. 64. A minis ad aperta supplicia prorumpunt.Contra praedicatorem Dei post pharetrae sonitum hasta vibratur, quando post terrores exhibitos e vicino jam feriens aperta poena producitur. Praedicatores autem sancti, cum pro defensione fidei supplicia subeunt, ad eamdem fidem, quos valent, rapere et inter verbera non desistunt; et cum patienter vulnera suscipiunt, prudenter contra corda infidelium sagittas praedicationis reddunt. Unde nonnunquam agitur ut ipsi qui in persecutione saeviunt non tam doleant quod cor praedicatoris non emolliunt quam quod per ejus verba etiam alios amittant. Quia igitur eum feriendo non superant, ne fortasse et alii qui illum audiunt se derelinquant, mox contra loquentis verba scutum responsionis parant. Unde cum diceret: Vibrabit hasta, recte subjungit: IBID. Et clypeus. 65. Rationes quas opponant, etiam quaerunt. Persecutor enim saeviens postquam praedicatoris corpus supplicio percutit, auditorum cor quasi clypeo verbis suae disputationis munit. Vir igitur sanctus ut feriri debeat, hasta vibratur; sed ne audiri possit, clypeus opponitur. Habent namque defensores Dei in praelio sagittas suas quas eo citius in auditorum corda injiciunt, quo illas de spiritali arcu, id est de intima cordis tensione distringunt. His quippe se in bello fidei Paulus armaverat, cum dicebat: Laboro usque ad vincula quasi male operans, sed verbum Dei non est alligatum (II Tim. II, 9). Ac si diceret: Hasta quidem suppliciorum ferior, sed tamen verborum sagittas emittere non desisto. Vulnera crudelitatis accipio, sed cor infidelium vera loquendo transfigo. Dicatur ergo: Super ipsum sonabit pharetra, vibrabit hasta et clypeus. Contra equum quippe Dei, quia pravorum consilia perstrepunt, pharetra sonat, quia aperta poena exquiritur, hasta vibratur; quia vero ei etiam disputatione resistitur, clypeus antefertur. Sed nunquid a fervore suo per ista compescitur? Vir enim sanctus quo majore persecutione premitur, eo ad praedicandam veritatem acrius instigatur; et cum patienter persecutores tolerat, ardenter ad se auditores trahere festinat. Unde et bene adhuc de equo Dei subditur:

CAPUT XXXII.

VERS. 24. Fervens et fremens sorbet terram, nec reputat tubae sonare clangorem. 66. Despectis illorum conatibus, pius praedicator peccatorum conversioni semper insudat. Primo namque peccanti homini dictum est: Terra es, et in terram ibis (Genes. III, 19). Tubae autem clangunt, cum hujus saeculi potestates loqui sanctos terribiliter prohibent. Quia igitur praedicator zelo sancti Spiritus inflammatus, vel inter supplicia positus, quoslibet peccatores ad se trahere non desistit, fervens 1027 procul dubio terram sorbet, quia vero persecutorum minas minime formidat, clangorem tubae sonare non reputat. Tuba enim, quae discrimen belli denuntiat, quid est aliud quam vox saecularium potestatum, quae contempta resistentibus mortis certamen parat? 67. Exemplum Apostolorum, praesertim S. Pauli. Haec a principibus sacerdotum tuba sonuerat, cum flagellatos apostolos de Deo loqui prohibebant, sicut scriptum est: Caesis denuntiaverunt, ne loquerentur in nomine Jesu (Act. V, 40). Sed videamus quomodo equum Dei clangor tubae non terreat. Ait Petrus: Obedire oportet Deo magis quam hominibus (Ibid., 29). Qui aliis quoque persequentibus dicit: Non enim possumus quae vidimus et audivimus, non loqui (Act. IV, 20). Equus ergo Dei clangorem tubae non metuit, quia praedicator egregius despectis potestatibus saeculi, nullos minarum sonitus pertimescit. 68. Videamus alium equum Dei quomodo terram sorbeat, quomodo nullus eum tubae terror attingat (Act. XIV, 18, 19, 20, 21). Scriptum est: Supervenerunt quidam ab Antiochia et Iconio Judaei, et persuasis turbis, lapidantes Paulum traxerunt extra civitatem, aestimantes eum mortuum esse. Circumdantibus autem eum discipulis, surgens intravit civitatem, et postero die profectus est cum Barnaba in Derben. Cumque evangelizassent civitati illi, et docuissent multos, reversi sunt Lystrum et Iconium et Antiochiam, confirmantes animas discipulorum. Perpendamus ergo quae hunc possent equum minae compescere, quando eum ab intentione sua non valet mors ipsa prohibere. Ecce lapidibus obruitur, nec tamen a veritatis sermone removetur. Occidi potest, superari non potest; velut exstinctus extra urbem projicitur, sed intra urbem die alio illaesus praedicator invenitur. O quam fortis huic viro inest infirmitas! o quam victrix poena! o quam dominatrix patientia! Ad agendum repulsione provocatur, ad praedicandam salutem plagis erigitur, ad propellendam laboris lassitudinem poena refovetur. Quae ergo hunc adversitas superet, quem poena fovet? Sed equus iste Dei et pharetrae sagittas despicit, quia malitiae consilia contemnit; vibratam hastam superat, quia et contra apertae persecutionis vulnera pectus firmat; oppositum clypeum rumpit, quia disputationem resistentium ratiocinando subigit; terram sorbet, quia peccatores in suum corpus exhortando convertit; clangorem buccinae sonare non reputat, quia vocem quamlibet terribilis prohibitionis calcat. Minus est autem quod dicitur, quia fortis perseverat in laboribus, adhuc, quod majus est, exsultat in adversis. Unde sequitur:

CAPUT XXXIII [Rec. XVI].

VERS. 25. Ubi audierit buccinam, dicit Vah. 69. Sancti, imminente certamine, licet mortis metu concutiantur, de futuro tamen praemio gaudent.Quibus profecto verbis et illud ostenditur, quod hoc loco a Domino de equo irrationabili nil dicatur. Neque enim vah dicere brutum animal potest; sed dum asseritur dicere quod omnino dicere non valet, innuitur quem designet. Vah quippe sermo exsultationis est. Equus ergo, audita buccina, vah dicit, quia fortis quisque praedicator cum certamen passionis sibi propinquare considerat, de exercitio virtutis exsultat; nec terretur pugnae periculo, quia victoriae laetatur triumpho. 1028 Equo itaque est vah dicere, praedicatorem sanctum de ventura passione gaudere. [Vet. XXVI.] Sed si praedicator fortis gloriam passionis appetit, si discrimen mortis subire pro Domino laetus quaerit, quid est quod ipsi fortissimo praedicatori, qui ex robusto corde virtutem traxit in nomine, Petro Veritas dixit: Cum senueris, extendes manus tuas, et alius te cinget, et ducet quo non vis (Joan. XXI, 12). Quomodo de passione gaudet, qui, cinctus ab alio, ire quo ducitur non volet? Sed si pensamus qualiter animus appropinquante passione et mortis metu qualitur, et tamen de venturo regni praemio laetatur, intelligimus quomodo gloriosi certaminis subire periculum volens nolit, quia et in morte considerat quod tolerans paveat, et in fructu mortis aspicit quod appetens quaerat. 70. Paulus amat quod refugit, fugere videtur quod amat. Videamus Paulum quomodo amet quod refugit, quomodo refugiat quod amat. Ait enim: Desiderium habens dissolvi, et cum Christo esse (Philip. I, 23). Et, Mihi vivere Christus est, et mori lucrum (Ibid., 21). Et tamen dicit: Qui sumus in hoc habitaculo, ingemiscimus gravati, eo quod nolumus exspoliari, sed supervestiri, ut absorbeatur quod mortale est a vita (II Cor. V, 4). Ecce et mori desiderat, et tamen carne exspoliari formidat. Cur hoc? Quia etsi victoria in perpetuum laetificat, ipsa nihilominus ad praesens poena perturbat; et quamvis vincat amor subsequentis muneris, tangit tamen non sine moerore animum pulsus doloris. Sicut enim vir fortis, cum vicino jam belli certamine armis accingitur, et palpitat et festinat, tremit et saevit, quasi pavere per pallorem cernitur, sed per iram vehementer urgetur; ita vir sanctus, cum passioni se propinquare conspicit, et naturae suae infirmitate concutitur, et spei suae soliditate roboratur; et de vicina morte trepidat, et tamen quod moriendo verius vivat, exsultat. Ad regnum quippe non potest nisi interposita morte transire; et idcirco confidendo quasi ambigit, et quasi ambigendo confidit; et gaudens metuit, et metuens gaudet, quia scit quod ad bravium quietis non perveniat, nisi hoc quod interjacet cum labore transcendat. Sic nos, cum morbos a corpore repellere cupimus, tristes quidem amarum purgationis poculum sumimus, certi autem de subsequenti salute gaudemus. Quia enim pervenire corpus aliter ad salutem non valet, in potu libet etiam quod taedet. Cumque amaritudini inesse vitam animus conspicit, moerore turbatus hilarescit. Dicatur ergo: Ubi audierit buccinam, dicit Vah, quia praedicator fortis cognito certaminis nuntio, etsi ut homo ad vim persecutionis trepidat, per spei tamen certitudinem ad praemium remunerationis exsultat. Sed nequaquam ad hoc passionis bellum inconcussus existeret, nisi eamdem passionem intenta cogitatione meditando praeveniret. Malum namque quod consilio praevenitur, decertanti contra se animo ex ratione subjicitur, quia tanto quisque minus adversitate vincitur, quanto contra illam praesciendo paratus invenitur. Saepe enim grave timoris pondus usu levigatur, saepe mors ipsa sicut inopinata perturbat, ita deliberatione praeventa laetificat. Unde et recte de hoc equo subjungitur: IBID. 1029 Procul odoratur bellum. 71. Ad reportandam victoriam certamen praevideatur.Ac si apertius dicatur: Idcirco quodlibet certamen exsuperat, quia mentem certamini ante certamen parat. Bellum quippe procul odorari est adversa quaeque longe adhuc posita cogitando praenoscere, ne fortasse valeant improvisa superare. Hoc bellum procul odorari discipulos Paulus admonebat, cum diceret: Vosmetipsos tentate si estis in fide, ipsi vos probate (II Cor. XIII, 5). Ac si aperte praeciperet, dicens: Persecutionum certamina ad mentem reducite, et cordis vestri intima atque occulta pensantes, quales inter supplicia existere valeatis invenite. Hoc bellum sancti viri procul odorantur, quando et in pace universalis Ecclesiae positi, vel haereticorum bella, vel imminentia ab infidelibus persecutionum tormenta conspiciunt. Qui dum recte vivunt, saepe pro bonis mala recipiunt, detractionum contumelias aequanimiter ferunt, ut si persecutionis occasio suppetat, tanto illos fortiores aperti hostes inveniant, quanto eos et intra Ecclesiam falsorum fratrum jacula non expugnant. Nam qui a statu patientiae ante linguarum vulnera corruit, ipse sibi testis est quia contra manifestae persecutionis gladios non subsistit. Quia ergo vir Dei exercitatus praesentibus contra ventura, et exercitatus minimis contra majora nititur, recte de equo Dei dictum est, quod bellum procul odoratur. Sequitur:

CAPUT XXXIV.

IBID. Exhortationem ducum, et ululatum exercitus. 72. Subodorandum quid auctores errorum, quid turba ipsis subdita possint insanire. Duces adversae partis sunt erroris auctores, de quibus per Psalmistam dicitur: Effusa est contentio super principes eorum, et seduxerunt eos vana eorum, et errare fecit eos in invio, et non in via (Psal. CVI, 40). De quibus per semetipsam Veritas dicit: Caecus si caeco ducatum praebet, ambo in foveam cadunt (Matth. XV, 14). Hos autem duces exercitus sequitur pravorum scilicet turba, quae iniquis eorum praeceptionibus famulatur. Notandum quoque quod duces exhortari, exercitum vero dicit ululare, quia videlicet hi qui infidelibus vel haereticis praesunt prava quae teneri praecipiunt quasi ex ratione persuadent. Turba vero eis subdita, quia sine judicio eorum voces sequitur, dum per confusionis insaniam perstrepit, bestiali mente ululare perhibetur. Lupis quippe proprie ululatus convenit. Et quia catervae reproborum contra vitam moresque fidelium sola rapacitate inhiant, quasi per ululatum clamant. [Vet. XXVII.] Equus ergo Dei exhortationem ducum et ululatum exercitus procul odoratur, dum sanctus quisque praedicator longe ante considerat quid vel auctores errorum contra electos valeant praecipere, vel turba eis subdita quam possit immaniter insanire. Hanc exhortationem ducum odorabatur Paulus, cum diceret: Per dulces sermones et benedictiones seducunt corda innocentium (Rom. XVI, 18). Hunc ululatum exercitus odorabatur, dicens: Intrabunt post discessionem meam lupi graves in vos (Act. XX, 29). Exhortationem ducum odoratus est Petrus, cum de quibusdam discipulos admoneret, dicens: In avaritia fictis verbis de vobis negotiabuntur (II Pet. II, 3). Ululatum quoque exercitus odorabatur, cum praemitteret, dicens: 1030 Et multi sequentur eorum luxurias, per quos via veritatis blasphematur (Ibid., 2). [Rec. XVII.] 73. Fidelibus accommodantur, quae de praedicatoribus et doctoribus sunt dicta. Igitur quia sanctus quisque praedicator atque in persecutionis bello dux fidei, qualem se possit exhibere narravimus, nunc sub hujus equi specie unumquemque Christi militem describamus, ut et qui ad praedicationis culmen necdum se pervenisse considerat, hac tamen voce dominica, si jam bene vivere coeperit, expressum se esse cognoscat, quatenus hinc colligat quantum Deo notus sit, si ad majora pervenerit, quem signanter Deus eloqui nec in minimis praetermittit. Singula itaque quae de equo dicta sunt repentes, intimemus quomodo miles Dei a primaeva conversatione proficiat, quomodo a minimis ad majora succrescat, vel quibus gradibus ab infimis ad superna perveniat. Dicatur ergo:

CAPUT XXXV.

VERS. 19. Nunquid praebebis equo fortitudinem, aut circumdabis collo ejus hinnitum? 74. Militem Dei primum armet fides. Unicuique animae, cui Dominus misericorditer praesidet, ante omnia fidei fortitudinem praebet, de qua Petrus ait: Adversarius vester diabolus, sicut leo rugiens, circuit quaerens quem devoret; cui resistite fortes in fide (I Pet. V, 8). Huic autem fortitudini hinnitus jungitur, dum fit quod scriptum est: Corde creditur ad justitiam, ore autem confessio fit ad salutem (Rom. X, 10). Sequitur:

CAPUT XXXVI [Vet. XXVIII].

VERS. 20. Nunquid suscitabis eum quasi locustas? 75. Dei erga incipientes indulgentia. Unusquisque qui Deum sequitur, in ipso suo exordio ut locusta suscitatur, quia etsi in quibusdam actionibus locustarum more flexis poplitibus terrae inhaeret, in quibusdam tamen expansis alis sese in aera suspendit. Conversionum quippe initia, bonis moribus malisque permista sunt, dum et nova jam per intentionem agitur, et vetus adhuc vita ex usu retinetur. Tanto autem minus permistis interim malis laedimur, quanto contra illa quotidie sine cessatione pugnamus. Nec suos nos jam culpa vindicat, cujus pravo usui nostra sollicite mens resultat. Minus itaque nobis inchoantibus terrena opera officiunt, quia in nobis diutius demorari prohibentur. Proinde quoniam in ipso nostrae conversionis initio infirma quaedam pie de nobis Dominus tolerat, ut nos quandoque ad coelestia ex perfectione perducat, quasi locustas nos in exordio suscitat, quia etsi in volatu virtutis sublevat, non tamen de terreni operis casu desperat. Sequitur:

CAPUT XXXVII.

IBID. Gloria narium ejus terror. 76. Inchoantes inter spem et metum positi, propter certamina carnis, quam idcirco fortiter edomant. Pro eo quod non visa res odore deprehenditur, non immerito narium nomine spei nostrae cogitationes exprimuntur, quibus venturum judicium, quod etsi oculis adhuc non cernimus, jam tamen sperando praevidemus. Omnis autem qui bene vivere incipit, audiens quod per extremum judicium justi ad regnum vocentur, hilarescit; sed quia quaedam mala adhuc ex reliquiis sibi inesse considerat, hoc ipsum judicium, de quo exsultare inchoat, appropinquare formidat. Vitam quippe suam bonis malisque permistam conspicit, et cogitationes suas aliquo modo spe et timore 1031 confundit. Nam cum audit quae sint regni gaudia, mox mentem laetitia sublevat; et rursum cum respicit quae sint gehennae tormenta, mox mentem formido perturbat. Bene ergo gloria narium ejus terror dicitur, quia inter spem et metum positus, dum futurum judicium mente conspicit, hoc ipsum timet unde gloriatur. Ipsa ei sua gloria terror est, quia inchoatis jam bonis, spe de judicio laetus est; et necdum finitis omnibus malis, perfecte securus non est. Sed inter haec sollicite ad mentem revertitur, et procellas tantae formidinis renuens, seque in solius pacis tranquillitate disponens, totis viribus a districto judice inveniri liber conatur. Servile quippe aestimat dominicam praesentiam formidare; ac ne conspectum patris metuat, illa agit per quae se filium recognoscat. Discit ergo judicem tota exspectatione diligere, atque, ut ita dixerim, timendo renuit timere. Oriri autem cordi formidinem pro carnali actione considerat, et idcirco ante omnia carnem forti edomatione castigat. Unde postquam dictum est: Gloria narium ejus terror, recte subjungitur:

CAPUT XXXVIII.

VERS. 21. Terram ungula fodit. 77. Ungula namque terram fodere est districta abstinentia carnem edomare. Quo autem plus caro premitur, eo de coelesti spe animus securius laetatur. Unde effossa terra apte subnectitur: Exsultat audacter. Quia enim valenter reprimit quod impugnat, audacter exsultat de his quae in aeterna pace desiderat; tantoque mens melius ad superna appetenda componitur, quanto ab illicitis arctius corpus edomatur. Unde recte per Salomonem dicitur: Diligenter exerce agrum tuum, ut postea aedifices domum tuam (Prov. XXIV, 27). Ille quippe bene mentis domum aedificat, qui prius agrum corporis a spinis vitiorum purgat, ne si desideriorum sentes in carnis agro proficiant, intus tota virtutum fabrica fame boni operis crescente destruatur. In ipso autem quisque belli certamine positus, tanto subtilius fraudem hostium conspicit, quanto et districtius corpus proprium quasi quemdam hostium adjutorem premit. Unde et post contritionem corporis, post laetitiam cordis recte subjungitur:

CAPUT XXXIX.

IBID. In occursum pergit armatis. 78. Hostis insidias et dolos explorant inchoantes, et in alienis etiam cordibus praeveniunt. Hostes armati sunt immundi spiritus, innumeris contra nos fraudibus accincti. Qui cum suadere nobis iniqua nequeunt, ea sub virtutum specie nostris obtutibus opponunt, et quasi sub quibusdam armis se contegunt, ne in sua malitia a nobis nudi videantur. Quibus armatis hostibus in occursum pergimus, quando eorum insidias longe praevidemus. Effossa igitur terra, armatis hostibus in occursum pergere, est, edomita carnis superbia, dolos immundorum spirituum mirabiliter explorare. Effossa terra armatis hostibus in occursum pergere, est devicta carnali nequitia contra spiritalia vitia certamen subire. Nam qui adhuc secum enerviter pugnat, frustra contra se bella extra posita suscitat. Qui enim semetipsum carnalibus subjugat, quomodo spiritalibus vitiis resultat? Aut quomodo de labore externi certaminis triumphare appetit, qui adhuc apud semetipsum domestico libidinis bello succumbit. [Vet. XXIX.] 79. Vel certe armatis hostibus in occursum pergimus, quando per exhortationis studium eorum insidias et in alieno corde praevenimus. Quasi enim 1032 ex loco in quo fuimus ad locum alium obviam hostibus venimus, quando, nostra cura ordinate postposita, accessum immundorum spirituum a proximi mente prohibemus. Unde fit plerumque ut hostes callidi militem Dei jam de intestino bello victorem tanto de semetipso terribilius tentent, quanto illum contra se et in alieno corde praevalere fortiter vident; ut dum illum ad se tuendum revocant, aliena corda liberius quae exhortatione ejus protegebantur invadant. Cumque cum superare non possint, saltem occupare conantur; quatenus dum miles Dei de semetipso concutitur, non ipse, sed is quem defendere consueverat perimatur. Sed mens in Deum immobiliter fixa tentationum spicula despicit, nec cujuslibet terroris jacula pertimescit. Supernae enim gratiae fretus auxilio, sic vulnera infirmitatis suae curat, ut aliena non deserat. Unde et bene de hoc equo subjungitur:

CAPUT XL.

VERS. 22. Contemnit pavorem, nec cedit gladio. 80. Minas hostis contemnunt inchoantes. Contemnit pavorem, quia nullius tentationis formidine ad hoc usque terretur ut taceat. Nec cedit gladio, quia etsi violenta illum tentatio percutit, a cura tamen proximi non repellit. Unde et Paulus exemplum nobis invictae conversationis insinuans, et quos ab hoste gladios suscipiat dicit, et quomodo eisdem gladiis non cedat ostendit. Omni enim jam carnalis operis pugna superata, carnalis tentationis gladium ab hoste susceperat, qui dicebat: Video aliam legem in membris meis repugnantem legi mentis meae, et captivum me ducentem in lege peccati, quae est in membris meis (Rom. VII, 23). Sed eidem gladio quem in se vicerat etiam in aliis non cedebat, cum profecto proximis diceret: Non regnet peccatum in vestro mortali corpore ad obediendum desideriis ejus (Rom. VI, 12). Et rursum: Mortificate membra vestra quae sunt super terram, fornicationem, immunditiam, libidinem, concupiscentiam malam (Coloss. III, 5). Gravis illum tentationum gladius feriebat, de quibus ipse ait: In laboribus plurimis, in carceribus abundantius, in plagis supra modum, in mortibus frequenter. A Judaeis quinquies quadragenas una minus accepi; ter virgis caesus sum, semel lapidatus sum, ter naufragium feci, nocte et die in profundo maris fui (II Cor. XI, 23), et caetera, quae ipse tolerare potuit, et nos enumerare lassamur. Sed quomodo eidem gladio in proximi dilectione non cedat, post multa ipse subjungit: Praeter illa quae extrinsecus sunt, instantia mea quotidiana, solicitudo omnium Ecclesiarum (Ibid., 28). Equus ergo Dei gladio percutitur, nec tamen percussione eadem a cursu prohibetur, dum fortis spiritalis certaminis miles et ipse vulnera ab hoste suscipit, et tamen ad salutem alios stringit. Sed erga tam durum coelestis militis pectus antiquus hostis tanto acutiora spicula perquirit, quanto se despici robustius conspicit. Unde et sequitur:

CAPUT XLI [Vet. XXX].

VERS. 23. Super ipsum sonabit pharetra, vibrabit hasta et clypeus. 81. Saepe qui aliis regendis praesunt, gravioribus a diabolo tentationibus exercentur: modo aperta vi, modo fraude et dolo, aliquando vi simul et dolo.Quia enim videt sanctae mentis studium contra se et aliis prodesse, multiplicata hanc satagit tentatione confodere. Unde saepe contingit ut hi qui regendis aliis praesunt tentationum certamina fortiora patiantur, quatenus corporalium more bellorum dum dux ipse ad fugam vertitur, resistentis exercitus constipata unanimitas sine labore 1033 dissipetur. Hostis itaque callidus contra coelestem militem diversa percussionum vulnera exquirens, modo ex pharetra per insidias eum sagitta vulnerat, modo ante ejus faciem hastam vibrat, quia videlicet vitia et alia sub virtutum specie contegit, et alia ut sunt aperta ejus oculis opponit. Ubi enim infirmari Dei militem conspicit, illic fraudis velamina non requirit. Ubi autem sibi resistere fortem considerat, illic contra vires procul dubio dolos parat. Nam cum infirmum quempiam in carnis illecebra videt, aperte speciem corporis quae concupisci valeat ejus obtutibus objicit. Si autem fortasse validum contra avaritiam cernit, importune ejus cogitationibus domesticorum suorum inopiam suggerit, ut dum mens ad provisionis curam quasi pie flectitur, seducta furtim in rerum ambitu inique rapiatur. Equum ergo Dei sagitta per insidias impetit, quando ei hostis callidus sub virtute vitium abscondit. Hasta autem cominus vulnerat, cum manifesta nequitia etiam scientem tentat. 82. Saepe vero coelesti militi uno eodemque tempore utrumque ab hoste objicitur, ut in qualibet una percussione perimatur. Dolosus namque adversarius simul ferire nititur, et aperte saeviens, et in insidiis latens, ut dum de occulto sagitta metuitur, minus ante faciem hasta timeatur; vel dum ante faciem hastae resistitur, nequaquam ex occulto veniens sagitta videatur. Saepe enim tentationem proponit libidinis, et subito fraudulentius cessans, elationem suggerit de servata castitate. Et sunt nonnulli qui dum multos ex castitatis arce in elationis foveam cecidisse conspiciunt, vitae suae custodiam negligentes, in immunditiam libidinis demerguntur. Sunt vero e diverso nonnulli qui dum libidinis immunditiam fugiunt, per castitatis culmen in voraginem elationis ruunt. Quasi ergo aperte feriens hasta est culpa de vitio, et quasi ex occulto vulnerans de pharetra sagitta est culpa de virtute. Sed equus Dei et ante faciem hastam superat cum libidinem calcat, et a latere sagittam circumspicit cum in castitatis munditia se ab elatione custodit. Unde et bene inter utraque certanti per Salomonem dicitur: Dominus erit in latere tuo, et custodiet pedem tuum ne capiaris (Prov. III, 26). Pes namque in anteriora tendit. Anteriora autem non videt, qui ea quae sunt a latere conspicit. Rursumque qui pedis custodiam praevidens anteriora cernit, circumspectionem lateris deserit. Dum vero ante faciem positae virtutis aliquid agimus, quasi quo pes debeat poni praevidemus; sed dum ex virtute eadem furtim culpa suboritur, quasi dum in anteriora respicitur, ad sagittam latus nudatur. Saepe vero dum suborientem culpam metuimus, virtutem quae agenda est declinamus; et quasi dum latus circumspicitur, nequaquam cernitur pes in anteriora quomodo ponatur. Bene ergo dicitur: Dominus erit in latere tuo, et custodiet pedem tuum ne capiaris, quia miles Dei divinae gratiae clypeo protectus, et quae ex latere possint prodire circumspiciendo considerat, et gressum ante faciem ferre proficiendo non cessat. Cui fraudulentus hostis invidens, quia per pharetram et hastam nequaquam se praevalere conspicit, clypeum opponit, ut si resistentis pectus feriendo non perforat, saltem quibusdam objectionibus proficientis iter intercludat. 1034 Quasdam namque difficultates ipsis ejus conatibus objicit; et cum superare non valet, vel resistit. Sed quid contra tot argumenta bellorum equus Dei agat audiamus:

CAPUT XLII.

VERS. 24. Fervens et fremens sorbet terram, nec reputat tubae sonare clangorem. 83. Utrique, per sanctum fervorem et proficiendi curam resistitur. Contra equum clangor tubae insonat, quando electi mentem in eo quod agit fortiter e vicino quaedam posita culpa terribiliter tentat. Sed fervens et fremens sorbet terram, quia nimio ardore semetipsum discutit; et quidquid in se terrenum reperit, quotidie proficiendo consumit. Et clangorem tubae sonare non reputat, quia consideratione forti omne vitium quod de virtutis gloria nascitur sollicitus declinat. Sonare enim clangorem tubae reputaret, si fortasse propter aliud quod prave suboritur alia agere recta metueret. Quia ergo ad agenda fortia ante insonantia tentamenta non trepidat, in fervore suo positus clangorem tubae minime formidat. Saepe autem dum prosperari se virtutibus conspicit, ne ipsa illum virtutum prosperitas elevet, pulsari se tentationibus gaudet. Unde et apte subjungitur:

CAPUT XLIII.

VERS. 25. Ubi audierit buccinam, dicit Vah. 84. Quia multos diuturna pax inertes reddit, sancti tentari gaudent. Multos enim pejus sua felicitas stravit, multos diuturna pax inertes reddidit; eoque illos inopinatus hostis gravius perculit, quo longo quietis usu negligentes invenit. Unde sancti viri cum multa se proficere virtutum prosperitate considerant, quodam dispensationis supernae moderamine exerceri se etiam tentationibus exsultant, quia tanto robustius acceptam virtutum gloriam custodiunt, quanto tentationis impulsu concussi infirmitatem suam humilius agnoscunt. Equus ergo, audita buccina, vah dicit, quia videlicet praeliator Dei, cum vim tentationis incumbere conspicit, utilitatem supernae dispensationis considerans, ex ipsa validius adversitate confidit. Cujus adversitatis certamina idcirco illum non superant, quia nunquam improvisa tentant. Longe quippe praenotat ex unaquaque re, cujus vitii pugna succrescat. Unde et sequitur:

CAPUT XLIV.

IBID. Procul odoratur bellum. 85. Nulla eos improvisa tentant; unde nec superant.Bellum namque procul odorari est ex causis praecedentibus quae vitiorum pugnae subsequantur agnoscere. Quia enim, sicut jam saepe dictum est, odore res non visa cognoscitur, bellum procul odorari est, sicut flatu narium, sic provisione cogitationum, nequitias latentes indagare. De quo odoratu Dominus recte in Ecclesiae suae laudibus dicit: Nasus tuus sicut turris, quae est in Libano (Cant. VII, 4). Per nasum quoque odores fetoresque discernimus. Et quid per nasum, nisi sanctorum provida discretio designatur? Turris vero speculationis in altum ponitur, ut hostis veniens longe videatur. Recte ergo nasus Ecclesiae turri in Libano similis dicitur, quia sanctorum provida discretio dum sollicite circumquaque conspicit in altum posita, priusquam veniat culpa deprehendit, eamque quo vigilanter praenotat, eo fortiter declinat. Hinc Habacuc ait: Super custodiam meam stabo (Habac. II, 1). [Vet. XXXI.] Hinc uniuscujusque electi animam Jeremias admonens, dicit: Statue tibi speculam, pone tibi amaritudines (Jerem. XXXI, 21). Speculam quippe sibi statuere est ventura vitiorum certamina ex alta consideratione praenoscere. Sibique electi mens amaritudines ponit, quando 1035 et in virtutum pace constituta, dum mala insidiantia conspicit, secura quiescere non consentit. 86. Primo curandum ne mala faciamus, secundo ne bona incaute. Plerumque ex bonis mala nascuntur. Primo autem ne mala quaelibet, secundo vero loco considerat ne bona incaute faciat; et postquam prava subegerit, ipsa etiam sibi subjicere recta contendit, ne si mentis dominium transeant, in clationis culpam vertantur. Quia enim, sicut superius dictum est, plerumque ex bonis per incuriae vitium mala nascuntur, vigilanti studio contemplatur quomodo ex doctrina arrogantia, ex justitia crudelitas, ex pietate remissio, ex zelo ira, ex mansuetudine torpor oriatur. Cumque bona haec agit, quod hi contra se hostes per haec exsurgere valeant conspicit. Nam cum adipiscendis doctrinae studiis elaborat, mentem sollicite contra certamen arrogantiae praeparat. Cum culpas delinquentium juste ulcisci desiderat, sagacissime evitat ne modum justitiae crudelitas vindictae transcendat. Cum pietate frenare se nititur, solerter prospicit ne qua disciplinae dissolutione vincatur. Cum se recti zeli stimulis excitat, summopere providet ne plus quam necesse est irae se flamma succendat. Cum magna mansuetudinis tranquillitate se temperat, vigilanter observat ne torpore frigescat. Quia ergo spiritalis militis cogitatione omne vitium prius quam subrepere possit aspicitur, recte de equo Dei dicitur: Procul odoratur bellum. Perpendit etiam quae turba iniquitatum proruat, si mala ad se ingredi vel pauca permittat. Unde et sequitur:

CAPUT XLV.

IBID. Exhortationem ducum, et ululatum exercitus. 87. Exercitus diaboli dux superbia, cujus soboles, septem principalia vitia. Tentantia quippe vitia, quae invisibili contra nos praelio regnanti super se superbiae militant, alia more ducum praeeunt, alia more exercitus subsequuntur. Neque enim culpae omnes pari accessu cor occupant. Sed dum majores et paucae neglectam mentem praeveniunt, minores et innumerae ad illam se catervatim fundunt. Ipsa namque vitiorum regina superbia cum devictum plene cor ceperit, mox illud septem principalibus vitiis, quasi quibusdam suis ducibus devastandum tradit. Quos videlicet duces exercitus sequitur, quia ex eis procul dubio importunae vitiorum multitudines oriuntur. Quod melius ostendimus, si ipsos duces atque exercitum specialiter, ut possumus, enumerando proferamus. Radix quippe cuncti mali superbia est, de qua, Scriptura attestante, dicitur: Initium omnis peccati est superbia (Eccli. X, 15). Primae autem ejus soboles, septem nimirum principalia vitia, de hac virulenta radice proferuntur, scilicet inanis gloria, invidia, ira, tristitia, avaritia, ventris ingluvies, luxuria. Nam quia his septem superbiae vitiis nos captos doluit, idcirco Redemptor noster ad spiritale liberationis praelium spiritu septiformis gratiae plenus venit. 88. Singula vitia capitalia suum habent exercitum. Sed habent contra nos haec singula exercitum suum. Nam de inani gloria inobedientia, jactantia, hypocrisis, contentiones, pertinaciae, discordiae, et novitatum praesumptiones oriuntur. De invidia, odium, susurratio, detractio, exsultatio in adversus proximi, afflictio autem in prosperis nascitur. De ira, rixae, tumor mentis, contumeliae, clamor, indignatio, blasphemiae proferuntur. De tristitia, malitia, rancor, pusillanimitas, desperatio, torpor circa praecepta, vagatio mentis 1036 erga illicita nascitur. De avaritia, proditio, fraus, fallacia, perjuria, inquietudo, violentiae, et contra misericordiam obdurationes cordis oriuntur. De ventris ingluvie, inepta laetitia, scurrilitas, immunditia, multiloquium, hebetudo sensus circa intelligentiam propagantur. De luxuria, caecitas mentis, inconsideratio, inconstantia, praecipitatio, amor sui, odium Dei, affectus praesentis saeculi, horror autem vel desperatio futuri generantur. Quia ergo septem principalia vitia tantam de se vitiorum multitudinem proferunt, cum ad cor veniunt, quasi subsequentis exercitus catervas trahunt. Ex quibus videlicet septem quinque spiritalia, duoque carnalia sunt. 89. Unumquodque vitium oritur ex altero. Sed unumquodque eorum tanta sibi cognatione jungitur, ut non nisi unum de altero proferatur. Prima namque superbiae soboles inanis est gloria, quae dum oppressam mentem corruperit, mox invidiam gignit, quia nimirum dum vani nominis potentiam appetit, ne quis hanc alius adipisci valeat tabescit. Invidia quoque iram generat, quia quanto in erno livoris vulnere animus sauciatur, tanto etiam mansuetudo tranquillitatis amittitur; et quia quasi dolens membrum tangitur, idcirco oppositae actionis manus velut gravius pressa sentitur. Ex ira quoque tristitia oritur, quia turbata mens quo se inordinate concutit, eo addicendo confundit: et cum dulcedinem tranquillitatis amiserit, nihil hanc nisi ex perturbatione subsequens moeror pascit. Tristitia quoque ad avaritiam derivatur, quia dum confusum cor bonum laetitiae in semetipso intus amiserit, unde consolari debeat foris quaerit; et tanto magis exteriora bona adipisci desiderat, quanto gaudium non habet ad quod intrinsecus recurrat. Post haec vero duo carnalia vitia, id est ventris ingluvies et luxuria, supersunt. Sed cunctis liquet quod de ventris ingluvie luxuria nascitur, dum in ipsa distributione membrorum ventri genitalia subnexa videantur. Unde dum unum inordinate reficitur, aliud procul dubio ad contumelias excitatur. [Vet. XXXII.] 90. Fallacia argumenta, quibus capitalia vitia mentem decipere moliuntur. Bene autem duces exhortari dicti sunt, exercitus ululare, quia prima vitia deceptae menti quasi sub quadam ratione se inserunt, sed innumera quae sequuntur, dum hanc ad omnem insaniam pertrahunt, quasi bestiali clamore confundunt. Inanis namque gloria devictum cor quasi ex ratione solet exhortati, cum dicit: Debes majora appetere, ut quo potestate valueris multos excedere, eo etiam valeas et multis prodesse. Invidia quoque devictum cor quasi ex ratione solet exhortari, cum dicit: In quo illo vel illo minor es? cur ergo eis vel aequalis, vel superior non es? Quanta vales quae illi non valent? Non ergo tibi aut superiores esse, aut etiam aequales debent. Ira etiam devictum cor quasi ex ratione solet exhortari, cum dicit: Quae erga te aguntur aequanimiter ferri non possunt, imo haec patienter tolerare peccatum est, quia etsi non eis cum magna exasperatione resistitur, contra te deinceps sine mensura cumulantur. Tristitia quoque devictum cor quasi ex ratione solet exhortari, cum dicit: Quid habes unde gaudeas, cum tanta mala de proximis portas? Perpende cum quo moerore omnes intuendi sunt qui in tanto contra te amaritudinis 1037 felle vertuntur. Avaritia quoque devictum animum quasi ex ratione solet exhortari, cum dicit: Valde sine culpa est, quod quaedam habenda concupiscis, quia non multiplicari appetis sed egere pertimescis; et quod male alius retinet, ipse melius expendis. Ventris quoque ingluvies devictum cor quasi ex ratione solet exhortari, cum dicit: Ad esum Deus omnia munda condidit, et qui satiari cibo respuit, quid aliud quam muneri concesso contradicit? Luxuria quoque devictum cor quasi ex ratione solet exhortari, cum dicit: Cur te in voluptate tua modo non dilatas, cum quid te sequatur ignoras? Acceptum tempus in desideriis perdere non debes, quia quam citius pertranseat nescis. Si enim misceri Deus hominem in voluptate coitus nollet, in ipso humani generis exordio masculum et feminam non fecisset (Genes. I, 27). Haec est ducum exhortatio, quae dum incaute ad secretum cordis admittitur, familiarius iniqua persuadet. Quam videlicet exercitus ululans sequitur, quia infelix anima semel a principalibus vitiis capta, dum multiplicatis iniquitatibus in insaniam vertitur, ferali jam immanitate vastatur. 91. Quid, ne vitia noceant, agendum. Sed miles Dei, quia solerter praevidere vitiorum certamina nititur, bellum procul odoratur, quia mala praeeuntia, quid menti persuadere valeant, dum cogitatione sollicita respicit, exhortationem ducum naris sagacitate deprehendit. Et quia a longe praesciendo subsequentium iniquitatum confusionem conspicit, quasi ululatum exercitus odorando cognoscit. Igitur quia vel praedicatorem Dei, vel quemlibet spiritalis certaminis militem descriptum equi narratione cognovimus, nunc eumdem iterum in avis significatione videamus, ut qui per equum didicimus ejus fortitudinem, etiam per avem discamus illius contemplationem. Quia enim per descriptam equi magnitudinem audivimus quantum contra certamina vitiorum vir sanctus per patientiam tolerat, nunc per avium speciem cognoscamus quantum per contemplationem volat. Sequitur:

CAPUT XLVI [Rec. XVIII].

VERS. 26. Nunquid per sapientiam tuam plumescit accipiter expandens alas suas ad Austrum? 92. Gratia Dei veterem hominem exspoliamus. De accipitre quaedam notatu digna. Quia per annos singulos pennam veterem accipiter nova nascente projiciat, ac sine intermissione plumescat, pene nullus ignorat. Non autem hic illud plumae tempus dicitur, quo in nido vestitur, quia tunc nimirum adhuc videlicet pullus ad Austrum alas expandere non valet, sed illa annua pluma describitur, quae laxata veteri penna renovatur. Et quidem domesticis accipitribus quo melius plumescere debeant humida ac tepentia loca requiruntur. Agrestibus vero moris est ut flante Austro alas expandant, quatenus eorum membra ad laxandam pennam veterem venti tepore concalescant. Cum vero ventus deest, alis contra radios solis extensis atque percussis, tepentem sibi auram faciunt, sicque apertis poris vel veteres exsiliunt, vel novae succrescunt. Quid est ergo accipitrem in Austro plumescere, nisi quod unusquisque 1038 sanctorum tactus flatu sancti Spiritus concalescit, et, usum vetustae conversationis abjiciens, novi hominis formam sumit? Quod Paulus admonet, dicens: Exspoliantes vos veterem hominem cum actibus suis, et induentes novum (Coloss. III, 9). Et rursum: Licet is qui foris est noster homo corrumpatur, tamen is qui intus est renovatur de die in diem (II Cor. IV, 16). Vetustam autem pennam projicere est inveterata studia dolosae actionis amittere, et novam pennam sumere est mitem ac simplicem bene vivendo sensum tenere. Penna namque veteris conversationis gravat, et pluma novae immutationis sublevat, ut ad volatum tanto leviorem quanto noviorem reddat. [Vet. XXXIII.] 93. Ad hanc renovationem necessaria confessio. Et bene ait: Expandit alas suas ad Austrum. Alas quippe nostras ad Austrum expandere est per adventum sancti Spiritus nostras confitendo cogitationes aperire, ut jam non libeat defendendo nos tegere, sed accusando publicare. Tunc ergo accipiter plumescit, cum ad Austrum alas expanderit, quia tunc unusquisque se virtutum pennis induit, cum sancto Spiritui cogitationes suas confitendo substernit. Qui enim vetera fatendo non detegit, novae vitae opera minime producit, qui nescit lugere quod gravat, non valet proferre quod sublevat. Ipsa namque compunctionis vis poros cordis aperit, et plumas virtutum fundit; cumque se studiose mens de pigra vetustate redarguit, alacri novitate juvenescit. Dicatur ergo beato Job: Nunquid per sapientiam tuam plumescit accipiter, expandens alas suas ad Austrum? id est, Nunquid cuilibet electo tu intelligentiam contulisti, ut flante sancto Spiritu, cogitationum alas expandat, quatenus pondera vetustae conversationis abjiciat, et virtutum plumas in usum novi volatus sumat? Ut hinc videlicet colligat quia vigilantiam sensus in semetipso ex se non habet, qui hanc ex se conferre aliis nequaquam valet. Potest etiam per hunc accipitrem renovata gentilitas designari, ac si beato Job aperte diceretur: Futuras virtutum plumas in gentilitate respice, et vetustas superbiae pennas amitte. Sequitur:

CAPUT XLVII [Rec. XIX].

VERS. 27. Nunquid ad praeceptum tuum elevabitur aquila, et in arduis ponet nidum sibi? 94. Quid aquilae nomine Scriptura sacra significet. Insidiatores spiritus, potestatem terrenam, subtilem sanctorum intelligentiam, vel Christi ascensionem.In Scriptura sacra vocabulo aquilae aliquando maligni spiritus raptores animarum, aliquando praesentis saeculi potestates, aliquando vero vel subtilissimae sanctorum intelligentiae, vel incarnatus Dominus ima celeriter transvolans, et mox summa repetens designatur. Aquilarum nomine insidiatores spiritus exprimuntur, Jeremia attestante, qui ait: Velociores sunt persecutores nostri aquilis coeli (Thren. IV, 19). Persecutores enim nostri aquilis coeli velociores sunt, cum tanta contra nos maligni homines faciunt, ut ipsas etiam aereas potestates inventionibus malitiae praeire videantur. Aquilae etiam vocabulo potestas terrena figuratur. Unde per Ezechielem prophetam dicitur: Aquila grandis, magnarum alarum, longo membrorum ductu plena plumis et varietate, venit ad Libanum, et tulit medullam cedri, et summitatem 1039 frondium ejus evulsit (Ezech. XVII, 3). Qua videlicet aquila quis alius quam Nabuchodonosor rex Babyloniae designatur? Quae pro immensitate exercitus magnarum alarum, pro diuturnitate temporum longo membrorum ductu, pro multis vero divitiis plena plumis, pro innumera autem terrenae gloriae compositione plena varietate describitur. Qui venit ad Libanum, et tulit medullam cedri, et summitatem frondium ejus evulsit, quia Judaeae celsitudinem petens, nobilitatem regni ejus, quasi medullam cedri abstulit; et dum tenerrimam regum prolem a regni sui culmine captivando sustulit, quasi summitatem frondium ejus evulsit. Subtilem sanctorum intelligentiam, vel Christi ascensionem. Aquila fixis oculis solem intuetur. Aquilae vocabulo vel subtilis sanctorum intelligentia, vel volatus dominicae ascensionis exprimitur. Unde idem propheta dum sub animalium specie evangelistas quatuor se vidisse describeret (Ezech. X, 1), in eis sibi hominis, leonis, bovis, et aquilae faciem apparuisse testatur, quartum procul dubio animal Joannem per aquilam designans, qui volando terram deseruit, quia per subtilem intelligentiam interna mysteria Verbum videndo penetravit. Cui nimirum propheticae sententiae ipse quoque Joannes in revelatione sua de semetipso non dissonat, dicens: Animal primum simile leoni, secundum animal simile vitulo, tertium animal habens faciem quasi hominis, quartum animal simile aquilae volanti (Apoc. IV, 7). Et quamvis singula ad unumquemque evangelistam recte conveniant, dum alius humanae nativitatis ordinem, alius per mundi sacrificii mactationem, quasi vituli mortem, alius potestatis fortitudinem quasi leonis clamorem insinuat, alius nativitatem Verbi intuens, quasi ortum solem aquila aspectat, possunt tamen haec quatuor animalia ipsum suum caput, cujus sunt membra, signare. Ipse namque et homo est, quia naturam nostram veraciter suscepit, et vitulus, quia pro nobis patienter occubuit; et leo, quia per divinitatis fortitudinem susceptae mortis vinculum rupit; et ad extremum aquila, quia ad coelum, de quo venerat, rediit. Homo ergo nascendo, vitulus moriendo, leo resurgendo, aquila ad coelos ascendendo vocatus est. [Vet. XXXIV.] Sed hoc loco aquilae nomine subtilis sanctorum intelligentia et sublimis eorum contemplatio figuratur. Cunctarum quippe avium visum acies aquilae superat, ita ut solis radius fixos in se ejus oculos nulla lucis suae coruscatione reverberans claudat. Ad praeceptum ergo Dei elevatur aquila, dum jussionibus divinis obtemperans, in supernis suspenditur fidelium vita. Quae et in arduis nidum ponere dicitur, quia desideria terrena despiciens, spe jam de coelestibus nutritur. In arduis nidum ponit, quia habitationem mentis suae in abjecta et infima conversatione non construit. Hinc est quod Cinaeo Balaam prophetante dicitur: Robustum quidem est habitaculum tuum, sed si in petra posueris nidum tuum (Num. XXIV, 21). Cinaeus namque possessor interpretatur. Et qui sunt qui praesentia possident, nisi hi qui ingenio sapientiae saecularis callent? Qui in hoc veraciter robustum sibi habitaculum construunt, si per humilitatem parvuli apud semetipsos facti, in Christi sublimitate nutriantur; 1040 si semetipsos infirmos sentiant, et in excelsa humilitate cogniti Redemptoris fovendam mentis fiduciam ponant; si ima non appetant, si omne quod praeterit cordis volatu transcendant. 95. Paulus aquilae similis. Videamus aquilam nidum spei sibi in arduis construentem. Ait: Nostra conversatio in coelis est (Philip. III, 20). Et rursum: Qui conresuscitavit et consedere nos fecit in coelestibus (Ephes. II, 6). In arduis habet nidum, quia profecto in supernis figit consilium. Non vult mentem in ima dejicere, non vult per abjectionem conversationis humanae in infimis habitare. Tunc Paulus fortasse in carcere tenebatur, cum se consedere Christo in coelestibus testaretur. Sed ibi erat, ubi ardentem jam mentem fixerat, non illic ubi illum necessario pigra adhuc caro retinebat. 96. Electi terrena omnia despiciunt. Hoc namque esse speciale specimen electorum solet, quod sic sciunt praesentis vitae iter carpere, ut per spei certitudinem noverint jam se ad alta pervenisse, quatenus cuncta quae praeterfluunt sub se esse videant, atque omne quod in hoc mundo eminet amore aeternitatis calcent. Hinc est enim quod sequenti se animae per prophetam Dominus dicit: Sustollam te super altitudines terrae (Isai. LVIII, 14). Quasi quaedam namque inferiora terrae sunt, damna, contumeliae, egestas, abjectio, quae ipsi quoque amatores saeculi dum per latae viae planitiem ambulant, vitando calcare non cessant. Altitudines autem terrae sunt, lucra rerum, blandimenta subditorum, divitiarum abundantia, honor, et sublimitas dignitatum; quae quisquis per ima adhuc desideria incedit, eo ipso alta aestimat, quo magna putat. At si semel cor in coelestibus figitur, mox quam abjecta sint cernitur quae alta videbantur. Nam sicut qui in montem conscendit eo paulisper caetera subterjacentia despicit, quo ad altiora gressum amplius tendit, ita qui in summis intentionem figere nititur, dum annisu ipso nullam praesentis vitae gloriam esse deprehendit, super terrae altitudines elevatur; et quod prius in imis desideriis positus super se credidit, post ascendendo proficiens sibi subesse cognoscit. Quae ergo illic Dominus facturum se esse pollicetur, dicens: Sustollam te super altitudines terrae (Ibid.), haec apud beatum Job solum sese facere posse testatur, dicens: Nunquid ad praeceptum tuum elevabitur aqurla, et ponet in arduis nidum sibi? Ac si diceret: Ut ad meum, qui quod exterius praecipio hoc intrinsecus gratia occultae largitatis inspiro. Sequitur:

CAPUT XLVIII.

VERS. 28. In petris manet. 97. In petris, hoc est in sanctorum patrum celsitudine et constantia nidum ponunt. In sacro eloquio cum singulari numero petra nominatur quis alius quam Christus accipitur? Paulo attestante, qui ait: Petra autem erat Christus (I Cor. X, 4). Cum vero petrae pluraliter appellantur, membra ejus, videlicet sancti viri, qui illius robore solidati sunt exprimuntur. Quos nimirum Petrus apostolus lapides vocat, dicens: Vos tanquam lapides vivi, coaedificamini domus spiritales (I Pet. II, 5). Ista itaque aquila, quae ad veri solis radios cordis oculos erexit, in petris manere dicitur, quia in dictis antiquorum et fortium patrum mentis statione collocatur. Eorum quippe vitam quos in 1041 via Dei praeisse conspicit ad memoriam reducit, atque in celsitudine illorum fortitudinis studendo nidum sibi construit sanctae meditationis. Cumque eorum acta dictaque tacite cogitat, cum praesentis vitae gloriam in comparatione aeternae excellentiae quam sit abjecta considerat, quasi sub se esse ima terrarum in petris residens observat. [Vet. XXXV.] 98. Petrarum nomine coeli potestates designantur. Possunt etiam petrae sublimes virtutum coelestium potestates intelligi, quas non jam quasi more arborum huc atque illuc ventus nostrae mutabilitatis inclinat, quia velut petrae in arduis sitae ab omni motu mutabilitatis alienae sunt, et ad soliditatem fixae celsitudinis ipsa cui inhaerent aeternitate duruerunt. Vir itaque sanctus, cum terrena despicit, more se aquilae ab altiora suspendit, et per contemplationis spiritum sublevatus perennem angelorum gloriam praestolatur, atque in hoc mundo hospes, illa appetendo quae aspicit, jam in sublimibus figitur. Recte ergo dicitur: In petris manet, id est intentione cordis inter illas coelestes virtutes residet, quae et per aeternitatis suae fortitudinem tanta jam soliditate fixae sunt, ut in nullo culpae latere mutabilitatis varietate flectantur. Unde et apte sequitur:

CAPUT XLIX.

IBID. Et in praeruptis silicibus commoratur, atque inaccessis rupibus. 99. In Christo restaurata sunt omnia, quae in coelis et quae in terris. Qui enim sunt alii praerupti silices, nisi illi fortissimi angelorum chori, qui quamvis non integri, sed tamen in proprio statu fixi, cadente cum suis angelis diabolo remanserunt? Praerupti enim sunt, quia pars eorum cecidit, pars remansit. Qui integri quidem stant per qualitatem meriti, sed per numeri quantitatem praerupti. Hanc praeruptionem restituere Mediator venit ut redempto humano genere illa angelica damna sarciret, et mensuram coelestis patriae locupletius fortasse cumularet. Propter hanc praeruptionem de Patre dicitur: Proposuit in eo, in dispensatione plenitudinis temporum, instaurare omnia in Christo, quae in coelis, et quae in terra sunt in ipso (Ephes. I, 9, 10). In ipso quippe restaurantur ea quae in terra sunt, dum peccatores ad justitiam convertuntur. In ipso restaurantur ea quae in coelis sunt, dum illuc humiliati homines redeunt unde apostatae angeli superbiendo ceciderunt. Quod vero ait: Inaccessis rupibus, nimirum qui praerupti silices, ipsi sunt inaccessae rupes. Cordi enim peccatorum hominum valde inaccessa est claritas angelorum, quia quo ad pulchra corporalia cecidit, eo a spiritali specie oculos clausit. Sed quisquis ita contemplatione rapitur, ut per divinam gratiam sublevatus, intentionem suam jam angelorum choris interserat, et fixus in sublimibus, ab omni se infima actione suspendat, non ei sufficit gloriam angelicae claritatis aspicere, nisi eum etiam qui est super angelos valeat videre. Sola namque ejus visio vera mentis nostrae refectio est. Unde cum dixisset hanc aquilam in petris manere, et in praeruptis silicibus atque inaccessis rupibus commorari, illico subdidit:

CAPUT L [Rec. XX].

VERS. 29. Inde contemplatur escam. 100. Dei visio mentis nostrae cibus. Id est, ex illis choris angelicis tendit oculum mentis ad contemplandam gloriam supernae majestatis, 1042 qua non visa adhuc esurit, qua tandem visa satiatur. Scriptum quippe est: Pro eo quod laboravit anima ejus, videbit et saturabitur (Isai. 53, 11). Et rursum: Beati qui esuriunt et sitiunt justitiam, quoniam ipsi saturabuntur (Matth. V, 6). Quis vero mentis nostrae cibus sit, indicatur aperte cum dicitur: Beati mundo corde, quoniam ipsi Deum videbunt (Ibid., 8). Et quia, interpositione corruptibilis carnis gravati, Deum sicut est videre non possumus, recte subjungitur:

CAPUT LI.

IBID. Oculi ejus de longe prospiciunt. 101. Deum hic, nonnisi de longe prospicimus. Quantumlibet enim in hac vita positus quisque profecerit, necdum Deum per speciem, sed per aenigma et speculum videt. E vicino autem cum respicimus, verius cernimus; cum vero longius aciem tendimus, sub incerto visu caligamus. Quia igitur sancti viri in altam se contemplationem erigunt, et tamen Deum, sicut est, videre non possunt, bene de hac aquila dicitur: Oculi ejus de longe prospiciunt. Ac si diceret: Intentionis aciem fortiter tendunt, sed necdum propinquum aspiciunt, cujus claritatis magnitudinem penetrare nequaquam possunt. A luce enim incorruptibili caligo nos nostrae corruptionis obscurat; cumque et videri aliquatenus potest, et tamen videri lux ipsa, sicut est, non potest, quam longe sit indicat. Quam si mens utcunque non cerneret, nec quia longe esset videret. Si autem perfecte jam cerneret, profecto hanc quasi per caliginem non videret. Igitur quia nec omnino cernitur, nec rursum omnino non cernitur, recte dictum est, quia a longe Deus videtur. 102. Isaiae hac de re testimonium. Activae vitae gradibus ad contemplationis culmen ascenditur. Libet ad medium Isaiae verba deducere, atque haec et illa quam uno spiritu proferantur indicare. Qui cum activae vitae virtutes exprimeret, dicens: Qui ambulat in justitiis, et loquitur veritatem, qui projicit avaritiam ex calumnia, et excutit manus suas ab omni munere, qui obturat aures suas ne audiat sanguinem, et claudit oculos suos ne videat malum (Isai. XXXIII, 15), illico ab ejusdem activae vitae gradibus ad quae contemplationis culmina ascendatur adjunxit, dicens: Iste in excelsis habitabit, munimenta saxorum sublimitas ejus, panis ei datus est, aquae ejus fideles sunt. Regem in decore suo videbunt oculi ejus, cernent terram de longe (Ibid., 16). In excelsis namque habitare est cor in coelestibus ponere. Et munimenta saxorum sublimitas nostra est, cum fortium patrum praecepta et exempla respicimus atque ab infima cogitatione separamur. Munimenta saxorum sublimitas nostra est, cum mente choris castrisque coelestibus jungimur, et insidiantes malignos spiritus stantes in arce cordis quasi subterpositos expugnamus. Tunc nobis etiam panis datur, quia in supernis erecta intentio, aeternitatis contemplatione reficitur. Aquae enim nostrae fideles sunt, quia doctrina Dei quod hic per spem promittit, hoc illic in munere exhibet. Sapientia namque hujus mundi infidelis est, quia mansura post mortem non est. Aquae nostrae fideles sunt, quia verba vitae quod ante mortem insinuant, hoc etiam post mortem demonstrant. Regem in decore suo oculi nostri conspiciunt, quia Redemptor noster in judicio et a reprobis 1043 homo videbitur, sed ad divinitatis ejus intuendam celsitudinem soli qui electi sunt sublevantur. Quasi enim quamdam foeditatem Regis videre est solam servilem formam in qua ab iniquis despectus est cernere. Sed ab electis in decore suo Rex cernitur, quia ultra semetipsos rapti, in ipso divinitatis fulgore oculos cordis figunt. Et quia quandiu in hac vita sunt, illam viventium patriam, sicut est, videre non possunt, recte adjungitur: Cernent terram de longe (Ibid., 17). Quod ergo hic ait: Elevabitur aquila, et in arduis ponet nidum sibi, hoc illic dicitur: In excelsis habitabit. Quod hic dicitur: In petris manet, et in praeruptis silicibus commoratur, atque inaccessis rupibus, hoc illic subjicitur: Munimenta saxorum sublimitas ejus. Quod rursus hic subinfertur: Inde contemplatur escam, hoc illic quoque subditur: Panis ei datus est, aquae ejus fideles sunt, Regem in decore suo videbunt oculi ejus. Et quod hic subjungitur: Oculi ejus de longe prospiciunt, hoc illic apte subjicitur: Cernent terram de longe. [Vet. XXXVI.] 103. Paulus quam sublimis aquila. Consideremus quam sublimis aquila fuerit Paulus, qui usque ad tertium coelum volavit (II Cor. XII, 2), sed tamen in hac vita positus e longinquo adhuc Deum prospicit, qui ait: Videmus nunc per speculum in aenigmate, tunc autem facie ad faciem (I Cor. XIII, 12). Et rursum: Ego me non arbitror comprehendisse (Philip. III, 13). Sed quamvis aeterna valde minus quam sunt ipse conspiciat, quamvis ea se cognoscere perfecte non posse cognoscat, infirmis tamen auditoribus ea ipsa infundere praedicando non potest, quae videre saltem per speculum et imaginem potest. De semetipso quippe tanquam de alio loquitur, dicens: Audivit arcana verba, quae non licet homini loqui (II Cor. XII, 4). Interna ergo quamvis minima et extrema videantur, fortibus tamen praedicatoribus summa sunt, infirmis vero auditoribus incapabilia. Unde et praedicatores sancti, cum auditores suos divinitatis verbum capere non posse conspiciunt, ad sola incarnationis dominicae verba descendunt. Unde bene hic, dum sublevata in arduis aquila longe videre dicitur, illico subinfertur:

CAPUT LII [Rec. XXI].

VERS. 30. Pulli ejus lambunt sanguinem. 104. Passionis Christi meditatione pasci debemus. Ac si aperte diceretur: Ipsa quidem divinitatis contemplatione pascitur, sed quia auditores ejus divinitatis percipere arcana nequaquam possunt, cognito crucifixi Domini cruore satiantur. Sanguinem namque lambere est passionis Dominicae infirma venerari. Hinc est quod idem Paulus, qui, sicut paulo ante jam diximus, ad tertii coeli secreta volaverat, discipulis dicebat: Non enim judicavi me scire aliquid inter vos, nisi Christum Jesum, et hunc crucifixum (I Cor. II, 2). Ac si aperte haec aquila diceret: Ego quidem escam meam divinitatis ejus potentiam de longe prospicio, sed vobis adhuc parvulis incarnationis ejus tantummodo lambendum sanguinem trado. Nam qui per praedicationem suam tacita divinitatis celsitudine, infirmos auditores de solo cruore crucis edocet, quid aliud quam sanguinem pullis praebet? Quia vero uniuscujusque sancti praedicatoris anima corruptione carnis exuta ad eum mox ducitur, qui pro nobis sponte sua in mortem cecidit, et de morte surrexit, apte de hac aquila subditur:

CAPUT LIII.

IBID. Et ubicunque cadaver fuerit, statim adest. 105. Christus in coelis regnans electos ad se colligit.Cadaver quippe a casu dicitur. Et non immerito 1044 corpus Domini propter casum mortis cadaver vocatur. [Rec. XXII.] Quod autem hic de hac aquila dicitur: Ubicunque cadaver fuerit, statim adest (Matth. XXIV, 28), hoc de egredientibus animabus fieri Veritas spopondit, dicens: Ubicunque fuerit corpus, illic congregabuntur et aquilae.

Ac si aperte dicat: Qui coelesti sedi incarnatus Redemptor vester praesideo, electorum quoque animas cum carne solvero, ad coelestia sublevabo. [Vet. XXXVII.] 106. Omnis peccator cadaver; ad quod advolant aquilae, pii videlicet praedicatores peccatorum salutem esurientes. Haec volatus Pauli orbem peragrantis causa. Sed hoc quod de hac aquila dicitur: Ubicunque fuerit cadaver statim adest, intelligi et aliter potest. Omnis enim qui in peccati mortem ceciderit, non inconvenienter poterit cadaver vocari. Quasi exanimis namque jacet, qui justitiae vivificantem spiritum non habet. Quia ergo sanctus quisque praedicator ubi peccatores esse considerat, illuc anxie pervolat, ut in peccati morte jacentibus lucem vivificationis ostendat, bene de hac aquila dicitur: Ubicunque cadaver fuerit, statim adest. Id est, illuc tendit, ubi utilitatem praedicationis prospicit, ut ex eo quod jam spiritaliter vivit, aliis in morte sua jacentibus prosit, quos corripiendo quasi edit, sed ab iniquitate ad innocentiam permutando in sua membra quasi edendo convertit. Ecce ipse, quem ad testimonium jam saepe deduximus, Paulus cum nunc Judaeam, nunc Corinthum, nunc Ephesum, nunc Romam, nunc Hispanias peteret, ut in peccati morte jacentibus, aeternae vitae gratiam nuntiaret, quid se aliud quam esse aquilam demonstrabat; quae velociter omnia transvolans, ubicunque jacens cadaver quaerebat, ut dum voluntatem Dei lucratis peccatoribus faceret, quasi escam suam in cadavere reperiret? Esca quippe justorum est conversio perversorum, de qua dicitur: Operamini non cibum qui perit, sed qui permanet in vitam aeternam (Joan. VI, 27). Auditis itaque tot sanctorum virtutibus, beatus Job obstupuisse intelligitur, et sub admirationis terrore siluisse. Nam sequitur:

CAPUT LIV [Rec. XXIII].

VERS. 31, 32. Adjecit Dominus, et locutus est ad Job: Nunquid qui contendit cum Deo tam facile conquiescit? Utique qui arguit Deum debet et respondere illi. 107. Pia et moderata Dei ad Job increpatio. Vir sanctus tanta hac districtione flagelli non aestimavit augeri sibi merita, sed vitia resecari. Quae quia in se nulla cognovit, percussum injuste se credidit, et percutientem prorsus arguere est de percussione murmurare. Considerans autem Dominus quod ea quae protulit non ex tumore superbiae, sed ex qualitate collegerat vitae, pie illum increpat dicens: Nunquid qui contendit cum Deo tam facile conquiescit? Utique qui arguit Deum debet et respondere illi. Ac si apertius diceret: Qui tanta de tua actione locutus es, cur audita sanctorum vita siluisti? Me enim fuit arguere, de percussione mea an fuerit justa dubitare. Et bona quidem tua veraciter protulisti, sed haec quo tenderent flagella nescisti, quia etsi non habes jam quod corrigas, habes adhuc tamen quo crescas. In quantam vero virtutis arcem quam plurimos sublevem, me ecce narrante cognovisti. Ipse considerabas tuam, sed aliorum celsitudinem nesciebas. Auditis igitur aliorum virtutibus, si quid vales, responde de tuis. Scimus autem quod cordis sui oculum per elationis tenebras exstinguit, qui, cum recta agit, considerare meliorum merita negligit. 1045 At contra magno humilitatis radio sua opera illustrat, qui aliorum bona subtiliter pensat, quia dum ea quae ipse fecerit facta foris et ab aliis conspicit, eum qui de singularitate intus erumpere nititur superbiae tumorem premit. Hinc est quod voce Dei ad Eliam solum se aestimantem dicitur: Reliqui mihi septem millia virorum qui 1046 non curvaverunt genua ante Baal (III Reg. XIX, 18), ut dum non solum se remansisse cognosceret, elationis gloriam, quae ei de singularitate surgere poterat, evitare posset. Beatus itaque Job nihil perverse egisse reprehenditur, sed de aliorum etiam bene gestis docetur, ut dum se aequales et alios habere consideraret, ei qui singulariter summus est, se humiliter subdat.

LIBER TRIGESIMUS SECUNDUS.

Duobus ultimis versiculis capitis XXXIX explicatis, quatuor supra decem priores cap. XL exponuntur; multaque tum de infinita Dei potentia, tum de Satanae noxiis in homines consiliis docentur.

CAPUT PRIMUM.

1. Sancti, unde digniores efficiuntur, inde sibi magis videntur indigni. Sancti viri quo apud Deum altius virtutum dignitate proficiunt, eo subtilius indignos se esse deprehendunt, quia dum proximi luci fiunt, quidquid eos in seipsis latebat inveniunt; et tanto magis foris sibi deformes apparent, quanto nimis pulchrum est quod intus vident. Unusquisque enim sibi, dum tactu veri luminis illustratur, ostenditur; et unde agnoscit quid est justitia, inde eruditur, ut videat quid est culpa. Hinc est quod saepe mens nostra quamvis frigida in conversationis humanae actione torpescat, quamvis in quibusdam delinquat et nesciat, quamvis peccata quaedam quasi nulla perpendat; cum tamen ad appetenda sublimia orationis compunctione se erigit, ipso suae compunctionis oculo excitata ad circumspiciendam se post fletum vigilantior redit. Nam cum neglectam se deserit, et noxio tepore torpescit, vel otiosa verba, vel inutiles cogitationes minoris esse reatus omnimodo credit. At si, igne compunctionis incalescens, a tepore suo, tacta subito afflatu contemplationis, evigilet, illa quae levia paulo ante credidit mox ut gravia ac mortifera perhorrescit. Cuncta enim vel in minimis noxia, quasi atrocissima refugit, quia videlicet per conceptionem spiritus gravida, introire ad se jam inania nulla permittit. Ex eo enim quod intus conspicit, quam sint horrenda haec quae exterius perstrepunt sentit; et quanto amplius sublevata profecerit, tanto magis refugit infima, in quibus prostrata defecit. Nihil quippe eam nisi id quod interius viderat pascit; atque eo gravius tolerat quidquid se ei extrinsecus ingerit, quo illud non est quod intrinsecus vidit, sed ex his interioribus quae raptim videre potuit, ad exteriora quae tolerat judicandi regulam sumit. Super se enim rapitur dum sublimia contemplatur; et semetipsam jam liberius excedendo conspiciens, quidquid ei ex seipsa sub seipsa remanet, subtilius comprehendit. Ex qua re miro modo agitur, ut, sicut superius dictum est, unde dignior efficitur, inde sibimet indigna videatur, et tunc rectitudini se longe esse sentiat, cum appropinquat. Unde Salomon ait: Cuncta tentavi in sapientia, et dixi: Sapiens efficiar, et ipsa longius recessit a me (Eccle. VII, 24). Quaesita enim sapientia longe recedere dicitur, quia appropinquanti altior videtur. Qui vero hanc nequaquam quaerunt, tanto se ei propinquos aestimant, quanto et ejus rectitudinis regulam ignorant, quia siti in tenebris mirari lucis claritatem nesciunt, quam nunquam viderunt; cumque in formam ejus pulchritudinis non tenduntur, in semetipsis libenter quotidie deformiores fiunt. Nam quisquis ejus radiis tangitur, sua illi manifestius tortitudo monstratur; et eo verius invenit quantum flectatur in vitio, quo, sagacius summa considerans, conspicit quantum distat a recto. Unde beatus Job humanum genus virtutibus transiens, amicos loquendo superavit; sed loquente Deo, sublimius eruditus, semetipsum cognoscendo reticuit. Illos namque injuste loquentes subdidit, sed ad verba locutionis intimae reum se juste cognovit. Et quidem cur flagellatus sit nescit, sed tamen cur flagella veneratus non sit, silendo redarguit. Divina enim judicia cum nesciuntur, non audaci sermone discutienda sunt, sed formidoloso silentio veneranda, quia et cum causas rerum conditor in flagello non aperit, eo justas indicat, quo se eas facere qui summe justus est demonstrat. Vir ergo sanctus, et prius de locutione, et post de silentio reprehensus, quid de semetipso sentiat innotescat. Ait enim:

CAPUT II.

CAP. XXXIX, VERS. 34. Qui leviter locutus sum, respondere quid possum? 2. De verbo otioso ne sancti quidem excusari possunt. Sed linguae culpas vitae meritis tegere curant. Ac si dicat: Sermonem meum defenderem, si hunc cum rationis pondere protulissem. At postquam lingua levitate usa convincitur, quid restat nisi ut conticendo refrenetur? Sequitur: IBID. Manum meam ponam super os meum. Usu sacri eloquii in manu operatio, in ore locutio solet intelligi. Manum ergo super os ponere est virtute boni operis culpas tegere incautae locutionis. Quis vero inveniri potest qui, quamlibet perfectus sit, de otioso tamen sermone non peccet? Jacobo attestante, qui ait: Nolite plures magistri fieri, in multis enim offendimus omnes (Jacob. III, 1). Et rursum: Linguam nullus hominum domare potest (Ibid. 8). Cujus culpas redarguens per semetipsam Veritas, dicit: Dico autem vobis quoniam omne verbum otiosum quod locuti fuerint homines, reddent de eo 1047 rationem in die judicii (Matth. XII, 36). Sed sancti viri ante Dei oculos student culpas linguae tegere meritis vitae, student bonorum operum pondere premere immoderata verborum. Unde in sancta Ecclesia manus super os ponitur, dum in electis ejus quotidie otiosae locutionis vitium bonae actionis virtute operitur. Scriptum namque est: Beati quorum remissae sunt iniquitates, et quorum tecta sunt peccata (Psal. XXXI, 1). Sed rursum cum scriptum sit: Omnia nuda et aperta sunt oculis ejus (Hebr. IV, 13), quomodo tegi possunt quae ejus oculis cui cuncta nuda sunt abscondi nequaquam possunt? Sed quia hoc quod tegimus, inferius ponimus, atque hoc unde tegimus nimirum superducimus, ut quod est subterpositum tegamus, tegere peccata dicimur quae quasi subterponimus dum abdicamus, eisque aliud superducimus, dum bonae actionis opus ad hoc post eligimus ut praeferamus. Qui ergo priora mala deserit, et bona posterius facit, per hoc quod addit, transactam nequitiam tegit, cui boni operis merita superducit. Beatus igitur Job sanctae Ecclesiae typum tenens, et in verbis suis sua allegans, nostra designans, dicat ex se, dicat ex nobis:

Manum meam ponam super os meum; id est, hoc quod districto judici de sermone meo in me displicuisse considero, ante ejus oculos sub velamine recti operis abscondo. Sequitur:

CAPUT III.

VERS. 35. Unum locutus sum, quod utinam non dixissem; et alterum, quibus ultra non addam. 3. Job Deo increpanti humiliter se peccasse confitetur. Si transacta beati Job verba discutimus, nihil eum nequiter dixisse reperimus. Si vero dicta ejus, quae cum veritate ac libertate prolata sunt, in aliquod superbiae vitium flectimus, duo jam solummodo non erunt, quia multa erunt. Sed quia loqui nostrum est hominibus occultum sensum verbis aperire, loqui vero nostrum ad divinas aures est motum mentis etiam expressione actionis ostendere, beatus Job ad libram se subtilissimi examinis pensans, locutione sua secundo se deliquisse confitetur. Unum enim loqui illicite est res flagello dignas agere, aliud loqui est etiam de flagello murmurare. Qui ergo ante increpationem dominicam in omni opere hominibus praelatus fuit ipsa in altum increpatione proficiens, et minus se rectum prius in opere, et minus se patientem post in verbere agnovit. Unde semetipsum redarguit, dicens: Unum locutus sum, quod utinam non dixissem; et alterum, quibus ultra non addam. Ac si dicat: Rectum me quidem inter homines credidi: sed, te loquente, et ante flagella pravum, et post flagella me rigidum inveni. Quibus ultra non addam, quia jam quanto nunc te loquentem subtilius intelligo, tanto meipsum humilius investigo. [Vet. II, Rec. IV.] 4. Poenitentiae objectum sunt bona neglecta, et mala perpetrata. Activa vita multorum est, contemplativa paucorum. Et quia beatus Job sanctae Ecclesiae typum tenet, possunt electis omnibus haec ejus verba congruere, qui cognoscentes Dominum, in uno et alio deliquisse se sentiunt, quia se intelligunt vel in cogitatione et opere, vel in Dei ac proximi neglecta dilectione peccasse. Quibus se promittunt ultra nil addere, quia per conversionis gratiam curant poenitendo quotidie etiam transacta purgare. Per hoc tamen quod beatus Job de duobus se poenitendo redarguit, liquido ostendit quod 1048 peccator omnis in poenitentia duplicem habere gemitum debet, nimirum quia et bonum quod oportuit non fecit, et malum quod non oportuit fecit. Hinc est enim quod per Moysen de eo qui juramentum protulit, ut vel male quid vel benefaceret, et hoc ipsum oblivione transcendit, dicitur: Offerat agnam de gregibus sive capram, orabitque pro eo sacerdos, et pro peccato ejus. Sin autem non potuerit offerre pecus, offerat duos turtures, vel duos pullos columbarum, unum pro peccato, et alterum in holocaustum (Levit. v. 6, 7, 8). Juramentum namque proferre est voto nos divinae servitutis alligare. Et cum bona opera promittimus, bene nos facere spondemus. Cum vero abstinentiam cruciatumque carnis nostrae vovemus, male ad praesens nos nobis facere juramus. Sed quia nullus in hac vita ita perfectus est, ut quamlibet Deo devotus sit, inter ipsa quantulumcunque pia vota non peccet, pro peccato agna offerri de gregibus sive capra praecipitur. Quid enim per agnam nisi activae vitae innocentia, quid per capram, quae in summis saepe extremisque rupibus pendens pascitur, nisi contemplativa vita signatur? Qui ergo se conspicit promissa ac proposita non implesse, ad sacrificium Dei sese studiosius debet vel innocentia boni operis, vel sublimi pastu contemplationis accingere. Et bene agna de gregibus, capra vero offerri de gregibus non jubetur, quia activa vita multorum est, contemplativa paucorum. Et cum haec agimus quae multos agere et egisse conspicimus, quasi agnam de gregibus damus. Sed cum offerentis virtus ad agnam capramque non sufficit, in remedium poenitentis adjungitur, ut duo pulli columbarum, vel duo turtures offerantur. Scimus quia columbarum pulli vel turtures pro cantu gemitus habent. Quid ergo per duos columbarum pullos, vel duos turtures, nisi duplex poenitentiae nostrae gemitus designatur, ut cum ad offerenda bona opera non assurgimus, nosmetipsos dupliciter defleamus, quia et recta non fecimus, et prava operati sumus? Unde et unus turtur pro peccato, alter vero offerri in holocau tum jubetur. Holocaustum namque totum incensum dicitur. Unum ergo turturem pro peccato offerimus, cum pro culpa gemitum damus; de altero vero holocaustum facimus, cum pro eo quod bona negleximus, nosmetipsos funditus succendentes, igne doloris ardemus. Quia igitur duplex in poenitentia gemitus debetur, beatus Job divinae vocis increpatione proficiens, atque in sua reprehensione succrescens, dixisse se unum et alterum poenitens fatetur, ac si aperte dicat: Et erga bona per negligentiam torpui, et ad mala per audaciam prorupi: CAP. XL, VERS. 1, 2. Respondens autem Dominus Job de turbine, dixit: Accinge sicut vir lumbos tuos, interrogabo te, et indica mihi. [Vet. III, Rec. V.] Quid sit Dominum de turbine respondere, quid beatum Job lumbos accingere, quid interrogare Dei, quid hominis indicare, primo jam Domini sermone tractatum est (Sup. lib. XXVIII, n. 1 et seq.). Quia ergo lectoris taedio parcimus, curamus summopere ne dicta replicemus. Sequitur:

CAPUT IV.

VERS. 3. Nunquid irritum facies judicium meum, et condemnabis me, ut tu justificeris? 1049 5. Job juste correptus, ut occultis Dei judiciis etiam nesciens subderetur. Quisquis contra Domini flagella semetipsum defendere nititur, flagellantis judicium evacuare conatur. Nam cum culpa sua feriri se denegat, quid aliud quam injustitiam ferientis accusat? Beatum itaque Job non idcirco flagella coelestia percusserunt, ut in eo culpas exstinguerent, sed potius ut merita augerent, quatenus qui tranquillitatis tempore in tanta sanctitate claruerat, et ex percussione patesceret quae in eo etiam patientiae virtus latebat. Qui quidem culpam suam inter flagella non inveniens, nec tamen flagella eadem causam sibi esse augendi meriti deprehendens, injuste se feriri credidit, cum quid in se debuisset corrigi non invenit. Sed ne ipsa innocentia in tumorem elationis infletur, divina voce corripitur, et mens ejus ab iniquitate libera, sed verberibus pressa, ad judicia occulta revocatur, ut superna sententia, etsi non est cognita, non tamen credatur injusta; sed eo saltem justum credat omne quod patitur, quo nimirum constat quia Deo auctore patiatur. Magna enim satisfactio percussionis est voluntas justa conditoris. Quae cum injustum facere nihil solet, justa agnoscitur etiam si latet. Nam cum pro injustitiae peccato percutimur, si in percussione nostra divinae voluntati conjungimur, mox a nostra injustitia ipsa conjunctione liberamur. Quisquis enim jam percussionem tolerat, sed adhuc causas percussionis ignorat, si justum credens hoc ipsum contra se judicium amplectitur, eo ipso ab injustitia sua jam correctus est, quo percussum se juste gratulatur. In vindicta enim sua Deo se socians, sese contra se erigit; et magna est jam justitia, quod voluntati judicis concordat in poena, cui discrepavit in culpa. Vir igitur sanctus, quia in nulla Deo culpa discrepaverat, quasi cum difficultate ei inter supplicia concordabat. Neque enim credidit quod flagella quae solent vitia exstinguere in illo sola merita augerent. Unde nunc juste corripitur, ut occultis judiciis et nesciens subderetur, eique dicitur: Nunquid irritum facies judicium meum, et condemnabis me ut tu justificeris? Ac si aperte diceretur: Tua quidem bene acta consideras, sed mea occulta judicia ignoras. Si ergo ex tuis meritis contra mea flagella disputas, quid aliud quam me de injustitia addicere te justificando festinas? Sequitur:

CAPUT V [Vet.

IV, Rec. VI]. VERS. 4. Si habes brachium sicut Deus, et si voce simili tonas. 6. Contemplata Dei sanctitate, ad humilitatem provocantur etiam sanctiores. Quia humanum genus beatus Job meritis transcendebat, eum pius conditor et eruditor ad considerandam similitudinem suae magnitudinis provocat, ut cognita tanta dissimilitudine, in humilitate se premat. 7. Deus, etsi corporis expers, cum rebus corporeis comparatur.

Anthropomorphitarum haeresis. Deo cur oculi et scapulae tribuantur. Recordari quo sensu dicitur. Quid Dei alae. Sed cum in Deo vox et brachium dicitur, cavendum summopere est, ne quid in eo mens corporeum suspicetur. In Anthropomorphitarum namque haeresim cadere est, eum qui incircumscripte implet et circumplectitur omnia intra corporalia lineamenta concludere. Sed omnipotens Deus ad sua nos trahens, usque ad nostra se humiliat, atque ut alta insinuet, humilibus condescendit, quatenus parvulorum animus rebus cognitis enutritus, ad inquirenda exsurgat incognita, atque 1050 ab eo qui longe super ipsum est quaedam juxta se audiens, quasi quibusdam ad illum passibus moveatur. Unde fit ut per Scripturam suam aliquando a corporibus hominum, aliquando a mentibus, aliquando vero ab avibus, aliquando etiam ab insensatis rebus quasdam longe dissimiles in se similitudines trahat. Plerumque enim a corporibus hominum in se similitudinem trahit, sicut de eo propheta ad Israelitas dicit: Qui tetigit vos, tangit pupillam oculi ejus (Zach. II, 8). Et sicut de eo rursum speranti homini per Prophetam dicitur: In scapulis suis obumbrabit tibi (Psal. XC, 4). Constat nimirum quod in natura sua nec oculum Deus, nec scapulas habeat, sed quia nos per oculum cernimus, in scapulis vero onera sustinemus. Deus quod omnia videt, oculum habere perhibetur; quod vero nos tolerat, atque eo ipso quo tolerat servat, obumbrare nobis in scapulis dicitur. Ait enim: In scapulis suis obumbravit tibi. Ac si diceret peccatori homini, et post peccatum veniam deprecanti: Ea pietate Dominus te protegit, qua te pietate toleravit. Obumbrat enim in scapulis suis, quia dum portat, defendit. [Vet. V.] Aliquando vero a mentibus in se similitudinem trahit, sicut per prophetam ad Israel dicit: Recordatus sum tui, miserans adolescentiam tuam (Jerem. II, 2). Et rursum per sponsae comparationem loquens ait: Et si illa oblita fuerit, ego tamen non obliviscar tui (Isai. XLIX, 15). Quis enim nesciat quia Dei memoria nec oblivione rumpitur, nec recordatione sarcitur? Sed dum aliqua deserens praetermittit, more mentium oblivisci dicitur; et cum post longum tempus quae voluerit visitat, nostrae mutabilitatis consuetudine recordatus vocatur. Quo enim pacto divinitatis ejus vim oblivio dissipat, cui ipsa quoque laudabilis memoria essentialiter non concordat? Nulla namque nisi aut praeterita, aut absentia recordantur. Quomodo ergo Deus praeteritorum reminiscitur, cum ipsa quae in semetipsis praetereunt ejus nutui semper praesentia assistunt? Aut quomodo absentium recordatur, dum omne quod est per hoc illi praesto est, quod in ipso est? Quod si ei praesto non esset, omnino non esset; nam non existentia videndo creat, existentia videndo continet. Quidquid ergo creator non videt, essentia subsistendi caret. Aliquando autem ab avibus in illum similitudo trahitur, sicut per Moysen dicitur: Expandit alas suas, et assumpsit eos (Deut. XXXII, 11). Et propheta ait: Sub umbra alarum tuarum protege me (Psal. XVI, 9). Quia enim nos parvulos dum protegit nutrit, et non gravi atque onerosa, sed levi et blanda protectione nos refovet, dum suas in nos misericordias exerit, quasi more avium super nos alas tendit. Aliquando etiam insensatis rebus, propter infirmitatem nostram alta condescensione se comparat, sicut per prophetam dicit: Ecce ego stridebo super vos, sicut stridet plaustrum onustum feno (Amos. II, 13). Quia enim fenum est vita carnalium, sicut scriptum est: Omnis caro fenum (Isai. XL, 6), in eo quod Dominus vitam carnalium patitur, more plaustri fenum se portare testatur. Cui sub feni onere stridere est pondera et iniquitates peccantium cum querela tolerare. Cum ergo longe dissimiles in se similitudines trahat, solerter intuendum est quod quaedam talia aliquando dicantur in Deo propter 1051 effectum operis, aliquando autem ad indicandam ejus substantiam majestatis. Nam cum in Deo oculus, scapulae, pes atque alae nominantur, effectus quidem operationis ostenditur. Cum vero manus, brachium, dextera vel vox in Deo dicitur, per haec vocabula consubstantialis ei Filius demonstratur. Ipse quippe est et manus et dextera, de cujus ascensione per Moysen Pater loquitur, dicens: Tollam in coelum manum meam, et jurabo per dexteram meam (Deut. XXXII, 40). Ipse brachium, de quo propheta ait: Et brachium Domini cui revelatum est. (Isai. LIII, 1)? Ipse vox, quia eum Pater gignendo dixit: Filius meus es tu, ego hodie genui te (Psal. II, 7). Et de quo scriptum est: In principio erat. Verbum, et Verbum erat apud Deum, et Deus erat Verbum (Joan. I, 1). Per hoc Verbum fecisse Patrem omnia David asserit, dicens: Dixit, et facta sunt (Psal. XXXII, 9). Deum ergo brachium babere est operantem Filium gignere, voce tonare est consubstantialem sibi Filium mundo terribiliter demonstrare. Beato igitur Job cum dicit Dominus: Si habes brachium sicut Deus, et si voce simili tonas, mira dispensatione pietatis eum dum increpat exaltat, quia eum quem sua comparatione superat superiorem cunctis demonstrat. Cui in hac propositione subjungit:

CAPUT VI [Rec. VII].

VERS. 5. Circumda tibi decorem, et in sublime erigere, et esto gloriosus, et speciosis induere vestibus. 8. Angeli et Ecclesia, Dei decor et ornamentum sunt. Subaudis, ut ego. Ipse enim sibi circumdat decorem, de quo scriptum est: Dominus regnavit, decorem induit (Psal. XCII, 1). Ipse apud nos in sublime erigitur, cum nostris mentibus in natura sua esse impenetrabilis demonstratur. Ipse vero gloriosus est, qui dum seipso perfruitur, accedentis laudis indigens non est. Ipse speciosis induitur vestibus, quia sanctorum angelorum choros, quos condidit, in usum sui decoris assumpsit, et velut quamdam vestem gloriosam sibi Ecclesiam exhibet non habentem rugam, aut maculam (Ephes. V, 27). Unde ei per prophetam dicitur: Confessionem et decorem induisti, amictus lumine sicut vestimento (Psal. CIII, 2). Hic quippe confessionem induit, illic decorem, quia quos hic per poenitentiam confitentes fecerit, illic fulgentes per decorem justitiae ostendet. Luce ergo sicut vestimento amictus est, quia sanctis omnibus, quibus dictum est: Vos estis lux mundi (Matth. V, 14), in illa aeterna gloria vestietur. Unde et per Evangelium dicitur, quia, transfigurato in monte Domino vestimenta ejus facta sunt candida sicut nix (Matth. XVII, 2). In qua transfiguratione quid aliud quam resurrectionis ultimae gloria nuntiatur? In monte enim vestimenta ejus sicut nix facta sunt, quia in supernae claritatis culmine sancti omnes ei luce justitiae fulgentes adhaerebunt. [Vet. VI.] Sed quia speciosarum vestium nomine justos sibi quomodo adjungat insinuat, injustos etiam quomodo a se disjungat ostendit. Sequitur:

CAPUT VII.

VERS. 6. Disperge superbos in furore tuo. 9. Deus tranquille irascitur. Subaudis ut ego, qui eos et tranquillitatis tempore unitos contra me tolero, et districtus quandoque veniens, in meo eos furore dispergo. Sed inter haec solerter intuendum est quod gravis perfidiae error admittitur, si fortasse quis aestimet quod in illa divinitatis substantia furor et tranquillitas varietur. Creator namque omnium eo summe immortalis est, quo creaturae more mutabilis 1052 non est. Hinc de illo per Jacobum dicitur: Apud quem non est transmutatio, nec vicissitudinis obumbratio (Jac. I, 17). Hinc rursum scriptum est: Tu autem, Domine, cum tranquillitate judicas (Sap. XII, 18). Hinc propheta ait: Deserta facta est terra a facie irae columbae, a facie furoris Domini (Jerem. XXV, 38). Quod enim iram columbae praedixerat, hoc furorem Domini subjunxit. Columba namque valde simplex est animal; et quia in Deum nulla furoris inaequalitas serpit, furorem Domini iram columbae nominavit. Ut enim divinae districtionis vim imperturbabilem demonstraret, et iram dixit, et columbae, ac si apertius diceret: Districtum judicium inconcussus exerit, qui permanens mansuetus injustos punit. Unde et in extremo judicio, in semetipso incommutabilis manens, nulla vicissitudine ac mutabilitate variatur, sed tamen electis ac reprobis nequaquam sub specie ejusdem incommutabilitatis ostenditur, quia et tranquillus justis, et iratus apparebit injustis. Teste enim conscientia intra semetipsos deferunt, unde eorum mentes aeque unum respiciant, sed non aequaliter modificentur, quia et istis eum benignum ostendit anteacta justitia, et illis terribilem culpa. Quorum pavorem quis explicet, cum contigerit miseris et intra se culpas cernere, et ante se judicem justum videre? Hoc nimirum quotidie in usu vitae praesentis agitur, ut de qualitate venturi judicis mortalium corda doceantur. Nam cum duo ad judicium pergunt, alius innocentiae sibi conscius, alius culpae, ante prolatam sententiam adhuc tacentem judicem utrique conspiciunt, et tamen culpae debitor gravem contra se iram hoc ipsum judicis silentium suspicatur. Quam iram sibi non denuntiat perturbatio judicis, sed recordatio pravitatis, quia etsi adhuc foris reum sententia non clamat, intus tamen graviter conscientia accusat. At contra justitiae amicus decernentis vultum conspicit, sed intus de testimonio bonae recordationis hilarescit, et quo apud se quod metuat non habet, eo omne quod erga semetipsum est blandum videt. Hoc itaque loco furor Domini dicitur non perturbatio divinae substantiae, sed super peccatores male sibi conscios examinatio justae vindictae. Quamvis enim eum tranquillum in judicio videant, tamen quia feriendos se ab illo non dubitant, eum in suis motibus perturbatum putant. Sequitur:

CAPUT VIII.

IBID. Et respiciens omnem arrogantem humilia. 10. Omnis arrogans aut poenitendo cognoscit culpam, aut pereundo percipit poenam. Ac si dicat ut ego. Apte autem ad vindictae ordinem arrogantibus superborum culpa praeponitur, quia nimirum non superbia de arrogantia, sed generatur arrogantia de superbia. Duobus autem modis a Domino peccator unusquisque respicitur, cum aut a peccato convertitur, aut ex peccato punitur. De respectu enim conversionis dicitur: Quia respexit Dominus Petrum, et recordatus Petrus verbi Jesu flevit amare (Luc. XXII, 61). De respectu ultionis rursus dicitur: Vultus autem Domini super facientes mala, ut perdat de terra memoriam eorum (Psal. XXXIII, 17). Utrisque autem modis in humilitate arrogans sternitur, quia aut poenitendo cognoscit culpam, aut pereundo percipit poenam:

CAPUT IX [Vet. VII].

VERS. 7. Respice cunctos superbos, et confunde eos, et contere impios in loco suo. 1053 11. Superbi dum elevatur dejectio. Subaudis ut ego. Superbi enim ex respectu Domini confunduntur, aut hic de pietate cognoscentes et damnantes crimina, aut illic supplicia de justitia sentientes. Impiorum vero locus ipsa superbia est, quia cum scriptum sit: Initium omnis peccati superbia (Eccli. X, 15), unde oritur impietas, ibi continetur, quamvis nec quidquam a superbia distat impietas. Valde enim superbire est impia de auctore sentire. Impius ergo in loco suo conteritur, quia ipsa superbia qua elevatur opprimitur; cumque, efferendo se in cogitationibus erigit, lumen sibi justitiae quod invenire debuisset abscondit. Saepe autem dum contra Deum falsa gloria exterius proficit, vera miseria interius inanescit. Unde Propheta ait: Dejecisti eos dum allevarentur (Psal. LXXII, 18). Non enim ait: Dejecisti eos postquam elevati sunt, sed dum allevarentur, quia hoc ipsum sit superbis interius dejici, quod eis falsa contingit gloria exterius elevari. Ordinante enim divino judicio, non eis hic aliud culpa est, atque aliud poena, sed sua illis in poenam vertitur culpa, ut elatis fastu superbiae hoc ipsum sit vere intus cadere quod foris ostenditur profecisse. Sequitur:

CAPUT X.

VERS. 8. Absconde eos in pulvere, simul et facies eorum demerge in foveam. 12. Deus corda superborum, terrenis negotiis et desideriis opprimi permittit. Ac si dicat ut ego. Superbos enim atque impios justo judicio Dominus in pulvere abscondit, quia eorum corda ipsis quae, despecto amore creatoris, eligunt terrenis opprimi negotiis permittit. Unde et illorum vitam cum in extremo judicio discutit, tanquam sibi absconditam non agnoscit, dicens: Nescio qui estis (Luc. XIII, 27). Vita pravorum sub pulvere absconditur, quia abjectis et infimis desideriis gravatur. Quisquis enim adhuc ea quae mundi sunt appetit, quasi ante faciem veri luminis non apparet, quia nimirum sub pulvere terrenae cogitationis latet. Hunc pravarum cogitationum pulverem oppressa mens tolerat, quem ventus nequissimae tentationis apportat. [Vet. VIII.] Hinc est enim quod de unaquaque anima terrenis desideriis aggravata sub Ephraim specie per prophetam dicitur: Factus est Ephraim panis subcinericius, qui non reversatur (Osee. VII, 8). Ex natura quippe bene condita est nobis intentio, quae surgat in Deum; sed ex conversatione nequiter assueta inest voluptas, quae praesens premat in saeculum. Panis autem subcinericius ex ea parte est mundior, quam inferius occultat, atque ex ea parte sordidior, qua desuper cinerem tolerat. Quisquis ergo intentionem qua Deum debuisset quaerere negligit, quasi more panis subcinericii mundiorem partem inferius premit, et cum curas saeculi libenter tolerat, quasi congestum cinerem superius portat. Reversaretur autem panis subcinericius, si desideriorum carnalium cinerem repelleret, et intentionem bonam, quam in se dudum despiciendo oppresserat, superius ostentaret. Sed reversari renuit, cum mens, amore curarum saecularium pressa, molem superpositi cineris abjicere negligit, dumque assurgere in intentionem bonam non appetit, quasi mundiorem faciem subter premit. 13. Dum superbiendo altiora petunt, ad inferiora retruduntur. Apte autem subjungitur: Simul et facies eorum demerge in foveam. Ac si dicat, Ut ego. Justo namque judicio superborum facies Dominus in foveam mergit, quia intentionem cordis eorum sese ultra homines erigentem inferius dejicit. Ima enim 1054 respicit, cujus facies foveam attendit. Et bene de superbis dicitur quod eorum facies in foveam demerguntur, quia ima petunt, dum superbiendo altiora appetunt; et quo magis extollendo se erigunt, eo magis ruendo inferius tendunt. Terrenam quippe gloriam quaerunt, et infima sunt quae prospiciunt, dum superbiendo alta sectantur. Unde miro et diverso modo res agitur, ut humiles coelum petant, dum se inferius dejiciunt; superbi infima appetant, dum despiciendo caeteros quasi in altioribus extolluntur. Isti se, dum despiciunt, coelestibus junguntur; illi, dum se erigunt, a superioribus dividuntur, atque, ut ita dixerim, illi se elevantes deprimunt, isti deprimentes elevant. Et bene de superbientibus per Psalmistam dicitur: Humiliat autem peccatores usque ad terram (Psal. CXLVI, 6), quia ea quae infra sunt ambientes, dum extollendo se erigunt, amisso coelo quid aliud quam terram petunt? Quibus hoc ipsum jam in imis cecidisse est relictis superioribus ima quaesisse. Recte ergo eorum facies in foveam demergi perhibentur, quia sequentes infima, ad inferni barathrum tendunt. Justo enim judicio agitur, ut quos hic voluntaria aversio excaecat, illic ab intuitu veri luminis digna supplicii fovea abscondat. Igitur quia vir sanctus tanto divinae potentiae terrore discussus est, ut ei diceretur: Si habes brachium ut Deus, et si voce simili tonas, disperge superbos in furore tuo, et respiciens omnem arrogantem humilia, et caetera quae Deus quidem facere, sed homo vix sufficit audire, cuncta haec qua Dominus intentione praemiserit, fine subditae conclusionis ostendit, dicens:

CAPUT XI [Vet.

IX, Rec. VIII]. VERS. 9. Et ego confitebor quod salvare te possit dextera tua. 14. Pelagianorum error suis viribus salvari posse confidentium. Ac si aperte diceret: Si potes terribilia haec facere, ipse quae protuli, tibi et non mihi deputo bona omnia quae fecisti. Si vero peccantes alios respiciendo non potes perdere, liquet quod a reatu nequitiae tua te non vales virtute liberare. Ecce divina voce ad beatum Job dicitur quod sua dextera non salvetur, et tamen nonnulli hominum, qui ab hujus viri viribus longe sunt, despecto Dei adjutorio, sua se fortitudine salvari posse confidunt. Pro quibus quid deprecari aliud debemus, nisi ut si jam dona bonorum operum perceperunt, hoc quoque donum accipiant, ut a quo haec acceperint discant? Quia autem praemissis verbis Dominus potentiam suae magnitudinis intulit, nunc in subsequentibus nequitiam antiqui hostis ostendit, ut bonus famulus et, auditis prius virtutibus Domini, sciret quantum diligeret, et, cognita post calliditate diaboli, disceret quantum timeret. Unde bene per prophetam dicitur: Leo rugiet, quis non timebit? Dominus Deus (ocutus est, quis non prophetabit (Amos III, 8)? Postquam enim virtus ei sui conditoris innotuit, nequaquam illum vires adversarii latere debuerunt, ut eo magis defensori suo se humilius subderet quo hostis sui nequitias subtilius agnovisset, protectoremque suum tanto ardentius quaereret, quanto terribiliorem hostem cognosceret quem vitaret. Certum quippe est quia minus diligit ereptorem suum qui minus intelligit periculum quod evasit, et vile solatium deputat defensoris qui virtutem adversarii debilem putat. Unde bene ereptionem suam Domino tribuens propheta dicebat: Diligam te, Domine, virtus mea (Psal. XVII, 1), aperte videlicet dicens: Eo te magis diligo, quo infirmitatem 1055 propriam sentiens, virtutem meam te esse cognosco. Hinc rursum ait: Mirifica misericordias tuas, qui salvos facis sperantes in te (Psal. XVI, 7), quia tunc nimirum misericordiae Domini mirae apud nosmetipsos qui eripimur fiunt, cum per easdem misericordias quam gravia fuerint pericula quae evasimus, agnoscuntur. 15. Vires fraudes que hostis nostri describuntur. Et quia sermone praecedenti Dominus beato Job mira opera sanctorum sequentium patefecit, ut his auditis disceret de virtutum suarum culmine quam humilia sentire debuisset, nunc ei cum quo hoste bellum gerat ostenditur, et vires fraudesque illius subtilius indicantur, ut qui ad colloquium auctoris sui perductus est, argumenta adversarii aperte cognoscat. Verbis enim sequentibus fideli famulo Dominus cunctas hostis callidi machinationes insinuat, omne quod opprimendo rapit, omne quod insidiando circumvolat, omne quod minando terret, omne quod suadendo

CAPUT XII [Vet.

X, Rec. IX]. VERS. 10. Ecce Behemoth, quem feci tecum. 16. Omnia creata sunt simul secundum substantiam, non secundum speciem. Quem sub Behemoth nomine nisi antiquum hostem insinuat, qui interpretatus ex Hebraea voce, in Latina lingua animal sonat? Cujus inferius, dum malitia subditur, patenter persona monstratur. Sed cum de Deo scriptum sit quia fecit omnia simul (Eccli. XVIII, 1), cur hoc animal cum homine fecisse se indicat, dum cuncta quia simul fecerit constat? Rursum quaerendum est, quomodo Deus cuncta simul condidit, dum Moyses sex dierum mutatione variante distincte creata describat (Genes. I, 32). Quod tamen citius agnoscimus, si ipsas causas originum subtiliter indagamus. Rerum quippe substantia simul creata est, sed simul species formata non est, et quod simul exstitit per substantiam materiae non simul apparuit per speciem formae. Cum enim simul factum coelum terraque describitur, simul spiritalia atque corporalia, simul quidquid de coelo oritur, simul factum quidquid de terra producitur indicatur. Sol quippe, luna et sidera quarto die in coelo facta perhibentur, sed quod quarto die processit in specie primo die in coeli substantia exstitit per conditionem. Primo die creata terra dicitur, et tertio arbusta condita, et cuncta terrae virentia describuntur; sed hoc quod die tertio se in specie protulit, nimirum primo die in ipsa de qua ortum est terrae substantia conditum fuit. Hinc est quod Moyses distincte per dies singulos condita omnia retulit, et tamen simul omnia creata subjunxit, dicens: Istae sunt generationes coeli et terrae, quando creatae sunt in die quo fecit Dominus coelum et terram, et omne virgultum agri, antequam oriretur in terra, omnemque herbam regionis (Genes. II, 4, 5). Qui enim diversis diebus creatum coelum et terram, virgultum, herbamque narraverat, nunc uno die facta manifestat, ut liquido ostenderet quod creatura omnis simul per substantiam exstitit, quamvis non simul per speciem processit. Hinc illic quoque scriptum est: Creavit Deus hominem ad imaginem suam, ad imaginem Dei creavit illum, masculum et feminam fecit eos (Genes. I, 27). Necdum enim Eva facta describitur, et jam homo masculus et femina perhibetur. Sed quia ex Adae latere 1056 procul dubio femina erat processura, in illo jam computatur per substantiam, a quo fuerat producenda per formam. Considerare tamen haec et in minimis possumus, ut ex minimis majora pensemus. Herba namque cum creatur, necdum in illa fructus, necdum fructus sui semen ostenditur. Inest vero ei etiam cum non apparet fructus et semen, quia nimirum simul sunt in radicis substantia quae non simul prodeunt per temporis incrementa. 17. Quo sensu angelus et homo simul creati. Angelus desertor peccando dona gratiae amisit, non naturae. Duo Manichaeorum principia rejiciuntur. Sed quia haec simul creata per substantiam dicimus, quae prodire alia ex aliis invenimus, quo pacto cum beato Job Behemoth creatus asseritur, cum neque una sit substantia angeli et hominis, neque homo ex angelo, neque angelus ex homine proferatur? Si vero propter hoc factus Behemoth cum beato Job dicitur, quod creatura omnis ab auctore, qui in actione sua nequaquam temporis protelatione distenditur, simul condita non dubitatur, cur de Behemoth specialiter dicitur quod commune cum creaturis omnibus generaliter habetur? Sed si rerum causas subtili discussione pensamus, simul angelum factum hominemque cognoscimus, simul videlicet non unitate temporis, sed cognitione rationis; simul per acceptam imaginem sapientiae, et non simul per conjunctam substantiam formae. Scriptum namque de homine est: Faciamus hominem ad imaginem et similitudinem nostram (Genes. I, 26). Et per Ezechielem ad Satan dicitur: Tu signaculum similitudinis, plenus sapientia et perfectus decore in deliciis paradisi Dei faisti (Ezech. XXVIII, 12). In cuncta igitur creatura, homo et angelus simul conditus exstitit quia ab omni creatura irrationali distinctus processit. Quia ergo in cuncta conditione rerum nullum rationale animal nisi angelus et homo est, quidquid ratione uti non potest, cum homine factum non est. Dicatur itaque homini, dicatur de angelo, qui etsi potentiam sublimitatis perdidit, subtilitatem tamen naturae rationalis non amisit: Ecce Behemoth, quem feci tecum. Ut dum homo eum qui in ratione secum factus est, periisse considerat, vicinum sibi casum superbiae ex ipsa propinqui sui perditione pertimescat. In his autem verbis solerter intuendum est quod aperte voce dominica nefarium Manichaei dogma reprehenditur, qui dum duo principia loquitur, tenebrarum gentem non factam asserere conatur. Quomodo enim non facta gens nequissima dicitur, dum Behemoth istum, videlicet auctorem nequitiae per naturam bene conditum se Dominus fecisse testatur? Sed quia Behemoth iste, cum quo sit factus audivimus, perditus quid agat audiamus. Sequitur:

CAPUT XIII [Rec. X].

IBID. Fenum sicut bos comedet. 18. Diabolus mundam spiritualium vitam labefactare potissimum cupit. Si prophetarum sollicite verba discutimus, haec et illa uno spiritu prolata reperimus. Isaias namque cum cerneret vitam peccantium ab antiquo et insatiabile hoste devorari, ait: Leo sicut bos comedet paleas (Isai. XI, 7). Quid autem feni palearumque nomine nisi carnalium vita signatur? De qua per prophetam dicitur: Omnis caro fenum (Isai. XL, 6). Qui ergo hic Behemoth, illic leo; qui hic fenum, illic paleae nominantur. Sed perscrutari mens nititur cur iste vel apud Isaiam leo, vel hic dominica voce Behemoth, in comestione feni vel paleae, utroque 1057 loco, non equo, sed bovi comparetur. Quod tamen citius agnoscimus, si in utrisque animalibus quae sit nutrimentorum distantia perpendamus. Equi namque fenum quamlibet sordidum comedunt, aquam vero non nisi mundam bibunt. Boves autem aquam quamlibet sordidam bibunt, sed feno non nisi mundo vescuntur. Quid est ergo quod bovi, qui mundo pabulo pascitur, Behemoth iste comparatur, nisi hoc quod de isto antiquo hoste per prophetam alium dicitur: Esca ejus electa (Habac. I, 16)? Neque enim se eos gaudet rapere, quos pravis ac sordidis actionibus implicatos in imis secum respicit voluntarie jacere. Fenum ergo comedere sicut bos appetit, quia suggestionis suae dente conterere mundam vitam spiritalium quaerit. 19. Multi videntur electi, et non sunt. Sed quaerendum video quomodo Behemoth iste, fenum sicut bos comedens, vitam spiritualium consumere dicitur, cum, sicut supra dictum est, feni nomine vita carnalium designatur. Esca quoque ejus electa jam non erit, si fenum comedens carnalem rapit. Sed ad haec citius occurrit, quia nonnulli hominum et apud Deum fenum sunt, et apud homines sanctitatis nomine censentur, cum et ante humanos oculos aliud ostendit vita, et ante divina judicia aliud intendit conscientia. Ii itaque apud humana judicia electi sunt, sed apud subtile Domini examen fenum. An ante divinos oculos Saul fenum non erat, de quo Samuel propheta populo dicebat: Certe videtis quem elegit Dominus (I Reg. X, 24); et de quo paulo superius dicitur: Electus et bonus? Quem enim peccans populus meruit, et apud Deum reprobus exstitit, et tamen causarum ordine electus et bonus fuit. [Vet. XI.] Quia multi fenum, sunt, et electos se ex humana aestimatione suspicantur, bene per Salomonem dicitur: Vidi impios sepultos, qui etiam dum adhuc viverent, in loco sancto erant, et laudabantur in civitate quasi justorum operum (Eccle. VIII, 10). Quia multi fenum sunt, sed tamen sanctitatis favore vallantur, bene quidam sapiens indicat, dicens: Transi, hospes, et orna mensam (Eccli. XXIX, 33). Transeundo namque hospes ornare mensam dicitur, quia si ad altare Dei quis positus, per bona opera gloriam propriam quaerit, et de ostentatione sanctitatis ejus laus altaris extenditur, et ipse tamen apud Deum in numero civium non habetur. Aliis ejus opinio proficit, et tamen a Deo extraneus ipse pertransit. Mensam itaque transeundo decoravit, quia stare ad sacra noluit qui per omne quod agere studuit ad humanas laudes mente decurrit. Quia ergo nonnulli mundam quidem vitam per studium ducunt, sed ex illa intus placere non appetunt, recte et esca ejus electa dicitur, et tamen fenum sicut bos comedere Behemoth iste perhibetur. Quasi enim ante os Behemoth istius mundum fenum in terra atque in infimis jacet, cum et vita quasi innocens per mandatorum custodiam agitur, et tamen inter actionem quae bona ostenditur cor ad appetenda sublimia non elevatur. Quid itaque utilitatis agit qui in se munditiam vitae custodit, si per intentionem infimam in ore Behemoth hujus inveniendum se in terra derelinquit? Quia igitur omnipotens Deus quid hostis noster agat insinuat, nunc quomodo praevaleat innotescat, ut calliditatis ejus nequitia quo apertius cognoscitur, eo facilius 1058 superetur. Sequitur:

CAPUT XIV [Rec. XI].

VERS. 11. Fortitudo ejus in lumbis ejus, et virtus illius in umbilico ventris ejus. 20. Diabolus per luxuriam utrique hominum sexui plerumque dominatur. Seminaria coitus viris in lumbis esse, inesse autem feminis in umbilico perhibetur. Hinc est enim quod Veritas discipulis dicit: Sint lumbi vestri praecincti (Luc. XII, 35). Hinc Petrus, cum luxuriam a corde restringeret, admonebat, dicens: Succincti lumbos mentis vestrae (I Pet. I, 13). Hinc Paulus cum per Abrahae sacrificium Melchisedech tempore Levi sacerdotium diceret decimatum, ubi tunc in Abrahae corpore Levi lateret ostendens, ait: Adhuc enim in lumbis patris erat (Hebr. VII, 10). Quia vero seminarium luxuriae feminis in umbiculo continetur propheta testatur, qui, sub specie feminae prostitutae, Judaeae petulantiam increpans, ait: In die ortus tui non est praecisus umbilicus tuus (Ezech. XVI, 4). In die quippe ortus umbilicum praecidere est conversionis tempore carnis luxuriam resecare. Quia enim difficile est male inchoata corrigere, et semel formata deformiter in melius reformare, de ortu suo Judaea reprehenditur, quae dum in Deo nata est, impraecisum umbilicum retinuit, quia fluxa luxuriae non abscidit. Quia igitur potestate diaboli utriusque generis sexus valde ex luxuriae infirmitate substernitur, et fortitudo ejus in lumbis contra masculos, et virtus illius contra feminas in umbilico perhibetur. [Vet. XII.] 21. Spiritus superbiam sequi solet carnis corruptio. Sed cur cum Behemoth istum fenum comedere intulit, prima deceptionis ejus argumenta luxuriae damna subjunxit, nisi quod liquido omnibus patet quia postquam semel hominis spiritum superbia ceperit, mox se ad corruptionem carnis extendit? Quod in ipsis quoque hominibus primis agnoscimus, qui, dum post perpetratam superbiam pudenda membra contegunt, patenter indicarunt quia postquam apud semetipsos intus arripere alta conati sunt, mox in carne foris erubescenda pertulerunt (Genes. III, 7). Behemoth itaque iste insatiabiliter saeviens, et devorare totum simul hominem quaerens, modo in superbiam mentem erigit, modo carnem luxuriae voluptate corrumpit. Bene autem nequaquam fortitudo ejus in lumbis vel umbilico eorum dicitur qui prosternuntur, sed, fortitudo ejus in lumbis ejus, et virtus illius in umbilico ventris ejus. Ac si aperte diceretur: Fortitudo ejus in lumbis suis, et virtus illius in umbilico ventris sui, quia nimirum ejus proprie corpus fiunt, qui, suggestionum turpium blandimentis decepti, ei per luxuriae fluxa succumbunt. Sequitur:

CAPUT XV [Rec. XII].

VERS. 12. Stringit caudam suam quasi cedrum. 22. Diabolus divina potestate ligatus, olim solvetur, et per Antichristum multa signa faciet. Multa in his suppetunt, quae instruendis moribus proferantur; sed prius Behemoth istius violenta discutimus, ut post subtilius astuta detegamus. In Scriptura sacra cedri nomine aliquando alta excellentia gloriae coelestis exprimitur, aliquando autem pravorum rigida elatio designatur. Cedri nomine coelestis gloriae celsitudo exprimitur, sicut Psalmista testatur: Justus ut palma florebit, sicut cedrus Libani multiplicabitur (Psal. XCI, 13).

Cedri rursus nomine superba pravorum potentia designatur, sicut per eumdem Prophetam dicitur: Vox Domini confringentis cedros (Psal. XXVIII, 5). Quid autem cauda Behemoth istius, nisi illa antiqui hostis extremitas dicitur; cum nimirum vas proprium illum perditum hominem 1059 ingreditur, qui specialiter Antichristus nuncupatur? Qui quoniam modo honoribus saeculi, modo signis et prodigiis fictae sanctitatis in tumorem potentiae elevari permittitur, recte voce Dominica cauda illius cedro comparatur. Sicut enim cedrus arbusta caetera in altum crescendo deserit, ita tunc Antichristus mundi gloriam temporaliter obtinens, mensuras hominum et honoris culmine, et signorum potestate transcendet. Spiritus quippe in illo est qui, in sublimibus conditus, potentiam naturae suae non perdidit vel dejectus. Cujus idcirco virtus nunc minime ostenditur, quia dispensatione divinae fortitudinis ligatur. Unde per Joannem dicitur: Vidi angelum descendentem de coelo, habentem clavem abyssi, et calenam magnam in manu sua; et apprehendit draconem serpentem antiquum, qui est diabolus et Satanas, et ligavit eum per annos mille, et misit eum in abyssum, et clausit et signavit super eum (Apoc. XX, 1, 2, 3). Ligatus quippe missus in abyssum perhibetur, quia retrusus in pravorum cordibus, potentia divinae dispensationis astringitur, ne in quantum nocere valet effrenetur, ut quamvis per eos occulte saeviat, ad violentas tamen rapinas superbiae non erumpat. Sed illic quomodo in mundi fine sit solvendus intimatur, cum dicitur: Et postquam consummati fuerint mille anni, solvetur satan de carcere suo, et exibit, et seducet gentes (Ibid., 7). Millenario namque numero universum pro perfectione sua hoc quantumlibet sit Ecclesiae sanctae tempus exprimitur. Quo peracto, antiquus hostis suis viribus traditus, pauco quidem in tempore, sed in multa contra nos virtute, laxatur. 23. Saeviet, sed ad breve tempus. Quem quamvis saevitia ad crudelitatem dilatet, superna tamen misericordia dierum brevitate coangustat. Hinc enim Veritas per semetipsam dicit: Erit tunc tribulatio magna, qualis non fuit ab initio mundi usque modo, neque fiet (Matth. XXIV, 21). Hinc rursum ait: Nisi breviati fuissent dies illi, non fieret salva omnis care (Ibid., 22). Quia enim et superbos nos et infirmos Dominus conspicit, dies quos singulariter malos intulit misericorditer breviatos dicit, profecto et ut superbiam terreat de adversitate temporis, et infirmitatem refoveat de brevitate dierum. [Vet. XIII.] 24. Ex signis quae faciet plus metuendus, quam ex poenis quas martyribus intulit. Sed considerandum valde est, cum Behemoth iste caudam suam sicut cedrum sublevat, in quo tunc atrocior quam nunc se exerit surgat. Quae enim poenarum genera novimus, quae non jam vires martyrum exercuisse gaudemus? Alios namque improviso ictu immersus jugulo gladius stravit, alios crucis patibulum affixit, in quo et mors provocata repellitur, et repulsa provocatur. Alios hirsutis serra dentibus attrivit, alios armata ferro insulcans ungula carpsit, alios belluina rabies morsibus detruncando comminuit, alios ab intimis viscerum per cutem pressa vis verberum rupit, alios effossa terra viventes operuit, alios in altum demersos in mortem praecipitium fregit, alios in se projectos aqua replendo absorbuit, alios edax flamma usque ad cineres depasta consumpsit. Cum igitur Behemoth iste caudam suam in fine mundi nequius dilatat, quid est quod in his tormentis 1060 tunc atrocius crescat, nisi hoc quod in Evangelio Veritas per semetipsam dicit: Surgent pseudochristi et pseudoprophetae, et dabunt signa magna et prodigia; ita ut in errorem mittantur, si fieri potest, etiam electi (Matth. XXIV, 24)? Nunc enim fideles nostri mira faciunt, cum perversa patiuntur; tunc autem Behemoth hujus satellites, etiam cum perversa inferunt, mira facturi sunt. Pensemus ergo quae erit humanae mentis illa tentatio, quando pius martyr et corpus tormentis subjicit, et tamen ante ejus oculos tortor miracula facit. Cujus tunc virtus non ab ipso cogitationum fundo quatiatur, quando is qui flagris cruciat signis coruscat? Dicatur igitur recte: Stringit caudam suam quasi cedrum, quia nimirum et altus tunc erit veneratione prodigii, et durus crudelitate tormenti [Vet. XIV.]

25. Antichristus alios mentitis virtutibus decipiet, alios vi superabit. Non enim sola tunc potestate erigitur, sed etiam signorum ostensione fulcitur. Unde et per David dicitur: Insidiatur in occulto, quasi leo in cubili suo (Psal. IX, 30, vel Psal. X, 9). Ad apertam namque potentiam suffecisset ut leo esset, etiamsi insidians non fuisset; rursumque ad occultas versutias suffecisset, ut insidians subriperet, etiam si leo non esset. Sed quia hic antiquus hostis in cunctis suis viribus effrenatur, saevire per utraque permittitur, ut contra electos in certamine et fraude et virtute laxetur, virtute per potentiam, fraude per signa. Recte ergo et leo et insidians dicitur: insidians per miraculorum speciem, leo per fortitudinem saecularem. Ut enim eos qui aperte iniqui sunt pertrahat, saecularem potentiam ostentat; ut vero justos etiam fallat, signis sanctitatem simulat. Illis enim suadet elationem magnitudinis, istos decipit ostensione sanctitatis. De hac cauda Behemoth istius sub draconis specie per Joannem dicitur: Et cauda ejus trahebat tertiam partem stellarum coeli, et misit eas in terram (Apoc. XII, 4). Coelum namque est Ecclesia quae in hac nocte vitae praesentis, dum in se innumeras sanctorum virtutes continet, radiantibus desuper sideribus fulget. Sed draconis cauda in terram stellas dejicit, quia illa Satanae extremitas, per audaciam assumpti hominis erecta, quosdam quos velut electos Dei in Ecclesia invenit obtinendo reprobos ostendit. Stellas itaque de coelo in terram cadere est relicta nonnullos spe coelestium, illo duce, ad ambitum gloriae saecularis inhiare. 26. Per Antiochum praesignatus est. Hinc Daniel sub Antiochi specie contra hanc draconis caudam loquitur, dicens: Dejecit de fortitudine, et de stellis, et conculcavit eas, et usque ad principem fortitudinis magnificatus est, et ab eo abstulit juge sacrificium, et dejecit locum sanctificationis ejus. Robur autem datum est ei contra juge sacrificium, propter peccata; et prosternetur veritas in terra, et faciet, et prosperabitur (Dan. VIII, 10-12). De fortitudine quippe et de stellis dejicit, cum nonnullos et luce justitiae resplendentes, et virtute operis robustos frangit. Qui usque ad principem fortitudinis magnificatur, quia contra ipsum auctorem virtutis extollitur. Juge sacrificium tollit, quia studium conversationis Ecclesiae in eis quos ceperit interrumpit. Robur vero ei propter peccata contra juge sacrificium datur, quia nisi percuntium merita 1061 exigerent, eos qui recti credebantur, obtinere adversarius nequaquam posset. Veritas in terra prosternitur, quia fides tunc rerum coelestium ad desiderium vitae temporalis inclinatur. Et faciet, et prosperabitur, quia tunc non solum in reproborum mentibus, sed etiam in electorum corporibus crudelitate inaestimabili, sine qualibet objectione grassabitur. Hinc rursum per Danielem dicitur: Consurget rex impudens facie, et intelligens propositiones, et roborabitur fortitudo ejus, sed non in suis viribus (Dan. VIII, 23). Illius namque hominis fortitudo non suis viribus roboratur, quia Satanae virtute in gloriam perditionis attollitur. Hinc rursum ait: Interficiet robustos et populum sanctorum secundum voluntatem suam, et dirigetur dolus in manu ejus (Ibid., 24, 25). Robustos namque interficit, cum eos qui mente invicti sunt corporaliter vincit. Vel certe robustos et populum sanctorum secundum voluntatem suam interficit, cum eos qui robusti ac sancti credebantur ad nutum suae voluntatis trahit. In cujus manu dolus dirigitur, quia in illo fraus per opus adjuvatur. Quod enim fallendo dicit, hoc mira faciendo asserit; nam quidquid mendax lingua simulat, hoc quasi verum esse manus operis ostentat. 27. Daniel et Paulus de Antichristo eadem docent. Hinc rursum dicit: Contra principem principum consurget, et sine manu conteretur (Ibid., 25). Hinc Paulus ait: Ita ut in templo Dei sedeat ostendens se tanquam sit Deus (II Thess. II, 4). Hinc rursum ait. Quem Dominus Jesus interficiet spiritu oris sui, et destruet illustratione adventus sui. Quod enim per Danielem dictum est: Contra Principem principum consurget (Dan. VIII, 25), hoc per Paulum dicitur: Ita ut in templo Dei sedeat, ostendens se tanquam sit Deus. Et quod per Danielem subjungitur: Sine manu conteretur (Ibid., 25), hoc per Paulum exprimitur: Quem

Dominus Jesus interficiet spiritu oris sui (II Thess. II, 8). Sine manu quippe conteretur, quia non angelorum bello, non sanctorum certamine, sed per adventum judicis solo oris spiritu aeterna morte ferietur. De hujus Behemoth elatione item per Paulum dicitur: Qui adversatur et extollitur supra omne quod dicitur Deus, aut quod colitur (Ibid., 4). De quo Daniel cum quartam bestiam diceret decem cornibus fultam, protinus adjunxit: Considerabam cornua, et ecce cornu aliud parvulum ortum est de medio eorum, et tria de cornibus primis evulsa sunt a facie ejus; et ecce oculi quasi oculi hominis erant in cornu isto, et os loquens ingentia (Dan. VII, 8). Undecimum quippe hujus bestiae cornu esse describitur, quia regni ejus potentia iniquitate roboratur. [Vet. XV.] Omne enim peccatum undenarium est, quia dum perversa agit, praecepta decalogi transit. Et quia in cilicio peccatum plangitur, hinc est quod in tabernaculo vela cilicina undecim fiunt (Exod. XXVI, 7). Hinc per undecimum Psalmum dicitur: Salvum me fac, Domine, quoniam defecit sanctus (Psal. XI, 1). Hinc in undenario numero remanere Apostolos Petrus metuens, Matthiam duodecimum, sorte missa, requisivit (Act. I, 26). Nisi enim signari culpam per undenarium cerneret, impleri apostolorum numerum tam festine duodenario non curaret. Quia ergo per undenarium transgressio exprimitur, hujus bestiae cornu undecimo ipse auctor transgressionis indicatur. Quod videlicet parvulum oritur, quia 1062 purus homo generatur: sed immaniter crescit, quia usque ad conjunctam sibi vim angelicae fortitudinis proficit. Quod tria cornua quae ei ante faciem sunt evellit, quia ditioni suae regna totidem quae sibi vicina sum subigit. Cujus oculi sunt ut oculi hominis, sed os ingentia loquitur, quia in illo humana quidem forma cernitur, sed verbis suis ultra homines elevatur. Quod ergo per Paulum dicitur: Extollens se super omne quod dicitur Deus, aut quod colitur, hoc Daniel propheta testatur, dicens: Os loquens ingentia (II Thess. II, 4). Quod vero illum vel Daniel ingentia loqui, vel Paulus perhibet supra cultum Deitatis extolli, hoc est quod apud beatum

Job divino eloquio cedro comparatur. More enim cedri ab alta nititur, dum in omni fastu fallaciae, et virtutis robore et culminis elatione prosperatur. Bene autem stringere caudam dicitur, quia tota ejus virtus in uno illo damnato homine congesta densatur, ut tanto per illum fortia ac mira faciat, quanto illum collectis suis viribus instigat. Sed quia quale sit iniquorum caput audivimus, nunc huic capiti quae membra adhaereant agnoscamus. Sequitur:

CAPUT XVI [Rec. XIII].

VERS. 12. Nervi testiculorum ejus perplexi sunt. 28. Praedicatorum diaboli argumenta perplexa. Antichristi testes multi jam sunt. Tot iste Behemoth testes habet quot iniquitatis suae praedicatores possidet. An ejus testes non sunt, qui pravis persuasionibus corda hominum, vinulenta erroris sui semina fundendo, corrumpunt? Apte autem dicitur quod testiculorum ejus nervi perplexi sunt, quia videlicet praedicatorum illius argumenta dolosis assertionibus innodantur, ut recta esse simulent quae perversa suadent, ut allegationum implicatio, quasi nervorum perplexitas, etsi videri possit, solvi non possit. Nervos ejus testiculi perplexos habent, quia acumina praedicatorum illius sub argumentis duplicibus latent. Plerumque autem cum verbis corda inficiunt, in opere innocentiam ostendunt. Neque enim ad se bonos persuasione sua traherent, si se et in actionibus perversos exhiberent. Sed quia testes sunt hujus belluae, et perplexis nervis illigantur, et rectos se ostentant ut lateant, et perversa praedicant ut corrumpant, ipsum nimirum suum caput imitantes, qui quasi leo in insidiis et saevit per potentiam terreni culminis, et blanditur per speciem sanctitatis. Sed haec bellua utinam tunc solum talia ageret, et nunc quoque ad corrumpenda fidelium viscera hos luxuriae testiculos non haberet! Neque enim malum sola locutione oris infunditur, sed pejus et a pluribus operis exemplo propinatur. Quam multi enim Antichristum non viderunt, sed tamen testiculi ejus sunt, quia corda innocentium actionis suae exemplo corrumpunt. Quisquis namque in superbia extollitur, quisquis avaritiae desideriis cruciatur, quisquis luxuriae voluptatibus solvitur, quisquis injustae atque immoderatae irae flagris ignitur, quid aliud quam Antichristi testis est? Qui dum se libenter ejus usibus implicat, exemplo suo aliis erroris fetus ministrat. Iste prava agit, ille prava agentibus adhaeret, et non solum non obviat, sed etiam favet. Quid ergo aliud quam Antichristi testis est, qui perdita auctoritate promissae Deo fidei, testimonium praestat errori? Quos tamen si quis redarguat, mox se 1063 sub quodam velamine defensionis occultant, quia videlicet eorum nervi perplexi sunt et male impliciti, corruptione solvi nequaquam possunt. Sequitur:

CAPUT XVII [Vet.

XVI, Rec. XIV]. VERS. 13. Ossa ejus velut fistulae aeris. 29. Qui sint Antichristi ossa. In corpore ossa sunt quae continent membra, et quae continentur. Habet ergo carnes haec bellua, habet et ossa, quia et iniqui sunt alii, qui tamen ab aliis in errore retinentur, et nequiores alii, qui in errore et alios retinent. Quid itaque aliud ossa Antichristi quam quoslibet in ejus corpore valentiores accipimus? in quorum corde iniquitas dum vehementer induruit, per eos tota ejus corporis compago subsistit. Multi namque in hoc mundo divites videntur, qui dum rebus opibusque subnixi sunt, quasi ex fortitudine solidantur; sed largiendo haec ipsa quibus fulti sunt, ad suum alios errorem trahunt. Modo nonnullos ut pravi fiant donis illiciunt, modo nonnullos ut pravi permaneant muneribus astringuat. Quid itaque hi nisi Antichristi ossa sunt, qui dum malos continendo multiplicant, in ejus corpore carnes portant? Hi nonnunquam in decipiendis auditoribus exhibent linguae dulcedinem, quia et spinae proferunt flores; et apparet quidem in eis quod oleat, sed latet quod pungat. Amaris dulcia, noxiis blanda permiscent, et potestate quidem admirandi videri appetunt, sed fallendi arte per remissa colloquia quasi humilitet substernuntur, et per sermonem de se insinuant quod per exhibitionem negant. 30. Cur fistulis aeris comparantur. Unde et recte ossa Behemoth istius aeris fistulis comparantur, quia nimirum, more metalli insensibilis, sonum bene loquendi habent, sed sensum bene vivendi non habent. Hoc namque quasi humiliter loquendo asserunt, quod elate vivendo contemnunt. Unde bene per Paulum dicitur: Si linguis hominum loquar et angelorum, charitatem autem non habeam, factus sum velut aes sonans aut cymbalum tinniens (I Cor. XIII, 1). Bona quippe loquens, sed per amorem eadem bona non sequens, velut aes aut cymbalum sonitum reddit, quia ipse non sentit verba quae ipse facit. [Vet. XVII.] Sunt vero nonnulli in hujus belluae corpore non honorus claibri, non divitiis fulti, non virtutum specie decorati, non scientia calliditatis periti, sed tamen videri quales non sunt ambiunt, et idcirco contra bonorum vitam nequiores fiunt, de quibus et sequitur:

CAPUT XVIII [Rec.

XV] IBID. Cartilago illius, quasi laminae ferreae. 31. Qui in Antichristi corpore debiliores sunt, ad perpetranda mala nequiores existunt. Cartilago namque ossis quidem speciem habet, sed ossis fortitudinem non habet. Quid est ergo quod cartilago ejus laminis ferreis comparatur, nisi quod hi qui in illo debiliores sunt, ad perpetranda mala nequiores existunt? Ferro quippe caetera metalla conciduntur, et cartilago ejus ferro similis dicitur, quia hi qui in ejus corpore ad ostensionem virtutum non sufficiunt contra necem fidelium acrius accenduntur. Quia enim cum eo se facere signa et prodigia non posse considerant, fideles se illi per crudelitatem probant; et pro eo quod innocentium corda corrumpere persuadendo non possunt, multiplicius caeteris bonorum corpora se exstinguere gloriantur. Bene ergo dicitur: 1064 Cartilago ejus ut laminae ferreae, quia in ejus corpore quod infirmius quisque crediderit, hoc est quod nequius incidit. Qui recte non ferro tantummodo, sed laminis ferreis comparantur, quia dum se circumquaque in crudelitate dilatare ambiunt, quasi in ferri se laminas extendunt. [Rec. XVI.] 32. Libet arctiori inquisitionis manu haec eadem verba conditoris, quae jam videntur discussa, distinguere, atque uberiores intelligentiae fructus instruendis moribus apportare. Nam quia antiquus hostis quid per assumptum hominem contra homines agat audivimus, superest ut nunc quid in hominibus etiam per semetipsum sine homine moliatur exploremus. Ecce enim dicitur:

CAPUT XIX.

VERS. 12. Stringit caudam suam quasi cedrum. 33. Prima diaboli suggestio tenera est et facile conteritur. Sed postea robur ejus fit intolerabile. Peccatum tribus modis admittitur. Prima quidem serpentis suggestio mollis ac tenera est, et facile virtutis pede conterenda, sed si haec invalescere negligenter admittitur, eique ad cor aditus licenter praebetur, tanta se virtute exaggerat, ut captam mentem deprimens, usque ad intolerabile robur excrescat. Caudam itaque quasi cedrum stringere dicitur, quia semel ejus in corde recepta tentatio, in cunctis quae subsequenter intulerit velut ex jure dominatur. Hujus ergo Behemoth caput herba est, cauda cedrus, quia ex prima quidem suggestione blandiens substernitur, sed per usum vehementer invalescens, succrescente tentationis fine, roboratur. Superabile namque est omne quod initio suggerit, sed inde sequitur, quod vinci vix possit. Prius enim quasi consulens blanda ad animum loquitur; sed cum semel dentem delectationis infixerit, violenta post consuetudine pene insolubiliter innodatur. Unde et bene stringere caudam dicitur. Dente enim vulnerat, cauda ligat, quia suggestione prima percutit, sed percussam mentem, ne evadere valeat, invalescente fine tentationis, astringit. Quia enim peccatum tribus modis admittitur, cum videlicet serpentis suggestione, carnis delectatione, spiritus consensione perpetratur, Behemoth iste, prius illicita suggerens, linguam exerit; post, ad delectationem pertrahens, dentem figit; ad extremum vero, per consensionem possidens, caudam stringit. Hinc est enim quod nonnulli peccata longo usu perpetrata in semetipsis ipsi reprehendunt, atque haec ex judicio fugiunt, sed vitare opere nec decertantes possunt, quia dum Behemoth istius caput non conterunt, plerumque cauda et nolentes ligantur. Quae contra eos cedri more induruit, quia a blanda voluptate exordii usque ad violentiam retentionis excrevit. Dicatur ergo: Stringit caudam suam quasi cedrum, ut tanto quisque debeat initia tentationis fugere, quanto finem ejus intelligit citius solvi non posse. [Vet. XVIII.] 34. Diabolus cum vitae finis imminet, tunc graviores tentationes suggerit. Sciendum quoque est quod plerumque eis quos ceperit tunc graviores culpas ingerit, cum praesentis vitae termino illos propinquare cognoscit; et quo se consummaturum tentationem considerat, eo eis iniquitatum pondera graviora coacervat. Behemoth igitur caudam suam quasi cedrum stringit, quia quos per prava initia ceperit, ad finem deteriores reddit, ut tentamenta ejus quo citius cessatura sunt, eo valentius compleantur. Quia enim suis poenis eorum satagit aequare supplicium, 1065 in eis ardentius ante mortem nititur omne exaggerare peccatum. Plerumque vero Behemoth iste jam cor male subditum possidet, sed tamen divina illum gratia repellit, et manus misericordiae ejicit, quem ad se captiva voluntas introduxit. Cumque a corde expellitur, acriores infigere iniquitatum stimulos conatur, ut eos tentationum fluctus mens ab illo impugnata sentiat, quos etiam possessa nesciebat. Quod bene in Evangelio exprimitur, cum exire ab homine immundus spiritus Domino jubente narratur. Nam cum daemoniacus puer fuisset oblatus, scriptum est: Comminatus est Jesus spiritui immundo, dicens: Surde et mute spiritus, ego tibi praecipio, exi ab eo, et amplius ne introeas in eum. Et exclamans, et multum discerpens eum, exivit ab eo (Marc. IX, 24). Ecce eum non discerpserat cum tenebat, exiens discerpsit, quia nimirum tunc pejus cogitationes mentis dilaniat, cum jam egressui divina virtute compulsus appropinquat. Et quem mutus possederat, cum clamoribus deserebat, quia plerumque cum possidet, minora tentamenta irrogat; cum vero de corde pellitur, acriori infestatione perturbat. Bene itaque dicitur: Stringit caudam suam quasi cedrum, quia et cor possidens semper in malitia ex posterioribus crescit, et cor deserens vehementioribus cogitationum stimulis percutit. [Rec. XVII.] Adhuc autem Behemoth istius mira pietate conditoris astutiora argumenta panduntur, cum subditur:

CAPUT XX.

IBID. Nervi testiculorum ejus perplexi sunt. 36. Peccata ita implicata sunt, ut dum unum vitatur, fere semper labamur in aliud. Tribus ordinibus constat Ecclesia. Nervi testiculorum ejus sunt pestifera argumenta machinationum (Dist. 13, can. 2). Per ipsa quippe calliditatis suae vires erigit, et fluxa mortalium corda corrumpit. Testiculi ejus sunt suggestiones pravae, quibus in mentis corruptione fervescit, atque in construprata anima iniqui operis prolem gignit. Sed horum testiculorum nervi perplexi sunt, quia suggestionum illius argumenta implicatis inventionibus illigantur, ut plerosque ita peccare faciant, quatenus si fortasse peccatum fugere appetant, hoc sine alio peccati laqueo non evadant; et culpam faciant dum vitant, ac nequaquam se ab una valeant solvere, nisi in alia consentiant ligari. [Vet. XIX.] Quod melius ostendimus, si qua ex conversatione hominum illigationis hujus exempla proferamus. Quia vero in tribus ordinibus sancta Ecclesia constat, conjugatorum videlicet, continentium, atque rectorum; unde et Ezechiel tres viros liberatos vidit, videlicet Noe, Daniel, et Job (Ezech. XIV, 14, seq.); et in Evangelio Dominus dum alios in agro, alios in lecto, atque esse in molendino alios perhibet (Luc. XVII, 34, 35), tres procul dubio in Ecclesia ordines ostendit; liquido satisfacimus, si singula ex singulis exquiramus. 36. Tentationes saeculo militantium. Ecce enim quidam dum mundi hujus amicitias appetit, cuilibet alteri similem sibi vitam ducenti quod secreta illius omni silentio contegat se jurejurando constringit; sed is cui juratum est adulterium perpetrare cognoscitur, ita ut etiam maritum adulterae occidere conetur. Is autem qui jusjurandum praebuit ad mentem revertitur, et 1066 diversis hinc inde cogitationibus impugnatur, atque hoc silere formidat, ne silendo, adulterii simul et homicidii particeps fiat; et prodere trepidat, ne reatu se perjurii obstringat. Perplexis ergo testiculorum nervis ligatus est, quia in quamlibet partem declinet, metuit ne a transgressionis contagio liber non sit. 37. Deo servire per obedientiam ambientium, praelatorum. Alius cuncta quae mundi sunt deserens, atque per omnia frangere proprias voluntates quaerens, alieno se subdere regimini appetit, sed eum qui sibi apud Deum praeesse debeat minus cauta inquisitione discernit. Cui fortasse is qui sine judicio eligitur, cum praeesse jam coeperit, agi quae Dei sunt prohibet, quae mundi sunt jubet. Pensans itaque subditus vel quae sit culpa inobedientiae, vel quod contagium saecularis vitae, et obedire trepidat, et non obedire formidat, ne aut obediens Deum in suis praeceptis deserat, aut rursum non obediens Deum in electo priore contemnat; et aut, illicitis obtemperans, hoc quod pro Deo appetit contra Deum exerceat, aut rursum, non obtemperans, eum quem suum judicem quaesierat suo judicio supponat. Aperte ergo iste per indiscretionis suae vitium perplexis testiculorum nervis astringitur, quia aut obtemperans, aut certe non obtemperans, in culpa transgressionis ligatur. Studebat proprias voluntates frangere, et curat eas etiam contempto priore solidare. Decrevit mundum funditus relinquere, et ad mundi curas vel ex aliena voluntate compellitur redire. Perplexi itaque nervi sunt, cum sic nos argumenta hostis illigant, ut culparum nodi quo quaeruntur solvi, durius astringant. 38. Alius pensare pondus honoris ecclesiastici negligens, ad locum regiminis praemiis ascendit. Sed quia omne quod hic eminet plus moeroribus afficitur quam honoribus gaudet, dum cor tribulationibus premitur, ad memoriam culpa revocatur, doletque se ad laborem cum culpa pervenisse, et quam sit iniquum quod admiserit ex ipsa fractus difficultate agnoscit. Reum igitur se cum impensis praemiis agnoscens, vult adeptae sublimitatis locum deserere, sed timet ne gravius delictum sit suscepti gregis custodiam reliquisse; vult suscepti gregis curam gerere, sed formidat ne deterior culpa sit regimina pastoralis gratiae empta possidere. Per honoris ergo ambitum ligatum culpa hinc inde se conspicit. Esse quippe sine reatu criminis neutrum videt, si aut susceptus semel grex relinquatur, aut rursum sacra actio saeculariter empta teneatur. Undique metuit, et suspectus latus omne pertimescit, ne aut stans in empto regimine non digne lugeat, quod non etiam deserens emendat; aut certe regimen deserens, dum aliud flere nititur, rursus aliud de ipsa gregis destitutione committat. Quia ergo Behemoth iste ita inexplicabilibus nodis ligat, ut plerumque mens in dubium adducta, unde se a culpa solvere nititur, inde in culpa arctius astringatur, recte dicitur. Nervi testiculorum ejus perplexi sunt. Argumenta namque machinationum ejus quasi quo laxantur 1067 ut relinquant, eo magis implicantur ut teneant. [Vet. XX.] 39. Ubi nullus evadendi sine peccato patet aditus, quid agendum. Conjugatorum concubitus pro explenda libidine culpae non expers. Est tamen quod ad destruendas ejus versutias utiliter fiat, ut dum mens inter minora et maxima peccata constringitur, si omnino nullus sine peccato evadendi aditus patet, minora semper eligantur, quia et qui murorum undique ambitu ne fugiat clauditur, ibi se in fugam praecipitat, ubi brevior murus invenitur. Et Paulus dum quosdam in Ecclesia incontinentes aspiceret, concessit minima, ut majora declinarent, dicens: Propter fornicationem autem unusquisque uxorem suam habeat (I Cor. VII, 2). Et quia tunc solum conjuges in admistione sine culpa sunt cum non pro explenda libidine, sed pro suspicienda prole miscentur, ut hoc etiam quod concesserat sine culpa, quamvis minima, non esse monstraret, illico adjunxit: Hoc autem dico secundum indulgentiam, non secundum imperium

(Ibid., 6). Non enim est sine vitio quod ignoscitur, et non praecipitur. Peccatum profecto vidit, quod posse indulgere praevidit. Sed cum in dubiis constringimur, utiliter minimis subdimur, ne in magnis sine venia peccemus. Itaque plerumque nervorum Behemoth istius perplexitas solvitur dum ad virtutes maximas per commissa minora transitur. Sequitur:

CAPUT XXI.

VERS. 13. Ossa ejus sicut fistulae aeris. 40. Quantum ex astutis diaboli consiliis periculum immineat. Quid per ossa Behemoth istius, nisi consilia designantur? Nam sicut in ossibus positio corporis roburque subsistit, ita in fraudulentis consiliis tota se ejus malitia erigit. Neque enim vi quempiam premit, sed calliditate pestiferae persuasionis interficit. Et rursum, sicut ossa quae irrigant medullae confortant, ita ejus consilia per spiritalis naturae potentiam infusa ingenii subtilitas roborat. Hoc vero testiculi ejus ab ossibus, id est suggestiones a consiliis, distant, quod per illas aperte noxia inserit, per haec autem quasi ex bono consulens ad culpam trahit, per illas pugnando superat, per haec velut consulendo supplantat. Unde et bene ejus ossa, id est haec eadem consilia, aeris fistulis comparantur. Aeris quippe listulae sonoris aptari cantibus solent, quae admotae auribus dum blandum carmen subtiliter concinunt, interiora mentis in exteriora delectationis trahunt; et dum dulce est quod auribus sonant, virilitatem cordis in voluptatis fluxu debilitant. Cumque auditus ad delectationem trabitur, sensus a statu suae fortitudinis enervatur. Ita quoque astuta ejus consilia dum quasi blanda provisione consulunt, cor a forti intentione invertunt; et dum dulcia resonant, ad noxia inclinant. Quasi ergo aeris fistulae sunt, quae dum libenter audiuntur, ab interna intentione animum in exterioris vitae delectationem dejiciunt. Hoc enim Behemoth iste magnopere ad exsequendam deceptionem satagit, ut dum perversitatis suae consilium quasi utile ostendit, suaviter valeat sonare quod dicit, quatenus et ostensa utilitate mentem mulceat, et absconsa iniquitate corrumpat. [Vet. XXI.] 41. Exemplis palam fit. Qua arte divitiis acquirendis insudare suadeat. Quae apertius in cunctis ostendimus, si pauca breviter consiliorum ejus argumenta pandamus. Ecce enim quidam rebus contentus propriis, decrevit nullis mundi hujus occupationibus implicari, valde formidans quietis suae commoda perdere, et valde despiciens cum peccatis lucra cumulare. 1068 Ad hunc hostis callidus veniens, ut intentionem bonae devotionis subruat, quasi utilitatis consilium subministrat, dicens: Ea quidem quae habes, in praesenti sufficiunt, sed his deficientibus quid acturus es? Si enim post haec nulla providentur, adsunt quae ad praesens impendenda sunt filiis, sed tamen paranda sunt quae serventur. Deesse potest citius etiam quod adest, si sollicitudo provida cesset parare quod deest. An non et terrena potest actio peragi, et tamen in actione culpa declinari, quatenus et exteriora stipendia praebeat, et tamen internam rectitudinem non inflectat? Haec interim blandiens insinuat, et seorsum jam in negotio terreno quod providet peccati laqueos occultat. Ossa itaque ejus sicut fistulae aeris sunt, quia perniciosa ejus consilia auditori suo consulentis vocis suavitate blandiuntur. 42. Et mundo nuntium remittere meditantem avertat.Alius quoque non solum decrevit terrena commoda non quaerere, sed etiam cunctis quae possidet renuntiare ut in discipulatu coelestis magisterii tanto se liberior exerceat, quanto et expeditior redditus, ea quae possidentem premere poterant deserens calcat. Hujus cor hostis insidians occulta suggestione alloquitur, dicens: Unde haec temeritatis tantae surrexit audacia, ut credere audeas quod omnia relinquendo subsistas? Aliter te creator condidit, atque aliter tu teipsum disponis; valentiorem te robustioremque faceret, si sequiste sua vestigia cum inopiae necessitate voluisset. An non plerique et terrena patrimonia nequaquam deserunt, et tamen ex his per misericordiae opera supernae sortis bona aeterna mercantur? Haec blandiens suggerit, seorsum vero in eisdem rebus quas retinere admonet ante retinentis oculos delectationes pestiferas decipiens apponit, quatenus seductum cor ad blandimenta exteriora pertrahat, in intima perfectionis vota pervertat. Ossa itaque ejus sicut fistulae aeris sunt, quia dolosa ejus consilia dum blandum ex exterioribus sonum reddunt, perniciosum dispendium de interioribus ingerunt. 43. Maxime si ad monasticae perfectionis culmen tendat.Alius, relictis omnibus quae exterius possederat, ut ordinem sublimioris discipulatus apprehendat, etiam intimas frangere voluntates parat, ut rectioribus se alterius voluntatibus subdens, non solum pravis desideriis, sed ad perfectionis cumulum etiam in bonis votis sibimetipsi renuntiet, et cuncta quae sibi agenda sunt ex alieno arbitrio observet. Hunc hostis callidus tanto mollius alloquitur, quanto ab excelsiori loco dejicere ardentius conatur, moxque virulenta suggestione blandiens, dicit: O quanta per temetipsum miranda agere poteris, si nequaquam te judicio alterius subdis! Cur profectum tuum sub studio meliorationis imminuis? Cur intentionis tuae bonum, dum ultra quam necesse est extendere niteris, frangis? Quae enim dum voluntate propria usus es, perversa perpetrasti? Qui ergo tibi plene ad bene vivendum sufficis, alienum super te judicium cur requiris? Haec blandiens intimat, seorsum vero in voluntatibus ejus propriis exercendae superbiae causas parat; et dum laudat cor de intestina rectitudine, investigat callide ubi subruat in pravitate. Ossa itaque ejus sicut fistulae aeris sunt, quia clandestina ejus consilia unde quasi animum blanda delectant, 1069 inde perniciosa a recta intentione dissipant. 44. Quomodo ab officiis charitatis avocare student. Alius fractis plene voluntatibus suis, multa jam vetusti hominis vitia et mutatione vitae, et lamentatione poenitentiae correxit; et tanto majori zelo contra aliena peccata accenditur, quanto sibimetipsi funditus mortuus, iniquitatibus propriis non tenetur. Hunc hostis callidus, quia zelo justitiae etiam caeteris prodesse cognoscit, quasi prospera consulentibus verbis impetit, dicens: Quid te ad aliena curanda dilatas? Utinam tua considerare convalescas. An non perpendis quia cum ad aliena extenderis, erga ea curanda quae tua sunt minor inveniris? Et quid prodest alieni vulneris cruorem tergere, et putredinem proprii negligendo dilatare? Haec dum quasi consulens dicit, zelum charitatis adimit, et omne bonum quod prodire ex charitate poterat, gladio subintroducti torporis exstinguit. Si enim proximos sicut nosmetipsos diligere praecipimur (Matth. XIX, 19; XXII, 39), dignum est ut sic eorum zelo contra vitia, sicut et nostro, flagremus. Quia igitur dum suaviter consulit, mentem ab intentione propria alienam reddit, recte dicitur: Ossa ejus sicut fistulae aeris. Quando enim per fraudulenta consilia audientis animo blandum sonat, quasi cum fistula aeris cantat, ut unde mulcet, inde decipiat [Vet. XXII]. Sed Behemoth iste valde mollius certamen movet, quando se in insidiis sub praetextu infirmitatis exercet. Tunc autem duriores tentationes excitat, quando ante tentati oculos iniquitatis laqueos sub specie virtutis occultat. Unde et recte subjungitur:

CAPUT XXII.

VERS. 13. Cartilago ejus quasi laminae ferreae. 45. Duriores tentationes excitat cum laqueos sub specie virtutis occultat. Quid enim per cartilaginem, nisi simulatio ejus accipitur? Cartilago namque ossis ostendit speciem, sed ossis non habet firmitatem. Et sunt nonnulla vitia quae ostendunt in se rectitudinis speciem, sed ex pravitatis prodeunt infirmitate. Hostis enim nostri malitia tanta se arte palliat, ut plerumque ante deceptae mentis oculos culpas virtutes fingat, ut inde quisque quasi exspectet praemia, unde dignus est aeterna invenire tormenta. Plerumque enim in ulciscendis vitiis crudelitas agitur, et justitia putatur, atque immoderata ira justi zeli meritum creditur; et cum a distortis moribus peccantes dirigi caute debeant, violenta inflexione franguntur. Plerumque dissoluta remissio quasi mansuetudo ac pietas habetur; et dum plus quam decet delinquentibus temporaliter parcitur, ad aeterna supplicia crudeliter reservantur.

Nonnunquam effusio misericordia creditur, et dum male servare culpa sit, pejus spargi quod acceptum est non timetur. Nonnunquam tenacia parcitas putatur, et cum grave sit vitium non tribuere, virtus creditur accepta retinere. Saepe malorum pertinacia constantia dicitur, et dum mens a pravitate sua flecti non patitur, quasi ex recti defensione gloriatur. Saepe inconstantia quasi tractabilitas habetur, et quo quisque fidem integram nulli servat, eo amicum se hominibus aestimat. Aliquando timor incompetens humilitas creditur, et cum temporali formidine pressus quisque a defensione veritatis tacet, arbitratur quod juxta Dei ordinem humilem se potioribus exhibeat. 1070 Aliquando vocis superbia veri libertas aestimatur, et cum per elationem veritati contradicitur, loquendi procacitas veritatis defensio putatur. Plerumque pigritia quasi continentia quietis attenditur, et cum gravis culpae sit recta studiose non agere, magnae virtutis meritum creditur a prava tantum actione cessare. Plerumque inquietudo spiritus, vigilans sollicitudo nominatur; et cum quietem quisque non tolerat, agendo quae appetit, virtutis debitae implere se exercitium putat. Saepe ad ea quae agenda sunt incauta praecipitatio laudandi studii fervor creditur; et cum desideratum bonum intempestiva actione corrumpitur, eo agi melius quo celerius aestimatur. Saepe accelerandi boni tarditas consilium putatur; et cum exspectatur ut ex retractatione proficiat, hoc insidians mora supplantat [Vet. XXIII]. Igitur cum culpa velut virtus aspicitur, necessario pensandum est quia tanto tardius mens vitium suum deserit, quanto hoc quod perpetrat, non erubescit; et tanto mens tardius vitium deserit, quanto, per virtutis speciem decepta, praemiorum etiam de eo retributionem quaerit. Facile autem culpa corrigitur quae et erubescitur quia esse culpa sentitur. Quia itaque error cum virtus creditur difficilius emendatur, recte dicitur: Cartilago ejus quasi laminae ferreae. Behemoth enim iste que sub praetextu boni calliditatem suam fraudulentius exhibet, eo in culpa mentem durius tenet. 46. Qui viam sanctitatis appetunt, aliquando in errorem lapsi, tardius emendantur. Frigidis mentibus frigidiores fiunt. Hinc est quod nonnunquam hi qui viam sanctitatis appetunt in errorem lapsi tardius emendantur. Rectum quippe aestimant esse quod agunt, et sicut excolendae virtuti, sic vitio perseverantiam jungunt. Rectum existimant quod agunt, et idcirco suo judicio enixius serviunt. Unde bene Jeremias cum diceret: Candidiores Nazaraei ejus nive, nitidiores lacte, rubicundiores ebore antiquo, sapphiro pulchriores; denigrata est super carbones facies eorum, et non sunt cogniti in plateis, illico adjunxit: Adhaesit culis eorum ossibus, aruit, et facta est quasi lignum (Thren. IV, 7). Quid enim Nazaraeorum nomine, nisi abstinentium et continentium vita signatur, quae nive et lacte nitidior dicitur? Nix enim ex aqua congelascit quae desuper venit, lac autem ex carne exprimitur quae in inferioribus nutritur. Quid ergo per nivem nisi candor vitae coelestis, quid per lac nisi temporalis dispensationis administratio demonstratur? Et quia plerumque continentes viri in Ecclesia tam mira opera faciunt, ut ab eis multi qui coelestem vitam tenuerunt, multi qui terrena bene dispensaverunt, superari videantur, et candidiores nive, et nitidiores lacte referuntur. Qui etiam, quia per fervorem spiritus, antiquorum ac fortium patrum nonnunquam vincere vitam videntur, recte subjungitur: Rubicundiores ebore antiquo. Dum enim ruboris nomen imprimitur, sancti desiderii flamma signatur. Ebur vero esse os magnorum animalium non ignoramus. Ebore itaque antiquo rubicundiores sunt, quia saepe ante humanos oculos nonnullis praecedentibus patribus studii ferventioris existunt. De quibus ut totum simul ostendatur, adjungitur: Sapphiro pulchriores. Aetherei quippe coloris est sapphirus. Et quia praecedentes multos, atque ad superna tendentes per coelestem conversationem 1071 videntur vincere, narrantur sapphiro pulchriores exstitisse. Sed plerumque dum virtutum copia etiam plus quam expedit prosperatur, in quamdam sui fiduciam mens adducitur, et decepta praesumptione propria, repente peccato subripiente fuscatur; unde recte subjungitur: Denigrata est super carbones facies eorum. Nigri enim post candorem fiunt, quia, amissa Dei justitia, cum de se praesumunt, in ea etiam quae non intelligunt, peccata dilabuntur; et quia post amoris ignem ad frigus torporis veniunt, exstinctis carbonibus ex comparatione, praeferuntur. Nonnunquam enim dum timorem Dei per sui fiduciam deserunt, etiam frigidis mentibus frigidiores fiunt. De quibus recte subjungitur: Non sunt cogniti in plateis. Platea quippe sermonis Graeci ratione pro latitudine dicitur. Quid vero est humanae menti angustius quam voluntates proprias frangere? De qua fractione Veritas dicit: Intrate per angustam portam (Matth. VII, 13). Quid autem latius quam nullis propriis voluntatibus reluctari, et quaquaversum impulsus arbitrii duxerit se sine retractione diffundere? Qui ergo per fiduciam sanctitatis postposito meliorum judicio se sequuntur, quasi per plateas pergunt. Sed non sunt cogniti in plateis, quia de vita sua aliud ostenderant quando frangendo voluntates proprias in angusto se calle retinebant. Et bene additur: Adhaesit cutis eorum ossibus. Quid in osse nisi duritia fortitudinis, quid in cute nisi mollities exprimitur infirmitatis? Cutis ergo corum adhaerere ossibus dicitur, quia ab eis prava sentientibus infirmitas vitii duritia virtutis putatur. Infirma enim sunt quae faciunt, sed, elationis fiducia decepti, fortibus ea suspicionibus jungunt, et quo de se magna sentiunt, eo de sua nequitia emendari contemnunt. Unde et recte adjungitur: Aruit et facta est quasi lignum. Culpa quippe eorum tanto insensibilior redditur, quanto apud eos etiam laudabilis habetur. Quam recte aridam asserit, quia nulla sui cogitatione viridescit. Quod ergo apud Jeremiam per infirmitatem cutis, hoc apud beatum Job per fragilitatem dicitur cartilago; et quod illic ossa per duritiam, hoc hic laminae ferreae esse memorantur. [Vet. XXIV.] Sed Behemoth iste, qui per membra sua extremo tempore contra electos Dei tanta se arte iniquitatis exercet, qui etiam per semetipsum ad decipiendas mentes in tanta insidiarum tergiversatione se exhibet, cujus naturae, cujus sit conditionis audiamus. Neque enim tam mira vel in maligna operatione posset, si non ex magna conditione subsisteret. Unde et mox mira pietate Dominus, ac si causas tantae astutiae tantaeque fortitudinis redderet, adjunxit, dicens:

CAPUT XXIII [Rec. XVIII].

VERS 14. Ipse est principium viarum Dei. 47. Prima et nobilior creatura fuit angelus qui cecidit. Velut si aperte diceret: Idcirco ad tam multa fortiter sufficit, quia in natura rerum hunc creando per substantiam conditor primum fecit. Quid enim vias Dei, nisi ejus actiones accipimus. De quibus per prophetam dicit: Non enim sunt viae meae sicut viae vestrae (Isai. LV, 8). Et principium viarum Dei Behemoth dicitur (De poenit., dist. 2, c. 44), quia nimirum cum cuncta creans ageret, hunc primum condidit, quem reliquis angelis eminentiorem fecit. Hujus primatus eminentiam conspicit propheta cum dicit: Cedri 1072 non fuerunt altiores illo in paradiso Dei; abietes non adaequaverunt summitatem ejus; platani non fuerunt aequae frondibus illius; omne lignum paradisi Dei non est assimilatum illi et pulchritudini ejus, quoniam speciosum fecit eum in multis condensisque frondibus (Ezech. XXXI, 8, 9). Qui namque accipi in cedris, abietibus et platanis possunt, nisi illa virtutum coelestium procerae celsitudinis agmina in aeternae laetitiae viriditate plantata? Quae quamvis excelsa sint condita, huic tamen nec praelata sunt, nec aequata. Qui speciosus factus in multis condensisque frondibus esse dicitur, quia praelatum caeteris legionibus, tanta illum species pulchriorem reddidit, quanta et supposita angelorum multitudo decoravit. Ista arbor in paradiso Dei tot quasi condensas frondes habuit, quot sub se positas supernorum spirituum legiones attendit. Qui idcirco peccans sine venia damnatus est, quia magnus sine comparatione fuerat creatus. Hinc ei rursum per eumdem prophetam dicitur: Tu signaculum similitudinis Dei, plenus sapientia et perfectus decore, in deliciis paradisi Dei fuisti (Ezech. XXVIII, 12, 13). Multa enim de ejus magnitudine locuturus, primo verbo cuncta complexus est. Quid namque boni non habuit, si signaculum Dei similitudinis fuit? De sigillo quippe annuli talis similitudo imaginaliter exprimitur, qualis in sigillo eodem essentialiter habetur. Et licet homo ad similitudinem Dei creatus sit (Genes. I, 27), angelo tamen quasi majus aliquid tribuens, non eum ad similitudinem Dei conditum, sed ipsum signaculum Dei similitudinis dicit, ut quo subtilior est in natura, eo in illo similitudo Dei plenius credatur expressa. [Vet. XXV]. 48. Ejus primatus in novem angelorum ordines. Cherub quid significet. Hinc est quod primatus ejus potentiam adhuc insinuans idem propheta, subjungit: Omnis lapis pretiosus operimentum tuum, sardius et topazius et jaspis, chrysolithus, onyx, et berillus, sapphirus, carbunculus et smaragdus (Ezech. XXVIII, 13). Novem dixit genera lapidum, quia nimirum novem sunt ordines angelorum. Nam cum per ipsa sacra eloquia angeli, archangeli, throni, dominationes, virtutes, principatus, potestates, cherubim, et seraphim, aperta narratione memorantur, quantae sint supernorum civium distinctiones ostenditur. Quibus tamen Behemoth iste opertus fuisse describitur, quia eos quasi vestem ad ornatum suum habuit, quorum dum claritatem transcenderet, ex eorum comparatione clarior fuit. De cujus illic adhuc descriptione subjungit: Aurum opus decoris tui et foramina tua in die qua conditus es, praeparata sunt (Ibid., 13). Aurum opus decoris ejus exstitit, quia sapientiae claritate canduit, quam bene creatus accepit. Foramina vero idcirco in lapidibus fiunt, ut vinculati auro in ornamenti compositione jungantur, et nequaquam a se dissideant, quos interfusum aurum repletis foraminibus ligat. Hujus ergo lapidis in die conditionis suae foramina praeparata sunt, quia videlicet capax charitatis est conditus. Qua si repleri voluisset, stantibus angelis tanquam positis in regis ornamento lapidibus potuisset inhaerere. Si enim charitatis auro sese penetrabilem praebuisset, sanctis angelis sociatus, in ornamento, ut diximus, regio lapis fixus maneret. Habuit ergo lapis iste foramina, 1073 sed per superbiae vitium charitatis auro non sunt repleta. Nam quia idcirco ligantur auro ne cadant, idcirco iste cecidit, quia etiam perforatus manu artificis, amoris vinculis ligari contempsit. Nunc autem caeteri lapides, qui huic similiter fuerant perforati, penetrante se invicem charitate ligati sunt, atque hoc in munere, isto cadente, meruerunt ut nequaquam jam de ornamento regio cadendo solvantur. Hujus principatus celsitudinem adhuc idem propheta intuens, adjungit: Tu cherub extentus et protegens in monte sancto Dei, in medio lapidum ignitorum perfectus ambulasti (Ezech. XXVIII, 14). Cherub quippe plenitudo scientiae interpretatur; et idcirco iste Cherub dicitur, quia transcendisse cunctos scientia non dubitatur. Qui in medio ignitorum lapidum perfectus ambulavit, quia inter angelorum corda charitatis igne succensa, clarus gloria conditionis exstitit. Quem bene extentum ac protegentem dicit. Omne enim quod extenti protegimus, obumbramus. Et quia comparatione claritatis suae caeterorum claritatem obumbrasse creditur, ipse extentus et protegens fuisse perhibetur. Reliquos enim quasi obumbrando operuit, qui eorum magnitudinem excellentia majore transcendit. Quod ergo illic speciosus in multis frondibus, quod illic signaculum similitudinis, quod illic cherub, quod illic protegens dicitur, hoc hic voce dominica Behemoth iste viarum Dei principium vocatur. [Vet. XXVI.] 49. Ex angeli casu discat homo non superbire. De quo idcirco tam mira in quibus fuit et quae amisit insinuat ut territo homini ostendat quid ipse si superbiat de elationis suae culpa passurus sit, si feriendo illi parcere noluit quem creando in gloriam tantae claritatis elevavit. Consideret ergo homo quid elatus in terra mereatur, si et praelatus angelis angelus in coelo prosternitur. Unde et bene per prophetam dicitur: Inebriatus est in coelo gladius meus (Isai. XXXIV, 5). Ac si aperte diceret: Qua ira feriam superbos terrae perpendite, si ipsos etiam quos in coelo juxta me condidi pro elationis vitio percutere non peperci? Tot itaque hostis antiqui virtutibus auditis, tanta conditionis ejus magnitudine cognita, quis non immensa formidine corruat? quis non desperationis percussione succumbat? Sed quia elationem nostram ostensa hostis nostri potentia reprimit, etiam infirmitatem nostram Dominus patefacta gratiae suae dispensatione fovet. Unde cum eum principium viarum suarum diceret, illico adjunxit:

CAPUT XXIV [Rec. XIX].

IBID. Qui fecit eum, applicavit gladium ejus. 50. Angeli apostatae potentiam Deus coercet. Gladius quippe Behemoth istius ipsa nocendi malitia est Sed ab eo a quo bonus per naturam factus est, ejus gladius applicatur, quia ejus malitia divina dispensatione restringitur, ne ferire tantum mentes hominum quantum appetit permittatur. Quia ergo hostis noster et multum potest, et minus percutit, ejus gladium pietas conditoris astringit, ut replicatus intra ejus conscientiam lateat, et ultra quam desuper juste disponitur, sese in mortes hominum ejus malitia non extendat. Quod igitur ad multa fortiter praevalet, hoc de principio magnae conditionis potest, quod vero a quibusdam vincitur, ejus nimirum gladius ab auctore replicatur. 1074 Iste namque Behemoth, qui principium viarum Dei est, cum contra sanctum virum licentiam tentationis accepit, gentes movit, greges abstulit, ignem de coelo deposuit, perturbato aere ventos excitavit, domum concutiens subruit, convivantes filios exstinxit, uxoris mentem in dolo pravae suasionis exercuit, mariti carnem inflictis vulneribus confodit (Job. I, 13, seq.); sed ejus gladius a conditore replicatur, cum dicitur: Animam illius serva (Ibid., II, 6). Qui replicato gladio quantae sit infirmitatis, evangelista testante describitur, quia nec manere in obsesso homine potuit, nec rursus invadere bruta animalia nisi jussus praesumpsit, dicens: Si ejicis nos, mitte nos in gregem porcorum (Matth. VIII, 31). Malitiae quippe ejus gladius quam sit replicatus ostenditur, cui si potestas summa licentiam non praeberet, nec grassari in porcorum gregem valeret. Quando ergo iste sua sponte nocere factis ad Dei imaginem hominibus audeat, de quo nimirum constat quod non jussus contingere nec porcos praesumat? 51. Arii haeresis confutatur. Notandum quoque est quod dum viarum Dei principium Behemoth dicitur, vesanum dogma Arii aperta ratione dissipatur. Facturam quippe Dei Filium fatetur, et ecce. Behemoth in factura rerum primus creatus ostenditur. Superest ergo ut Arius aut non factum Filium praedicet, aut eum post Behemoth conditum stultus putet. Quia vero omne quod applicatur in semetipsum reducitur, recte applicatus Behemoth gladius dicitur. In semetipsam namque se ejus malitia decoquit, cum ad votum suum sese contra electorum vitam prohibita non exercet. Multos autem exigentibus meritis ferire permittitur, ut cum Deum deserunt, damnato hosti famulentur. Ab electis vero eo valentius vincitur, quo soli auctori omnium humilius substernuntur. Quia igitur per hoc quod viarum Dei principium dicitur, per hoc quod permittente Domino valde intolerabilis demonstratur, aperte cognoscimus cum quanto hoste pugnemus. Superest igitur ut unusquisque nostrum tanto se plenius auctori subjiciat, quanto contra se verius violentas adversarii vires pensat. Quid namque nos nisi pulvis sumus? Quid vero ille, nisi unus ex coelestibus spiritibus, et, quod adhuc majus est, summus? Quid ergo de propria virtute audeat, quando contra angelorum principem pulvis pugnat? Sed quia supernorum spirituum conditor terrenum corpus assumpsit, recte jam superbientem angelum humilis pulvis vincit. Inhaerendo quippe verae fortitudini vires accipit, quas transfuga spiritus, cum semetipsum sequitur, amisit. Et dignum est ut vincatur a pulvere, qui fortem se credidit deserto creatore; ut superatus inveniat, quia defecit elatus. Valde autem anhelat saeviens, quod cum ipsum ima cruciant, homo ad summa conscendat; quod in illa celsitudine subvecta caro permanet, a qua tantus ipse spiritus sine fine projectus jacet. Sed loca mentium mutavit ordo meritorum. Sic sic superbia meruit dejici, sic humilitas exaltari, quatenus et coelestis spiritus erigendo se tartarum toleret, et terra humilis sine termino super coelos regnet.

LIBER TRIGESIMUS TERTIUS.

Expositionem versus decimi quinti et reliquorum capitis XL, nec non duodecim priorum cap. XLI exhibet, ubi variae daemonis artes deteguntur, doceturque praedestinatio gratuita, et cum libero arbitrio conciliatur. 1075 [Vet. et Rec. I.] 1. Superbi diabolo familiarius serviunt. Antiquo hosti, qui sub Behemoth nomine dominica voce describitur, superbi quique tanto familiarius serviunt, quanto hujus vitae successibus apud semetipsos altius intumescunt. His namque cum gloria augetur elatio, cum elatione vero additur cura, huc illucque animus tenditur, quia et desideria cum rebus crescunt. Cumque cogitationes innumeras quasi agri fenum proferunt, eisdem cogitationibus velut desiderato pabulo Behemoth istius famem pascunt. Unde nunc recte dicitur:

CAPUT PRIMUM.

VERS. 15. Huic montes herbas ferunt 2. Quid mons, quidve montes in sacra Scriptura significent. In Scriptura sacra cum numero singulari mons ponitur, aliquando incarnatus Dominus, aliquando sancta Ecclesia, aliquando testamentum Dei, aliquando apostata angelus, aliquando quilibet haereticus designatur. Cum vero montes plurali numero nominantur, aliquando celsitudo apostolorum atque prophetarum, aliquando vero saecularium potestatum tumor exprimitur. Mons namque Dominum designat, sicut scriptum est: Et erit in novissimis diebus praeparatus mons domus Domini in vertice montium (Isai. II, 2). Mons quippe est in vertice montium incarnatus Dominus, transcendens celsitudinem prophetarum. Rursum per montem sancta designatur Ecclesia, sicut scriptum est: Qui confidunt in Domino, sicut mons Sion (Psal. CXXIV, 1). Sion namque speculatio dicitur, per quam scilicet speculationem contemplans Deum Ecclesia figuratur. Rursum per montem testamentum Dei exprimitur, sicut Habacuc ait: Deus a

Libano veniet, et sanctus de monte umbroso et condenso (Habac. III, 3). Qui enim venturum se per testamenti sui paginas spopondit, quasi inde venit, unde velut sub promissione se tenuit. Quod videlicet testamentum bene mons umbrosus et condensus dicitur, quia spissis allegoriarum obscuritatibus opacatur. Rursum per montem angelus apostata designatur, sicut sub Babylonis regis specie de antiquo hoste praedicatoribus dicitur: Super montem caliginosum levate signum (Isai. XIII, 2). Praedicatores quippe sancti super caliginosum montem signum elevant, quando contra Satanae superbiam, qui saepe sub nebula simulationis absconditur, virtutem crucis exaltant. Rursum per montem haereticus quilibet exprimitur, sicut ex voce Ecclesiae Psalmista ait: In Domino confido, quomodo dicitis animae meae, Transmigra in montem sicut passer (Psal. X, 1)? Cum enim fideli animae unitate relicta, in tumenti doctrina confidere haeretici praedicatoris dicitur, deserto Domino quasi in montem transmigrare suadetur. Rursum per montes apostolorum atque prophetarum celsitudo designatur, sicut scriptum est: Justitia tua sicut montes Dei (Psal. XXXV, 7). Et voce Pauli dicitur: Ut nos efficeremur justitia Dei in ipso (II Cor. V, 21). Vel sicut iterum vore sperantis Ecclesiae Psalmista ait: Levavi 1076 oculos meos in montes, unde veniet auxilium mihi (Psal. CXX, 1). Rursum per montes saecularium potestatum tumor exprimitur, de quibus Psalmista ait: Montes sicut cera fluxerunt a facie Domini (Psal. XCVI, 5), quia multi qui prius alta rigiditate tumuerant. Deo in carne apparente, magno sunt per poenitentiam timore liquefacti. Vel sicut idem Propheta iterum dicit: Ascendunt montes, et descendunt campi (Psal. CIII, 8). Plerique enim persecutores Domini superbi contra eum veniunt, sed ab eo humiles revertuntur. Qui montes ascendunt per tumorem potentiae, sed campi descendunt, plani videlicet facti per cognitionem culpae. [Vet. II.] 3. Elati male operando daemones alunt. Sed quia nonnulli in elationis suae altitudine remanent, et ad divina obsequia flecti humiliter dedignantur, eo quod juxta desiderium antiqui hostis prava cogitare ac perpetrare non desinunt, recte hoc loco de Behemoth dicitur: Huic montes ferunt herbas. Elati namque saeculi huic Behemoth herbas ferunt, quia ex eo illum reficiunt, quod nequiter operantur, Huic Behemoth herbas ferunt, quia suas illi offerunt fluxas et lubricas voluptates. Erunt enim, ait Apostolus, homines seipsos amantes (II Tim. III, 2). Quorum descriptionem complexus est, dicens: Voluptatum amatores magis quam Dei (Ibid., 4). Quae est ergo herba montium, nisi voluptas fluxa, quae ex corde gignitur superborum? Qui nisi Deum superbiendo contemnerent, nequaquam tot lubrica lasciviendo perpetrarent. Quibus nimirum herbis iste Behemoth pascitur, quia in eis poenam aeternae mortis esuriens, eorum perditis moribus satiatur. Superbi enim hujus saeculi, etsi quando supernae dispensationis ordine praepediti, ab expletione pravorum operum cessant, prava tamen in cogitatione multiplicant, modo ut se potentiores caeteris, rebus et honoribus ostendant, modo ut eamdem suam potentiam in studio alienae laesionis exerceant, modo ut, lubricis motibus ducti, per levia se facta voluptatesque dissolvant. Qui dum rebus divinitus acceptis nequaquam recta, sed prava semper agere cogitant, quid aliud faciunt, nisi suis contra Deum donis pugnant? Quia igitur Behemoth iste in superborum mentibus sua semper desideria recognoscit, quasi herbas in montibus invenit, quibus refectum suae malitiae ventrem tendit. Bene autem subditur:

CAPUT II [Rec. II].

IBID. Omnes bestiae agri ludent ibi. 4. Ludus daemonum est humanas mentes de vitio in vitium rotare. Quid per bestias nisi immundi spiritus, quid per agrum nisi praesens saeculum designatur? Unde de ipso malignorum spirituum principe contra Ephraim dicitur: Bestia agri scindet eos (Osee XIII, 8). Vel sicut Isaias ait: Et mala bestia non ascendet per eam (Isai. XXXV, 9). Quia autem agri nomine mundus accipiatur, dominicus per Evangelium sermo testatur, qui ait: Ager autem est mundus (Matth. XIII, 38). Agri ergo bestiae in herbis montium ludunt, 1077 quia projecta de superioribus in hoc mundo daemonia pravis superborum operibus delectantur. Bestiae in herbis ludunt cum reprobi spiritus humana corda in illicitas cogitationes pertrahunt. An non immundis spiritibus ludere est mentes hominum ad imaginem Dei conditas, modo ficta promissione decipere, modo vacuis terroribus irridere, modo eis transitoria gaudia quasi mansura imprimere, modo mansuras poenas quasi transitorias levigare? Harum procul dubio bestiarum illusionem pertimuerat, qui dicebat: Deus meus, in te confido, non erubescam; neque irrideant me inimici mei (Psal. XXIV, 2). Quia igitur superborum cor ad omne vitium sternitur, ut cuilibet maligno spiritui irruenti prava cogitatione praeparetur, recte de herbis montium dicitur: Omnes bestiae agri ludent ibi. Pro eo enim quod superbi quique nullum malum cogitando praetereunt, nulla est agri bestia, quae non horum montium herbis satietur. Nam etsi quando carnis luxuriam fugiunt, interioris luxuriae vitium de ipsa castitate gloriando committunt. Si quando nil avare exterius rapiunt, nequaquam ab illecebra avaritiae mundi sunt, quia etsi res nullas ambiunt, favore tamen hominum laudem de continentia rapere conantur. Huic ergo Behemoth montes herbas ferunt, et omnes bestiae agri ludunt ibi, quia in superborum corde quilibet malignus spiritus tanto latius pascitur, quanto et omne vitium de superbia generatur. [Vet. III.] Sed quia audivimus quid iste Behemoth comedat, nunc audiamus necesse est ubi Interim per pravum suum desiderium requiescat. Sequitur:

CAPUT III [Rec. III].

VERS. 16. Sub umbra dormit in secreto calami, in locis humentibus. 5. Quid per umbram Scriptura intelligat. Obumbratio in sacro eloquio aliquando incarnatio Domini ponitur, vel mentis refrigerium a fervore carnalium cogitationum, unde appellatione umbrae ex superna protectione hoc ipsum refrigerium cordis insinuari solet. Aliquando vero umbra, recedente charitate, torpor frigidae mentis accipitur. Nam quod dominica incarnatio servata veritate historiae, obumbrationis appellatione signetur, angelicus sermo testatur, qui ad Mariam ait: Virtus Altissimi obumbrabit tibi (Luc. I, 35). Quia enim umbra non aliter exprimitur, nisi per lumen et corpus, virtus ei Altissimi obumbravit, quia in ejus utero lux incorporea corpus sumpsit. Ex qua videlicet obumbratione omne in se refrigerium mentis accepit. Rursum per umbram ex superna protectione refrigerium cordis exprimitur, sicut Psalmista ait: Sub umbra alarum tuarum protege me (Psal. XVI, 9). Vel sicut sponsa in Canticis canticorum adventum sponsi praestolata praenuntiat, dicens: Sub umbra illius quem desideraveram sedi (Cant. II, 3). Ac si dicat: Ab aestu desideriorum carnalium sub adventus illius protectione requievi. Rursum per umbram recedente charitate, torpor frigidae mentis exprimitur, sicut de peccante homine scriptum est, quia secutus est umbram (Genes. III). Calorem enim charitatis fugiens, veritatis solem homo deseruit, et sub umbra se interni frigoris abscondit. Unde et voce ejusdem Veritatis dicitur: Abundabit iniquitas, et refrigescet charitas multorum (Matth. XXIV, 12). Unde 1078 primus homo post culpam inter arbores paradisi ad auram post meridiem absconsus invenitur (Genes. III, 8). Quia enim meridianum charitatis calorem perdiderat, jam sub peccati umbra quasi sub frigore aurae torpebat. 6. Satanas in his quos frigidos facit, facile quasi sub umbra requiescit. In illis securus jacet. Iste igitur Behemoth quia in illis quasi quamdam requiem invenit, quos a veri solis ardore subtrahendo frigidos facit, sub umbra dormire perhibetur. Nonnunquam vero per umbram, si tamen cum adjectione mortis ponatur, vel mors carnis exprimitur, vel quilibet reprobi, qui antiqui hostis tenebras studio pravae operationis imitantur. Unde voce martyrum per Psalmistam dicitur: Humiliasti nos in loco afflictionis, et cooperuit nos umbra mortis (Psal. XLIII, 20). Umbra enim mortis electos Dei operit, cum mors carnis, quae imago mortis aeternae est, ab hac eos vita disjungit, quia sicut illa animam a Deo, ita haec ab anima separat corpus. Vel certe umbra eos mortis operit, quia de antiquo hoste scriptum est: Nomen illi mors (Apoc. VI, 8). Umbra ergo mortis sunt omnes reprobi, quia illius nequitiam elationis imitantur; ejusque imaginem quasi umbram exprimunt, dum ejus in se malitiae similitudinem trahunt. Qui electos Dei operiunt, dum contra illos in atrocitate persecutionis temporaliter convalescunt. Hoc autem loco umbra nequitiae torpor accipitur, in qua iste Behemoth dormit, quia contra corda charitate calentia sollicitus vigilat, in frigidis autem mentibus securus jacet. Dormire enim in sanctorum mentibus non potest, quia et si quando se in eis ad breve momentum collocat, ipse eum desideriorum coelestium aestus fatigat, et quasi toties ut recedat pungitur, quoties ab eis amore intimo ad aeterna suspiratur. Tantae eum voces excitant, quantae ex illorum mentibus sanctae cogitationes ad coelum clamant. Unde fit ut bonarum actionum armis territus, ac suspiriorum spiculis percussus fugiat, et ad corda reproborum frigida rediens, eam quam securus possideat malitiae umbram quaerat. Quae ubi ab illo inveniatur ostenditur, cum protinus subinfertur: In secreto calami. [Vet. IV.] 7. Calami et arundinis variae significationes in sacra Scriptura. In sacro eloquio calami vel arundinis appellatione aliquando verbum manens, aliquando doctorum peritia, aliquando mobilitas mentis, aliquando nitor gloriae temporalis accipitur. Per calamum quippe Verbi aeternitas designatur, cum voce Patris per Psalmistam dicitur: Lingua mea calamus scribae velociter scribentis (Psal. XLIV, 2). Quia enim quod loquimur transit, quod scribimus permanet, lingua Patris scribae calamus dicitur, quia ab eo est Verbum illi coaeternum, ac sine transitu generatum. Rursum per calamum scriptorum doctrina exprimitur, sicut de sancta Ecclesia propheta pollicetur, dicens: In cubilibus in quibus dracones prius habitabant, orietur viror calami et junci (Isai. XXXV, 7). Qua nimirum sententia, sicut in hoc opere longe superius diximus (Sup. lib. XXIX, n. 51), per calamum exprimitur doctrina scribentium, per juncum viriditas auditorum. Rursum per calamum, seu certe arundinem, mentis mobilitas designatur, sicut Judaeorum turbis in Joannis laude a Domino dicitur: Quid existis in desertum videre? arundinem vento agitatam (Matth. XI, 7)? ut videlicet 1079 subintelligatur non. Joannes quippe arundo vento agitata non erat, quia ejus mentem Spiritu sancto solidam per diversas partes nullus linguarum flatus inclinabat. Rursum per calamum vel arundinem nitor gloriae temporalis exprimitur, sicut de justis per Sapientiam dicitur: Fulgebunt justi, et tanquam scintillae in arundineto discurrent (Sap. III, 7). Arundinetum namque vitam saecularium appellat, qui more arundinum per temporalem gloriam foris quasi ad alta proficiunt, sed intus a soliditate veritatis inanescunt. Unde et Judaeorum regnum calamo comparatur, cum per prophetam apparente in veritate carnis Domino dicitur: Calamum quassatum non confringet, et linum fumigans non exstinguet (Isai. XLII, 3). Quid enim calami nomine, nisi Judaici populi temporale regnum denuntiat, nitens quidem exterius, sed interius vacuum? Et quia in eodem populo genus jam regale defecerat, et regnum ejus alienigena possidebat, apte hoc idem regnum calamum quassatum vocat. Quid vero per linum, nisi ejus sacerdotium exprimitur, quod lineis nimirum vestibus utebatur? Quod quia in adventu Domini charitatis ardorem perdidit, quasi amisso jam igne fidei, non ardens, sed fumigans fuit. Incarnatus autem Dominus calamum quassatum non confregit, et linum fumigans non exstinxit, quia Judaeae regnum, quod pene destructum jam fuerat, ejusque sacerdotium quod ignem fidei non tenebat, non potestate judicii perculit, sed cum patientiae longanimitate toleravit. 8. Mentes saecularium gloriae temporali deditae, arundini similes. Hoc ergo loco quid aliud appellatione calami, nisi mentes saecularium temporali gloriae deditae designantur? Qui tanto apud semetipsos intus inanescunt, quanto alti et nitidi exterius ostenduntur, quia dum ad exteriorem gloriam per superficiem defluunt, nulla intus firmitate solidantur. More quippe calami intus sunt quidem per fatuitatem vacui, sed foris per speciem et ostentationem pulchri; sed quanto ab eis exterior gloria studiosius quaeritur, tanto eorum corda gravioribus cogitationum stimulis agitantur. Unde recte nunc Behemoth iste in secreto calami dormire perhibetur, quia quorum studia ad appetitum temporalis nitoris atque altitudinis commovet, eorum corda tacitus tenet; et quasi ipse ibi quietus dormit, ubi eos quos possidet quiescere non permittit. Dum enim excedere caeteros bonorum altitudine ambiunt, dum more calami per nitorem exterioris munditiae justorum speciem, quasi solidarum arborum corticem, vincunt, in hoc quod ipsi interius vacui remanent, locum Behemoth isti, ubi apud se requiescere debeat, praebent. [Vet. V.] Unde et in Evangelio Dominus dicit quod spiritus exiens qui in locis aridis et inaquosis requiem non invenit, quia domum quam reliquerat vacuam scopisque mundatam reperit, hanc multiplicior intravit (Matth. XII, 43, seq.). Quia enim fluxa fit terra quae infunditur, loca arentia atque inaquosa sunt corda justorum, quae per disciplinae fortitudinem ab omni carnalis concupiscentiae humore siccantur. Unde hic quoque adhuc ubi Behemoth iste dormiat, demonstratur, cum protinus subditur: In locis humentibus. 1080 9. Carnales homines locis humidis similes. Diabolus hominibus per elationem vel per luxuriam dominatur. Loca enim humentia sunt terrenorum hominum mentes, quas humor carnalis concupiscentiae, quia replet, fluidas facit. In quibus Behemoth iste iniquitatis suae vestigia tanto altius imprimit, quanto in eisdem mentibus pertransitus illius quasi in fluxa terra descendit. Loca quippe humentia sunt opera voluptuosa. Pes quippe in arida terra non labitur, fixus vero in lubrica vix tenetur. In locis ergo humentibus iter vitae praesentis faciunt, qui in hac ad justitiam recti stare non possunt. In his itaque locis humentibus Behemoth dormit, quia in reproborum hominum lubrica operatione requiescit. Nonnulli vero loca humentia, membra genitalia suspicantur. Quod si ita est, quid aperte aliud locis humentibus nisi luxuria designatur, ut et per calamum gloria superbiae, et per loca humentia luxuria corporis exprimatur? Duo quippe haec sunt vitia, quae humano generi immaniter dominantur, unum videlicet spiritus, atque aliud carnis. Elatio namque spiritum erigit, luxuria carnem corrumpit. Antiquus itaque hostis humanum genus vel per elationem praecipue, vel per luxuriam premens, in secreto calami atque in locis humentibus dormit, quia hominem damnatum sub ditione suae dominationis aut per elationem spiritus, aut per carnis corruptionem tenet. Quosdam vero in utroque possidet, quia cum eos superbiae spiritus elevat, a tumore suae altitudinis nec verecundia corruptionis inclinat. Sed nunquid contra hos intra sanctam Ecclesiam incessanter quotidie virtutum magistri non vigilant? Nunquid redarguere voluptates infimas, et suadere gaudia patriae coelestis cessant? Sed pravorum mentes tanto obstinatius summa non audiunt, quanto arctius infimis inhaeserunt. Quibus neque hoc sufficit, ut ipsi pereant, sed adhuc, quod est deterius, cum quoslibet argui emendarique conspiciunt, justorum increpationibus obviant, ne saltem alii corrigantur. Unde et bene subditur:

CAPUT IV [Rec. IV].

VERS. 17. Protegunt umbrae umbram ejus. 10. Umbrae sunt diaboli peccatores qui se invicem protegunt. Crimen dum defenditur, augetur. Umbrae quippe sunt diaboli, omnes iniqui: qui dum imitationi iniquitatis ejus inserviunt, quasi ab ejus corpore imaginis speciem trahunt. Sicut autem umbrae ejus sunt pluraliter reprobi, ita singulariter umbra ejus est unusquisque peccator. Sed dum doctrinae justorum mali contradicunt, dum ab eis iniquum quemlibet corrigi non permittunt, umbrae Behemoth istius umbram ejus protegunt, quia peccatores quique in quo sibi male sunt conscii, in eo et alium peccantem defendunt. Umbrae umbram ejus protegunt, dum nequissimorum facta nequlores perversis patrociniis tuentur. Quod hoc nimirum studio faciunt, ne dum culpa in qua et ipsi obligati sunt, in aliis corrigitur, ad ipsos quandoque veniatur. Se igitur tegunt dum alios protegunt, quia suam vitam inde praevident impeti, unde alios considerant libera correptione confundi. Sicque fit ut summa criminum dum defenditur augeatur, et uniuscujusque nequitia eo sit ad perpetrandum facilis, quo difficilis ad puniendum. Scelera quippe peccantium tanto majora incrementa percipiunt, quanto per defensionem potentium diu inulla tolerantur. Sed 1031 tales quique seu extra, seu intra sanctam Ecclesiam esse videantur, tanto se apertiores Dei hostes exhibent, quanto majores sunt patroni vitiorum. Contra illum quippe suis defensio nibus pugnant, cui ea displicent, quae defendendo multiplicant. Quod factum bene per prophetam Dominus sub Babylonis specie redarguit, dicens: Oriuntur in domibus ejus spinae et urticae, et paliurus in munitionibus ejus (Isai. XXXIV, 13). Quid namque per urticas nisi cogitationum prurigines, quid vero per spinas nisi vitiorum punctiones accipimus? In domibus igitur Babylonis urticae et spinae pullulant, quia in confusione mentis reprobae et desideria cogitationum surgunt quae exasperant, et operum peccata quae pungunt. Sed haec agentes habent etiam nequiores alios defensores suos. Unde illic apte protinus subdidit: Et paliurus in munitionibus ejus. Paliurus quippe tanta spinarum circumdatione densescit, ut prae asperitate tangi vix possit. Intus igitur urtica et spina nascitur, sed utrumque hoc exterius per paliurum munitur, quia videlicet minores iniqui mala quaelibet faciunt, sed ea nequissimi majores tuentur. Unde bene et hic dicitur: Protegunt umbrae umbram ejus. Dum enim malum pejor vindicat, quasi umbra umbram, ne a veritatis lumine irradietur, obscurat. Sequitur:

CAPUT V [Vet.

VI, Rec. V]. IBID. Circumdabunt eum salices torrentis. 11. Mali salicibus similes: virent quidem, sed fructum non ferunt. Infructuosae quidem arbores sunt salices; sed tamen tantae viriditatis sunt, ut arescere vel abscissae radicitus et projectae vix possint. Unde in sacro eloquio salicum nomine aliquando pro viriditate boni, aliquando pro sterilitate, reprobi designantur. Nisi enim electorum vitam per constantiam suae viriditatis exprimerent, nequaquam de sanctae Ecclesiae filiis propheta dixisset: Germinabunt inter herbas, sicut salices juxta praeterfluentes aquas (Isai. XLIV, 4). Sanctae enim Ecclesiae filii inter herbas sicut salices germinant, dum inter arescentem vitam carnalium hominum, et multiplici numerositate, et perpetua mentis viriditate perdurant. Qui bene juxta praeterfluentes aquas germinare perhibentur, quia unusquisque eorum ubertatem ad fructum percipit ex doctrina sacri eloquii, quae temporaliter percurrit. Et rursum nisi per sterilitatem salicum vita peccantium signaretur, nequaquam ex voce praedicantium contra Babyloniam Psalmista dixisset: In salicibus in medio ejus suspendimus organa nostra (Psal. CXXXVI, 2). Babylonis quippe medio inesse salices describuntur, quia nimirum infructuosi quique, atque ab amore patriae coelestis alieni, totis visceribus cordis in hac saeculi confusione radicantur. Unde et praedicatores sancti in istis salicibus non exercent organa, sed suspendunt, quia cum infructuosas ac reprobas mentes aspiciunt, vim suae praedicationis non exhibent, sed potius lugentes silent. Quid etiam per torrentem, nisi hujus mortalis vitae cursus exprimitur? De quo rursum per Prophetam dicitur: De torrente in via bibet, propterea exaltabit caput (Psal. CIX, 7), quia videlicet Redemptor noster mortalis vitae poenam in quodam transitu attigit, et idcirco diu eidem morti cui sponte succubuit non inhaesit. Unde die tertia hoc quod moriendo posuerat resurgendo caput elevavit. 1082 Quid est ergo quod de Behemoth isto dicitur: Circumdabunt eum salices torrentis, nisi quod amatores vitae mortalis a bonis actibus quasi a fructibus alieni, tanto illi arctius inhaerent, quanto eos largius delectatio transitoriae voluptatis infundit? Hos enim quasi in radicibus torrens rigat, dum in suis cogitationibus amor vitae carnalis inebriat. Qui scilicet more salicum fructus non ferunt, sed in foliis viridescunt, quia ea quae gravia ad dicendum non sunt, aliquando honestatis verba proferunt, sed nullum vitae pondus ex bonis operibus ostendunt. Bene igitur dicitur: Circumdabunt eum salices torrentis, quia infructuosi quique dum amori vitae temporalis inserviunt, antiquo hosti perversis moribus familiarius obsequuntur. [Vet. VII.] Sed quia quid ei a suis clientibus impendatur audivimus, nunc etiam quid in illis agat ipse audiamus. Sequitur:

CAPUT VI [Rec. VI].

VERS. 18. Absorbebit fluvium, et non mirabitur, et habet fiduciam quod influat Jordanis in os ejus. 12. Satanas homines pene omnes absorbuit ante Redemptorem; et post, non paucos deglutu. Quid enim hoc loco fluvii nomine nisi humani generis decursio designatur, quae velut a fontis sui origine nascendo surgit, sed quasi ad ima defluens moriendo pertransit? Qui autem signantur appellatione Jordanis, nisi qui jam imbuti sunt sacramento baptismatis? Quia enim Redemptor noster in hoc flumine baptizari dignatus est, ejus nomine debent omnes baptizati exprimi, in quo hoc ipsum contigit sacramentum baptismatis inchoari. Quia igitur Behemoth iste a mundi origine exortum, vix paucis electis evadentibus, humanum genus in ima defluens usque ad redemptionis tempora quasi quemdam in se fluvium traxit, bene nunc dicitur: Absorbebit fluvium, et non mirabitur. Quia vero et post Mediatoris adventum quosdam qui recte vivere negligunt etiam fideles rapit, recte subjungitur: Et habet fiduciam quod influat Jordanis in os ejus. Ac si aperte diceretur: Ante Redemptorem mundi mundum non miratus absorbuit, sed, quod est gravius, etiam post Redemptoris adventum quosdam qui baptismatis sacramento signati sunt deglutire se posse confidit. Alios namque sub Christianitatis nomine positos devorat, quia in ipso eos fidei errore supplantat. Alios a rectitudine fidei nequaquam deviat, sed ad usum pravae operationis inclinat. Alios quantum vult in operatione immunditiae inflectere non valet, sed apud semetipsos intus in studio intentionis intorquet, ut dum a charitate mentem dividunt, rectum non sit quidquid extrinsecus operentur. Et fidem tenent, sed vitam fidei non tenent, quia aut aperte illicita faciunt, aut ex perverso corde quae agunt prava sunt, etiam si sancta videantur. Quia enim nonnulli confitendo fideles sunt, non vivendo, hinc est quod voce Veritatis dicitur: Non omnis qui dicit mihi, Domine, Domine, intrabit in regnum coelorum (Matth. VII, 21). Hinc rursum ait: Quid autem vocatis me, Domine, Domine, et non facitis quae dico (Luc. VI, 46)? Hinc Paulus ait: Confitentur se nosse Deum, factis autem negant (Tit. I, 16). Hinc Joannes dicit: Qui dicit se Deum nosse, et mandata ejus non custodit, mendax est (I Joan. II, 4). Hinc est quod de ipsa sua prima plebe Dominus conqueritur, dicens: Populus hic labiis 1083 me honorat, cor autem eorum longe est a me (Marc. VII, 6, ex Isai. XXIX, 13). Hinc etiam Psalmista ait: Dilexerunt eum in ore suo, et lingua sua mentiti sunt ei (Psal. LXXVII, 36). Sed minime mirum fuit quod Behemoth iste ante lavacri undam, ante sacramenta coelestia, ante corpoream praesentiam Redemptoris, humani generis fluvium hiatu profundae persuasionis absorbuit; sed hoc valde mirum, hoc valde terribile est, quia multos aperto ore etiam post cognitionem Redemptoris suscipit, post lavacri undam polluit, post sacramenta coelestia ad inferni profundum rapit. Dicatur ergo, dicatur terribiliter voce Veritatis: Absorbebit fluvium, et non mirabitur, et habet fiduciam quod influat Jordanis in os ejus. Neque enim pro magno diabolus habuit, quod infideles tulit; sed toto nunc annisu in illorum mortem se erigit, quos contra se regeneratos tabescit. Nemo igitur sibi fidem sine operibus sufficere posse confidat, cum scimus quod scriptum sit: Fides sine operibus mortua est (Jac. II, 20). Nullus Behemoth morsum ex sola confessione fidei plene evasisse se existimet, quia jam quidem fluvium absorbuit, sed adhuc Jordanem sitit; et toties in os illius Jordanis fluit, quoties Christianus quisque ad iniquitatem defluit. Os quidem ejus jam fide nos sublevante fugimus, sed magno studio curandum est, ne in hoc lubrica operatione dilabamur. Si ambulandi cautela negligitur, incassum credendo rectum iter tenetur, quia via quidem fidei ad coelestem patriam proficit, sed offendentes minime perducit. [Vet. VIII.] 13. Iis praesertim qui sanitate praestant, insidiatur. Qui nisi summam vigilantiam adhibeant, pejus de alto ruunt. Habemus adhuc quod hac in re subtilius perpendamus. Hi enim quos per Jordanem diximus exprimi, possunt per fluvium designari. Qui enim fidem jam veritatis agnoverunt, sed vivere fideliter negligunt, recte fluvius dici possunt, quia videlicet deorsum fluunt. Jordanis vero Hebraeo vocabulo descensio eorum dicitur. Et sunt nonnulli qui viam veritatis appetentes semetipsos abjiciunt, atque a vitae veteris elatione descendunt; cumque aeterna cupiunt, valde se ab hoc mundo alienos reddunt, dum non solum aliena non appetunt, sed etiam sua derelinquunt, et non solum in eo gloriam non quaerunt, sed hanc cum se obtulerit, etiam contemnunt. Hinc est enim quod voce Veritatis dicitur: Si quis vult venire post me, abneget semetipsum (Luc. IX, 23). Semetipsum enim abnegat, qui, calcato typho superbiae, ante Dei oculos esse se a se alienum demonstrat. Hinc Psalmista ait: Memor ero tui de terra Jordanis et Hermoniim (Psal. XLI, 7), Jordanis quippe, ut dixi, descensio, Hermoniim autem anathema, id est alienatio, interpretatur. De terra igitur Jordanis et Hermoniim Dei reminiscitur, qui in eo quod semetipsum dejicit, atque a se alienus existit, ad conditoris sui memoriam revocatur. Sed antiquus hostis hoc pro magno non habet, quod sub jure suae tyrannidis terrena quaerentes tenet. Propheta quippe attestante cognovimus quia esca ejus electa (Habac. I, 16). Neque enim 1084 mirum deputat, si eos absorbeat, quos superbia erigit, avaritia tabefacit, voluptas dilatat, malitia angustat, ira inflammat, discordia separat, invidia exulcerat, luxuria inquinans necat. Absorbebit ergo fluvium, et non mirabitur, quia pro magno non aestimat cum eos devorat, qui per ipsa suae vitae studia deorsum currunt; sed illos magnopere rapere nititur, quos, despectis terrenis studiis, jungi jam coelestibus contemplatur. [Vet. IX.] Unde absorpto fluvio recte subjungitur: Et habet fiduciam quod influat Jordanis in os ejus, quia illos insidiando rapere appetit, quos pro amore supernae patriae a praesentis vitae gloria semetipsos dejicere agnoscit. Nonnulli quippe mundum deserunt, honorum transeuntium vana derelinquunt, et, ima humilitatis appetentes, humanae conversationis morem bene vivendo transcendunt; atque in tanta studiorum arce proficiunt, ut signorum jam virtutes operentur; sed quia semetipsos circumspiciendo tegere negligunt, inanis gloriae telo percussi, pejus de alto ruunt. Hinc est enim quod aeternus judex, qui occulta cordis examinat, ejusdem ruinae casum praenuntians intentat, cum dicit: Multi dicent mihi in illa die: Domine, Domine, nonne in nomine tuo prophetavimus, et in nomine tuo daemonia ejecimus, et in tuo nomine virtutes multas fecimus? Et tunc confitebor illis quia nunquam novi vos, discedite a me qui operamini iniquitatem, nescio qui estis (Matth. VII, 22, 23). Hinc etiam per prophetam dicitur: Vocavit Dominus judicium ad ignem et devoravit abyssum multam, et comedet partem domus Domini (Amos. VII, 4). Judicium quippe ad ignem vocatur, cum justitiae sententia ad poenam jam aeternae concremationis ostenditur. Et multam abyssum devorat, quia iniquas atque incomprehensibiles hominum mentes concremat, quae nunc se hominibus etiam sub signorum miraculis occultant. Pars autem domus Domini comeditur, quia illos quoque gehenna devorat, qui nunc quasi in sanctis actibus de electorum numero se esse gloriantur. Qui ergo hic Jordanis, ipsi illic pars domus Domini vocantur. Antiquus ergo hostis habet fiduciam quod in os ejus et Jordanis influat, quia nonnunquam calliditatis suae insidiis eos etiam qui jam electi putantur necat. [Vet. X.] Sed cujus cordis duritiam non ista Domini verba perturbent? cujus mentis constantia non ab intimis cogitationum radicibus quatiatur, cum hostis noster tantae esse contra nos fortitudinis demonstratur? Nullumne erit consolationis adjutorium? Erit certe, nam subditur:

CAPUT VII [Rec. VII].

VERS. 19. In oculis ejus quasi hamo capiet eum. 14. Diabolus Christum deglutire cupiens, quasi hamo captus est. Notandum valde est quod Scripturae suae verba misericorditer temperans Deus, modo nos asperis incitationibus terret, modo blandis consolationibus refovet, et terrorem fomentis miscet, et fomenta terrori, ut dum circa nos utrumque mira magisterii arte temperatur, nec desperate inveniamur territi, nec incaute securi. Nam cum Behemoth astutas insidias, 1085 atque effrenatas vires multiplicibus sententiis indicasset, protinus unigeniti Filii sui Redemptoris nostri commendat adventum, et quo ab illo ordine Behemoth iste sit perimendus insinuat, ut quia cor nostrum narrata illius virtute perculerat, moerorem nostrum citius indicata ejus perditione relevaret. Igitur postquam dixit: Absorbebit fluvium, et non mirabitur, et habet fiduciam quod influat Jordanis in os ejus, ipsum illico dominicae incarnationis adventum annuntiat, dicens: In oculis ejus quasi hamo capiet eum. Quis nesciat quod in hamo esca ostenditur, aculeus occultatur? Esca enim provocat, ut aculeus pungat. Dominus itaque noster ad humani generis redemptionem veniens, velut quemdam de se in necem diaboli hamum fecit. Assumpsit enim corpus, ut in eo Behemoth iste quasi escam suam mortem carnis appeteret. Quam mortem dum in illo injuste appetit, nos quos quasi juste tenebat amisit. In hamo ergo ejus incarnationis captus est, quia dum in illo appetit escam corporis, transfixus est aculeo divinitatis. Ibi quippe inerat humanitas quae ad se devoratorem duceret, ibi divinitas quae perforaret, ibi aperta infirmitas quae provocaret, ibi occulta virtus quae raptoris faucem transfigeret. In hamo igitur captus est, quia inde interiit unde devoravit. Et quidem Behemoth iste Filium Dei incarnatum noverat, sed redemptionis nostrae ordinem nesciebat. Sciebat enim quod pro redemptione nostra incarnatus Dei Filius fuerat, sed omnino quod idem Redemptor noster illum moriendo transfigeret nesciebat. Unde et bene dicitur: In oculis ejus quasi hamo capiet eum. In oculis quippe habere dicimus quod coram nobis positum videmus. Antiquus vero hostis humani generis Redemptorem ante se positum vidit, quem, cognoscendo confessus, confitendo pertimuit, dicens: Quid nobis et tibi, Flii Dei? venisti ante tempus torquere nos (Matth. VIII, 29). In oculis itaque suis hamo captus est, quia et novit, et momordit; et cognovit prius quem pertimesceret, et tamen post non timuit, cum in illo quasi escam propriam, mortem carnis esuriret. [Vet. XI.] Igitur quia caput nostrum per se quid fecit audivimus, nunc per membra sua quid faciat audiamus. Sequitur:

CAPUT VIII [Rec. VIII].

IBID. Et in sudibus perforabit nares ejus. 15. Sagacissimas ejus insidias detegendo, sancti veluti sude nares ipsius perforant. Quid aliud sudes, id est palos accipimus, qui videlicet exacuuntur ut figantur, nisi acuta sanctorum consilia? Quae hujus Behemoth nares perforant, dum sagacissimas ejus insidias et vigilando circumspiciunt, et superando transfigunt. Per nares vero odor trahitur, et deducto flatu hoc agitur, ut res etiam quae longe est posita cognoscatur. Naribus ergo Behemoth callidae ejus insidiae designantur, per quas sagacissime nititur et occulta cordis nostri bona cognoscere et haec pessima persuasione dissipare. In sudibus itaque Dominus nares ejus perforat, quia callidas ejus insidias acutis sanctorum sensibus penetrans enervat. Saepe autem bonorum vias tanta insidians arte circumvolat, ut per ea quae ab eis bene gesta cognoverit, ad malitiam aditum quaerat. Nam unde alium largiri quid conspicit, inde alium in discordiae flamma succendit; et cum hunc respicit misereri, illi persuadet irasci, ut dum bonum quasi non communiter 1086 factum insinuat, concordes animos a bono gratiae communis abscindat. Quia enim justorum mentes ad mala suadendo non valet frangere, bonis satagit actibus inter eas mala seminare. Sed sancti viri has ejus insidias tanto celerius vincunt, quanto et subtilius deprehendunt. Quod melius ostendimus, si unum e multis assertoribus veritatis in testimonium Paulum vocemus, sub quo quidam Corinthius dum incesti facinus perpetrasset, cum doctor egregius in carnis interitum ad satisfactionem poenitentiae Satanae tradidit, et in diem Domini salvum ejus spiritum reservavit (I Cor. V, 5). Magna quippe arte magisterii ipsi est traditus coactus in poenam cui sponte est substratus in culpa, ut qui auctor fuerat ad vitium nequitiae, ipse flagellum fieret disciplinae. Qua tamen bene gesta poenitentia, dum cognovisset Corinthios super eum jam misericorditer motos, ait: Cui aliquid donastis, et ego; nam et ego quod donavi, si quid donavi, propter vos in persona Christi (II Cor. II, 10). Communionis vero gratiam cogitans ait: Cui aliquid donastis, et ego. Ac si diceret: A bono vestro non dissentio, meum sit quidquid ipsi fecistis. Atque mox subdidit: Et ego si quid donavi, propter vos. Ac si diceret: Vestris actibus bonum addidi, quidquid propter vos misericorditer feci. Vestra ergo est utilitas bonitas mea, mea est utilitas bonitas vestra. Qui ipsam mox compagem cordium, in qua sic tenetur, adjungens subdidit: In persona Christi. Cui velut si dicere praesumamus: Quare te ita caute discipulis copulas? quare vel te illorum, vel illos tuis actionibus tam sollicita mente conformas? illico subjunxit: Ut non circumveniamur a satana (Ibid., 11). Cujus sagaces insidias quam acuto sensu transfigat insinuat subdens: Non enim ignoramus cogitationes ejus. Ac si verbis aliis dicat: Acutae auctore Domino sudes sumus, et nares Behemoth istius subtiliter circumspiciendo penetramus, ne hoc quod bene mens inchoat, ipse in malitiae finem vertat. [Vet. XII.] 16. Christi divinitatem explorans, ejus verbis in naso confixus est et captus. Possunt per sudes acuta ipsius per carnem manifestatae sapientiae verba signari, ut quia naribus odor trahitur, per Behemoth nares illa antiqui hostis exploratio figuretur. Qui cum Deum incarnatum esse dubitaret, hoc expetitis miraculis voluit tentando cognoscere, dicens: Si Filius Dei es, dic ut lapides isti panes fiant (Matth.

IV, 3). Quia ergo signorum indiciis odorem divinitatis ejus cognoscere concupivit, quasi flatum naribus traxit. Sed dum ei protinus respondetur: Non in pane solo vivit homo. Et: Non tentabis Dominum Deum tuum (Ibid., 4, 7), quia sententiarum suarum acuminibus indagationem antiqui hostis veritas perculit, quasi nares ejus sudibus perforavit. Sed quia Behemoth iste per varia fraudum argumenta distenditur, adhuc adjuncto et alio nomine notatur: nam subditur:

CAPUT IX [Rec. IX].

VERS. 20. An extrahere poteris Leviathan hamo? 17. Divinitas in carne velut hamus in esca satanam transfixit. Leviathan quippe additamentum eorum dicitur. Quorum videlicet, nisi hominum? quibus semel culpam praevaricationis intulit, et hanc usque ad aeternam mortem quotidie pessimis suggestionibus extendit. Quibus dum reatum fenore peccati multiplicat, poenas procul dubio sine cessatione coacervat. Potest quoque Leviathan etiam per irrisionem vocari. Primo quippe homini persuasione callida 1087 divinitatem additurum se perhibuit, sed immortalitatem tulit (Genes. III, 5). Additamentum ergo hominum per irrisionem dici potest, quibus dum hoc quod non erant se addere spopondit, etiam hoc quod erant fallendo subtraxit. Sed Leviathan iste hamo captus est, quia in Redemptore nostro dum per satellites suos escam corporis momordit, divinitatis illum aculeus perforavit. Quasi hamus quippe fauces glutientis tenuit, dum in illo et esca carnis patuit, quam devorator appeteret, et divinitas passionis tempore latuit, quae necaret. In hac quippe aquarum abysso, id est in hac immensitate generis humani, ad omnium mortem inhians, vitam pene omnium vorans, huc illucque aperto ore cetus iste ferebatur, sed ad mortem ceti istius hamus in hac aquarum profunditate caliginosa mira est dispositione suspensus. Hujus hami linea illa est per Evangelium antiquorum patrum propago memorata. Nam cum dicitur: Abraham genuit

Isaac, Isaac genuit Jacob (Matth. I, 2); cumque caeteri successores interposito Joseph nomine usque ad Mariam virginem desponsatam describuntur, quasi quaedam linea torquetur, in cujus extremo incarnatus Dominus, id est hamus iste ligaretur, quem in his aquis humani generis dependentem aperto ore iste cetus appeteret, sed eo per satellitum suorum saevitiam morso, mordendi vires ulterius non haberet. Ne ergo iste humanis mortibus cetus insidians quos vellet ultra devoraret, hamus hic raptoris fauces tenuit, et sese mordentem momordit. Incarnationem igitur unigeniti Filii fideli famulo indicans Deus, ait: An extrahere poteris Leviathan hamo? Subaudis ut ego, qui ad raptoris mortem incarnatum unigenitum Filium mitto, in quo dum mortalis caro conspicitur, et immortalitatis potentia non videtur, quasi hamus quidam inde devorantem perimit unde acumen potentiae quo transfigat occultat. Sequitur:

CAPUT X.

IBID. Et fune ligabis linguam ejus. 18. Ejus linguam Dominus ligavit, dum silere coegit errores. Subaudis ut ego. Scriptura enim sacra fune aliquando dimensionum sortes, aliquando peccata, aliquando fidem designare consuevit. Nam propter haereditarias dimensionum sortes dicitur: Funes ceciderunt mihi in praeclaris; etenim haereditas mea praeclara est mihi (Psal. XV, 6). Funes quippe in praeclaris cadunt, dum per humilitatem vitae sortes nos patriae melioris excipiunt. Rursum quia fune peccata signantur, per prophetam dicitur: Vae qui trahitis iniquitatem in funiculis vanitatis (Isai. V, 18). Iniquitas namque in funiculis vanitatis trahitur, dum per augmentum culpa protelatur. Unde et per Psalmistam dicitur: Funes peccatorum circumplexi sunt me (Psal. CXVIII, 61). Quia enim funis addendo torquetur ut crescat, non immerito peccatum in fune figuratur, quod perverso corde saepe, dum defenditur, multiplicatur. Rursum fune fides exprimitur, Salomone attestante, qui ait: Funiculus triplex difficile rumpitur (Eccle. IV, 12), quia fides videlicet, quae de cognitione Trinitatis ab ore praedicantium texitur, fortis in electis permanens, in solo reproborum corde dissipatur. Hoc itaque loco funis nomine sive peccatum, sive fidem nil obstat intelligi. [Vet. XIII.] Incarnatus etenim Dominus noster fune Leviathan linguam ligavit, 1088 quia in similitudine carnis peccati apparuit, et omnia errorum ejus praedicamenta damnavit (Rom. VIII, 3). Unde Paulo attestante dicitur: Et de peccato damnavit peccatum (Ibid.). Fune linguam ligavit, quia per similitudinem carnis peccati ab electorum suorum cordibus cuncta ejus fallaciae argumenta destruxit. Ecce enim apparente in carne Domino, Leviathan lingua ligata est, quia ejus veritate cognita, illae falsitatis doctrinae tacuerunt. 19. Academici et Mathematici refelluntur. Ubi enim nunc est Academicorum error, qui certe conantur astruere certum nil esse, qui impudenti fronte assertionibus suis fidem ab auditoribus exigunt, cum vera esse nulla testantur? Ubi Mathematicorum superstitio qui, dum signorum cursus suspiciunt, vitas hominum in siderum momenta suspendunt? Quorum aperte doctrinam saepe geminorum nativitas dissipat, qui cum uno eodemque momento horae prodeant, non in una conversationis qualitate perdurant. Ubi tot praedicamenta falsitatis, quae enumerare fugimus, ne ab exponendi ordine longe recedamus? Sed cuncta jam erroris doctrina conticuit, quia Leviathan linguam Dominus incarnationis suae fune constrinxit. Unde bene etiam per prophetam dicitur: Et desolabit Dominus linguam maris Aegyptii (Isai. XI, 15). Lingua quippe maris est scientia doctrinae saecularis. Bene autem mare Aegyptium dicitur, quia peccati obscuritate fuscatur. Linguam ergo maris Aegyptii Dominus desolavit, quia hujus mundi falsam sapientiam per carnem se ostendendo destruxit. Fune ergo Leviathan lingua constringitur, quia per similitudinem carnis peccati ligata est praedicatio vetusti peccatoris. 20. Disseminata sanctissimae Trinitatis fide scientia saecularis tacuit. Si autem fides fune signatur, isdem nobis iterum intellectus innuitur, quia dum per praedicatores sanctos in mundo fides Trinitatis innotuit, contra electorum mentes erumpere mundi doctrina cessavit. Unde bene Domino per prophetam dicitur: Tu dirupisti fontes et torrentes, tu siccasti fluvios Ethan (Psal. LXXIII, 15). Ethan quippe interpretatur fortis. Et quis est hic fortis, nisi de quo per Evangelium Dominus dicit: Nemo potest vasa fortis ingressus domum diripere, nisi prius fortem alliget (Marc. III, 27)? Fontes itaque et torrentes Dominus dirupit, dum in apostolorum suorum cordibus fluenta veritatis aperuit. De quibus rursum per prophetam alium dicitur: Haurietis aquas in gaudio de fontibus Salvatoris (Isai. XII, 3). Ad eorum quippe doctrinam sitientes pergimus, ut veritatis plenas cordium nostrorum lagunculas reportemus. Sed emanantibus suis fontibus Ethan fluvios exsiccavit, dum doctrinam fortis et maligni spiritus ostenso radio suae veritatis arefecit. Leviathan ergo lingua fune stringitur, quia, extensa fide Trinitatis, errorum praedicamenta siluerunt. Sed quia jam se aperte extollere non valet, huc illucque circumiens per insidias mordet. [Vet. XIV.] Mira autem misericordia contra hunc pro nobis Dominus vigilat, atque eum et in hoc quod fraudibus molitur expugnat. Unde subditur:

CAPUT XI [Rec. X].

VERS. 21. Nunquid pones circulum in naribus ejus? 21. Circulus in naribus diaboli divinae virtutis omnipotentia. Sicut per nares insidiae, ita per circulum divinae virtutis omnipotentia designatur. Quae cum apprehendi nos tentationibus prohibet, miris ordinibus 1089 antiqui hostis insidias circumplectens tenet. Circulus ergo ei in naribus ponitur, dum circumducta protectionis supernae fortitudine, ejus sagacitas retinetur, ne contra infirmitatem hominum tantum praevaleat, quantum perditionis argumenta latenter explorat. Potest etiam circuli nomine occulti judicii adjutorium designari, quod in hujus Behemoth naribus ponitur, cum a callida sua crudelitate refrenatur. Unde bene per prophetam, cum ab Israelitarum laesione prohibetur, regi Babyloniae dicitur: Ponam circulum in naribus tuis (Isai. XXXVII, 29). Ac si aperte diceretur: Cogitando insidias suspiras; sed explere quod appetis non valendo omnipotentiae meae circulum in naribus portas, ut cum bonorum mortem ardentius anhelas, ab eorum vita vacuus redeas. Quod vero hoc loco circulum, hoc et Scriptura sacra per Joannem in Apocalypsi falcem vocat. Ait enim: Vidi, et ecce nubem candidam, et super nubem sedentem similem Filio hominis, habentem in capite suo coronam auream, et in manu sua falcem acutam (Apoc. XIV, 14). Potestas enim divini judicii, quia undique stringit, circulus dicitur; et quia intra se omnia incidendo amplectitur, falcis appellatione signatur. In falce enim quidquid inciditur, quaquaversum flectitur, intus cedit. Et quia potestas superni judicii nullatenus evitatur, intra ipsam quippe sumus, quo libet fugere conemur, recte cum venturus judex ostenditur, falcem tenere perhibetur, quia cum potenter ad omnia obviat, incidendo circumdat. Esse se intra judicii falcem Propheta vidit, cum diceret: Si ascendero in coelum, tu illic es; si descendero ad infernum ades. Si sumpsero pennas meas ante lucem, et habitavero in extremis maris, etenim illuc manus tua deducet me, et tenebit me dextera tua (Psal. CXXXVIII, 8, 9, 10). Intra quamdam falcem se vidit, cum ex nullo sibi loco patere fugae aditum posse cognovit, dicens: Quia neque ab oriente, neque ab occidente, neque a desertis montibus (Psal. LXXIV, 7); subaudis patet via fugiendi, atque mox ipsam supernae potentiae omnimodam comprehensionem subdens, ait: Quoniam Deus judex est. Ac si diceret: Fugiendi via undique deest, quia ille judicat qui ubique est. Divina itaque judicia sicut signantur falce, quia circumvallantia incidunt, ita exprimuntur circulo, quia undique stringunt. In Leviathan itaque naribus a Domino circulus ponitur, quia judicii ejus potentia in insidiis suis ne quantum vult praevaleat coarctatur. Dicatur ergo: Nunquid pones circulum in naribus ejus? Subaudis ut ego, qui astutas ejus insidias

CAPUT XII.

IBID. Aut armilla perforabis maxillam ejus? 22. Haec plurimos quos devoravit, ab ejus faucibus extrahit. Ab intellectu circuli armilla non discrepat, quia ipsa hoc quoque ubi ponitur ambiendo constringit. Sed quia armilla latius tenditur, per armillam occulti ejus judicii erga nos protectio impensior designatur. Armilla ergo Dominus maxillam Leviathan istius perforat, quia ineffabili misericordiae suae potentia sic malitiae antiqui hostis obviat, ut aliquando eos etiam quos jam cepit amittat; et quasi ab ore illius cadunt, qui post perpetratas culpas ad innocentiam redeunt. Quis enim ore illius semel raptus maxillam ejus evaderet, 1090 si perforata non esset? An non in ore Petrum tenuit, cum negavit (Matth. XXVI, 71)? An non in ore David tenuit, cum in tantam se luxuriae voraginem mersit (II Reg. XI, 4)? Sed cum ad vitam uterque per poenitentiam rediit, Leviathan iste eos aliquo modo quasi per maxillae suae foramina amisit. Per foramen ergo maxillae ab ejus ore subtracti sunt qui post perpetrationem tantae nequitiae poenitendo redierunt. Quis autem hominum Leviathan istius os evadat, ut nulla illicita committat? Sed hinc cognoscimus quantum redemptori humani generis debitores sumus, qui non solum nos in os Leviathan ire prohibuit, sed ab ore etiam redire concessit; qui spem peccatori non abstulit, quia maxillam ejus, ut evadendi viam tribueret, perforavit, ut saltem post morsum fugiat, qui incautus prius morderi nequaquam metuebat. Ubique ergo nobis occurrit superna medicina, quia et dedit homini praecepta ne peccet, et tamen peccandi dedit remedia, ne desperet. Unde cavendum summopere est ne quis delectatione peccati Leviathan istius ore rapiatur, et tamen, si raptus fuerit, non desperet, quia si peccatum perfecte lugeat, adhuc foramen in maxilla ejus invenit, per quod evadat. Jam dentibus teritur, sed adhuc si evadendi via quaeritur, in maxilla ejus foramen invenitur. Habet etiam captus quo exeat, qui praevidere noluit ne caperetur. Quisquis ergo nondum captus est, maxillam ejus fugiat; quisquis vero jam captus est, in maxilla foramen quaerat. Pius enim ac justus est conditor noster. [Vet. XV.] 23. Ante culpam justitia Dei metuenda; post culpam speranda misericordia. Ruina majorum sit cautela minorum. Sed nemo dicat: Quia pius est, venialiter pecco. Et nemo qui peccaverit dicat: Quia justus est, de peccati remissione despero. Relaxat enim Deus facinus quod defletur, sed perpetrare quisque timeat quod si digne deflere possit ignorat. Ante culpam ergo justitiam metuat, post culpam tamen de pietate praesumat; neque ita justitiam timeat, ut nulla spei consolatione convalescat; neque ita confidat de misericordia, ut adhibere vulneribus suis dignae poenitentiae negligat medicinam; sed quem praesumit sibi pie parcere, semper etiam cogitet et districte judicare. Sub pietate itaque ejus spes peccatoris gaudeat, sed sub districtione illius poenitentis correctio contremiscat. Spes igitur praesumptionis nostrae habeat etiam morsum timoris, ut ad corrigenda peccata justitia judicantis terreat, quem ad fiduciam veniae gratia parcentis invitat. Hinc enim per quemdam sapientem dicitur: Ne dixeris, Miserationes Domini multae sunt, peccatorum meorum non memorabitur (Eccli. V, 6). Pietatem namque ejus protinus, et justitiam subdit, dicens: Misericordia enim et ira ab illo (Ibid., 7). Divina itaque clementia maxillam Behemoth istius perforans, ubique humano generi et misericorditer et potenter occurrit, quia nec libero admonitionem praecavendi tacuit, nec capto remedium fugiendi subtraxit. Ad hoc quippe in Scriptura sacra virorum talium, id est David et Petri, peccata sunt indita, ut cautela minorum sit ruina majorum. Ad hoc vero utrorumque illic et poenitentia insinuatur et venia, ut spes pereuntium sit recuperatio perditorum. De statu ergo suo David cadente, nemo superbiat. De lapsu etiam suo David surgente, 1091 nemo desperet. Ecce quam mirabiliter

Scriptura sacra eodem verbo superbos premit, quo humiles levat. Unam namque rem gestam retulit, et diverso modo superbos quidem ad humilitatis formidinem, humiles vero ad spei fiduciam revocavit. O inaestimabile novi generis medicamentum, quod uno eodemque ordine positum, et premendo tumentia exsiccat, et sublevando arentia infundit! De majorum nos lapsu terruit, sed de reparatione roboravit. 24. Incassum sperat misericordiam, qui justitiam non timet. Sic quippe semper, sic nos divinae dispensationis misericordia et superbientes reprimit, et ne ad desperationem corruamus fulcit. [Vet. XVI, Rec. XI.] Unde etiam per Moysen admonet, dicens: Non accipies loco pignoris superiorem, aut inferiorem molam (Deut. XXIV, 6). Accipere namque aliquando dicimus auferre. Unde et aves illae quae sunt rapiendis avibus avidae, accipitres vocantur. Unde Paulus apostolus dicit: Sustinetis enim si quis devorat, si quis accipit (II Cor., XI, 20). Ac si diceret, Si quis rapit. Pignus vero debitoris est confessio peccatoris. A debitore enim pignus accipitur, cum a peccatore jam peccati confessio tenetur. Superior autem et inferior mola est spes et timor. Spes quippe ad alta subvehit, timor autem cor inferius premit. Sed mola superior et inferior ita sibi necessario junguntur, ut una sine altera inutiliter habeatur. In peccatoris itaque pectore incessanter debet spes et formido conjungi, quia incassum misericordiam sperat, si non etiam justitiam timeat; incassum justitiam metuit, si non etiam de misericordia confidat. Loco igitur pignoris mola superior aut inferior tolli prohibetur, quia qui peccatori praedicat, tanta dispensatione componere praedicationem debet, ut nec derelicta spe timorem subtrahat, nec subtracta spe, in solo eum timore derelinquat. Mola enim superior aut inferior tollitur, si per praedicantis linguam in peccatoris pectore aut timor a spe, aut spes a timore dividatur. 25. Cur Deus electos a carnalibus vitiis illaesos non custodit. Superbia majus peccatum quam luxuria. Homo de medicamento vulnus facit, Deus de vulnere medicamentum. Sed quia, exigente causa, David ad medium deducto, tanti facinoris memoriam fecimus, lectoris fortasse animus movetur, cur eos omnipotens Deus, quos in perpetuum elegit, quos ad donorum quoque spiritalium culmen assumpsit, illaesos a corporalibus vitiis non custodit. Unde quia satisfieri citius credimus, breviter respondemus. Nonnulli enim per accepta dona virtutum, per impensam gratiam bonorum operum in superbiae vitium cadunt, sed tamen quo ceciderint, non cognoscunt. Proinde contra eos hostis antiquus, quia jam interius dominatur, etiam exterius saevire permittitur, ut qui in cogitatione elati sunt, per carnis luxuriam prosternantur. Scimus autem quia aliquando minus est in corporis corruptionem cadere quam cogitatione tacita ex deliberata elatione peccare; sed cum minus turpis superbia creditur, minus vitatur. Luxuriam vero eo magis erubescunt homines, quo simul omnes turpem noverunt. Unde fit plerumque ut nonnulli post superbiam in luxuriam corruentes, ex aperto casu malum culpae latentis erubescant; et tunc etiam majora corrigunt, cum prostrati in minimis gravius confunduntur. Reos enim se inter minora conspiciunt, qui se liberos inter graviora crediderunt. Pia ergo Domini dispensatione laxatus nonnunquam Behemoth iste de culpa ad culpam trahit, et 1092 dum plus percutit, inde eum quem ceperat amittit, atque unde vicisse cernitur, inde superatur. Considerare libet intra munitum gratiae sinum quanto Deus favore misericordiae nos continet. Ecce qui de virtute se extollit per vitium ad humilitatem redit. [Vet. XVI.] Qui vero acceptis virtutibus extollitur, non gladio, sed, ut ita dixerim, medicamento vulneratur. Quid est enim virtus, nisi medicamentum? et quid est vitium, nisi vulnus? Quia ergo nos de medicamento vulnus facimus, facit ille de vulnere medicamentum, ut qui virtute percutimur, vitio curemur. Nos namque virtutum dona retorquemus in usum vitiorum, ille vitiorum illecebras assumit in artem virtutum, et salutis statum percutit ut servet, ut qui humilitatem currentes fugimus, ei saltem cadentes haereamus. Sed inter haec sciendum est quod plerique hominum, quo in multis corruunt, arctius ligantur; cumque eos Behemoth iste ex uno vitio percutit ut concidant, ex alio quoque illigat ne resurgant. Consideret itaque homo cum quo hoste bellum gerat; et si jam se in aliquo deliquisse perpendit, saltem ad culpam pertrahi ex culpa pertimescat, ut studiose vitentur vulnera, quibus frequenter interficit, quia valde rarum est, quod hostis noster electorum saluti etiam vulneribus servit. 26. Tentatio aliquando meritorum est custodia. Diabolus tentando sanctos ad regnum servat invitus. Maxilla tamen Behemoth istius perforata intelligi et aliter potest, ut in ore tenere dicatur non quos jam perfecte peccato implicavit, sed quos adhuc peccati persuasionibus tentat, quatenus ei quemlibet mandere sit de peccati eum delectatione tentare. Mandendum quidem, sed non deglutiendum acceperat Paulum, quando illum post tot revelationum sublimia stimulis carnis agitabat (II Cor. XII, 7). Tunc ergo cum contra illum licentiam tentationis accepit, in maxilla eum tenuit, sed perforata. Qui vero elatus perire poterat, tentatus est ne periret. Tentatio ergo illa non vorago vitiorum, sed custodia meritorum fuit, quia Leviathan iste fatigando eum in afflictione contrivit, sed non in culpa capiendo devoravit. Elatos autem in sanctitate viros non amitteret, nisi tentaret. Sancti quippe non essent, qui de sanctitatis gloria superbirent, et tanto sub ejus jure caderent, quanto se in suis virtutibus elevarent. Sed miro dispensationis ordine dum tentantur humiliantur, dum humiliantur ejus esse jam desinunt. Bene ergo maxilla Behemoth istius perforata dicitur, quia electos Dei unde conterit, inde amittit; unde tentat ut perdat, agit inde ne pereant. Antiquus itaque hostis, occultis Dei dispensationibus serviens, sanctorum animas ad interitum tentat volens, sed ad regnum tentando servat invitus. Maxilla ergo ejus perforata est, quia eos quos tentando, id est mandendo conterit, quasi cum deglutit amittit. Quod quia non humana sed divina providentia agitur, ut utilitati justorum ipsa vetusti adversarii astutia suffragetur, quatenus cum electos tentat, eos magis tentando custodiat, bene ad beatum Job dicitur: Aut armilla perforabis maxillam ejus? Subaudis ut ego, qui provide cuncta disponens, electos meos inde robustius in integritate custodio, unde eos per maxillam Leviathan istius labefactari aliquo modo ab integritate permitto. Sequitur:

CAPUT XIII [Vet.

XVIII, Rec. XII]. VERS. 22. Nunquid multiplicabit ad te preces, aut loquetur tibi mollia? 1093 27. Satanas sive per se, sive per membra sua, nimirum reprobos, Christo preces adhibuit. Subaudis ut mihi. Si enim ad personam Filii haec verba referantur, incarnato ei mollia loquebatur cum diceret: Scio quia sis sanctus Dei (Luc. IV, 34). Ad quem Leviathan iste multiplicavit preces, cum per subditam sibi legionem dixit: Si ejicis nos, mitte nos in gregem porcorum (Matth. VIII, 31). Quamvis intelligi potest apertius, quia ad Dominum preces multiplicat, cum extremi die judicii iniqui qui ejus corpus sunt sibi parci deprecantur, cum membra ejus, videlicet reprobi, sero clamantes dicunt: Domine, Domine, aperi nobis (Luc. XIII, 25). Quibus protinus dicitur: Nescio vos unde sitis. Tunc etiam Domino per membra sua mollia loquetur, quando multi ex ejus corpore dicturi sunt: Domine, Domine, nonne in nomine tuo prophetavimus, et in nomine tuo daemonia ejecimus, et in nomine tuo virtutes multas fecimus (Matth. VII, 22)? Mollia quidem deprecantes dicunt, cum ejus nomine replicant quae fecerunt, sed duro corde illa cum facerent, in suam laudem rapuerunt. Unde mox audiunt: Nescio qui estis (Ibid., 23). Sequitur:

CAPUT XIV [Rec. XIII].

VERS. 23. Nunquid feriet tecum pactum? Subaudis ut mecum: Et accipies eum servum sempiternum. 28. Sanctos tentans eorum utilitati servit, ac Dei voluntati. Subaudis ut ego. Sed valde solerter intuendum est quod pactum cum Domino Leviathan iste feriat, ut sempiternus ab eo servus habeatur. In pacto enim, discordantium partium voluntas impletur, ut ad votum suum quaeque perveniat, et jurgia desiderato fine concludat. Antiquus itaque hostis a sinceritate divinae innocentiae malitiae suae face succensus discordat, sed ab ejus judicio etiam discordando non discrepat; nam viros justos semper malevole tentare appetit, sed tamen hoc Dominus vel misericorditer fieri, vel juste permittit. Haec ipsa ergo tentationis licentia pactum vocatur, in qua etdesiderium tentatoris agitur, et tamen per eam miro modo voluntas justi dispensatoris impletur. Erudiendos enim, sicut nuper diximus, electos suos Dominus saepe tentatori subjicit, sicut post paradisi claustra, post tertii coeli secreta, ne revelationum magnitudine Paulus extolii potuisset, ei Satanae angelus datus est (II Cor. XII, 7). Sed, ut praefati sumus, ipsa hac tentatione disponitur, ut qui elati perire poterant, humiliati a perditione serventur. Secreto ergo dispensationis ordine, unde saevire permittitur iniquitas diaboli, inde pie perficitur benignitas Dei. Et bene ex hoc pacto quod cum Domino ferire dicitur, servus accipi perhibetur, quia inde obtemperat nutibus supernae gratiae, unde exercet iram nequissimae voluntatis suae. [Vet. XIX.] Servus ergo ex pacto est, qui dum voluntatem suam implere permittitur, a superni consilii voluntate ligatur, ut electos Dei, sicut dictum est, volens tentet, et tentando nesciens probet. 29. Reproborum poena Dei electorumque gloriae famulatur. Sed quia tandiu in hac vita electorum usibus servit, quandiu malitiae suae nequitiam tentationibus exercere potuerit, hoc autem in loco a Domino non solum ex pacto servus, sed sempiternus servus accipi dicitur, investigare compellimur quomodo et post praesentis vitae terminum servire eum in perpetuum Domino demonstremus. Neque enim tunc justos coelesti felicitate pollentes adhuc tentare permittitur, cum ante eorum oculos aeternis gehennae ignibus mancipatur, quia nequaquam 1094 in illa superna patria tentationibus erudiendi sunt, in qua jam pro tentationum laboribus remunerantur. Sed tunc Leviathan iste cum suo corpore, reprobis videlicet omnibus, flammis ultricibus traditur, quibus sine fine crucietur. Quos scilicet cruciatus dum justi conspiciunt, in Dei laudibus crescunt, quia et in se cernunt bonum quo remunerati sunt, et in illis inspiciunt supplicium quod evaserunt. Ita enim tunc pulchra erit universitas, dum et gehenna juste cruciat impios, et aeterna felicitas juste remunerat pios. Sicut enim niger color in pictura substernitur, ut superjectus albus vel rubeus pulchrior ostendatur, ita tunc etiam malos bene ordinans Deus, feliciora exhibet gaudia beatorum, ostensis ante eorum oculos suppliciis reproborum. Et quamvis illud ex visione dominica eorum gaudium non sit quod crescat, magis tamen auctori suo esse se debitores sentiunt, quando et bonum cernunt quod juste remunerati percipiunt, et malum quod misericorditer adjuti vicerunt. [Rec. XIV] Igitur si utilitati justorum et hic tentatio Leviathan istius, et illic damnatio proficit, sempiternus servus est dum Dei laudibus nesciens servit, et illic poena ejus justa, et hic voluntas injusta. Sequitur:

CAPUT XV [Vet. XX].

VERS. 24. Nunquid illudes ei quasi avi? 30. Diabolus animal quadrupes per actionis immundae fatuitatem; draco per nocendi malitiam; avis per elationem. Quid est quod adversarius noster prius Behemoth, postmodum Leviathan dicitur, nunc vero avi in perditionis suae illusione comparatur? Behemoth, quippe, ut diximus, bellua interpretatur, quae quadrupes ostenditur, dum sicut bos fenum comedere perhibetur. Leviathan vero, quia hamo capitur, procul dubio serpens in aquis innotescitur. Nunc vero ad avis similitudinem ducitur, cum dicitur: Nunquid illudes ei quasi avi? Cur ergo bellua, vel jumentum, cur draco, cur avis appelletur, indagemus. Citius enim nomina ejus agnoscimus, si tergiversationis illius astutiam subtiliter exploremus. De coelo quippe ad terram venit, et ad spem coelestium nulla jam respiratione se erigit. Irrationale ergo et quadrupes animal est per actionis immundae fatuitatem, draco per nocendi malitiam, avis per subtilis naturae levitatem. Quia enim hoc quod contra se agit ignorat, bruto sensu bellua est; quia malitiose nobis nocere appetit, draco est; quia vero de naturae suae subtilitate superbe extollitur, avis est. Rursum, quia in hoc quod inique agit ad utilitatem nostram divina virtute possidetur, jumentum est; quia vero latenter mordet, serpens est; quia autem nonnunquam per indomitam superbiam se etiam lucis angelum simulat, avis est. Humanum etenim genus quamvis inexplicabili iniquitatis arte lacessat, tribus tamen vitiis valde tentat, ut videlicet alios sibi per luxuriam, alios per malitiam, alios per superbiam subdat. 31. Secundum varias illas formas, varie tentat. Satanae escam ostendit Christus, laqueum abscondit. Non ergo immerito in eo quod agere nititur ex ipso suarum actionum nomine vocatur, cum jumentum, draco, vel avis dicitur. In eis quippe quos ad stultitiam luxuriae excitat, jumentum est; in eis quos ad nocendi malitiam inflammat, draco est; in eis autem quos in fastum superbiae quasi alta sapientes elevat, avis est; in illis vero quos pariter in luxuria et superbia et malitia polluit, jumentum, 1095 draco, simul et avis existit. Per tot namque ad deceptorum cor se species intulit, in quot eos nequitias implicavit. Multarum igitur rerum nomine vocatur, quia ante deceptorum mentes in varias formarum species vertitur. Cum enim hunc per carnis luxuriam tentat, et tamen minime superat, mutata suggestione cor illius in malitiam inflammat. Quia ergo ad eum venire bellua non valuit, draco venit. Illum veneno malitiae corrumpere non valet, sed tamen bona sua ejus oculis opponit, et cor illius in superbiam extollit. Huic ergo ut draco subrepere non valuit, sed tamen adducto phantasmate inanis gloriae, coram cogitationis ejus obtutibus quasi avis volavit. Quae nimirum avis tanto contra nos immanius extollitur, quanto nulla naturae suae infirmitate praepeditur. Quia enim carnis morte non premitur, et Redemptorem nostrum carne mortalem vidit, altiori fastu elationis intumuit; sed ubi contra auctorem suum penna se superbiae extulit, ibi laqueum suae mortis invenit. Nam ea ejus carnis morte prostratus est, quam expetiit elatus; et inde pertulit laqueum, unde quasi escam suae malitiae mortem justi concupivit. [Vet. XXI.] Dicatur ergo: Nunquid illudes ei quasi avi? Quasi avi quippe Dominus illusit, dum ei in passione unigeniti Filii sui ostendit escam, sed laqueum abscondit. Vidit enim quod ore perciperet, sed non vidit quod gutture teneret. Nam quamvis eum fuerat ipse confessus Filium Dei, velut purum tamen illum hominem mori credidit, ad cujus mortem Judaeorum persequentium animos concitavit (Matth. VIII, 29). Sed in ipso traditionis ejus tempore tarde jam cognovisse intelligitur, quod ipse illa ejus morte puniretur. Unde et Pilati conjugem somniis terruit, ut vir illius a justi persecutione cessaret (Matth. XXVII, 19). Sed res interna dispensatione disposita nulla valuit machinatione refragari. Expediebat namque ut peccatorum mortem juste morientium solveret mors justi injuste morientis. Quod quia Leviathan iste usque ad tempus passionis illius ignoravit, quasi more avis illusus, divinitatis ejus laqueum pertulit, dum humanitatis ejus escam momordit. Sequitur:

CAPUT XVI [Rec. XV].

IBID. Aut ligabis eum ancillis tuis. 32. Christus infirma mundi eligens, diaboli fortitudinem debellavit. Domus sapientiae Christi corpus, et Ecclesia. Ad praedicandum Evangelium soli assumpti sunt qui per se non essent idonei. Subaudis ut ego. In servis etsi despecta est conditio, virilitas viget; in ancillis autem cum conditione pariter sexus jacet. Bene ergo Dominus Leviathan istum non servis, sed ancillis suis ligare se asserit, quia ad nostram redemptionem veniens, et suos contra mundi superbiam praedicatores mittens, relictis sapientibus insipientes, relictis fortibus debiles, relictis divitibus pauperes elegit. Ancillis ergo suis Leviathan hujus fortitudinem Dominus ligavit, quia attestante Paulo: Infirma mundi elegit Deus, ut confundat fortia (I Cor. I, 27). Unde bene per Salomonem dicitur: Sapientia aedificavit sibi domum, excidit columnas septem, immolavit victimas, miscuit vinum, proposuit mensam, misit ancillas suas ut vocarent ad arcem et moenia civitatis (Prov. IX, 1, 2, 3). Sapientia quippe domum sibi condidit, cum unigenitus Dei Filius in semetipso intra uterum Virginis, mediante anima, humanum sibi corpus creavit. Sic quippe corpus Unigeniti domus Dei dicitur, sicut etiam templum vocatur; ita vero, ut unus idemque Dei atque hominis filius ipse sit qui 1096 inhabitat, ipse qui inhabitatur. Quod tamen recte et aliter accipitur, si domus sapientiae Ecclesia vocetur. Quae septem sibi columnas excidit, quia ab amore praesentis saeculi disjunctas ad portandam ejusdem Ecclesiae fabricam mentes praedicantium erexit. Quae pro eo quod perfectionis virtute subnixae sunt, septenario numero designantur. Immolavit victimas, quia vitam praedicantium mactari in persecutione permisit. Vinum miscuit, quia divinitatis et humanitatis suae nobis pariter arcana praedicavit. Mensam quoque proposuit, quia Scripturae sacrae nobis pabula aperiendo praeparavit. Ancillas etiam suas misit, quae ad arcem nos atque civitatis moenia vocarent, quia praedicatores infirmos abjectosque habere studuit, qui fideles populos ad spiritalis patriae aedificia superna colligerent. Unde in Evangelio Dominus Nathanaelem laudat (Joan. I, 47), nec tamen in sorte praedicantium numerat, quia ad praedicandum eum tales venire debuerant, qui de laude propria nihil habebant, ut tanto solidius veritatis esse cognosceretur quod agerent, quanto et aperte cerneretur quia ad hoc agendum per se idonei non fuissent. Ut ergo mira potentia per praedicatorum linguas claresceret, prius mirabilius actum est ut eorumdem praedicantium meritum nullum esset. Ancillas ergo Dominus misit, et Leviathan hujus fortitudinem ligavit, quia infirmos praedicatores mundo exhibuit, et potentes quosque, qui ejus corpus fuerant, sub terroris sui vinculo restrinxit. Et in semetipso Leviathan iste ancillis ligatur, cum infirmis praedicantibus, veritatis clarescente lumine, contra electorum mentes antiquus hostis non quantum vult saevire permittitur; sed ne sub infidelitatis captivitate cunctos quos appetit teneat, signis et virtutibus coarctatur. Ipse ergo per se hoc fortiter facit, qui contra contra illum vires non fortibus tribuit. Sed quia quos contra eum Dominus mittat insinuat, nunc etiam quid ipsi agant qui mittuntur, adjungit. Sequitur:

CAPUT XVII [Vet.

XXII, Rec. XVI]. VERS. 25. Concident eum amici, divident illum negotiatores. 33. Diaboli membra conciduntur, cum ab ejus corpore peccatores separantur Christo sociandi. Praedicatores sunt negotiatores. Leviathan iste toties conciditur, quoties divini verbi gladio sua ab illo membra separantur. Iniqui enim cum verbum veritatis audiunt, et, sancto timore perculsi, ab antiqui se hostis imitatione suspendunt, ipse in corpore suo dividitur, cui hi qui prave inhaeserant subtrahuntur. Ipsos vero amicos nominat, quos superius ancillas vocat; ipsos etiam negotiatores appellat, quos amicos dixerat. Sancti etenim praedicatores prius ancillae sunt per formidinem, post amici per fidem, ad extremum quoque negotiatores per actionem. Ipsis quippe infirmantibus dicitur: Nolite timere, pusille grex, quia complacuit Patri vestro dare vobis regnum (Luc. XII, 32). Ipsis rursum convalescentibus dicitur: Vos autem dixi amicos, quia omnia quaecunque audivi a Patre meo, nota feci vobis (Joan. XV, 15). Ipsis ad extremum in negotii operationem pergentibus jubetur: Euntes in mundum universum, praedicate Evangelium omni creaturae (Marc. XVI, 15). In praedicatione quippe fidei quasi quoddam negotium geritur, dum verbum datur, et fides ab auditoribus sumitur. Quasi quoddam negotium faciunt, qui praedicationem praerogant, et a populis fidem reportant. Fidem impartiunt, et eorum sanctam protinus vitam sumunt. Si enim justorum 1097 praedicatio negotium non fuisset, profecto Psalmista non diceret: Sumite psalmum, et date tympanum (Psal. LXXX, 2). In tympano etenim corium siccatur ut sonet. Quid est ergo dicere: Sumite psalmum, et date tympanum, nisi accipite spiritale canticum cordis, et reddite temporalem macerationem corporis? Si superna praedicatio negotium non fuisset, nequaquam sub typo fortis mulieris Salomon de sancta Ecclesia diceret: Sindonem fecit et vendidit, et cingulum tradidit Chananaeo (Prov. XXXI, 24). Quid enim signatur per linteum sindonis, nisi subtilis intextio sanctae praedicationis? In qua molliter quiescitur, quia mens in illa fidelium spe superna refovetur. Unde et Petro animalia in linteo demonstrantur (Act. X, 11), quia peccatorum animae misericorditer aggregatae, in blanda fidei quiete continentur. Hanc ergo sindonem Ecclesia fecit, et vendidit, quia fidem quam credendo texuerat loquendo dedit, et ab infidelibus vitam rectae conversationis accepit. Quae et Chananaeo cingulum tradidit, quia per vigorem demonstratae justitiae, fluxa opera gentilitatis astrinxit, ut hoc quod praecipitur vivendo teneatur: Sint lumbi vestri praecincti (Luc. XII, 35). Praedicatores ergo suos Dominus quaerendo ancillas invenit, permutando amicos facit, ditando negotiatores exhibet. Qui enim mundi prius minas infirmi timuerunt, post ad cognoscenda divina consilia ascendunt. Ditati autem virtutibus, usque ad exercendum fidei negotium perducuntur, ut Leviathan istius membra increpando atque suadendo tanto severius incidant, quanto et amici facti amori veritatis semetipsos verius copulant, atque ab eo peccantium animas tanto celerius subtrahant, quanto negotiatores idonei effecti in semetipsis amplissimas apothecas virtutum monstrant. Quia enim per praedicatores Dei valde laudabiliter a Leviathan isto res possessa dividitur, veritatis vox per prophetam pollicetur, dicens: Et si separaveris pretiosum a vili, quasi os meum eris (Jerem. XV, 19). Pretiosum quippe a vili separat, qui humanas mentes a reproba antiqui hostis imitatione disjungit. Recte os Dei dicitur, quia per eum procul dubio eloquia divina formantur. Sequitur:

CAPUT XVIII [Rec. XVII].

VERS. 26. Nunquid implebis sagenas pelle ejus, et gurgustium piscium capite illius? 34. In Ecclesiae sagena prius capti piscatores, deinde per eos rhetores et philosophi. Quid per sagenas vel gurgustium piscium nisi ecclesiae fidelium, quae unam Ecclesiam catholicam faciunt, designatur? Unde in Evangelio scriptum est: Simile est regnum coelorum sagenae missae in mare, et ex omni genere piscium congreganti (Matth. XIII, 47). Regnum coelorum scilicet vocatur Ecclesia, cujus dum mores Dominus ad superna sublevat, jam haec ipsa in Domino per coelestem conversationem regnat. Quae recte etiam sagenae missae in mare comparatur, ex omni genere piscium congreganti, quia missa in hoc gentilitatis saeculum, nullum respuit; sed malos cum bonis, superbos cum humilibus, iracundos cum mitibus, et fatuos cum sapientibus cepit. In pelle vero Leviathan istius, stultos ejus corporis, in capite autem prudentes accipimus. Vel certe pelle, quae est exterius, subditi ad haec extrema servientes, capite autem praepositi, designantur. Et bene Dominus, servato ordine, has sagenas vel gurgustium piscium, id est 1098 Ecclesiam suam, et vota fidelium prius se pelle ejus et postmodum capite asserit impleturum, quia, sicut superius diximus (Sup., c. 16 hujus lib., n. 32), prius elegit infirma, ut post confunderet fortia. Elegit quippe stulta mundi, ut confunderet sapientes (I Cor. I, 27). Prius namque collegit indoctos, et postmodum philosophos; et non per oratores docuit piscatores, sed mira potentia per piscatores subegit oratores. Dicit ergo: Nunquid implebis sagenas pelle ejus, aut gurgustium piscium capite illius. Subaudis, ut ego, qui intra Ecclesiam fidelium prius quasi pellem diaboli extremos atque infimos colligo, et postmodum caput illius, id est prudentes mihi adversarios, subdo. Sequitur: Pones super eum manum tuam? Id est ut ego, qui forti illum potentia reprimens, non plus quam expediat saevire permitto, ejusque saevitiam quantum permisero in electorum meorum utilitatem retorqueo. Vel certe manum super eum ponere est virtutis potestate superare. Beato igitur Job per interrogationem dicitur: VERS. 27. Pones super eum manum tuam? [Vet. XXIII.] Ac si aperte diceretur? Nunquid virtute illum propria reprimes? Unde et apte mox subditur:

CAPUT XIX.

IBID. Memento belli, nec ultra addas loqui. 35. Quam alta dispensatione Deus famulos suos vel minis, vel etiam flagellis premat. Alta dispensatio judiciorum Dei idcirco saepe bene merentes famulos vel minis impetit, vel flagellis premit, vel quibusdam superimpositis oneribus gravat, vel laboriosis occupationibus implicat, quia mira potentia praevidet quod si quieti ac liberi in tranquillitate persisterent, tentationes ferre adversarii non valentes, mentis prostrati vulneribus jacerent. Dum ergo eos foris tolerandis flagellis vel oneribus occupat, a suscipiendis intus tentationum jaculis occultat. Moris quippe medicinalis est, ut saepe fervorem viscerum in pruriginem cutis trahat, et plerumque inde interius curat, unde exterius sauciat. Ita nonnunquam divinae dispensationis medicamine agitur ut exterioribus doloribus internum vulnus adimatur, et flagellorum sectionibus repellatur ea quae occupare mentem poterat interior putredo vitiorum; et tamen saepe dum patentis culpae sibi homines conscii non sunt, et aut doloribus cruciantur, aut laboribus deprimuntur, contra justum atque omnipotentem judicem in querelam prosiliunt, scilicet minus intuentes contra quam fortem adversarium bellum gerunt. Cujus si intolerabiles vires sollicite attenderent, nequaquam de his quae exterius tolerant murmurarent. 36. Haec gravia non videntur, si bella occulti adversarii graviora ponderemus. Non patris flagellum sed hostis gladium formidemus. Sed ideo videntur nobis haec gravia, quia bella occulti adversari nolumus pensare graviora. A quibus plerumque bellis, ut diximus, dum flagellamur, defendimur, dum affligimur, occultamur. Caro enim nostra prius quam resurrectionis incorruptione solidetur, si nullo moerore afficitur, in tentationibus effrenatur. Quis autem nesciat quod multo melius sit ardere flamma febrium quam igne vitiorum? Et tamen cum febre corripimur, quia vitiorum aestum qui occupare nos poterat considerare negligimus, de percussione murmuramus. Quis nesciat quod multo melius sit duris in servitio hominibus subjici, quam blandientibus 1099 daemoniacis spiritibus subdi? Et tamen cum alto Dei judicio jugo humanae conditionis atterimur, in querelam prosilimus, nimirum quia minus attendimus quod si nos nulla conditio servitutis opprimeret, fortasse mens nostra multis iniquitatibus pejus libera deserviret. Ideo ergo haec quae toleramus, gravia credimus, quia bella hostis callidi, quam sint contra nos dura atque intolerabilia non videmus. Menti enim nostrae omne pondus vilesceret, si ea quae se opprimere poterant, occulti adversarii bella pensaret. Quid enim si omnipotens Deus onera quae patimur sublevet, sed tamen sua nobis adjutoria subtrahat, et inter Leviathan istius nos tentamenta derelinquat? Saeviente tanto hoste quo ibimus, si nullis auctoris nostri protectionibus defendamur? Quia ergo beatus Job culpae sibi conscius non erat, et dura tamen flagella tolerabat, ne fortasse in vitio murmurationis excedat, memoretur quod timeat, et dicatur ei: Memento belli, nec ultra addes loqui. [Rec. XVIII.] Ac si ei aperte diceretur: Si occulti hostis contra te bellum consideras, quidquid a me pateris, non accusas. Si impetentem te adversarii gladium prospicis, flagellum patris nullatenus perhorrescis. Vides enim quali flagello te ferio, sed intueri negligis a quanto te hoste flagellando liberum servo. Memento ergo belli, nec ultra addas loqui, id est, tanto te ad disciplinam patris exhibe tacitum, quanto te prospicis ad bella hostis infirmum. Dum ergo me corripiente percuteris, ut aequanimiter feras, hostem tuum ad memoriam revoca, et durum non aestimes omne quod pateris, dum externis cruciatibus ab interna passione liberaris. Quia autem Leviathan iste de divina misericordia falsa sibi promissione blanditur, postquam terrorem fortitudinis ejus intulit, et beati Job animum in ejus circumspectione commovit, dicens: Memento belli, nec ultra addas loqui; ut irremissibilem reatum ejus ostenderet, illico adjunxit:

CAPUT XX [Vet.

XXIV, Rec. XIX]. VERS. 28.Ecce spes ejus frustrabitur eum. 37. Diaboli et reproborum omnium aeterna damnatio, praesentibus omnibus electis publicanda. Quod sic de eo debet intelligi, ut referri etiam ad illius corpus possit, quia iniqui omnes qui districtionem justitiae divinae non metuunt, incassum sibi de misericordia blandiuntur. Moxque ad consolationem nostram rediens, extremi judicii futurum ejus interitum praenuntiat, dicens: Et videntibus cunctis praecipitabitur. Cunctis enim videntibus praecipitabitur, quia aeterno tunc judice terribiliter apparonte, astantibus legionibus angelorum, assistente cuncto ministerio coelestium potestatum, atque electis omnibus ad hoc spectaculum deductis, ista bellua crudelis et fortis in medium captiva deducitur, et cum suo corpore, id est cum reprobis omnibus, aeternis gehennae incendiis mancipatur, cum dicitur: Discedite a me, maledicti, in ignem aeternum, qui praeparatus est diabolo et angelis ejus (Matth. XXV, 41). O quale erit illud spectaculum, quando haec immanissima bestia electorum oculis ostendetur, quae hoc belli tempore nimis illos terrere potuerat, si videretur! Sed occulto ac miro Dei consilio agitur, ut et nunc per ejus gratiam a pugnantibus non visa vincatur, et tunc a laetis victoribus jam captiva videatur. 1100 Tunc autem justi divino adjutorio quantum debitores sunt plenius recognoscunt, quando tam fortem bestiam viderint quam nunc infirmi vicerunt, et in hostis sui immanitate conspiciunt quantum debeant gratiae defensoris sui. Redeunt enim de hoc praelio tunc milites nostri virtutum trophaea referentes; et receptis corporibus, cum jam in illo judicio coelestis regni introitum sortiuntur, prius immanissimas vires hujus antiqui serpentis aspiciunt, ne vile aestiment quod evaserunt. Bene ergo dicitur: Et videntibus cunctis praecipitabitur, quia visa mors ejus tunc gaudium exhibet, cujus tolerata vita nunc justis quotidie in cruciatibus bellum movet. Sed audientes ista, ac si protinus quereremur, Domino dicentes: Domine, qui Leviathan istum tantae esse fortitudinis non ignoras, eum in certamine infirmitatis nostrae cur suscitas? illico adjunxit: CAP. XLI, VERS. 1. Non quasi crudelis suscitabo eum. [Vet. XXV, Rec. XX.] Et velut si mox a nobis causa rationis quaereretur. Quomodo non eum quasi crudelis suscitas, quem scimus quia tantos invadere et devorare permittis? statim subdidit, dicens:

CAPUT XXI.

VERS. 1, 2. Quis enim resistere potest vultui meo? et quis ante dedit mihi, ut reddam ei? 38. Gratia Dei gratuita. Quibus duobus versibus et virtutem suae potentiae, et omne pondos rationis explevit. Nam propter potentiam dixit: Quis enim resistere potest vultui meo? Et propter rationem subdidit: Quis ante dedit mihi, ut reddam ei? Ac si diceret: Non eum quasi crudelis suscito, quia de ejus fortitudine et electos meos potenter eripio, et rursum reprobos non injuste, sed rationabiliter damno; id est, et eos quos benigne eligo eripere mirabiliter possum, et eos quos respuo non injuste derelinquo. Nemo quippe ut divina illum gratia subsequatur prius aliquid contulit Deo. Nam si nos Deum bene operando praevenimus, ubi est quod Propheta ait: Misericordia ejus praeveniet me (Psal. LVIII, 11). Si quid nos bonae operationis dedimus, ut ejus gratiam mereremur, ubi est quod Apostolus dicit: Gratia salvati estis per fidem; et hoc non ex vobis, sed Dei donum est, non ex operibus (Ephes. II, 8)? Si nostra dilectio Deum praevenit, ubi est quod Joannes apostolus dicit: Non quia nos dilexerimus Deum, sed quia ipse prior dilexit nos (I Joan. IV, 10)? Ubi est quod per Osee Dominus dicit: Diligam eos spontanee (Oseae XIV, 5)? Si sine ejus munere nostra virtute Deum sequimur, ubi est quod per Evangelium Veritas protestatur, dicens: Sine me nihil potestis facere (Joan. XV, 5)? Ubi est quod ait: Nemo potest venire ad me, nisi Pater qui misit me, traxerit eum (Ibid. VI, 43)? Ubi est quod iterum dicit: Non vos me elegistis, sed ego elegi vos (Ibid. XV, 16)? Si saltem dona bonorum operum virtute nostra bene cogitando praevenimus, ubi est quod rursum per Paulum tam salubriter dicitur, ut omnis de se humanae mentis fiducia ab ipsa cordis radice succidatur, cum dicit: Non quia sufficientes simus aliquid cogitare a nobis quasi ex nobis, sed sufficientia nostra ex Deo est (II Cor. III, 5)? Nemo ergo Deum meritis praevenit, ut tenere eum quasi debitorem possit; sed miro modo aequus omnibus conditor, et quosdam praeelegit, et quosdam in suis pravis moribus juste derelinquit. 1101 39. Nec electis pietas sine justitia, nec reprobis justitia sine misericordia exhibetur. Nec tamen electis suis pietatem sine justitia exhibet, quia hic eos duris afflictionibus premit; nec rursum reprobis justitiam sine misericordia exercet, quia hic aequanimiter tolerat quos quandoque in perpetuum damnat. Si ergo et electi praevenientem se gratiam sequuntur, et reprobi juxta quod merentur accipiunt, et de misericordia inveniunt electi quod laudent, et de justitia non habent reprobi quod accusent. Bene itaque dicitur: Quis ante dedit mihi, ut reddam ei? Ac si aperte diceretur: Ad parcendum reprobis nulla ratione compellor, quia eis debitor ex sua actione non teneor. Idcirco enim nequaquam coelestis patriae praemia aeterna percipiunt, quia ea nunc dum promereri poterant, ex libero arbitrio contempserunt. Quod videlicet liberum arbitrium in bono formatur electis, cum eorum mens a terrenis desideriis gratia aspirante suspenditur. [Vet. XXVI.] 40. Bonum quod agimus et Dei est, et nostrum. Bonum quippe quod agimus, et Dei est, et nostrum: Dei per praevenientem gratiam, nostrum per obsequentem liberam voluntatem. Si enim Dei non est, unde ei gratias in aeternum agimus? Rursum si nostrum non est, unde nobis retribui praemia speramus? Quia ergo non immerito gratias agimus, scimus quod ejus munere praevenimur; et rursum, quia non immerito retributionem quaerimus, scimus quod obsequente libero arbitrio bona elegimus quae ageremus. Sequitur: Omnia quae sub coelo sunt mea sunt. Omnibus liquet quod non solum ea quae sub coelo sunt, sed ipsa quoque quae super coelos condita coelestia vocantur ejus voluntati serviunt a quo se creata esse meminerunt. Cur ergo tantummodo de inferioribus loquens ait.

CAPUT XXII.

IBID. Omnia quae sub coelo sunt, mea sunt? 41. Omnia Deo serviunt. Sed quia de Leviathan loquitur, qui jam non in aetherei coeli sede continetur, cuncta quae sub coelo sunt asserit sua esse, ut eum quoque qui de coelo cecidit, suae doceat potestati servire, ac si diceret: Leviathan iste beatitudinem quidem meam perdidit, sed dominium non evasit, quia et ipsae mihi potestates inserviunt quae mihi pravis actionibus adversantur. Sequitur: VERS. 3. Non parcam ei verbis potentibus, et ad deprecandum compositis. [Rec. XXI.] 42. Qua ratione diabolus dicitur Deum deprecari. Quis hoc, quod legisse se nequaquam novit, existimet, quia culparum suarum diabolus sit veniam petiturus? Sed ille fortasse homo, quem Leviathan iste in mundi termino vas sibi proprium facit , quem, attestante Paulo, Dominus Jesus interficiet spiritu oris sui, et destruet illustratione adventus sui (II Thess. II, 8), territus tantae majestatis praesentia, quia exercere vires suas non valet, ad preces inclinatur. Quod tamen de ejus corpore, id est iniquis omnibus intelligi aptius potest, qui sero ad petitionum verba veniunt, quia nunc exsequi facta contemnunt. Unde per Evangelium Veritas dicit: Novissime veniunt et reliquae virgines, dicentes: Domine, Domine, aperi nobis (Matth. XXV, 11). Quibus illico respondetur: Amen dico vobis, nescio vos (Ibid., 12). Sed cum verba potentia ad deprecandum componere dicitur, urget magis ut quod de ejus corpore in futuro diximus in hoc tempore sentiamus. [Vet. XXVII.] 1102 43. Irritae sunt preces quas pia vita non sequitur. Nonnullis in usum negotiationis vertitur oratio. Veram orationem efficiunt amari gemitus, non verba composita. Sunt namque intra sanctam Ecclesiam nonnulli, qui prolixas ad Dominum preces habent, sed vitam deprecantium non habent; nam promissa coelestia petitionibus sequuntur, operibus fugiunt. Hi nonnunquam etiam lacrymas in oratione percipiunt, sed cum post orationis tempora eorum mentem superbia pulsaverit, illico in fastu elationis intumescunt; cum avaritia instigat, mox per incendia avidae cogitationis exaestuant; cum luxuria tentaverit, illicitis protinus desideriis anhelant; cum ira suaserit, mox mansuetudinem mentis flamma insaniae concremat. Ut ergo diximus, et fletus in prece percipiunt, et tamen, expletis precibus, cum vitiorum suggestione pulsantur, nequaquam pro aeterni regni desiderio se flevisse mensinerunt. Quod aperte de se Balaam innotuit, qui justorum tabernacula conspiciens, ait: Moriatur anima mea morte justorum, et fiant novissima mea horum similia (Num. XXIII, 10). Sed cum compunctionis tempus abscessit, contra eorum vitam quibus se similem fieri etiam moriendo poposcerat, consilium praebuit; et cum occasionem de avaritia reperit, illico oblitus est quidquid sibi de innocentia optavit. Virtutis igitur pondus oratio non habet, quam nequaquam perseverantia continui amoris tenet. Quo contra bene de Anna flente perhibetur: Vultusque ejus non sunt amplius in diversa mutati (I Reg. I, 18), quia videlicet mens ejus nequaquam post preces inepta laetitia lasciviendo perdidit, quod orationis suae tempore gemituum rigore exquisivit. Nonnullis vero in usum negotiationis vertitur labor orationis. De quibus in Evangelio Veritas dicit: Devorant domos viduarum sub obtentu prolixae orationis. Hi accipient prolixius judicium (Marc. XII, 40). Quia ergo iniquorum petitionibus qui Leviathan istius corpus sunt nullo modo parcitur, cum eorum preces opere destruuntur, recte nunc dicitur: Non parcam ei verbis potentibus et ad deprecandum compositis. Quamvis et per hoc quod verba potentia et ad deprecandum composita referuntur, aperte inanitas orationis ostenditur. Veraciter namque orare, est amaros in compunctione gemitus, et non composita verba resonare. [Vet. XXVIII.]

Sed quia antiquus hostis quo districtius frangitur, eo nequius per multiplicia argumenta dilatatur, cujus tamen insidias Dominus quanto subtilius occultari considerat, tanto nobis misericordius manifestat, recte subjungitur:

CAPUT XXIV [Rec. XXII].

VERS. 14. Quis revelabit faciem indumenti? 44. Satan aliter religiosas mentes, aliter mundo deditas tentat. Leviathan iste aliter religiosas hominum mentes, aliter vero huic mundo deditas tentat; nam pravis mala quae desiderant aperte objicit, bonis autem latenter insidians, sub specie sanctitatis illudit. Illis velut familiaribus suis iniquum se manifestius insinuat; istis vero velut extraneis cujusdam quasi honestatis praetextu se palliat, ut mala quae eis publice non valet, tecta bonae actionis velamine subintromittat. Unde et membra ejus saepe cum aperta nequitia nocere non possunt, bonae actionis habitum sumunt; et prava quidem se opere exhibent, sed sancta specie mentiuntur. Iniqui enim si aperte mali essent, a bonis recipi omnino non possent; sed sumunt aliquid de visione bonorum, 1103 ut dum boni viri in eis recipiunt speciem quam amant, permistum sumant etiam virus quod vitant. Unde quosdam Paulus apostolus intuens sub praedicationis velamine ventris studio servientes, ait: Ipse enim Satanas transfigurat se in angelum lucis (II Cor. XI, 14). Quid ergo mirum si ministri ejus transfigurantur velut ministri justitiae? Hanc transfigurationem Josue timuit, quando videns angelum, cujus esset partis inquisivit, dicens: Noster es, an adversariorum (Josue V, 13)? ut videlicet si adversae virtutis esset, eo ipso quo se suspectum cognosceret, ab illusione resiliret. Quia ergo Leviathan iste in eo quod iniquitatis opus molitur, saepe specie sanctitatis induitur; et quia nisi per divinam gratiam simulationis ejus detegi indumenta non possunt, bene dicitur: Quis revelabit faciem indumenti ejus? Subaudis nisi ego, qui servorum meorum mentibus gratiam subtilissimae discretionis inspiro, ut revelata malitia faciem ejus nudam videant, quam coopertam ille sub habitu sanctitatis occultat. Et quia aliquando fidelium mentes corrumpere ostensione sua, aliquando suggestione conatur (agit enim modo opere, modo persuasione), recte subjungitur:

CAPUT XXV.

IBID. Et in medium oris ejus quis intrabit? 45. Deus electis calliditatem ejus revelat. Subaudis nisi ego, qui per discretas electorum mentes suggestionum ejus verba dicutio, et non ita haec esse ut sonuerunt manifesto. Bonum namque videntur promittere, sed ad perditum finem trahunt. In medium igitur oris ejus intrare est calliditatis ejus verba penetrare, ut nequaquam pensetur quid resonant, sed quo intendant. Intrare Adam in medium oris ejus noluit, quando intentionem persuasionis illius caute pensare neglexit; divinitatem quippe se per illum accipere credidit, et immortalitatem amisit (Genes. III). Unde ergo ab intellectu verborum ejus incaute exterius stetit, inde se ori illius devorandum funditus praebuit. Sequitur:

CAPUT XXVI.

[Rec. XXIII]. VERS. 5. Portas vultus ejus quis aperiet? 46. Portae Leviathan pseudopraedicatores appellantur. Has Dominus aperit, magistros errorunt manifestando. Portae vultus ejus sunt iniqui doctores, qui idcirco portae vultus ejus vocati sunt, quia per ipsos quisque ingreditur, ut Leviathan iste quasi in potestatis suae principatu videatur. Sicut enim Scriptura sacra sanctos viros portas Sion vocare consuevit (Sion quippe speculatio interpretatur, et non immirito praedicatores sanctos portas Sion dicimus, quia per eorum vitam atque doctrinam abscondita supernae contemplationis intramus), ita etiam portis Leviathan istius errorum magistri signantur, quorum dum praedicatio perversa recipitur, miseris auditoribus via perditionis aperitur. Sed portae istae ante oculos hominum plerumque ad introducendum quidem apertae sunt, sed tamen ad deprehendendum clausae, quia recta in specie exhibent, sed opere prava persuadent. Ad deprehendendum ergo clausae sunt, quia ne intrinsecus cognosci valeant, exteriori simulatione muniuntur. Quas tamen mira potentia Dominus aperit, quia electis suis hypocritarum mentes comprehensibiles facit. Portas ergo vultus ejus quis aperiet? Subaudis nisi ego, qui electis meis magistros errorum sub specie sanctitatis absconditos 1104 perspicua cognitione manifesto. Et quia Antichristus veniens ipsas etiam summas hujus saeculi potestates obtinebit, qui duplici errore saeviens conatur ad se corda hominum et missis praedicatoribus trahere, et commotis potestatibus inclinare, bene de Leviathan isto Dominus subdidit, dicens:

CAPUT XXVII [Vet. XXIX].

IBID. Per gyrum dentium ejus formido. 47. Dentes Leviathan iidem falsi doctores. Mutato namque nomine, hos ejus dentes insinuare aliter voluit, quos superius portas vocavit. Perversi enim praedicatores portae ejus sunt, quia ingressum perditionis aperiunt. Dentes ejus sunt, quia eos quos in errore capiunt, a veritatis soliditate confringunt. Sicut enim sanctae Ecclesiae dentes accipimus eos qui praedicationibus suis peccantium duritiam conterunt, unde ei per Salomonem dicitur: Dentes tui sicut greges detonsarum ascendentium de lavacro (Cant. IV, 2); qui non immerito detonsis ac lotis ovibus comparantur, quia innocuam vitam sumentes, in lavacro baptismatis conversationis pristinae vellera vetusta posuerunt; ita etiam dentibus Leviathan istius errorum magistri figurantur, quia reproborum vitam mordendo dilaniant, et eos a veritatis integritate subductos in sacrificio falsitatis mactant. Quorum quidem praedicatio facile despici ab auditoribus poterat, sed hanc ante humana judicia adjunctus saecularium potestatum terror exaltat. 48. Muniunt illos saeculi potestates. Alii verbis, alii gladiis saeviunt. Insidiae Antichristi ex falsis miraculis.

Recte ergo dicitur: Per gyrum dentium ejus formido, id est, iniquos praedicatores Antichristi perversae hujus saeculi protegunt potestates. Nam quos illi appetunt loquendo seducere, multi potentium student saeviendo terrere. Per gyrum ergo dentium ejus formido est, ac si aperte diceretur: Idcirco isti perversi praedicatores aliquos suadentes conterunt, quia circa ipsos sunt alii qui infirmorum mentes terrentes affligunt. Quale itaque illud tempus persecutionis apparebit, quando ad pervertendam fidelium pietatem alii verbis saepiunt, alii gladiis? Quis enim etiam infirmus Leviathan istius dentes non despiceret, si non eos per circuitum potestatum saecularium terror muniret? Sed duplici contra eos calliditate agitur, quia quod eis ab aliis verbis blandientibus dicitur, hoc ab aliis gladiis ferientibus imperatur. Quae utrorumque actio, id est potentium atque loquentium, in Joannis Apocalypsi brevi est sententia comprehensa, qua dicitur: Potestas equorum in ore et in caudis eorum erat (Apoc. IX, 19). In ore namque doctorum, scientia; in cauda vero, saecularium potentia figuratur. Per caudam quippe, quae retro est, hujus saeculi postponenda temporalitas designatur, de qua Paulus apostolus dicit: Unum autem, quae retro sunt oblitus, ad ea quae ante sunt extentus (Philip. III, 13). Retro enim est omne quod transit, ante vero est omne quod veniens permanet. Istis ergo equis, id est nequissimis praedicatoribus, ubique carnali impulsu currentibus, in ore et in cauda potestas est, quia ipsi quidem perversa suadendo praedicant, sed temporalibus potestatibus fulti, per ea se quae retro sunt exaltant. Et quia ipsi apparere despicabiles possunt, ab iniquis auditoribus suis per eos sibi reverentiam exigunt, quorum patrociniis fulciuntur. Unde hic quoque 1105 non immerito per gyrum dentium ejus formido inesse describitur, quia multis terroribus agitur, ut in perversis eorum praedicationibus etsi non veritatis sententia, certe temporalis potentia timeatur. Unde bene eumdem Antichristum Psalmista descripsit, dicens: Sub lingua ejus labor et dolor, sedet in insidiis cum divitibus in occultis (Psal. IX, 28). Propter enim perversa dogmata sub lingua ejus labor et dolor est; propter miraculorum vero speciem sedet in insidiis; propter saecularis autem potestatis gloriam, cum divitibus in occultis. Quia enim simul et miraculorum fraude et terrena potestate utitur, et in occultis et cum divitibus sedere perhibetur:

CAPUT XXVIII [Rec. XXIV].

VERS. 6. Corpus illius quasi scuta fusilia. 49. Mali corripientibus scutum excusationis opponunt. Sacra Scriptura scuti nomine aliquando uti in parte prospera, aliquando in adversa consuevit. Nam saepe scuti defensio pro divina protectione ponitur, nonnunquam vero pro humana repugnatione memoratur. Pro divina enim protectione ponitur, sicut per Psalmistam dicitur: Scuto bonae voluntatis tuae coronasti nos (Psal. V, 13). Scuto nos Dominus coronare perhibetur, quia quos protegens adjuvat, remunerans coronat. Rursum pro humana repugnatione per eumdem Prophetam scutum ponitur sicut alibi ait: Ibi confregit cornua, arcum, scutum, gladium et bellum (Psal. LXXV, 4). In cornibus quippe elatio superborum, in arcu vero insidiae longe ferientium, in scuto autem obstinata duritia defensionum, in gladio vicina percussio, in bello vero ipsa contra Dominum mentis motio designatur. Quod nimirum totum in sancta Ecclesia confringitur, dum mentes Deo resistentium, superposito jugo humilitatis, edomantur. Hinc rursum per eumdem Psalmistam dicitur: Arcum conteret, et confringet arma, et scuta comburet igni (Psal. XLV, 10). Arcum enim Dominus conterit, cum occulta insidiantium machinamenta dissolvit. Arma confringit, cum ea quae contra se erecta fuerant patrocinia humana comminuit. Scuta igni comburit, cum peccantium mentes obstinata se duritia defendentes, ad poenitentiae et confessionis ardorem sancti Spiritus calore succendit. [Vet. XXX.] Quod vero in hoc loco corpus Leviathan istius scutis fusilibus comparatur, perscrutandum nobis innuitur, quia durum quidem, sed tamen cum labitur, fragile solet esse vas omne quod fusile est.

Scuta ergo si sunt fusilia, in suscipienda sagittarum percussione robusta sunt, sed casu fragilia. Ictu quidem ferientium minime penetrantur, sed suo se lapsu per fragmenta dissolvunt. Corpus ergo Leviathan istius, id est omnes iniqui, quia per obstinationem duri sunt, sed per vitam fragiles, scutis fusilibus comparantur. Cum enim verba praedicationis audiunt, nulla correptionis jacula se penetrare permittunt, quia in omni peccato quod faciunt, scutum superbae defensionis opponunt. Nam cum talium quisque de reatu suae iniquitatis arguitur, non mox cogitat quomodo culpam corrigat, sed quid in adjutorio suae defensionis opponat. Nulla igitur veritatis sagitta penetratur, quia verba sanctae correptionis in scuto excipit superbae defensionis. Unde bene de Judaeis contra praecepta Domini superba se defensione tuentibus per Jeremiam dicitur; Reddes eis vicem, Domine, juxta opera manuum suarum (Thren. III, 64). 1106 Moxque eamdem vicem expressius subdidit dicens: Dabis eis scutum cordis laborem tuum (Ibid., 65). Labor quippe Domini apparens inter homines passibilis ejus humanitas fuit, quam Judaei superbe sapientes dum cernerent, despexerunt; eumque immortalem credere dedignati sunt, quem natura passibili mortalem viderunt. Cumque ejus humilitatem conspicerent, superbiae fastibus obdurati, summa cura moliti sunt, ne eorum mentes sancta praedicantium verba penetrarent. Dum ergo eis Dominus vicem malorum operum redderet, dedit illis scutum cordis laborem suum, quia recto judicio inde illos contra se superbe obstinatos exhibuit, unde ipse pro nobis infirmitate laboravit. Repulerunt quippe a se verba praedicantium, quia dedignati sunt in Domino infirma passionum. Laborem igitur Domini contra eumdem Dominum scutum cordis habuerunt, quia superba sapientibus eo despectus apparuit, quo propter eos humilis fuit. [Vet. XXXI.] 50. Hoc scuto usi Adam et Eva. Hoc scutum, sicut jam superius diximus, primus ille peccator tenuit, qui, requirente Domino cur lignum vetitum contigisset, non ad se culpam retulit, sed a muliere quam Dominus dederat se accepisse respondit (Genes. III, 12); ut quasi reatum suum oblique in auctorem relideret, qui ei mulierem dederat quae talia persuaderet. Hoc scutum etiam requisita mulier tenuit, quando neque ipsa ad se culpam retulit, sed serpentis illud persuasionibus replicavit, dicens: Serpens decepit me, et comedi (Ibid., 13), ut ipsa quoque reatum suum oblique in creatorem reduceret, qui illuc intrare serpentem persuasurum talia permisisset. Serpens vero jam non requiritur, quia nec ejus poenitentia quaerebatur. Hi autem quorum poenitentia quaesita est, scutum nequissimae defensionis contra justissimae correptionis verba protulerunt (Genes. III). Unde nunc usque in usum peccantium trahitur, ut culpa cum arguitur defendatur; et unde finiri reatus debuit, inde cumuletur. Bene ergo dicitur: Corpus illius quasi scuta fusilia, quia omnes iniqui, ne ad se corripientium verba perveniant, quasi contra adversariorum jacula scuta defensionum parant. Quod videlicet ejus corpus adhuc nobis expressus detegit, dum subjungit:

CAPUT XXIX.

IBID. Compactum squamis se prementibus. 51. Squamis tecti reprobi jaculis veritatis resistunt. Fertur quia draconis corpus squamis tegitur, ne citius jaculatione penetretur. Ita corpus omne diaboli, id est multitudo reproborum, cum de iniquitate sua corripitur, quibus valet tergiversationibus se excusare conatur, et quasi quasdam defensionis squamas objicit, ne transfigi sagitta veritatis possit. Quisquis enim dum corripitur, peccatum suum magis excusare appetit quam deflere, quasi squamis tegitur, dum a sanctis praedicatoribus gladio verbi jaculatur. Squamas habet, et idcirco ad ejus praecordia transeundi viam verbi sagitta non habet. Duritia enim carnali repellitur, ne spiritalis ei gladius infigatur. 52. His squamis obduratum cor Sauli, gratiae sagittis patuit. Carnali sapientia contra Deum Saulus obduruerat, quando cor ejus nulla praedicationis Evangelicae sagitta nulla penetrabat. Sed postquam forti coelitus increpatione jaculatus, et superno respectu caecatus est (lumen quippe ut acciperet amisit), ad Ananiam veniens illuminatur. In qua 1107 illuminatione quia defensionum suarum duritia caruit, bene de eo scriptum est: Ceciderunt quasi squamae ab oculis ejus (Act. IX, 18). Carnalis videlicet tegumenti illum duritia presserat, et idcirco radios veri luminis non videbat. Sed postquam superbae repugnationes ejus victae sunt, defensionum ejus squamae ceciderunt. Quae quidem sub Ananiae manibus ab oculis ceciderunt corporis, sed ante jam sub dominica increpatione ceciderant ab oculis cordis. Cum enim altae invectionis jaculo confossus jaceret, humili jam et penetrato corde requirebat, dicens: Domine, quid me vis facere (Act. XI, 6)? Repulsis videlicet squamis, jam ad cordis viscera veritatis sagitta pervenerat, quando, deposita elatione superbiae, eum quem impugnaverat, Dominum confitens, et quid ageret nesciens, requirebat. Intueri libet ubi est saevus ille persecutor, ubi lupus rapax. [Vet. XXXII.] Ecce in ovem jam versus est, qui percunctatur pastoris semitam quam sequatur. Et notandum quod cum diceret: Quis es, Domine (Act. XXII, 8)? non ei a Domino respondetur: Ego sum unigenitus Patris, ego principium, ego Verbum ante saecula. Quia enim Saulus incarnatum Dominum credere contemnebat, et ejus humanitatis infirma despexerat, de coelo hoc quod contempserat audivit: Ego sum Jesus Nazarenus, quem tu persequeris (Ibid., 8). Ac si diceret: Hoc a me audi de superioribus, quod in me de inferioribus despicis. Auctorem coeli venisse despexeras in terram, ex terra ergo hominem cognosce de coelo, ut tanto in me amplius sacramenta infirmitatis metuas, quanto et haec perducta in coelestibus ad excellentiam potestatis probas. Prosternens igitur te, nequaquam tibi hoc astruo quod ante saecula Deus sum; sed illud a me audis quod de me credere dedignaris. Postquam enim dixit Jesus, adhuc in expressionem terrenae inhabitationis subdidit Nazarenus; velut si apertius diceretur: Humilitatis meae infirma suscipe, et tuae superbiae squamas amitte. 53. In hypocritis duriores illae squamae. Malitiosae mentes hericiis similes. Sciendum tamen est quod istae defensionum squamae, quamvis pene omne humanum genus contegant, hypocritarum tamen specialiter et callidorum hominum mentes premunt. Ipsi etenim culpas suas tanto vehementius confiteri refugiunt, quanto se stultius videri ab hominibus peccatores erubescunt. Correpta itaque sanctitatis simulatio, et malitia occulta deprehensa, squamas objicit defensionis, et veritatis gladium repellit. Unde bene per Prophetam contra Judaeam dicitur: Ibi cubavit lamia, et invenit sibi requiem, ibi habuit foveam hericius (Isai. XXXIV, 14, 15). Per lamiam quippe hypocritae, per hericium vero malitiosi quique, qui diversis se defensionibus contegunt, designantur. Lamia etenim humanam habere dicitur faciem, sed corpus bestiale. Sic et omnes hypocritae in prima facie quod ostendunt quasi ex ratione sanctitatis est; sed bestiale est corpus quod sequitur, quia valde iniqua sunt quae sub boni specie moliuntur. Hericii autem nomine malitiosarum mentium defensio designatur, quia videlicet hericius cum apprehenditur ejus et caput cernitur, 1108 et pedes videntur, et corpus omne conspicitur; sed mox ut apprehensus fuerit, semetipsum in sphaeram colligit, pedes introrsus subtrahit, caput abscondit; et intra tenentis manum totum simul amittitur, quod totum simul ante videbatur. Sic nimirum sic malitiosae mentes sunt, cum in suis excessibus comprehenduntur. Caput enim hericii cernitur, quia quo initio peccator ad culpam accesserit videtur. Pedes hericii conspiciuntur, quia quibus vestigiis nequitia sit perpetrata cognoscitur; et tamen, adductis repente excusationibus, malitiosa mens introrsus pedes colligit, quia cuncta iniquitatis suae vestigia abscondit. Caput subtrahit, quia miris defensionibus nec inchoasse se pravum aliquid ostendit; et quasi sphaera in manu tenentis remanet, quia is qui corripit, cuncta quae jam cognoverat subito amittens, involutum intra conscientiam peccatorem tenet, et qui totum jam deprehendendo viderat, tergiversatione pravae defensionis illusus, totum pariter ignorat. Foveam ergo hericius in reprobis habet, quia malitiosa mens sese intra se colligens in tenebris defensionis abscondit. Sed in hoc quod se peccator excusat, in hoc quod caliginosis defensionibus fixum in se oculum corripientis obnubilat, divinus nobis sermo etiam quomodo a similibus fulciatur ostendit. Sequitur:

CAPUT XXX [Vet. XXXIII].

VERS. 7. Una uni conjungitur, et ne spiraculum quidem incedit per eas. 54. Iniqui alterna se invicem defensione tuentur. Istae squamae peccantium, ne ab ore praedicantium aliquo vitae spiraculo penetrentur, et obduratae sunt et conjunctae. Quos enim similis reatus sociat, concordi pertinacia etiam defensio perversa constipat, ut de facinoribus suis alterna se invicem defensione tueantur. Sibi enim quisque metuit, dum admoneri vel corrigi alterum cernit; et idcirco contra corripientium verba unanimiter assurgit, quia se in altero protegit. Bene ergo dicitur: Una uni conjungitur, et ne spiraculum quidem incedit per eas, quia in iniquitatibus suis, dum vicissim superba se defensione protegunt, sanctae exhortationis spiracula ad se nullatenus intrare permittunt. Quorum pestiferam concordiam adhuc apertius subdidit, dicens:

CAPUT XXXI.

VERS. 8. Una alteri adhaerebunt, et tenentes se nequaquam separabuntur. 55. Qui divisi vix corrigi poterant, quomodo emendabuntur uniti? Qui enim divisi corrigi poterant, in iniquitatum suarum pertinacia uniti perdurant, et tanto magis quotidie a cognitione justitiae separabiliores sunt, quanto a se invicem nulla increpatione separantur. Nam sicut esse noxium solet si unitas desit bonis, ita perniciosum est si non desit malis. Perversos quippe unitas corroborat, dum concordat; et tanto magis incorrigibiles, quanto unanimes facit. De hac unitate reproborum per Sapientem dicitur: Stuppa collecta, synagoga peccantium (Eccli. XXI, 10). De hac Nahum propheta ait: Sicut spinae invicem se complectuntur, sic convivium eorum pariter potantium (Nahum I, 10). Convivium namque reproborum est delectatio temporalium voluptatum. In quo nimirum convivio pariter potant qui delectationis suae illecebris 1109 se concorditer debriant. Igitur quia membra Leviathan istius, id est iniquos omnes, quos Dei sermo squamarum compactionibus comparat, ad defensionem suam par culpa concordat, bene dicitur: Una alteri adhaerebunt, et tenentes se nequaquam separabuntur. Tenentes enim se separari nequeunt, quia eo ad defensionem suam vicissim constricti sunt, quo se sibi per omnia similes esse meminerunt. Descripto itaque ejus corpore, ad caput sermo reducitur, et quid per semetipsum extremae persecutionis tempore antiquus hostis exerceat nuntiatur. Nam sequitur:

CAPUT XXXII [Vet.

XXXIV, Rec. XXV]. VERS. 9. Sternutatio ejus splendor ignis. 56. Quanta commotio ex Antichristi signis et virtutibus immineat. Quod melius exponimus, si prius sternutatio quomodo agatur indagemus. In sternutatione quippe inflatio a pectore exsurgit, quae cum apertos ad emanandum poros non invenit, cerebrum tangit, et congesta per nares exiens, totum caput protinus concutit. In hoc itaque Leviathan corpore, id est sive in malignis spiritibus, sive in reprobis hominibus, qui illi per similitudinem iniquitatis inhaeserunt, quasi inflatio surgit a pectore, dum elatio se erigit ex praesentis saeculi potestate. Quae quasi ad emanandum poros non invenit, quia in hoc quod contra justos extollitur, disponente Deo, quantum appetit praevalere prohibetur. Exsurgens autem cerebrum tangit et concutit, quia collecta elatio Satanae sensum in fine mundi arctius percutit, et caput turbat, dum ipsum auctorem malignorum spirituum per eum qui Antichristus dicitur in persecutione fidelium vehementius excitat. Tunc congesta inflatio per ejus nares egreditur, quia tota superbiae ejus iniquitas apertis malitiae flatibus demonstratur. Quia ergo sternutatio caput maxime concutit, Leviathan istius sternutatio vocatur illa ejus extrema commotio qua damnatum hominem ingreditur, et per eum reprobis principatur. Qui tanta tunc virtute se commovet, ut membra Domini, si potest fieri, etiam electa perturbet; tantis signis et prodigiis utitur, ut miraculorum potentia quasi quodam ignis lumine resplendere videatur. Quia ergo commotum caput illius miraculis clarescere nititur, recte ejus sternutatio splendor ignis vocatur. In eo enim quod se ad persequendos justos commovet, ante reproborum oculos signorum virtutibus lucet. Et quia ejus tyrannidi sapientes mundi adhaerent, eorumque consiliis omne quod pravum molitur exercet, recte subjungitur:

CAPUT XXXIII [Vet. XXXV].

IBID. Et oculi ejus ut palpebrae diluculi. 57. Oculi ejus, id est consiliarii, cur palpebris diluculi comparantur. Per oculos quippe, qui, inhaerentes capiti, utilitati visionis inserviunt, non immerito ejus consiliarii designantur, qui dum perversis machinationibus quae qualiter agenda sunt, praevident, malignis ejus operariis quasi ostensum pedibus iter praebent. Qui recte palpebris diluculi comparantur. Palpebras namque diluculi, extremas noctis horas accipimus, in quibus quasi nox oculos aperit, dum venturae lucis jam initia ostendit. Prudentes igitur saeculi, malitiae Antichristi perversis consiliis inhaerentes, quasi palpebrae sunt diluculi, quia fidem quam in Christo inveniunt quasi erroris noctem asserunt, et venerationem Antichristi verum esse mane pollicentur. Spondent enim se tenebras repellere et veritatis lucem signis clarescentibus 1110 nuntiare, quia nec persuadere quae volunt possunt, nisi exhibere se meliora fateantur. Unde hic ipse coluber in paradiso primis hominibus loquens (Genes. III, 5), in eo quod se melius aliquid providere simulavit, quasi diluculi palpebras aperuit, quando in innocentibus mentibus humanitatis ignorantiam reprehendit, et scientiam divinitatis promisit. Quasi ignorantiae enim tenebras repellebat, et aeternae scientiae divinum mane nuntiabat, dicens: Aperientur oculi vestri, et eritis sicut dii, scientes bonum et malum (Ibid.). Ita in illo tunc damnato homine veniens, ejus oculi palpebris diluculi comparantur, quia sapientes illius simplicitatem verae fidaei quasi transactae noctis tenebras respuunt, et ejus signa mendacia quasi exsurgentis solis radios ostendunt. Sed quia Leviathan iste non solum habet oculos qui malignis consiliis perversa provideant, sed os quoque ad pervertendas mentes hominum aperit, quoniam per praedicatores pravos ad diligendam erroris fallaciam auditorum corda succendit, apte subjungitur:

CAPUT XXXIV [Rec. XXVI].

VERS. 10. De ore ejus lampades procedunt. 58. Os Antichristi sunt ejus praedicatores. Qui enim provident oculi, qui autem praedicant os vocantur. Sed de hoc ore lampades exeunt, quia mentes audientium ad amorem perfidiae accendunt; et unde quasi per sapientiam lucent, inde procul dubio per nequitiam concremant. Sed qualis ipsa sapientia eorum lux sit ostenditur, cum protinus subinfertur:

CAPUT XXXV [Vet. XXXVI].

IBID. Sicut taedae ignis accensae. 59. Ardent per malitiam, lucent per virtutis simulationem. Ecce jam hypocrisis eorum aperte describitur quorum praedicatio taedarum lampadibus comparatur. Taeda enim cum accenditur odorem quidem suavem habet, sed lumen obscurum. Ita isti praedicatores Antichristi, quia sanctitatis sibi speciem arrogant, sed tamen opera iniquitatis exercent, quasi blandum quidem est quod redolent, sed nigrum quod lucent. Olent enim per simulationem justitiae, sed obscurum ardent per nequitiae perpetrationem. Quorum simulationis malitiam Joannes in Apocalypsi brevi descriptione comprehendit, dicens: Vidi aliam bestiam ascendentem de terra, habentem duo cornua similia agni, et loquebatur ut draco (Apoc. XIII, 11). Priorem quippe bestiam, id est Antichristum superiore jam descriptione narraverat; post quem etiam haec alia bestia ascendisse dicitur, quia post eum multitudo praedicatorum illius ex terrena potestate gloriatur. De terra quippe ascendere est de terrena gloria superbire. Quae habet duo cornua agni similia, quia per hypocrisim sanctitatis eam quam in se veraciter Dominus habuit singularem sibi inesse et sapientiam mentitur et vitam. Sed quia sub agni specie auditoribus reprobis serpentinum virus infundit, recte illic subditur: Et loquebatur ut draco. Ista ergo bestia, id est praedicantium multitudo, si aperte ut draco loqueretur, agno similis non appareret; sed assumit agni speciem, ut draconis exerceat operationem. Quod hic utrumque per taedarum lampades exprimitur, quia et obscurum ardent per effectum malitiae, et quasi suave redolent per simulationem vitae. 60. Multi jam exstant Antichristi praedicatores. Eorum vita exploranda ut moneta. Antiquorum patrum institutis concordet. Sed nequaquam aestimandum est quod tunc solum Antichristi praedicatores apparebunt, et nunc ab humanis deceptionibus desunt. Modo 1111 namque priusquam per semetipsum appareat, nonnulli illum vocibus, plerique autem moribus praedicant. An praedicatores simulationis illius non sunt, qui cum sacros Dei ordines obtinent, fugientem totis desideriis mundum tenent; qui virtutes esse ostendunt quae faciunt, sed vitium est omne quod agunt? [Vet. XXXVII.] Sed electorum mens quanto magis internae luci inhaeret, tanto subtilius quo modo virtutes a vitiis discernere debeat videt. Quid autem mirum est hoc nos spiritaliter agere quod quotidie corporaliter cernimus nummularios implere? Qui cum numisma percipiunt, prius qualitatem illius, post figuram, ad extremum vero pondus examinant, ne aut sub auri specie aes lateat, aut hoc quod veraciter aurum est monetae reprobae figura dehonestet; aut quod et aurum, et rectae figurae est, hoc non integrum pondus legivet. Cum igitur mira ignotorum hominum facta conspicimus, residere ad mentis nostrae trutinam quasi solertes nummularii debemus, ut prius discretio aurum examinet, ne sub virtute se vitium occultet, et quod prava intentione agitur, recti visione pallietur. Cujus si intentionis qualitas approbatur, impressae mox formulae figura quaerenda est, si a probatis monetariis, id est ab antiquis patribus ducitur, et ab eorum vitae similitudine nullo errore vitiatur. Cum vero et per intentionem qualitas, et recta per exemplum figura cognoscitur, restat ut integrum ejus pondus exquiratur. Bonum quippe quod per signa et miracula coruscat, si perfectionis summam non habet, pensari sollicite per cautelam circumspectionis debet, ne dum imperfecta res quasi pro perfecta accipitur, in accipientis damnum vertatur. Praedicatores itaque Antichristi quomodo veram numismatis qualitatem tenent, qui in his quae agunt intentionis rectae vim nesciunt, quia per haec non coelestem patriam, sed culmen gloriae temporalis exquirunt? Quomodo a monetae figura non discrepant, qui ab omni pietate justorum justos persequendo discordant? Quomodo in se integritatis pondus ostendunt, qui non solum humilitatis perfectionem nequaquam assecuti sunt, sed neque ipsam primam ejus januam contigerunt? Hinc ergo, hinc electi cognoscant quomodo eorum signa despiciant, quorum profecto actio omne quod a piis patribus gestum memoratur impugnat. Sed ipsi quoque electi dum tot signa conspiciunt, dum contemnentes vitam tanta ejus miracula perhorrescunt, quoddam dubietatis nubilum in corde patiuntur, quia dum se per prodigia illius malitia elevat, in istis aliquatenus visus certior caligat. Unde recte subditur:

CAPUT XXXVI [Rec. XXVII].

VERS. 11. De naribus ejus procedit fumus. 61. Visis Antichristi prodigiis, electi turbabuntur et titubabunt. Ut in errore plene capiantur fieri non potest. Oculorum quippe acies fumo sauciatur. Fumus ergo de ejus naribus procedere dicitur, quia de miraculorum ejus insidiis ad momentum caliginosa dubietas etiam in electorum corde generatur. De Leviathan naribus fumus exit, quia ex ejus prodigiis mendacibus etiam bonarum mentium oculos trepidationis caligo confundit. Tunc namque in electorum cordibus conspectis terribilibus signis, obscura cogitatio conglobatur. Unde 1112 hoc quod jam supra protulimus veritatis ore per Evangelium dicitur: Surgent pseudochristi et pseudoprophetae, et dabunt signa et prodigia, ita ut in errorem inducantur, si fieri potest, etiam electi (Marc. XIII, 22). Qua in re valde quaerendum est quomodo aut hi qui electi sunt induci in errorem possunt, aut cur Si fieri potest quasi ex dubietate subditur, cum quid faciendum sit Dominus omnia praesciens praestolatur. Sed quia electorum cor et trepida cogitatione concutitur, et tamen eorum constantia non movetur, una hac sententia Dominus utrumque complexus est, dicens: Ita ut in errorem inducantur, si fieri potest, etiam electi. Quasi enim jam errare est in cogitatione titubare; sed protinus Si fieri potest subjungitur, quia procul dubio fieri non potest ut in errore plene electi capiantur. Bene autem in hac fumi caligine ipse etiam animorum fervor exprimitur cum protinus subinfertur:

CAPUT XXXVII.

IBID. Sicut ollae succensae atque ferventis. 62. Quanto tunc zelo aestuabunt. Quid diabolus fumo pestiferi halitus, in humanis cordibus operetur. Deus nisi a tranquillo corde cognosci non potest. Velut enim olla fervens est unaquaeque tunc anima, cogitationum suarum impetus quasi spumas ardentium undarum sustinens, quas et ignis zeli commovet, et ipsa temporalis oppressio more ollae intrinsecus clausas tenet. Unde Joannes quoque cum hujus bestiae signa narraret, adjunxit: Ita ut ignem faciat de coelo descendere (Apoc. XIII, 13). Ignem quippe de coelo descendere est de coelestibus electorum animis sancti zeli flammas emanare. [Vet. XXXVIII.] Quia vero Leviathan iste alias non solum serpens, sed etiam regulus dicitur, pro eo quod immundis spiritibus, vel reprobis hominibus principatur, sicut

Isaias ait: De radice colubri egredietur regulus (Isai. XIV, 29), inspiciendum nobis summopere est qualiter regulus perimat, ut, ex operatione reguli, hujus nobis malitia apertius innotescat. Regulus namque non morsu perimit, sed flatu consumit. Saepe quoque aerem flatu afficit, et quidquid vel positum longe contigerit sola narium inspiratione tabefacit. 63. Hinc, ergo, hinc pensare compellimur, per hoc quod de naribus ejus fumus procedere dicitur, etiam priusquam apertus appareat, quid quotidie in humanis cordibus fumo pestiferae exhalationis operetur. Quia enim, sicut et superius diximus, fumo oculorum acies infirmatur, non immerito de ejus naribus fumus procedere asseritur, cujus noxiis inspirationibus prava in humanis cordibus cogitatio nascitur, per quam acies mentis obtunditur, ne lux interna videatur. Quasi enim flatu narium caliginem emittit, quia in reproborum cordibus insidiarum suarum aspirationibus ex amore vitae temporalis aestum congerit multiplicium cogitationum. Et velut fumi globos multiplicat, quia inanissimas praesentis vitae curas in terrenorum hominum mente coacervat. Iste fumus ex ejus naribus prodiens aliquando ad tempus etiam electorum oculos tangit. Hunc namque intrinsecus fumum patiebatur Propheta, cum dixit: Turbatus est prae ira oculus meus (Psal. VI, 8). Hujus inundatione premebatur, dicens: Cor meum conturbatum est in me, et lumen oculorum meorum non est mecum (Psal. XXXVII, 11). Fumus quippe iste obtundit aciem cordis, quia caliginis suae nubilo serenitatem intimae turbat quietis. 1113 Cognosci vero nisi tranquillo corde non potest Deus. Unde per eumdem prophetam rursus dicitur: Vacate et videte quoniam ego sum Deus (Psal. XLV, 11). Vacare autem mens non potest quae hujus fumi inundationibus premitur, quia in ea terrenarum cogitationum volumina ex praesentis vitae amore glomerantur. Lumen ergo quietis internae hoc fumo amittitur, quia curarum prurigine cordis oculus dum confunditur tenebratur. 64. Iste fumus aliter electorum mentes turbat, aliter reproborum oculos excaecat. Sed fumus iste aliter electorum animos turbat, aliter reproborum oculos excaecat. A bonorum quippe oculis spiritalium desideriorum flatu respergitur, ne praevalente misera cogitatione densetur. In reproborum vero mentibus quo se licentius per tetras cogitationes colligit, eo ab eis funditus veritatis lumen tollit. Fumus iste reproborum cordibus quot illicita desideria ingerit, quasi per tot ante illos globos intumescit. [Vet. XXXIX.] 65. In carnali anima, alii fumi concupiscentiae globi superius inanescunt, alii inferius surgunt. Vitia vitiis succedunt. Et certe fumi globos novimus, quia cum alii superius inanescunt, alii inferius surgunt; sic et in cogitatione carnali, etsi alia pravitatis desideria transeunt, alia succedunt. Saepe autem mens misera quid jam transierit videt, sed ubi adhuc retineatur non videt. Gaudet de quibusdam vitiis quod eis subjecta jam non sit, et praecavere ac gemere negligit, quia eorum vice successerunt alia, quibus fortasse nequius succumbit; sicque fit ut dum alia vitia transeunt, et semper alia succedunt, ab hoc serpente cor reproborum sine intermissione teneatur. Unde bene per Joel prophetam dicitur: Residuum erucae comedit locusta, et residuum locustae comedit bruchus, et residuum bruchi comedit rubigo. Expergiscimini ebrii, et flete (Joel. I, 4, 5). Quid enim per erucam, quae toto corpore in terra repit, nisi luxuria designatur? quae cor quod tenet, ita polluit, ut in superioris munditiae surgere amorem non possit. Quid per locustam quae saltibus evolat, nisi inanis gloria exprimitur, quae se vanis praesumptionibus exaltat? Quid per bruchum, cujus pene totum corpus in ventrem colligitur, nisi edendi ingluvies figuratur? Quid per rubiginem, quae dum tangit incendit, nisi ira innuitur? Residuum ergo erucae locusta comedit, quia saepe cum luxuriae vitium a mente recesserit, inanis gloria succedit. Nam quia jam per amorem cordis non sternitur, quasi sanctam se ex castitate gloriatur. Et residuum locustae bruchus comedit, quia saepe cum inani gloriae, quae quasi ex sanctitate veniebat, resistitur, vel ventri vel quibuslibet ambitionis desideriis immoderatius indulgetur. Mens enim Dei nescia, tanto atrocius ad quemlibet ambitum ducitur, quanto nullo vel humanae laudis amore refrenatur. Residuum bruchi rubigo consumit, quia saepe dum ventris ingluvies per abstinentiam restringitur, irae impatientia acrius dominatur; quae more rubiginis quasi exurendo messem comedit, quia virtutum fructus impatientiae flamma tabefacit. Cum ergo vitia vitiis succedunt, agrum mentis alia pestis devorat, dum alia relinquit. [Vet. XL.] 66. Ebrii sunt qui mundi hujus amore turbati, mala quae patiuntur non sentiunt. Bene autem illic subditur: Expergiscimini ebrii, et flete (Ibid.). Ebrii quippe vocati sunt qui, mundi hujus amore confusi, mala non sentiunt quae patiuntur. Quid est ergo dicere: Expergiscimini, ebrii, 1114 et flete (Joel. I, 5), nisi somnum vestrae insensibilitatis excutite, et, in devastatione cordis tot sibi succedentibus vitiorum pestibus, vigilantibus lamentis obviate? Per tot igitur globos de Leviathan naribus fumus surgit, per quot nimirum pestes frugem cordis reprobi occulta aspiratione consumit. Cujus adhuc fumi vim sollicite Dominus exprimit, cum illico subjungit: Sicut ollae succensae atque ferventis. Olla enim succenditur cum mens humana maligni hostis suasionibus instigatur. Olla autem fervet cum jam etiam per consensum in desideriis pravae persuasionis accenditur. Et tot undas quasi fervendo projicit, per quot se nequitias usque ad exteriora opera extendit. Hunc namque carnalis conscientiae, id est ollae fervorem, ex Leviathan fumo venientem propheta conspexerat, cum dicebat: Ollam succensam ego video, et faciem ejus a facie Aquilonis (Jerem. I, 13). Ab Aquilonis namque facie humani cordis olla succenditur, dum instigatione adversarii spiritus illicitis desideriis inflammatur. Ille namque qui ait: Sedebo in monte testamenti, in lateribus Aquilonis (Isai. XIV, 13), mentem quam semel ceperit malignis persuasionis suae flatibus, quasi suppositis ignibus, accendit, quatenus, non contenta praesentibus, indesinenter per desideria aestuet, ut alia contemnenda appetat, alia adepta contemnat: ut modo suis compendiis inhiet, modo alienis commodis etiam cum proprio detrimento contradicat, modo carnis illecebris satisfaciat, modo quasi in quodam culmine per cogitationis superbiam rapta, carnali cura postposita, totam se in typho elationis attollat. Quia ergo cor per varia desideria abducitur, quod instigationibus Leviathan istius inflammatur, recte ejus fumus succensae et ferventi ollae similis esse perhibetur, quia per tot se fervores afflata ejus tentationibus conscientia erigit, per quot intra se cogitationes intumescit. Quod verbis aliis adhuc veritas apertius exsequitur, dum subjungitur:

CAPUT XXXVIII [Rec. XXVIII].

VERS. 12. Halitus ejus prunas ardere facit. 67. Carnalis mens, tanquam pruna flatu diaboli inflammata. Quid enim prunas nisi succensas in terrenis concupiscentiis reproborum hominum mentes appellat? Ardent enim cum quodlibet temporale appetunt, quia nimirum urunt desideria quae quietum ac integrum esse animum non permittunt. Toties igitur Leviathan halitus prunas accendit, quoties ejus occulta suggestio humanas mentes ad delectationes illicitas pertrahit. Alias namque superbiae, alias invidiae, alias luxuriae, alias avaritae facibus inflammat. Superbiae quippe facem menti Evae supposuit, cum hanc ad contemnenda verba dominicae jussionis instigavit (Genes. III, 5). Invidiae quoque flamma Cain animum succendit, cum de accepto fratris sacrificio doluit, et per hoc usque ad fratricidii facinus pervenit (Genes. IV, 8). Luxuriae facibus cor Salomonis exussit, quem tanto mulieribus amore subdidit, ut, usque ad idolorum venerationem deductus, dum carnis delectationem sequeretur, conditoris reverentiae oblivisceretur (III Reg. XI, 4). Avaritiae quoque igne Achab animum concremavit, cum eum ad appetendam alienam vineam impatientibus desideriis impulit, et per hoc usque ad reatum homicidii pertraxit (III Reg. XXI). Tanto igitur Leviathan iste halitu in prunis flat, 1115 quanto annisu suggestionis occultae humanas mentes ad illicita inflammat. Unde et bene mox subditur:

CAPUT XXXIX [Vet.

XLI] IBID. Et flamma de ore ejus egreditur. 68. Per Antichristum ardentius saeviet. Non comburit nisi lignum, fenum, stipulam. Ejus flammam exstinguunt lacrymae. Flamma quippe oris ejus est ipsa instigatio occultae locutionis. Pravae enim suasionis verba ad uniuscujusque animum facit, sed flamma est quod de ejus ore egreditur, quia ardet in desideriis animus cum ejus suggestionibus instigatur. Haec quotidie suggerit, haec usque ad praesentis vitae terminum suggerere non desistit; sed tunc se nequius dilatat, cum per illum damnatum hominem veniens, in hujus mundi se gloria apertius ostentat. Tunc ab ejus naribus vastior fumus procedit, quia humana corda signorum ejus admirationibus territa amplior instigatio percutit. Tunc ejus halitus vehementius prunas ardere facit, quia reproborum mentes, quas jam calentes amore gloriae temporalis invenerit, 1116 suggestionis suae flatibus usque ad nequitiam exercendae crudelitatis incendit. Tunc de ore ejus flamma egreditur, quia quidquid per se, quidquid per praedicatores suos loquitur, ignis est quo infructuosa ligna concremantur. Igne autem terrenae concupiscentiae eorum mens tangitur, qui nequaquam fieri pretiosa metalla concupiscunt. Qui ergo oris ejus non vult flamma affici, juxta doctoris veri sententiam, non lignum, fenum, stipula, sed aurum, argentum, et pretiosus lapis curet inveniri (I Cor. III, 12), quia tanto ignis suasionis illius amplius incendit, quanto se ei ad consentiendum molliorem quisque praebuerit. Sed quia nulla ratione conceditur ut mens in hac corruptibili carne posita nequaquam suasionis illius ardore tangatur, restat ut malignis flatibus adusta, ad orationis opem se sine cessatione convertat. Flammam quippe suggestionum illius exstinguit citius unda lacrymarum.

LIBER TRIGESIMUS QUARTUS.

CAPUT PRIMUM.

1. Senescente mundo, tribulationes cum temporibus crescunt. Diabolus tanto acrius saevit, quanto poenae consummationi est vicinior. Quia ex hoc mundo corpus gerimus, universitatis terminum ex ea qua nos sumus parte pensemus. Citius quippe qualis sit mundi finis agnoscimus, si sollicite aspicimus hoc quod de mundo gestamus. Aetas etenim nostra per juveniles annos robustius viget, in senili autem tempore crebrescentibus morbis excoquitur; et dum diutius distenditur ut subsistat, moriendi vice quotidie deficit per momenta vivendi. Ita etiam mundi tempus dum venientibus annis augetur, crebrescentibus malis afficitur; et unde aetatis augmentum percipit, inde salutis dispendium sentit. Tribulationes namque illi cum temporibus crescunt, et eo detrimenta vitae debilior tolerat, quo quasi ad vitam provectior durat. Totis enim contra illum hostis antiquus viribus solvitur, qui quamvis jam nunc interiit pro eo quod supernae conditionis beatitudinem amisit, tunc tamen plenius exstinguitur, quando, et a tentandi licentia abstractus, aeternis incendiis religatur. Unde et extrema mundi atrocius tentaturus aggreditur, quia tanto fit ferventior ad saevitiam, quanto se viciniorem sentit ad poenam. Considerat quippe quod juxta sit ut licentiam nequissimae libertatis amittat, et quantum brevitate temporis angustatur, tantum multiplicitate crudelitatis expanditur, sicut de illo voce angelica ad Joannem dicitur: Vae terrae et mari, quia descendit diabolus ad vos habens iram magnam, sciens quod modicum tempus habet (Apoc. XII, 12). Tunc ergo in magnae irae fervorem se dilatat, ne qui in beatitudine stare non potuit, in damnationis suae foveam cum paucis ruat. Tunc quidquid nequiter valuerit, callidius exquirit; tunc cervicem superbiae altius erigit, et per damnatum illum quem gestat hominem omne quod temporaliter praevalet nequiter ostendit. Unde et divina voce recte nunc dicitur:

CAPUT II [Rec. II].

VERS. 13. In collo ejus morabitur fortitudo. 2. Superbiae Antichristi accedet explendae nequitiae potestas. Quid enim collo Leviathan istus, nisi elationis extensio designatur? qua. contra Deum se erigens, cum simulatione sanctitatis etiam tumore potestatis extollitur. Quia enim per collum superbia exprimitur, Isaias propheta testatur, qui Jerusalem filias redarguit, dicens: Ambulaverunt extento collo (Isai. III, 16). In collo ergo Leviathan istius fortitudo demorari dicitur, quia elationi illius etiam subjuncta potentia suffragatur. Nam quidquid tunc superbe extollitur, quidquid callide machinatur, etiam cum virtute potentiae saecularis exsequitur. Quod Daniel propheta intuens, ait: Dolus in manu ejus dirigetur (Dan. VIII, 25). Dolus quippe in manu ejus est fraus in virtute, quia omne quod nequiter vult, hoc ad tempus exsequi etiam fortiter potest. Dolus vero ejus dirigi dicitur, quia fraudis ejus malitia nulla difficultate praepeditur. Hoc enim Leviathan iste vel vasa ejus habere crebro proprium solent, quod ad iniquitatis suae cumulum ea quae nequiter appetunt explere nequius possunt. 3. Divini muneris est erga electos, quod cogitatum malum perpetrare nequeant. Nam cum fortasse infirmantur electi, atque in desideriis illicitis ruunt, in hoc plerumque divini muneris manu retinentur, quod voluntatis miserae nullos effectus inveniunt. Cumque eorum votis valida contrarietas nascitur, plerumque ex ipsa impossibilitate corriguntur, et miro internae dispositionis ordine, per conversionem mutatio malae voluntatis sequitur, dum per infirmitatem perfectio denegatur. Hinc est enim quod, sub specie uniuscujusque animae, de infirmante Judaea, atque in pravis itineribus gradiente, per prophetam Dominus dicit: Ecce ego sepiam viam tuam 1117 spinis, et sepiam eam maceria, et semitas suas non inveniet, et sequetur amatores suos, et non apprehendet eos, et quaeret eos, et non inveniens dicet: Vadam et revertar ad virum meum priorem, quia mihi bene erat tunc magis quam nunc (Osee, II, 6). Spinis enim electorum viae sepiuntur, dum dolorem punctionis inveniunt in hoc quod temporaliter concupiscunt. Quasi interposita maceria viis eorum obviat, quorum nimirum desideria perfectionis difficultas impugnat. Horum profecto animae amatores suos quaerunt, et non inveniunt, dum sequendo malignos spiritus, nequaquam eas quas appetunt hujus saeculi voluptates apprehendunt. Bene autem subditur quod ex ipsa difficultate mox dicat: Vadam et revertar ad virum meum priorem, quia bene mihi erat tunc magis quam nunc (Matth. XII, 44). Prior quippe vir Dominus est, qui castam sibi animam sancti Spiritus interposito amore conjunxit. Quem tunc mens uniuscujusque desiderat, cum multiplices amaritudines velut quasdam spinas invenit in iis delectationibus quas temporaliter concupiscit. Nam dum adversitatibus mundi quem diligit morderi anima coeperit, tunc plenius intelligit quanto illi cum priore viro melius fuit. 4. Quos voluntas prava pervertit, saepe corrigit adversitas. Eos ergo quos voluntas prava pervertit, plerumque adversitas corrigit. Unde et nimis timendum est ne sequantur prospera cum desiderantur injusta, quia difficilius malum corrigitur, quod perfectionis etiam prosperitate fulcitur. Leviathan itaque iste qui cum membris suis aeternis est cruciatibus deputatus, et dolus in manu ejus dirigitur, et in collo ejus fortitudo demoratur, quia hoc quod temporaliter perversa contra bonos voluntate desiderat, perversiore facultate consummat, ut tanto ei de adversitate in praesenti nil obstet, quanto ei in posterum de prosperitate nihil remanet. Et quia omnis qui perversis moribus amicitiis ejus innotescit prius veras mentis divitias amittit, apte subjungitur:

CAPUT III [Vet.

II, Rec. III]. IBID. Et faciem ejus praecedet egestas. 5. Electorum paupertas est coelestes divitias amisisse. Per faciem quippe solet notitia designari. Unde scriptum est: Et facies mea praecedet te (Exod. XXXIII, 14), id est notitia ducatum praebebit. Sciendum vero est quod egestas in sacro eloquio aliter electorum ponitur, atque aliter reproborum. Egestas namque electorum est, cum verae divitiae coelestis patriae ad eorum animum redeunt, et in hoc aerumnoso praesentis vitae exsilio positi, pauperes se esse meminerunt. Illas quippe divitias sine cessatione suspirant, de quibus Paulus dicit: Ut sciatis quae sit spes vocationis ejus, et quae divitiae gloriae haereditatis ejus in sanctis (Ephes. I, 18). Et quia adhuc eas nequaquam conspiciunt, studiose interim in aerumna istius paupertatis gemunt. Hanc procul dubio paupertatem Jeremias inspexerat, cum dicebat: Ego vir videns paupertatem meam in virga indignationis ejus (Thren. III, 1). Virga enim indignationis Dei est percussio districtionis. Quam indignationem tunc homo pertulit, cum ex paradiso pulsus, veras interni gaudii divitias amisit (Genes. III, 24). Sed quia electi quique incessanter conspiciunt quod in praesentis vitae penuriam ab illa potestatis ingenitae facultate ceciderunt, bene dicitur: Ego vir videns paupertatem meam (Thren. III, 1). Quisquis enim haec adhuc visibilia appetit, peregrinationis suae malum 1118 non intelligit, et hoc ipsum quod patitur videre nescit. Hanc paupertatem David propheta intuens, ait: Infirmata est in paupertate virtus mea (Psal. XXX, 11). In paupertate etenim virtus infirmari dicitur, quia lapsus in hac peregrinatione animus, et corruptionis suae molestiis reverberatus, hoc quod perdidit contemplari praepeditur. 6. Hanc paupertatem reprobi nesciunt. Virtutum divitiis vacuantur, nec intelligunt. Sed hanc paupertatem reprobi considerare nesciunt, quia dum sequuntur ea quae conspiciunt, cogitare invisibilia negligunt quae perdiderunt. Unde et egestas eorum proprie dicitur, quia dum replentur vitiis, virtutum divitiis vacuantur. Quibus saepe evenit ut per elationis dementiam sublevati, dum nequaquam ruinae suae damna considerant, esse se etiam a bonis actionibus inopes non cognoscant. Unde voce angelica praedicatori Laodiceae dicitur: Dicis quod dives sum, et locupletatus, et nullius egeo, et nescis quia tu es miser, et miserabilis, et pauper, et caecus, et nudus (Apoc. III, 17). Quasi divitem se asserit, qui per arrogantiam sanctitatis extollitur, sed pauper, caecusque et nudus arguitur. Pauper utique, quia virtutum divitias non habet; caecus, quia nec paupertatem quam patitur videt; nudus, quia primam stolam perdidit, sed pejus, quia nec se perdidisse cognoscit. Quia ergo, ut diximus, egestas reproborum est defraudatio meritorum, recte de Leviathan dicitur: Faciem ejus praecedet egestas. Nemo quippe cognitioni ejus jungitur, nisi prius virtutum divitiis denudetur. Prius enim bonas cogitationes subtrahit, et tunc eis apertiorem notitiam suae iniquitatis infundit. Egestas ergo faciem illius praecedere dicitur, quia prius facultas virium perditur, ut quasi per familiaritatem postmodum ejus notitia cognoscatur. Vel certe quia multis ita fraudulenter subrepit, ut ab eis deprehendi nequaquam possit, et sic eorum virtutes evacuat, quatenus astutiae suae malitiam non ostendat, faciem ejus egestas praeire perhibetur, ac si aperte diceretur, quia cum insidians tentat, priusquam videatur exspoliat. Hinc est enim quod de Ephraim per prophetam dicitur: Comederunt alieni robur ejus, et ipse ignoravit (Osee VII, 9). Alieni quippe intelligi apostatae angeli solent, qui robur comedunt, dum virtutem mentis pervertendo consumunt. Quod Ephraim et pertulit, et nescivit, quia in tentatione malignorum spirituum et robur animae perdidit, et hoc ipsum quia perdiderit non intellexit. Leviathan ergo faciem egestas antecedit, quia negligentium mentes ante tentando spoliat, quam ejus insidias is qui tentatur agnoscat. Per hoc ergo quod dictum est: In collo ejus morabitur fortitudo, virtus violentiae ostenditur. Per hoc vero quod subditur: Et faciem ejus praecedet egestas; fraudis subtilitas designatur. 7. Ante adventum Antichristi, virtutum signa Ecclesiae subtrahentur, aut pauca supererunt. Quamvis de eo quod ejus faciem egestatem praeire cognoscimus, suppetit aliud quod tamen tristius exponamus. Terribili quippe ordine dispositionis occultae, priusquam Leviathan iste in illo damnato homine quem assumit appareat, a sancta Ecclesia virtutum signa subtrahuntur. Nam prophetia absconditur, curationum gratia aufertur, prolixioris abstinentiae virtus imminuitur, doctrinae verba conticescunt, miraculorum prodigia tolluntur. Quae quidem nequaquam superna dispensatio 1119 funditus subtrahit, sed non haec sicut prioribus temporibus aperte ac multipliciter ostendit. Quod tamen mira dispensatione agitur, ut una ex re divina simul pietas et justitia compleatur. Dum enim subtractis signorum virtutibus sancta Ecclesia velut abjectior apparet, et bonorum praemium crescit, qui illam pro spe coelestium, et non propter praesentia signa venerantur, et malorum mens contra illam citius ostenditur, qui sequi quae promittit invisibilia negligunt, dum signis visibilibus non tenentur. Dum igitur humilitas fidelium multitudine et manifestatione signorum quasi destituitur, terribili occultae dispositionis examine inde bonis misericordia largior, unde malis justa ira cumulatur. Quia ergo Leviathan iste priusquam manifestus et conspicuus veniat ex magna parte in sancta Ecclesia signa virtutum cessant, recte nunc dicitur: Faciem ejus praecedet egestas. Ante enim a fidelibus miraculorum divitiae subtrahuntur, et tunc contra eos antiquus ille hostis per aperta prodigia ostenditur, ut quo ipse per signa extollitur, eo a fidelibus sine signis robustius laudabiliusque vincatur. Quamvis etiam fidelibus in ejus certamine signa non deerunt, sed tanta erunt illius, ut nostrorum aut pauca, aut nulla videantur. Quorum nimirum virtus omnibus signis fit potior, cum omne quod ab illo terribiliter fieri conspicit, per internae constantiae calcem premit. Sed malignus hostis tanto contra eos acriori immanitate se exhibet, quanto se despici etiam clarescentibus miraculis dolet. Totum ergo se in eorum interitum colligit, cunctosque reprobos in necem fidelium unanimi crudelitate conjungit, ut saevitiam suam tanto robustius exerat, quanto et in eis quae perverse agere appetit, nulla sibi sui corporis membra discordant. Unde et recte dicitur:

CAPUT IV [Rec. IV].

VERS. 14. Membra carnium ejus cohaerentia sibi. 8. Reproborum cum Satana et inter se noxia concordia. Carnes vero Leviathan istius sunt omnes reprobi, qui ad intellectum spiritalis patriae per desiderium non assurgunt. Membra vero sunt carnium hi qui eisdem perverse agentibus, et sese ad iniquitatem praecedentibus junguntur, sicut e contra per Paulum dominico corpori dicitur: Vos estis corpus Christi, et membra de membro (I Cor. XII, 27). Aliud quippe est membrum corporis, aliud membrum membri. Membrum quippe corporis pars ad totum, membrum vero membri est particula ad partem. Membrum namque membri est digitus ad manum, manus ad brachium; membrum vero est corporis totum hoc simul ad corpus universum. Sicut ergo in spiritali dominico corpore membra de membro dicimus eos qui in ejus Ecclesia ab aliis reguntur, ita in illa Leviathan istius reproba congregatione membra sunt carnium qui iniquo opere quibusdam se nequioribus junguntur. Sed quia hostis malignus sibi in perverso opere a primis usque ad extrema concordat, divinus sermo in eo membra carnium sibimet cohaerentia memorat. Sic namque perversa unanimiter sentiunt, ut nulla contra se vicissim disputatione dividantur. Nulla eos diversitatis altercatio tunc scindit, et idcirco contra bonos vehementer praevalent, quia in malo se concorditer tenent. [Vet. III.] Sicut enim jam superius diximus (Lib. XXXIII, num. 55), 1120 ut perniciosum est si unitas desit bonis, ita perniciosius est si non desit malis. Reproborum quippe unitas bonorum viam tanto durius praepedit quanto ei se per collectionem durior opponit. 9. Hanc unitatem dissolvere licet, exemplo Pauli. Hanc unitatem reproborum perniciosam sibi Paulus conspexerat, cum in medio Sadducaeorum Pharisaeorumque deprehensus dicebat: De spe et resurrectione mortuorum ego judicor (Act. XXIII, 6). Qua nimirum voce percussa, protinus contra se vicissim audientium turba dissiluit. Cumque in duas partes tumultuantium multitudo dividitur, Paulo via ereptionis aperitur, quia quem turba persequentium unita constrinxerat, divisa laxabat. Eripiuntur ergo justi dum dividuntur injusti, et electorum vota ad perfectum perveniunt dum reproborum agmina per discordiam confunduntur. Quod bene etiam maris Rubri scissione designatur (Exod. XIV, 21, seq.). Dum enim in duas partes unda dividitur, ab electo populo ad terram repromissionis tenditur, quia dum malorum unitas scinditur, bonae mentes ad hoc quod appetunt perducuntur. Si malorum unitas noxia non fuisset, nequaquam divina providentia superbientium linguas in tanta diversitate dissipasset (Genes. XI, 8). Si malorum unitas noxia non fuisset, de sanctae Ecclesiae hostibus Propheta non diceret: Praecipita, Domine, et divide linguas eorum (Psal. LIV, 10). Quia ergo Leviathan iste tunc contra electos Dei in suis viribus effrenatur, ad augmentum suae malitiae unitatem quoque in reprobis habere permittitur, ut tanto contra nos robustius vires suas exerat, quanto non solum nos ictu fortitudinis, sed etiam mole adunationis impugnat. Sed quis contra ista sufficiat? Quae mens ad tantae elationis et compagis pondera non ab ipsa cogitationum radice contremiscat? Unde quia trepidare nos per infirmitatem conspicit, protinus divina clementia quid per semetipsam faciat? adjungit. Nam sequitur:

CAPUT V [Rec. V].

IBID. Mittet contra eum fulmina, et ad locum alium non ferentur. 16. Fulmine conterentur in judicio, justis illaesis et gaudentibus. Quid appellatione fulminum nisi tremendae illae extremi judicii sententiae designantur? Quae idcirco fulmina vocantur, quia nimirum eos quos feriunt in perpetuum incendunt. Fulmina namque super eum Paulus venire conspexerat, cum dicebat: Quem Dominus Jesus interficiet spiritu oris sui, et destruet illustratione adventus sui (II Thess. II, 8). Haec autem quae in eum mittuntur fulmina, ad locum alium non feruntur, quia justis gaudentibus, solos tunc reprobos feriunt. Nam post trituram vitae praesentis, in qua nunc triticum sub paleis gemit, ita illo extremi judicii ventilabro inter triticum paleasque discernitur, ut nec in tritici horreum paleae transeant, nec in palearum ignem horrei grana delabantur. Illa ergo fulmina locum alium nequaquam tangunt, quia videlicet igne suo non grana, sed paleas incendunt. Sed quia Leviathan istum poena non corrigit, insinuat dum subjungit:

CAPUT VI [Rec. VI].

VERS. 15. Cor ejus indurabitur quasi lapis. 11. Satanae impoenitentia. Incudi similis optime dicitur. Cor enim antiqui hostis ut lapis indurabitur, quia nulla unquam conversionis poenitentia mollietur. Qui quia solis ictibus aeternae ultionis aptabitur, recte protinus subinfertur: IBID. Et stringetur quasi malleatoris incus. 1121 Incudem quippe malleator solis aptam percussionibus figit. Ad hoc namque incus statuitur, ut crebris ictibus feriatur. Leviathan ergo ut malleatoris incus stringitur, quia inferni vinculis coarctabitur, ut aeterni supplicii continua percussione tundatur. Qui modo quoque percutitur, dum justi quique, illo in insidiis vigilante, sed doloribus tabescente, salvantur. In incude autem alia vasa formantur, ipsa vero tot percussionibus in vas aliud non transfertur. Recte ergo Leviathan iste incudi comparatus est, quia nos illo persequente componimur, ipse autem et semper percutitur, et in vas utile nunquam mutatur. Aeternae illum percussioni relinquimus, et nos, superni artificis manu in ejus tentatione percussi, per illum quasi vascula formata transimus. In ipso enim tundimur, sed ut ad usum domus supernae veniamus. Ipse vero quasi incus stringitur, quia etsi nunc tentando mundum circuit, in inferno tamen positus, jam sub ictu sententiae non vagatur. Sequitur:

CAPUT VII [Rec. VII].

VERS. 16. Cum sublatus fuerit, timebunt angeli, et territi purgabuntur. 12. Reprobis angelis cadentibus, territi sunt boni, et timore solidati. Scriptura sacra ita nonnunquam tempus praeteritum futurumque permiscet, ut aliquando futuro pro praeterito, aliquando vero utatur praeterito pro futuro. Futuro namque pro praeterito utitur cum Joanni mulier paritura masculum, qui regat gentes in virga ferrea, demonstratur (Apoc. XII, 5). Quod quia incarnato Domino veniente jam tunc factum fuerat, res gesta nuntiabatur. Rursum praeterito utitur pro futuro, sicut per Psalmistam Dominus loquitur, dicens: Foderunt manus meas et pedes meos, dinumeraverunt omnia ossa mea (Psal. XXI, 18). Quibus videlicet verbis species dominicae passionis quasi jam transacta describitur, sed tamen adhuc longe post futura nuntiatur. Hoc ergo loco quo dicitur: Cum sublatus fuerit, timebunt angeli, nil obstat intelligi quia sub futuri temporis modo praeterita describuntur. Nec rectae intelligentiae sensum relinquimus, si credamus Leviathan isto ab arce beatitudinis cadente, in ruina ejus etiam electos angelos expavisse, ut cum istum ex illorum numero superbiae lapsus ejiceret, illos ad robustius standum timor ipse solidaret. [Vet. IV.] Unde et sequitur: Et territi purgabantur. 13. Qua ratione tunc purgati. Aliis cadentibus, caeteris datum ut cadere non possent. Purgati vero sunt, quia nimirum isto cum reprobis legionibus exeunte, soli in coelestibus sedibus qui beate in aeternum viverent remanserunt. Hujus itaque lapsus eos terruit et purgavit: terruit, ne conditorem suum superbe despicerent; purgavit vero, quia, excuntibus reprobis, actum est ut electi soli remanerent. Et quia cunctorum opifex Deus scit ad bonorum custodiam etiam bene uti mala actione reproborum, lapsum cadentium vertit in profectum manentium; et unde punita est culpa superbientium, inde humilibus angelis et inventa et solidata sunt augmenta meritorum. Istis namque cadentibus, illis in munere datum est ut cadere omnino non possent. Sancti enim angeli, dum in istis naturae suae damna conspiciunt, in seipsis jam cautius robustiusque consistunt. Unde fit, auctore omnium rerum Domino cuncta mirabiliter ordinante, ut illi electorum spirituum patriae etiam ruinae suae damna proficiant, dum inde 1122 firmius constructa sit unde fuerat ex parte destructa. 14. Sancti praedicatores angeli dicuntur. Sed quia saepe Scriptura sacra praedicatores Ecclesiae, pro eo quod gloriam patriae coelestis annuntiant, angelorum solet nomine designare, possumus hoc loco angelos sanctos praedicatores accipere. Hinc est enim quod Joannes in Apocalypsi, septem Ecclesiis scribens, angelis Ecclesiarum loquitur, id est praedicatoribus populorum (Apoc. I, 4). Hinc propheta ait: Et angeli pacis amare flebunt (Isai. XXXIII, 7). Hinc rursum Malachias propheta ait: Labia sacerdotis custodiunt scientiam, et legem inquirunt ex ore ejus, quia angelus Domini exercituum est (Malac. II, 7). Hinc Paulus ait: Magnum est pietatis sacramentum, quod manifestatum est in carne, justificatum in spiritu, apparuit angelis, praedicatum est gentibus, creditum est in hoc mundo, assumptum est in gloria (I Tim. III, 16). Qui igitur dispensationis mysterium postquam apparuisse angelis dixit, praedicatum esse gentibus subdidit, profecto angelorum nomine praedicatores sanctos, id est veritatis nuntios designavit. 15. Hi ex angelorum casu et poena terrentur, et purgantur. Si ergo hoc quod dicitur: Cum sublatus fuerit, timebunt angeli, et territi purgabuntur, ad futurum tempus refertur, adveniente districto judice, extrema hic istius Leviathan damnatio designatur, quia de hoc mundo per iram judicii tollitur, qui nunc mira mansuetudinis longanimitate toleratur. Tanto autem hinc pondere terroris excutitur, ut sanctorum etiam praedicatorum fortitudo turbetur; Cum enim sublatus fuerit, timebunt angeli, quia cum judicii turbine rapitur, hi qui in corporibus reperiri potuerint, immenso terrore concussi, etiam supernae patriae nuntii contremiscunt. Quamvis enim fortes jam atque perfecti sunt, adhuc tamen; quia in carne sunt positi, non possunt in tanti terroris turbine nulla formidine concuti. Sed cum Leviathan iste rapitur, cumque omnia in ejus interitu elementa quatiuntur, praedicatores sanctos, quos, ut dixi, adhuc in suis corporibus illud tempus judicii invenerit, spes de regni propinquitate laetificat, et carnis infirmitas de irae ostensione perturbat. Erit ergo in eis aliquo modo tremor laetus, et timor securus, quia et coelesti regno se remunerari certi sunt, et per tanti turbinis metum pro carnis infirmitate contremiscunt. 16. Justis trementibus, quanta reproborum futura concussio. Consideremus ergo quomodo tunc iniquorum conscientia concutitur, quando etiam justorum vita turbatur. Hi qui oderunt adventum judicis, quid facient, si terrorem tanti judicii etiam qui diligunt expavescunt? Et quia in sanctis praedicatoribus hoc pavore excoquitur, si qua eis inesse potuit levium rubigo vitiorum, postquam dixit: Cum sublatus fuerit, timebunt angeli, apte mox subdidit: Et territi purgabuntur. Sed quia haec de Leviathan istius fine cognovimus, interim priusquam pereat quid agat audiamus. Sequitur:

CAPUT VIII [Rec. VIII].

VERS. 17. Cum apprehenderit eum gladius, subsistere non poterit neque hasta, neque thorax. 17. Antichristus diaboli gladius recte appellatur. In Scriptura sacra aliquando per gladium sancta praedicatio, aliquando aeterna damnatio, aliquando tribulatio temporalis, aliquando antiqui hostis ira vel persuasio designatur. Gladius enim 1123 pro sancta praedicatione ponitur, sicut Paulus ait: Et gladium spiritus, quod est verbum Dei (Ephes. VI, 17). Gladii nomine aeterna damnatio designatur, sicut de praedicante haeretico scriptum est: Si multiplicati fuerint filii ejus, in gaudio erunt (Job. XXVII, 14), quia quantalibet hic numerositate germinent, aeterna damnatione consumuntur. Gladius tribulatio temporalis accipitur, sicut Mariae de secuturis tribulationibus, dicitur: Et tuam ipsius animam pertransibit gladius (Luc. II, 35). Rursum per gladium ira vel persuasio maligni hostis exprimitur, sicut Psalmista ait: Qui liberasti David servum tuum de gladio maligno (Psal. CXLIII, 10). Benignus quippe sanctae praedicationis est gladius, quo percutimur ut a culpa moriamur. Malignus vero est diabolicae persuasionis gladius, quo male quisque percutitur ut a vita rectitudinis exstinguatur. Antiqui ergo hostis est gladius, ille tunc damnatus homo, in usum ministerii ejus assumptus. Ipsum quippe per malitiam fraudis exacuit, et infirmorum corda transfigit. Hunc ergo Leviathan istius gladius apprehendit, cum eum suus damnatus homo susceperit. Si autem gladii nomine ejus ira signatur, recte non apprehendere gladium, sed a gladio apprehendi describitur. In tantam quippe tunc insaniam vertitur, ut dominari omnibus appetens, nequaquam suae irae dominetur. Nos namque cum iram in usu justitiae assumimus, gladium tenemus, quia eam sub aequitate judicii possidendo moderamur. Ille autem quia per abrupta furoris rapitur, non apprehendere gladium, sed a gladio apprehendi perhibetur. Non enim iram possidens tenet, sed ab ira saeviens tenetur. [Vet. V.] 18. Huic gladio cedere hastam et thoracem quo sensu dictum. Cunctis autem liquet quod hasta adversarium percutimus, thorace vero ab adversario munimur. Per hastam vulnera inferimus, per thoracem tegimur ne vulneremur. Quid igitur per hastam nisi praedicationis jaculum, quid per thoracem nisi fortitudo patientiae designatur? Leviathan ergo iste, quia per assumptum reprobum hominem in ira omnimodae crudelitatis effrenatur, apprehendi a gladio dicitur. Nam per ostensionem immensae tunc fortitudinis exhibet quidquid nequiter potest. Et neque hasta neque thorax subsistere poterit, quia in Antichristum veniens, tantae virtutis apparebit, ut si supernum adjutorium desit, et praedicantium acumen obtundat, et longanimitatem patientium destruat. Nisi enim justorum vitam superna gratia solidet, non subsistit hasta, quia praedicatorum virtus frangitur; non subsistit thorax, quia constantium patientia dirupta penetratur. Unde et subditur:

CAPUT IX.

VERS. 18. Reputabit enim ut paleas ferrum, et quasi lignum putridum aes. 19. Saeviente Antichristo praedicatorum virtus et fortiorum constantia periclitabuntur. Quod superius hastam dixit, hoc inferius ferri appellatione replicavit; et quod thoracem protulit, hoc rursum aeris commemoratione signavit. Ferrum namque acuitur ut adversarius vulneretur, aes autem rubigine pene nulla consumitur. Ferro ergo praedicationis jacula, aere autem longanimitatis constantia designatur. Unde et sub Aser specie de sancta Ecclesia per Moysen dicitur: Ferrum et aes calceamentum ejus (Deut. XXXIII, 25). Calceamentum quippe in Scriptura sacra munimen praedicationis 1124 accipitur, sicut scriptum est: Calceati pedes in praeparatione Evangelii pacis (Ephes. VI, 16). Quia ergo per ferrum virtus, per aes autem perseverantia exprimitur, ferrum et aes calceamentum ejus dicitur, cum praedicatio ejus acumine simul et constantia munitur. Per ferrum enim mala adversantia penetrat, per aes autem bona quae proposuit longanimiter servat. Cujus profecto perseverantiam illic apertius insinuat, dicens: Sicut dies juventutis ejus, ita erit et senectus illius (Deut. XXXIII, 25). [Rec. IX.] Sed Leviathan iste quando illum gladium quem sacra eloquia Antichristum vocant in exercitationem suae iniquitatis assumpserit, et ferrum velut paleas, et aes velut lignum putridum reputabit, quia nisi divina gratia protegat, et praedicantium vires velut paleas nequitiae suae igne consumet, et patientium constantiam quasi lignum putridum in pulverem rediget. Et acumen igitur ferri, et aeris fortitudo deficit, dum per violentiam virtutis illius et praedicationis sensus obtunditur, et patientiae longanimitas dissipatur. 20. Et nisi Deus opem ferat, deficient. Nisi ergo electos suos opitulatio divina roboret, ubi tunc infirmi erunt, si fortes sicut paleae reputantur? Quid tunc Leviathan iste de paleis faciet, si ferrum quasi paleas aestimabit? Quid de putridis lignis acturus est, si quasi lignum putridum aeris fortitudinem solvet? Sed o quam multi, qui suis viribus ferrum se vel aes aestimant, in illo tunc tribulationis igne se paleas esse deprehendunt; et quam multi, qui per infirmitatem propriam se esse paleas metuunt, per divinum adjutorium fulti, in ferri atque aeris soliditate roborantur, ut contra adversarium suum tanto magis in Deo fortes sint, quanto de se amplius infirmos se esse meminerunt. Sed quanto altius Behemoth iste contra electos Dei per miracula erigitur, tanto contra eum sancti quique vehementius ad praedicationis se verba constringunt. Qui tamen ita reproborum mentes possidet, ut eas nulla confossus veritatis jaculatione relinquat. Unde et subditur: IBID. 19. Non fugabit eum vir sagittarius. 21. A reproborum cordibus non fugat Satanam sancta praedicatio.Quid enim sagittas, nisi verba praedicatorum accipimus? Quae dum voce bene viventium distinguntur, audientium corda transfigunt. His sagittis sancta Ecclesia percussa fuerat, quae dicebat: Vulnerata charitate ego sum (Cantic. II, 5). De his sagittis Psalmistae voce narratur: Sagittae parvulorum factae sunt plagae eorum (Psal. LXIII, 8), quia scilicet verba humilium penetraverunt animos superborum. De his sagittis venienti propugnatori dicitur: Sagittae tuae acutae, potentissime, populi sub te cadent in corde (Psal. XLIV, 6). Vir itaque est sagittarius qui per sanctae intentionis arcum audientium cordibus verba rectae exhortationis infigit. Quia ergo Leviathan iste verba praedicantium despicit, et, cum reproborum mentes male suadendo momorderit, durus inter jacula omnimodo eas non relinquit, recte dicitur: Non fugabit eum vir sagittarius. Ac si aperte dicatur: A reproborum cordibus eum sancti praedicatoris sagitta non excutit, quia quisquis ab illo apprehenditur, verba jam praedicantium audire contemnit. Unde bene peccatis praecedentibus irascens, de his quos in manu antiqui hostis deserit, Dominus per prophetam dicit: Immittam vobis serpentes regulos, 1125 quibus non est incantatio (Jerem. VIII, 17). Ac si diceret: Justo judicio talibus vos immundis spiritibus tradam, qui a vobis excuti exhortatione praedicantium quasi incantantium sermone non valeant. Quia vero Leviathan iste a cordibus reproborum sanctae praedicationis spiculis non movetur, ipse etiam sanctorum virorum contemptus adjicitur, cum illico subinfertur:

CAPUT XI [Vet. VI].

IBID. In stipulam versi sunt ei lapides fundae. 22. Contra eum et Antichristum sanctorum robur videtur stipula. Nihil tamen contra eorum animam potest. Quid per fundam, nisi sancta Ecclesia figuratur? Funda namque dum in gyrum mittitur, sic de illa lapides exeunt quibus adversariorum pectora feriantur; ita sancta Ecclesia dum volubilitate temporum per tribulationum circuitum ducitur, fortes ex illa viri prodeunt quibus quasi lapideis ictibus iniquorum corda tundantur. Unde ad prophetam de bonis doctoribus Dominus dicit: Devorabunt, et subjicient lapidibus fundae (Zach. IX, 15). Sancti quippe doctores qui ad virtutem et alios instruunt, hostes devorant, dum eos intra corpus suum per vim conversionis immutant. Quos lapidibus fundae subjiciunt, quia dum fortes quosque in sancta Ecclesia viros instituunt, per eos adversariorum superbientium pectora dura confringunt. Unde et Golias immanissimus saxo fundae moritur (I Reg. XVII, 49), quia singulari sanctae Ecclesiae lapide diabolica celsitudo superatur. Leviathan itaque iste quia, damnato illo homine assumpto, quoslibet fortes Ecclesiae velut infirmos despicit, eorumque vires temporaliter premit, recte nunc dicitur: In stipulam versi sunt ei lapides fundae. Ac si aperte diceretur: Sanctorum robur quasi in stipulae mollitiem redigit, quorum lingua prius pectus illius duris ictibus tutudit. Omnem quippe tunc fortitudinem suae iniquitatis exercens, quanto se ab eis vinci spiritaliter dolet, tanto atrocius contra eos corporaliter praevalet. Et quia nil se contra eorum spiritum praevalere considerat, in eorum carne crudelitatis suae omnia argumenta consummat. [Vet. VII.] Sed quid mirum si humanas vires despicit, qui ipsa etiam superni in se judicii aeterna tormenta contemnit? Unde et subditur:

CAPUT XII.

VERS. 20. Quasi stipulam aestimabit malleum. 23. Dei vindictam superbus contemnit. Ac si diceret: Etiam pondus ejus animadversionis despicit, quae se per supplicium desuper veniens ferit. In Scriptura enim sacra mallei nomine aliquando diabolus designatur, per quem nunc delinquentium culpae feriuntur; aliquando vero percussio coelestis accipitur, qua vel electi supernos ictus sentiunt, ut a pravis itineribus corrigantur, vel justa ira reprobos percutit, ut jam supplicia aeterna praeveniens, quid etiam in posterum mereantur ostendat. Nam quia appellatione mallei antiquus hostis exprimitur, propheta testatur, cum super eum vim extremi judicii contemplatur, dicens: Quomodo confractus est et contritus malleus universae terrae (Jerem. L, 23)? Ac si dicerei: Eum per quem vascula sua Dominus in ministerii usum formanda percutit, quis perpendat quo turbine, veniente extremo judicio, in aeterna damnatione confringit? Rursum per malleum percussio coelestis exprimitur, quod Salomone templum aedificante signatur, cum dicitur: Domus autem cum aedificaretur, de lapidibus 1126 dolatis atque perfectis aedificata est, et malleus et securis, et omne ferramentum non sunt audita in domo, cum aedificaretur (III Reg. VI, 7). Quid enim domus illa nisi sanctam Ecclesiam, quam in coelestibus Dominus inhabitat, figurabat? Ad cujus aedificationem electorum animae, quasi quidam expoliti lapides deferuntur. Quae cum aedificatur in coelis, nullus illic jam disciplinae malleus resonat, quia dolati atque perfecti illuc lapides ducimur, ut locis juxta meritum congruis disponamur. Hic enim foris tundimur, ut illuc sine reprehensione veniamus. Hic malleus, hic secucuris, hic omnia tunsionum resonant ferramenta. In domo autem Dei nulli ictus audiuntur, quia in aeterna patria omnes jam percussionum strepitus conticescunt. Nequaquam ibi malleus percutit, quia nulla animadversio affligit. Nequaquam securis incidit, quia receptos interius nulla foras severitatis sententia projicit. Nequaquam ferramenta perstrepunt, quia nec quaelibet minima ultra jam flagella sentiuntur. Quia ergo per malleum desuper venientem coelestis pondus percussionis exprimitur, quid est quod Leviathan iste malleum despicit, nisi quod supernae animadversionis ictus formidare contemnit? Et quasi stipulam malleum deputat, quia ad justae irae se pondera velut contra terrores levissimos parat. Unde et adhuc expressius subditur:

CAPUT XIII [Rec. XI].

IBID. Et deridebit vibrantem hastam. 24. Futuri judicii comminationem irridet, inde factus crudelior. Contra Leviathan enim Dominus hastam vibrat, quia in ejus interitu districtam minatur sententiam. Hastam quippe vibrare est aeternam ei mortem ex districta animadversione praeparare. Sed apostata spiritus auctorem vitae etiam cum sua morte despiciens, hastam vibrantem deridet, quia ex districto judicio quidquid grave, quidquid horribile esse praevidet, pati non metuit; sed quo se aeterna tormenta non posse evadere conspicit, eo in exercenda nequitia durior assurgit. Quem cum plerique hujus mundi sapientes in cunctis quae appetit tanta pertinacia, tanta fortitudine stringi considerant, corda sua ad famulatum ejus tyrannidis inclinant, et omne quod Deo largiente sapiunt, hoc contra eum ad servitium hostis illius inflectunt. Unde et recte subditur:

CAPUT XIV [Rec. XII].

IBID. 21. Sub ipso erunt radii solis. 25. Illi subduntur nonnulli, qui doctrina aut sanctitate in Ecclesia lucere videbantur. In Scriptura enim sacra cum figurate sol ponitur, aliquando Dominus, aliquando persecutio, aliquando de re qualibet manifestae visionis ostensio, aliquando autem intelligentia sapientium designatur. Per solem quippe Dominus figuratur, sicut Sapientiae libro perbibetur, quod omnes impii in extremi die judicii cognita sua damnatione dicturi sunt: Erravimus a via veritatis, et lumen justitiae non luxit nobis, et sol non est ortus nobis (Sap. V, 6). Ac si aperte dicant: Interni nobis luminis radius non refulsit. Unde et Joannes ait: Mulier amicta sole, et luna sub pedibus ejus (Apoc. XII, 2). In sole enim illustratio veritatis, in luna autem, quae menstruis suppletionibus deficit, mutabilitas temporalitatis accipitur. Sancta autem Ecclesia, quia superni luminis splendore protegitur, quasi sole vestitur, quia vero cuncta temporalia despicit, lunam sub pedibus pre mit. Rursum sole persecutio designatur, sicut 1127 in Evangelio Veritas dicit, quod nata sine radicibus semina orto sole aruerunt (Matth. XIII, 6), quia videlicet verba vitae in corde terrenorum hominum temporali momento virentia, superveniente persecutionis ardore, siccantur. Rursum sole manifestae visionis ostensio designatur, sicut Propheta Dominum cunctorum oculis apparentem denuntiat, dicens: In sole posuit tabernaculum suum (Psal. XVIII, 6). Ac si diceret: Humanitatis assumptae sacramentum in lumine manifestae visionis ostendit. Et sicut eidem Prophetae divina voce per Nathan dicitur: Tu fecisti in abscondito, ego vero faciam verbum istud in conspectu omnis Israel, et in conspectu solis (II Reg. XII, 12). Quid enim per conspectum solis, nisi cognitionem insinuat manifestae visionis? Rursum solis nomine, sapientium intellectus exprimitur, sicut in Apocalypsi scriptum est: Quartus angelus effudit phialam suam in solem, et datum est illi aestu afficere homines et igni (Apoc. XVI, 8). Phialam videlicet in solem effundere est persecutionis supplicia viris sapientiae splendore fulgentibus irrogare: Et datum est illi ut afficeret homines aestu et igni, quia dum sapientes viri, cruciatibus victi, male agendi errore tanguntur, illorum exemplo persuasi infirmi quique temporalibus desideriis inardescunt. Ruinae namque fortium augmenta praestant perditionibus infirmorum. Quia sole acumen sapientiae designatur, per comparationem quoque a Salomone dicitur: Sapiens ut sol permanet, stultus ut luna mutatur (Eccli. XXVII, 12). [Vet. VIII.] Hoc ergo loco quid per solis radios nisi acumina sapientium demonstrantur? Quia enim multi, qui in sancta Ecclesia luce sapientiae resplendere videbantur, tunc vel persuasionibus capti, vel minis territi, vel cruciatibus fracti, Leviathan istius seditioni subjiciuntur, recte dicitur: Sub ipso erunt radii solis. Ac si aperte diceretur: Hi qui intra sanctam Ecclesiam per acumina sapientiae quasi radios videbantur lucis aspergere, et per auctoritatem rectitudinis desuper resplendere, potestati Leviathan istius iniqua se operatione substernunt, ut non jam recta praedicando desuper luceant, sed ei perverse obsequendo famulentur. Solis ergo radii sub ipso sunt, cum nonnulli etiam docti viri sapientiae suae acumina non libere agendo sublevant, sed ad vestigia Leviathan istius et perversitate operis, et blandimento adulationis inclinant, ut intelligentia, quae illis sicut sol desuper fuit ex coelesti munere, antiqui hostis pedibus substernatur ex terrena cupiditate. Unde et nunc cum quisque sapientium atque doctorum pro commodo vel gloria vitae temporalis per adulationis lapsum terrenis se potestatibus prave agentibus subjicit, quasi sub vestigiis venientis Antichristi solis se radiis sternit. Et velut coeli lucem sibi Behemoth humiliat, dum per pestiferum assensum sapientium mentes calcat. Toties vero Leviathan istius pedibus se radii solis subdunt, quoties hi qui doctrinae videntur lumine resplendere, immoderato acumine prava in sacro eloquio sentiunt, perversisque sensibus ejus se erroribus substernunt, quia dum contra fidelia veritatis praedicamenta se erigunt, Leviathan istius vestigiis falsa sentiendo famulantur. Toties radii solis sub ipso sunt, quoties docti quippe, et intelligentiae luce 1128 pollentes, vel despectis caeteris in elatione se erigunt; vel summa quae sapiunt postponentes, sordidis carnis desideriis inquinantur; vel obliti coelestium, terrena ambiunt; vel non reminiscentes quia terra sunt, de cognitione coelestium inaniter gloriantur. Unde et recte ibi subjungitur:

CAPUT XV [Rec. XIII].

IBID. Sternet sibi aurum quasi lutum. 26. Quid significet aurum, in sacra Scriptura. Appellatione quippe auri in sacro eloquio aliquando divinitatis claritas, aliquando splendor supernae civitatis, aliquando charitas, aliquando nitor gloriae saecularis, aliquando pulchritudo sanctitatis accipitur. Auri enim nomine ipsa intima divinitatis claritas designatur, sicut in Canticorum canticis sponsi species describitur: Caput ejus aurum optimum (Cant. V, 11). Quia enim caput Christi Deus, nil vero est in metallis auro fulgentius, sponsi caput aurum dicitur, quia ejus humanitas ex divinitas suae nobis claritate principatur. Rursum auri nomine splendor supernae civitatis accipitur, sicut hanc Joannes se vidisse testatur, dicens: Ipsa civitas aurum mundum simile vitro mundo (Apoc. XXI, 18). Aurum namque ex quo illa civitas constat, simile vitro dicitur, ut et per aurum clara, et per vitrum perspicua designetur. Rursum auri nomine charitas intimatur, sicut Angelum quem sibi loqui idem Joannes aspexit (Apoc. I, 13), ad mamillas zona aurea cinctum vidit, quia nimirum supernorum civium pectora dum poenali jam nequaquam timori subjecta sunt, atque a se vicissim nulla scissione solvuntur, ex sola se charitate constringunt. Zonam vero auream circa mamillas habere, est cunctos mutabilium cogitationum motus per solius jam amoris vincula restringere. Rursum auri nomine, nitor gloriae temporalis exprimitur, sicut per Prophetam dicitur: Calix aureus Babylon (Jerem. LI, 7). Quid enim Babylonis nomine, nisi hujus mundi gloria designatur? Quae calix aureus dicitur, quia dum pulchra esse temporalia ostentat, stultas mentes in sua concupiscentia debriat, ut speciosa temporalia appetant, et invisibilia pulchra contemnant. Hoc aureo calice prima sponte sua Eva debriata est, de qua historia veritatis dicit, quia cum vetitum lignum concupisceret, vidit quod esset pulchrum visu, aspectuque delectabile et comedit (Genes. III, 6). Aureus ergo Babylon calix est, quia dum visum exterioris pulchritudinis ostendit, sensum internae rectitudinis subtrahit. Rursum auri nomine splendor sanctitatis accipitur, sicut Judaicum populum

a splendore justitiae ad nequitiae tenebras commutatum Jeremias deplorat dicens: Quomodo obscuratum est aurum, mutatus est color optimus (Thren. IV, 1)? Sicut enim superius diximus, aurum obscuratur, cum subsequantibus iniquitatum tenebris, justitiae pulchritudo deseritur. Color optimus mutatur, cum splendor innocentiae in foeditatem vertitur culpae. [Vet. IX.] 27. Quid lutum. Luti quoque nomine, in sacro eloquio aliquando terrenarum rerum multiplicitas, aliquando sordidum sapiens iniqua doctrina, al quando desiderii carnalis illecebra designatur. Per lutum quippe terrenarum rerum multiplicitas figuratur, sicut per Habacuc prophetam dicitur: Vae ei qui multiplicat non sua! usquequo aggravat contra se 1129 densum lutum (Habac. II, 6)? Denso enim se luto aggravat, qui per avaritiam terrena multiplicans, peccati sui se oppressione coangustat. Rursum luti nomine doctrina sordidum sapiens designatur, sicut per eumdem prophetam Domino dicitur: Viam fecisti in mari equis tuis, in luto aquarum multarum (Habac. III, 15). Ac si diceret: Aperuisti iter praedicatoribus tuis inter doctrinas hujus saeculi sordida et terrena sapientes. Per lutum quoque desiderium sordidae voluptatis exprimitur, sicut Psalmista deprecans ait: Eripe me de luto, ut non inhaeream (Psal. LXVIII, 15). Luto quippe inhaerere, est sordidis desideriis concupiscentiae carnalis inquinari. 28. Antiquus hostis aliis sub specie sanctitatis illudit, alios per foeda vitia inescat. Hoc ergo loco aurum claritas sanctitatis accipitur, lutum vero vel terrenarum rerum avaritiam, vel pravarum contagia doctrinarum, vel sordes carnalium voluptatum nil obstat intelligi. Quia enim multos Leviathan iste, qui intra sanctam Ecclesiam fulgore justitiae resplendere videbantur, tunc vel terrenarum rerum concupiscentia, vel errantis doctrinae contagio, vel carnalibus sibi voluptatibus subjicit, aurum sibi procul dubio quasi lutum sternit. Aurum enim quasi lutum sternere, est in quibusdam vitae munditiam per illicita desideria conculcare, ut hi etiam sordidis ejus vestigiis serviant, qui contra illum prius virtutum splendore rutilabant. Antiquus itaque hostis aliis tunc sub specie sanctitatis illudit, alios autem per foeda vitia vitae carnalis intercipit. Sed tunc per haec aperte grassabitur, nunc autem multorum cordibus occulte dominatur, sicut Paulus Apostolus dicit: Ut reveletur in suo tempore, nam mysterium jam operatur iniquitatis (II Thes. II, 6). Toties igitur etiam nunc aurum sibi quasi lutum subjicit, quoties castitatem fidelium per carnis vitia sternit. Toties aurum velut lutum calcat, quoties sensum continentium per immunda desideria dissipat. Quod tunc tanto vehementius peragit, quanto, suae perditae libertati commissus, hoc quod appetit, effrenatius perpetrat. 29. Qui diabolo substernuntur, etsi aurum videantur, lutum sunt. Et fortasse quempiam moveat cur misericors Deus fieri ista permittat, ut Leviathan iste seu nunc per suggestiones callidas, sive tunc per damnatum illum quem replet hominem, vel solis radios, id est doctos quosque sapientesque subjiciat, vel aurum, hoc est viros sanctitatis claritate fulgentes, quasi lutum sibi vitiis coinquinando substernat. Sed citius respondemus quia aurum quod pravis ejus persuasionibus quasi lutum sterni potuerit, aurum ante Dei oculos nunquam fuit (De poenit., dist. 2, c. Citius). Qui enim seduci quandoque non reversuri possunt, quasi habitam sanctitatem oculos hominum videntur amittere; sed eam ante oculos Dei nunquam habuerunt. Saepe namque homo multis occulte peccatis involvitur, et in una aliqua virtute magnus videtur. Quae ipsa quoque virtus inanescens deficit, quia dum innotescit hominibus, procul dubio laudatur, ejusque laus inhianter appetitur. Unde fit ut et ipsa virtus ante Dei oculos virtus non sit, dum abscondit quod displicet, prodit quod placet. Quae itaque esse merita apud Deum possunt, quando et mala occulta sunt, et bona publica? Plerumque enim, sicut diximus, latet superbia, et castitas innotescit; atque ideo ostensa diu castitas circa vitae finem perditur, quia cooperta superbia usque ad finem incorrecta retinetur. Alius 1130 eleemosynis vacat, propria distribuit; sed tamen multis injustitiis servit, vel fortasse linguam in detractionibus exercet. Et fit plerumque ut is qui misericors fuerat juxta vitae suae terminum rapacitatis et crudelitatis stimulis inardescat. Quod valde justo judicio agitur, ut et perdat ante homines unde hominibus placuit, qui hoc unde Deo displicuit, corrigere nunquam curavit. Alius patientiae studet; sed dum invidere aliis, et servare in corde malitiam non cavet, fit quandoque impatiens, qui diu latuit dolens. Hi itaque et per aliquid aurum sum, et per aliquid lutum sunt. Atque hoc aurum quasi lutum sternitur, quando occultis peccatis exigentibus, etiam virtus quae publice claruerat dissipatur. Sed operae pretium credimus si in his virtutem superni ordinis subtilius perpendamus [Vet. X.] 30. Deus occulta quorumdam mala tolerat, ut quae in aperto faciunt bona, electis prosint. Saepe enim omnipotens Deus occulta quorumdam mala tolerat, ut aperta eorum bona electorum suorum usibus profutura dispenset. Nam nonnulli mundum nequaquam funditus deserentes, non perseveraturi angustum iter arripiunt, sed ad quaerendam angustam viam exemplo suo eos qui perseveraturi sunt accendunt. Unde plerumque contingit ut ipsum hoc quod bene videntur vivere, non sibi, sed solis potius electis vivant, dum exemplis suis ad bene vivendi studia perseveraturos alios non perseveraturi provocant. Saepe enim quosdam videmus viam ingredi, ad locum propositum festinare, quos alii quia euntes conspiciunt sequuntur; eumdemque locum pariter petunt. Sed fit plerumque ut, irruente aliquo implicationis articulo, post se redeant qui praeibant, et hi ad locum perveniant qui sequebantur. Ita nimirum sunt qui non perseveraturi viam sanctitatis arripiunt. Idcirco enim virtutis iter non perventuri inchoant, ut eis qui perventuri sunt qua gradiantur ostendant. Quorum etiam casus, utilitate non modica, electorum profectibus servit, quia illorum lapsum dum conspiciunt, de suo statu contremiscunt; et ruina quae illos damnat istos humiliat. Discunt enim in superni adjutorii protectione confidere, dum plerosque conspiciunt de suis viribus cecidisse. Quando ergo bene agere videntur reprobi, quasi planum iter electis sequentibus monstrant; quando vero in lapsum nequitiae corruunt, electis post se pergentibus quasi cavendam superbiae foveam ostendunt. Erat ergo Leviathan iste, et solis sibi radios subdat, atque aurum luti more subjiciat. Scit omnipotens Deus ad electorum suorum solatium bene uti malo reproborum, quando hi qui ad illum perventuri sunt, et suis ad eum meritis proficiunt, et saepe in eo quod superbe sapiunt, alienis lapsibus corriguntur. Sed si haec Leviathan iste agit in eis etiam quos claros aliqua virtus ostendit, quid de illis facturus est quorum mens vel ex parte aliqua sublevata a terrenis concupiscentiis non est? Quos tamen divinus sermo aperte exprimit, dum subjungit:

CAPUT XVI [Rec. XIV].

VERS. 22. Fervescere faciet quasi ollam profundum mare. 31. In ultima persecutione ira reproborum ebulliet in Sanctos. Quid per mare nisi vita saecularium, quid per profundum, nisi altae et abditae eorum cogitationes exprimuntur? Quod profundum mare Leviathan iste quasi ollam facit fervescere, quia nimirum constat, quod persecutionis extremae tempore contra electorum vitam studeat animos reproborum 1131 per flammam crudelitatis excitare. Tunc profundum mare quasi olla fervescit, cum corda dilectorum saeculi valido ardore succendit, et quae hoc pacis tempore intra suam malitiam clausa latuerunt, tunc in aestum immanissimae persecutionis ebulliunt, ac per abruptam crudelitatis apertae licentiam ea quae diu presserant odia antiqui livoris exhalant. Quia autem pestifero errore persuasi, sic in istis famulantur Antichristo, ut tunc verius praebere se aestiment obsequium Christo, postquam dixit: Fervescere faciet quasi ollam profundum mare, apte subjunxit:

CAPUT XXVII [Vet.

XI] IBID.Ponet quasi cum unguenta bulliunt. 32. Qui Antichristo contra sanctos militabunt, obsequium Deo praestare credent. Unguenta quippe cum bulliunt, fragrantiam suavitatis reddunt. Quia ergo Leviathan iste ita seducet corda reproborum, ut quidquid agunt ex iniquitate perfidiae pro veritate rectae fidei se agere suspicentur, quasi bene eis olet id quod zelo religionis exercent. Unde in Evangelio discipulis Veritas dicit: Ut omnis qui interficit vos, arbitretur obsequium se praestare Deo (Joan. XVI, 2). Igitur sicut olla fervent, dum crudeliter persequuntur; sed apud eos ipsa persecutio unguentorum fragrantiam redolet, dum mens eorum, vanis suspicionibus decepta, aestimat quia Deo obsequium persolvat. In Scriptura enim sacra unguentorum odoribus opinio solet signari virtutum. Unde sponsa in Canticis canticorum sponsum desiderans dicit: In odore unguentorum tuorum currimus (Cant. I, 3). Et unde Paulus apostolus virtutum laude fragrare se sciens, ait: Christi bonus odor sumus Deo (II Cor. II, 15). Itaque quia Leviathan iste ministros illius perditi vasis sui in crudelitatis opera sub opinione laudis et praetextu vitututis intercipit, postquam dixit: Fervescere faciet quasi ollam profundum mare, recte mox subdidit: Ponet quasi cum unguenta bulliunt. Quod enim per crudelitatis incendium mare fervet, hoc in eorumdem judicio qui excitantur falso nomine virtutis, ac si unguenta bulliant, ostendit, ut tanto atrociores ad crudelitatem fiant, quanto se etiam mereri praemia quasi pro zelo religionis existimant. Justumque hoc est divino judicio, ut qui pietatatis vim perpendere et custodire negligunt, suspicionis suae odore fallantur. Unde et, ad illusionis augmentum, eos crudelia perpetrantes signa quoque ac prodigia subsequuntur, sicut et recte subjungitur:

CAPUT XVIII [Vet.

XII, Rec. XV]. VERS. 23. Post eum lucebit semita. 33. Antichristi semita miraculis lucebit. Post Leviathan quippe semita lucere perhibetur, quia quaqua transit, admirationem nimiam ex miraculorum suorum claritate derelinquit; et sive per se, seu per ministros suos quolibet prodeat, mendacibus signis coruscat. Unde et hoc quod jam saepe protulimus in Evangelio Veritas dicit: Surgent pseudochristi et pseudoprophetae, et dabunt signa et prodigia, ita ut in errorem inducantur, si fieri potest, etiam electi (Marc. XIII, 22). Semita igitur post Leviathan lucet, quia quorum corda penetrat, eorum opera prodigiis illustrat, ut nimirum tanto altius eorum mentes in erroris tenebris teneat, quanto per eos foris quasi potentius lucem de miraculis ostentat. Sed sunt nonnulli qui in memoria 1132 et verba prophetica, et Evangelica praecepta retinentes, sciant et falsa esse signa quae exhibet, et vera supplicia ad quae decipiens trahit. Horum corda Leviathan iste, quia sanctitatis ostentatione non intercipit, in alia se eis illusione componit. Quosdam namque haec scientes, sed tamen praesentem vitam diligentes conspicit, quorum protinus mentibus ventura supplicia levigat, finienda quandoque districtionis judicia asserit, et deceptos callide ad praesentes voluptates rapit. Unde et apte mox subditur:

CAPUT XIX [Rec. XVI].

IBID. Aestimabit abyssum quasi senescentem. 34. Poenarum aeternitatem non credunt reprobi, a diabolo in errorem inducti. Eorum falsis rationibus respondetur. Quod aeterna incomprehensibiliaque judicia, abyssi soleant nomine designari, Psalmista testatur dicens: Judicia tua abyssus multa (Psal. XXXV, 7). Senectus vero aliquando pro finis propinquitate ponitur. Unde Apostolus ait: Quod antiquatur et senescit, prope interitum est (Hebr. VIII, 13). Leviathan itaque iste aestimabit abyssum quasi senescentem, quia reproborum corda sic infatuat, ut suspicionem eis de venturo judicio quod quasi finiatur infundat. Abyssum namque senescere aestimat, qui terminari quandoque in suppliciis supernam animadversionem putat. Igitur antiquus iste persuasor in membris suis, id est in mentibus iniquorum, futuras poenas levigat, quas quasi certo fine determinat, ut eorum culpas sine termino correptionis extendat; et eo magis hic peccata non finiant, quo istic aestimant peccatorum supplicia finienda. 35. Sunt enim nunc etiam qui idcirco peccatis suis ponere finem negligunt, quia habere quandoque finem futura super se judicia suspicantur. Quibus breviter respondemus: Si quandoque finienda sunt supplicia reproborum, quandoque finienda sunt ergo et gaudia beatorum. Per semetipsam namque Veritas dicit: Ibunt hi in supplicium aeternum, justi autem in vitam aeternam (Matth. XXV, 46). Si igitur hoc verum non est quod minatus est, neque illud verum est quod promisit. At inquiunt: Ideo aeternam poenam peccantibus minatus est, ut eos a peccatorum perpetratione compesceret, quia creaturae suae aeterna supplicia minari debuit, non inferre. Quibus citius respondemus: Si falsa minatus est ut ab injustitia corrigeret, etiam falsa pollicitus est ut ad justitiam provocaret. Et quis hanc eorum vesaniam toleret, qui dum promissionibus suis reproborum supplicia finiri asserunt, assertione sua etiam electorum praemia remunerationesque confundunt? Quis hanc eorum vesaniam toleret, qui conantur astruere verum non esse, quod Veritas de aeterno igne minata est, et dum satagunt Deum perhibere misericordem, non verentur praedicare fallacem? 36. Aeternis poenis addici peccatores quam aequum sit. At inquiunt: Sine fine puniri non debet culpa cum fine. Justus nimirum est omnipotens Deus, et quod non aeterno peccato commissum est, aeterno non debet puniri tormento. Quibus citius respondemus quod recte dicerent, si judex justus districtusque veniens, non corda hominum, sed facta pensaret. Iniqui enim ideo cum fine deliquerunt, quia cum fine vixerunt. Voluissent quippe sine fine vivere, ut sine fine potuissent in iniquitatibus permanere. Nam magis appetunt peccare 1133 quam vivere; et ideo hic semper vivere cupiunt, ut nunquam desinant peccare, cum vivunt. Ad districti ergo judicis justitiam pertinet, ut nunquam careant supplicio, quorum mens in hac vita nunquam voluit carere peccato; et nullus detur iniquo terminus ultionis, quia quandiu valuit, habere noluit terminum criminis. [Vet. XIII.] 37. Justi videntes in malorum cruciatibus quae supplicia evaserint, ad Dei laudes excitantur. At inquiunt: Nullus justus crudelitatibus pascitur, et delinquens servus a justo domino idcirco caedi praecipitur, ut a nequitia corrigatur. Ad aliquid ergo caeditur cum non ejus dominus cruciatibus delectatur. Iniqui autem gehennae ignibus traditi quo fine semper ardebunt? Et quia certum est quod pius atque omnipotens Deus non pascitur cruciatibus iniquorum, cur cruciantur miseri, si non expiantur? Quibus citius respondemus quod omnipotens Deus, quia pius est, miserorum cruciatu non pascitur; quia autem justus est, ab iniquorum ultione in perpetuum non sedatur. Sed iniqui omnes aeterno supplicio, e quidem sua iniquitate, puniuntur; et tamen ad aliquid concremantur, scilicet ut justi omnes et in Deo videant gaudia quae percipiunt, et in istis respiciant supplicia quae evaserunt, ut tanto in aeternum magis divinae gratiae debitores se esse cognoscant, quanto in aeternum mala puniri conspiciunt quae ejus adjutorio vitare potuerunt. 38. Cur sancti pro suis inimicis gehennae addictis amplius non orant. At inquiunt: Et ubi est quod sancti sunt, si pro inimicis suis, quos tunc ardere viderint, non orabunt, quibus utique dictum est: Pro inimicis vestris orate (Matth. V, 44)? Sed citius respondemus: Orant pro inimicis suis eo tempore, quo possunt ad fructuosam poenitentiam eorum corda convertere, atque ipsa conversione salvare. Quid enim aliud pro inimicis orandum est, nisi hoc quod Apostolus ait: Ut det illis Deus poenitentiam, et resipiscant piscant a diaboli laqueis, a quo capti tenentur, ad ipsius voluntatem (II Tim. II, 25, 26? Et quomodo pro illis tunc orabitur, quando jam nullatenus possunt ad justitiae opera ab iniquitate commutari. Eadem itaque causa est cur non oretur tunc pro hominibus aeterno igne damnatis, quae nunc etiam causa est ut non oretur pro diabolo angelisque ejus aeterno supplicio deputatis. Quae nunc etiam causa est, ut non orent sancti homines pro hominibus infidelibus impiisque defunctis, qui de eis utique quos aeterno deputatos supplicio jam noverunt ante illum judicis justi conspectum orationis suae meritum cassari refugiunt.

Quod si nunc quoque viventes justi mortuis et damnatis injustis minime compatiuntur, quando adhuc aliquid judicabile de sua carne se perpeti etiam ipsi noverunt, quanto districtius tunc iniquorum tormenta respiciunt, quando, ab omni vitio corruptionis exuti, ipsi jam justitiae vicinius atque arctius inhaerebunt? Sic quippe eorum mentes per hoc quod justissimo judici inhaerent, vis districtionis absorbet, ut omnino eis non libeat quidquid ab illius internae regulae subtilitate discordat. Sed quia, suborto occasionis articulo, haec contra Origenistas breviter diximus, ad eum quem praetermisimus exponendi ordinem recurramus. 1134 Postquam misericors Dominus callida machinamenta Leviathan istius indicavit, aperte praedicens omne quod electos exterius vehementer opprimit, omne quod interius suggestione sua reprobis blandienter infundit, mox immanitatem virtutis illius breviter insinuans subdit:

CAPUT XX [Vet.

XIV, Rec. XVII]. VERS. 24. Non est super terram potestas quae comparetur ei. 39. Diabolus, amissa felicitate, naturae tamen angelicae magnitudinem servavit. Potestas ejus super terram cunctis eminentior perhibetur, quia etsi actionis suae merito infra homines cecidit, omne tamen humanum genus naturae angelicae conditione transcendit. Quamvis enim internae felicitatis beatitudinem perdidit, naturae tamen suae magnitudinem non amisit, cujus adhuc viribus humana omnia superat, licet sanctis hominibus meritorum suorum dejectione subjaceat. Unde et eisdem sanctis contra hunc decertantibus eo retributionis suae meritum crescit, quo ille ab eis vincitur qui per naturae potentiam quasi jure se hominibus superesse gloriatur. Sequitur:

CAPUT XXI.

IBID. Qui factus est ut nullum timeret. 40. Primus angelus sic conditus, ut Deum caste timeret. Vinxit eum libertas quam appetiit. Sic quidem factus est per naturam, ut conditorem suum caste timere debuisset, timore videlicet sobrio et securo; non timore quem foras charitas mittit, sed timore, qui in saeculum saeculi permanet (I Joan. IV, 18), id est quem charitas gignit. Aliter enim timet conjugem uxor amans, aliter dominum ancilla peccans. Sic ergo fuerat iste conditus, quatenus timore laeto auctorem suum et amans metueret, et metuens amaret. Sed sua perversitate talis factus est, ut nullum timeret. Ei quippe a quo conditus fuerat subesse despexit. Ita enim Deus super omnia est, ut ipse sub nullo sit. Leviathan vero iste ejus celsitudinis culmen aspiciens, jus perversae libertatis appetit, ut et praeesset caeteris, et nulli subesset, dicens: Ascendam super altitudinem nubium, et similis ero Altissimo (Isai. XIV, 14). Cujus eo ipso similitudinem perdidit, quo esse ei superbe similis in celsitudine concupivit. Qui enim charitatem ejus imitari debuit, subditus ambiit ejus celsitudinem, et hoc quod imitari poterat, amisit elatus. Celsus nimirum esset, si ei qui veraciter celsus est, inhaerere voluisset. Celsus esset, si participatione verae celsitudinis contentus fuisset. Sed dum privatam celsitudinem superbe appetiit, jure perdidit participatam. Relicto enim eo cui debuit inhaerere principio, suum sibi appetiit quodammodo esse principium. Relicto eo qui vere illi sufficere poterat, se sibi sufficere posse judicavit; et tanto magis infra se cecidit, quanto magis se contra gloriam sui conditoris erexit. Nam quem exaltabat libera servitus, dejecit captiva libertas. Qua libertate nunc ut nullum timeat effrenatur, sed ipsa graviter effrenatione restringitur. Superno enim judicio cuncta mirabiliter ordinante, vinxit illum libertas quam appetiit, quia nunc omnimodo non timens omnibus suppliciis subjacet, qui elementis etiam superesse poterat, si unum quem debuit timere voluisset. Unum profecto timeret omnia possidens, qui nunc unum non timens omnia patitur. 41. Dei timorem amisit. Quanto sui damno. Factus est ergo ut nullum timeret, nullum videlicet, 1135 quia nec Deum, sed neque hoc quod passurus est metuit. Cui nimirum felicius fuerat timendo vitare supplicia quam non timendo tolerare. Appetitum itaque celsitudinis vertit in rigorem mentis, ut jam per duritiam se male egisse non sentiat, qui praeesse per gloriam quaerebat. Nam quia jus quaesitae potestatis non obtinuit, quasi quoddam superbiae suae remedium insaniam insensibilitatis invenit; et quia provectu transgredi cuncta non potuit, despectu se contra cuncta praeparavit. [Vet. XV.] Cujus adhuc superbia studiose describitur, cum protinus subinfertur:

CAPUT XXII.

VERS. 25. Omne sublime videt. 42. Diaboli ejusque membrorum immensa superbia. Saul propter elationem reprobatus. Davidis in suprema dignitate humilitas. Id est, cunctos velut infra se positos quasi de sublimi respicit, quia dum per intentionem contra auctorem nititur, aestimare sibi quemlibet similem dedignatur. Quod apte etiam ejus membris congruit, quia omnes iniqui per tumorem cordis elati cunctos quos cernunt superbiae fastu despiciunt; et si quando exterius venerantur, intus tamen in secreto cordis, ubi apud se sua aestimatione magni sunt, cunctorum sibi vitam meritumque postponunt, eosque infra se esse respiciunt, quia per elatam cogitationem cordis in cujusdam se altitudinis arce posuerunt. Quibus bene per prophetam dicitur: Vae qui sapientes estis in oculis vestris, et coram vobismetipsis prudentes (Isai. V, 21). Hinc etiam Paulus ait: Nolite prudentes esse apud vosmetipsos (Rom. XII, 16). Hinc ad Saul divina increpatione dicitur: Nonne cum esses parvulus in oculis tuis, caput te constitui in tribubus Israel (I Reg. XV, 17). Parvulus quippe in oculis suis est, qui in eo quod semetipsum considerat, imparem se alienis meritis pensat. Nam quasi grandem se aspicit, quisquis se super aliena merita elatione cogitationis extendit. Saul autem reprobus in bono quod coeperat non permansit, quia fastu susceptae potestatis intumuit. [Vet. XVI.] At contra, David semper de se humilia sentiens, ejusdemque Saul se comparationi postponens, postquam feriendi locum reperit, et pepercit eidem saevienti adversario, humili se professione prostravit, dicens: Quem persequeris, rex Israel? quem persequeris? Canem mortuum, et pulicem unum (I Reg. XXIV, 15)? Et certe jam unctus in regem fuerat, jam exorante Samuele, et cornu super se oleum fundente didicerat quod eum divina gratia, Saul reprobato, ad regni gubernacula possidenda servabat, et tamen persequenti adversario mente humili se substernebat, cui divino judicio praelatum se esse noverat. Illi itaque se humiliter postponebat quo per electionis gratiam incomparabiliter se noverat esse meliorem. Discant ergo quomodo humiliari proximis debeant, qui adhuc quo loco apud Deum habeantur nesciunt, si sic se electi etiam illius humiliant, quibus jam se per interna judicia antepositos deprehendunt. 43. Humilitas electorum propria. Hoc autem proprium esse specimen electorum solet, quod de se semper sentiunt infra quam sunt. Hinc namque ab eodem David dicitur: Si non humiliter sentiebam, sed exaltavi animam meam (Psal. CXXX, 2). Hinc Salomon ad sapientiam parvulos vocat, dicens: Si quis est parvulus, veniat ad me (Prov. IX, 4). 1136 Qui enim necdum semetipsum despicit, humilem Dei sapientiam non apprehendit. Hinc in Evangelio Dominus dicit: Confiteor tibi, Domine pater coeli et terrae, quia abscondisti haec a sapientibus et prudentibus, et revelasti ea parvulis (Matth. XI, 25). Hinc rursum Psalmista ait: Custodiens parvulos Dominus (Ps. CXIV, 6). Hinc magister gentium dicit: Facti sumus parvuli in medio vestri (I Thess. II, 7). Hinc discipulos admonens, ait: Superiores sibi invicem arbitrantes (Philip. II, 3). Nam quia iniquus quisque inferiorem se omnem quem cognovit putat, e diverso justus studet ut superiorem quemlibet proximum attendat. Ac ne dum se alii alter humiliat, humiliatio iret alteri in elationem, bene utramque partem admonuit, dicens: Superiores sibi invicem arbitrantes, ut in cogitationibus cordis et ego mihi illum praeferam, et vicissim ille me sibi, ut cum ab utraque parte cor inferius premitur, nullus ex impenso honore sublevetur. 44. Hanc humilitatis formam reprobi non tenent, sed contemnunt. Sed hanc humilitatis formam reprobi, quia Leviathan hujus membra sunt, vel cognoscere, vel tenere contemnunt, quia etsi quando se humiles specie tenus ostendunt, humilitatis vim servare intrinsecus negligunt. Quibus saepe accidit ut si quando unum quodlibet bonum vel minimum faciant, a malis suis omnibus respectum mentis protinus avertant, atque hoc quod vel extremum bonum fecerint, tota intentione semper inspiciant, et ex eo sese jam quasi sanctos aspiciant, obliti malorum omnium quae commiserunt, unius sui tantummodo boni memores, quod fortasse facere nec perfecte potuerunt, sicut evenire contra electis solet, ut cum multarum virtutum gratia polleant, unum eos vel tenuissimum vitium valde defatigans pulset, quatenus dum ex quadam parte sese infirmari considerant, de his virtutibus in quibus praevalent se minime extollant; dumque de infirmitate trepidant, hoc quoque ubi fortes sunt humilius servant. Saepe ergo reprobi per hoc quod unum vel minimum bonum suum incaute conspiciunt, mala multa et gravia in quibus demersi sunt non agnoscunt. Et saepe electi per hoc quod ad tenuissimum malum suum infirmari trepidant, mira dispensatione agitur, ut magna bona ad quae provecti sunt, non amittant. 45. Electos adjuvant mala, reprobis bona nocent. Bono male utitur reprobus, et bene malo probus.Justi itaque et occulti examinis mensura disponitur, ut et istos mala adjuvent, et illos bona gravent, dum et isti ad provectum boni utuntur levibus malis, et illi ad augmentum mali utuntur minimis bonis. Isti quippe inde perfectius in bono proficiunt, unde de malo tentantur; illi autem inde ad majus malum deficiunt, unde de bono gloriantur. Sic itaque male bono utitur reprobus, et bene malo utitur probus; sicut saepe contingit ut alius ex cibo salutifero inordinate sumpto pestem languoris incurrat; alius, veneno serpentis in medicamine ordinatae confectionis adhibito, languoris molestiam vincat.

Ille ergo qui cibo salutifero uti recte noluit, inde perniciose moritur, unde alii salubriter vivunt; iste autem qui veneno serpentis caute uti studuit, inde salubriter vivit, unde alii perniciose moriuntur. Venenum ergo serpentis 1137 non ipsam nequitiam, sed suggestionem nequitiae dicimus, qua nolentes saepe renitentesque tentamur. Quod tunc in medicamen vertitur cum mens virtutibus erecta conspectis contra se tentationibus humiliatur. Iniqui igitur atque ab approbatione interni examinis reprobi, quaelibet opera faciant, in quibuslibet virtutibus enitescant, humilitatis sensum penitus ignorant, quia nimirum Leviathan hujus membra sunt, de quo superna voce dicitur, [Rec. XVIII.] Omne sublime videt, quia non sotum per semetipsum, sed per eorum quoque corda quos ceperit quasi de sublimi cunctos inferius despicit. [Vet. XVII.] 46. Superbia per oculos quasi per quasdam fenestras se ostendit. Notandum vero quod Leviathan iste, qui per corpoream bestiam designatur, sublime videre describitur, quia videlicet cordis superbia cum exterius usque ad corpus extenditur, prius per oculos indicatur. Ipsi quippe per fastum tumoris inflati, quasi ex sublimi respiciunt, et quo se deprimunt, altius extollunt. Nisi enim superbia per oculos quasi per quasdam se fenestras ostenderet, nequaquam Deo Psalmista dixisset: Populum humilem salvum facies, et oculos superborum humiliabis (Psal. XVII, 28). Nisi se superbia per oculos funderet, Salomon quoque de Judaeae elatione non diceret: Generatio cujus excelsi sunt oculi, et palpebrae ejus in altum subrectae (Prov. XXX, 13). Quia ergo per corporeum animal Leviathan iste signatur, et superbia usque ad corpus prodiens apertius oculis principatur, antiquus hostis quasi de sublimi omnes videre describitur. Sed quia multa ad ostendendum humani generis inimicum prolata sunt, valde mens appetit, ut in fine locutionis dominicae, unum aliquid manifestius exprimatur, unde membra illius brevi nobis designatione monstrentur. Sequitur:

CAPUT XXIII.

IBID. Ipse est rex super universos filios superbiae. 47. Radix vitiorum et malorum omnium superbia. Ut Leviathan iste in cunctis quae superius dicta sunt caderet, sola se superbia perculit. Neque enim per tot illos vitiorum ramos aresceret, nisi per hanc prius in radice putruisset. Scriptum est namque: Omnis peccati initium superbia (Eccli. X, 15). Per hanc enim ipse succubuit, per hanc se sequentem hominem stravit. Eo etenim telo salutem nostrae immortalitatis impetiit, quo vitam suae beatitudinis exstinxit. Sed idcirco hanc Dominus fini suae locutionis inseruit, ut cum post mala omnia Leviathan istius superbiam diceret, quid esset malis omnibus deterius indicaret. Quamvis etiam per hoc quod in imo ponitur vitiorum radix esse monstretur. Sicut enim inferius radix tegitur, sed ab illa rami extrinsecus expanduntur, ita se superbia intrinsecus celat, sed ab illa protinus aperta vitia pullulant. Nulla quippe mala ad publicum prodirent, nisi haec mentem in occulto constringeret. Haec est quae Leviathan istius sensum fervescere sicut ollam facit. Unde et humanas mentes in quodam fervore insaniae concutit, sed per aperta opera qualiter concussi animam evertat ostendit. Intus namque prius ebullit in elatione, quod foris postmodum spumat in opere [Vet. XVIII.] 48. Non unam tantum virtutem, ut caetera vitia, sed omnes expugnat. Sed quia occasio de superbiae disputatione se praebuit, debemus hanc subtilius sollicitiusque discutere, atque ad humanas mentes quanta vel qualis veniat, 1138 et quibus qualiterve subripiat, demonstrare. Alia quippe vitia eas solummodo virtutes impetunt quibus ipsa destruuntur, ut videlicet ira patientiam, gastrimargia abstinentiam, libido continentiam expugnet. Superbia autem, quam vitiorum radicem diximus, nequaquam unius virtutis exstinctione contenta, contra cuncta animae membra se erigit, et quasi generalis ac pestifer morbus corpus omne corrumpit, ut quidquid illa invadente agitur, etiam si esse virtus ostenditur, non per hoc Deo, sed soli vanae gloriae serviatur. Quasi enim tyrannus quidam obsessam civitatem intercipit, cum mentem superbia irrumpit; et quo ditiorem quemque ceperit eo in dominio durior exsurgit, quia quo amplius res virtutis sine humilitate agitur, eo latius ista dominatur. Quisquis vero ejus in se tyrannidem captiva mente susceperit, hoc primum damnum patitur, quod, clauso cordis oculo, judicii aequitatem perdit. Nam cuncta quae ab aliis vel bene geruntur displicent, et sola ei quae ipse vel prave egerit placent. Semper aliena opera despicit, semper miratur quae ipse facit, quia et quidquid egerit, egisse se singulariter credit, atque in eo quod exhibet per gloriae cupiditatem, sibimetipsi favet per cogitationem, et cum se in cunctis transcendere caeteros aestimat, per lata cogitationum spatia secum deambulans, laudes suas tacitus clamat. Nonnunquam vero ad tantam elationem mens ducitur, ut in eo quod tumet, etiam per ostentationem locutionis effrenetur. Sed tanto facilius ruina sequitur, quanto apud se quisque impudentius exaltatur. Hinc enim scriptum est: Ante ruinam exaltatur cor (Dan. IV, 26). Hinc per Danielem dicitur: In aula Babylonis deambulabat rex, responditque, et ait: Nonne haec est Babylon magna, quam ego aedificavi in domum regni, in robore fortitudinis meae, in gloria decoris mei (Prov. XVI, 18)? Sed hunc tumorem quam concita vindicta represserit, illico adjunxit, dicens: Cum adhuc sermo esset in ore regis, vox de coelo ruit: Tibi dicitur, Nabochodonosor rex: Regnum transiet a te, et ab hominibus te ejicient, et cum bestiis ferisque erit habitatio tua; fenum quasi bos comedes, et septem tempora mutabuntur super te (Ibid., 28). Ecce quia tumor mentis usque ad aperta verba se protulit, patientia judicis protinus usque ad sententiam erupit; tantoque hunc districtius perculit, quanto ejus se superbia immoderatius erexit; et quia enumerando bona dixit in quibus sibi placuit, enumerata mala in quibus feriretur, audivit. [Vet. XIX.] 49. Alia ex saecularibus rebus, alia ex spiritualibus oritur elatio. Alia praelatorum superbia, alia subjectorum virtutum mater humilitas. Soli ruinae crescit quod aedificant superbi. Sciendum vero est quod ipsa haec de qua tractamus elatio alios ex rebus saecularibus, alios vero ex spiritalibus possidet. Alter namque intumescit auro, alter eloquio, alter infimis et terrenis rebus, alter summis coelestibusque virtutibus; una tamen eademque res ante oculos Dei agitur, quamvis ad humana corda veniens in eorum obtutibus diverso amictu pallietur. Nam cum is qui de terrena prius gloria superbiebat postmodum de sanctitate extollitur, nequaquam cor ejus elatio deseruit, sed ad eum consueta veniens, ut cognosci nequeat, vestem mutavit. 1139 50. Sciendum quoque est quod aliter haec praepositos atque aliter subditos tentat. Praelato namque in cogitationibus suggerit quia solo vitae merito super caeteros excrevit; et si qua ab eo bene aliquando gesta sunt, haec importune ejus animo objicit; et cum hunc Deo singulariter placuisse insinuat, quo facilius suggesta persuadeat, ipsam ad testimonium potestatis traditae retributionem vocat, dicens quia nisi omnipotens Deus te his hominibus meliorem cerneret, omnes hos sub tuo regimine non dedisset; ejusque mox mentem erigit, viles atque inutiles eos qui subjecti sunt ostendit, ita ut nullum jam quasi dignum respiciat cui aequanimiter loquatur. Unde et mox mentis tranquillitas in iram vertitur, quia dum cunctos despicit, dum sensum vitamque omnium sine moderamine reprehendit, tanto effrenatius se in iracundiam dilatat, quanto eos qui sibi commissi sunt esse sibimet indignos putat. [Vet. XX.] 51. At contra cum subjectorum cor superbia instigat, hoc summopere nititur agere, ut sua acta considerare funditus negligant, et semper tacitis cogitationibus rectoris sui judices fiant; qui dum in illo quod reprehendere debeant importune respiciunt, in semetipsis quod corrigant nunquam vident. Unde et tanto atrocius pereunt, quanto a se oculos avertunt, quia in hujus vitae itinere offendentes corruunt, dum alibi intendunt. Et quidem peccatores se asserunt, nec tamen tantum ut tam noxiae in regimine personae traderentur. Et dum ejus facta despiciunt, dum praecepta contemnunt, ad tantam usque insaniam devolvuntur, ut Deum res humanas curare non aestiment, quia ei qui quasi jure reprehenditur esse se commissos dolent. Sicque dum contra rectorem superbiunt, etiam contra judicia conditoris intumescunt; et dum pastoris sui vitam dijudicant, ipsam quoque sapientiam omnia disponentis impugnant. Saepe autem rectoris sui dictis proterve obviant, et eamdem vocis superbiam libertatem vocant. Sic quippe elatio se quasi pro libertatis rectitudine objicit, sicut saepe se et timor pro humilitate supponit. Nam sicut plerique reticent ex timore, et tamen tacere se aestimant ex humilitate, ita nonnulli loquuntur per impatientiam elationis, et tamen loqui se credunt per libertatem rectitudinis. Aliquando autem subditi proterva quae sentiunt nequaquam produnt; et hi quorum loquacitas vix compescitur, nonnunquam ex sola amaritudine intimi rancoris obmutescunt. Qui, per dolorem mentis procacitatis suae verba subtrahentes, cum male loqui soleant, pejus tacent, quia cum peccantes aliquid de correctione audiunt, indignantes etiam responsionis verba suspendunt. Cum his quando aspere agitur, saepe ad querelae vocem de hac ipsa asperitate prosiliunt. Cum vero eos magistri sui blande praeveniunt, de hac ipsa humilitate qua praeventi sunt gravius indignantur, et tanto eorum mens vastius accenditur, quanto consideratius infirma judicatur. Hi nimirum, quia humilitatem, quae virtutum mater est, nesciunt, usum laboris sui perdunt, etiamsi qua bona sunt quae operari videantur, quia surgentis fabricae 1140 robusta celsitudo non figitur, quae nequaquam per fundamenti fortitudinem in petra solidatur. Soli ergo ruinae crescit quod aedificant, quia ante molem fabricae humilitatis fundamina non procurant. Quos bene ab intimis prodimus, si paucis in exterioribus ostendamus. 52. Imago superbi. Cunctis namque superba apud se cogitatione tumentibus inest clamor in locutione, amaritudo in silentio, dissolutio in hilaritate, furor in tristitia, inhonestas in actione, honestas in imagine, erectio in incessu, rancor in responsione. Horum mens semper est ad irrogandas contumelias valida, ad tolerandas infirma; ab obediendum pigra, ad lacessendos vero alios importuna; ad ea quae facere et debet et praevalet ignava, ad ea autem quae facere non debet nec praevalet parata. Haec in eo quod sponte non appetit nulla exhortatione flectitur, ad hoc autem quod latenter desiderat quaerit ut cogatur, quia dum metuit ex desiderio suo vilescere, optat vim in ipsa sua voluntate tolerare. [Vet. XXI.] 53. Exhortatio ad humilitatem. Igitur quia humanos animos aliter tentari ex rebus carnalibus, atque aliter ex spiritualibus diximus, audiant illi: Omnis caro fenum, et gloria ejus sicut flos feni (Isai. XL, 6). Audiant et isti, quod quibusdam post miracula dicitur: Nescio vos unde sitis, discedite a me, omnes operarii iniquitatis (Luc. XIII, 27). Audiant illi: Divitiae si affluant, nolite cor apponere (Psal. LXI, 11). Audiant isti quia fatuae virgines, quae cum vacuis vasculis veniunt, ab internis nuptiis excluduntur (Matth. XXV, 12). Rursum, quia aliter tentari praelatos, atque aliter subditos praefati sumus, audiant illi quod per quemdam sapientem dicitur: Ducem te constituerunt? noli extolli, sed esto in illis quasi unus ex eis (Eccli. XXXII, 1). Audiant isti: Obedite praepositis vestris, et subjacete eis; ipsi enim pervigilant quasi rationem reddituri pro animabus vestris (Hebr. XIII, 17). Audiant illi, cum de accepta potestate gloriantur, hoc quod Abrahae voce ardenti diviti dicitur: Memento, fili, quia recepisti bona in vita tua (Luc. XVI, 25). Audiant isti, cum contra rectores suos in querelas prosiliunt, hoc quod murmuranti populo Moysi et Aaron vocibus respondetur: Nec contra nos est murmur vestrum, sed contra Dominum. Nos enim quid sumus (Exod. XVI, 8)? Audiant illi: Turbabuntur in conspectu ejus patris orphanorum et judiciis viduarum (Psal. LXVII, 5). Audiant isti qui contra contumaciam subditorum dicitur: Qui resistit potestati, Dei ordinationi resistit (Rom. XIII, 2). Audiant simul omnes: Deus superbis resistit, humilibus autem dat gratiam (Jac. IV, 6). Audiant omnes: Immundus est apud Deum omnis qui exaltat cor suum (Prov. XVI, 5, juxta text. Hebr. et LXX). Audiant omnes: Quid superbis, terra et cinis (Eccli. X, 9)? Contra hujus languoris pestem audiamus cuncti quod magistra Veritas docet dicens: Discite a me, quia mitis sum et humilis corde (Matth. XI, 29). [Vet. XXII.] 54. Hominem superbum non esse, docet Deus humilis.

Ad hoc namque unigenitus Dei Filius formam infirmitatis nostrae suscepit, ad hoc invisibilis, non solum visibilis, sed etiam despectus apparuit, ad hoc contumeliarum ludibria, irrisionum opprobria, passionumque tormenta toleravit, ut superbum non esse hominem doceret humilis Deus. Quanta ergo humilitatis virtus est, propter quam solam veraciter edocendam is qui sine aestimatione 1141 magnus est, usque ad passionem factus est parvus? Quia enim originem perditioni nostrae superbia praebuit diaboli, instrumentum redemptionis nostrae inventa est humilitas Dei. Hostis quippe noster magnus inter omnia conditus, videri super omnia voluit elatus. Redemptor autem noster magnus manens super omnia, fieri inter omnia dignatus est parvus. 55. Quid mortis auctor doceat, quid vitae conditor. Sed melius et elationis causam detegimus, et fundamenta humilitatis aperimus, si brevi commemoratione perstringimus quid mortis auctor, quid vitae conditor dicat. Ille namque ait: In coelum ascendam (Isa. XIV, 13); iste autem per Prophetam dicit: Repleta est malis anima mea, et vita mea inferno appropinquavit (Psal. LXXXVII, 4). Ille dicit: Supra astra coeli exaltabo solium meum (Isai. XVI, 13); iste humano generi a paradisi sedibus expulso dicit: Ecce venio cito, et habitabo in medio tui (Zach. II, 10). Ille dicit: Sedebo in monte testamenti, in lateribus Aquilonis (Isai. XIV, 13): iste dicit: Ego sum vermis, et non homo, approbrium hominum, et abjectio plebis (Psal. XXI, 7). Ille dicit: Ascendam super altitudinem nubium, similis ero Altissimo (Isai. XIV, 14); iste, cum in forma Dei esset, non rapinam arbitratus est esse se aequalem Deo, sed semetipsum exinanivit, formam servi accipiens (Philip. II, 6); et per membra sua loquitur dicens: Domine, quis similis tibi (Psal. XXXIV, 10)? Ille per membra sua loquitur, dicens: Nescio Dominum, et Israel non dimittam (Exod. V, 2). Iste per semetipsum dicit: Si dixero quia non novi eum, ero similis vobis mendax; sed novi eum, et sermonem ejus servo (Joan. VIII, 55). Ille dicit: Mea sunt flumina, et ego feci ea (Ezech. XXIX, 9); iste dicit:

Non possum a meipso facere quidquam (Joan. V, 30), et rursum: Pater meus in me manens, ipse facit opera (Joan. XIV, 10). Ille regna omnia ostendens, dicit: Tibi dabo potestatem hanc universam et gloriam illorum, quia mihi tradita sunt, et cui volo do illa (Luc. IV, 6); iste dicit: Calicem quidem meum bibetis, sedere autem ad dexteram, vel ad sinistram meam, non est meum dare vobis, sed quibus paratum est a Patre meo (Matth. XX, 23). Ille dicit: Eritis sicut dii, scientes bonum et malum (Genes. III, 5); iste dicit: Non est vestrum nosse tempora vel momenta quae Pater posuit in sua potestate (Act. I, 7). Ille ut voluntas divina despici, et ut possit propria suaderi, dicit: Cur praecepit vobis Deus ut non comederetis ex omni ligno paradisi (Genes. III, 1)? Et paulo post: Scit enim Deus, 1142 quod in quacunque die comederitis ex eo, aperientur oculi vestri (Ibid. 5); iste dicit: Non quaero voluntatem meam, sed voluntatem ejus qui misit me (Joan. V, 30). Ille per membra sua loquitur, dicens: Nullum pratum sit quod non pertranseat luxuria nostra; coronemus nos rosis antequam marcescant, ubique relinquamus signa laetitiae nostrae (Sap. II, 8); iste membris suis praenuntiat, dicens: Plorabitis et flebitis vos, mundus autem gaudebit (Joan. XVI, 20). Ille nihil aliud mentes sibi subditas docet quam celsitudinis culmen appetere, cuncta aequalia mentis tumore transcendere, societatem omnium hominum alta elatione transire, ac sese et contra potentiam conditoris erigere, sicut de eisdem per Psalmistam dicitur: Transierunt in dispositionem cordis, cogitaverunt et locuti sunt nequitias, iniquitatem in excelso locuti sunt (Psal. LXXII, 6, 7, 8); iste ad sputa, ad palmas, ad colaphos, ad spineam coronam, ad crucem, ad lanceam, atque ad mortem veniens, membra sua admonet, dicens: Si quis mihi ministrat, me sequatur (Joan. XII, 26). [Vet. XXIII.] 56. Evidentissimum reprobationis signum, superbia; electionis, humilitas. Quia igitur Redemptor noster corda regit humilium, et Leviathan iste rex dicitur superborum, aperte cognoscimus quod evidentissimum reproborum signum superbia est, at contra humilitas electorum. Cum ergo quam quisque habeat cognoscitur, sub quo rege militet invenitur. Unusquisque enim quasi quemdam titulum portat operis, quo facile ostendat sub cujus serviat potestate rectoris. Unde et per Evangelium dicitur: Ex fructibus eorum cognoscetis eos (Matth. VII, 16). Ne igitur nos Leviathan istius membra vel mira faciendo fallerent, apertum signum Dominus quo deprehendi valeant demonstravit, dicens: Ipse est rex super universos filios superbiae. Qui etsi quando fictam speciem humilitatis assumunt, semetipsos tamen celare in omnibus nequaquam possunt, quia eorum superbia diu latere non sustinens, cum ex alia tegitur, ex alia actione denudatur. Qui vero sub rege humilitatis militant, semper pavidi, atque ex omni latere circumspecti, adversum jacula elationis pugnant, et quasi contra venientes ictus solum magis in suo corpore oculum custodiunt, dum in semetipsis principaliter humilitatem tuentur.

LIBER TRIGESIMUS QUINTUS, ET ULTIMUS.

In quo per anacephalaeosim multa jam dicta revocantur, et immensum hoc opus demississima humanae infirmitatis confessione absolvitur. [Vet. et Rec. I.] 1143 1. Quid hoc libro sit praestandum. Quia iste ultimus hujus operis liber est, et, locis difficilioribus pertractatis, minus obscura sunt quae supersunt, libet hunc indulgentius remissiusque transcurrere. Velut emenso enim magno mari, jam littus cernimus, et intentionis nostrae vela deponentes, non eodem quo prius impetu ducimur, sed tamen adhuc ex impulsione pristini flatus imus. Quasi anxietatis nostrae ventus cecidit, sed tamen ejus vis jam seipsa tranquillior usque ad stationem nos littoris impellit. Igitur postquam fideli famulo Dominus Leviathan hostis ejus quam sit et fortis et callidus ostendit, dum vires illius subtiliter fraudesque patefecit, beatus Job ad utraque respondit, dicens:

CAPUT PRIMUM [Rec. II].

CAP. XLII, VERS. 2. Scio quia omnia potes, et nulla te latet cogitatio. 2. Diaboli viribus Dei omnipotentia, machinationibus infinita Sapientia opponitur. Contra immanes quippe vires ejus intulit: Scio quia omnia potes; contra occultas vero machinationes illius subjunxit: Et nulla te latet cogitatio. Unde et mox Leviathan eidem exprobrat, dicens: VERS. 3. Quis est iste qui celat consilium absque scientia? Absque scientia enim Leviathan celat consilium; quia quamvis contra infirmitatem nostram multis fraudibus occultetur, protectoris tamen nostri sancta nobis inspiratione detegitur. Absque scientia celat consilium, quia licet tentatos lateat, latere tamen protectorem non potest tentatorum. Igitur audita fortitudine et calliditate diaboli, audita etiam creatoris nostri potentia, quae et illum valenter reprimit, et nos misericorditer tegit, quaesumus, beate Job, ut quae de temetipso sentis nobis minime occultes. Sequitur:

CAPUT II.

IBID. Ideo insipienter locutus sum, et quae ultra modum excederent scientiam meam. 3. Quidquid in rebus creatis, Deo comparatur, inane fit et nihil. Omnis humana sapientia quantolibet acumine polleat, divinae sapientiae comparata, insipientia est. Omnia enim humana, quae justa, quae pulchra sunt, Dei justitiae et pulchritudini comparata, nec justa nec pulchra sunt, nec omnino sunt. Beatus itaque Job ea quae dixerat sapienter se dixisse crederet, si verba superioris sapientiae non audiret. 1144 In cujus comparatione stultum est nostrum omne quod sapit. Et qui sapienter quidem locutus hominibus fuerat, divinas tamen sententias audiens, sapientius se cognoscit non esse sapientem. Hinc est quod Abraham inter verba dominica nil se nisi pulverem vidit, dicens: Loquar ad Dominum meum, cum sim pulvis et cinis (Genes. XVIII, 27). Hinc est quod Moyses omni Aegyptiorum sapientia instructus, ex quo loquentem Dominum audivit, impeditioris et tardioris linguae se esse deprehendit, dicens: Obsecro, Domine, non sum eloquens; ab heri enim et nudiustertius, ex quo locutus es ad servum tuum, impeditioris et tardioris linguae sum (Exod. IV, 10). Hinc est quod Isaias, postquam sedentem Dominum super solium excelsum atque elevatum vidit, postquam seraphim duabus alis faciem, duabus velare pedes, et duabus volare conspexit, postquam id quod est Sanctus, Sanctus, Sanctus Dominus Deus exercituum, alterum ad alterum clamare audivit (Isai. VI), ad seipsum rediens, ait: Vae mihi quia tacui, quoniam vir pollutus labiis ego sum, et in medio populi polluta labia habentis ego habito (Ibid., 5). Moxque ipsam pollutionem unde cognoverat subdens, ait: Et regem Dominum exercituum vidi oculis meis (Ibid.). Hinc etiam Jeremias divina verba audiens, verba se non habere cognovit, dicens: A a a, Domine Deus, ecce nescio loqui, quia puer ego sum (Jerem. I, 6). [Vet. II.] Hinc Ezechiel loquens de quatuor animalibus, dicit: Cum fieret vox supra firmamentum, quod erat supra caput eorum, stabant et submittebant alas suas (Ezech. I, 25). Quid enim per volatum animalium, nisi evangelistarum atque doctorum sublimitas designatur? Vel quid sunt alae animalium, nisi sanctorum contemplationes eos ad coelestia sublevantes? Sed cum fit vox supra firmamentum, quod super caput eorum est, stantes submittunt alas suas, quia cum internam vocem supernae sapientiae audiunt, quasi volatus sui alas deponunt, quia videlicet ipsam veritatis altitudinem minus se contemplari posse cognoscunt. Ad vocem ergo desuper venientem alas deponere est cognita superna potentia, virtutes proprias humiliare et consideratione creatoris nil de se aliud quam abjecta sentire. Sancti itaque viri dum divinitatis sententias audiunt, quanto magis contemplando 1145 proficiunt, tanto amplius despiciendo quod sunt, aut nihil, aut prope nihil se esse cognoscunt. Respondeat ergo divinis sermonibus beatus Job, et sapienter proficiens, stultum se esse deprehendat, dicens: Insipienter locutus sum, et quae ultra modum excederent scientiam meam. Ecce tanto se amplius redarguit, quanto amplius proficit, et scientiam suam ultra modum excessisse se credidit, quia in verbis Domini plus quam aestimaverat secreta ejus sapientiae agnovit. Sequitur:

CAPUT III [Rec. III].

VERS. 4. Audi, et ego loquar; interrogabo te, et responde mihi. 4. Quid sit hominem interrogare Deum; quidve Deum homini respondere. Audire nostrum est sono aliunde venienti aurem alio positam commodare. At contra Deo, cui nil extra est, audire proprie est sub semetipso surgentia desideria nostra percipere. Ad Deum ergo, qui et tacentium corda cognoscit, loqui nostrum est non vocibus gutturis id quod sentimus prodere, sed promptis ad illum desideriis inhiare. Et quia ideo quisque interrogat, ut discere valeat quod ignorat, homini Deum interrogare est in conspectu ejus nescientem se cognoscere. Respondere autem Dei, est eum qui se humiliter nescientem cognoverit occultis inspirationibus erudire. Ait ergo beatus Job:

Audi, et ego loquar. Ac si diceret: Misericorditer desideria mea percipe, ut dum haec tua pietas percipiens adjuvat, ad te multipliciora consurgant. Bona quippe vota quoties effectum percipiunt, multiplicantur. Unde alias scriptum est: Ego clamavi, quoniam exaudisti me (Psal. XVI, 6). Non enim ait: Quia clamavi, exaudisti me; sed clamavi, quoniam exaudisti me. Qui enim loquens exauditus fuerat, votis proficientibus exauditus clamabat: Interrogabo te, et responde mihi. Ac si diceret: Nescientem me ex tuae scientiae contemplatione cognosco. Interroganti igitur responde, id est stultitiam propriam humiliter cognoscentem doce. Quia enim interrogaret ipse ex desiderio humilitatis, et Deum sibi respondere quaereret ex magisterio aspirationis, verbis sequentibus declaratur. Interrogaturum quippe se perhibuit, sed nihil interrogando subjungit. Nam sola de se humilia sentiens, et quae misericorditer a Domino perceperit agnoscens, protinus subdit:

CAPUT IV [Rec. IV].

VERS. 5. Auditu auris audivi te, nunc autem oculus meus videt te. 5. Quantum Job per flagella in Dei et sui cognitione profecerit. His nimerum verbis aperte indicat quia quanto visus superior est auditu, tanto differt ab eo quod prius exstitit, et hoc quod postmodum per flagella profecit. Et quia interno oculo veritatis lumen magis conspexerat, humanitatis suae tenebras dijudicans plus videbat. Unde et sequitur:

CAPUT V [Rec. V].

VERS. 6. Idcirco ipse me reprehendo. 6. Quanto se quisque magis videt, sibi magis displicet. Quanto enim quisque se minus videt, tanto sibi minus displicet; et quanto majoris gratiae lumen percipit, tanto amplius reprehensibilem se esse cognoscit. Cum enim intrinsecus sublevatur per omne quod est, ad eam quam super se conspicit regulam congruere nititur.

Et quia adhuc humana infirmitas praepedit, cernit quia ei ex non minima parte dissentit; totumque ex se illi onerosum est, quod internae regulae conveniens non est. Quam regulam beatus Job post flagella proficiens amplius suscipit, et a semetipso in magna sui redargutione dissentit, 1146 dicens: Idcirco ipse me reprehendo. Sed quia nulla est cognitio reprehensionis, si non sequantur etiam lamenta poenitudinis, recte post reprehensionem subditur:

CAPUT VI.

IBID. Et ago poenitentiam in favilla et cinere. 7. Vana est nostri cognitio quam non sequitur poenitentia. In cilicio et cinere poenitentiae quid considerandum. In favilla etenim et cinere poenitentiam agere est, contemplata summa essentia, nil aliud quam favillam se cineremque cognoscere. Unde et civitati reprobae in Evangelio Dominus dicit: Si in Tyro et Sidone factae fuissent virtutes quae factae sunt in vobis, olim in cilicio et cinere poenitentiam egissent (Matth. XI, 21). In cilicio quippe asperitas et punctio peccatorum, in cinere autem pulvis ostenditur mortuorum. Et idcirco utrumque hoc adhiberi ad poenitentiam solet, ut in punctione cilicii cognoscamus quid per culpam fecimus, et in favilla cineris perpendamus quid per judicium facti sumus. Considerentur ergo in cilicio pungentia vitia, consideretur in cinere per mortis sententiam subsequens justa poena vitiorum. Quia enim post peccatum carnis contumeliae surrexerunt, videat homo in asperitate cilicii superbiendo quid fecit, videat in cinere usquequo peccando pervenit. Potest quoque cilicio ipsa per recordationem atque poenitentiam dolorum punctio designari. Nam hoc quod ait beatus Job: Ipse me reprehendo, quasi quodam cilicio pungitur, dum in mente sua asperis redargutionum stimulis confricatur. In cinere autem agit poenitentiam, quia ex primo peccato quid per justum judicium factus sit solerter attendit, dicens: Ago poenitentiam in favilla et cinere. Ac si aperte dicat: De nullo auctoris mei dono superbio, quia sumptus ex pulvere, per illatae mortis sententiam ad pulverem me redire cognosco. [Vet. III.] 8. Dei de Job et amicis ejus judicium. Auditis igitur cunctis sermonibus Job, cognitis etiam responsionibus amicorum, libet ad interni judicis sententiam spectationem mentis nostrae convertere, eique dicere: Ecce, Domine, utrasque in conspectu tuo disserentium partes audivimus, et Job quidem in hoc certamine virtutis suae facta revolvere, et amicos ejus contra eum cognovimus tuae justitiae gloriam defensare. Inter haec autem quid nostra mens sentiat agnoscis. Neque enim possumus eorum nos dicta reprehendere, quos defensioni tuae cognoscimus deservire. Sed ecce assistunt partes, exspectant sententiam; profer ergo, Domine, ex invisibili regula subtilissimum tuae discretionis examen, et quis in contentione ista sit rectius locutus ostende. Sequitur: VERS. Postquam autem locutus est Dominus verba haec ad Job, dixit ad Eliphaz Themanitem: Iratus est furor meus in te, et in duos amicos tuos, quoniam non estis locuti coram me rectum, sicut servus meus Job. 9. Ille absolvitur, condemnantur illi. Cur? O Domine, judicii tui sententia indicat quantum a luce tuae rectitudinis caecitas nostra discordat. Ecce te judice beatum Job victorem esse cognoscimus, quem in te peccasse loquendo credebamus. Te judice addicti sunt, qui beati Job se merita transcendere pro te loquendo crediderunt. Quia igitur ex divina sententia quid de partibus aestimemus agnovimus, nunc ejusdem sententiae paulo subtilius verba pensemus. Quomodo enim superius beatus Job reprehenditur, si in comparatione ejus rectitudinis amici illius nequaquam 1147 coram Domino locuti rectum memorantur? An adhuc illa de eo sententia confirmatur, qua antiquo hosti dicitur: Vidisti servum meum Job, quod non sit ei similis super terram (Job. I, 8). Sed quid est hoc, quod et laudatur hosti, et in seipso reprehenditur: in seipso autem reprehenditur, et tamen amicis loquentibus antefertur, nisi quod sanctus vir cunctos meritorum suorum virtute transcendit; sed eo ipso quod homo fuit, ante Dei oculos sine reprehensione esse non potuit? In sancto quippe homine in hac interim vita commorante, divini examinis regula habet adhuc quod judicet, quamvis jam ex comparatione caeterorum hominum habeat quod laudet. Beatus igitur Job pro culpa se credidit, et non pro gratia, flagellari; resecari in se aestimavit vitia, non autem merita augeri. Et in eo reprehenditur, quod intentionem flagelli fuisse aliam suspicatur, et tamen amicis resistentibus interni judicii definitione praelatus est. [Vet IV.] Unde aperte colligitur quantae justitiae fuerit in eo quod contra amicorum verba innocentiam suae operationis astruxit, qui divino judicio etiam ipsis ejusdem divini judicii defensoribus antefertur. In exordio autem libri hujus agnovimus quia de illo Satan Domino dixerat: Mitte manum tuam, et tange eum, et vide si non in faciem benedicat tibi (Job. II, 5). Ad quam petitionem beatus Job damnis, orbitate, vulneribus et verborum scandalis tangi permittitur, quia videlicet certus qui eum laudaverat exstitit quod nequaquam juxta assertionem diaboli sanctus vir in maledictionis culpam laberetur. Sicut ergo et superius diximus, quisquis beatum Job in locutione sua aestimat post flagella peccasse, aperte Dominum judicat in sua assertione perdidisse. Et quamvis Dominus ad diabolum loquens, bona illius praesentia praetulit, non autem ejus perseverantiam spopondit, sciendum tamen est quia nequaquam ejus justitiam permittendo tentari praetulisset, si eum justum in tentatione persistere non posse praevideret. Permisso itaque divinitus in ejus tentatione diabolo, quisquis eum in tentatione succubuisse existimat, ignorantiam permittentis accusat. 10. Alia Dei, alia hominum judicia. Approbemus igitur in dictis suis veraciter Job, ne Deum in sua providentia nequiter accusemus. Et quidem quantum ad humana judicia, in verbis suis amici ejus multa illo rectius dixisse crederentur; sed veritas aliam ex occulto regulam proferens, ait: Non estis locuti coram me rectum, sicut servus meus Job. Coram me, ait, id est intus, ubi saepe multorum vita displicet, quae etiam foris hominibus placet. Unde caute nimis in laudem justorum conjugum dictum est: Erant justi ambo ante Deum (Luc. I, 6). Non enim secura laus est, justos ante homines apparere. Saepe enim humana sententia velut in Deo magnum quempiam approbat; sed hunc omnipotens Deus, qui quasi ex se approbatur, ignorat. Hinc est enim quod Psalmista vigilanter exorat, dicens: Dirige in conspectu tuo viam meam (Psal. V, 9). 1148 Nimirum quia plerumque in conspectu hominum recta via creditur etiam quae a veritatis itinere depravatur. Et notandum quod non dicitur: Non estis locuti coram me rectum sicut Job, sed, sicut servus meus Job, ut videlicet interpositione servitutis, dum eum quasi sub quadam peculiaritate commemorat, cuncta quae in defensione sua dixerat, quia non contumaci superbia, sed humili veritate dixerit ostendat. [Vet. V.] Sed quia justus est et misericors Deus, amicos ejus et per justitiam districte redarguit, et per misericordiam benigne convertit. Nam sequitur:

CAPUT VIII [Rec. VII].

VERS. 8. Sumite vobis septem tauros et septem arietes, et ite ad servum meum Job, et offerte holocaustum pro vobis. Job autem servus meus orabit pro vobis; faciem ejus suscipiam, ut non vobis imputetur stultitia. 11. Deus amicos Job per justitiam redarguit, et per misericordiam convertit. Ecce justus et misericors Deus nec culpas sine increpatione deserit, nec reatum sine conversione derelinquit. Quia enim internus est medicus, primo putredinem vulneris innotuit, et post remedia consequendae salutis indicavit. Saepe autem jam diximus quod amici beati Job haereticorum speciem teneant, qui Deum dum defendere nituntur offendunt, quoniam in dictis suis veritati rebelles sunt, cui famulari se in falsa assertione suspicantur. Quia igitur omnipotens Deus saepe illos corpori sanctae Ecclesiae per cognitionem veritatis inviscerat, bene ipsa quoque eorum conversio, quae saepe misericorditer agitur, per hanc veniam quam amici Job percipiunt designantur. 12. Haeretici per sacrificium a se oblatum,

Deum placare nequeunt. Reconciliari non possunt nisi per Ecclesiam. Notandum vero magnopere est quod conversionis suae sacrificium Domino non per se, sed per Job jubentur offerre. Nimirum haeretici cum ab errore redeunt, erga se iram Domini suo per se oblato sacrificio placare nequaquam possunt, nisi ad catholicam Ecclesiam, quam beatus Job significat, convertantur, ut salutem suam ejus precibus obtineant, cujus fidem perversis assertionibus impugnabant. Ait enim: Job servus meus orabit pro vobis; faciem ejus suscipiam, ut non vobis imputetur stultitia. Ac si aperte haereticis dicat: Sacrificia vestra non accipio, petitionum vestrarum verba non audio, nisi per intercessionem illius, cujus professionis verba de me veracia recognosco. Et vos quidem tauros atque arietes ad exhibenda sacrificia conversionis vestrae deducite, sed a me salutem vestram per catholicam Ecclesiam, quam diligo, postulate. Ipsi enim volo dimittere id quod mihi in ipsa deliquistis, ut haec vestram incolumitatem obtineat, quae ex vestro languore laborabat. [Vet. VI.] 13. Ecclesiae praerogativae. Sola quippe est per quam sacrificium Dominus libenter accipiat (24, q. 1, c. 22, § Sola quippe), sola quae pro errantibus fiducialiter intercedat. Unde etiam de agni hostia Dominus praecepit, dicens: In una domo comedetur, nec efferetis de carnibus ejus foras (Exod. XII, 46). In una namque domo agnus comeditur, quia in una catholica Ecclesia vera hostia Redemptoris immolatur. 1149 De cujus carnibus divina lex efferri foras prohibet, quia dari sanctum canibus vetat (Matth. VII, 6). Sola est in qua opus bonum fructuose peragitur, unde et mercedem denarii non nisi qui intra vineam laboraverant acceperunt (Matth. XX, 8). Sola est quae intra se positos valida charitas compage custodit. Unde et aqua diluvii arcam quidem ad sublimiora sustulit, omnes autem quos extra arcam invenit exstinxit (Genss. VII, 20, 21, seq.). Sola est in qua superna mysteria veraciter contemplemur. Unde et ad Moysen Dominus dicit.: Est locus apud me, et stabis supra petram (Exod. XXXIII, 21). Et paulo post: Tollam manum meam, et videbis posteriora mea (Ibid., XXIII, 24). Quia enim ex sola catholica Ecclesia veritas conspicitur (Q. 1, c. 22), apud se esse locum Dominus perhibet de quo videatur. In petra Moyses ponitur, ut Dei speciem contempletur, quia nisi quis fidei soliditatem tenuerit, divinam praesentiam non cognoscit. De qua soliditate Dominus dicit: Super hanc petram aedificabo Ecclesiam meam (Matth. XVI, 18). Quid est ergo hoc loco dicere ad amicos Job: Ite ad Job, nisi petram ascendite? Quid est, Faciem ejus pro vobis suscipiam, ut non vobis imputetur stultitia, nisi id quod illic dicitur: Posteriora mea videbis (Exod. XXXIII, 23)? id est, ejus quae postmodum futura est mysteria incarnationis intelliges. 14. Haereticis ut ad Ecclesiam redeant quid praestandum. Haeretici autem pro eo quod in petra stare contemnunt, transeuntis Domini posteriora non aspiciunt, quia extra Ecclesiam positi, incarnationis ejus, sicut sunt, mysteria non agnoscunt. Sicut autem et superius diximus, per tauros cervix superbiae, per arietes vero ducatus exprimitur, qui ab haereticis, persuasis plebibus, quasi seductis gregibus, agitur. De haereticis namque superbientibus dicitur, qui infirmorum mentes male suadendo corrumpunt: Concilium taurorum inter vaccas populorum (Psal. LXVII, 31). Et quia sequentes se populos velut greges trahunt, arietes aliquando nominantur. Gregem scilicet arietes ducunt. Unde per increpationem Jeremias ait: Principes tui velut arietes (Thren. I, 6). Quia igitur haeretici cum ad sanctam Ecclesiam redeunt, superbiae elationem deserunt, et nequaquam jam quasi sequentes greges populorum cuneos ad interitum ducunt, amici beati Job offerre tauros et arietes jubentur. Tauros enim et arietes offerre in sacrificio est superbum ducatum conversionis humilitate mactare, ut edomita cervice superbiae discant obediendo sequi, qui dudum docendo praeire conabantur. Recte quoque eorum haec superbia septem sacrificiis expiatur, quia haeretici ad Ecclesiam revertentes per humilitatis hostiam dona Spiritus gratiae septiformis accipiunt, ut qui elationis suae vetustate tabuerant, novitate gratiae reformentur. 15. Septenarius numerus perfectus. Quid significet? Perfectionem aeternitatis, vitae praesentis tempus, Ecclesiae universitatem. Septenarius autem numerus apud sapientes hujus saeculi quadam sua habetur ratione perfectus, quod ex primo pari et ex primo impari consummatur. Primus enim impar ternarius est, primusque par quaternarius. Ex quibus duobus septenarius constat, qui eisdem partibus suis multiplicatus in duodenarium surgit. Nam sive tres per quatuor, seu quatuor per tres ducimus, ad duodenarium pervenimus. Sed nos quia a superno munere veritatis praedicamenta percipimus, haec fixa scientiae altitudine despiciendo calcamus, hoc procul dubio 1150 inconcussa fide retinentes, quia quos Spiritus gratiae septiformis repleverit perficit, eisque non solum Trinitatis notitiam, sed etiam virtutum quatuor, id est prudentiae, temperantiae, fortitudinis atque justitiae operationem praebet. Qui in ipsis quoque quos ingreditur suis quodammodo partibus augetur, dum et per Trinitatis notitiam quatuor virtutum actio accipitur, et per operationem virtutum quatuor usque ad manifestam Trinitatis speciem pervenitur. Et apud nos ergo septenarius perfectus est, sed longe dissimiliter, quia plene et non inaniter in duodenarium surgit, dum et per fidem opera, et rursum per opera perficit fidem. Sancti quoque apostoli gratiae septiformis Spiritu implendi, duodecim sunt electi. In quatuor enim mundi partibus Trinitatem, quae Deus est, innotescere mittebantur. Duodecim ergo electi sunt ut etiam ex ipsius numeri ratione causa claresceret quod per quatuor infima tria summa praedicarent. 16. Sive itaque hac, seu alia qualibet fortasse ratione, in Scriptura tamen sacra septenario numero aliquando secura requies aeternitatis, aliquando universitas praesentis hujus temporis, aliquando autem sanctae Ecclesiae universitas designatur. Septenario quippe numero perfectio aeternitatis innuitur, cum dies septimus in requiem Domini sanctificatus vocatur (Genes. II, 2). Cui jam vespera inesse non dicitur, quia aeternae beatitudinis requies nullo termino coarctatur. Hinc est etiam quod lege data dies septimus feriatus esse praecipitur (Exod. XX, 11), ut aeterna per illum requies designetur. Hinc est quod in annorum curriculo septenarius numerus septies multiplicatus, monade addita, ad quinquagenarium ducitur, ut perpetuam beatitudinem signans jubilaei sacratissima requies observetur (Levit. XXV, 8, 9). Hinc est quod resurgens Dominus et frequenter apparens (Joan. XXI), ultimo jam convivio cum septem discipulis comedisse describitur, quia hi qui in illo nunc perfecti sunt, aeterna per illum refectione satiantur. [Vet. VII.] 17. Rursum per septenarium numerum haec universitas temporalitatis accipitur. Hinc est enim quod per septem dies hoc totum vitae praesentis tempus evolvitur. Hinc est quod in typo sanctae Ecclesiae, quae omni tempore hunc mundum praedicando circuit, arca Domini tubis clangentibus muros Jericho diebus septem circumacta confregit (Josue. VI, 20). Hinc Propheta ait: Septies in die laudem dixi tibi (Psal. CXVIII, 164). Quod ipse rursum pro toto atque universo suae deprecationis tempore se dixisse significans, ait: Semper laus ejus in ore meo (Psal. XXXIII, 1). Quod vero per septenarium numerum praesentis vitae universitas designatur, tunc magis ostenditur, cum post eum quoque etiam octonarius subinfertur. Septenarium quippe cum adhuc alius sequitur, ex ipso ejus augmento exprimitur quod finienda temporalitas aeternitate concludatur. Hinc est enim quod Salomon admonet, dicens: Da partes septem, necnon et octo (Eccle. XI, 2). Per septenarium quippe numerum hoc quod septem diebus agitur praesens tempus expressit; per octonarium vero vitam perpetuam designavit, quam sua nobis Dominus resurrectione patefecit. Dominico scilicet die resurrexit, qui dum diem septimum, id est Sabbatum sequitur, 1151 a conditione octavus invenitur. Bene autem dicitur: Da partes septem, necnon et octo, quia ignoras quid mali futurum sit super terram (Ibid.). Ac si aperte diceretur: Sic dispensa temporalia, ut appetere non obliviscaris aeterna. Oportet namque ut in posterum bene agendo provideas, qui de venturo judicio quanta tribulatio sequatur ignoras. Hinc est quod quindecim gradibus templum ascenditur, ut ex ipsa ejus ascensione discatur quatenus per septem et octo et temporalis sollicite dispensetur actio, et provide mansio aeterna requiratur. Hinc est etiam quod dum monas in denarium surgit, centum quinquaginta psalmos Propheta cecinit. Propter hunc septenarium numerum temporalia, octonarium vero aeterna signantem, super centum viginti fideles in coenaculo residentes Spiritus sanctus effusus est (Act. II). Per septem quippe et octo quindecim componuntur, et si ab uno usque ad quindecim numerando paulatim per incrementa consurgimus, usque ad centesimum et vigesimum numerum pervenimus. Qua scilicet effusione Spiritus sancti didicerunt ut et temporalia tolerando transirent, et aeterna inhianter appeterent. 18. Rursum septenario numero sanctae Ecclesiae universitas designatur. Unde Joannes in Apocalypsi septem Ecclesiis scribit (Apoc. I, 4); sed per eas quid aliud quam universalem Ecclesiam intelligi voluit? Quae nimirum universalis Ecclesia ut plena septiformis gratiae Spiritu signaretur, Elisaeus super puerum mortuum septies inspirasse describitur. (IV Reg. IV, 34). Super exstinctum quippe populum Dominus veniens quasi septies oscitat, quia ei dona Spiritus septiformis gratiae misericorditer tribuit. Quia igitur saepe septenario numero sanctae Ecclesiae universitas figuratur, veniant ad beatum Job amici illius, et jussum divinitus offerant holocaustum. Sed vigilanter omnino septenarii numeri arcana custodiant, ut videlicet hi qui extra sunt positi prius se universitati sanctae Ecclesiae misceant, et tunc demum veniam de reatu pristinae elationis exquirant. Pro culpa sua septem sacrificia offerant, quia reatus sui ablutionem non accipiunt, nisi gratiae septiformis Spiritu universali paci a qua excisi fuerant aggregentur. Dicatur igitur: Sumite vobis septem tauros et septem arietes, et ite ad servum meum Job, et offerte holocaustum pro vobis; Job autem servus meus orabit pro vobis; faciem ejus suscipiam, ut non vobis imputetur stultitia. Ac si haereticis redeuntibus aperte diceretur: Universali vos Ecclesiae per humilitatem poenitentiae jungite, atque eam qua per vosmetipsos digni non estis veniam ejus a me precibus obtinete, qui cum per hanc veraciter sapere discitis, priores apud me vestrae sapientiae stultitiam deletis. Sequitur:

CAPUT IX [Vet. VIII].

VERS. 8. Neque enim locuti estis coram me rectum, sicut servus meus Job. 19. Sententiae iteratio in sacris litteris ejus immutabilitatis est argumentum. Haec paulo ante jam Dominus protulit, et tamen haec eadem iterando subjungit. Quid est hoc, nisi quod sententiam, quam semel judicando dixerat, iterum replicando confirmat? atque ut manifestius beati Job justitia amicorumque ejus injustitia demonstretur, ejus laus illorumque reprehensio iterata voce depromitur, ut replicata foris appareant quam fixa intus habeantur. Namque 1152 cum rex Aegypti metuenda venturae famis tempora sub boum spicarumque specie gemina visione cognovisset, voce sancti interpretis audivit: Quod vidisti secundo ad eamdem rem pertinens somnium, firmitatis indicium est (Genes. XLI, 32). Qua ex re aperte colligitur quia quidquid in eloquio divino repetitur, robustius confirmatur. Sed quia quid judex decrevit audivimus, addicti quoque quid faciant audiamus. Sequitur:

CAPUT X.

VERS. 9. Abierunt ergo Eliphaz Themanites, et Baldad Suhites, et Sophar Naamathites, et fecerunt sicut locutus fuerat ad eos Dominus, et suscepit Dominus faciem Job. 20. Ordo veniae. Horum interpretationem nominum idcirco reticemus, quia in hujus operis exordio de ea nos latius disseruisse meminimus. Intuendum vero est quia ita caute, sicut praedictum fuerat, ordo acceptae veniae custoditur, ut in sacrificiis Dominus non illorum, sed beati Job faciem suscepisse referatur. Sed quia quisquis pro aliis intercedere nititur, sibi potius ex ipsa charitate suffragatur, recte subjungitur:

CAPUT XI.

VERS. 10. Dominus quoque conversus est ad poenitentiam Job, cum oraret pro amicis suis. 21. Citius pro nobis orantes exaudimur, si oratio nostra proximi et maxime adversarii dilectione condiatur. Jam enim superius pro amicis suis exauditus ostenditur, cum factum quod praediximus memoratur: Fecerunt sicut locutus fuerat ad eos Dominus, et suscepit Dominus faciem Job. Sed cum protinus subinfertur: Dominus quoque conversus est ad poenitentiam Job, cum oraret pro amicis suis, aperte ostenditur quia etiam pro semetipso poenitens tanto citius exaudiri meruit, quanto devote pro aliis intercessit. Plus enim pro se valere preces suas efficit, qui has et pro aliis impendit. Libentius quippe sacrificium orationis accipitur, quod in conspectu misericordis judicis proximi dilectione conditur. Quod tunc veraciter quisque cumulat, si hoc etiam pro adversariis impendat. Hinc est enim quod magistra Veritas dicit: Orate pro persequentibus et calumniantibus vos (Luc. VI, 28). Hinc rursum ait: Cum stabitis ad orandum, dimittite si quid habetis adversus aliquem, ut et Pater vester qui in coelis est dimittat vobis peccata vestra (Marc. XI, 25). Quantum vero pro se obtinuit, qui pro aliis intervenit, illico demonstratur, cum subditur:

CAPUT XII [Rec. VIII].

Ibid. Addidit Dominus omnia quaecunque fuerant Job duplicia. 22. Juxta afflictionis pondus disponitur mensura consolationis. Cuncta quae amiserat duplicia recepit, quia per pietatem benigni judicis tentationis nostrae dispendium vincunt suffragia consolationum. Minus autem tentat probatio quam remuneratio consolatur, ut ex retributionis merito leve fuisse quod toleravit agnoscat, qui ex percussionis pondere grave se aliquid tolerare judicabat. Unde afflictae quoque Judaeae dicitur: Ad punctum in modico dereliqui te, et in miserationibus magnis congregabo te (Isai. LIV, 7). Aliquando vero juxta afflictionis pondus disponitur mensura consolationis. Unde alias scriptum est: Secundum multitudinem dolorum meorum in corde meo consolationes tuae laetificaverunt animam meam (Psal. XCIII, 19). In ea enim mensura consolatum se in qua afflictus fuerat indicat, qui laetificatum se secundum multitudinem dolorum clamat. Non autem minime lector instruitur, si ipsum remunerationis ordinem contempletur. Excessum quippe correctio, correctionem poenitentia, poenitentiam venia, 1153 veniam vero munera subsequuntur. Sed quia, divinae dispensationis permissione percussus, etiam amicorum verbis afflictus est, divinae pietatis muneribus consolatus, etiam humana debet charitate refoveri; ut undique ei consolationis gaudia respondeant, quem undique dolorum tristia et adversa lacerabant. Unde et subditur:

CAPUT XIII.

VERS. 11. Venerunt autem ad eum omnes fratres sui, et universae sorores suae, et cuncti qui noverant eum prius; et comederunt cum eo panem in domo ejus, et moverunt super eum caput. 23. Non solum divinae, sed etiam humanae. Quid in comestione panis nisi charitas, quid vero motione capitis, nisi admiratio designatur? Bene autem subditur: IBID. Et consolati sunt eum super omne malum, quod intulerat Dominus super eum. Percussi enim moerorem consolari est ei post percussionem de venia congaudere. Nam quanto quisque de restituta proximi salute cernitur hilarescere, tanto se indicat de ablata doluisse.

CAPUT XIV [Rec. IX].

IBID. Et dederunt ei unusquisque ovem unam, et inaurem auream unam. 24. Ecclesia receptura est aliquando duplicia. Licet cuncta haec juxta historiam

veraciter dicta sint, ipsis tamen oblatis muneribus cogimur ut ad allegoriae mysterium recurramus. Neque enim otiose debemus accipere quod ovem, quod unam, quod inaurem auream obtulere, quod unam. Et si fortasse juxta litteram mirum non est ovis oblata cur una, valde tamen mirum est inauris oblata cur una. Quid vero aut ovis ad inaurem pertinet, aut quid inauris ad ovem? Ex ipso ergo munerum fine compellimur ut priora quoque, quae superficie tenus juxta solam historiam contingendo transcurrimus, in allegoriae mysteriis indagemus. Quia igitur Christus et Ecclesia, id est caput et corpus una persona est, saepe beatum Job diximus modo capitis, modo figuram corporis designare [Vet. IX]. Servata ergo historiae veritate, sub typo gestum sanctae Ecclesiae sentiamus id quod scriptum est: Addidit Dominus omnia quaecunque fuerant Job duplicia. Sancta quippe Ecclesia etsi multos nunc percussione tentationis amittit, in fine tamen hujus saeculi ea quae sua sunt duplicia recipit, quando susceptis ad plenum gentibus, ad ejus fidem currere omnis quae tunc inventa fuerit, etiam Judaea consentit. Hinc namque scriptum est: Donec plenitudo gentium introiret, et sic omnis Israel salvus fieret (Rom. XI, 25). Hinc in Evangelio quoque Veritas dicit: Elias veniet, et ille restituet omnia (Matth. XVII, 11). Nunc enim amisit Israelitas Ecclesia, quos convertere praedicando non valuit, sed tunc Elia praedicante, dum quotquot invenerit colligit, velut plenius recipit quod amisit. 25. Ante resurrectionem sancti singulas stolas accipiunt, binas post resurrectionem. Vel certe sanctae Ecclesiae in fine suo duplum recipere est in singulis nobis et de beatitudine animae, et de carnis incorruptione gaudere. Hinc est enim quod per prophetam de electis dicitur: In terra sua duplicia possidebunt (Isai. LXI, 7). Hinc est enim quod Joannes apostolus de sanctis finem mundi quaerentibus dicit: Data sunt illis singulae stolae albae, et dictum est eis ut requiescerent tempus adhuc modicum, donec compleretur numerus conservorum et fratrum eorum (Apoc. VI, 11). Sicut enim longe superius diximus (scilicet praefationis, c. 10, n. 20), ante resurrectionem sancti singulas 1154 stolas accipiunt, quia sola animarum beatitudine perfruuntur; in fine autem mundi binas habituri sunt, quia cum mentis beatitudine etiam carnis gloriam possidebunt. 26. Conversio Judaeorum in fine mundi praenuntiata. Sed ea quae subnexa sunt, in fine magis hujus saeculi conversionem se Judaici populi nuntiare testantur. Nam subditur: Venerunt autem ad eum omnes fratres sui, et universae sorores suae, et cuncti qui noverant eum prius, et comederunt cum eo panem in domo ejus. Tunc quippe fratres sui ac sorores ad Christum veniunt, quando ex plebe Judaica quotquot invecti fuerint convertuntur. Ex illo enim populo carnis materiam sumpsit. Tunc ergo ad eum fratres ac sorores accedunt, quando ex ea plebe quae ei per cognationem juncta est, vel qui fortes futuri sunt, velut fratres, vel infirmi, velut sorores, ad eum per cognitionem fidei devota gratulatione concurrunt. Tunc apud eum celeberrimae festivitatis convivium exhibent, quando eum jam nequaquam quasi purum hominem contemnentes, propinquitatis suae memores, divinitati se ejus inhaerere congaudent. Tunc in domo ejus panem comedunt, cum, postposita observatione subjacentis litterae, in sancta Ecclesia mystici eloquii quasi frugis medulla pascuntur [Vet. X]. Bene autem subjungitur: Cuncti qui noverant eum prius. Prius quippe noverant, quem in passione sua quasi incognitum contempserunt. Nam nasciturum Christum nullus qui plene legem didicit ignoravit. Unde et Herodes rex, magorum occursione perterritus, sacerdotes et principes studuit solerter inquirere ubi Christum nasciturum esse praescirent; cui protinus responderunt: In Bethleem Judae (Matth. II, 5). Prius ergo noverant quem passionis suae tempore dum despicerent ignorabant. Quorum et notitia prior, et ignorantia posterior bene ac breviter Isaac caligante signatur. Qui dum Jacob benediceret, et quid eveniret in futuro praevidebat, et quis illi praesens assisteret nesciebat (Genes. XXVII). Sic quippe Israelitarum populus fuit, qui prophetiae mysteria accepit, sed tamen caecos in contemplatione oculos habuit, quia eum praesentem non vidit, de quo tam multa in futuro praevidit. Ante se enim positum nequaquam cernere valuit, cujus adventus potentiam longe ante nuntiavit. Sed ecce in fine mundi veniunt, et eum quem prius noverant recognoscunt. Ecce in domo ejus panem comedunt; quia in sancta Ecclesia sacri eloquii fruge pascuntur, et omnem insensibilitatem pristini torporis excutiunt. Unde et subditur: Et moverunt super eum caput. Quid enim in capite, nisi principale mentis accipitur? sicut per Psalmistam dicitur: Impinguasti in oleo caput meum (Psal. XXII, 5). Ac si aperte diceretur: Arentem in suis cogitationibus mentem meam charitatis unctione rigasti. Caput ergo movetur, cum, per formidinem veritatis tacta, ab insensibilitate sua mens quatitur. Veniant ergo parentes ad convivium, atque excusso torpore moveant caput, id est hi qui Redemptori nostro carne conjuncti fuerant refectionem quandoque verbi in fide percipiant, et insensibilitatis pristinae duritiam amittant. Unde bene per Habacuc dicitur: Pedes ejus steterunt, et mota est terra (Habac. III, 5). Stante enim Domino terra procul dubio movetur, quia cum 1155 cordi nostro timoris sui vestigia imprimit, cuncta in nobis cogitatio terrena contremiscit. Hoc taque loco caput movere est immobilitatem mentis excutere, et ad cognitionem fidei credulitatis gressibus propinquare. 27. Quanta ex eorum conversione Ecclesiae consolatio. Quae conversi, Christo debeant offerre. Sed quia sancta Ecclesia nunc Hebraeorum aversione afficitur, et tunc conversione relevatur, recte subjungitur [Vet. XI]: Et consolati sunt eum super omni malo, quod intulerat Dominus super eum. Consolantur videlicet Christum, consolantur Ecclesiam, qui ab infidelitatis pristinae errore resipiscunt, et pravitatem vitae, per quam recta docentibus repugnaverant, deserunt. Annon gravis moeror est duris cordibus infructuose praedicare, laborem in ostendenda veritate sumere, sed nullum de conversione audientium fructum laboris invenire? At contra, magna praedicatorum consolatio est subsequens profectus auditorum. Relevatio quippe docentis est immutatio proficientis.

Et notandum quod in flagello positum consolari noluerunt, sed ad consolandum eum post flagellum veniunt, quia nimirum passionis ejus tempore Hebraei, praedicamenta fidei contemnentes, quem hominem ex morte probaverant Deum credere despexerunt. Unde per Psalmistam Dominus dicit: Sustinui qui simul mecum contristaretur, et non fuit; consolantem me quaesivi, et non inveni (Psal. LXVIII, 21). Consolantem quippe in passione minime invenit, quia in despectu mortis etiam ipsos hostes pertulit, pro quibus ad mortem venit. Post flagella ergo propinqui ad consolationem veniunt, quia in membris suis nunc quoque Dominus patitur; sed extremo tempore Israelitae omnes ad fidem, cognita Eliae praedicatione, concurrunt, atque ad ejus protectionem quem fugerant redeunt, et tunc illud eximium multiplici aggregatione populorum convivium celebratur. Tunc post flagella quasi Job sanus ostenditur, quando a conversis atque credentibus post passionem suam ac resurrectionem Dominus in coelis immortalis vivere per certitudinem fidei scitur. Tunc quasi remuneratus Job cernitur, quando in majestatis suae potentia sicut est Deus creditur, et ejus fidei subjici hi qui prius restiterant videntur. In fine igitur mundi credentes Hebraei conveniant, et humani generis redemptori in potentia divinitatis quasi sano Job oblationem suarum vota persolvant [Vet. XII]. Unde et bene subditur: Et dederunt ei unusquisque ovem unam, et inaurem auream unam. Quid per ovem nisi innocentia, quid per inaurem nisi obedientia designatur? Per ovem quippe simplex animus, per inaurem vero ornatus humilitatis gratia auditus exprimitur. [Rec. X.] 28. Obedientiae commendatio. Obedientia usque ad mortem servanda. Sed quia ad ostendendam virtutem obedientiae occasio opportuna se praebuit, libet hanc paulo vigilantius sollicitiusque discutere, et quanti sit meriti demonstrare. Sola namque virtus est obedientia quae virtutes caeteras menti inserit, insertasque custodit. Unde et primus homo praeceptum quod servaret accepit (Genes. II, 1), cui se si vellet obediens subdere, ad aeternam beatitudinem sine labore perveniret. Hinc Samuel ait: Melior est obedientia quam victimae, et auscultare magis quam offerre adipem arietum, quoniam quasi peccatum ariolandi est repugnare, et quasi scelus idololatriae nolle acquiescere (I Reg. XV, 22). Obedientia quippe victimis jure praeponitur (8, q. 1. can. sciendum, § Obedientia), quia per victimas aliena caro, per obedientiam vero 1156 voluntas propria mactatur. Tanto igitur quisque Deum citius placat, quanto ante ejus oculos repressa arbitrii sui superbia, gladio praecepti se immolat. Quo contra ariolandi peccatum inobedientia dicitur, ut quanta sit virtus obedientia demonstretur. Ex adverso igitur melius ostenditur, quid de ejus laude sentiatur. Si enim quasi ariolandi peccatum est repugnare, et quasi scelus idololatriae nolle acquiescere, sola est quae fidei meritum possidet, sine qua quisque infidelis esse convincitur, etiamsi fidelis esse videatur. Hinc per Salomonem in ostensione obedientiae dicitur: Vir obediens loquitur victorias (Prov. XXI, 28). Vir quippe obediens victorias loquitur, quia dum alienae voci humiliter subdimur, nosmetipsos in corde superamus. Hinc in Evangelio Veritas dicit: Eum qui venit ad me, non ejiciam foras, quia de coelo descendi, non ut faciam voluntatem meam, sed voluntatem ejus qui misit me (Joan. VI, 37). Quid enim? si suam faceret eos qui ad se veniunt repulisset? Quis autem nesciat quod voluntas Filii a Patris voluntate non discrepet? Sed quoniam primus homo, quia suam facere voluntatem voluit, a paradisi gaudio exivit (Genes. III, 24), secundus ad redemptionem hominum veniens, dum voluntatem se Patris et non suam facere ostendit, permanere nos intus docuit. Cum igitur non suam sed Patris voluntatem facit, eos qui ad se veniunt foras non ejicit, quia dum exemplo suo nos obedientiae subjicit, viam nobis egressionis claudit. Hinc rursum ait: Non possum ego a meipso facere quidquam, sed sicut audio (Joan. V, 30) judico. Nobis quippe obedientia usque ad mortem servanda praecipitur. Ipse autem si sicut audit judicat, tunc quoque obedit, cum judex venit. Ne igitur nobis usque ad praesentis vitae terminum obedientia laboriosa appareat, Redemptor noster indicat, quia hanc etiam cum judex venerit servat. Quid ergo mirum si homo peccator se obedientiae in praesentis vitae brevitate subjicit (11, q. 3, c. Quid ergo), quando hanc mediator Dei et hominum et cum obedientes remunerat, non relinquit? [Vet. XIII.] 19. Malum nunquam fieri debet per obedientiam, sed bonum aliquando intermitti. Sciendum vero est quod nunquam per obedientiam malum fieri aliquando autem debet per obedientiam bonum quod agitur, intermitti. Neque enim mala in paradiso arbor exstitit, quam Deus homini ne contingeret interdixit (Genes. II). Sed ut melius per obedientiae meritum homo bene conditus cresceret, dignum fuerat ut etiam a bono prohiberetur, quatenus tanto verius hoc quod ageret virtus esset, quanto et a bono cessans, auctori suo se subditum humilius exhiberet. Sed notandum quod illic dicitur: Ex omni ligno paradisi comedite, de ligno autem scientiae boni et mali ne tetigeritis (Ibid., 16). Qui enim ab uno quolibet bono subjectos vetat, necesse est ut multa concedat, ne obedientis mens funditus intereat, si a bonis omnibus penitus repulsa jejunat. Omnes autem paradisi arbores ad esum Dominus concessit, cum ab una prohibuit, ut creaturam suam, quam nolebat exstingui, sed provehi, tanto facilius ab una restringeret, quanto ad cunctas latius relaxaret. 30. Quando nullius meriti sit obedientia, quando minimi. Sed quia nonnunquam nobis hujus mundi prospera, nonnunquam vero jubentur adversa, sciendum summopere est quod obedientia aliquando, si de suo aliquid habeat, nulla est; aliquando autem, si de suo aliquid non habeat, minima (8, q. 1, c. Sciendum). Nam cum hujus mundi successus praecipitur, 1157 cum locus superior imperatur, is qui ad percipienda haec obedit, obedientiae sibi virtutem evacuat, si ad haec etiam ex proprio, desiderio anhelat. Neque enim se sub obedientia dirigit, qui ad accipienda hujus vitae prospera libidini propriae ambitionis servit. Rursum cum mundi despectus praecipitur, cum probra adipisci et contumeliae jubentur, nisi ex seipso animus haec appetat, obedientiae sibi meritum minuit, quia ad ea quae in hac vita despecta sunt invitus nolensque descendit. Ad detrimenta quippe obedientia ducitur, cum mentem ad suscipienda probra hujus saeculi nequaquam ex parte aliqua etiam sua vota comitantur. Debet ergo obedientia et in adversis ex suo aliquid habere, et rursum in prosperis ex suo aliquid omnimodo non habere, quatenus et in adversis tanto sit gloriosior quanto divino ordini etiam ex desiderio jungitur, et in prosperis tanto sit verior quanto a praesenti ipsa quam divinitus percipit gloria funditus ex mente separatur. 31. Subeunda prospera ex sola jussione, adversa vero etiam ex devotione, docemur exemplo Mosis et Pauli. Sed hoc virtutis pondus melius ostendimus, si coelestis patriae duorum hominum facta memoremus. Moyses namque cum in deserto oves pasceret, a Domino per angelum in igne loquente vocatus est, ut eripiendae omni Israelitarum multitudini praeesset (Exod. III). Sed quia apud se mente humilis exstitit, oblatam protinus tanti regiminis gloriam expavit, moxque ad infirmitatis patrocinium recurrit, dicens: Obsecro, Domine, non sum eloquens; ab heri et nudiustertius ex quo coepisti loqui ad servum tuum, tardioris et impeditioris linguae sum factus (Ibid. IV, 10). Et, se postposito, alium deposcit, dicens: Mitte quem missurus es (Ibid. 13). Ecce cum auctore linguae loquitur, et ne tanti regiminis potestatem suscipiat, elinguem se esse causatur. Paulus quoque divinitus fuerat ut in Jerusalem debuisset ascendere admonitus, sicut ipse Galatis dicit: Deinde post annos quatuordecim iterum ascendi Jerosolymam, assumpto Barnaba et Tito; ascendi autem secundum revelationem (Galat. II, 1). Isque in itinere cum prophetam Agabum reperisset, quanta se adversitas in Jerosolymis maneret audivit (Act. XXI). Scriptum quippe est quod idem Agabus zonam Pauli suis pedibus inserens, dixit: Virum cujus haec zona est sic alligabunt in Jerusalem (Ibid., 11). A Paulo autem protinus respondetur: Ego non solum alligari, sed et mori in Jerusalem paratus sum pro nomine Jesu, neque enim pretiosiorem facio animam meam quam me (Ibid., 13). Praeceptione igitur revelationis

Jerosolymam pergens, adversa cognoscit, et tamen haec libenter appetit; audit quae timeat, sed ad haec ardentius anhelat. Moyses itaque ad prospera de suo nihil habet, quia precibus renititur, ne Israeliticae plebi praeferatur. Paulus ad adversa etiam ex suo voto ducitur, quia malorum imminentium cognitionem percipit, sed devotione spiritus etiam ad acriora fervescit. Ille praesentis potestatis gloriam Deo voluit jubente declinare; iste, Deo aspera et dura disponente, se studuit ad graviora praeparare. Praeeunte ergo utrorumque ducum infracta virtute instituimur, ut si obedientiae palmam apprehendere veraciter nitimur, prosperis hujus saeculi ex sola jussione, adversis autem etiam ex devotione militemus. 1158 [Vet. XIV.] 32. Innocentiae ornamentum est obedientia. Notandum vero est quod hoc loco cum inaure ovis, cum ove inauris offertur, quia nimirum innocuis mentibus ornamentum semper obedientiae jungitur; Domino attestante, qui ait: Oves meae vocem meam audiunt, et ego cognosco eas, et sequuntur me (Joan. X, 27). Beato igitur Job nemo inaurem sine ove, nemo ovem sine inaure obtulit, quia profecto Redemptori suo non obedit, qui innocens non est; et innocens esse non potest, qui obedire contemnit. Quia vero ipsa obedientia non servili metu sed charitatis affectu servanda est, non terrore poenae, sed amore justitiae, cuncti qui ad convivium veniunt, auream inaurem obtulisse perhibentur, ut videlicet in ea quae exhibetur obedientia, charitas fulgeat, quae virtutes omnes quasi auri more caetera metalla transcendat. 33. Nulla potest esse aut innocentia aut obedientia, nisi in una vera Ecclesia. Sed quia nulla esse innocentia, nulla esse vera obedientia in multiplicibus haereticorum divisionibus potest, ad cognitionem fidei venientes offerant ovem, sed unam; offerant inaurem, sed unam; id est, tales veniant, qui in unitate sanctae Ecclesiae innocui obedientesque persistant. Unum quippe dividi per numeros non potest, quia et hoc ipsum unum quod dicimus numerus non est. Offerant igitur ovem, sed unam; offerant inaurem, sed unam; id est, ad sanctam Ecclesiam cum innocentia atque obedientia venientes, eam mentem deferant quam sectarum schismata non dividant. [Vet. XV.] 34. Quantum de Judaeorum conversione futurum in Ecclesia gaudium, et celebrandum aliquando convivium. Aperire libet oculos fidei, et illud extremum sanctae Ecclesiae de susceptione Israelitici populi convivium contemplari. Ad quod nimirum convivium magnus ille veniens Elias convivantium invitator adhibetur; et tunc propinqui, tunc noti ad eum cum muneribus veniunt, quem in flagello paulo ante positum contempserunt. Appropinquante enim die judicii, vel praecursoris vocibus, vel quibusdam erumpentibus signis, ipsa eis jam aliquo modo advenientis Domini virtus interlucet. Cujus iram dum praevenire festinant, conversionis suae tempus accelerant. Conversi autem cum muneribus veniunt, quia eum quem paulo ante in passione deriserunt, tunc virtutum opera quasi munera offerendo, venerantur, illud procul dubio hac sua oblatione complentes quod et cernimus magna ex parte jam factum, et adhuc credimus perfecte faciendum: Adorabunt eum filiae Tyri in muneribus (Psal. XLIV, 13). Tunc namque illum plenius filiae Tyri in muneribus adorant, cum Israelitarum mentes hujus nunc mundi subditae desideriis, ei quem superbientes negaverunt, quandoque cognito, suae hostias confessionis apportant. Et quamvis eisdem temporibus quibus Antichristus appropinquat, aliquatenus vita fidelium minoris esse virtutis appareat, quamvis in conflictu illius perditi hominis gravis etiam corda fortium formido constringat: Elia tamen praedicante roborati, non solum fideles quique in sanctae Ecclesiae soliditate persistunt, sed, sicut superius diximus, ad cognitionem fidei multi quoque ex infidelibus convertuntur; ita ut Israeliticae gentis reliquiae, quae repulsae prius funditus fuerant, ad sinum matris Ecclesiae pia omnimodo devotione concurrant. Unde et bene nunc subditur:

CAPUT XV [Vet. XVI].

VERS. 12. 1159 Dominus autem benedixit novissimis Job magis, quam principio ejus. 35. Deus novissimis Ecclesiae, multiplici animarum collectione benedicet. Haec historice facta credimus, haec mystice facienda speramus. Magis enim novissimis Job quam principio benedicitur, quia quantum ad Israelitici populi susceptionem pertinet, urgente fine praesentis saeculi, dolorem sanctae Ecclesiae Dominus animarum multiplici collectione consolatur. Tanto quippe locupletius ditabitur, quanto et manifestius innotescit quod ad finem praesentis vitae temporalitas urgetur. Praedicatores namque sanctae Ecclesiae benedictione extremi temporis Psalmista ditari conspexerat, cum dicebat: Adhuc multiplicabuntur in senecta uberi, et bene patientes erunt, ut annuntient (Psal. XCI, 15). In senecta scilicet uberi multiplicantur, quia cum eorum vita differtur, semper ad melius fortitudo producitur, eisque per augmentum temporum crescunt etiam lucra meritorum. Bene autem patientes sunt ut annuntient, quia coelestia praedicantes, tanto robustius adversa tolerant, quanto et per tolerantiam suam animarum commoda locupletius reportant. Sequitur:

CAPUT XVI [Rec. XI].

VERS. 12, 13. Et facta sunt ei quatuordecim millia ovium, et sex millia camelorum, et mille juga boum, et mille asinae; et fuerunt ei septem filii, et tres filiae. 36. In duplicatis Job armentis et gregibus, aggregata fidelium universitas designatur: innocentium, in vitiis olim superbientium, jugo legis subditorum, gentilium. Quod septem millia ovium, et tria millia camelorum, et quingenta juga boum, et quingentas asinas ante probationem percussionis habuerit, ipsa ejusdem historiae praefatio ostendit; quae per flagellum perdita, ea nunc sunt duplicia restituta. Filii autem totidem sunt redditi quot amissi. Septem quippe filios et tres filias habuit, septem autem nunc filios et tres filias recepisse describitur, ut et hi qui exstincti fuerant vivere demonstrentur. Dum enim dicitur: Addidit Dominus quaecunque fuerant

Job duplicia (Job I), et tamen totidem filios ei restituit quot amisit, et liberos dupliciter addidit, cui decem postmodum in carne restituit, decem vero qui amissi fuerant in occulta animarum vita reservavit [Vet. XVII]. Si quis autem in praedictis animalibus, postposito culmo historiae, ut intellectuale videlicet animal, pasci mysteriorum fruge desiderat, necesse est ut quae sentimus agnoscat. Intelligere enim possumus quod in his animalibus aggregata fidelium universitas designatur. Hinc est namque quod per Psalmistam Patri de Filio dicitur: Omnia subjecisti sub pedibus ejus, oves et boves universas, insuper et pecora campi (Psal. VIII, 8). Hinc est quod idem propheta sanctam Ecclesiam simplices quosque inhabitare conspiciens, ait: Animalia tua habitabunt in ea (Psal. LXVII, 11). 37. Quid ergo in ovibus nisi innocentes, quid in camelis nisi eos qui caeterorum mala transeunt exuberantium tortuosa mole vitiorum, quid in jugatis bobus nisi Israelitas legi subditos, quid in asinis nisi simplices gentilium mentes accipimus? Nam quia innocentes quique ovium nomine designantur, testatur Psalmista, qui ait: Nos autem populus ejus, et oves pascuae ejus (Psal. XCIV, 7). Neque enim qui servare innocentiam negligunt, illa internae pascuae refectione satiantur. 38. Cameli vero nomine aliquando in sacro eloquio Dominus, aliquando gentilium superbia exprimitur, quasi excrescente desuper tumore tortuosa. 1160 Quia enim ad suscipienda onera sponte se camelus humiliat, non immerito Redemptoris nostri gratiam designat, qui in eo quod infirmitatis nostrae onera suscipere dignatus est, a potestatis suae celsitudine sponte descendit. Unde et per Evangelium dicit: Potestatem habeo ponendi animam meam, et potestatem habeo iterum sumendi eam (Joan. X, 18), et nemo tollit eam a me. Et unde iterum dicit: Facilius est camelum per foramen acus transire quam divitem intrare in regnum coelorum (Matth. XIX, 24). Quid enim nomine divitis nisi quemlibet elatum, quid cameli appellatione, nisi propriam condescensionem signat? Camelus enim per foramen acus transiit, cum idem Redemptor noster usque ad susceptionem mortis per angustias passionis intravit. Quae passio velut acus exstitit, quia dolore corpus pupugit. Facilius autem camelus per foramen acus transit quam dives coelorum regnum ingreditur, quia nisi ipse prius infirmitatis nostrae onera suscipiens per passionem suam foramen nobis humilitatis ostenderet, nequaquam se ad humilitatem illius superba nostra rigiditas inclinaret. Rursum cameli nomine tortuosa ac plena vitiis gentilitas designatur, sicut per Moysen dicitur quod inclinata jam die egressum in agro Isaac in camelo sedens Rebecca conspexerit, ac protinus de camelo descendit, et sese pallio ad visionem illius verecundata cooperuit (Genes. XXIV, 64). Quem enim Isaac alium, in eo quod inclinata jam die in agro egressus fuerat, designabat, nisi eum qui extremo hujus mundi tempore, velut in diei fine veniens, quasi in agrum foras exiit? quia cum sit invisibilis, in hoc mundo se visibilem demonstravit. Quem in camelo sedens Rebecca conspexit, quia eum Ecclesia ex gentibus veniens, dum adhuc vitiis esset innixa, et necdum spiritualibus, sed animalibus motibus inhaereret, attendit. Sed protinus de camelo descendit, quia vitia quibus prius fuerat superbe elata deseruit, seque etiam pallio operire curavit, quia, viso Domino, infirmitatem suae actionis erubuit, et illa quae prius in camelo libera gestabatur, descendens postmodum verecunda tegitur. Unde eidem Ecclesiae a priore elatione conversae per apostolicam vocem, quasi Rebeccae de camelo descendenti sibique pallium superducenti, dicitur: Quem enim fructum habuistis tunc in illis, in quibus nunc erubescitis (Rom. VI, 21)? [Vet. XVIII.] 39. In bobus vero aliquando luxuriosorum dementia, aliquando laboriosa fortitudo praedicantium, aliquando humilitas exprimitur Israelitarum. Quia enim bovis nomine per comparationem luxuriosorum dementia designatur, Salomon indicat, qui cum male suadentis mulieris petulantiam praemisisset, adjunxit: Statimque eam sequitur, quasi bos ductus ad victimam (Prov. VII, 22). Rursum quia bovis nomine labor praedicatoris exprimitur; legis verba testantur, quae ait: Non obturabis os bovi trituranti (Deut. XXV, 4). Ac si aperte diceret: Praedicatores verbi a stipendiorum suorum perceptione non prohibebis. Rursum quia bovis nomine plebs Israelitica figuratur, propheta asserit, qui Redemptoris adventum denuntians dicit: Cognovit bos possessorem suum, et asinus praesepe Domini sui (Isai. I, 3), per bovem scilicet Israeliticum populum jugo legis edomi tum signans, 1161 per asinum vero gentilem populum indicans, voluptatibus deditum, et gravius brutum. 40. Asinorum quoque et asinarum nomine aliquando luxuriosorum petulantia, aliquando mansuetudo simplicium, aliquando vero, ut praediximus, stultitia gentilium designatur. Quia enim luxuriosorum petulantia asinorum appellatione per comparationem exprimitur aperte declaratur cum per prophetam dicitur: Quorum carnes sunt ut carnes asinorum (Ezech. XXIII, 20). Rursum quia asinarum nomine simplicium vita figuratur, Redemptor noster cum Jerusalem pergeret, asinam sedisse memoratur. Jerusalem quippe visio pacis dicitur. Quid igitur signat quod Dominus sedendo asinam Jerusalem ducit, nisi quod simplices mentes dum praesidendo possidet, eas usque ad visionem pacis sua sacra sessiono perducit? Rursum quia asinorum nomine stultitia gentilium designatur propheta testatur, dicens: Beati qui seminatis super omnes aquas, immittentes pedem bovis et asini (Isai. XXXII, 20). Super omnes quippe aquas seminare est cunctis populis fructuosa vitae verba praedicare. Pedem vero bovis et asini immittere est vias Israelitici et gentilis populi per praeceptorum coelestium vincula religare. [Vet. XIX.] 41. Sacrae Scripturae littera praeterita referuntur, et futura praedicuntur. Litterae igitur veritate servata, sub beati Job nomine cunctis his animalibus non immerito credimus sanctae Ecclesiae populos designari, quatenus ea quae scripta sunt dispensatione sancti Spiritus cuncta mirabiliter ordinante, et transacta nobis referant, et futura praedicant. Agnoscamus ergo in ovibus fideles atque innocentes ex Judaea populos, legis dudum pascuis satiatos. Agnoscamus in camelis ad fidem simplices ex gentilitate venientes, qui prius sub ritu sacrilego, quasi quadam deformitate membrorum, valde turpes ostensi sunt, videlicet foeditate vitiorum. Et quia saepe, ut praediximus, sacra eloquia curant repetere quod affirmant, possunt rursum in bobus Israelitae accipi, quasi jugo legis attriti; asinis vero, ut dictum est, gentiles populi designari, qui dum se colendis lapidibus inclinabant, non reluctante mente, quasi dorso stulte supposito, quibuslibet idolis bruto sensu serviebant. Sancta ergo Ecclesia quae in exordiis suis innumeris tentationibus pressa, vel Israeliticum populum, vel multos ex gentibus amisit, videlicet quos lucrari non potuit, duplicia in fine recipit, quia in ea ex utraque natione fidelium numerus multiplicior excrescit. Possunt etiam per jugatos boves praedicatores intelligi. Unde cum eos ad annuntiandum Dominus mitteret, teste Evangelio (Marc. VI, 7), binos misisse describitur, ut quia vel duo sunt praecepta charitatis, vel quia haberi societas minus quam inter duos non potest, praedicatores sancti ex ipsa qualitate suae missionis cognoscerent quantum concordiam societatis amarent. Possunt, sicut praediximus, per asinas mentes simplicium designari. Sancta vero Ecclesia duplices boves atque asinas, recipit quia praedicatores sancti, qui, pressi formidine, in ejus dudum tentatione tacuerant, et mentes simplicium, quae, victae terroribus, veritatem illius confiteri formidabant, tanto jam nunc robustius in confessione veritatis 1162 voces suas exerunt, quanto debilius ante timuerunt. 42. Latentia in diversis numeris mysteria, et in nominibus trium Job filiarum. Haec in significatione Ecclesiae breviter diximus: quae quomodo ejusdem sanctae Ecclesiae capiti serviant, in exordio hujus operis latius nos dixisse memoramus (Praefat., num. 14). Qui ergo de his sibi plenius satisfieri nititur, secundum hujus operis librum (Maxime num. 43) legere dignetur. Jam vero si quaerimur ut etiam de ipso animalium numero disseramus, cur mille juga boum, vel mille asinae, et sex millia camelorum, et quatuordecim millia ovium numerentur, dicere breviter possumus quod apud saecularem quidem scientiam millenarius numerus idcirco perfectus habetur, quia denarii numeri quadratum solidum reddit. Decem quippe decies ducta fiunt centum, quae jam figura quadrata, sed plana est. Ut autem in altitudinem surgat, et solida fiat, rursus centum decies multiplicantur, et mille sunt. Senarius autem numerus idcirco perfectus est, quia primus in numeris completur partibus suis, id est sexta sui parte, et tertia, et dimidia, quae sunt unum, et duo, et tria, quae in summam ducta sex fiunt. Nec alius ante senarium numerum reperitur, qui in suis partibus dum dividitur, tota ejus summa compleatur. [Vet. XX, Rec. XII.] Sed quia cuncta haec per sacrae Scripturae celsitudinem proficiendo transcendimus, ibi senarium, ibi septenarium, ibi denarium, ibi millenarium unde sit perfectus invenimus. Senarius quippe numerus in Scriptura sacra perfectus est, quia in mundi origine Dominus ea quae primo die coepit sexto die opera implevit (Genes. II, 2). Septenarius in ea perfectus est, quia omne opus bonum septem per Spiritum virtutibus agitur, ut et fides simul et opera consummentur. Denarius numerus in ea perfectus est, quia lex in decem praeceptis concluditur, omnisque culpa non amplius quam per decem verba cohibetur, atque, enarrante Veritate, operatores vineae denario remunerantur (Matth. XX, 10, 11). In denario quippe tria junguntur ad septem. Homo autem, qui ex anima constat et corpore, in septem qualitatibus continetur. Nam tribus spiritaliter, et quatuor corporaliter viget. In dilectione etenim Dei tribus qualitatibus spiritaliter excitatur, cum ei per legem dicitur: Diliges Dominum Deum tuum ex tota mente tua, et ex tota anima tua, et ex tota virtute tua (Matth. XXII, 37). Corporaliter vero quatuor qualitatibus continetur, quia videlicet ex materia calida et frigida, humida et sicca componitur. Homo ergo qui ex septem qualitatibus constat denario remunerari dicitur, quia in illa perceptione supernae patriae septem nostra ad tria junguntur aeterna, ut homo contemplationem Trinitatis accipiat, et de remuneratione operis quasi quodam denario consummatus vivat. Vel certe quod septem virtutes sunt quibus in hac vita laboratur, dumque eis in remuneratione contemplatio Trinitatis redditur, vita laborantium denario remuneratur. Sed perfectus quisque etiam in hac vita denarium accipit, dum eisdem septem virtutibus, spem, fidem, charitatemque conjungit. Millenarius quoque numerus in sacro eloquio perfectus accipitur, quia appellatione ejus universitas designatur. Unde scriptum est: 1163 Verbi quod mandavit in mille genera iones (Psal. CIV, 8). Cum enim nequaquam credendum sit quod ad centum generationes mundus extenditur, quid aliud mille generationibus nisi universitas generationum figuratur? Beatus igitur Job quatuordecim millia ovium recepit. Quia enim in sancta Ecclesia virtutum perfectio ad utrumque sexum ducitur, septenarius in ea numerus duplicatur. Et sex millia camelorum, quia plenitudinem in illa operis accipiunt qui ab illa dudum vitiorum suorum foeditate perierunt. Mille quoque juga boum, ac mille asinas recepit, quia Israelitas atque gentiles, doctos ac simplices, post tentationum casus in culmen perfectionis assumit. [Rec. XIII.] Septem quoque filios, et tres filias recepit, quia eorum mentibus quos septem virtutibus genuerat ad perfectionis summam, spem, fidem, charitatemque conjungit, ut tanto verius prole sua gaudeat, quanto suis fidelibus nil deesse virtutis pensat. [Vet. XXI.] Sed quia haec succincte transcurrimus, nunc ipsis quoque indagandis filiarum vocabulis intendamus. Sequitur:

CAPUT XVII.

VERS. 14. Et vocavit nomen unius Diem, et nomen secundae Casiam, et nomen tertiae Cornustibii. 43. Haec nomina, pro eo quod a virtutibus sumpta sunt, apte curavit interpres non ea sicut in Arabico sermone inventa sunt ponere, sed in Latinum eloquium versa apertius demonstrare. Quis enim nesciat Diem vel Casiam Latina esse vocabula? At vero in Cornustibii (quamvis non cornus, sed cornu dicitur, nec cantantium fistula Tibium, sed tibia vocatur) in Latina tamen lingua sermonis genere minime custodito, rem, credo, prodere maluit, atque in ejus linguae de qua transferebat proprietate perdurare. Vel quia per cornu et tibiam unum verbum ex utroque composuit, utrumque verbum per unam orationis partem in Latina lingua transfusum quo voluit genere licite vocavit. (Vet. XXII.] Quid est ergo quod prima filia beati Job Dies dicitur, secunda Casia, tertia vero Cornustibii vocata memoratur, nisi quia universum genus humanum, quod benignitate conditoris atque ejusdem misericordia redemptoris eligitur, istis nominibus designatur? Homo namque quasi dies ex conditione claruit, quia hunc auctor suus ingenitae innocentiae splendore respersit. Sed sponte sua ad peccati tenebras lapsus, quia veritatis lucem deseruit, quasi in nocte se erroris abscondit, quia alias dicitur secutus umbram. Sed quia auctori nostro non defuit largitas bonitatis suae, etiam contra tenebras iniquitatis nostrae eum quem prius potenter ad justitiam condidit potentius redimendo postmodum ab errore revocavit. Cui quia post casum suum illa conditionis suae pristina firmitas defuit, eum contra bella intima repugnantis corruptionis multiplicibus donorum suorum virtutibus fulsit. Quae nimirum virtutes proficientium in notitia caeterorum hominum quasi suavitate fragrant odorum. Hinc est enim quod per Paulum dicitur: Christi bonus odor sumus Deo (II Cor. II, 15). Hinc est quod sancta Ecclesia, in electis suis quamdam fragrantiam suavitatis odorata, in canticorum Cantico 1164 loquitur, dicens: Donec rex in recubitu suo est, nardus mea dedit odorem suum (Cantic. I, 11). Ac si aperte dicat: Quousque meis obtutibus rex apud se in requie secreti coelestis absconditur, electorum vita miris virtutum odoribus exercetur, ut quo adhuc eum quem appetit non videt, ardentius per desiderium flagret. Rege quippe in recubitu suo posito, nardus odorem dat, dum, quiescente in sua beatitudine Domino, sanctorum virtus in Ecclesia magnae nobis gratiam suavitatis administrat. Quia ergo et conditum luce innocentiae claruit, et redemptum genus humanum exercitio bonorum operum odorem suavitatis aspersit, prima filia recte Dies, et secunda non incongrue Casia nominatur. Bene autem Casia dicitur, quae in tanto sublimis vitae odore dilatatur. In ipsa quippe sua origine in qua justus homo conditus fuerat tantis quantis nunc opus est virtutibus non indigebat, quia si stare sicut est conditus vellet, hostem extra positum vincere sine difficultate potuisset. Postquam vero per assensum hominis semel adversarius ad intima irrupit, laboriosius jam victor ejicitur, qui adhuc impugnans sine labore repelleretur. 44. Multis virtutibus, quae in paradiso necessariae non fuissent, indigemus. Multa namque nunc exhibenda sunt quae in paradiso necessaria non fuerunt. Nunc quippe opus est virtute patientiae, laboriosa eruditione doctrinae, castigatione corporis, assiduitate precis, confessione delictorum, inundatione lacrymarum; quorum profecto omnium conditus bono non eguit, quia salutis bonum ex ipsa sua conditione percepit. Aegro quippe poculum amarum porrigitur, ut ad salutis statum morbo sublato revocetur. Sano autem nequaquam praecipitur quid accipiat ut convalescat, sed a quibus caveat ne languescat. Nunc ergo majoribus studiis utimur, cum salutem nequaquam servamus habitam, sed reparare curamus ablatam. Et quia omnes hi annisus nostrae reparationis magnis intra sanctam Ecclesiam opinionibus pollent, nomen secundae filiae velut casia ex merito redolet, ut quia prima filia quasi dies exstitit per dignitatem conditionis, secunda casia sit per fragrantiam fortitudinis ex gratia redemptionis. [Vet. XXIII.] Unde et eidem venienti Redemptori per Prophetam dicitur: Myrrha, et gutta, et casia a vestimentis tuis a gradibus eburneis, ex quibus te delectaverunt filiae regum in honore tuo (Psal. XLIV, 9). Quid enim myrrhae, guttae et casiae, nomine nisi virtutum suavitas designatur? Quid eburneis gradibus nisi magna nitens fortitudine proficentium ascensus exprimitur? Redemptor igitur veniens myrrha, gutta et casia, in vestimento utitur, quia ex electis suis, quibus se misericorditer induit, myrrhae virtutis fragrantiam aspergit. In quibus iste odor eburneis gradibus ducitur, quia in eis virtutum opinio non ex ostensione simulationis, sed ex veri ac solidi operis ascensu generatur. Bene autem subditur: Ex quibus delectaverunt te filiae regum in honore tuo. Sanctae namque animae ab antiquis patribus ad cognitionem veritatis editae Redemptorem suum in ejus honore delectant, 1165 quia ex eo quod bene agunt suae laudi nihil vindicant. Quia vero tertio ordine humanum genus etiam carnis resurrectione renovatum in illo concentu aeternae laudis assumitur, tertia filia Cornustibii vocatur. Quid enim per Cornustibii nisi laetantium cantus exprimitur? Ibi enim veraciter adimpletur quod modo per Prophetam dicitur: Cantate Domino canticum novum (Psal. CXLIX, 1). Ibi veraciter adimpletur, ubi canticum laudis Dei non jam ex fide, sed ex specie contemplata cantabitur. Ibi a nobis conditor noster laudum suarum veraces cantus recipit, qui humanum genus et condendo diem, et redimendo casiam, et assumendo cornustibii fecit. Qui enim lux fuimus conditi, et nunc sumus casia redempti, erimus quandoque cornustibii, in exsultatione aeternae laudis assumpti. Sed priusquam ad nuptiarum thalamum sponsa perveniat, omnem a se vitae foeditatem respuit, et sponsi amori praeparans sese per species virtutum ornat et comit. Studet quippe interni arbitri judicio placere, et, intimis desideriis sublevata, foedos mores conversationis humanae transcendere. Unde bene et de eisdem filiabus beati Job subditur:

CAPUT XVIII [Rec. XIV].

VERS. 15. Non sunt autem inventae mulieres speciosae sicut filiae Job, in universa terra. 45. Electorum pulchritudo. Electorum quippe animae omne humanum genus, quod in terra secundum hominem conversatur, suae pulchritudinis decore transcendunt; quantoque se exterius affligendo despiciunt, tanto verius se intus componunt. Hinc est enim quod sanctae Ecclesiae, quae electorum pulchritudine decoratur, per Psalmistam dicitur: Concupivit rex speciem tuam (Psal. XLIV, 12). De qua paulo post subditur: Omnis gloria ejus filiae regum ab intus (Ibid., 14). Nam si foris gloriam quaereret, intus speciem, quam rex concupisceret, non haberet. [Vet. XXIV.] In qua quidem quamvis multi virtutum decore fulgeant, atque ipsa vivendi perfectione caeterorum merita transcendant, nonnulli tamen quia ad altiora assequenda non sufficiunt, infirmitatis suae conscii, pietatis ejus gremio continentur. Qui in quantum praevalent mala vitant, quamvis in quantum appetunt altiora bona non impleant. Quos tamen benigne Dominus suscipit, eosque apud se pro modo dignae retributionis admittit. Unde et sequitur:

CAPUT XIX.

IBID. Deditque eis pater suus haereditatem inter fratres earum. 46. Christus inter fortes et perfectos, infirmos et humiles ad supernae haereditatis sortem admittit. Ipsae ergo ex perfectorum merito speciosae memorantur, ipsae etiam quasi ex imperfectorum typo velut infirmae haereditatem inter fratres accipiunt. Usus namque vitae veteris non habebat ut haereditatem feminae inter masculos sortirentur, quia legis severitas fortia eligens, infirma contemnens, districta potius studuit quam benigna sancire. 1166 Sed pio nostro Redemptore veniente, nullus infirmitatis suae conscius de sortienda coelestis patrimonii haereditate desperet. Pater enim noster inter masculos etiam feminis jura successionis tribuit, quia inter fortes atque perfectos, infirmos et humiles ad sortem supernae haereditatis admittit. Unde ipsa Veritas in Evangelio dicit: In domo Patris mei mansiones multae sunt (Joan. XIV, 2). Apud Patrem quippe mansiones multae sunt, quia in illa beatitudinis vita non dispari unusquisque juxta dispar meritum locum disparem percipit, sed ejusdem disparilitatis damna non sentit, quia tantum sibi quantum perceperit sufficit. Sorores ergo cum fratribus ad haereditatem veniunt, quia infirmi illuc cum fortibus admittuntur, quatenus si quis per imperfectionem non erit summus, ab haereditatis tamen sorte per humilitatem non sit extraneus. Quas bene Paulus mansiones unicuique secundum merita distributas insinuat, cum ait: Alia claritas solis, et alia claritas lunae, et alia claritas stellarum. Stella enim ab stella differt in claritate (I Cor. XV, 41). Sequitur:

CAPUT XX [Rec.XV].

VERS. 16. Vixit autem post haec flagella Job centum quadraginta annis; et vidit filios suos, et filios filiorum suorum usque ad quartam generationem; et mortuus est senex, et plenus dierum. 47. Qui dicantur pleni dierum in sacris litteris. Job pristino statui, auctis etiam rebus, restitutus, typus est Ecclesiae. In Scriptura sacra non facile plenus dierum ponitur, nisi is cujus per eamdem scripturam vita laudatur. Vacuus quippe dierum est qui, et quamlibet multum vixerit, aetatis suae tempora in vanitate consumpsit. At contra plenus dierum dicitur cui nequaquam dies sui pereundo transeunt, sed ex quotidiana mercede boni operis apud justum judicem et postquam transacti fuerint reservantur. [Vet. XXV.] 48. Sed quia sunt qui haec etiam in typo sanctae Ecclesiae interpretari desiderant, quorum votis tanto magis obediendum est quanto et eorum spiritali intelligentiae congaudendum, si quatuordecim per denarium ducimus, ad centesimum et quadragesimum numerum pervenimus. Et recte vita sanctae Ecclesiae multiplicata per decem et quatuor computatur, quia utrumque Testamentum custodiens, et tam secundum legis decalogum, quam secundum quatuor Evangelii libros vivens, usque ad perfectionis culmen extenditur. Unde et Paulus apostolus quamvis Epistolas quindecim scripserit, sancta tamen Ecclesia non amplius quam quatuordecim tenet, ut ex ipso Epistolarum numero ostenderet quod doctor egregius legis et Evangelii secreta rimatus esset. Bene autem beatus Job post flagella vivere dicitur, quia et sancta Ecclesia prius disciplinae flagello percutitur, et postmodum vitae perfectione roboratur. Quae etiam filios suos et filios filiorum suorum usque ad quartam generationem conspicit, quia in hac aetate quae 1167 annuis quatuor temporibus volvitur, usque ad finem mundi per ora praedicantium nascentes sibi quotidie soboles contemplatur. Nec abhorret a vero quod per generationes dicimus tempora designari. Quid enim unaquaeque successio, nisi quaedam propago est generis? Et pincerna regis Aegypti cum vidisset somnium quod tres propagines duceret (Genes. XL, 12), Joseph praeditus in solutione somniorum, tres propagines, tres dies renuntiat designare. Si ergo per tres propagines spatium trium dierum exprimitur, cur non etiam per quatuor generationes annua quatuor tempora figurentur? Sancta itaque Ecclesia videt filios suos, cum primam fidelium sobolem conspicit. Videt filios filiorum, cum ab eisdem fidelibus ad fidem gigni et filios cognoscit. Quae etiam senex et plena dierum moritur, quia, subsequente luce ex mercede quotidianorum operum, deposito corruptionis pondere, ad incorruptionem spiritalis patriae mutatur. Plena videlicet dierum moritur cui labentes anni non transeunt, sed stantium actuum retributione solidantur. Plena dierum moritur quae per haec transeuntia tempora id quod non transit operatur. Unde et apostolis dicitur: Operamini non cibum qui perit, sed qui permanet in vitam aeternam (Joan. VI, 27). Dies itaque suos sancta Ecclesia, etiam cum praesentem vitam deserit, non amittit, quia in electis suis tanto eorum lucem multiplicius invenit, quanto nunc in eis ab omni tentatione se cautius sollicitiusque custodit. Dies suos Ecclesia non amittit, quia sese in hac vita vigilanter quotidie pensare non negligit, et ad omnia quae recte facere valeat inertia nulla torpescit. Hinc est enim quod de illa per Salomonem dicitur: Considerat semitas domus suae, et panem otiosa non comedit (Prov. XXXI, 27). Semitas quippe domus suae considerat, quia cunctas suae conscientiae cogitationes subtiliter investigat. Panem otiosa non comedit, quia hoc quod de sacro eloquio intelligendo perceperit, ante aeterni judicis oculos exhibendo operibus ostendit. Mori autem dicitur, quia cum illam aeternitatis contemplatio absorbuerit, ab hac mutabilitatis suae vicissitudine funditus exstinguit, ut in ea jam hoc quod acumen intimae visionis impediat ullo modo nihil vivat. Tanto enim verius tunc interna conspicit, quanto cunctis exterioribus plenius occumbit. Hanc itaque mortem, hanc dierum plenitudinem, et in beato Job, uno scilicet membro Ecclesiae, credamus factam, et in tota simul Ecclesia speremus esse faciendam, quatenus ita teneatur rei gestae Veritas, ut non evacuetur rei gerendae prophetia. Bona enim, quae de sanctorum vita cognoscimus, si veritate carent, nulla sunt; si mysteria non habent, minima. Quae ergo per Spiritum sanctum bonorum vita describitur, et per intellectum nobis spiritalem fulgeat, et tamen sensus a fide historiae non recedat, quatenus tanto fixior animus in suo intellectu permaneat, quanto hunc quasi in quodam medio constitutum, et erga futura spes, et erga praeterita fides ligat. [Vet. XXVI, Rec. XVI.] 49. Conclusio totius operis. Quam formidandum ne qui de Deo loquuntur, aut mala incaute dicant, aut bona non bene. Intentioni placendi Deo humanae laudis intentio se interserit. Expleto itaque hoc opere, ad me mihi video esse redeundum. 1168 Multum quippe mens nostra etiam cum recte loqui conatur, extra semetipsam spargitur. Integritatem namque animi, dum cogitantur verba qualiter proferantur, quia eum trahunt intrinsecus, minuunt. Igitur a publico locutionis redeundum est ad curiam cordis, ut quasi in quodam concilio consultationis ad meipsum discernendum convocem cogitationes mentis, quatenus ibi videam ne aut incaute mala, aut bona non bene dixerim. Tunc enim bene dicitur bonum, cum is qui dicit, soli ei a quo accepit per id appetit placere quod dicit. Et quidem mala me aliqua etsi dixisse non invenio, tamen quia omnino non dixerim, non defendo. Bona vero si qua divinitus accipiens dixi, meo videlicet vitio minus me bene dixisse profiteor. Nam ad me intrinsecus rediens, postpositis verborum foliis, postpositis sententiarum ramis, dum ipsam subtiliter radicem meae intentionis inspicio, Deo quidem ex ea me summopere placere voluisse cognosco, sed eidem intentioni qua Deo placere studeo furtim se nescio quomodo intentio humanae laudis interserit. Quod cum jam postmodum tardeque discerno, invenio me aliter agere quod scio me aliter inchoasse. Sic etenim saepe intentionem nostram, dum ante Dei oculos recte incipitur, et eam velut in itinere comprehendens, intentio humanae laudis assequitur, sicut pro necessitate quidem cibus sumitur, sed in ipso esu, dum furtim gula subrepit, edendi delectatio permiscetur. Unde plerumque contingit ut refectionem corporis, quam salutis causa coepimus, causa voluptatis expleamus Fatendum est igitur quod rectam quidem intentionem nostram, quae soli Deo placere appetit, nonnunquam intentio minus recta, quae de donis Dei placere hominibus quaerit, insidiando comitatur. Si autem de his divinitus districte discutimur, quis inter ista remanet salutis locus, quando et mala nostra pura mala sunt, et bona quae nos habere credimus pura bona esse nequaquam possunt? Sed hoc mihi operae pretium credo, quod fraternis auribus omne quod in me latenter ipse reprehendo, incunctanter aperio. Quia enim exponendo, non celavi quod sensi, confitendo non abscondo quod patior. Per expositionem patefeci dona, per confessionem detego vulnera. Et quia in hoc tam magno humano genere, nec parvuli desunt qui dictis meis debeant instrui, nec magni desunt qui cognitae meae valeant infirmitati misereri, per haec utraque aliis fratribus quantum possum curam confero, ab aliis spero. Illis dixi exponendo quod faciant, istis aperio confitendo quod parcant. Illis verborum medicamenta non subtraho, istis lacerationem vulnerum non abscondo. Igitur quaeso ut quisquis haec legerit, apud districtum judicem solatium mihi suae orationis impendat, et omne quod in me sordidum deprehendit fletibus diluat. Orationis autem atque expositionis virtute collata, lector meus in recompensatione me superat, si cum per me verba accipit, pro me lacrymas reddat.

Liber I

Prologus

Quadam die nimiis quorumdam saecularium tumultibus depressus, quibus in suis negotiis plerumque cogimur solvere etiam quod nos certum est non debere, secretum locum petii amicum moeroris, ubi omne quod de mea mihi occupatione displicebat, se patenter ostenderet, et cuncta quae infligere dolorem consueverant, congesta ante oculos licenter venirent. Ibi itaque cum afflictus valde et diu tacitus sederem, dilectissimus filius meus Petrus diaconus adfuit, mihi a primaevo juventutis flore amicitiis familiariter obstrictus, atque ad sacri verbi indagationem socius. Qui gravi excoqui cordis languore me intuens, ait: Nunquidnam novi tibi aliquid accidit, quod plus te solito moeror tenet? Cui, inquam: Moeror, Petre, quem quotidie patior, et semper mihi per usum vetus est, et semper per augmentum novus. Infelix quippe animus meus occupationis suae pulsatus vulnere, meminit qualis aliquando in monasterio fuit; quomodo ei labentia cuncta subter erant; quantum rebus omnibus quae volvuntur eminebat; quod nulla nisi coelestia cogitare consueverat; quod etiam retentus corpore, ipsa jam carnis claustra contemplatione transibat; quod mortem quoque, quae pene cunctis poena est, videlicet ut ingressum vitae et laboris sui praemium amabat At nunc ex occasione curae pastoralis saecularium hominum negotia patitur, et post tam pulchram quietis suae speciem, terreni actus pulvere foedatur. Cumque se pro condescensione multorum ad exteriora sparserit, etiam cum interiora appetit, ad haec procul dubio minor redit. Perpendo itaque quid tolero, perpendo quod amisi. Dumque intueor illud quod perdidi, fit hoc gravius quod porto. Ecce etenim nunc magni maris fluctibus quatior, atque in navi mentis tempestatis validae procellis illidor. Et cum prioris vitae recolo, quasi post tergum ductis oculis viso littore suspiro. Quodque adhuc gravius est, dum immensis fluctibus turbatus feror, vix jam portum videre valeo quem reliqui, quia et ita sunt casus mentis, ut prius quidem perdat bonum quod tenet, si tamen se perdidisse meminerit; cumque longius recesserit, etiam boni ipsius quod perdiderat obliviscatur; fitque ut post neque per memoriam videat, quod prius per actionem tenebat. Unde hoc agitur quod praemisi, quia cum navigamus longius, jam nec portum quietis quem reliquimus videmus. Nonnunquam vero in augmentum mei doloris adjungitur, quod quorumdam vita qui praesens saeculum tota mente reliquerunt, mihi ad memoriam revocatur. Quorum dum culmen aspicio, quantum ipse in infimis jaceam agnosco; quorum plurimi Conditori suo in secretiori vita placuerunt, qui ne per humanos actus a novitate mentis veterascerent, eos omnipotens Deus hujus mundi laboribus noluit occupari. Sed jam quae prolata sunt, melius insinuo, si ea quae per inquisitionem ac responsionem dicta sunt, sola nominum praenotatione distinguo. PETRUS: Non valde in Italia aliquorum vitam virtutibus fulsisse cognovi; ex quorum igitur comparatione accenderis ignoro. Et quidem bonos viros in hac terra fuisse non dubito, signa tamen atque virtutes aut ab eis nequaquam facta existimo, aut ita sunt hactenus silentio suppressa, ut utrumne sint facta nesciamus. GREGORIUS: Si sola, Petre, referam, quae de perfectis probatisque viris unus ego homuncio, vel bonis ac fidelibus viris attestantibus, agnovi, vel per memetipsum didici; dies, ut opinor, ante quam sermo, cessabit. PETRUS: Vellem quaerenti mihi de eis aliqua narrares. Neque pro hac re interrumpere expositionis studium grave videatur, quia non dispar aedificatio oritur ex memoria virtutum. In expositione quippe qualiter invenienda atque tenenda sit virtus, agnoscitur; in narratione vero signorum cognoscimus inventa ac retenta qualiter declaretur. Et sunt nonnulli, quos ad amorem patriae coelestis plus exempla, quam praedicamenta succendunt. Fit vero plerumque audientis animo duplex adjutorium in exemplis Patrum, quia si ad amorem venturae vitae ex praecedentium comparatione accenditur, etiam si se esse aliquid existimat, dum meliora de aliis cognoverit, humiliatur. GREGORIUS: Ea quae mihi sunt virorum venerabilium narratione comperta, incunctanter narro sacrae auctoritatis exemplo, cum mihi luce clarius constet quia Marcus et Lucas Evangelium quod scripserunt, non visu, sed auditu didicerunt. Sed ut dubitationis occasionem legentibus subtraham, per singula quae describo, quibus haec auctoribus mihi comperta sint manifesto. Hoc vero scire te cupio, quia in quibusdam sensum solummodo, in quibusdam vero et verba cum sensu teneo; quia si de personis omnibus ipsa specialiter verba tenere voluissem, haec rusticano usu prolata stylus scribentis non apte susciperet. Seniorum valde venerabilium didici relatione quod narro.

CAPUT I. De Honorato abbate monasterii Fundensis.

Venantii quondam patricii in Samnii partibus villa fuit, in qua colonus ejus filium Honoratum nomine habuit, qui ab annis puerilibus ad amorem coelestis patriae per abstinentiam exarsit. Cumque magna conversatione polleret, seque jam ab otioso quoque sermone restringeret, multumque, ut praefatus sum, per abstinentiam carnem domaret, die quadam parentes ejus vicinis suis convivium fecerunt, in quo ad vescendum carnes paratae sunt: quas dum ille ad esum contingere pro abstinentiae amore recusaret, coeperunt eum parentes ejus irridere, ac dicere: Comede; nunquid piscem in his montibus tibi allaturi sumus? Illa vero in loco pisces audiri consueverant, non videri. Sed cum his sermonibus Honoratus irrideretur, repente in convivio aqua ad ministerium defuit; et cum situla lignea, sicut illic moris est, mancipium ad fontem perrexit. Dumque hauriret aquam, piscis situlam intravit. Reversumque mancipium ante ora discumbentium piscem cum aqua fudit, qui ad totius diei victum potuisset Honorato sufficere. Mirati omnes, totaque illa parentum irrisio cessavit. Coepere namque in Honorato venerari abstinentiam, quam ante deridebant; sicque a

Dei homine irrisionis detersit opprobria piscis de monte. Qui cum magnis virtutibus cresceret, a praedicto domino suo libertate donatus est, atque in eo loco qui Fundis dicitur, monasterium construxit, in quo ducentorum ferme monachorum Pater exstitit, ibique vita illius circumquaque exempla eximiae conversationis dedit. Nam quadam die ex eo monte qui ejus monasterio in excelso prominet ingentis saxi moles erupta est, quae per devexum montis latus veniens, totius ruinam cellae, omniumque fratrum interitum minabatur. Quam cum venientem desuper vir sanctus vidisset, frequenti voce nomen Christi invocans, extensa mox dextera signum ei crucis opposuit, eamque in ipso devexi montis latere cadentem fixit, sicut religiosus vir Laurentius perhibet. Et quia locus ei non fuerat quo inhaerere potuisset, aspicitur ita ut hucusque montem cernentibus, casura pendere videatur. PETRUS: Putamus, hic tam egregius vir, ut post magister discipulorum fieret, prius habuit magistrum? GREGORIUS: Nequaquam hunc fuisse cujusquam discipulum audivi, sed lege non constringitur sancti Spiritus donum. Usus quidem rectae conversationis est, ut praeesse non audeat, qui subesse non didicerit; nec obedientiam subjectis imperet, quam praelatis non novit exhibere. Sed tamen sunt nonnulli qui ita per magisterium Spiritus intrinsecus docentur, ut etsi eis exterius humani magisterii disciplina desit, magistri intimi censura non desit. Quorum tamen libertas vitae ab infirmis in exemplum non est trahenda, ne dum se quisque similiter sancto Spiritu impletum praesumit, discipulus hominis esse despiciat, et magister erroris fiat. Mens autem quae divino spiritu impletur, habet evidentissime signa sua; virtutes scilicet et humilitatem, quae si utraque perfecte in una mente conveniunt, liquet quod de praesentia sancti Spiritus testimonium ferunt. Sic quippe etiam Joannes Baptista magistrum habuisse non legitur, neque ipsa Veritas, quae corporali praesentia apostolos docuit, eum corporaliter inter discipulos aggregavit; sed quem intrinsecus docebat, extrinsecus quasi in sua libertate reliquerat. Sic Moyses in eremo edoctus mandatum ab angelo didicit, quod per hominem non cognovit. Sed haec, ut praediximus, infirmis veneranda sunt, non imitanda. PETRUS: Placet quod dicis; sed peto ut mihi dicas si tantus hic Pater aliquem sui imitatorem discipulum reliquit.

CAPUT II. De Libertino praeposito ejusdem monasterii.

GREGORIUS: Vir reverentissimus Libertinus, qui tempore Totilae regis Gothorum ejusdem Fundensis monasterii praepositus fuit, in discipulatu illius conversatus atque eruditus est. De quo quamvis virtutes multas plurimorum narratio certa vulgaverit, praedictus tamen Laurentius religiosus vir, qui nunc superest, et ei ipso in tempore familiarissimus fuit, multa mihi dicere de illo consuevit, ex quibus quae recolo, pauca narrabo. In eadem provincia Samnii, quam supra memoravi, idem vir pro utilitate monasterii carpebat iter. Dumque Darida Gothorum dux cum exercitu in loco eodem venisset, Dei servus ex caballo in quo sedebat, ab hominibus ejus projectus est. Qui jumenti perditi damnum libenter ferens, etiam flagellum quod tenebat, diripientibus obtulit, dicens: Tollite, ut habeatis qualiter hoc jumentum minare possitis; quibus dictis protinus se in orationem dedit. Cursu autem rapido praedicti ducis exercitus pervenit ad fluvium, nomine Vulturnum, ibique equos suos coeperunt singuli hastis tundere, et calcaribus cruentare; sed tamen equi verberibus caesi, calcaribus cruentati, fatigari poterant, moveri non poterant; sicque aquam fluminis tangere quasi mortale praecipitium pertimescebant. Cumque diu caedendo sessores singuli fatigarentur, unus eorum intulit, quia ex culpa quam servo Dei in via fecerant, illa sui itineris dispendia tolerabant. Qui statim reversi, post se Libertinum reperiunt in oratione prostratum. Cui cum dicerent: Surge, tolle caballum tuum; ille respondit: Ite cum bono, ego caballo opus non habeo. Descendentes vero, invitum eum in cabellum de quo deposuerant, levaverunt, et protinus abscesserunt. Quorum equi tanto cursu illud quod prius non poterant transire flumen, transierunt, ac si ille fluminis alveus aquam minime haberet. Sicque factum est ut cum servo Dei unus caballus suus redditur, omnes a singulis reciperentur. Eodem quoque tempore in Campaniae partibus Buccellinus cum Francis venit. De monasterio vero praefati famuli Dei rumor exierat, quod pecunias multas haberet. Ingressi oratorium Franci, coeperunt saevientes Libertinum quaerere, Libertinum clamare, ubi in oratione ille prostratus jacebat. Mira valde res: quaerentes, saevientesque Franci, ingredientes in ipso impingebant, et ipsum videre non poterant; sicque sua caecitate frustrati, a monasterio sunt vacui regressi. Alio quoque tempore pro causa monasterii, abbatis jussu, qui Honorato ejus magistro successerat, Ravennam pergebat. Pro amore vero ejusdem venerabilis Honorati, quocunque Libertinus ibat, ejus semper caligulam in sinu portare consueverat. Itaque dum pergeret, accidit ut quaedam mulier exstincti filii corpusculum ferret. Quae dum servum Dei fuisset intuita, amore filii succensa, jumentum ejus per frenum tenuit, atque cum juramento dixit: Nullatenus recedes, nisi filium meum suscitaveris. At ille inusitatum habens tale miraculum, expavit petitionis illius juramentum: declinare mulierem voluit, sed nequaquam praevalens, animo haesit. Considerare libet quale quantumque in ejus pectore certamen fuerit. Ibi quippe pugnabat inter se humilitas conversationis, ac pietas matris: timor ne inusitata praesumeret, dolor ne orbatae mulieri non subveniret. Sed ad majorem Dei gloriam vicit pietas illud pectus virtutis, quod ideo fuit validum, quia devictum; virtutis enim pectus non esset, si hoc pietas non vicisset. Itaque descendit, genua flexit, ad coelum manus tetendit, caligulam de sinu protulit, et super exstincti pueri pectus posuit. Quo orante, anima pueri ad corpus rediit: quem manu comprehendit, ac flenti matri viventem reddidit, atque iter quod coeperat peregit. PETRUS: Quidnam hoc esse dicimus? virtutem tanti miraculi Honorati egit meritum, an petitio Libertini? GREGORIUS: In ostensione tam admirabilis signi cum fide feminae virtus convenit utrorumque; atque ideo Libertinum existimo ista potuisse, quia plus didicerat de magistri, quam de sua virtute confidere. Cujus enim caligulam in pectore exstincti corpusculi posuit, ejus nimirum animam obtinere quod petebat aestimavit. Nam Elisaeus quoque magistri pallium ferens, atque ad Jordanem veniens, percussit semel, et aquas minime divisit. Sed cum repente diceret: Ubi est Deus Eliae etiam nunc? percussit fluvium magistri pallio, ac iter inter aquas fecit. Perpendis, Petre, quantum in exhibendis virtutibus humilitas valet? Tunc exhibere magistri virtutem potuit, quando magistri nomen ad memoriam reduxit. Quia enim ad humilitatem sub magistro rediit, quod magister fecerat et ipse fecit. PETRUS: Libet quod dicis; sed, quaeso te, estne aliquid aliud quod adhuc de ipso ad nostram aedificationem narres? GREGORIUS: Est plane, sed si sit qui velit imitari. Ego enim virtutem patientiae signis et miraculis majorem credo. Quadam namque die is qui post venerabilis Honorati exitum monasterii regimen tenebat, contra eumdem venerabilem Libertinum gravi iracundia exarsit, ita ut eum manibus caederet. Et quia virgam qua eum ferire posset, minime invenit, comprehenso scabello suppedaneo, ei caput ac faciem tutudit, totumque illius vultum tumentem ac lividum reddidit: qui vehementer caesus, ad stratum proprium tacitus recessit. Die vero altera erat pro utilitate monasterii causa constituta. Expletis igitur hymnis matutinalibus, Libertinus ad lectum abbatis venit, orationem sibi humiliter petiit. Sciens vero ille quantum a cunctis honoraretur, quantumque diligeretur, pro injuria quam ei ingesserat, recedere eum a monasterio velle putabat, atque requisivit, dicens: Ubi vis ire? Cui ille respondit: Monasterii causa constituta est, Pater, quam declinare nequeo, quia hesterno die me hodie iturum promisi, illuc ire disposui. Tunc ille a fundo cordis considerans asperitatem et duritiam suam, humilitatem ac mansuetudinem Libertini, ex lecto prosiliit, pedes Libertini tenuit, se peccasse, seque reum esse testatus est, qui tanto talique viro tam crudelem facere contumeliam praesumpsisset. At contra Libertinus sese in terram prosternens, ejusque pedibus provolutus, suae culpae, non illius saevitiae fuisse referebat quod pertulerat. Sicque actum est ut ad magnam mansuetudinem perduceretur Pater, et humilitas discipuli magistra fieret magistri. Cumque pro utilitate monasterii ad constitutionem causae egressus fuisset, multi viri noti ac nobiles qui eum valde honorabant, vehementer admirati, sollicite requirebant quidnam hoc esset, quod tam tumentem ac lividam haberet faciem. Quibus ille dicebat: Hesterno die sero, peccatis meis facientibus, in scabello suppedaneo impegi, atque hoc pertuli. Sicque vir sanctus servans in pectore honorem veritatis et magistri, nec patris prodebat vitium, nec falsitatis incurrebat peccatum. PETRUS: Putasne vir iste venerabilis Libertinus, de quo tot signa et miracula retulisti, in tam ampla congregatione imitatores suos in virtutibus non reliquit?

CAPUT III. De hortulano monacho monasterii ejusdem.

GREGORIUS: Felix qui appellatur Curvus, quem ipse bene nosti, qui ejusdem monasterii nuper praepositus fuit, multa mihi de fratribus ejusdem monasterii admiranda narrabat: ex quibus aliqua quae ad memoriam veniunt supprimo, quia ad alia festino. Sed unum dicam, quod ab eo narratum praetereundum nullo modo aestimo. In eodem monasterio quidam magnae vitae monachus erat hortulanus. Fur vero venire consueverat, per sepem ascendere, et occulte olera auferre. Cumque ille multa plantaret, quae minus inveniret, et alia pedibus conculcata, alia direpta conspiceret; totum hortum circumiens, invenit iter unde fur venire consueverat. Qui in eodem horto deambulans, reperit etiam serpentem, cui praecipiens dixit: Sequere me: atque ad aditum furis perveniens, imperavit serpenti, dicens: In nomine Jesu praecipio tibi ut aditum istum custodias, ac furem huc ingredi non permittas. Protinus serpens totum se in itinere in transversum tetendit, et ad cellam monachus rediit. Cumque meridiano tempore cuncti fratres quiescerent, more solito fur advenit, ascendit sepem; et cum in hortum pedem deponeret, vidit subito quia tensus serpens clausisset viam; et tremefactus post semetipsum concidit, ejusque pes per calceamentum in sude sepis inhaesit, sicque usque dum hortulanus rediret, deorsum capite pependit. Consueta hora venit hortulanus, pendentem in sepe furem reperit, serpenti autem dixit: Gratias Deo, implesti quod jussi; recede modo. Qui statim abscessit. Ad furem vero perveniens, ait: Quid est, frater? Tradidit te mihi Deus. Quare in labore monachorum furtum toties facere praesumpsisti? Et haec dicens, pedem illius a sepe in qua inhaeserat, solvit, eumque sine laesione deposuit. Cui dixit: Sequere me. Quem sequentem duxit ad horti aditum, et olera quae furto appetebat auferre, ei cum magna dulcedine praebuit, dicens: Vade, et post haec furtum non facias; sed cum necesse habes, huc ad me ingredere, et quae tu cum peccato laboras tollere, ego tibi devotus dabo. PETRUS: Nuncusque, ut invenio, incassum ego non fuisse Patres in Italia qui signa facerent aestimabam.

CAPUT IV. De Equitio abbate provinciae Valeriae.

GREGORIUS: Fortunati viri venerabilis abbatis monasterii quod appellatur Balneum Ciceronis, aliorumque etiam virorum venerabilium didici relatione quod narro. Vir sanctissimus Equitius nomine, in Valeriae provinciae partibus, pro vitae suae merito apud omnes illic magnae admirationis habebatur, cui Fortunatus idem familiariter notus fuit. Qui nimirum Equitius pro suae magnitudine sanctitatis multorum in eadem provincia monasteriorum Pater exstitit. Hunc cum juventutis suae tempore acri certamine carnis incentiva fatigarent, ipsae suae tentationis angustiae ad orationis studium solertiorem fecerunt. Cumque hac in re ab omnipotenti Deo remedium continuis precibus quaereret, nocte quadam assistente angelo eunuchizari se vidit, ejusque visioni apparuit, quod omnem motum ex genitalibus ejus membris abscideret; atque ex eo tempore ita alienus exstitit a tentatione, ac si sexum non haberet in corpore. Qua virtute fretus ex omnipotentis Dei auxilio, ut viris ante praeerat, ita coepit postmodum etiam feminis praeesse; nec tamen discipulos suos admonere cessabat, ne se ejus exemplo in hac re facile crederent, et casuri tentarent donum quod non accepissent. Eo autem tempore quo malefici in hac sunt Romana urbe deprehensi, Basilius, qui in magicis operibus primus fuit, in monachico habitu Valeriam fugiens petiit. Qui ad virum reverentissimum Castorium Amiterninae civitatis episcopum pergens, petiit ab eo ut eum Equitio abbati committeret, ac sanandum monasterio illius commendaret. Tunc ad monasterium venit episcopus, secumque Basilium monachum deduxit, et Equitium Dei famulum rogavit, ut eumdem monachum in congregationem susciperet. Quem statim vir sanctus intuens, ait: Hunc quem mihi commendas, Pater, ego non video monachum esse, sed diabolum. Cui ille respondit: Occasionem quaeris ne debeas praestare quod peto. Ad quem mox Dei famulus dixit: Ego quidem hoc eum esse denuntio, quod video; ne tamen nolle me obedire existimes, facio quod jubes. Susceptus itaque in monasterio est. Non post multos dies idem Dei famulus pro exhortandis ad desideria superna fidelibus, paulo longius a cella digressus est. Quo discedente contigit ut in monasterio virginum, in quo ejusdem Patris cura vigilabat, una earum quae juxta carnis hujus putredinem speciosa videbatur febricitare inciperet, et vehementer anxiari, magnisque jam non vocibus, sed stridoribus clamare: Modo moritura sum, nisi Basilius monachus veniat, et ipse mihi per suae curationis studium salutem reddat. Sed in tanti Patris absentia accedere quisquam monachorum in congregationem virginum non audebat; quanto minus ille qui novus advenerat, cujusque adhuc vitam congregatio fratrum nesciebat. Missum repente est, et Dei famulo Equitio nuntiatum, quod sanctimonialis illa immensis febribus aestuaret, et Basilii monachi visitationem anxie quaereret. Quo audito vir sanctus, dedignando subrisit, atque ait: Nunquid non dixi quod diabolus esset iste, non monachus? Ite et eum de cella expellite. De ancilla autem Dei, quae anxietate febrium urgetur, nolite esse solliciti, quia ex hac hora neque febribus laboratura est, neque Basilium quaesitura. Regressus est autem monachus, et ea hora saluti restitutam Dei virginem agnovit, qua eamdem salutem illius Dei famulus Equitius longe positus dixit; in virtute scilicet miraculi exemplum tenens Magistri, qui invitatus ad filium reguli, eum solo verbo restituit saluti, ut revertens pater ea hora filium restitutum vitae cognosceret, qua vitam illius ex ore Veritatis audisset. Omnes autem monachi jussionem Patris sui implentes, eumdem Basilium ex monasterii habitatione repulerunt. Qui repulsus dixit, frequenter se cellulam Equitii magicis artibus in aera suspendisse, nec tamen ejus quempiam laedere potuisse. Qui non post longum tempus, in hac Romana urbe, exardescente zelo Christiani populi, igne crematus est. Quadam vero die una Dei famula ex eodem monasterio virginum hortum ingressa est: quae lactucam conspiciens concupivit, eamque signo crucis benedicere oblita, avide momordit; sed arrepta a diabolo protinus cecidit. Cumque vexaretur, eidem Patri Equitio sub celeritate nuntiatum est, ut veniret concitus, et orando succurreret. Moxque hortum idem Pater ut ingressus est, coepit ex ejus ore quasi satisfaciens ipse qui hanc arripuerat diabolus clamare, dicens: Ego quid feci? ego quid feci? Sedebam mihi super lactucam; venit illa, et momordit me. Cui cum gravi indignatione vir Dei praecepit ut discederet, et locum in omnipotentis Dei famula non haberet. Qui protinus abscessit, nec eam ultra contingere praevaluit. PETRUS: Vellem etiam Patris hujus opus agnoscere, qui fertur talia dona percepisse. GREGORIUS: Opus, Petre, ex dono est, non donum ex opere, alioquin gratia jam non est gratia. Omne quippe opus dona praeveniunt, quamvis ex subsequenti opere ipsa etiam dona succrescunt; ne tamen vitae ejus cognitione frauderis, bene hunc reverentissimus vir Albinus Reatinae antistes Ecclesiae cognovit, et adhuc supersunt multi qui scire potuerunt. Sed quid plus quaeris operis, quando concordabat vitae munditia cum studio praedicationis? Tantus quippe illum fervor ad colligendas Deo animas accenderat, ut sic monasteriis praesset, quatenus per ecclesias, per castra, per vicos, per singulorum quoque fidelium domos circumquaque discurreret, et corda audientium ad amorem patriae coelestis excitaret. Erat vero valde vilis in vestibus, atque ita despectus, ut si quis illum fortasse nesciret, salutatus etiam resalutare despiceret, et quoties alia tendebat ad loca, jumentum sedere consueverat, quod despicabilius omnibus jumentis in cella potuisset reperiri; in quo etiam capistro pro freno, et vervecum pellibus pro sella utebatur. Super semetipsum sacros codices in pelliceis sacculis missos dextro laevoque portabat latere, et quocunque pervenisset, Scripturarum aperiebat fontem, et rigabat prata mentium. Hujus quoque opinio praedicationis ad Romanae urbis notitiam pervenit; atque ut est lingua adulantium auditoris sui animam amplectendo necans, eodem tempore clerici hujus apostolicae sedis antistiti adulando questi sunt, dicentes: Quis est iste vir rusticus, qui auctoritatem sibi praedicationis arripuit, et officium apostolici nostri Domini sibimet indoctus usurpare praesumit? Mittatur ergo, si placet, qui huc eum exhibeat, ut quis sit ecclesiasticus vigor agnoscat. Sicut autem moris est ut occupato in multis animo adulatio valde subrepat, si ab ipso cordis ostio nequaquam fuerit citius repulsa, suadentibus se clericis consensum pontifex praebuit, ut ad Romanam urbem deduci debuisset, et quaenam sua esset mensura cognosceret. Julianum tamen tunc defensorem mittens, qui Sabinensi Ecclesiae postmodum in episcopatu praefuit, hoc praecepit, ut magno cum honore eum deduceret, nec quidquam Dei famulus ex conventione eadem injuriae sentiret. Qui parere de eo clericorum votis concitus volens, festine ad ejus monasterium cucurrit, ibique absente illo antiquarios scribentes reperit, ubi abbas esset inquisivit. Qui dixerunt: In valle hac quae monasterio subjacet, fenum secat. Idem vero Julianus superbum valde atque contumacem puerum habuit, cui vix poterat vel ipse dominari. Hunc ergo misit, ut ipsum ad se sub celeritate perduceret. Perrexit puer, et protervo spiritu pratum velociter ingressus, omnesque illic intuens fenum secantes, requisivit quisnam esset Equitius. Moxque ut audivit quis esset, eum adhuc longe positus aspexit, et immenso timore correptus, coepit tremere, lassescere, seque ipsum nutanti gressu vix posse portare. Qui tremens ad Dei hominem pervenit, atque ulnis humiliter ejus genua deosculans, strinxit, suumque dominum ei occurrisse nuntiavit. Cui resalutato Dei famulus praecepit, dicens: Leva fenum viride, porta pabulum jumentis in quibus venistis: ecce ego, quia parum superest, opere expleto te subsequor. Is autem qui missus fuerat, Julianus defensor mirabatur valde quidnam esset quod redire moraretur puer: cum ecce revertentem puerum conspicit, atque in collo fenum ex prato deferentem; qui vehementer iratus coepit clamare, dicens: Quid est hoc? Ego te misi hominem deducere, non fenum portare. Cui puer respondit: Quem quaeris, ecce subsequitur. Tum ecce vir Dei, clavatis calceatus caligis, falcem fenariam in collo deferens, veniebat: quem adhuc longe positum puer suo domino quia ipse esset quem quaereret indicavit. Idem vero Julianus repente ut vidit Dei famulum, ex ipso habitu despexit, eumque qualiter deberet alloqui proterva mente praeparabat. Mox vero ut servus Dei cominus adfuit, ejusdem Juliani animum intolerabilis pavor invasit, ita ut tremeret, atque ad insinuandum hoc ipsum quod venerat, vix sufficere lingua potuisset. Qui humiliato mox spiritu ad ejus genua cucurrit, orationem pro se fieri petiit, et quia pater ejus apostolicus pontifex eum videre vellet indicavit. Vir autem venerandus Equitius coepit immensas gratias omnipotenti Deo agere, asserens quod se per summum pontificem gratia superna visitasset. Illico vocavit fratres, praecepit hora eadem jumenta praeparari, atque exsecutorem suum coepit vehementer urgere ut statim exire debuissent. Cui Julianus ait: Hoc fieri nullatenus potest, quia lassatus ex itinere hodie non valeo exire. Tunc ille respondit: Contristas me, fili, quia si hodierna die non egredimur, jam crastina non exibimus. Dei itaque famulus exsecutoris sui lassitudine coactus, in monasterio suo eadem nocte demoratus est. Cum ecce sequenti die sub ipso lucis crepusculo vehementer equo in cursu fatigato ad Julianum puer cum epistola pervenit, in qua praeceptum est ei ne servum Dei contingere vel movere de monasterio auderet. Quem cum ille requireret cur sententia esset mutata, cognovit, quia nocte eadem, in qua ipse exsecutor illuc missus est, per visum pontifex fuerat vehementer exterritus, cur ad exhibendum Dei hominem mittere praesumpsisset. Qui protinus surrexit, seque venerandi viri commendans orationibus, ait: Rogat Pater noster ne fatigari debeatis. Cumque hoc Dei famulus audisset, contristatus ait: Nunquid non die hesterno dixi tibi, quia si statim non pergeremus, jam pergere minime liceret? Tunc pro charitatis exhibitione aliquantulum exsecutorem suum in cella detinuit, eique laboris sui commodum coacto renitentique dedit. Cognosce igitur, Petre, in quanta Dei custodia sunt qui in hac vita seipsos despicere noverunt; cum quibus intus civibus in honore numerantur, qui despecti foris hominibus esse non erubescunt; quia econtra in Dei oculis jacent, qui apud suos et proximorum oculos per inanis gloriae appetitum tument. Unde et quibusdam Veritas dicit: Vos estis qui justificatis vos coram hominibus, Deus autem novit corda vestra: quia quod hominibus altum est, abominabile est ante Deum. PETRUS: Miror valde quod de tali viro subripi pontifici tanto potuerit. GREGORIUS: Quid miraris, Petre, quia fallimur qui homines sumus? An mente excidit quod S. David, qui prophetiae spiritum habere consueverat, contra innocentem Jonathae filium sententiam dedit, cum verba pueri mentientis audivit? Quod tamen quia per S. David factum est, et occulto Dei judicio justum credimus, et tamen humana ratione qualiter justum fuerit, non videmus. Quid ergo mirum si ore mentientium aliquando in aliud ducimur, qui prophetae non sumus? Multum vero est quod uniuscujusque praesulis mentem curarum desitas devastat. Cumque animus dividitur ad multa, fit minor ad singula: tantoque ei in una qualibet re subripitur, quando latius in multis occupatur. PETRUS: Vera sunt valde quae dicis. GREGORIUS: Silere non debeo, quod de hoc viro abbate quondam meo reverentissimo Valentino narrante, agnovi. Aiebat namque quia corpus ejus dum in beati Laurentii martyris oratorio esset humatum, super sepulcrum illius rusticus quidam arcam cum frumento posuit, nec quantus qualisque vir illic jaceret, perpendere ac vereri curavit. Tunc repente turbo coelitus factus, rebus illic omnibus in sua stabilitate manentibus, arcam, quae superposita sepulcro ejus fuerat, extulit, longeque projecit, ut palam cuncti cognoscerent quanti esset meriti is cujus illic corpus jaceret. Etiam ea quae subjungo, praedicti venerabilis viri Fortunati, qui valde mihi aetate, opere et simplicitate placet, relatione cognovi. Eamdem Valeriae provinciam Langobardis intrantibus, ex monasterio reverentissimi viri Equiti in praedicto oratorio ad sepulcrum ejus monachi fugerunt. Cumque Langobardi saevientes oratorium intrassent, coeperunt eosdem monachos foras trahere, ut eos aut per tormenta discuterent, aut gladiis necarent. Quorum unus ingemuit, atque acri dolore commotus clamavit: Heu, heu, sancte Equiti, placet tibi quod trahimur, et nos non defendis? Ad cujus vocem protinus saevientes Langobardos immundus spiritus invasit. Qui corruentes in terram tandiu vexati sunt, quousque hoc cuncti, etiam qui foris erant, Langobardi cognoscerent, quatenus locum sacrum temerare ulterius non auderent. Sicque vir sanctus dum discipulos defendit, etiam multis post remedium illuc fugientibus praestitit.

CAPUT V. De Constantio mansionario Ecclesiae sancti Stephani.

Cujusdam coepiscopi mei didici relatione quod narro: qui in Anconitana urbe per annos multos in monachico habitu deguit, ibique vitam non mediocriter religiosam duxit; cui etiam quidam nostri jam provectioris aetatis, qui ex eisdem sunt partibus, attestantur. Juxta eam namque civitatem ecclesia beati martyris Stephani sita est, in qua vir vitae venerabilis, Constantius nomine, mansionarii functus officio deserviebat: cujus sanctitatis opinio sese ad notitiam hominum longe lateque tetenderat, quia idem vir funditus terrena despiciens, toto annisu mentis ad sola coelestia flagrabat. Quadam vero die dum in eadem Ecclesia oleum deesset, et praedictus Dei famulus unde lampades accenderet omnino non haberet, omnes lampades Ecclesiae implevit aqua, atque ex more in medio papyrum posuit; quas allato igne succendit, sicque aqua arsit in lampadibus ac si oleum fuisset. Perpende igitur, Petre, cujus meriti vir iste fuerit, qui necessitate compulsus, elementi naturam mutavit. PETRUS: Mirum est valde quod audio; sed nosse vellem cujus humilitatis apud se esse intus potuit iste, qui tantae excellentiae foris fuit. GREGORIUS: Inter virtutes animum congrue requiris, quia multum valde est quod tentatione sua intus mentem lacessunt mira quae foris fiunt. Sed si hujus Constantii venerabilis unum quod fecit audis, cujus humilitatis fuerit, citius agnosces. PETRUS: Postquam facti illius tale miraculum dixisti, superest etiam ut me de humilitate mentis ejus aedifices. GREGORIUS: Quia valde opinio sanctitatis ejus excreverat, multi hunc ex diversis provinciis anxie videre sitiebant. Quadam vero die ex longinquo loco ad videndum eum quidam rusticus venit. Eadem vero hora casu contigerat, ut sanctus vir stans in ligneis gradibus, reficiendis deserviret lampadibus. Erat autem pusillus valde, exili forma atque despecta. Cumque is qui ad videndum eum venerat quisnam esset inquireret, atque obnixe peteret ut sibi debuisset ostendi, hi qui illum noverant monstrarunt quis esset. Sed sicut stultae mentis homines merita ex qualitate corporis metiuntur, eum parvulum atque despectum videns, ipsum hunc esse coepit omnino non credere. In mente etenim rustica inter hoc quod audierat et videbat, quasi facta fuerat quaedam rixa; et aestimabat tam brevem per visionem esse non posse, quem tam ingentem habuerat per opinionem. Cui ipsum esse dum a pluribus fuisset assertum, despexit et coepit irridere, dicens: Ego grandem hominem credidi, iste autem de homine nihil habet. Quod ut vir Dei Constantius audivit, lampades quas reficiebat protinus laetus relinquens, concitus descendit, atque in ejusdem rustici amplexum ruit, eumque ex amore nimio constringere coepit brachiis, et osculari, magnasque gratias agere quod is de se talia judicasset, dicens: Tu solus in me apertos oculos habuisti. Qua ex re pensandum est cujus apud se humilitatis fuerit, qui despicientem se rusticum amplius amavit. Qualis enim quisque apud se lateat, contumelia illata probat. Nam sicut superbi honoribus, sic plerumque humiles sua despectione gratulantur. Cumque se et in alienis oculis viles aspiciunt, idcirco gaudent, quia hoc judicium confirmari intelligunt, quod de se et ipsi apud semetipsos habuerunt. PETRUS: Ut agnosco, vir iste magnus foris fuit in miraculis, sed major intus in humilitate cordis.

CAPUT VI. De Marcellino Anconitanae civitatis episcopo.

GREGORIUS: Ejusdem quoque Anconitanae antistes Ecclesiae vir vitae venerabilis Marcellinus fuit, cujus gressum dolore nimio podagra contraxerat, eumque familiares sui sicubi necesse erat in manibus ferebant. Quadam vero die per culpam incuriae eadem civitas Anconitana succensa est. Cumque vehementer arderet, concurrerunt omnes ut ignem exstinguerent. Sed illis aquam certatim projicientibus, ita crescebat flamma, ut jam totius urbis interitum minari videretur. Cumque propinquiora sibi quaeque loca ignis invaderet, jamque urbis partem non modicam consumpsisset, et obsistere nullus valeret, deductus in manibus venit episcopus, et tanta periculi necessitate compulsus, familiaribus suis se portantibus praecepit, dicens: Contra ignem me ponite. Quod ita factum est, atque in eo loco est positus, ubi tota vis flammae videbatur incumbere. Coepit autem miro modo in semetipsum incendium retorqueri, ac si reflexione sui impetus exclamaret se episcopum transire non posse. Sicque factum est ut flamma incendii illo termino refrenata, in semetipsa refrigesceret, et contingere ulterius quidquam aedificii non auderet. Perpendis, Petre, cujus sanctitatis fuerit aegrum hominem sedere, et exorando flammas premere? PETRUS: Et perpendo et obstupesco.

CAPUT VII. De Nonnoso praeposito monasterii in monte Soractis.

GREGORIUS: De vicino nunc loco tibi aliquid narrabo, quod et viri venerabilis Maximiani episcopi, et Laurionis, quem nosti veterani monachi, qui uterque nuncusque superest, relatione cognovi; qui scilicet Laurio in illo monasterio quod juxta Nepesinam urbem Suppentonia vocatur, ab Anastasio viro sanctissimo nutritus est. Qui nimirum Anastasius, vitae venerabilis viro Nonnoso praeposito monasterii, quod in Soractis monte situm est, et propinquitate loci et morum magnitudine, et virtutum studiis assidue jungebatur. Idem vero Nonnosus sub asperrimo sui monasterii degebat Patre: sed ejus mores mira semper aequanimitate tolerabat. Sicque fratribus praeerat in mansuetudine, sicut crebro Patris iracundiam ex humilitate mitigabat. Quia vero ejus monasterium in summo montis cacumine situm est, ad quemlibet parvum hortum fratribus excolendum nulla patebat planities: unus autem brevissimus locus in latere montis excreverat, quem ingentis saxi naturaliter egrediens moles occupabat. Quadam die dum Nonnosus vir venerabilis cogitaret, quod saltem ad condimenta olerum nutrienda locus idem aptus potuisset existere, si hunc moles saxi illius non teneret, occurrit animo, quod eamdem molem quinquaginta boum paria movere non possent. Cumque de humano labore facta esset desperatio, ad divinum se solatium contulit, seque illic nocturno silentio in orationem dedit. Cumque mane facto ad eumdem locum fratres venirent, invenerunt molem tantae magnitudinis ab eodem loco longius recessisse, suoque secessu largum fratribus spatium dedisse. Alio quoque tempore cum idem vir venerabilis lampades vitreas in oratorio lavaret, una ex ejus manibus cecidit, quae per innumeras partes fracta dissiluit: qui vehementissimum Patris monasterii furorem timens, lampadis protinus omnia fragmenta collegit, atque ante altare posuit, seque cum gravi gemitu in orationem dedit. Cumque ab oratione caput levasset, sanam lampadem reperit, quam timens per fragmenta collegerat. Sicque in duobus miraculis duorum Patrum virtutes imitatus est: in mole scilicet saxi, factum Gregorii qui montem movit; in reparatione vero lampadis, virtutem Donati, qui fractum calicem pristinae incolumitati restituit. PETRUS: Habemus, ut video, de exemplis veteribus nova miracula. GREGORIUS: Visne aliquid in operatione Nonnosi de imitatione quoque Elisaei cognoscere? PETRUS: Volo, atque inhianter cupio. GREGORIUS: Dum quadam die in monasterio vetus oleum deesset, jamque colligendae olivae tempus incumberet, sed fructus in oleis nullus appareret, visum Patri monasterii fuerat ut circumquaque fratres in colligendis olivis ad exhibenda extraneis opera pergerent, quatenus ex mercede sui operis aliquantulum monasterio oleum deportarent. Quod vir Domini Nonnosus fieri cum magna humilitate prohibuit, ne exeuntes fratres ex monasterio dum lucra olei quaererent, animarum damna paterentur. Sed quia in monasterii arboribus olivae paucae inesse videbantur, eas colligi praecepit, et in praelo mitti, et quamlibet parum olei exire potuisset, sibimet deferri. Factumque est, et susceptum in parvo vasculo oleum fratres Nonnoso Dei famulo detulerunt: quod ipse protinus ante altare posuit, cunctisque egredientibus oravit, atque accersitis postmodum fratribus praecepit, ut hoc quod detulerant oleum levarent, et per cuncta vasa monasterii exigue fundendo dividerent, quatenus benedictione ejusdem olei omnia infusa viderentur: quae protinus ut erant vacua claudi fecit. Die vero altera aperta omnia plena reperta sunt. PETRUS: Probamus quotidie impleri verba Veritatis, quae ait: Pater meus usque modo operatur, et ego operor .

GREGORIUS: Eodem quoque tempore venerandus vir Anastasius, cujus superius memoriam feci, sanctae Romanae Ecclesiae, cui Deo auctore deservio, notarius fuit. Qui soli Deo vacare desiderans, scrinium deseruit, monasterium elegit, atque in eo loco quem praefatus sum, qui Suppentonia vocatur, per annos multos in sanctis actibus vitam duxit, eique monasterio solerti custodia praefuit. Quo videlicet in loco ingens desuper rupes eminet, et profundum subter praecipitium patet. Quadam vero nocte cum jam omnipotens Deus ejusdem venerabilis viri Anastasii labores remunerare decrevisset, ab alta rupe vox facta est, quae producto sonitu clamaret, dicens: Anastasi, veni. Quo vocato alii quoque septem fratres vocati sunt ex nomine. Parvo autem momento ea quae fuerat emissa vox siluit, et octavum fratrem vocavit. Quas dum aperte voces congregatio audisset, dubium non fuit quin eorum qui vocati fuerant obitus appropinquasset. Intra paucos igitur dies primus venerandus vir Anastasius, caeteri autem in eo ordine ex carne educti sunt, quo de rupis vertice fuerant vocati. Frater vero ille ad quem vocandum vox parum siluit, atque eum ita nominavit, morientibus aliis, paucis diebus vixit, et tunc vitam finivit; ut aperte monstraretur quia interjectum vocis silentium parvum vivendi spatium signaverit. Sed mira res contigit, quia venerabilis vir Anastasius dum de corpore exiret, erat quidam frater in monasterio qui super cum vivere nolebat: provolutus vero ejus pedibus coepit cum lacrymis ab eo postulare, dicens: Per illum ad quem vadis, te adjuro, ne septem dies super te in hoc mundo faciam; ante cujus septimum diem etiam ipse defunctus est, qui tamen in illa nocte inter caeteros non fuerat vocatus, ut aperte claresceret, quia ejus obitum sola venerabilis Anastasii intercessio obtinere potuisset. PETRUS: Cum idem frater et vocatus inter caeteros non est, et tamen sancti viri intercessionibus ex hac luce subtractus est, quid aliud datur intelligi, nisi quod hi qui apud Dominum magni sunt meriti, obtinere aliquando possunt ea etiam quae non sunt praedestinata? GREGORIUS: Obtineri nequaquam possunt quae praedestinata non fuerint; sed ea quae sancti viri orando efficiunt, ita praedestinata sunt, ut precibus obtineantur. Nam ipsa quoque perennis regni praedestinatio ita est ab omnipotenti Deo disposita, ut ad hoc electi ex labore perveniant, quatenus postulando mereantur accipere quod eis omnipotens Deus ante saecula disposuit donare. PETRUS: Probari mihi apertius velim, si potest praedestinatio precibus juvari. GREGORIUS: Hoc quod ego, Petre, intuli, concite valet probari. Certe etenim nosti, quia ad S. Abraham Dominus dixit: In Isaac vocabitur tibi semen. Cui etiam dixerat: Patrem multarum gentium constitui te . Cui rursum promisit, dicens: Benedicam tibi, et multiplicabo semen tuum sicut stellas coeli, et sicut arenam quae est in littore maris. Ex qua re aperte constat quia omnipotens Deus semen Abrahae multiplicare per Isaac praedestinaverat, et tamen scriptum est: Deprecatus est Isaac Dominum pro uxore sua, eo quod esset sterilis, qui exaudivit eum, et dedit conceptum Rebeccae. Si ergo multiplicatio generis Abrahae per Isaac praedestinata fuit, cur conjugem sterilem accepit? Sed nimirum constat quia praedestinatio precibus impletur, quando is in quo Deus multiplicare semen Abrahae praedestinaverat, oratione obtinuit ut filios habere potuisset. PETRUS: Quia secretum ratio aperuit nihil mihi dubietatis remansit. GREGORIUS: Vis tibi aliquid de Tusciae partibus narrem, ut cognoscas quales in ea viri fuerint, et omnipotentis Dei notitiae quantum propinqui? PETRUS: Volo, atque hoc omnimodo exposco.

CAPUT IX. De Bonifacio Ferentinae civitatis episcopo.

GREGORIUS: Fuit vir vitae venerabilis Bonifacius nomine, qui in ea civitate quae Ferentis dicitur episcopatum officio tenuit, et moribus implevit. Hujus multa miracula is qui adhuc superest Gaudentius presbyter narrat. Qui nutritus in ejus obsequio, tanto valet de illo quaeque veracius dicere, quanto eis hunc contigit interesse. Hujus Ecclesiae gravis valde paupertas inerat, quae bonis mentibus esse solet custos humilitatis, nihilque aliud ad omne stipendium, nisi unam tantummodo vineam habebat: quae quodam die ita grandine irruente vastata est, ut in ea paucis in vitibus vix parvi rarique racemi remanerent. Quam cum Dei praedictus vir reverentissimus Bonifacius episcopus fuisset ingressus, magnas omnipotenti Deo gratias retulit, quia in ipsa sua adhuc inopia sese angustiari cognovit. Sed cum jam tempus exigeret ut ipsi quoque racemi qui remanserant, maturescere potuissent custodem vineae ex more posuit, eamque solerti vigilantia servari praecepit. Quadam vero die mandavit Constantio presbytero nepoti suo, ut cuncta vini vascula in episcopio, omniaque dolia, ita ut ante consueverat, pice superfusa praepararet. Quod cum nepos illius presbyter audisset, valde admiratus est quod quasi insana praeciperet, ut vini vascula praeparari faceret, qui vinum minime haberet; nec tamen praesumpsit inquirere cur talia juberet, sed jussis obtemperans, omnia ex more praeparavit. Tunc vir Dei vineam ingressus racemos collegit, ad calcatorium detulit, omnesque exinde egredi praecepit, solusque ibi cum uno parvulo puerulo remansit, quem in eodem calcatorio deposuit, et calcare ipsos paucissimos racemos fecit. Cumque ex iisdem racemis parum aliquid vini deflueret, coepit hoc vir Dei suis manibus in parvo vase suscipere, et per cuncta dolia omniaque vasa quae parata fuerant, pro benedictione dividere, ut ex eodem vino omnia vascula vix infusa viderentur. Cum vero ex liquore vini parum aliquid in vasis omnibus misisset, vocato protinus presbytero, jussit pauperes adesse. Tunc coepit vinum in calcatorio crescere ita ut omnia quae allata fuerant pauperum vascula impleret. Quibus cum se idonee satisfecisse conspiceret, ex calcatorio jussit puerum descendere, apothecam clausit, atque impresso sigillo proprio munitam reliquit, moxque ad Ecclesiam rediit. Die vero tertia praedictum Constantium presbyterum vocavit, et oratione facta apothecam aperuit, et vasa in quibus tenuissimum liquorem infuderat, ubertim vinum fundentia invenit, ita ut pavimentum omne excrescentia vina invaderent, si adhuc episcopus tardius intrasset. Tunc terribiliter presbytero praecepit ne quousque ipse in corpore viveret, hoc miraculum cuiquam indicaret; pertimescens videlicet ne in virtute facti favore humano pulsatus, inde intus inanesceret, unde foris hominibus magnus appareret: exemplum etiam Magistri sequens, qui ut nos ad viam humilitatis instrueret, de semetipso discipulis praecepit, dicens ut ea quae vidissent, nemini dicerent, quousque Filius hominis a mortuis resurgeret. PETRUS: Quia occasio apta se praebuit, libet inquirere quidnam sit quod Redemptor noster cum duobus caecis lumen reddidit, jussit ut nemini dicerent, et illi abeuntes diffamaverunt eum in totam terram illam. Nunquidnam unigenitus Filius, Patri et sancto Spiritui coaeternus, hac in re velle habuit, quod non potuit implere, ut miraculum quod taceri voluit, minime potuisset abscondi? GREGORIUS: Redemptor noster per mortale corpus omne quod egit, hoc nobis in exemplum actionis praebuit, ut pro nostrarum virium modulo ejus vestigia sequentes, inoffenso pede operis praesentis vitae carpamus viam. Miraculum namque faciens, et taceri jussit, et tamen taceri non potuit; ut videlicet et electi ejus exempla doctrinae illius sequentes, in magnis quae faciunt, latere quidem in voluntate habeant, sed ut prosint aliis, prodantur inviti; quatenus et magnae humilitatis sit quod sua opera taceri appetunt, et magnae utilitatis sit quod eorum opera taceri non possunt. Non ergo voluit Dominus quidquam fieri, et minime potuit; sed quid velle ejus membra debeant, quidve de eis etiam nolentibus fiat, doctrinae magisterio exemplum dedit. PETRUS: Placet quod dicis. GREGORIUS: Adhuc pauca aliqua quae de Bonifacii episcopi opere supersunt, quia ejus memoriam fecimus, exsequamur. Alio namque tempore beati Proculi martyris natalitius propinquabat dies, quo in loco vir nobilis Fortunatus nomine manebat: qui magnis precibus ab eodem venerabili viro postulavit ut cum apud beatum martyrem missarum solemnia ageret, ad benedictionem dandam in suam domum declinaret. Vir autem Dei negare non potuit quod ab eo ex Fortunati mente charitas poposcit. Peractis igitur missarum solemniis, cum ad praedicti Fortunati venisset mensam, prius quam Deo hymnum diceret, sicut quidam ludendi arte victum solent quaerere, repente ante januam cum simia vir astitit, et cymbala percussit. Quem sanctus vir sonitum audiens dedignatus, dixit: Heu, heu, mortuus est miser iste, mortuus est miser iste. Ego ad mensam refectionis veni, os adhuc ad laudem Dei non aperui, et ille cum simia veniens percussit cymbala. Subjunxit tamen et ait: Ite et pro charitate ei cibum potumque tribuite; scitote tamen quia mortuus est. Qui infelix vir dum panem ac vinum ex eadem domo percepisset, egredi januam voluit, sed saxum ingens subito de tecto cecidit, eique in verticem venit. Ex qua percussione prostratus in manibus jam semivivus levatus est: die vero altera secundum viri Dei sententiam funditus finivit vitam. Qua in re, Petre, pensandum est quantus sit viris sanctis timor exhibendus; templa enim Dei sunt. Et cum ad iracundiam vir sanctus trahitur, quis alius ad irascendum nisi ejusdem templi inhabitator excitatur? Metuenda ergo tanto est ira justorum, quanto et constat quia in eorum cordibus ille praesens est, qui ad inferendam ultionem quam voluerit, invalidus non est. Alio quoque tempore praedictus Constantius presbyter nepos ejus, equum suum duodecim aureis vendidit, quos in propriam arcam ponens, ad exercendum opus aliquod discessit. Cum subito ad episcopium pauperes venerunt, qui importune precabantur ut eis sanctus vir Bonifacius episcopus ad consolationem suae inopiae aliquid largiri debuisset. Sed vir Dei quia quid tribueret non habebat, aestuare coepit in cogitatione ne ab eo pauperes vacui exirent. Cui repente ad memoriam rediit, quia Constantius presbyter nepos ejus, equum quem sedere consueverat, vendidisset, atque hoc ipsum in arca sua pretium haberet. Absente igitur eodem nepote suo accessit ad arcam, et pie violentus claustra arcae comminuit, duodecim aureos tulit, eosque indigentibus, ut placuit, divisit. Itaque Constantius presbyter reversus ex opere, arcam fractam reperit, et caballi sui pretium quod in eam posuerat, non invenit. Coepit itaque voce magna perstrepere, et cum furore nimio clamare: Omnes hic vivunt, solus ego in domo hac vivere non possum. Ad cujus nimirum voces venit episcopus, omnesque qui in eodem episcopio aderant. Cumque eum locutione blanda vir Dei temperare voluisset, coepit ille cum jurgio respondere, dicens: Omnes tecum vivunt, solus ego hic ante te vivere non possum: redde mihi solidos meos. Quibus vocibus commotus episcopus, beatae Mariae semper virginis Ecclesiam ingressus est, et elevatis manibus extenso vestimento, stando coepit exorare, ut ei redderet unde presbyteri furentis insaniam mitigare potuisset. Cumque subito oculos ad vestimentum suum inter extensa brachia reduxisset, repente in sinu suo duodecim aureos invenit ita fulgentes, tanquam si ex igne producti eadem hora fuissent. Qui mox de Ecclesia egressus, eos in sinum furentis presbyteri projecit, dicens: Ecce habes solidos quos quaesisti; sed hoc tibi notum sit, quia post mortem meam tu hujus Ecclesiae episcopus non eris propter avaritiam tuam. Ex qua sententiae veritate colligitur quia, eosdem solidos presbyter pro adipiscendo episcopatu parabat. Sed viri Dei sermo praevaluit, nam idem Constantius in presbyteratus officio vitam finivit. Alio quoque tempore duo ad eum Gothi hospitalitatis gratia venerunt, qui Ravennam se festinare professi sunt. Quibus ipse parvum vas ligneum vino plenum manu sua praebuit, quod fortasse in prandio itineris habere potuissent: ex quo illi quoadusque Ravennam pervenirent, biberunt Gothi. Aliquantis autem diebus in eadem civitate morati sunt, et vinum quod a sancto viro acceperant, quotidie in usu habuerunt. Sicque usque ad eumdem venerabilem Patrem Ferentis reversi sunt, ut nullo die cessarent bibere, et tamen vinum eis ex illo vasculo nunquam deesset, ac si in illo vase ligneo quod Episcopus dederat, vinum non augeretur, sed nasceretur. Nuper quoque de ejusdem loci partibus senex quidam clericus advenit, qui ea de illo narrat, quae silentio non sunt premenda. Nam dicit quod quadam die ingressus hortum, magna hunc erucae multitudine invenit esse coopertum: qui omne olus deperire conspiciens, ad easdem erucas conversus, dixit: Adjuro vos in nomine Domini Dei nostri Jesu Christi, recedite hinc, atque haec olera comedere nolite. Quae statim ad viri Dei verbum ita omnes egressae sunt, ut ne una quidem intra spatium horti remaneret. Sed quid mirum quod haec de episcopatus ejus tempore narramus, quando jam apud omnipotentem Deum ordine simul et moribus creverat, dum illa magis miranda sint quae eum hic senex clericus adhuc puerulum fecisse testatur? Nam ait quod eo tempore quo cum matre sua puer habitabat, egressus hospitium, nonnunquam sine linea, crebro etiam sine tunica revertebatur, quia mox ut nudum quempiam reperisset, vestiebat hunc, se expolians, ut se ante Dei oculos illius mercede vestiret. Quem mater sua frequenter increpare consueverat, dicens quod justum non esset ut ipse inops pauperibus vestimenta largiretur. Quae die quadam horreum ingressa, pene omne triticum quod sibi in stipendio totius anni paraverat, invenit a filio suo pauperibus expensum. Cumque semetipsam alapis pugnisque tunderet, quod quasi anni subsidia perdidisset, supervenit Bonifacius puer Dei, eamque verbis quibus valuit consolari coepit. Quae cum nihil consolationis admitteret, hanc rogavit ut ab horreo exire debuisset, in quo ex omni eorum tritico parum quid inventum est remansisse. Puer autem Dei sese illic protinus in orationem dedit, qui post paululum egressus, ad horreum matrem reduxit, quod ita tritico plenum inventum est, sicut plenum ante non fuerat, cum mater illius totius anni sumptus se congregasse gaudebat. Quo viso miraculo cumpuncta mater, ipsa jam coepit agere ut daret, qui sic celeriter posset quae petiisset accipere. Haec itaque in hospitii sui vestibulo gallinas nutrire consueverat: sed eas ex vicino rure vulpes veniens auferebat. Quadam vero die dum in eodem vestibulo puer Bonifacius staret, vulpes ex more venit, et gallinam abstulit. Ipse autem concitus Ecclesiam intravit, et se in orationem prosternens, apertis vocibus dixit: Placet tibi, Domine, ut de nutrimentis matris meae manducare non possim? Ecce enim gallinas quas nutrit vulpes comedit. Qui ab oratione surgens, Ecclesiam est egressus. Mox autem vulpes rediit, gallinam quam ore tenebat dimisit, atque ipsa moriens ante ejus oculos in terram cecidit. PETRUS: Valde mirum quod exaudire preces in se sperantium etiam in rebus vilibus dignatur Deus. GREGORIUS: Hoc, Petre, ex magna Conditoris nostri dispensatione agitur, ut per minima quae percipimus, sperare majora debeamus; exauditus namque est in rebus vilibus puer sanctus et simplex, ut in parvis disceret quantum de Deo praesumere in magnis petitionibus deberet. PETRUS: Placet quod dicis.

CAPUT X. De Fortunato Tudertinae civitatis episcopo.

GREGORIUS: Alius quoque vir vitae venerabilis in eisdem partibus fuit Fortunatus nomine, Tudertinae antistes Ecclesiae, qui in effugandis spiritibus immensae virtutis gratia pollebat, ita ut nonnunquam ab obsessis corporibus legiones daemonum pelleret, et continuae orationis studio intentus, objectas contra se eorum multitudines superaret. Hujus viri familiarissimus fuit Julianus nostrae Ecclesiae defensor, qui ante non longum tempus in hac urbe defunctus est. Cujus ego quoque hoc didici relatione quod narro, quia saepe gestis illius ausu familiaritatis intererat, ejusque post memoriam ad instructionem nostram quasi favi dulcedinem in ore retinebat. Matrona quaedam nobilis in vicinis partibus Tusciae nurum habebat, quae intra breve tempus quo filium ejus acceperat, cum eadem socru sua ad dedicationem oratorii beati Sebastiani martyris fuerat invitata. Nocte vero eadem qua subsequente die ad dedicationem praedicti oratorii fuerat processura, voluptate carnis devicta, a viro suo sese abstinere non potuit; cumque mane facto conscientiam deterreret perpetrata carnis delectatio, processionem vero imperaret verecundia, plus erubescens vultum hominum, quam Dei judicium metuens, cum socru sua ad dedicationem oratorii processit. Mox vero ut reliquiae beati Sebastiani martyris oratorium ingressae sunt, eamdem praedictae matronae nurum malignus spiritus arripuit, et coram omni populo vexare coepit. Ejusdem vero oratorii presbyter dum eam vehementissime vexari conspiceret, ex altari protinus sindonem tulit, eamque operuit; sed hunc simul repente diabolus invasit. Et quia ultra vires voluit quidquam praesumere, compulsus est cognoscere in sua vexatione quid esset. Hi vero qui aderant, puellam in manibus ex oratorio sublatam ad domum propriam deportaverunt. Cumque hanc antiquus hostis vexatione continua vehementer attereret, propinqui sui eam carnaliter amantes, et amando persequentes, ad obtinendum salutis remedium maleficis tradiderunt; ut ejus animam funditus exstinguerent, cujus carni magicis artibus ad tempus prodesse conarentur. Ducta est itaque ad fluvium, atque in aquam mersa; ibique diutius incantationibus agere malefici moliebantur, ut is qui eam invaserat diabolus exiret. Sed miro omnipotentis Dei judicio, dum arte perversa unus ab ea repellitur, in eam subito legio intravit. Coepit ex hoc illa tot motibus agitari, tot vocibus clamoribusque perstrepere, quot spiritibus tenebatur. Tunc inito consilio parentes ejus suae perfidiae culpam fatentes, hanc ad venerabilem virum Fortunatum episcopum duxerunt, eique reliquerunt. Qua ille suscepta, multis se diebus ac noctibus in orationem dedit; tantoque annisu precibus incubuit, quanto et in uno corpore contra se assistere legionis aciem invenit. Cum non post multos dies ita sanam atque incolumen reddidit, ac si in ea jus proprium diabolus nunquam habuisset. Alio quoque tempore idem vir omnipotentis Dei famulus ex obsesso quodam homine immundum spiritum excussit. Qui malignus spiritus cum vesperascente jam die secretam ab hominibus horam cerneret, peregrinum quempiam esse se simulans, circuire coepit civitatis plateas et clamare: O virum sanctum Fortunatum episcopum! ecce quid fecit? peregrinum hominem de hospitio suo expulit. Quaero ubi requiescere debeam, et in civitate ejus non invenio. Tunc quidam in hospitio cum uxore sua et parvulo filio ad prunas sedebat, qui vocem ejus audiens, et quid episcopus ei fecerit requirens, hunc invitavit hospitio, sedere secum juxta prunas fecit. Cumque vicissim aliqua confabularentur, parvulum ejus filium idem malignus spiritus invasit, atque in easdem prunas projecit, ibique mox ejus animam excussit. Qui orbatus miser, vel quem ipse susceperit, vel quem episcopus expulisset, agnovit. PETRUS: Quidnam hoc esse dicimus, ut occidendi ausum in ejus hospitio antiquus hostis acciperet, qui hunc peregrinum aestimans, ad se hospitalitatis gratia vocasset? GREGORIUS: Multa, Petre, videntur bona, sed non sunt, quia bono animo non fiunt. Unde et in Evangelio Veritas dicit: Si oculus tuus nequam fuerit, totum corpus tuum tenebrosum erit. Quia cum perversa est intentio quae praecedit, pravum est omne opus quod sequitur, quamvis esse rectum videatur. Ego namque hunc virum, qui dum quasi hospitalitatem exhiberet orbatus est, non pietatis opere delectatum aestimo, sed episcopi derogatione; nam poena subsequens innotuit, quia praecedens illa susceptio sine culpa non fuit. Sunt namque nonnulli, qui idcirco bona facere student, ut gratiam alienae operationis obnubilent; nec pascuntur bono quod faciunt, sed laude boni qua caeteros premunt. Qua de re existimo hunc virum qui malignum spiritum in hospitalitatem suscepit, ostentationi potius intendisse quam operi, ut meliora quam episcopus fecisse videretur; quatenus ipse susciperet eum, quem vir Domini Fortunatus expulisset. PETRUS: Ita est ut dicis; nam finis operis probabat, quod munda intentio in operatione non fuerit. GREGORIUS: Alio quoque tempore, cum oculorum quidam lumen amisisset, ad hunc deductus intercessionis ejus opem petiit, et impetravit. Nam cum vir Dei oratione facta oculis ejus signum crucis imprimeret, ab eis, protinus luce reddita, nox caecitatis abscessit. Praeterea equus cujusdam militis in rabiem fuerat versus, ita ut a multis teneri vix posset: sed et quoscunque potuisset invadere, eorum membra morsibus dilaniaret. Tunc utcunque a multis ligatus ad virum Dei deductus est. Qui mox ejus capiti extensa manu signum crucis edidit, cunctam ejus rabiem in mansuetudinem mutavit, ita ut postea mitior existeret, quam ante illam insaniam fuisset. Tunc idem miles equum suum, quem celerrimo miraculi imperio a sua vesania vidit immutatum, eidem sancto viro decrevit offerendum. Quem cum suscipere ille renueret, ipse vero in precibus, ne despiceretur ejus oblatio, perseveraret, sanctus vir mediam duarum partium viam tenens, et petitionem militis audivit, et munus recipere pro exhibita virtute recusavit; prius namque dignum pretium praebuit, et postea equum qui sibi offerebatur accepit. Quia enim si non susciperet, eum contristari conspexerat, charitate cogente emit quod necessarium non habebat. Neque hoc silere de hujus viri virtutibus debeo, quod ante dies fere duodecim agnovi. Quidam namque ad me deductus est senex pauper; atque ut mihi senum collocutio esse semper amabilis solet, studiose hunc unde esset inquisivi, qui se esse de Tudertina civitate respondit. Cui inquam: Quaeso te, Pater, num Fortunatum episcopum nosti? Qui ait: Novi, et bene novi. Tunc ipse subjunxi: Dic, rogo, si qua illius miracula nosti, et desideranti mihi qualis vir fuerit innotesce. Qui ait: Homo ille longe fuit ab istis hominibus quos videmus modo. Nam quidquid ab omnipotenti Deo petiit, ita dum peteret impetravit. Cujus hoc unum narro miraculum, quod ad praesens animo occurrit. Quadam namque die Gothi juxta Tudertinam civitatem venerunt, qui ad partes Ravennae properabant, et duos parvos puerulos de possessione abstulerant, quae possessio praefatae Tudertinae civitati subjacebat. Hoc cum viro sanctissimo Fortunato nuntiatum fuisset, protinus misit, atque eosdem Gothos ad se evocari fecit. Quos blando sermone alloquens, eorum prius studuit asperitatem placare, ac post intulit, dicens: Quale vultis pretium dabo, et puerulos quos abstulistis reddite, mihique hoc gratiae vestrae munus praebete. Tunc is qui prior eorum esse videbatur, respondit dicens: Quidquid aliud praecipis, facere parati sumus, nam istos puerulos nullatenus reddemus. Cui venerandus vir blande minatus est, dicens: Contristas me, fili, et non audis patrem tuum: noli me contristare, ne non expediat tibi. Sed idem Gothus in cordis sui feritate permanens, negando discessit. Die vero altera digressurus, rursus ad episcopum venit, quem eisdem verbis pro praedictis puerulis iterum episcopus rogavit. Cumque ad reddendum nullo modo consentire voluisset, contristatus episcopus dixit: Scio quia tibi non expedit quod me contristato discedis. Quae Gothus verba despexit, atque ad hospitium reversus, eosdem pueros de quibus agebatur, equis superimpositos cum suis hominibus praemisit. Ipse vero statim ascendens equum subsecutus est. Cumque in eadem civitate ante beati Petri apostoli ecclesiam venisset, equo ejus pes lapsus est; qui cum eo corruit, et ejus coxa mox fracta est, ita ut in duabus partibus os esset divisum. Tunc levatus in manibus, reductus est ad hospitium. Qui festinus misit, et pueros quos praemiserat reduxit, et viro venerabili Fortunato mandavit, dicens: Rogo te, Pater, mitte ad me diaconum tuum. Cujus diaconus dum ad jacentem venisset, pueros quos redditurum se episcopo omnino negaverat, ad medium deduxit, eosque diacono illius reddidit, dicens: Vade, et dic domino meo episcopo: Quia maledixisti mihi, ecce percussus sum; sed pueros quos quaesisti, recipe, et pro me, rogo, intercede. Susceptos itaque puerulos diaconus ad episcopum reduxit, cui benedictam aquam venerabilis Fortunatus statim dedit, dicens: Vade citius, et eam super jacentis corpus projice. Perrexit itaque diaconus, atque ad Gothum introgressus, benedictam aquam super membra illius aspersit. Res mira et vehementer stupenda! mox ut aqua benedicta Gothi coxam contigit, ita omnis fractura solidata est, et saluti pristinae coxa restituta, ut hora eadem de lecto surgeret, et ascenso equo ita coeptum iter ageret, ac si nullam unquam laesionem corporis pertulisset. Factumque est ut qui sancto viro Fortunato pueros cum pretio reddere obedientiae subjectus noluit, eos sine pretio poena subactus daret. His igitur expletis studebat adhuc senex de eo et alia narrare. Sed quia nonnulli aderant ad quos exhortandos occupabar, jamque diei tardior hora incubuerat, venerabilis Fortunati facta diu mihi audire non licuit, quae audire, si liceat, semper volo. Sed die alia idem senex rem de illo magis adhuc mirabilem narravit, dicens: In eadem Tudertina urbe Marcellus quidam, bonae actionis vir, cum duabus sororibus suis habitabat: qui eveniente molestia corporis, ipso sacratissimo vesperascente jam Sabbato paschali, defunctus est. Cujus corpus cum longius esset efferendum, die eodem sepeliri non potuit. Cumque mora esset temporis ad explendum debitum sepulturae, sorores ejus, morte ejus afflictae, cucurrerunt flentes ad venerabilem virum Fortunatum, eique magnis vocibus clamare coeperunt: Scimus quia apostolorum vitam tenes, leprosos mundas, caecos illuminas, veni, et resuscita mortuum nostrum. Qui mox ut cognovit earum fratrem defunctum, flere ipse etiam de morte ejus coepit, eisque respondit, dicens: Recedite, et haec dicere nolite, quia fussio omnipotentis Dei est, cui contraire nullus hominum potest. Illis itaque discedentibus, tristis ex morte ejus mansit episcopus. Subsequente autem die Dominico ante exsurgentis lucis crepusculum, vocatis duobus diaconibus suis, perrexit ad domum defuncti; accedensque ad locum ubi corpus jacebat exanime, ibi se in orationem dedit. Expleta autem prece surrexit, et juxta corpus defuncti sedit; non autem grandi voce defunctum per nomen vocavit, dicens: Frater Marcelle. Ille autem, ac si leviter dormiens, ad vicinam vocem quamvis modicam fuisset excitatus, statim oculos aperuit, atque ad episcopum respiciens, dixit: O quid fecisti? o quid fecisti? Cui episcopus respondit, dicens: Quid feci? At ille: Duo hesterno die venerunt, qui me ejicientes ex corpore in bonum locum duxerunt, hodie autem unus missus est qui dixit: Reducite eum, quia Fortunatus episcopus in domum ejus venit. Quibus verbis expletis, mox ex infirmitate convaluit, et in hac vita diutius mansit. Nec tamen credendum est quia locum quem acceperat perdidit, quia dubium non est quod intercessoris sui precibus potuit post mortem melius vivere, qui et ante mortem studuit omnipotenti Deo placere. Sed cur multa de ejus vita dicimus, cum nunc usque ad corpus illius tot virtutum documenta teneamus? Daemoniacos quippe absolvere, aegros curare quoties ex fide petitur, ut vivus consueverat hoc indesinenter facere, et apud mortua sua ossa perseverat. Sed libet, Petre, adhuc ad Valeriae provinciae partes narrationis meae verba reducere, de quibus me eximia valde miracula ex ore venerabilis Fortunati, cujus longe superius memoriam feci, contigit audisse. Qui crebro ad me nunc usque veniens, dum facta mihi veterum narrat, nova refectione me satiat.

CAPUT XI. De Martyrio monacho provinciae Valeriae.

Quidam namque in eadem provincia, Martyrius nomine, devotus valde omnipotentis Dei famulus exstitit, qui hoc de virtutis suae testimonio signum dedit. Dum quadam die fratres illius panem subcinericium fecissent, eique obliti essent crucis signum imprimere, sicut in hac provincia crudi panes ligno signari solent, ut per quadras quatuor partiti videantur, idem Dei famulus adfuit, eisque referentibus signatum non fuisse cognovit. Cumque jam panis ille prunis esset et cineribus coopertus, dixit: Quare hunc minime signastis? Qui hoc dicens, signum crucis digito contra prunas fecit. Quo signante protinus immensum crepitum panis dedit, ac si ingens in ignibus olla crepuisset. Qui dum coctus postmodum fuisset ab igne subtractus, ea cruce signatus inventus est, quam non contactus, sed fides fecit.

CAPUT XII. De Severo presbytero ejusdem provinciae.

In eo etiam loco Interorina vallis dicitur, quae a multis verbo rustico Interocrina nominatur, in qua erat quidam vir vitae valde admirabilis, nomine Severus, Ecclesiae beatae Mariae Dei genitricis semper virgnis sacerdos. Hunc cum quidam paterfamilias ad extremum venisset diem, missis concite nuntiis, rogavit ut ad se quantocius veniret, suisque orationibus pro peccatis ejus intercederet, ut, acta de malis suis poenitentia, solutus culpa ex corpore exiret. Qui videlicet sacerdos inopinate contigit ut ad putandam vineam esset occupatus, atque ad se venientibus diceret: Antecedite, ecce ego vos subsequor. Cumque videret sibi in eodem opere parum aliquid superesse, paululum moram fecit, ut opus quod minimum restabat expleret, quo expleto, coepit ad aegrum pergere. Eunti vero in itinere occurrentes hi qui prius venerant, obviam facti sunt, dicentes: Pater, quare tardasti? Noli fatigari, quia jam defunctus est. Quo audito, ille contremuit, magnisque vocibus se interfectorem illius clamare coepit. Flens itaque pervenit ad corpus defuncti, seque coram lecto illius cum lacrymis in terram dedit. Cumque vehementer fleret, in terram caput funderet, seque reum mortis illius clamaret, repente is qui defunctus fuerat animam recepit. Quod dum multi qui circumstabant aspicerent, admirationis vocibus emissis, coeperunt amplius flere prae gaudio. Cumque eum requirerent ubi fuerit, vel quomodo rediisset, ait: Tetri valde erant homines qui me ducebant, ex quorum ore et naribus ignis exibat, quem tolerare non poteram. Cumque per obscura loca me ducerent, subito pulchrae visionis juvenis cum aliis nobis euntibus obviam factus est, qui me trahentibus dixit: Reducite illum, quia Severus presbyter plangit, ejus enim lacrymis Dominus eum donavit. Qui scilicet Severus protinus de terra surrexit, eique poenitentiam agenti opem suae intercessionis praebuit. Et dum per dies septem de perpetratis culpis poenitentiam aeger redivivus ageret, octava die laetus de corpore exivit. Perpende, Petre, quaeso, hunc de quo loquimur Severum, quam dilectum Dominus attendit, quem contristari nec ad modicum pertulit. PETRUS: Admiranda sunt valde haec, quae me invenio nunc usque latuisse. Sed quid esse dicimus quod modo tales viri nequeunt inveniri. GREGORIUS: Ego, Petre, multos tales in hoc saeculo nec modo deesse existimo: neque enim si talia signa non faciunt, ideo tales non sunt. Vitae namque vera aestimatio in virtute est operum, non in ostensione signorum. Nam sunt plerique, qui etsi signa non faciunt, signa tamen facientibus dispares non sunt. PETRUS: Unde mihi, rogo, ostendi potest, quod sint quidam qui signa non faciunt, et tamen signa facientibus dissimiles non sunt? GREGORIUS: Numquidnam nescis quoniam Paulus apostolus Petro apostolorum primo in principatu apostolico frater est? PETRUS: Scio plane, nec dubium est quia etsi minimus omnium apostolorum, plus tamen omnibus laboravit. GREGORIUS: Quod bene ipse reminisceris, Petrus super mare pedibus ambulavit, Paulus in mari naufragium pertulit: et in uno eodemque elemento ibi Paulus ire cum navi non potuit, ubi Petrus pedibus iter fecit. Aperte igitur constat, quia cum utriusque virtus fuerit dispar in miraculo, utriusque tamen meritum dispar non est in coelo. PETRUS: Placet, fateor, omnino quod dicis: ecce enim aperte novi, quia vita et non signa quaerenda sunt. Sed quoniam ipsa signa quae fiunt, bonae vitae testimonium ferunt, quaeso te adhuc si qua sunt referas, ut esurientem me per exempla bonorum pascas. GREGORIUS: Vellem tibi in laudibus redemptoris de viri venerabilis Benedicti miraculis aliqua narrare, sed ad haec explenda hodiernum tempus video non posse sufficere. Liberius itaque haec loquemur, si aliud exordium sumamus.

Liber II

CAPUT I. Ortus, educatio, capisterium precibus reparatum: Vita in specu Sublacensi acta. Regimen monasterii relictum.

Fvit vir vitae venerabilis, gratia Benedictus et nomine, ab ipso suae pueritiae tempore cor gerens senile. Aetatem quippe moribus transiens, nulli voluptati animum dedit: sed dum in hac terra adhuc esset, quo temporaliter libere adhuc vti potuisset, despexit iam, quasi aridum mundum cum flore. Qui liberiori genere ex a prouincia Nursiae exortus, [Natus in prouincia Nursiae,] Romae liberalibus studiis traditus fuerat: sed cum in eis multos ire per abrupta vitiorum cerneret, eum, quem quasi in ingressu mundi posuerat, retraxit pedem: ne si quid de scientia eius attingeret, ipse quoque in immane praecipitium totus iret. Despectis itaque litterarum studiis, relicta domo rebusque patris, [studia Romae coepta deserit.] soli Deo placere desiderans, sanctae conuersationis habitum quaesiuit. Recessit igitur scienter nesciens, et sapienter indoctus. Huius ego omnia gesta non didici: sed pauca, quae narro, quatuor discipulis illius referentibus, agnoui: Constantino scilicet, reuerendissimo valde viro, qui ei in monasterii regimine successit; Valentiniano quoque, qui annis multis Lateranensi monasterio praefuit; Simplicio, qui congregationem illius post eum tertius rexit: Honorato etiam, qui nunc adhuc cellae eius, in qua prius conversatus fuerat, praeest.

Hic itaque cum iam, relictis litterarum studiis, petere deserta decreuisset, [Effiden cum nutrice discedit:] nutrix, quae hunc arctius amabat, sola secuta est. Cumque ad locum venissent, qui Effide dicitur, multisque honestioribus viris pro caritate se illic detinentibus in B. Petri ecclesia demorarentur, praedicta nutrix illius ad purgandum triticum a vicinis mulieribus praestari sibi capisterium petiit: quod super mensam incaute derelictum, casu accidente fractum est, sic vt in duabus partibus inveniretur divisum. Quod mox rediens nutrix illius, vt ita inuenit, [fractum capisterium oratione integrum reddit,] vehementissime flere coepit, quia vas, quod praestitum acceperat, fractum videbat. Benedictus autem religiosus et pius puer, cum nutricem suam flere conspiceret, eius dolori compassus, ablatis secum vtrisque fracti capisterii partibus, sese cum lacrymis in orationem dedit: qui ab oratione surgens, ita iuxta se vas sanum reperit, vt in eo inueniri fracturae nulla vestigia potuissent: moxque nutricem suam blande consolatus, ei sanum capisterium reddidit, quod fractum tulerat. Quae res in eodem loco a cunctis est agnita, atque in tanta admiratione habita, [diu in ecclesia suspensum] vt hoc ipsum capisterium eius loci incolae in ecclesiae ingressu suspenderent, quatenus et praesentes et secuturi omnes agnoscerent, Benedictus puer conuersationis gratiam quanta perfectione coepisset. Quod annis multis illic ante omnium oculos fuit, et vsque ad haec Longobardorum tempora super fores ecclesiae pependit. Sed Benedictus plus appetens mala mundi perpeti quam laudari, et pro Deo laboribus fatigari quam vitae huius fauoribus extolli; nutricem suam occulte fugiens, deserti loci secessum petiit, cui Sublacus vocabulum est: [Sublacum solus fugit,] qui ab Romana vrbe quadraginta fere millibus distans, frigidas atque perspicuas emanat aquas: quae illic videlicet aquarum abundantia in extenso prius lacu colligitur, ad extremum vero in amnem derivatur. Quo dum fugiens pergeret, monachus quidam, Romanus nomine, hunc euntem reperit: quo tenderet, requisivit. Cuius cum desiderium cognouisset, et secretum tenuit et adiutorium impendit, [in specu 3 annos degit:] eique sanctae conuersationis habitum tradidit, et inquantum licuit ministrauit. Vir autem Dei ad eumdem locum perueniens, in arctissimum specum se tradidit, et tribus annis, excepto Romano monacho, omnibus hominibus ibi incognitus mansit. Qui videlicet Romanus non longe in monasterio sub Theodati Patris Regula degebat: sed pie eiusdem Patris sui oculis furabatur horas, et quem sibi ad manducandum surripere poterat, diebus certis Benedicto panem ferebat. Ad eumdem vero specum a Romani cella iter non erat, quia excelsa desuper rupes eminebat: [panem a S. Romano monacho quotidie accipit:] sed ex eadem rupe in longissimo fune ligatum Romanus deponere panem consueuerat: in qua etiam resti paruum tintinnabulum inseruit: vt ad eius sonum vir Dei cognosceret, quando sibi Romanus panem praeberet, quem exiens acciperet. Sed antiquus hostis vnius caritati inuidens, alterius refectioni: cum quadam die submitti panem conspiceret, iactauit lapidem, et tintinnabulum fregit: Romanus tamen horis congruentibus ministrare non desiit.

Cum vero iam Deus omnipotens et Romanum vellet a labore quiescere, [et Dei monitu in Paschate a Sacerdote cibos:] et Benedicti vitam in exemplum hominibus demonstrare, vt posita supra candelabrum lucerna claresceret, quatenus omnibus, qui in domo Dei sunt, luceret: cuidam Presbytero longius manenti, qui refectionem sibi in Paschali festiuitate parauerat, per visum Dominus apparere dignatus est, dicens: Tu tibi delicias praeparas, et seruus meus illo in loco fame cruciatur. Qui protinus surrexit, atque in ipsa solennitate Paschali cum alimentis, quae sibi parauerat, ad locum tetendit, et virum Dei per abrupta montium, per concaua vallium, per defossa terrarum quaesiuit, eumque latere in specu reperit. Cumque oratione facta, benedicentes Dominum omnipotentem consedissent, post dulcia vitae colloquia is, qui aduenerat, Presbyter dixit: Surge, sumamus cibum: quia hodie Pascha est. Cui vir Dei respondit, dicens: Scio, quia Pascha est: quia hodie videre te merui. Longe quippe ab hominibus positus, quia die eodem Paschalis solennitas esset, ignorabat. Venerabilis autem Presbyter rursus asseruit, dicens: Veraciter hodie Resurrectionis Dominicae Paschalis dies est: abstinere tibi minime congruit: quia et ego ad hoc missus sum, vt omnipotentis Dei dona pariter sumamus. [saepe etiam a Pastoribus aliisque quos instruit:] Benedicentes igitur Dominum, sumpserunt cibum, expletaque refectione et colloquio, ad ecclesiam suam Presbyter recessit.

Eodem quoque tempore hunc in specu latitantem etiam Pastores inuenerunt: quem dum vestitum pellibus inter fruteta cernerent, aliquam bestiam esse crediderunt: sed cognoscentes Dei famulum, eorum multi ad pietatis gratiam a bestiali mente mutati sunt. Nomen itaque eius per vicina loca innotuit cunctis: factumque est, vt ex illo iam tempore a multis frequentari coepisset: qui cum ei cibum afferrent corporis, ab eius ore in suo pectore alimenta referebant vitae.

Quadam vero die, dum solus esset, tentator affuit: [volante ave signo Crucis fugata,] nam nigra parvaque avis, quae vulgo merula nominatur, circa eius faciem volitare coepit, eiusque vultui importune insistere, ita vt manu capi posset, si hanc vir sanctus tenere voluisset: sed signo Crucis edito, recessit auis. Tanta autem carnis tentatio, aue eadem recedente, secuta est, quantam vir sanctus numquam fuerat expertus. [tentatione carnis vexatur:] Quamdam namque aliquando faeminam viderat, quam malignus spiritus ante eius mentis oculos reduxit: tantoque igne serui Dei animum in specie illius accendit, vt, dum in eius pectore amoris flamma vim caperet, etiam paene deserere eremum, voluptate victus deliberaret. Tunc subito superna gratia respectus, ad semetipsum reuersus est, atque vrticarum et veprium iuxta densa succrescere fruteta conspiciens, [inter vrticas et vepres nudus volutatus,] exutus indumento, nudum se in illis spinarum aculeis, et vrticarum incendiis proiecit: ibique diu volutatus, toto ex eis corpore vulneratus exiit, et per cutis vulnera eduxit a corpore vulnus mentis, quia voluptatem traxit in dolorem. Cumque bene poenaliter foris arderet, extinxit quod intus illicite ardebat: vicit itaque peccatum, quia mutauit incendium. Ex quo videlicet tempore, sicut post discipulis ipse perhibebat, [liberatur in perpetuum:] ita in eo est tentatio voluptatis edomita, vt tale aliquid in se minime sentiret. Coeperunt postmodum multi iam mundum relinquere, atque ad eius monasterium festinare: liber quippe a tentationis vitio, vero iure iam factus est virtutum magister: vnde et per Moysen in Exodo praecipitur, vt Leuitae a viginti quinque annis et supra ministrare debeant, ab anno vero quinquagesimo custodes vasorum fiant. [Num. 2.] [multos accipit discipulos:] PETRUS: Iam quidem prolati testimonii mihi aliquantum intellectus interlucet: sed tamen hoc plenius exponi postulo. GREGORIUS: Liquet, Petre, quod in iuuentute carnis tentatio ferueat, ab anno autem quinquagesimo calor corporis frigescat: vasa autem sacra sunt fidelium mentes. Electi ergo, cum adhuc in tentatione sunt, subesse eos ac seruire necesse est, et obsequiis laboribusque fatigari: cum vero iam mentis aetate tranquilla calor recesserit tentationis, custodes vasorum sunt, quia Doctores animarum fiunt. PETRUS: Fateor, placet, quod dicis: sed quia prolati testimonii clausa reserasti, quaeso, vt de vita Iusti debeas ea, quae sunt inchoata, percurrere.

GREGORIUS: Recedente igitur tentatione, vir Dei, quasi spinis erutis exculta terra, de virtutum segete feracius fructus dedit. [curam monasterii vicini inuitus suscipit:] Praeconio itaque eximiae conuersationis celebre nomen eius habebatur. Non autem longe monasterium fuit, cuius congregationis Pater defunctus est: omnisque ex illo congregatio ad eumdem venerabilem Benedictum venit, et magnis precibus, vt eis praeesse deberet, petiit. Qui diu negando distulit: suis illorumque Fratrum moribus se convenire non posse praedixit: sed victus quandoque precibus assensum dedit. Cumque in eodem monasterio Regularis vitae custodiam teneret, nullique, vt prius, [a dissolutis monachis non toleratur:] per actus illicitos in dexteram laeuamque partem deflectere a conuersationis itinere liceret; suscepti Fratres insane saeuientes, semetipsos prius accusare coeperunt, quia hunc sibi praeesse poposcerant, quorum scilicet Fortitudo in norma eius rectitudinis offendebat. Cumque sibi sub eo conspicerent illicita non licere, et se dolerent adsueta relinquere, durumque esset, quod in mente veteri cogebantur noua meditari, et quia grauis est semper prauis moribus vita bonorum; tractare de eius morte aliqui conati sunt, qui inito consilio venenum vino miscuerunt. Et cum vas vitreum, in quo ille pestifer potus habebatur, [signo Crucis vas, in quo venenum erat, frangit:] recumbenti Patri ex more monasterii ad benedicendum fuisset oblatum, extensa manu Benedictus signum Crucis edidit, et vas, quod longius tenebatur, eodem signo rupit: sicque confractum est, acsi in illo vase mortis pro Cruce lapidem dedisset.

Intellexit protinus vir Dei, quia potum mortis habuerat, quod portare non potuit signum vitae: atque illico surgens, vultu placido, mente tranquilla, [discedit:] conuocatos Fratres allocutus est, dicens: Misereatur vestri, Fratres, omnipotens Deus: quare in me ista facere voluistis? Numquid non prius dixi vobis, quia vestris ac meis moribus minime conueniret? Ite, et iuxta vestros mores Patrem vobis quaerite: quia posthac me habere minime potestis. Tuncque ad locum dilectae solitudinis rediit, et solus in superni spectatoris oculis habitauit secum. PETRUS: [secum habitat.] Minus patenter intelligo quidnam sit, habitauit secum. GREGORIUS: Si sanctus vir contra se vnanimiter conspirantes, suae conuersationi longe dissimiles, coactos diu sub se tenere voluisset; fortasse sui vigoris vsum et modum tranquillitatis abscinderet, atque a contemplationis lumine suae mentis oculum declinasset; dumque quotidie illorum correptione fatigatus, minus curaret sua, et se forsitan relinqueret, et illos non inueniret. Nam quoties per cogitationis motum nimium extra nos ducimur, et nos sumus et nobiscum non sumus: quia nosmetipsos minime videntes, per alia vagamur. An illum secum fuisse dicimus, qui in longinquam regionem abiit, portionem quam acceperat consumpsit, vni in ea ciuium adhaesit, porcos pauit, [in se reuersus non instar filii prodigi,] quos et manducare videret siliquas, et esuriret? Qui tamen cum postmodum coepit cogitare bona, quae perdidit, scriptum de illo est: In se reuersus, dixit: Quanti mercenarii in domo Patris mei abundant panibus? Si igitur secum fuit, vnde ad se rediit? Hunc ergo venerabilem virum secum habitasse dixerim, quia in sua semper custodia circumspectus, ante oculos Conditoris se semper adspiciens, se semper examinans, extra se mentis suae oculum non divulgauit. PETRUS: Quid ergo, quod de Apostolo Petro scriptum est, dum de carcere ab Angelo eductus fuisset: Qui ad se reuersus, dixit: Nunc scio vere, quia misit Dominus Angelum suum, et eripuit me de manu Herodis et de omni expectatione plebis Iudaeorum? [Actor. 12] GREGORIUS: Duobus modis, Petre, extra nos ducimur: quia aut per cogitationis lapsum sub nosmetipsos recidimus, aut per contemplationis gratiam super nosmetipsos leuamur. Ille itaque qui porcos pauit, vagatione mentis et immunditia sub semetipsum cecidit; iste vero, quem Angelus solvit eiusque mentem in ecstasim rapuit, extra se quidem sed super semetipsum fuit. Vterque ergo ad se rediit, [sed instar S. Petri e carcere ab Angelo educti:] quando et ille ab errore operis se collegit ad cor, et iste a contemplationis culmine ad hoc rediit, quod in intellectu communi, vt prius, fuit. Venerabilis igitur Benedictus in illa solitudine habitabat secum, inquantum se intra cogitationis claustra custodiuit: nam quotiescumque hunc contemplationis ardor in altum rapuit, se procul dubio sub se reliquit.

PETRUS: Placet quod dicis, sed quaeso respondeas, si deserere Fratres debuit, quos semel suscepit? GREGORIUS: Vt ego, Petre, existimo, [ministerium susceptum licite potuit deserere.] ibi adunati aequanimiter portandi sunt mali, vbi inueniuntur aliqui, qui adiuuentur, boni. Nam vbi omnimodo de bonis fructus deest, fit aliquando de malis labor vacuus; maxime si e vicino caussae suppetant, quae fructum Deo ferre valeant meliorem. Vir itaque sanctus, propter quem custodiendum staret, qui omnes vnanimiter se persequentes cerneret? Et saepe agitur in animo perfectorum, quod silentio praetereundem non est: quia cum laborem suum sine fructu esse considerent, in locum alium ad laborem cum fructu migrant. Vnde ille quoque egregius Praedicator, qui dissolui cupit et cum Christo esse, cui viuere Christus est et mori lucrum, qui passionum certamina non solum ipse appetiit sed ad toleranda haec et alios accendit; Damasci persecutionem passus, vt posset euadere, murum, funem, sportamque quaesiuit, seque latenter deponi voluit. Numquid non Paulum mortem dicimus timuisse, [Exemplo S. Pauli Damasco fugientis ad meliores fructus.] quam se ipse pro amore Iesu testatur appetere? Sed cum in eodem loco minorem sibi fructum adesse conspiceret et grauem laborem, ad laborem se alibi cum fructu seruauit. Fortis etenim praeliator Dei teneri intra claustra noluit, certaminis campum quaesiuit. Vnde idem quoque venerabilis Benedictus, si libenter audis, citius agnoscis, quia non tantos ipse indociles deseruit, quantos in locis aliis a morte animae suscitauit. PETRUS: Ita esse vt doces, et manifesta ratio et prolatum congruum testimonium declarat. Sed quaeso, vt de vita tanti Patris ad narrationis ordinem redeas.

CAPUT II. Monasteria XII extructa, daemon fugatus, fons elicitus: alia miracula. Discessus Sublaco Casinum.

GREGORIUS: Cum sanctus vir diu in eadem solitudine virtutibus signisque succresceret, multi ab eo in eodem loco ad omnipotentis Dei sunt seruitium congregati: ita vt illic duodecim monasteria cum omnipotentis Iesu Christi Domini opitulatione construeret, in quibus statutis Patribus duodenos monachos deputauit, paucos vero secum retinuit, quos adhuc in sua praesentia aptius erudiri iudicauit. Coepere etiam tunc ad eum Romanae vrbis nobiles et religiosi concurrere, suosque ei filios omnipotenti Deo nutriendos dare. Tunc quoque bonae spei suas soboles, Eutychius a Maurum, Tertullius vero Patricius Placidum tradidit: [SS. Maurum et Placidum discipulos accipit:] e quibus Maurus iunior, cum bonis polleret moribus, Magistri adiutor coepit existere; Placidus vero puerilis adhuc indolis gerebat annos. In vno autem ex eis monasteriis, quae circumquaque construxerat, quidam monachus erat, qui ad orationem stare non poterat; sed mox vt se Fratres ad studium orationis inclinabant, ipse egrediebatur foras, et mente vaga terrena aliqua et transitoria agebat. Cumque ab Abbate suo saepius fuisset admonitus, ad virum Dei deductus est: [monachum tempore orationis vagantem reprehendit:] qui ipse quoque stultitiam eius vehementer increpauit, et ad monasterium reuersus, vix duobus diebus viri Dei admonitionem tenuit: nam die tertia ad vsum proprium reuersus, vagari tempore orationis coepit. Quod cum seruo Dei ab eodem monasterii Patre, quem constituerat, nuntiatum fuisset, dixit: Ego venio, eumque per memetipsum emendo. Cumque vir Dei venisset ad idem monasterium, et constituta hora, expleta psalmodia, sese Fratres in orationem dedissent; adspexit, quod eumdem monachum, qui in oratione manere non potuit, quidam niger puerulus per vestimenti fimbrias foras traheret. Tunc eidem Patri monasterii, [eumdem per diabolum ab oratione abstrahi videt cum S. Mauro,] Pompeiano nomine, et Mauro Dei famulo secrete dixit: Numquid non adspicitis, quis est, qui istum monachum foras trahit? Qui respondentes, dixerunt: Non. Quibus ait: Oremus, vt vos etiam videatis, quem iste monachus sequitur. Cumque per biduum esset oratum, Maurus monachus vidit: Pompeianus vero eiusdem monasterii Pater, videre non potuit. Die igitur alia, expleta oratione, [castigatum virga a daemone liberat:] vir Dei oratorium egressus, stantem foris monachum reperit, quem pro caecitate cordis sui virga percussit: qui ex illo die nil persuasionis vlterius a nigro iam puerulo pertulit, sed ad orationis studium immobilis permansit: sicque antiquus hostis dominari non ausus est in eius cogitatione, acsi ipse percussus fuisset ex verbere.

Ex his autem monasteriis, quae in eodem loco construxerat, tria sursum in rupibus montis erant: [monachos ob defectum aquae conquerentes solatur,] et valde erat Fratribus laboriosum, quod semper ad lacum oportebat descendere, vt aquam haurire debuissent: maxime quia e devexo montis latere erat grave descendentibus in timore periculum. Tunc collecti Fratres ex eisdem tribus monasteriis, ad Dei famulum Benedictum venerunt, dicentes: Laboriosum nobis est propter aquam quotidie vsque ad lacum descendere, et idcirco necesse est ex eodem loco monasteria mutari. Quos blande consolans, dimisit: et nocte eadem cum parvo puerulo, nomine Placido, cuius superius memoriam feci, eiusdem montis rupem ascendit, ibique diutius orauit: et oratione completa, tres petras in loco eodem pro signo posuit; atque ad suum, cunctis illis nescientibus, monasterium rediit. Cumque die alia ad eum pro necessitate aquae praedicti Fratres rediissent, dixit: Ite, et rupem illam, [et precibus e rupe fontem elicit:] in qua tres super inuicem positas petras inueneritis, in modico cavate: valet enim omnipotens Deus etiam in illo montis cacumine aquam producere, vt vobis laborem tanti itineris dignetur auferre. Qui euntes, rupem montis, quam Benedictus praedixerat, iam sudantem inuenerunt. Cumque in ea concauum locum fecissent, statim aqua repletus est: quae tam sufficienter emanauit, vt nunc vsque ubertim defluat, atque ab illo montis cacumine vsque ad inferiora derivetur.

Alio quoque tempore Gotthus quidam, pauper spiritu, ad conuersionem venit: quem Dei vir Benedictus libentissime suscepit. Quadam vero die ei dari ferramentum iussit, [ferrum falcastri in lacum delapsum,] quod ad falcis similitudinem falcastrum vocatur, vt de loco quodam vepres abscinderet, quatenus illic hortus fieri deberet. Locus autem ipse, quem mundandum Gotthus susceperat, super ipsam laci ripam iacebat. Cumque Gotthus idem densitatem veprium totius virtutis annisu succideret, ferrum de manubrio prosiliens in lacum cecidit, vbi scilicet tanta erat aquarum profunditas, vt spes requirendi ferramenti nulla iam esset. Itaque ferro perdito, tremebundus ad Maurum monachum cucurrit Gotthus; damnum quod fecerat nuntiauit, et reatus sui poenitentiam egit: quod Maurus quoque monachus mox Benedicto famulo Dei curauit indicare. Vir igitur Domini Benedictus haec audiens accessit ad laum: [manubrio etiam proiecto, recipit:] tulit de manu Gotthi manubrium et misit in lacum: et mox ferrum a profundo rediit atque in manubrium intrauit: qui statim ferramentum Gottho reddidit, dicens: Ecce, labora, et noli contristari.

Quadam vero die dum idem venerabilis Benedictus in cella consisteret, praedictus Placidus puer, sancti viri monachus, ad hauriendam de lacu aquam egressus est: qui vas, quod tenuerat, in aquam incaute submittens, ipse quoque cadendo secutus est: quem mox vnda rapuit, et paene ad vnius sagittae cursum, eum a terra introrsus traxit. [S. Placidum in lacum delapsum] Vir autem Dei intra cellam positus, hoc protinus agnouit, et Maurum festine vocauit, dicens: Frater Maure, curre, quia puer ille, qui ad hauriendam aquam perrexerat, in lacum cecidit, iamque eum longius vnda trahit. Res mira, et post Petrum Apostolum inusitata! Benedictione etenim postulata atque percepta, ad Patris sui imperium concitus perrexit Maurus, atque vsque ad eum locum quo ab vnda deducebatur puer, per terram se ire existimans, super aquam cucurrit, eumque per capillos tenens, cursu rapido rediit. [per S. Maurum super aquas currentem iubet extrahi:] Qui mox vt terram tetigit, ad se reuersus, post tergum respexit, et quia super aquas cucurrisset agnouit: et quod praesumere non potuisset vt fieret, miratus extremuit factum. Reuersus itaque ad Patrem, rem gestam retulit. Vir autem venerabilis Benedictus hoc non suis meritis, sed illius obedientiae deputare coepit; at contra Maurus pro solo eius imperio factum dicebat; seque conscium in illa virtute non esse, quam nescius fecisset. Sed in hac humilitatis mutua et amica contentione accessit arbiter puer, qui ereptus est; namque dicebat: Ego cum ex aqua traherer, super caput meum melotem Abbatis videbam, atque ipsum me ex aquis educere considerabam. PETRUS: Magna sunt valde, quae narras, et multorum aedificationi profutura: ego autem boni viri miracula, quo plus bibo, eo plus sitio.

GREGORIUS: Cum iam loca eadem in amorem Domini nostri Iesu Christi, [a Florentio Presbytero iniuriam patitur,] longe lateque feruescerent, et secularem vitam multi relinquerent, et sub leui Redemptoris iugo

ceruicem cordis edomarent; sicut mos prauorum est, inuidere aliis virtutis bonum, quod ipsi habere non appetunt; vicinae ecclesiae Presbyter, Florentius nomine, huius nostri Subdiaconi Florentii avus, antiqui hostis malitia percussus, sancti viri studiis coepit aemulari, eiusque conuersationi derogare, quosque etiam posset ab illius visitatione compescere. Cumque iam se conspiceret eius profectibus obviare non posse, et conuersationis illius opinionem crescere, atque multos ad statum vitae melioris ipso quoque opinionis eius praeconio indesinenter vocari; inuidiae facibus magis magisque succensus, deterior fiebat: [ab eo infectum veneno panem accipit:] quia conuersationis illius appetebat habere laudem, sed habere laudabilem vitam nolebat. Quin eiusdem inuidiae tenebris caecatus, ad hoc vsque perductus est, vt seruo omnipotentis Dei infectum veneno panem quasi pro benedictione transmitteret: quem vir Dei cum gratiarum actione suscepit: sed eum, quae pestis lateret in pane, non latuit. Ad horam vero refectionis illius ex vicina sylua corvus venire consueuerat, et panem de manu eius accipere: qui cum more solito venisset, panem, quem Presbyter transmiserat, vir Dei ante corvum proiecit, eique praecepit, dicens: In nomine Iesu Christi Domini nostri tolle hunc panem, et tali eum in loco proiice, vbi a nullo hominum possit inueniri. Tunc coruus aperto ore, expansis alis, circa eumdem panem coepit discurrere et crocitare, [iubet a coruo deferri in locum abstrusum,] ac si aperte diceret, et obedire se velle et tamen iussa implere non posse. Cui vir Domini praecipiebat, iterum atque iterum dicens: Leua, leua securus, atque ibi proiice, vbi inueniri non possit. Quem diu demoratus, quandoque corvus momordit, leuauit, et recessit: post trium vero horarum spatium, abiecto pane, rediit, et de manu hominis Dei annonam, quam consueuerat, accepit. Venerabilis autem Pater contra vitam suam inardescere Sacerdotis animum videns, illi magis quam sibi doluit. Sed praedictus Florentius, quia Magistri corpus necare non potuit, [ob tentatos obiectis puellis discipulos inde migrat:] se ad extinguendas discipulorum animas accendit; ita vt in horto cellae, cui Benedictus inerat, ante eorum oculos nudas septem puellas mitteret, quae coram eis sibi inuicem manus tendentes et diutius ludentes, illorum mentes ad peruersitatem libidinis inflammarent. Quod vir sanctus de cella conspiciens, lapsumque adhuc tenerioribus discipulis pertimescens, [hoste subita morte a Deo punito,] idque pro sua solius persecutione fieri pertractans, invidiae locum dedit: atque oratoria et cuncta, quae construxerat, sub statutis Praepositis adiunctisque Fratribus ordinauit, et paucis secum monachis ablatis, habitationem mutauit loci. Moxque vt vir Dei eius odia humiliter declinauit, hunc omnipotens Deus terribiliter percussit. Nam cum praedictus Presbyter, stans in solario, Benedictum discessisse cognosceret et exultaret, perdurante immobiliter tota domus fabrica, hoc ipsum tantum, in quo stabat, solarium cecidit, et Benedicti hostem conterens extinxit. Quod viri Dei discipulus, Maurus nomine, [lamentatur:] statim venerabili Patri Benedicto, qui adhuc a loco eodem vix decem millibus aberat, aestimauit esse nuntiandum, dicens: Reuertere, quia Presbyter, qui te persequebatur, extinctus est. Quod vir Dei Benedictus audiens, sese in grauibus lamentis dedit: vel quia inimicus occubuit, vel quia de inimici morte discipulus exultauit. Qua de re factum est, vt eidem quoque discipulo poenitentiam indiceret, quod mandans talia, gaudere de inimici interitu praesumpsisset. PETRUS: Mira sunt et multum stupenda, quae dicis: nam in aqua ex petra producta, Moysen; in ferro vero, quod ex profundo aquae rediit, Elisaeum; in aquae itinere, Petrum; in corvi obedientia, Eliam; in luctu autem mortis inimici, [spiritu iustorum] Dauid video; et perpendo quia vir iste spiritu iustorum omnium plenus fuit. GREGORIUS: Vir domini Benedictus, Petre, vnius Dei spiritum habuit, qui per concessae redemptionis gratiam electorum corda omnium, impleuit, de quo Ioannes dicit: Erat lux vera, quae illuminat omnem hominem venientem in hunc mundum: de quo rursus scriptum est: [et Dei donatus:] De plenitudine eius nos omnes accepimus.

[Io. 1] Nam sancti Dei homines potuerunt a Domino virtutes habere, non etiam aliis tradere. [Matth. 12] Illa autem signa virtutis dedit subditis, qui se daturum signum Ionae promisit inimicis, vt coram superbis mori dignaretur, coram humilibus resurgere: quatenus et illi viderent quod contemnerent, et isti quod venerantes amare debuissent. Ex quo mysterio actum est, vt dum superbi adspiciunt despectum mortis, humiles contra mortem acciperent gloriam potestatis. PETRUS: Quaeso te, post haec, ad quae loca vir sanctus migrauerit, vel si aliquas in eis virtutes postmodum ostenderit, innotesce. GREGORIUS: Sanctus vir ad alia demigrans, [Casinum petit:] locum non hostem mutauit: nam tanto post grauiora praelia pertulit quanto contra se aperte pugnantem ipsum malitiae magistrum inuenit. Castrum namque, quod Casinum dicitur, in excelsi montis latere situm est (qui videlicet mons distenso sinu hoc idem castrum recipit, sed per tria millia in altum se subrigens, velut ad aëra cacumen tendit) vbi vetustissimum fanum fuit, in quo, ex antiquorum more Gentilium, a stulto rusticorum populo Apollo colebatur. Circumquaque etiam in cultu daemonum luci succreuerant, in quibus adhuc eodem tempore infidelium insana multitudo sacrificiis sacrilegis insudabat. Illuc itaque vir Dei perueniens, contriuit idolum, subuertit aram, succendit lucos, atque in ipso templo Apollinis oraculum B. Martini, vbi vero ara eiusdem Apollinis fuit, [aram Apollinis euertit.] oraculum S. Ioannis construxit, et commorantem circumquaque multitudinem praedicatione continua ad fidem vocabat.

CAPUT III. Praestigiae daemonium sublatae: absentia cognita et futura praescita, etiam in Totila Rege.

Sed haec antiquus hostis tacite non ferens, non occulte per somnium, [Oratoria erigit:] sed aperta visione eiusdem Patris oculis sese ingerebat, et magnis clamoribus vim se perpeti conquerebatur: ita vt voces illius etiam Fratres audirent, [Diabolum in se frementem videt:] quamuis imaginem minime cernerent. Vt enim discipulis suis venerabilis Pater dicebat, corporalibus eius oculis idem antiquus hostis teterrimus et succensus apparebat, qui in eum ore oculisque flammantibus saeuire videbatur. Iam vero quae diceret, audiebant omnes: prius enim hunc vocabat ex nomine. Cui cum vir Dei minime responderet, ad eius mox contumelias erumpebat. Nam cum clamaret, dicens: Benedicte, Benedicte, et eum sibi nullo modo respondere conspiceret; protinus adiungebat: Maledicte, maledicte, et non Benedicte, quid mecum habes? quid me persequeris? Sed iam nunc expectanda sunt contra Dei famulum antiqui hostis noua certamina: cui pugnam quidem volens intulit, sed occasiones victoriae ministrauit inuitus. [lapidem a diabolo aggrauatum benedictione mobilem facit:] Quadam die dum Fratres habitacula eiusdem cellae construerent, lapis in medio iacebat, quem in aedificium leuare decreuerunt. Cumque eum duo vel tres mouere non possent, plures adiuncti sunt: sed ita immobilis mansit, ac si radicitus in terra teneretur: vt palam daretur intelligi, quod super eum ipse per se antiquus hostis sederet, quem tantorum virorum manus mouere non possent. Difficultate igitur facta, ad virum Dei missum est, vt veniret et orando hostem repelleret, vt lapidem leuare possent. Qui mox venit, et orationem faciens, benedictionem dedit: et tanta lapis celeritate leuatus est, ac si nullum prius pondus habuisset.

Tunc in conspectu viri Dei placuit, vt in eodem loco terram foderent: [alias praestigias daemonum tollit:] quam dum fodiendo altius penetrarent, aereum illic idolum Fratres inuenerunt: quo ad horam casu in coquinam proiecto, exire ignis repente visus est, atque in cunctorum monachorum oculis, quia omne eiusdem coquinae aedificium consumeretur, ostendit. Cumque iaciendo Fratres aquam ad ignem quasi extinguendo perstreperent; pulsatus eodem tumultu vir Dei aduenit: qui eumdem ignem in oculis Fratrum esse, in suis vero non esse considerans, caput protinus in orationem flexit: et eos, quos phantastico reperit igne deludi, vocauit Fratres: monuit vt oculos suos signarent, et vt sanum illud coquinae aedificium assistere cernerent, et flammas, quas antiquus hostis finxerat, non viderent.

Rursus dum Fratres parietem, quia res ita exigebat, paullo altius erigerent; [puerum muro a daemone euerso oppressum,] vir Dei in orationis studio intra cellae suae claustra morabatur: cui antiquus hostis insultans apparuit, et ei, quod ad laborantes Fratres pergeret, indicauit. Quod vir Dei per nuntium celerrime Fratribus indicauit, dicens: Fratres, caute vos agite: quia ad vos hac hora malignus spiritus venit. Is, qui mandatum detulit, vix verba compleuerat, et malignus spiritus eumdem parietem, qui aedificabatur, euertit; atque vnum puerulum monachum, cuiusdam curialis filium opprimens, ruina contriuit. Contristati omnes ac vehementer afflicti, non damno parietis, sed contritione Fratris, venerabili Patri Benedicto celeriter cum graui luctu nuntiarunt. Tunc idem pater Benedictus dilaceratum puerum ad se deferri iubet: [ad vitam sanum resuscitat:] quem portare non nisi in sago potuerunt, quia collapsi saxa parietis, non solum eius membra, sed etiam ossa contriuerant. Praecepitque vir Dei statim eum in cella sua in psiathio, quod vulgo matta vocatur, quo orare consueuerat, proiici: missisque foras Fratribus, cellam clausit: qui orationi instantius, quam solebat, incubuit. Mira res! eadem hora hunc incolumem, atque vt prius valentem, ad eumdem iterum laborem misit, vt ipse quoque parietem cum Fratribus perficeret, de cuius se interitu antiquus hostis Benedicto insultare credidisset.

Coepit vero inter ista, vir Dei prophetiae etiam spiritu pollere, ventura praedicere, [Absens nouit, quos cibos et vbi comedissent monachi et quoties bibissent:] praesentibus etiam absentia nuntiare. Mos etenim cellae fuit, vt, quoties ad responsum aliquod egrederentur Fratres, cibum potumque extra cellam minime sumerent: cumque hoc de vsu Regulae solicite seruaretur, quadam die ad responsum Fratres egressi sunt, et in eo tardiori compulsi sunt hora demorari: qui manere iuxta religiosam faeminam voluerunt, cuius ingressi habitaculum sumserunt cibum. Cumque iam tardius ad cellam rediissent, benedictionem Patris ex more petierunt. Quos ille protinus percontatus est, dicens: Vbi comedistis? Qui responderunt: Nusquam. Quibus ille ait: Quare ita mentimini? Numquid illius talis faeminae habitaculum non intrastis? numquid hos atque illos cibos non accepistis? numquid tot calices non bibistis? Cumque eis venerabilis Pater et hospitium mulieris, et genera ciborum, et numerum potionum diceret; cognoscentes cuncta quae egerant, ad eius pedes tremefacti ceciderunt, et se deliquisse confessi sunt. Ipse autem protinus culpae pepercit, perpendens, quod in eius absentia vltra non facerent, quem praesentem sibi esse in spiritu scirent.

Frater quoque Valentiniani, eius monachi cuius superius memoriam feci, vir erat laicus, sed religiosus: qui vt serui Dei orationem perciperet et germanum fratrem videret, annis singulis de loco suo ad cellam eius ieiunus venire consueuerat. [Num. 1.] Quadam igitur die dum iter ad monasterium faceret, sese illi alter viator adiunxit, qui sumendos cibos in itinere portabat: cumque iam hora tardior excrevisset, dixit: Veni frater, sumamus cibum, ne lassemur in via. Cui ille respondit: Absit frater, hoc non faciam: quia ad venerabilem Patrem Benedictum ieiunus semper peruenire consueui. Quo responso percepto, ad horam conuiator tacuit: sed cum post hoc aliquantulum itineris spatium egissent, rursus admonuit, vt manducarent. Noluit consentire qui ieiunus peruenire decreuerat: tacuit quidem, qui ad manducandum inuitauerat, et cum eo ieiunus adhuc pergere modicum consensit: cumque iter longius agerent, et eos tardior hora fatigaret ambulantes, inuenerunt in itinere pratum et fontem, et quaeque poterant ad reficiendum corpus delectabilia videri. Tunc conuiator ait: Ecce aquam, ecce pratum, ecce amoenus locus, in quo possumus refici et parum quiescere, vt valeamus iter nostrum postmodum incolumes explere. Cum igitur et verba auribus, [obiicit cuidam, quod comedendo absens commiserat.] et loca oculis blandirentur, tertia admonitione persuasus, consensit et comedit: vespertina vero hora peruenit ad cellam. Praesentatus aurem venerabili Benedicto Patri, sibi orationem petiit: sed mox ei vir sanctus hoc, quod in via egerat, improperavit, dicens: Quid est, Frater, quod malignus hostis, qui tibi per conuiatorem tuum locutus est, semel tibi persuadere non potuit, secundo non potuit, tertio vero persuasit, et te ad hoc quod voluit superauit? Tunc ille reatum infirmae suae mentis agnoscens, eius pedibus prouolutus, tanto magis coepit culpam deflere et erubescere, quanto se cognouit etiam absentem in Benedicti Patris oculis deliquisse. PETRUS: Ego sancti viri praecordiis Elisaei spiritum video inesse, qui absenti discipulo praesens extitit.

GREGORIUS: Oportet, Petre, vt interim sileas, quatenus adhuc maiora cognoscas. Gotthorum namque temporibus, cum Rex eorum Totila sanctum virum prophetiae habere spiritum audisset, ad eius monasterium pergens, paullo longius substitit, eique se venturum esse nuntiauit. Cui dum protinus mandatum de monasterio fuisset vt veniret ipse, sicut perfidae mentis fuit, [famulum a Totila instar Regis ad se missum reprehendit de simulatione:] an vir Dei prophetiae spiritum haberet, explorare conatus est. Quidam vero eius spatharius Riggo dicebatur, cui calceamen sua praebuit, eumque indui vestibus regalibus fecit, quem quasi in persona sua pergere ad Dei hominem praecepit: in cuius obsequio tres, qui sibi prae ceteris adhaerere consueuerant, Comites misit, scilicet Vultericum, Rudericum et Blindinum, vt ante serui Dei oculos ipsum Regem Totilam esse simulantes, eius lateri obambularent: cui alia quoque obsequia, alios spatharios praebuit, vt tam ex eisdem obsequiis, quam ex purpureis vestibus Rex esse putaretur. Cumque idem Riggo decoratis vestibus, obsequentum frequentia comitatus, monasterium fuisset ingressus, vir Dei eminus sedebat: quem venientem conspiciens, cum iam ab eo audiri potuisset, clamauit, dicens: Pone fili, pone: hoc quod portas non est tuum. Qui Riggo protinus in terram cecidit, et quia tanto viro illudere praesumpsisset, expauit, omnesque qui cum eo ad hominem Dei veniebant, terrae consternati sunt. Surgentes autem, ad eum minime propinquare praesumpserunt: sed ad suum Regem reuersi, nuntiauerunt trepidi, in quanta velocitate fuerant deprehensi.

Tunc per se idem Totila ad Dei hominem accessit: [Totilam in terram prostratum erigit, futura et mortem praedicit:] quem cum longe sedentem cerneret, non ausus accedere, sese in terram dedit. Cui cum vir Dei bis terue diceret, Surge; sed ipse ante eum de terra erigere se non auderet, Benedictus Christi Iesu famulus per semetipsum dignatus est accedere ad Regem, prostratumque de terra levavit, et de suis actibus increpauit: atque in paucis sermonibus cuncta, quae illi erant ventura, praenuntiauit, dicens: Multa mala facis, multa mala fecisti: iam aliquando ab iniquitate conquiesce: equidem Romam ingressurus es, mare transiturus, nouem annis regnans, decimo morieris. Quibus auditis, Rex vehementer territus, oratione petita recessit: atque ex illo iam tempore minus crudelis fuit, et non multo post Romam adiit, ad Siciliam perrexit: anno autem regni sui decimo, omnipotentis Dei iudicio, regnum cum vita perdidit. Praeterea Canusinae Antistites Ecclesiae ad eumdem Dei famulum venire consueuerat, quem vir Dei pro vitae suae merito valde diligebat: is itaque dum cum illo de ingressu regis Totilae et Romanae vrbis perditione colloquium haberet, [Romam tempestatibus et terraemotu perituram indicat.] dixit: Per hunc Regem ciuitas ista destruetur, vt iam amplius non inhabitetur. Cui vir Domini respondit; Roma a Gentibus non exterminabitur, sed tempestatibus, coruscis turbinibus, ac terraemotu fatigata, marcescet in semetipsa. Cuius prophetiae mysteria nobis iam facta sunt luce clariora, qui in hac vrbe dissoluta moenia, euersas domus, destructas ecclesias turbine cernimus, eiusque aedificia, longo senio lassata, quia ruinis crebrescentibus, prosternantur, videmus: quamuis hoc Honoratus eius discipulus, cuius mihi relatione compertum est, nequaquam ex ore illius audisse se perhibet: sed qui hoc dixerit, dictum sibi a Fratribus fuisse testatur.

Eodem quoque tempore quidam Aquinensis Ecclesiae, Clericus daemonio vexabatur, qui a venerabili viro Constantio, eiusdem Ecclesiae Antistite, per multa fuerat Martyrum loca transmissus, vt sanari potuisset. Sed sancti Dei Martyres noluerunt ei sanitatis donum tribuere, [Clericum energumenum liberat] vt, quanta esset in Benedicto gratia, demonstrarent. Ductus itaque est ad omnipotentis Dei famulum Benedictum: qui Iesu Christo Domino preces fundens, [praedicit, si sacros Ordines suscipiat a daemone obsidendum.] antiquum hostem de obsesso homine protinus expulit. Cui sanato praecepit, dicens: Vade, et posthac carnem non comedas, ad sacrum Ordinem numquam accedere praesumas: quacumque autem die ad sacrum ordinem accedere praesumpseris, statim iuri diaboli iterum mancipaberis. Discessit igitur Clericus sanus, et sicut terrere solet animum poena recens, ea, quae vir Dei praeceperat, interim custodiuit: cum vero post annos multos omnes priores illius de hac luce migrassent, et minores suos sibimet superponi in sacris Ordinibus cerneret, verba viri Dei quasi ex longo tempore oblitus postposuit, atque ad sacrum Ordinem accessit; quem mox is, qui reliquerat diabolus tenuit, eumque vexare, quousque animam eius excuteret, non cessauit.
PETRUS: Iste vir Dei diuinitatis, vt video, [vnus ipse cum Deo spiritus,] etiam secreta penetrauit: quia perspexit hunc Clericum idcirco diabolo traditum, ne ad sacrum Ordinem auderet accedere. [1 Cor. 6] GREGORIUS: Quare diuinitatis secreta non nosset, qui diuinitatis praecepta seruaret, cum scriptum sit: Qui adhaeret Domino, vnus spiritus est cum eo? PETRUS: Si vnus sit cum Domino spiritus qui Domino adhaeret, quid est, quod iterum idem egregius praedicator dicit: Quis cognouit sensum Domini, aut quis consiliarius eius fuit? [Rom. 11] Valde enim esse inconueniens videtur, eius sensum, cum quo vnum factus fuerit, ignorare. GREGORIUS: Sancti viri, inquantum cum Deo vnum sunt, sensum Domini non ignorant: nam idem quoque Apostolus dicit: Quis enim scit hominum, quae hominis sunt, nisi spiritus hominis, qui est in ipso? [1. Cor. 2] Ita et quae Dei sunt, nemo cognouit, nisi spiritus Dei, qui vt se ostenderet, nosse, quae Dei sunt, adiunxit: Nos autem non spiritum huius mundi accepimus, sed spiritum, qui ex Deo est. Hinc iterum dicit: Quod oculus non vidit, nec auris audiuit, nec in cor hominis ascendit, quae praeparauit Deus diligentibus se, nobis autem reuelauit per spiritum suum. [Ibidem.] PETRUS: Si ergo eidem Apostolo ea quae Dei sunt per Dei spiritum sunt reuelata, quomodo super hoc quod proposuit, praemisit dicens: O altitudo diuitiarum, sapientiae et scientiae Dei, quam incomprehensibilia sunt iudicia eius, et inuestigabiles viae eius! [Rom 11]. Sed rursum mihi haec dicenti, alia suboritur quaestio: nam Dauid propheta Domino loquitur, dicens: In labiis meis pronuntiaui omnia iudicia oris tui. [Psalm. 118] Et cum minus sit nosse, quam etiam pronuntiare, quid est, quod Paulus incomprehensibilia esse Dei iudicia asserit: Dauid autem se omnia non solum nosse, sed etiam in labiis pronuntiasse testatur? GREGORIUS: Ad vtraque haec tibi superius sub breuitate respondi, dicens, quod sancti viri, [cum Sanctis varia Deiiudicia sciuit:] inquantum cum Domino vnum sunt, sensum Domini non ignorant: omnes enim, qui deuote Dominum sequuntur, etiam deuotione cum Deo sunt; et adhuc carnis corruptibilis grauati pondere, cum Deo non sunt: occultaque Dei iudicia, inquantum coniuncti sunt, sciunt; inquantum disiuncti sunt, nesciunt. Quia enim secreta eius adhuc perfecte non penetrant, incomprehensibilia eius iudicia esse testantur: quia vero mente ei inhaerent, atque inhaerendo vel sacris Scripturae eloquiis vel occultis reuelationibus inquantum accipiunt cognoscunt, haec et nouerunt et pronuntiant. Iudicia enim, quae Deus tacet, nesciunt, quae Deus loquitur sciunt. Vnde et Dauid Propheta cum dixisset: In labiis meis pronuntiaui omnia iudicia: protinus addidit, Oris tui: ac si aperte dicat: Illa ego iudicia et nosse et pronuntiasse potui, quae te dixisse cognoui: nam ea quae ipse non loqueris, a nostra proculdubio cognitione abscondis. Concordat ergo prophetia Apostolicaque sententia: quia et incomprehensibilia sunt Dei iudicia, [scilicet quae a Deo reuelantur.] et tamen, quae de ore eius prolata fuerint, humanis labiis pronuntiantur: quoniam sciri ab hominibus et prolata per Deum possunt et occulta non possunt. PETRUS: In obiectione meae quaestiunculae patuit caussa rationis. Sed quaeso te, si qua sunt adhuc de viri huius virtute, subiunge.

CAPUT IV. Cognita futura, absentia, arcana cordis. Apparitio absentibus facta. Contumaces puniti.

GREGORIUS: Vir quidam nobilis, Theoprobus nomine, eiusdem Benedicti Patris fuerat admonitione conuersus: [Praedicit excidium coenobii Casinensis a Longobardis factum.] qui pro vitae suae merito magnam apud eum familiaritatis fiduciam habebat. Hic cum quadam die eius cellam esset ingressus, hunc amarissime flentem reperit: cumque diu subsisteret, eiusque non finiri lacrymas videret, nec tamen, vt vir Dei consueuerat, orando plangeret sed moerendo; quaenam caussa tanti luctus existeret, inquisiuit. Cui vir Dei illico respondit: Omne hoc monasterium quod construxi, et cuncta quae Fratribus praeparaui, omnipotentis Dei iudicio Gentibus tradita sunt: vix autem obtinere potui, vt mihi ex hoc loco animae concederentur. Cuius vocem tunc Theoprobus audiuit, nos autem cernimus, qui destructum modo a Longobardorum gente eius monasterium scimus. Nocturno enim tempore, quiescentibus Fratribus, nuper illic Longobardi ingressi sunt: qui diripientes omnia, ne vnum quidem hominem illic tenere potuerunt: sed impleuit omnipotens Deus, quod fideli famulo Benedicto promiserat, vt, si res Gentibus traderet, animas custodiret. Qua in re Pauli vicem video tenuisse Benedictum, cuius dum navis rerum omnium iacturam pertulit, ipse in consolatione vitam omnium, qui eum comitabantur, accepit.

Quodam quoque tempore Exhilaratus noster, quem ipse Conuersum nosti, transmissus a domino suo fuerat, vt Dei viro in monasterium vino plena duo lignea vascula, quae vulgo flascones vocantur, deferret:

[flasconem vini furto absconditum scivit,] qui vnum detulit, alterum vero pergens in itinere abscondit. Vir autem Domini, quem facta absentia latere non poterant, vnum cum gratiarum actione suscepit, et discedentem puerum monuit, dicens: Vide, fili, ne de illo flascone, quem abscondisti, bibas: sed inclina illum caute, et inuenies quid intus habet. Qui confusus valde a Dei homine exiuit; et reuersus, volens adhuc probare quod audierat, cum flasconem inclinasset, de eo protinus serpens egressus est. Tunc praedictus Exhilaratus puer per hoc, quod in vino reperit, expauit malum quod fecit.

Non longe autem a monasterio vicus erat, in quo non minima multitudo hominum ad fidem Dei ab idolorum cultu Benedicti fuerat exhortatione conuersa: [Cernit absens mappulas dari monacho:] ibi quoque quaedam sanctimoniales faeminae inerant, et crebro istuc pro exhortandis animabus Fratres suos mittere Benedictus Dei famulus curabat. Quadam vero die misit ex more: sed is qui missus fuerat monachus, post admonitionem factam, a sanctimonialibus faeminis rogatus mappulas accepit, sibique eas abscondit in sinu. Qui mox vt reuersus est, eum vir Dei vehementissima amaritudine coepit increpare, dicens: Quomodo ingressa est iniquitas in sinum tuum? At ille obstupuit, et quid egisset oblitus, vnde corripiebatur ignorabat. Cui ait: Numquid ego illic praesens non eram, quando ab ancillis Dei mappulas accepisti, tibique eas in sinu misisti? Qui mox eius vestigiis prouolutus, stulte se egisse poenituit, et eas quas in sinu absconderat mappulas abiecit.

Quadam quoque die, dum venerabilis Pater vespertina iam hora corporis alimenta perciperet, [occultas videt monachi cogitationes.] eius monachus, cuiusdam Defensoris filius fuerat, qui ante mensam lucernam tenebat. Cumque vir Dei ederet, ipse autem cum lucernae ministerio adstaret; coepit per superbiae spiritum in mente sua tacitus voluere et per cogitationem dicere: Quis est hic, cui ego manducanti assisto, lucernam teneo, seruitium impendo? Quis sum ego, vt isti inseruiam? Ad quem vir Dei statim conuersus, vehementer coepit eum increpare, dicens: Signa cor tuum, Frater. Quid est, quod loqueris? Signa cor tuum. Vocatisque statim Fratribus, praecepit ei lucernam de manibus tolli: ipsum vero iussit a ministerio recedere, et ibi hora eadem quietum sedere. Qui requisitus a Fratribus quid habuerit in corde, per ordinem narrauit, quanto superbiae spiritu intumuerat, et quae contra virum Dei verba per cogitationem tacitus dicebat. Tunc liquido omnibus patuit, quod venerabilem Benedictum latere nil posset, in cuius auribus tacitae etiam cogitationis verba sonuissent.
